the Court can only dispense with evidence of notorious and undisputed facts.(1) It has been held that printed letters seventy-five years old are admissible as evidence of the history of a district but not as proof that certain missionaries lived or died at certain times (2) It has been held that the question of title between the trustees of a Mosque though an old and historical institution, and a private person cannot be deemed a "matter of public history" within the meaning of this section, and historical works cannot be used to establish title to such property (3) In the case cited(4), the accused was prosecuted and convicted under section 495A (1) of the Calcutta Municipal Act for selling adulterated ghee The Assistant Analyst to the Corporation applied certain processes of analysis to the sample of ghee in question and obtained certain results from which he made the deduction that the ghee had been adulterated with certain percentages of foreign fat No other expert witness was examined on either side and the defence contended that according to the standard works on the subject no such deduction could be made Some of those works were put to the Analyst in cross-examination by the defence The Magistrate allowed the defence to rely on this evidence and dealt with it as being in evidence in the judgment. Held, per Woodroffe, J. that the Magistrate was not wrong in making use of the text books, but that the use of scientific treatises may lead to error if either those who use them are themselves not experts in the matter dealt with or not assisted by experts to whom passages relied on may be put Held therefore in the circumstances of the present case that it would not be safe to rely on the books alone without the aid of an expert, and there should be a retrial. Held, per Chitty J.—The procedure adopted by the Magistrate was incorrect if it were intended thereby to make these books and all their contents evidence in the case. The use of such books by the Court was regulated by sections 57 and 60 of this Act Books of reference may be used by the Court on matters (inter alia) of science, to aid it in coming to a right understanding and conclusion upon the evidence given. While treatises may be referred to, in order to ascertain the opinions of experts who cannot be called, and the grounds on which such opinions are held, the Courts should be careful to avoid introducing into the case extraneous facts culled from text books and also to refrain from basing a decision on opinions the precise applicability of which to the subject matter of the prosecution it was impossible to gauge. The books may be usefully referred to in order to comprehend and appraise correctly the evidence of the expert who has made the analysis and has given his opinion on oath as to the result of such analysis, but it would be dangerous to base the deecision of the Court solely on the evidence of books whether for a conviction or an acquittal Held, per Smither, J :—the Magistrate was right under section 70 of this Act to admit the evidence of the text books

The penultimate (in so far as it deals with matters the subject of judicial notice) and the last paragraph of section 57 follow the English rule, according to which, where matters ought to be judicially noticed, but the memory of the Judge is at fault, he may resort to such means of reference as may be at hand. Thus if the point be a date, he may refer to an almanac; if it be the meaning of a word, to a dictionary; if it be the construction of a Statute, to the printed copy (5) But a Judge may refuse to take cognisance of a fact, unless the party calling upon him to do so produces at the trial some document by which his memory might be refreshed.(6) Thus Lord Ellenborough(7) declined to take Refreshing memory of Judge.

---

(1) Ambalam Pakkiya Udayan v. Bartle, 36 M., 418 (1913).

(2) Ib

(3) Farzand Ali v Zafar Ali, 46 I. C., 119.

(4) Granade Venkata Rutnam v. Corporation of Calcutta 22 C. W. N. 745; s. c., 19, Cr. L. J., 753, 28 C. L. J., 22

(5) Taylor, Ev., § 21

(6) Ib

(7) In Van Omeron v. Dowick, 2 Camp. 44.

this depended on the Articles of War, the Judges thought that these ought to have been produced (1) It has been said that " with regard to rules of law the Judge stands in a somewhat different position to that in which he stands in regard to what, as opposed to law, are called the 'facts' of the case. The responsibility of ascertaining the law rests wholly with the Judge. It is not necessary for the parties to call his attention to it; and the last paragraph of the section is not applicable to it."(2) In many cases, the Courts have themselves made the necessary enquiries, and that, too, without strictly confining their researches to the time of the trial Thus where the question was, whether the federal republic of Central America had been recognised by the British Government as an independent State, the Vice-Chancellor sought for information from the Foreign Office(3) ; in another case, the Court of Common Pleas directed enquiry to be made in the Court of Admiralty as to the Maritime law(4) , and the same Court also once made enquiry as to the practice of the Enrolment Office in the Court of Chancery(5) ; while Lord Hardwicke asked an eminent conveyancer respecting the existence of a general rule of practice in the latter's profession (6) So the Lord Chancellor made enquiry at the India House, upon which it appeared from the proceedings of the Governor-General of Ben[illegible] Chancellor made [illegible] given in the [illegible] to its admission in evidence(8) ; [illegible] the Colonial Office as to the status of th[illegible] been followed in this country [illegible] Code, section 380(10), that the plaintiff be required to furnish security for the costs of a suit, it was necessary to determine whether the cantonments of Wadhwan and Secunderabad were within the limits [illegible] directed its Prothonotary to make enqui[illegible] Calcutta Court(13) directed the Registra[illegible] Office to ascertain the circumstances under which the place came into existence as a British cantonment and the real character of its connection with the British Government.(14) It being suggested in the Insolvency Court of Bombay that it was desirable to enquire what had been the practice of the High Courts at Calcutta and Madras, the Bombay High Court directed letters to be written by the Prothonotary to the officers of both these Courts, requesting them to give the required information.(15) In the case cited it has been held that under

(1) Cited by Buller, J., in R. v. Holt, 5 T. R., 446

(2) Markby, Ev. Act, 50.

(3) Taylor v. Barclay, 2 Sim, 221. See also The Charkieh, 42 L. J, Adm, 17. Cited in Lachmi Narain v. Raja Partab, 2 A, 17 (1878).

(4) Chandler v Greaves, 2 H. Bl, 606, n. (a).

(5) Doe v. Lloyd, 1 M. & Gr, 685.

(6) Willoughby v. Willoughby, 1 T. R, 772, see Taylor, Ev., § 21.

(7) Hutcheson v. Mannington, 6 Ves, 823, 824

(8) In re Davis's Trusts, L. R, 8 Eq, 89, 99.

(9) Mighell v. Sultan of Johore, 1 Q. B. (1894), 149, 161. In reply a letter State for the Colonies. It was contended that the letter was not sufficient but Kay, L. J., observed, "I confess I cannot conceive a more satisfactory mode of obtaining information on the subject than such a letter and the statement was held to be conclusive

(10) Now represented by O XXV. r 1.

(11) Bayley, J.

(12) Tricam Panachand v. Bombay, Baroda, &c, Railway, 9 B, 244, 247 (1885).

(13) Sale, J.

(14) Hossain Ali v. Abid Ali, 21 C., 177, 178 (1893). See also Lachmi Narain v. Raja Partab, 2 A., 7 (1878).

(15) In re Bhagwandas Harjivan, 8 B. 511, 516 (1884).

this section the Canon Law can be invoked as a guide in deciding questions of temporal rights in the Catholic Church (1)

58. No fact need be proved in any proceeding which the parties thereto or their agents agree to admit at the hearing, or which, before the hearing, they agree to admit by any writing under their hands, or which by any rule of pleading in force at the time, they are deemed to have admitted by their pleadings:

Facts admitted need not be proved.

Provided(2) that the Court may, in its discretion, require the facts admitted to be proved otherwise than by such admissions.

Principle—Proof of such facts would ordinarily be futile. The Court has to try the questions on which the parties are at issue, not those on which they are agreed (3) See Notes, post, and Introduction, ante.

s. 3 ("Fact") s. 3 ("Proved.") s. 3 ("Court")

Steph. Dig, Art. 60; Taylor, Ev, §§ 724A, et seq, 783, Annual Practice, O 32, rr 1—5 Civ Pr Code, (2nd Ed), O XI, and O. XII, pp 777—804, O. XVIII, r. 5, p. 844, Giesley, Ev., 47—51, (Admissions by agreement and waiver of proof) 456, et seq; (Effect of the Admissions), 9—46, (Admissions in the Pleadings), Roscoe, Cr Ev., 13th Ed, 115, 116; Roscoe, N. P Ev, 72—75, Powell, Ev., 9th Ed, 420—430, Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 10.

COMMENTARY.

Admissions for purpose of trial.

The section deals with the subject of admissions made for the purpose of dispensing with proof at the trial, which admissions must be distinguished from evidentiary admissions or those which are receivable as evidence on the trial (4) A Court, in general, has to try the questions on which the parties are at issue, not those on which they are agreed.(5) Thus the admission of a defendant's vakil in Court was held to be evidence of the receipt of a certain sum of money, and to do away with the necessity for other proof.(6) So also the admission of a fact upon the pleadings will dispense with proof of that fact (7) Although a plaintiff, when the defendant denies his claim, is bound to prove his case by the document on which he relies, still if the defendant admits any sum to be due, that admission, irrespective of proof offered by the plaintiff, is sufficient to warrant a decree in the plaintiff's favour for the amount covered by the admission (8) So, a subsequent agreement by the mortgagee to take less than his due under a registered mortgage is an agreement modifying the terms of a written contract and if it has to be proved aural evidence is inadmissible under section 92, Proviso 4. Where however such an aural agreement is admitted in the pleadings of the parties the proof of the agreement is dispensed

(1) Ambalam Pakkiya Udayan v Bartle, 36 M, 418 (1913).

(2) See as to the proviso and application of the section, Oriental, etc, Assurance Co v Narasimha Chari, 25 M, 205 (1901)

(3) Burjorji Cursetji v. Muncherji Kuverji, 5 B, 143, 152 (1880).

(4) See as to these latter, ss 17, 18, et seq, ante, and see Lakhichand v Lalchand, 42 B, 352; s c, 45 I. C, 555.

(5) Burjorji Cursetji v Muncherji Kuverji, 5 B, 143, 152 (1880)

(6) Kaleekanund Bhuttacharjee v. Gireebala Dabia, 10 W. R., 322 (1868)

(7) Burjorji Cursetji v. Muncherji Kuverji, supra; see as to this case, post; but as to admissions not made in the pleadings, but in a deposition, see Sheikh Ibrahim v. Parvata Hari, 8 Bom H. C R., A. C. J, 163 (1871). As to estoppel by pleading, see Dinomony Dabea v Doorga Pershad, 12 B L. R, 274, 276 (1873); Luchman Chunder v. Kali Churn, 19 W. R, 292, 297 (1873) As to estoppel generally, see s 115, post.

(8) Issur Chunder v. Nobodeep Chunder, 6 W. R., 132 (1866).

with by this section, and the Court is bound to recognise and give effect to such agreement.(1) It appears to be doubtful upon the English cases whether admissions for the purpose of trial amount to more than a mere waiver of proof, and whether if a party seeks to have any inference drawn from facts so admitted, he must not prove them to the jury.(2) But the terms of the present section seem to show that proof of such facts is dispensed with for all purposes, and that inferences may be drawn from them in all respects as if they had been proved by the party who seeks to draw from them such inferences.

Admissions for the purpose of a trial in civil cases may be divided into (a) admissions on the record, which are either actual, i.e., either on the pleadings or in answer to interrogatories or implied from the pleadings ; and (b) admissions between the parties, which may either be by agreement or notice.(3) Such admissions may thus be made either (a) pursuant to notice(4) ; (b) by agreement at(5) or before(6) the trial, (c) by the pleadings(7) In the case of admissions made before the hearing, the section requires that the admissions be in the handwriting of the party or of his agent The admissions mentioned in this section take the place of witnesses called to prove the facts admitted, but in any case the Court may in its discretion require the facts howsoever admitted to be proved otherwise than by such admission. When an admission, as frequently happens, is made at the hearing, the Judge's note is sufficient record of the fact. Generally as to what takes place before a Judge at a trial, civil or criminal, the statement of the presiding Judge or his notes are conclusive. Neither the affidavits of bystanders, nor of jurors, nor the notes of counsel or of shorthand-writers are admissible to controvert the notes or statement of the Judge.(8) It has been held that an admission in a civil case is conclusive

---

(1) Malappa v Naga Chetty, 42 M, 41; s c, 48 I C, 158

(2) See Edmunds v Groves, 2 M & W, 642, 645, per Alderson, B.

(3) See Annual Practice

(4) As to the case of a notice to admit genuineness of documents under O XXII, r. 2, 2nd Ed, p 801, of the Civ Pro. Code, see O 32, r 2, and generally as to admissions pursuant to notice, O 32, rr. 1—5; Taylor, Ev., § 724A, et seq, and as to discovery generally see Appendix and Civ Pr. Code, O XI, 2nd Ed, pp. 777—800 Under the existing procedure documents which are not admitted must be proved The observation in Bibee Jokai v. Begler, 6 Moo I A., 521 (1856), and Nandkishore Das v Ramkaly Roy, 6 B. L. R, App, 49, 51 (1871), were made with reference to a state of procedure which no longer exists See Field, Ev, 379

(5) S. 58, see Ch XI of the Civ Pr Code, O XIV, 2nd Ed, pp 813—824, on the settlement of issues A party is bound by an admission of fact made by his pleader at the trial, see Kaleekanund Bhuttacharjee v Gireebala Debya, 10 W. R., 322 (1868) Rajunder Narain v. Bijai Govind, 2 Moo I A, 253 (1839); Khajah Abdool v. Gour Monee, 9 W R., 375 (1868). Sreemutty Dossee v. Pitambur Pundah, 21 W. R, 332 (1874); Kover Narain v Sreenath Mitter, 9 W. R., 485 (1868); Buckley v Mussamut Chittur, 5 N.-W. P., 2 (1873). But where a vakil upon a mistaken view of the law goes beyond and contravenes his instructions, his erroneous consent cannot bind his client; Ram Kant v. Brindabun Chunder, 16 W. R., 246 (1871). A party is not, however, bound by an admission of a point of law nor precluded from asserting the contrary in order to obtain the relief to which upon a true construction of the law he may be entitled; Tagore v. Tagore, I A., Sup. Vol., 71 (1872); Surendra Keshav v Doorga Sundari, 19 I A, 115 (1892); Gopee Lall v. Chundraolee, 11 B. L. R, 395 (1872). An erroneous admission by counsel or pleader on point of law does not bind the party; Maharani Beni v Dudh Nath, 4 C. W N, 274 (1899); Krishnaji Narayan v Rajmal Manick, 24 B, 360.

(6) S 58, and see Civ Pr Code, O XII, 2nd Ed, pp. 801—804, supra

(7) S 58, see post.

(8) R. v. Pestanji Dinsha, 10 Bom H C R., 57, 81 (1873), where the cases are collected Norton, Ev, 238 In an earlier case in the Calcutta High Court it was stated that a judgment deliberately recording the admission of a pleader must be taken as correct, unless it is contradicted by an affidavit; or the Judge's own admission that the record he made was wrong; Hur Dyal v Heeralal, 16 W. R, 107 (1871).

if made for the purpose of dispensing with the proof at the trial.(1) But an admission made by a party to a suit or his attorney that a certain fact exists and need not be proved, does not dispense with proof of the existence of that fact subsequent to the date of the admission (2) The function of admissions made on the pleadings is to limit the issues and therewith the scope of the evidence admissible.(3) Where in a suit for specific performance of an agreement the defendant admitted in his written statement the terms of the agreement and its execution the Court held that the plaintiff was not called upon to prove the execution of the agreement or to put it in evidence, and citing the case of McGowan v Smith(4) and Grc

" A Court, in general, has to try not those on which they are agre berately made for the purposes o ment, will act as an estoppel tc them. This includes any docur bill or answer (6) The point is not in issue; and as to the counter-statements of the parties, 'a plea or a special replication' admits every point that it does not directly put in issue The same rule applies to an answer when it assumes the form of a demurrer or plea by submitting a point of law or by introducing new facts Thus a submission 'that the defendants would not be in any way affected by the notice set forth in the bill, precluded them from disputing the validity of this notice.'(7) Such rules are to be applied with discretion in this country, where a strict system of pleading is not followed(8); but here, as I suppose everywhere, the language of Lord Cairns holds true,
'that the first obj against whom the suit is directed, what .'(9) The principle is equally valid as The Court is to frame the issues according to allegations made in the plaint or in the written statements tendered in the suit . But the issues, as they stand, were suggested by the defendant's counsel. They waive controversy as to the actual were sought in pleading, sed purposes in this case it is not invalid."(10) An admission may be implied Thus where a suit is so co Court may it and rece particular issue, but for all purposes, and for the whole case (12) So, where counsel, in his opening, states, though he does not subsequently prove, his client to be in possession of a certain document, this will, after notice to produce,

(1) Urquhart v Butterfield, 37 Ch D, 357, Harvey v Croydon Union, 26 Ch, 249; Gresley, Ev., 4598, Taylor, Ev., 783.
(2) Lawson's Presumptive Ev, 189, citing McLeod v. Wakeley, 3 C & P., 311
(3) Wills, Ev, 101; ib, 2nd Ed, 150
(4) 26 L. J, Ch, 8
(5) Law of Evidence, 457, 22
(6) Ib, 457
(7) Gresley, Ev, 457, 22
(8) See next paragraph
(9) Browne v. McClintock, 6 E & I, App at 453
(10) Burjorji Cursetji v Muncherji Kuverji, 5 B, 143, 152, 153 (1880); see Sambayya v Gangayya, 13 M, 312 (1880); but as to admissions with respect to unstamped or unregistered documents; see s 65, cl (b), post
(11) Mohima Chunder v Ram Kishore, 23 W. R, 174 (1875): s c, 15 B L. R., 142, 155, following Stracy v. Blake, 1 M & W, 168; Doe v. Roe, 1 E. & B., 279
(12) Bolton v. Sherman, 2 M. & W., 403

admit secondary evidence thereof from his adversary.(1) Where in an action of salvage the defendants admitted in their defence all the facts alleged in the various statements of claim, but not the inferences sought to be drawn from them, it was held that further evidence as to the salvage services was inadmissible, the Court being only concerned with the admitted facts.(2) And where neither party had objected when a case was made over to a Joint Subordinate Judge, it was agreed that they had by this tacit admission agreed to dispense with proof of jurisdiction.(3)

Pleadings. A vakil's general powers in the conduct of a suit include the power to abandon an issue which in his discretion he thinks it inadvisable to press.(4)

The effect given in the English Courts to admissions on the pleadings was formerly greater than that given to admission in the less technical pleadings in the Courts in India (5) But now under the Code of Civil Procedure O. VIII, r. 5, " Every allegation of fact in the plaint, if not denied specially or by necessary implication or stated to be not admitted in the pleading of the defendant, shall be taken to be admitted except as against a person under disability: Provided that the Court may in its discretion require any fact so admitted to be proved otherwise than by such admission."

This rule is taken from the English O. XIX, r. 13; but that rule has been modified in accordance with this section.(6)

The section only deals with the authority of agents to make admissions of particular facts in the suit. There is a considerable difference between the case where a pleader by way of compromise purports to give up a right claimed by the client, or to saddle him with a liability that is not admitted, and the case where a pleader makes admissions as to relevant facts in the usual course of litigation, however much those admissions affect the client's interest. The power to bind by such admissions, which, in effect, is but dispensing with proof of the facts admitted, is one of the well-recognised incidents of a pleader's general authority. To deny power so to bind the client or to do any similar act obviously necessary for the due conduct of litigation would so embarrass and thwart a pleader as in a great measure to destroy his usefulness. But no such undesirable results would follow from holding that in the absence of specific authority a pleader cannot bind by compromises strictly such (7)

Criminal cases. In a Civil case there is no doubt that the party or his pleader may at any time relieve his adversary from the necessity of proof; and the generality of the language used in this section might lead to the inference that this was so in a Criminal trial also. But as to admissions before the hearing it is certain that in a Criminal case they can only be used as evidence, and for this purpose it does not signify whether they are in writing or not; and it is generally supposed that in a Criminal charge admissions made after a plea of not guilty can also only be made use of as evidence.(8) In England the rule has been stated to be that in a trial for felony the prisoner (and therefore also his counsel, attorney or vakil) can make no admissions so as to dispense with proof, though a confession may be proved as against him, subject to the rules relating to the

(1) Duncombe v. Daniell, 8 C. & P., 222; approved in Haller v. Worman, 2 F. & F., 165; 3 L T. N. S, 741; contra Machell v. Ellis, 1 C. & K., 682, in which Pollock, C. B, declined to take the facts from the opening of counsel.

(2) The Butsshire (1909), P., 170.

(3) Baretto v. Rodrigues (1910), 35 B, 24.

(4) Venkata Narasimha v. Bhashyakarlu Naidu, 25 M., 367 (1902).

(5) Amritolal Bose v. Rajoneekant Mitter, 15 B L. R. (P. C.), 10, 23 (1875): 28 W. R., 214; L. R., 2 I. A., 113, per Sir B. Peacock: Burjorji Cursetji v. Muncherji Kuverji, 5 B., 143, 152 (1880), per West, J., [Rules with regard to admission by pleading must be applied with discretion in this country]; Norton, Ev., 115

(6) O. VIII, r. 5, 2nd Ed, pp 733, 734

(7) In the previous editions this subject which does not belong to the Law of Evidence will be found treated.

(8) Markby, Ev, Art. 51.

admissibility of confessions.(1) In cases of felony it is the constant practice of the Judges at the Assizes to refuse to allow even counsel to make any admission (2) In a case also of indictment for a misdemeanour (perjury) where it appeared that the attorneys on both sides had agreed that the formal proof should be dispensed with and part of the prosecutor's case admitted, Lord Abinger, C B, said "I cannot allow any admission to be made on the part of the defendant unless it is made at the trial by the defendant or his counsel"; and the defendant's counsel declining to make any admission the defendant was acquitted (3) A plea of guilty only admits the offence charged and not the truth of the depositions (4) Prior to this Act the reported decisions are not uniform (5) It has been suggested that the section applies to Civil suits only.(6) Though it is not in terms so strictly limited, the suggestion receives warrant from the phraseology employed, which is more suitable to Civil than to Criminal proceedings Whether this section applies to Criminal cases or not the Court may, by the express terms of the section, in its discretion require the facts admitted to be proved otherwise than by such admissions. It is not the practice of counsel or vakils to make admissions in Criminal cases, and even if they have the power, they will seldom, if ever, assume the responsibility of making such admissions. Were such an admission made, the Court would doubtless in most Criminal cases require the facts admitted to be proved otherwise than [illegible]
the section (7) [illegible] would not enabl [illegible] section 32 where the reasons specified in that section had not been proved but the accused had consented to such admission or had failed to object to it (8) As to a plea of guilty, see s 43

---

(1) Steph Dig, Art 60

(2) Phill, Ev, 10th Ed, 391, n. 6; Wills, Ev, 2nd Ed, 171, see Roscoe, Cr. Ev, 13th Ed, 115, 116

(3) R v Thornhill, 8 C & P, 575; it will be observed that this was a case of admission before trial, the Judge assuming that an admission could be made at the trial by the defendant or his counsel

(4) R v. Riley, 18 Cox, 285; Foucar v. Sinclair, 33 T. L R, 318

(5) R v Kazim Mundle, 17 W. R, Cr. 49 (1872), it was held that admissions made by a prisoner's vakil cannot be used against the prisoner But in R. v. Gogalao, 12 W. R, Cr., 80 (1869), proof of a fact was dispensed with on the admission of the prisoner's counsel; in the case of R. v. Surroop Chunder, 12 H R, Cr, 76 (1869), it was said, with reference to a particular arrangement, "so far as prisoners can assent to anything, that arrangement was assented to by the vakils for each party."

(6) Norton, Ev, 238

(7) v also notes to s 5, ante

(8) Anavi Muthirujan (in the matter of) 39 M, 449 (1916), and see R v. Bholanath Sen, 2 C, 23 (1877).

admit secondary evidence thereof from his adversary.(1) Where in an action of salvage the defendants admitted in their defence all the facts alleged in the various statements of claim, but not the inferences sought to be drawn from them, it was held that further evidence as to the salvage services was inadmissible, the Court being only concerned with the admitted facts.(2) And where neither party had objected when a case was made over to a Joint Subordinate Judge, it was agreed that they had by this tacit admission agreed to dispense with proof of jurisdiction.(3)

Pleadings. A vakil's general powers in the conduct of a suit include the power to abandon an issue which in his discretion he thinks it inadvisable to press (4)

The effect given in the English Courts to admissions on the pleadings was formerly greater than that given to admission in the less technical pleadings in the Courts in India (5) But now under the Code of Civil Procedure O. VIII, r. 5, " Every allegation of fact in the plaint, if not denied specially or by necessary implication or stated to be not admitted in the pleading of the defendant, shall be taken to be admitted except as against a person under disability: Provided that the Court may in its discretion require any fact so admitted to be proved otherwise than by such admission."

This rule is taken from the English O. XIX, r. 13; but that rule has been modified in accordance with this section.(6)

The section only deals with the authority of agents to make admissions of particular facts in the suit. There is a considerable difference between the case where a pleader by way of compromise purports to give up a right claimed by the client, or to saddle him with a liability that is not admitted, and the case where a pleader makes admissions as to relevant facts in the usual course of litigation, however much those admissions affect the client's interest. The power to bind by such admissions, which, in effect, is but dispensing with proof of the facts admitted, is one of the well-recognised incidents of a pleader's general authority. To deny power so to bind the client or to do any similar act obviously necessary for the due conduct of litigation would so embarrass and thwart a pleader as in a great measure to destroy his usefulness. But no such undesirable results would follow from holding that in the absence of specific authority a pleader cannot bind by compromises strictly such.(7)

Criminal cases. In a Civil case there is no doubt that the party or his pleader may at any time relieve his adversary from the necessity of proof; and the generality of the language used in this section might lead to the inference that this was so in a Criminal trial also. But as to admissions before the hearing it is certain that in a Criminal case they can only be used as evidence, and for this purpose it does not signify whether they are in writing or not; and it is generally supposed that in a Criminal charge admissions made after a plea of not guilty can also only be made use of as evidence.(8) In England the rule has been stated to be that in a trial for felony the prisoner (and therefore also his counsel, attorney or vakil) can make no admissions so as to dispense with proof, though a confession may be proved as against him, subject to the rules relating to the

(1) Duncombe v. Daniell, 8 C. & P., 222; approved in Haller v. Worman, 2 F. & F., 165; 3 L T. N. S, 741; contra Machell v Ellis, 1 C. & K., 682, in which Pollock, C. B., declined to take the facts from the opening of counsel.

(2) The Butsshire (1909), P., 170.

(3) Boretto v. Rodrigues (1910), 35 B, 24

(4) Venkata Narasimha v. Bhashyakarlu Naidu, 25 M., 367 (1902).

(5) Amritolal Bose v. Rajoneekant Mitter, 15 B. L. R. (P. C.), 10, 23 (1875); 28 W. R, 214; L. R., 2 I. A., 113, per Sir B. Peacock: Burjorji Curselji v. Muncherji Kuverji, 5 B., 143, 152 (1880), per West, J., [Rules with regard to admission by pleading must be applied with discretion in this country]; Norton, Ev., 115.

(6) O. VIII, r. 5, 2nd Ed, pp 733, 734

(7) In the previous editions this subject which does not belong to the Law of Evidence will be found treated.

(8) Markby, Ev, Art. 51.

ility of confessions (1) In cases of felony it is the constant practice udges at the Assizes to refuse to allow even counsel to make any n (2) In a case also of indictment for a misdemeanour (perjury) where red that the attorneys on both sides had agreed that the formal proof e dispensed with and part of the prosecutor's case admitted, Lord C B, said, "I cannot allow any admission to be made on the part of ndant unless it is made at the trial by the defendant or his counsel"; defendant's counsel declining to make any admission the defendant itted.(3) A plea of guilty only admits the offence charged and not of the depositions (4) Prior to this Act the reported decisions are orm.(5) It has been suggested that the section applies to Civil suits Though it is not in terms so strictly limited, the suggestion receives from the phraseology employed, which is more suitable to Civil than nal proceedings Whether this section applies to Criminal cases or Court may, by the express terms of the section, in its discretion require admitted to be proved otherwise than by such admissions. It is not tice of counsel or vakils to make admissions in Criminal cases, and hey have the power, they will seldom, if ever, assume the responsibility ng such admissions Were such an admission made, the Court would s in most Criminal cases require the facts admitted to be proved e than by such admissions under the provisions of the last paragraph of on.(7) In a case in the Madras High Court it was held that this section ot enable a Judge to admit the evidence of an absent witness under 32 where the reasons specified in that section had not been proved but used had consented to such admission or had failed to object to it (8) plea of guilty, see s 43

eph Dig, Art 60
ill, Ev, 10th Ed, 391, n 6; v 2nd Ed, 171, see Roscoe, Cr 1 Ed, 115, 116
v Thornhill, 8 C & P, 575, be observed that this was a case ission before trial, the Judge that an admission could be made trial by the defendant or his v Riley, 18 Cox, 285; Foucar ir, 33 T L R, 318.
v Kazim Mundle, 17 W. R., Cr. 2), it was held that admissions a prisoner's vakil cannot be used against the prisoner But in R. v Gogalao, 12 W. R, Cr, 80 (1869), proof of a fact was dispensed with on the admission of the prisoner's counsel, in the case of R. v. Surroop Chunder, 12 H. R, Cr, 76 (1869), it was said, with reference to a particular arrangement, "so far as prisoners can assent to anything, that arrangement was assented to by the vakils for each party."
(6) Norton, Ev, 238
(7) v also notes to s. 5, ante.
(8) Anavi Muthirujan (in the matter of) 39 M, 449 (1916), and see R v Bholanath Sen, 2 C, 23 (1877).

CHAPTER IV.

OF ORAL EVIDENCE

ORAL evidence has been defined by the Act to be all statements which the Court permits or requires to be made before it by witnesses in relation to matters of fact under enquiry.(1) This Chapter declares (a) that all facts except the contents of documents may be proved by oral evidence, a proposition of law which, though obvious, was lost sight of in several cases anterior to the passing of the Act. So it was held that oral evidence, if worthy of credit, is sufficient without documentary evidence, to prove a fact or title(2); such as boundaries(3); the existence of an agreement, e.g., a farming lease(4); the quantity of defendant's land and the amount of its rent(5); the fact of possession(6); a pres ... ment of accounts(9); the discharge c ... short (as the section now declares),

It is an error to suppose that oral evidence not supported by documentary evidence is of no importance whatever for the determination of the true merits of a case (11) There is no presumption of perjury against oral testimony, but before acting upon such testimony its credibility should be tested both intrinsically and extrinsically.(12) And in the contradiction of oral testimony, which occurs in almost every Indian case, the Court must look to the documentary evidence, in order to see on which side the truth lies.(13) Much greater credence also is to be given to men's acts than to their alleged words, which are so easily mistaken or misrepresented.(14)

The contents of documents may not (except when secondary evidence is admissible)(15) be proved by oral evidence because it is a cardinal rule, not one of technicality but of substance, which it is dangerous to depart from, that where written documents exist, they shall be produced as being the best evidence

---

(1) S 3, ante, as to testimony by signs, see note to s 59, post.

(2) Ram Soondur v. Akima Bibee, 8 W. R, 366 (1867)

(3) Ranee Surut v. Rajender Kishore, 9 W. R, 125 (1868); but see Goluk Chunder v. Rajah Sreemurd, W R (1864), 135

(4) Goluck Kishore v Nund Mohun, 2 W. R., 394 (1869).

(5) Denoo Singh v Doorga Pershad, 12 W. R, 348 (1872).

(6) Sheo Suhaye v. Goodur Roy, 8 W. R, 328 (1867); Thakoor Deen v. Nowab Syud, 8 W. R., 341 (1867); Maharajah Gobind v. Rajah Anund, 5 W. R., Cr, 79 (1866).

(7) Meherban Khan v. Muhboob Khan, 7 W. R., 462 (1867).

(8) Mohidin Ahmed v. Sayyid Muhammad, 1 Mad H C. R., 92 (1862).

(9) Kavipilikaribasarappa v Somasumuddiram, 1 Mad. H C R, 183 (1863); Purnima Chowdhrani v. Nittanand Shah, B L R, Sup Vol, F. B, 3 (1863).

(10) Ramanadamisar Aiyar v. Rama Bhattar, 2 Mad H. C. R, 412 (1865); Guman Gullubhai v. Sorabji Barjorji, 1 Bom H C. R, 11 (1863); Dalip Singh v Durga Prasad, 1 A, 442 (1877), [even though there be a written receipt not produced]; see s 91, ill (e), post.

(11) Girdharee Lall v. Madho Roy, 18 W. R., 323 (1872).

(12) In the matter of Goomanee, 17 W. R, Cr., 59, 60 (1872)

(13) Mussumat Imam v. Hurgovind Ghose, 4 Moo I. A, 403, 407 (1848); s c, 7 W. R., P. C, 67; Ekowri Singh v. Hiralal Seal, 2 B L R., P. C., 4 (1868); s. c, 11 W. R., P. C., 24

(14) Meer Usdoollah v. Beeby Imaman, 1 Moo. I A., 19, 42, 43 (1836).

(15) See s. 65, post

of their own contents (1) But the rule is confined to documents. Though the non-production of an article may afford ground for observations, more or less weighty according to the circumstances, it only goes to the weight, not to the admissibility of the evidence When the question is as to the effect of a written instrument, the instrument itself is primary evidence of its contents, and until it is produced, or the non-production is excused, no secondary evidence can be received. But there is no case whatever deciding that when the issue is as to the state of a chattel, e.g., the soundness of a horse, or the quality of the bulk of goods sold by sample, the production of the chattel is primary evidence, and no other evidence can be given till the chattel is produced in Court for its inspection (2)

(b) Secondly, this Chapter declares that oral evidence must in all cases be direct. That is, it must consist of a declaration by the witness that he perceived by his own senses the fact to which he testifies. Thus if A is charged with the murder of B, and the facts alleged by nine witnesses in support of the charge and shown to be relevant under Part I, are as follows: (a) A came running from the scene of the murder at 12 o'clock. (b) Some one screamed out at the same time and place, "A, you are murdering me" (c) A left his house at 11½, vowing that he would be revenged on B for pressing so hard for his debt. (d) There was blood at the scene of the murder and on A's hands and clothes (e) There were trac[illegible] der to A's house, which correspond [illegible] ceived was, in my opinion, of a cha[illegible] e been inflicted by himself. (g) The [illegible] by A has killed me." (h) The prisoner said to me, "I killed B because I was desperate" (i) The prisoner told me that he was deeply indebted to B The prisoner was a man of excellent character.

[illegible]

heard by the second witness must be proved by the second witness telling the Court that he did hear such screams; the fact of A, having vowed, shortly before the murder, to be revenged on B must be proved by the third witness, who heard the vow, so, the blood by the person who saw it; the footsteps, by the person who tracked and compared them; the doctor's opinion as to the wound, by the doctor testifying that that is his opinion; the dying man's statements and the prisoner's confession by a person who heard them. They must not be proved by the evidence of persons to whom any of the witnesses abovementioned may have told what they heard or saw, or thought.

On the other hand, the evidence of the following seven witnesses would be indirect: (k) My child came in and said "I have seen A running in such a direction." (l) [illegible] heard at such a time. (m) Father said, [illegible] has just left the house, vowing to be re[illegible] t they had compared the footsteps and found that they exactly fitted. (o) The doctor said that the man could never cut himself like that. (p) Everybody said that there was no more doubt, for the deceased man had identified the prisoner. (q) B's wife told me the day before that A was heavily indebted to him.

---

(1) Dinomoyi Debi v. Roy Luchmiput, 7 I A., 8 (1879)

(2) R. v. Francis, 12 Cox, C. C, 612, 616, per Lord Coleridge, C. J, and as to notice to produce things other than documents, see Editor's Note to Line v. Taylor, 3 F. & F, 731 at p 733; as to parol evidence of inscriptions on banners, etc, see The King v. Hunt, 3 B. & Ald., 566, 574.

All the evidence of witnesses, (k) to (q), would be inadmissible, not because the facts to which it refers are irrelevant, but because it is not 'direct,' that is, not given by the persons who with their own senses perceived the facts described, or in their own minds formed the opinions expressed. The only use that could be made of it would be for the purpose of corroborating some other witness by proving a former consistent statement made by him at the time(1): or of discrediting him by proving a former inconsistent statement.(2) Except for these purposes it would be inadmissible.(3) The section, however, provides by way of exception that if the fact to be proved is the opinion of an expert who cannot be called (which is the case in the majority of instances in this country), and if such opinion has been expressed in any published treatise, it may be proved by the production of the treatise (4)

Upon the respective values of oral and documentary testimony, see the Introduction to Chapter V, post. The prevalence of false testimony in this country has been the subject of frequent judicial comment. In the case of Rungama v. Atchama(5), the Judicial Committee observed as follows:—" These instruments are produced, and the facts tending to this conclusion are sworn to by a vast number of witnesses. There appears to us to be no objection to this testimony, beyond the observation which may be made on all Hindu testimony that perjury and forgery are so extensively prevalent in India, that little reliance can be placed on it." But all native evidence must not be doubted. " It is quite true that such is the lamentable disregard of truth prevailing amongst the native inhabitants of Hindustan that all oral evidence is necessarily received with great suspicion; and when opposed by the strong improbability of the transaction to which they depose, or weakened by the mode in which they speak, it may be of little avail. But we must be careful not to carry this caution to an extreme length, nor utterly to discard oral evidence merely because it is oral, nor unless the impeaching or discrediting circumstances are clearly found to exist. It would be very dangerous to exercise the judicial function as if no credit could necessarily be given to witnesses deposing vivâ voce, how necessary soever it may be always to sift such evidence with great minuteness and care."(6) " It would, indeed, be most dangerous to say that, where the probabilities are in favour of the transaction, we should conclude against it solely because of the general fallibility of Native evidence. Such an argument would go to an extent which can never be maintained in this or any other Court, for it would tend to establish a rule that all oral evidence

(1) See s. 157, post.
(2) See s. 155 (3), post.
(3) Cunningham, Ev., 38—40.
(4) S 60, Proviso (1).
(5) 4 Moo I. A., 106 (1846); see also Mudhoo Soodun v. Suroop Chunder, 4 Moo. I. A., 441 (1849): cited in R v. Tilak, 6 Bom L. R, 330 (1904); in which the High Court commented on the profitless generalization as to the unreliability of Native testimony; Bunwaree Lal v. Maharajah Hetnarain, 7 Moo. I. A, 167 (1858); Ramamani Ammal v. Kulanthai Natchear, 14 Moo. I. A., 354 (1871); R. v. Elahi Bux, B. L. R, F. B., 482 (1866); Seviaji Vijaya v. Chinna Nayana, 10 Moo. I. A., 162 (1864); Mussamut Edun v. Mussamut Bechun, 11 W. R., 345 (1869); and Field, Ev., pp. 47–50, 57–67, (ib., 6th Ed., 29—31, 36—43), where the subject is discussed. "It would, however, be a great mistake to suppose that all Natives of India are addicted to these vices in which some Natives indulge and for which some districts are notorious The upper and more educated classes are as free from them as the same classes in other countries of equal civilization; and they regret their existence among their less enlightened countrymen," ib, p. 50 It must also be remembered that (in the words of Jackson, J), "we have to do almost universally with the meaner classes; that a respectable native avoids being made a witness, as we should shun the small pox, and that witnesses, therefore, are scarcely a fair sample of the population." R. v Elahi Bux, B. L. R, F. B., 482 (1866). See also Marshall R., 176, 182

(6) Mudhoo Soodun v. Soorup Chunder, 4 Moo. I. A, 441 (1849); and see observations in Wise v. Sunduloonisa Choudranee, 11 Moo. I. A., 187, 188 (1867); Nilkristo Deb v. Bir Chandra, 3 B L. R., P. C. 24 (1869).

must be discarded, and it is most manifest that, however fallible such evidence may be, however carefully to be watched, justice never can be administered in the most important causes without recourse to it."(1) "The ordinary legal and reasonable presumptions of fact must not be lost sight of in the trial of Indian cases, however untrustworthy much of the evidence submitted to these Courts may commonly be, that is, due weight must be given to evidence there as elsewhere; and that evidence in a particular case must not be rejected from a general distrust of Native testimony, nor perjury widely imputed without some grave grounds to support the imputation. Such a rejection, if sanctioned, would virtually submit the decision of the rights of others to the suspicion(2) and not to the deliberate judgment of their appointed Judges, nor must an entire history be thrown aside, because the evidence of some of the witnesses is incredible or untrustworthy "(3) Evidence of witnesses, though not independent, but not shaken in cross-examination and accepted by the Judge who heard them and saw their demeanour should not be rejected on mere suspicion where the story itself as told by them is not improbable (4) The whole evidence is not to be rejected because part is false The maxim "Falsus in uno falsus in omnibus" must be applied in this country with great discretion(5), for it not uncommonly happens in this country that falsehood and fabrication are employed to support a just cause (6) In the words of the Calcutta High Court: "The Court will bear in mind that the use of fabricated written evidence by a party, however clearly established, does not re- [illegible]

under the name of a presumption Forgery or fraud in some material part of the evidence, if it is shown to be the contrivance of a party to the proceedings, may afford a fair presumption against the whole of the evidence adduced by that party, or at least against such portion of that evidence as tends to the

(1) Bunwaree Lal v. Maharajah Hetnarain, 7 Moo I A, 167 (1858), 4 W R., P. C, 128.

(2) Suspicion is not to be substituted for evidence, see Sreeman Chunder v. Gopal Chunder, 11 Moo I A, 28 (1866), Faez Bux v Fakiruddin Mahomed, 9 B. L. R, 458 (1871), Kali Chandra v. Shibchandra Bhaduri, 6 B. L R, 501 (1870); Olpherts v Mahabir Pershad, 10 I A, 30 (1882), R v Ram Saran, 8 A., 315 (1885), and cases cited next note

(3) Ramamani Ammal v. Kalanthai Natchear, 14 Moo I A, 354, 355 (1871), cited in Hanmantrao v Secretary of State, 25 B, 298 (1900), and see Nilkristo Deb v Bir Chandra, 3 B L R, P. C, 13 (1869); s c, 12 W R, P C, 21.

(4) Magbulan v 'Ahmad Husain, 8 C. W. N, 241 (1903), s. c, 26 A, 108, 116. In this case it was also held that the description of a witness in the heading of a deposition taken down in Court is no part of the evidence given by the witness on solemn affirmation s c, 6 Bom. L. R, 233

(5) See observations in Norton, Ev, cited in State, 25 B, 297 (1900).

(6) Ranee Surnomoyee v. Maharajah Sutteeschunder, 10 Moo I A. 149, 150 (1864), Wise v. Sunduloonissa Chowdranee, 11 Moo I A, 183 (1867), 7 W. R., P C, 13. ["In a native case it is not uncommon to find a true case placed on a false foundation and supported in part by false evidence, ... and it is not always a safe conclusion that a case is false and dishonest in which such falsities are found]; Seviaji Vijaya v. Chinna Nayana, 10 Moo I A, 161-163 (1864): [If a party put in evidence, in support of his title, documents proved to be forged, but the other evidence adduced by him is not impeached, the Court, in rejecting the froged documents, will take the unimpeached evidence into consideration, and if satisfied, adjudicate thereon"]; Pattabhiramier v. Venkatarow Naicken, 7 B. L R., 142, 143 (1871); Goriboolla Kazee v. Gooroodas Roy, 2 W R., Act X, 99 (1865); Bengal Indigo Co v Tarineepershad Ghose, 3 W R, Act X, 149 (1865); Kulloo Mahomed v Hurdeb Doss, 19 W. R, 107 (1873) See also Koonjo Beharee v. Roy Mothooranath, 1 W. R., 155 (1864), in which case it was held that the Judges should not have dismissed the whole claim on the ground that great part of plaintiff's claim being shown to be untrue, none of it could be reliable.

same conclusion with the fabricated evidence. It may, perhaps, also have the further effect of gaining a more ready admission for the evidence of his opponent But the presumption should not be pressed too far, especially in this country, where it happens, not uncommonly that, falsehood and fabrication are employed to support a just cause."(1) If a part of the evidence of a witness is disbelieved, other evidence coming from the same quarter must be viewed warily; but that does not exonerate the Court from weighing whatever evidence has actually been tendered and the mode in which it has been met.(2) In Meer Usdoolah v. Beeby Imamam(3) Baron Parke said:—"There are some other facts which are established beyond all possibility of doubt; and there is no better criterion of the truth, no safer rule for investigating cases of conflicting evidence, where perjury and fraud must exist on the one side or the other, than to consider what facts are beyond dispute, and to examine which of the two cases best accords with these facts, according to the ordinary course of human affairs and the usual habits of life." And in another case the Privy Council said: "In examining evidence, with a view to test whether several witnesses who bear testimony to the same facts are worthy of credit, it is important to see whether they give their evidence in the same words, or whether they substantially agree, not indeed concurring in all the minute particulars of what passed, but with that agreement in substance and that variation in unimportant details which are usually found in witnesses intending to speak the truth and not tutored to tell a particular story."(4) In the undermentioned case(5) the Court observed with regard to discrepancies in evidence as follows :—"No doubt it may be contended that if these witnesses were tutored ones, care would have been taken to see that they should tell the same story. But care is not always taken or effectually taken, in such cases, and discrepancies are not less infirmative of testimony because a greater sagacity on the part of the witnesses would have avoided them."

In short, oral evidence must be considered in conjunction with the documentary proofs on the record, and the probabilities arising from all the surrounding circumstances of the case; and the only satisfactory mode of dealing with a disputed point of fact is to consider the full force and joint result of all the evidence, direct or presumptive, bearing upon the point, a precaution which is nowhere more necessary than in this country where oral evidence per se is looked upon with so much distrust.(6)

"The consideration of a case," observed their Lordships in the Privy Council in the case of Maharajah Rajendro v. Sheopursun Misser(7), "no evidence can seldom be satisfactory, unless all the presumptions for and against a claim arising on all the evidence offered or on proofs withheld, on the course of pleading, and tardy production of important portions of claim or defence, be viewed in connection with the oral or documentary proof which per se might suffice to establish it" "The observance of this rule is nowhere more necessary than in the Courts of Justice in this country. We cannot shut our eyes to the melancholy fact that the average value of oral evidence in this country

(1) Goriboolla Kazee v. Gooroodass Roy, 2 W R, Act X, 99 (1865)

(2) Rameswar Koer v Bharat Pershad, 4 C W N., 18 (1899), P C., as to disbelief of one statement and setting up alternative case, see Casperss v Kedernath Sarbadhikari, 5 C W N, 858 (1901).

(3) 1 Moo I A., 19, 44 (1836), s. c., 5 W R, P C, 26

(4) Nana Narain v Huree Puntu, Marshall's Rep, 436 (1862), [analysis of conflicting evidence in a suit setting up a will]. In Haranund Roy v Ram Gopal, 4 C W. N, 430 (1899); the Privy Council speak of "small differences quite consistent with the truthfulness of the witnesses who, it will be remembered, were speaking of conversations some 12 or 14 years after they took place" and see remarks at p 431, ib

(5) R. v. Kalu Patil, 11 Bom H C R., 146 (1874).

(6) Rajah Leelanund v. Mussamut Basheeroonissa, 16 W. R, 102 (1871), per Dwarkanath Mitter, J.

(7) 10 Moo. I. A., 453.

is exceedingly low; and although in dealing with such evidence we are not to start with any presumption of perjury, we cannot possibly take too much care to guard against undue credulity. There is hardly a case involving a disputed question of fact, in which there is not a conflict of testimony; one set of witnesses swearing point blank to a particular state of facts, the other swearing with equal distinctness to a state of facts diametrically opposed to it.(1) If therefore we were to form our conclusions upon the bare depositions of the witnesses, without reference to the conduct of the parties and the presumptions and probabilities legitimately arising from the record, all hope of success in discovering the truth must be at an end."(2)

In the case last mentioned the same learned Judge observed as follows(3) .—

"It is a truth confirmed by all experience, that in the great majority of cases fraud is not capable of being established by positive and express proofs. It is by its very nature secret in its movements, and if those whose duty it is to investigate questions of fraud were to insist upon direct proof in every case, the ends of justice would be constantly, if not invariably, defeated We do not mean to say that fraud can be established by any less proof or by any different kind of proof from that which is required to establish any other disputed question of fact, or that circumstances of mere suspicion which lead to no certain result should be taken as sufficient proof of fraud, or that fraud should be presumed against anybody in any case, but what we mean to say is that in the generality of cases circumstantial evidence is our only resource in dealing with questions of fraud, and if this evidence is sufficient to overcome the natural presumption of honesty and fair dealing and to satisfy a reasonable mind of the existence of fraud by raising a counter-presumption, there is no reason whatever why we should not act upon it

If a Judge in dealing with a question of fact forms his conclusion upon a portion of the evidence before him, excluding the other portion under an erroneous impression that it is not legal evidence but conjecture, there can be no doubt that the investigation is erroneous in law, and that the error thus committed is likely to have produced an error in the decision of the case upon the merits, inasmuch as it is impossible to say whether the Judge would have arrived at the same conclusion if he had looked into all the evidence upon the record without excluding any part of it from a mistaken idea that it was not admissible in law. And if the Judge has illegally rejected the evidence on the question of fraud, does it not necessarily follow that he has committed an error in law in the investigation of the case which goes to vitiate his whole decision on the merits."

59. All facts, except the contents of documents, may be proved by oral evidence. Proof facts b eviden

Principle.—See Introduction, ante.

s 3 ("Fact") s. 3 ("Oral evidence")
s. 3 ("Document") ss 61—66 (Proof of content of documents)

COMMENTARY

The distinction between primary and secondary evidence in the Act applies to documents only All other facts may be proved by oral evidence. Proof facts b evidenc

(1) In some cases effect can be given to testimony without discrediting witnesses who have given opposing testimony See Mothoor Mohun v Bank of Bengal, 1 C L R, 514 [in which case it was argued that it was impossible to find in favour of plaintiff without impeaching the honesty and veracity of two European gentlemen of position the secretary and manager of the Bengal Bank, respectively]

(2) Mathura Pandey v Ram Rucha, 3 B L R., A C J, 112 (1869), per Mitter, J

(3) Ib, p 110

See Introduction, ante, where this section is discussed. It is not very happily worded. Contents of documents may be proved by oral evidence under certain circumstances; that is to say, when such evidence of their contents is admissible as secondary evidence.(1) Where a fact may be proved by oral evidence it is not necessary that the statement of the witness should be oral. Any method of communicating thought which the circumstances of the case or the physical condition of the witness demand may, in the discretion of the Court, be employed. Thus a deaf mute may testify by signs, by writing, or through an interpreter. So where a dying woman, conscious, but without power of articulation, was asked whether the defendant was her assailant, and if so, to squeeze the hand of the questioner, the question and the fact of her affirmative pressure were held admissible in evidence.(2)

Oral evidence must be direct.

60. Oral evidence must, in all cases whatever, be direct; that is to say:

if it refers to a fact which could be seen, it must be the evidence of a witness who says he saw it;

if it refers to a fact which could be heard, it must be the evidence of a witness who says he heard it;

if it refers to a fact which could be perceived by any other sense or in any other manner, it must be the evidence of a witness who says he perceived it by that sense or in that manner;(3)

if it refers to an opinion or to the grounds on which that opinion is held, it must be the evidence of the person who holds that opinion on those grounds(4):

Provided that the opinions of experts expressed in any treatise commonly offered for sale, and the grounds on which such opinions are held may be proved by the production of such treatises if the author is dead or cannot be found, or has become incapable of giving evidence, or cannot be called as a witness without an amount of delay or expense which the Court regards as unreasonable:

Provided also that, if oral evidence refers to the existence or conditions of any material thing other than a document, the Court may, if it thinks fit, require the production of such material thing for its inspection.

Principle.—This is the best evidence Derivative or second-hand evidence is excluded owing to its infirmity as compared with its original source.(5) See Introduction, ante, and Notes, post.

s. 3 ("Oral evidence.") ss. 45—51 (Opinion when relevant.)
s. 3 ("Fact") s 51 (Grounds of opinion)

(1) Norton, Ev, 239; see s. 63, cl. (5), post

(2) Best, Ev, p. 109; see R. v. Abdullah, 7 A, 385 (F B), (1885), cited at p. 318, note 1, ante.

(3) See Ashutosh Das v. R, 23 Cr. L. J., 289.

(4) Oriental Government, &c., Company v. Narasimha Chari, 25 M, 208, 20? (1901).

(5) Best, Ev., § 402, et seq.; Taylor, Ev., § 567, et seq; Powell, Ev., 9th Ed. 305 and see Notes, post.

s. 3 ("Evidence.")
s. 3 ("Court.")
s. 3 ("Document.")

s. 45 (Opinions of experts.)
s. 165 (Judge's power to put question or order production.)

Steph. Introd., 161—163, 170, and passim Steph. Dig., Art 14, pp 173—176, Taylor, Ev., §§ 567—606; Field, Ev., 6th Ed., 224, 225, 123, 124, Best, Ev., § 492 et seq and pp. 444—458; Powell, Ev., 9th Ed., 305; Wills, Ev., Index, sub voc 'Hearsay'; Norton, Ev., 28, 174, 237, 238, Markby, Ev., 52, 53, 19; Wigmore, Ev., §§ 1361—1363, Index sub voc. 'Hearsay.'

COMMENTARY

Rule against hearsay. This section enacts the general rule against the admission of hearsay. "Hearsay evidence has been defined to be, and in its legal sense denotes, 'all the evidence which does not derive its value solely from the credit given to the witness himself, but which rests also in part on the veracity and competence of some other person.'(1) Another definition is: 'the evidence not of what the witness knows himself but of what he has heard from others' It has also been defined as 'A statement made by a witness of what has been said and declared out of Court by a person not a party to the suit.' Bentham's definition is. 'The supposed oral testimony transmitted through oral. supposed orally delivered evidence of a supposed extrajudicially narrating witness judicially delivered vivâ voce by the judicially deposing witness.' It must be borne in mind that the term 'hearsay' is not only used with reference to what is done or written, but also to what is spoken. The general rule, with regard to hearsay evidence is, that it is not admissible, and within the scope of this rule are included all statements, oral or written, the probative force of which depends either wholly or in part on the credit of an unexamined person, notwithstanding that such statements may possess an independent evidentiary value derived from the circumstances under which they were made, and also where no better evidence of the facts stated is to be obtained The fact, therefore, that a statement was made by a person not called as a witness, and the fact that a statement is contained in any book, document, or record whatever, proof of which is not admissible on other grounds, are respectively deemed to be irrelevant to the truth of the matter stated."(2) This is the general rule, but there are several exceptions to it as will be seen from a consideration of sections 32, 33, ante The late Mr Justice Stephen asserted that the phrase 'hearsay is no evidence' had many meanings: its common and most important meaning, he said, might be expressed by saying that the connection between events and reports that they have happened is generally so remote that it is expedient to regard the existence of the reports as irrelevant to the concurrence of the events except in certain cases Another meaning is, that it expresses the same thing from a different point of view, and is subject to no exceptions whatever It asserts that, whatever may be the relation of a fact to be proved to the fact in issue, it must, if proved by oral evidence, be proved by direct evidence; e g, if it were to be proved that A, who died 50 years ago, said that he had heard from his father, B, who died 100 years ago, that A's grandfather C, had told B that D, C's elder brother, died without issue, A's statement must be proved by some one who, with his own ears, heard him make it If (as in the case of slander) the speaking of the words was the very point in issue, they must be proved in exactly the same way, i e, the fact of their utterance by the defendant must be deposed to by some person hearing them used. Evidence given as to character or general opinion is not an exception to this rule, for, when a man swears that another has a good character, he means that he has heard many people speak well of him, though he does not particularly recollect what people, or recollect all that they said.

(1) Taylor, Ev., § 570 As to the history of the Rule, see Wigmore, Ev., § 1364 Down to the middle of the 17th century hearsay statements were constantly received

(2) Law Times p 4, May 2nd, 1896.

The grounds for the exclusion of hearsay evidence are these: "(a) the irresponsibility of the original declarants, for the evidence is not given on oath or under personal responsibility; (b) it cannot be tested by cross-examination; (c) it supposes some better testimony and its reception encourages the substitution of weaker for stronger proofs; (d) its tendency to protract legal investigations to an embarrassing and dangerous length; (e) its intrinsic weakness, (f) its incompetency to satisfy the mind as to the existence of the fact, for truth depreciates in the process of repetition. 'It is matter of common experience that statements in common conversation are made so lightly and are so liable to be misunderstood or misrepresented that they cannot be depended upon for any important purpose unless they are made under special circumstances'(1), and (g) the opportunities for fraud its admission would open."(2) A statement which "if made by a witness" would be perfectly relevant is, when so made, excluded because it is wanting in the sanction and the tests which apply to sworn testimony and admitted only when in respect of the persons making it, or of the circumstances under which it was made, there is some security for its accuracy, which countervails the absence of those safeguards (3) The exceptional cases in which such statements are admitted are dealt with in ss. 17-39, ante.(4) Oral or written statements made by persons not called as witnesses, are generally speaking, and subject to the exceptions mentioned, not receivable to prove the truth of the matters stated: that is, such a statement is inadmissible as hearsay when it is offered as proof of its own truth But statements by non-witnesses may be original evidence, and as such admissible, that is, where the making of the statement and not its accuracy is the material point.(5) The test whether a statement belongs to one class or the other is the purpose for which it is tendered.

---

(1) Steph Introd., 161

(2) Law Times, p 4, May 2nd, 1896. See Steph Dig., pp 173—176, Powell, Ev, 9th Ed, 305, Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 206—212, Best, Ev, § 494, p 444, et seq, where the principle of the hearsay rule is discussed Gresley, Ev. 304; Phillips, Ev, 142

(3) Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 208, Wharton, Ev, 170—176; Best, Ev, §§ 492—495, Steph Dig, Art. 14 & Note viii, Taylor, Ev, §§ 567—606; Powell, Ev, 9th Ed, 305; Phillips, Ev, 143; Doe d. Wright v. Tatham, 7 A. & E, 313, 408

(4) See notes to these sections, ss 17—31 (admissions and confessions), 32—33 (statements by persons who cannot be called as witnesses), 34—38 (statements made under special circumstances). To these may be added statements made in the presence of a party. See s. 8

(5) E g., statements which are part of the res gestæ, whether as actually constituting a fact in issue (e g, a libel) or accompanying one (ss 5, 8), statements amounting to acts of ownership, as leases, licenses and grants (s 13), statements which corroborate or contradict the testimony of witnesses (ss 155, 157, 158). Enquiries made of, and answers received from, parties (themselves not called) tendered to the Judge to show reasonable search for a lost document or an absent person are admissible. (R. v. Braintree, 1 E. & E, 51; Wyatt v Bateman, 7 C. & P, 586; see notes to s 33 In some cases what is called a verbal fact ("There is a category of cases in which a man's words are his acts, sometimes indeed the most important acts of his life," per Erle, J, Shilling v Accidental Death Co, post), may be admissible as original evidence, although the particulars of it may be excluded as hearsay, e g, the fact that a person made a communication to another, in consequence of which an act was done (R v Wilkins, 4 Cox, 92; R. v. Wainright, 13 Cox, 171), or consulted him on a given subject (Shilling v Accidental Death Co, 4 Jur. N. S, 244), see s 8, and Cunningham, Ev, 94, or complained of an injury (see s 8, illusts (j), (k): in this case, however, according to Indian law, the particulars are receivable; or had a dispute, prior to the publication of a libel (s 9, illust. (b) see Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed, 207. 'Hearsay,' in its legal sense, is confined to that kind of evidence (whether spoken or written), which does not derive its credibility solely from the credit due to the witness himself, but rests also in part on the veracity and competency of some other person from whom the witness may have received his information. Phillips, Ev, 143.

The intention of this section is to take care that whatever is offered as evidence shall itself sustain the character of evidence It must be immediate. It may not be mediate or delivered through a medium, second-hand, or to use the technical expression hearsay.(1) A who saw, heard, &c., must be produced. The fact cannot be proved through the medium of B who did not himself see, hear, &c., but is prepared to swear that A told him he had seen, heard, &c. So with respect to the fourth case, opinion-evidence, when such is admissible. This section necessitates the production of the witness who holds the opinion ; it excludes the evidence of any witness who can merely say that he has heard another express such an opinion It is admissible evidence for a living witness to state his opinion on the existence of a family custom, and to state, as the grounds of that opinion, information derived from deceased persons, and the weight of the evidence would depend on the position and character of the witness and of the person on whose statement he has formed his opinion But it must be the expression of independent opinion based on hearsay and not mere repetition of hearsay.(2) The same rule of excluding hearsay,—second-hand, or mediate—evidence prevails with regard to circumstantial evidence, as to direct evidence Circumstantial evidence must be established by 'direct' evidence within the meaning of this section, namely, by witnesses who themselves saw, &c, the facts to which they depose, and which are the material for inference respecting the existence of the fact in issue (3) This "section provides that when it (i.e, the oral evidence) refers to a fact which could be seen, it (i.e, the oral evidence) must be the evidence of a witness who says he saw it. This last 'it' is somewhat indefinite, but I think that this 'it' has reference to the fact previously spoken of, and I think the fact previously spoken [illegible] and at first sight might appear to have that meaning. (4) In the undermentioned case(5) the Privy Council held that the evidence of certain witnesses was hearsay and, to use the language of the Evidence Act, not relevant, and should be disregarded. Where evidence, such as hearsay, is improperly admitted, the question for the Judicial Committee is whether, rejecting that evidence, enough remains to support the finding (6)

The admissions of a person whose position in relation to property in suit it is necessary for one party to prove against another, are in the nature of

(1) In his notes on this Act, Markby, J, says that the first four paragraphs of this section have been supposed to have been intended to exclude that kind of evidence which is called hearsay but that for the reason he states it is difficult to believe this, and moreover hearsay would not be excluded by the language here used For statements are facts and are so treated in ss 17, 29, passim If therefore, A, a witness, had been told something by B and A were asked what B had told him, the evidence of A would refer to a fact which would be heard, and A is a witness who says he heard it, this section would therefore not exclude it He states that the following universally recognised rule has been in fact omitted from the Act, viz —"No statement as to the existence or non-existence of a fact which is being enquired into, made otherwise than by a witness whilst under examination in Court can be used as evidence" Markby, Ev, 52, 53, 19.

(2) Garuradhwaja Prosad v Superundhwaja Prosad, 23 A, 37, 51, 52 (1900)

(3) Norton, Ev, 240 The proof of the circumstances themselves must be direct. That is, the circumstances cannot be proved by hearsay Thus, if the circumstance offered in evidence is the correspondence of the prisoner's shoes with certain marks in mud or snow, the party who has made comparison and measurement must himself be called, not a third party, who heard from the measurer of the correspondence Ib, 82

(4) Neel Kanto v Juggobondho Ghose, 12 B L R, App 18, 19 (1874), per Markby, J

(5) Lala Narain v Lala Ramanuj, 2 C W N, 193 (1897)

(6) Mohur Singh v Ghuriba, 6 B L R, 495 (1870)

original evidence and not hearsay, though such person is alive and has not been cited as a witness.(1) For the general rule excluding hearsay evidence does not apply to those declarations to which the party is privy, or to admissions which he himself has made. Hearsay evidence amounting to evidence of general repute is admissible for the purpose of proceedings under Chapter VIII of the Criminal Procedure Code.(2) Under the provisions of section 165, post, the Judge may, in order to discover or to obtain proper proof of relevant facts, ask any question he pleases, in any form, at any time, of any witness, or of parties about any facts relevant or irrelevant.

Hearsay in cross-examination.

The evidence offered in a Court of Justice is of two kinds: (a) substantive evidence, or evidence of facts necessary and relevant to the determination of the issue; and (b) evidence of facts affecting the trustworthiness of the media by which the former evidence is presented to the Court, namely, evidence touching the credibility of the witnesses examined. This credibility is the subject of cross-examination. Hearsay is always inadmissible as substantive evidence whether that evidence be elicited in examination or cross-examination. But hearsay may be admissible in cross-examination in so far as it touches the question of the credibility of the witness examined(3) "The rule against hearsay applies in strictness to the proof of the relevant facts in the course of cross-examination just as much as to their proof by examination-in-chief, that is to say, a party is not entitled to prove his case merely by eliciting from his opponent's witness in cross-examination not his own knowledge on the subject, but what he has heard others say about it, but not verified for himself. The application of the rule is, however, obscured by the fact that the opponent is entitled to test the witness's own conduct and consistency, and for that purpose to interrogate him as to statements made to him by other persons, so that the party by whom the witness was called is not entitled to exclude the question but only to comment to the jury on the effect and value of the witness's answer. Similar considerations apply with even greater force to the witness's admissions in cross-examination of his own previous statements about the relevant facts."(4)

Provisos.

The first proviso, which makes an exception to the general rule analogous to the exceptions made in section 32, sh[illegible] 45, ante, and is an alteration of the rule of English lav[illegible]
The treatise in order to be admissible, [illegible] and the author of it must be not producible within the meaning of the section. Strictly the burden of proving these facts will be upon the person who desires to give such treatise in evidence.(6) Section 45, ante, refers to the evidence of living witnesses given in Court. This section makes scientific treatises and the like, commonly offered for sale, evidence, if the author be dead, or under any of the circumstances specified in section 32, which render his production impossible or impracticable. The Court has thus referred to Taylor's Medical Jurisprudence (7) In a case in the Madras High Court it was held that under this section the Court could consider and act upon the opinions of experts, (as contained in treatises), when dealing with the question whether a child could have been begotten at a certain date.(8)

(1) Ali Moidin v. Elayachamdathil, 5 M., 239 (1882).

(2) R. v. Raoji Foolchand, 6 Bom. L. R., 34 (1903)

(3) See Ganouri Lall v. R., 16 C., 210, 211, 215 (1889). "This case is, however, no authority for the contention that such evidence (hearsay) is admissible in cross-examination, except under the provisions of s 146, post;" Field, Ev., 381; Ib., 6th Ed. 224.

(4) Wills, Ev., 2nd Ed., 146, 147; see Notes to s. 137, post.

(5) Field, Ev, 6th Ed., 224, 225; Norton, Ev, 200; according to English Law, scientific treatises are no evidence, whether the author be producible or not; Collier v. Simpson, 5 C. & P., 74

(6) S. 104, post.

(7) Hatim v. R., 12 C. L. R., 86, 87, 88 (1882), followed in Hurry Churn v. R., 10 C., 140, 142 (1883).

(8) John Howe v. Charlotte Howe, 38 M, 466 (1915).

In regard to foreign law, section 38, ante, makes certain books admissible which would not be probably regarded as treatises under this section. And it would be difficult to say that under the words of section 57 any books on science or art could not be consulted by the Judge without any restriction as to whether any person could be called or not.(1) In respect of the second proviso it has already been observed(2) that the production of a chattel is not primary evidence of it. A witness may, therefore, without infringing the rule relating to direct evidence, give evidence with reference to the existence or condition of any material thing, other than a document, without that material thing being produced in Court. This proviso, however, permits the Court, if it thinks fit, to require the production of such material thing for its inspection. Under section 165 also the Judge may, in order to discover or to obtain proper proof of relevant facts, direct the production of any document or thing.

(1) Markby, Ev., 53.

(2) v. ante, p. 485.

CHAPTER V.

OF DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE.

DOCUMENTARY evidence means all documents produced for the inspection of the Court(1), and the definition given of a 'document' is very wide, covering many things which would not be considered documents in the popular acceptation of the word (2) Aside from real evidence of which the Court or jury are the original percipient witnesses(3), and evidence of matters of which judicial cognisance is taken(4), all evidence comes to the tribunal either (a) as the statement of a witness, or (b) as the statement of a document (5) As the last Chapter dealt with the mode of proof in the case of the statements of witnesses, so the present deals with the mode of proof of statements which are contained in documents. But documents, being inanimate things, necessarily come to the cognisance of tribunals through the medium of human testimony; for which reason they have been denominated dead proof (probatio mortua) in contradistinction to witnesses who are said to be living proofs (probatio viva) (6) The superiority in permanence and in many respects in trustworthiness, of written over verbal proofs has been noticed from the earliest times. Vox audita perit, litera scripta manet. The false relations of what never took place; and, even in the case of real transactions, the decayed memories, the imperfect recollections, and wilful misrepresentations of witnesses; added to the certainty of the extinction, sooner or later, of the primary source of evidence by their death—all show the wisdom of providing some better or at least more lasting, mode of proof for matters which are susceptible of it, and are in themselves of sufficient consequence to over-balance the trouble and expense of its attainment.(7) There is, moreover, often a great difficulty in getting at the truth by means of parol testimony.(8) But in the case of documents their genuineness may be shown by many facts and circumstances very different from mere oral evidence, and, moreover, the witnesses who are to prove a written document cannot resort to that latitude of statement which affords [illegible] There are more means [illegible] disproving [illegible] stigated by reference to the handwriting, to the seal, to the stamps(9), the description of

---

(1) S 3, ante, Best, Ev, § 123.

(2) v. ib., and Best Ev., p 13, where it is suggested that the definition of 'document' might with advantage be narrowed in certain instances to the single case of writing as a means of conveying thought See also ib, § 215, et seq, as to the difference between actual and symbolical representations, e g, between writings and models or drawings

(3) v ante, pp 104—110.

(4) v ante, s 57, and pp 113—114.

(5) Best, Ev, p 109

(6) Ib, § 216

(7) Best, Ev, § 60, "The force of written proofs consists in this, that men have agreed together to preserve by writing the recollection of things past, and of which they were desirous to establish the remembrance, either as rules for their guidance or to have therein a lasting proof of the truth of what they write Domat cited, ib, § 217; and see observations of Best, C. J., in Strother v. Barr, 5 Bing. 151

(8) Per Best, C. J., in Strother v Barr, supra, especially may this be said to be the case in this country; see as to this the remarks of the Judicial Committee in the cases cited in introduction to Chapter IV

(9) Bunwaree Lal v. Maharaja Hitnarain, 7 Moo. I. A, 156 (1858); In Field, Ev, p 65, note, the author says "Some years ago, the author discovered a forgery, in a case which came before him in appeal, by examining the stamp A conveyance purporting to have been executed in 1855 was engrossed on a stamp paper bearing the Royal Arms of England with V R.

the paper, the alleged habits of him who is said to have written it(1), and by a comparison of the circumstance indicated by the document with those which are proved to have actually existed at the date of its execution. Documentary evidence is especially valuable where there is a conflict of oral testimony, as a guide to show on which side the truth lies (2) Obviously the value of such evidence might be destroyed if the rule which required that the best evidence shall be given did not necessitate the production of the document itself, or an accounting for its absence to the satisfaction of the Judge (3) "One single principle runs through all the propositions relating to documentary evidence. It is that the very object for which writing is used is to perpetuate the memory of what is written down and so to furnish permanent proof of it In order that full effect may be given to this, two things are necessary, namely, that the document itself should, whenever it is possible, be put before the Judge for his inspection(4), and that if it purports to be a final settlement of a previous negotiation, as in the case of a written contract, it shall be treated as final, and shall not be varied by word of mouth (5) If the first of these rules were not observed the benefit of writing would be lost There is no use in writing a thing down unless the writing is read. If the second rule were not observed people would never know when a question was settled, as they would be able to play fast and loose with their writings"(6) The Act therefore requires that documents must be proved by primary evidence (that is, the document itself produced for the inspection of the Court)(7) except in certain cases specifically mentioned by the Act.(8) It is primarily for the trial Court to decide whether a case has been made out for the reception of secondary evidence The appellate Court, however, is justified in holding that secondary evidence of a lost deed is admissible when the Lower Court has rejected it (9) Further, the general and a crown above This paper was not manufactured till 1859, when Her Majesty assumed the Government of India The paper in use previously bore the arms of the East India Company with the letters I ——The forger had partly erased the letters V R and the Crown but the minute device on the arms and the difference of the motto wholly escaped him The author has also more than once detected forgeries by the presence or absence of the distinguishing mark impressed on stamps issued before the mutiny, see Act XIX of 1858 It would be very easy to mark all stamp paper with the date of issue by means of an instrument, such as is used to mark railway tickets, and the author is convinced that this simple contrivance would do much to stop forgery by facilitating detection In a large number of forgeries it is necessary to antedate, and the difficulty of procuring a stamp with a suitable date could be increased if stamp vendors were made to account more strictly for their sales than is at present the practice The check of having the purchaser's name endorsed on the stamp is useless, as fictitious names are used The author, has detected more than one stamp vendor having stamp-paper ready endorsed with such fictitious names" Too great reliance should not be placed upon an apparently ancient document by reason of the genuineness of the stamp for, as above stated, it is well known that blank stamped papers, may be obtained which extend for very many years past

---

E C

(1) Bunwaree Lal v Maharajah Hetnarain, supra, 156, 157

(2) v ante, Introd to ch iv

(3) See s 64, post This rule as applied to documents is as old as any part of the Common Law of England, Taylor, Ev, § 396, and cases there cited, Best, Ev, p 15 "The best evidence of which the subject is capable ought to be produced, or its absence reasonably accounted for, or explained, before secondary or inferior evidence is received," Ramalakshmi Ammal v Sivanatha Perumal 14 Moo I A, 388 (1872), "if the best evidence be kept back, it raises a suspicion that, if produced, it would falsify the secondary evidence on which the party has rested his case," Strother v Barr, 5 Bing, 151

(4) See s 64, post

(5) See ss 91, 92, post

(6) Steph Introd, 171, 172

(7) S 62, post

(8) Ss 64—66, post

(9) Rameswar Lal Bhagat v Raj Kumar Girwar, 5 Pat L W, 316, 45 I C, 888, as where all reasonable steps have been taken to produce the document, Atal Behary Keora v Lal Mohan Singha Roy, 49 I C, 507, and search is fruitless; Jiban Kali Mukherji v Manimala Dassi, 49 I C., 1006

rule is that even oral admissions as to the contents of a document are not relevant unless secondary evidence is admissible.(1) In dealing, therefore, with documentary evidence, the substantial principles, on which the authenticity and value of evidence rest, should be observed(2); thus secondary evidence should not be accepted without a sufficient reason being given for the non-production of the original(3); nor should documents be considered as proved because they have not been denied by the opposite side(4); and the use to which it can legitimately be put should be kept in view,—thus a document may be relevant to affect a person with knowledge of its contents, whether true or false, without being relevant to prove the truth of its contents.(5) And notwithstanding the general value of documentary evidence, regard must be had to the habits and customs of the people of this country, and their well-known propensity to forge any instrument which they might deem necessary for their interest and the extreme facility with which false evidence can be procured from witnesses. Under such circumstances the probability or improbability(6) of the transaction forms a most important consideration in ascertaining the truth of any transaction relied upon.(7) The use of fabricated written evidence by a party, however clearly established, does not relieve the Court from the duty of examining the whole of the evidence adduced on both sides, and of deciding according to the truth of the matters in issue.(8) The presumption against the party using such evidence must not be pressed too far, especially in this country, where it happens, not uncommonly, that falsehood and fabrication are employed to support a just cause.(9) In addition to guarding against fraud, care must be taken that the documentary evidence is in itself admissible, lest documents which are not strictly evidence at all should be used to prop up oral evidence too weak to be relied on (10)

Documents are of two kinds, public and private. Under the former come Acts of the Legislature, judgments and acts of Courts, Proclamations, public books, and the like. They are also divided into 'judicial'; and 'not judicial'; and also into "writings of record" and "writings not of record"(11)

---

(1) See notes to s 63 but this rule will not apply to admissions made under s. 58, ante, see Sheikh Ibrahim v Parvata, 8 Bom H C R, 163 [A party's admission as to the contents of a document not made in the pleadings, but in a deposition, is secondary evidence, and cannot supply the place of the document itself]

(2) Ramalakshmi Ammal v Sivanatha Perumal, 14 Moo I. A, 588 (1872); see the judicial criticisms on the laxity of documentary evidence prior to the passing of this Act, in Bunwaree Lall v. Maharajah Hetnarain, 7 Moo. I. A, 148, 168 (1858); s. c., 4 W. R, P. C, 128; Unide Rajaha v. Pemmasamy Venkatadry, 7 Moo I A., 137 (1858); see p 128, ante. The provisions of the Act must now, however, be strictly observed: Ram Prasad v. Raghunandan Prasad, 7 A, 743 (1885).

(3) Ramalakshmi Ammal v. Sivanatha, 14 Moo. I. A, 588 (1872); Ram Gopal v. Gordon Stuart, 14 Moo. I. A., 461 (1872); s. 64, post; Syed Abbas v. Yadeem Ramy, 3 Moo I. A., 156 (1843).

(4) Kirteebash Maytee v. Ramdhan Khoira, B L. R., F. B., 658 (1867); Rearoonissa v Bookoo Chowdhrain, 12 W. R., 267, 268 (1869) [Every document must first be started by some proof or other before the person who disputes that document can be considered in any way bound by it]

(5) Barindra Kumar Ghose v. R (1909), 37, C., 91.

(6) v ante, p 113, note (7), R v Hedger, 134, Field, Ev., 6th Ed, 42; Sri Raghunadha v. Sri Brozo, 3 I. A, 175, 176 (1875); Bunwaree Lal v. Maharajah Hetnarain, 7 Moo I A., 155, 156, 167, 168 (1858); Mudho Soodun v. Suroop Chunder, 4 Moo I. A., 441 (1849); Chotey Narain v. Mussamut Ratan, 22 I. A., 23, 24 (1894); Hurichurn Bose v. Monindra Nath, 19 I. A., 4 (1893); Wise v. Sunduloonissa Chowdhranee, 11 Moo. I A., 187, 188 (1867); Mussamut Edun v. Mussamut Bechun, 11 W. R, 345 (1869)

(7) Bunwaree Lal v Maharajah Hetnarain, 7 Moo. I. A., 155 (1858).

(8) Gorsboola Kazee v. Gooroodas Roy, 2 W. R., Act X, 99 (1865); Seriaji Vijara v. Chinna Nayana, 10 Moo. I. A., 151 (1864); v ante, p. 487.

(9) See cases cited at p 487.

(10) Eckowrie Singh v. Heeralal Seal, 11 W. R, P. C, 2 (1868); ante, p 128, note (2)

(11) Best, Ev., § 218, see s. 74, post

Public documents other than those mentioned in the section are private.(1) The Civil and Criminal Procedure Codes regulate the production of documents(2), and the former, the discovery, admission and inspection of documents in civil cases (3) In criminal cases it is the duty of the Judge to decide upon the meaning and construction of all documents given in evidence at the trial.(4)

There are three distinct questions which are dealt with in the Act in regard to documentary evidence—(a) firstly, there is the question how the contents of a document are to be proved; (b) secondly, there is the question how the document is to be proved to be genuine; (c) thirdly, there is the question how far and in what cases oral evidence is excluded by documentary evidence.

(a) The first question is dealt with in ss 61—66 and is also affected by ss. 59 and 22. Taking s. 59 with ss 61 and 64, the result may be stated as follows:—The contents of a document must in general be proved by a special kind of evidence called primary evidence; but there are exceptional cases in which such contents may be proved otherwise Evidence used to prove the contents of a document which is not primary is called secondary Primary evidence is said (s. 62) to be the document itself produced for the inspection of the Court. Later on in the section this is called the original document. The contents of public documents being provable in a particular manner, this matter is dealt with separately in ss. 74—78. The question how far witnesses may be cross-examined as to written statements made by them without producing the writings is dealt with by s 145, post (b) Besides the question which arises as to the contents of a document, there is always the question, when it is used as evidence—is it what it purports to be? In other words, is it genuine? The signature or writing, sealing, or mark and attestation where the latter is a necessary formality of execution, must be proved This matter is dealt with in ss. 67—73. Lastly, the Chapter deals ss. 79—90,—with the presumptions which the Courts are enabled or directed to make in respect of certain documents or specified classes of documents tendered in evidence before them. (c) The exclusion of oral by documentary evidence is the subject-matter of the next Chapter to the Introduction, to which the reader is referred (5)

As to the stamping and registration of documents, see Appendix.

61. The contents of documents may be proved either by primary or by secondary evidence. Proof of contents of documents.

62 Primary evidence means the document itself produced for the inspection of the Court. Primary evidence.

Explanation 1.—Where a document is executed in several parts, each part is primary evidence of the document.

Where a document is executed in counterpart, each counterpart being executed by one or some of the parties only, each

(1) S 75, post

(2) Woodroffe & Ali's Civ Pr Code, 2nd Ed, O VIII, rr 14—18, pp 723—726, O XI, rr 14—23, pp 793—800, O XIII, pp. 805—812 The Court may send for papers from its own records or from other Courts, ib, O XIII, r 10, p 810, the provisions as to documents are applicable to all other material objects, ib, O. XIII, r 11, p 812. See Field Ev, 6th Ed, 288 As to the production of document and other movable property in criminal cases, see Cr Pr Code, Chap VII As to applications in respect of endorsements made on exhibits, see Ratan Koer v Chotey Narain, 21 C, 476 (1894)

(3) Woodroffe & Amir Ali's Civ Pr. Code, Orders XI, XII, XIII, 2nd Ed, pp 777—812

(4) Cr Pr Code, s 298

(5) Markby, Ev, 56, 57, 60

counterpart is primary evidence as against the parties executing it.

Explanation 2.—Where a number of documents are all made by one uniform process, as in the case of printing, lithography or photography, each is primary evidence of the contents of the rest; but where they are all copies of a common original, they are not primary evidence of the contents of the original.

Illustration.

A person is shown to have been in possession of a number of placards, all printed at one time from one original. Any one of the placards is primary evidence of the contents of any other, but no one of them is primary evidence of the contents of the original

Secondary evidence.

63. Secondary evidence means and includes—

(1) Certified copies given under the provisions hereinafter contained;

(2) Copies made from the original by mechanical processes which in themselves insure the accuracy of the copy, and copies compared with such copies;

(3) Copies made from or compared with the original;

(4) Counterparts of documents as against the parties who did not execute them;

(5) Oral accounts of the contents of a document given by some person who has himself seen it.

Illustrations.

(a) A photograph of an original is secondary evidence of its contents, though the two have not been compared, if it is proved that the thing photographed was the original.

(b) A copy compared with a copy of a letter made by a copying machine is secondary evidence of the contents of the letter, if it is shown that the copy made by the copying machine was made from the original.

(c) A copy transcribed from a copy, but afterwards compared with the original, is secondary evidence · but the copy not so compared is not secondary evidence of the original, although the copy from which it was transcribed was compared with the original

(d) Neither an oral account of a copy compared with the original, nor an oral account of a photograph or machine-copy of the original, is secondary evidence of the original.

s. 3 ("Document.") s. 3 ("Proved.")
s. 3 ("Evidence.") s. 3 ("Court.")
s. 76-78 ("Certified copies.")

Steph. Dig., Arts. 63, 64, 70; Taylor, Ev., §§15-45, 394, 420, 550-553, cited and cf. Index sub voc. ('Primary Evidence' and 'Secondary Evidence'); Norton, Ev., 241

COMMENTARY.

Document.

Reference should be made to the definition given in the third section. Exchequer tallies and wooden scores used by milkmen and bakers have been included in the term (1) So also an inscription on a ring(2); or coffin plate(3);

(1) Best, Ev, § 215

(2) R. v. Farr, 4 F. & F., 366

(3) R. v. Edge, Wills, Circ. Ev, 6th Ed, 309, 340, per Maule, J. (the plate being removable).

and perhaps a direction on a parcel (1) On the other hand, it has been held in England that inscriptions on flags and placards exhibited to public view and of which the effect depends upon such exhibition, bear the character rather of speeches than of writings and are not subject to the rules relating to documents.(2)

But in the undermentioned case it has been held there that a sealed packet is a document and therefore liable to production upon a subpœna duces tecum, even when it had been confided to a banker upon the terms that he should not part with it without the depositor's consent (3)

Meaning of "primary" and "secondary" evidence (s 61).

The contents of documents may be proved either by primary or secondary evidence. "Primary" and "secondary" evidence means this · primary evidence is evidence which the law requires to be given first, secondary evidence is evidence which may be given in the absence of the better evidence which the law requires to be given first when a proper explanation is given of the absence of that better evidence (4) Primary evidence of a document is defined by the Act to mean the document itself produced for the inspection of the Court (5) Secondary evidence is defined by section 63. Section 61 lays down that "the contents of documents may be proved either by primary or secondary evidence" within the meaning given to those terms in the Act; and this rule means that there is no other method allowed by law for proving the contents of documents Whatever the law may have been upon the subject before the passing of this Act, the rules contained in this enactment must now be strictly observed (6)

Primary evidence (s 62)

Primary evidence means the document itself produced for the inspection of the Court. As the law requires that the particulars of a claim should be embodied in the decree, recitals of the contents of the plaint made in a decree are not secondary evidence of the contents of the plaint but are admissible as primary evidence of the statement of facts made to the Judge as the basis of the plaintiff's claim.(7) Written receipts for payments are important, but by no means necessary as proof; nor are they of the nature of primary evidence the loss of which must be shown in order to let in secondary.(8)

If accounts be merely memoranda and rough books from which regular accounts are prepared, the former, it has been said, can hardly be treated as the original account (9) Though different classes of books of account may, and in fact in the larger number of instances must, deal with the same matter, it does not follow that one only of such classes constitutes the original document. So where entries in a ledger were tendered and it was objected that the ledger was secondary evidence, being merely a copy of the cash-book, the Court admitted the ledger entries.(10)

The first portion of the first Explanation of section 62 refers to what are known as duplicate, triplicate or the like, originals. The expressions "executed in parts" and "in counter-part" refer to the mode in which documents

---

(1) R v Fenton, cited 3 B & C, 760, per Parke, B; R R Co v Maples, 63 Ala, 601 (Amer); contra Burrell v North 2 C & K, 680, Com v Morrel, 99 Mass, 542 (Amer.)

(2) R v Hunt, 3 B & Ald, 566, Phipson, Ev, 3rd Ed, 458, ib, 5th Ed, 507

(3) R v Daye (Div Court), 1908, 2 K. B, 333.

(4) Per Lord Esher, M R in Lucas v. Williams & Sons, L R, 2 Q B (1892), 113, 116, and see Taylor, Ev, § 394

(5) S 62

(6) Ram Prasad v Raghunandan Prasad 7 A., 738, 743 (1885).

(7) Mahommed Ismail v Bhuggobutti Barmanya. Appeal from original decree, Cal H C, No 303 of 1897 (25th June 1900), as to the statement of a witness deposing that another person gave evidence being primary evidence, see Haranund Roy v Ram Gopal, cited in notes to s. 65, post

(8) Ramesswar Koer v Bharat Pershad, 4 C W N, 18 (1899).

(9) Raja Peary v Narendra Nath, 9 C W N, 421, 431 (1905), see s 34, ante

(10) Megraj v Seunarain, 5 C W N., cclxxviii (1901).

are sometimes executed. It is convenient sometimes that each party to a transaction should have a complete document in his own possession. To effect this the document is written out as many times over as there are parties and each document is executed—that is, signed or sealed as the case may be—by all the parties. No one of these is more the original than the other, and any one of them may be produced as primary evidence of the contents of the document. When an instrument is executed by all the parties in duplicate or triplicate, and each party keeps one, each instrument is treated as an original, and each is primary evidence of all the other. When each of the instruments is signed by one party only, and each delivers to the other, the documents are termed 'counterparts,' and each is primary evidence against the party executing it, and those in privity with the executing party, and secondary evidence(1) as against the other parties (2) Execution in counterpart is a method of execution adopted when there are two parties to the transaction. Thus if the transaction is a contract between A and B the document is copied out twice, and A alone signs one document, whilst B alone signs the other. A then hands to B the document signed by himself and B hands to A the document signed by himself. Then as against A the document signed by A is primary evidence; whilst as against B the document signed by B is primary evidence (3)

This section is exhaustive of the kinds of secondary evidence admissible under the Act. Where, therefore, the terms of a document were sought to be proved by a judgment containing a translation thereof in a suit which was [illegible]

Secondary evidence.

Second Explanation—" A printed paper does not differ from a written one, in respect of both being copies; they can alike, therefore, only be received as secondary evidence of the original under such circumstances as render secondary evidence admissible; for instance, if the original is shown to be lost or destroyed, or to be in the possession of the opposite party, notice having been given to produce it There is no more guarantee for a printed copy being a true copy than a written one; indeed being a copy at all. But there is a far better guarantee for a number of printed papers struck off from the same machine at the same time being correct fac-similes of each other than of a number of written papers, for here the draftsman or draftsmen may introduce differences impossible with the machine. In this case, each machine-made copy is accepted as primary evidence of all the others, inter se, and not of the original from which they were copied; for instance, if it is desired to prove the publication of a libel in a newspaper, any copy of the issue in which the libel appeared would be primary evidence of publication in all the other copies of that issue. But if it were necessary to prove the original libel from which the article was set up, the printed paper would not be primary, but only secondary, evidence of the manuscript and admissible only under the conditions which render the reception of secondary evidence admissible."(5)

First Clause.—Section 76 enables certified copies of public documents to be given; and such documents may be proved by the production of a certified copy.(6) Certain other official documents especially designated may be also proved by certified copies.(7) Section 79 deals with the presumption as to the

(1) S. 63, cl. (4)

(2) Taylor, Ev, § 426; Norton, Ev., 241, 242; s 62

(3) Markby, Ev, 57; Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed, 509

(4) Jagannatha Naidu v. Secretary of State 43 M L J, 37 (1922).

(5) Norton, Ev, 242, and see R. v. Watson, 32 How. St. Tr., 82

(6) S. 77, post.

(7) S. 78, post; as to certified copies of decrees or orders made by the Queen in Council, see Woodroffe & Amir Ali's Civ. Pr. Code, O. XXXXV, r. 15, 2nd Ed. p 1343 genuineness of certain certified copies, and section 86 as to certified copies of foreign judicial records And the Civil Procedure Code(1) now gives the Court power to order production of verified copies of entries in business books instead of the originals when inspection of the latter has been demanded.

Second Clause.—The copies must be made from the original by such mechanical processes as in themselves insure the accuracy of the copy; such for example as the processes mentioned in the second Explanation, section 62.(2) Illustration (a) must be read with the first portion of this clause, and means that provided it can be shown that the original which is sought to be proved was really photographed, such photograph will be receivable as secondary evidence. Illustration (b) must be read with the second portion of this clause and means that a copy of such copy (compared) is receivable as secondary evidence of the original and cannot be rejected as being a copy of a copy (3) The reason of this rule is that the acc[illegible]
the mechanical process, it is not necess[illegible] it will be taken to correctly reproduce , [illegible] or at least not an effective one, in the c[illegible] and they must therefore be proved to [illegible] will be receivable as secondary evidence of the original An oral account of a photograph or a machine-copy of the original is not secondary evidence of the original [Illustration (d)]

Third Clause, see Illustration (c) In the first case here put, the party who [illegible] ...uced, then a [illegible] ...s sometimes, [illegible] the copy or [illegible] ...son made by one and the same person (4) Reading together second and third Clauses and Illustrations (b) and (c), it will appear that a copy of a copy, i e, a copy transcribed and compared with a copy is inadmissible(5) , unless the copy with which it was compared was a copy made by some mechanical process which in itself insures the accuracy of such copy.(6) But copies of copies kept in a registration office when signed and sealed by the registering officer are admissible for the purpose of proving the contents of the originals (7) The correctness of certified copies will be presumed(8), but that of other copies will have to be [illegible] read as the contents of the original, and that such copy is correct It is not necessary for the persons examining to exchange papers and read them alternately both ways. If the documents be in an ancient or foreign character, the witness who has compared the copy with it must have been able to read and

(1) O XI, r 19, 2nd Ed p 797

(2) Field, Ev, 382, ib, 6th Ed, 227, cf s 35, Act II of 1855 "An impression of a document made by a copying machine shall be taken without further proof to be a correct copy"

(3) Norton, Ev, 243

(4) Ib See Ralli v Gau Kim, 9 C, 943, 944 (1883).

(5) Ram Prasad v Raghunandan Prasad, 7 A, 738, 743 (1885); Secretary of State v Manjeshuar Krishnayyar, 28 M, 257, see Taylor, Ev, § 553, the following cases are no longer law so far as they relate to copies Unide Rajaha v Pemmasamy Venkatadry, 7 Moo I A, 128 (1858) [dictum followed in Ajoodhya Prasad v Umrao Singh, 6 B L R, 509 (1870), Jaybunnissa Bibi v Kuar Sham 7 B L R, 627 (1871), Makbul Ali v Srimati Masnad, 3 B L R, 54 (1869); Ram Gopal v Gordon Stuart, 14 Moo I A, 453 (1872), Norton, Ev, 243, Field, Ev, 383, ib, 6th Ed, 227 Even before the Act a copy of a copy was rejected, Raja Neelanund v Nusseeb Singh, 6 W R 80 (1866)

(6) S 63, cl (2), v ante but a copy transcribed from a copy and afterwards compared with the original is secondary evidence, Illust (c)

(7) Act XVI of 1908, s. 57

(8) S 79, post

understand the original.(1) But an admission dispenses with proof and omission to object implies that the document is a true copy. Where a document has been admitted in evidence in the trial Court without objection its admissibility cannot be challenged in the Appellate Court. Omission to object to its admission implies that it is a true copy and therefore it is not open to the Appellate Court to consider whether the copy was properly compared with the original or not.(2) In the undermentioned case(3) a copy of a deed which was filed in another suit and was still on the records of the Court was let in as secondary evidence. That deed was endorsed "copy in accordance with the original," and was signed by the Judge presiding in the Court The Privy Council accepted and concurred in the opinion of the Judicial Commissioner upon the value of that copy. His words were :—"There can be no doubt that the Judge, in the course of the suit, in 1864, did accept and file, with the proceedings a copy of a deed of gift by K B, and the only question is whether that copy had been compared with the original, when the copy is enfaced, in accordance with practice, 'copy according to the original,' and the Judge's order to file is also found on it. I cannot doubt that the copy was duly compared. Except the Judge, there was no person who was authorised to compare and accept a copy, and his signature to the order must, it seems to me, guarantee the genuineness of the copy."(4)

It is scarcely necessary to observe that proof of a copy being a correct copy is no proof of the execution and genuineness, etc., of the original (5) And secondary evidence cannot be given by means of a copy until it be shown that such copy is accurate (6) The correctness of certified copies is directed to be presumed by this Act.(7) And other Acts, such as the Registration Act(8), declare that copies given thereunder shall be admissible for the purpose of proving the contents of the original documents; that they shall be taken to be true copies without other proof than the Registrar's certificate of their correctness.(9)

Fourth Clause.—A counterpart is primary evidence only as against the parties executing it.(10) The most usual case of counterparts is that of pattah and kabuliat (11)

Fifth Clause.—The person must have seen the original. It will not be sufficient that he heard it being read Moreover, it must have been the original It will not be sufficient for the person to have seen a copy. Thus, a written statement of the contents of a copy of a document, the original of which the person making the statement has not seen, cannot be accepted as an equivalent of that which this clause renders admissible, namely, an oral account of the contents of a document given by some person who has himself seen it (12) It is, moreover, plain that even if parol evidence be admissible as secondary

(1) Taylor, Ev, § 15—45; Field, Ev, 383; ib, 6th Ed, 227.

(2) Ram Lochan Misra v. Pandit Harinath Misra, 1 Pat., 606 (1922), approving Chimnaji Govind Godbole v. Dhinkar Dhondev Godbole, 11 B, 320; Lakshman Govind v. Amrit Gopal, 24 B, 591; Kishori Lal Goswami v. Rakhal Das Bannerjee, 31 C., 155.

(3) Luchman Singh v. Puna, 16 C, 753 (1889), 16 I. A., 125.

(4) Ib, at p 756

(5) See Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 227; Ramjadoo Gangooly v. Luckhee Narain, 5 R. C., and Cr Reporter, Act X, Rule 23 (1867); Shookram Sookul v. Ram Lal, 9 W R, 218, 250 (1868); Mussumat Ameeroonnissa v. Mussumat Abedoonnissa 23 W. R., 208 (1875); Appathura Pattar v Gopala Panikkar, 25 M, 674, 676 (1901).

(6) Taylor, Ev., § 553; Shookram Sookul v. Ram Lal, 9 W. R, 248, 250 (1868); Krishna Kishori v. Kishori Lall, 14 C., 487, 488 (1887).

(7) S 79, post.

(8) Act XVI of 1908, s 57.

(9) Hurish Chunder v. Prosunno Coomar, 22 W. R., 303 (1874).

(10) S 62, Explanation (1), ante

(11) s. ante.

(12) Kanayalal v. Pyarabai, 7 B., 139 (1892); see Illust. (d).

evidence of a document, it may, owing to its character or the circumstances of the case, be such that the Court cannot rely upon it for the purpose of proving those contents (1) Secondary evidence in actions for libel should give the actual words used and complained of (2)

No degrees in secondary evidence.

The general rule is that there are no degrees in secondary evidence and that a party is at liberty to adduce any description of secondary evidence he may choose.(3) So a party may give oral evidence of the contents of a document, even though it be in his power to produce a written copy. For, if one species of secondary evidence were to exclude another, a party tendering oral evidence of a document would have to account for all the secondary evidence that has existed He may know of nothing but the original, and the other side at the trial might defeat him by showing a copy the existence of which he had no means of ascertaining Fifty copies might be in existence unknown to him and he would be bound to account for them all. Further, there is the inconvenience of requiring evidence to be s[illegible]
But if more satisfactory proof is wi[illegible] evidence If, for instance, the party [illegible] better secondary evidence in his pow[illegible] fact from which the Court may presume that the evidence kept back would be adverse to the party withholding it (4) There are, however, exceptions to the general rule For the Act declares that when the existence, condition, or contents of the original have been admitted in writing, the written admission is admissible(5), and where the original is a public document(6), or a document of which a certified copy is permitted by this Act or by any other law in force in India to be given in evidence(7), a certified copy of the document, but no other kind of secondary evidence, is admissible.(8)

Proof of documen by prima evidence.

64. Documents must be proved by primary evidence except in the cases hereinafter mentioned.

Principle —This rule is one of the most forcible illustrations of the maxim that the best evidence that the case admits of must always be produced.(9) It is said to be based on the "best evidence" principle; but the rule is, however, probably older than its reasons, being a survival of the doctrine of 'profert' which required the actual production of the document pleaded.(10) s 3 ("Document") s 62 (Meaning of "primary evidence") s 3 ("Proved.") s 65 ("Excepted cases.")

Steph. Dig, Art 65; Taylor, Ev., §§ 396, 409; Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 38, 507; Thayer's Cases on Evidence, 726

COMMENTARY.

What is writing shall only be prove by the writing itself.

Lord Tenterden said: "I have always acted most strictly on the rule that what is in writing shall only be proved by the writing itself. My experience has taught me the extreme danger of relying on the recollection of

(1) Krishna Kishori v. Kishori Lall, 14 C, 487, 488 (1887).

(2) Rainy v Bravo, L. R, 4 P. C, 287.

(3) See Ratpal Singh v. Udai Bhan, 53 I C, 607 in which a statement in a previous suit was held to be secondary Evidence

(4) Doe v. Ross, 7 M. & W, 402; Brown v. Woodman, 6 C. & P., 206; Hall v. Hall, 3 M. & G, 242, Taylor, Ev, §§ 550—553; Best, Ev, § 483; Wills, Ev, 2nd Ed, 396 The rule applies whether the original evidence be itself oral or documentary; Taylor, Ev., § 550; see e g, Notes to s. 47, ante.

(5) S 65, post, see cl (b).

(6) Within the meaning of s 74, post; see s 65, cl (e).

(7) S 65, cl. (f)

(8) S. 65, post; see Notes to that section.

(9) Taylor, Ev., § 396; and v. post and Introduction, ante.

(10) Thayer's cases on Evidence, 726. See also 6 Law Quart Rev, 75: "The superiority of written evidence." Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 38, 507.

witnesses, however honest, as to the contents of written instruments; they may be so easily mistaken, that I think the purposes of justice require the strict enforcement of the rule."(1) An additional but important reason for the application of the rule is that the Court may acquire a knowledge of the whole contents of the instrument, which may have a very different effect from the statement of a part.(2) This section deals with the class of cases falling within the rule that a written document can only be proved by the instrument itself(3), and embraces every writing. Thus newspapers and account-books are the best evidence of their own contents, and, therefore, a witness cannot be asked whether certain resolutions were published in the newspapers; neither can he be questioned as to the contents of his account-books; nor can a plaintiff be asked in cross-examination whether his name is written in a certain book described by the questioner, unless a satisfactory reason be first given for the non-production of the book itself.(4) And it is very doubtful whether the contents of hand-bills written or dictated at a meeting of conspirators can be proved by oral testimony.(5) The provisions of this section must be distinguished from those of section 91. The latter deals with matters which the parties have put in writing or which the law requires to be in writing. In such cases, except where secondary evidence may be given, the document is the exclusive record of that which it embodies. The parties are not at liberty to resort to other evidence. All that the present section says is that if it is desired to prove the contents of a document, the document itself must, save in certain exceptional cases, be produced. But if a writing does not fall within either of the classes already described, no reason exists why it should exclude oral evidence. For instance, if a written communication be accompanied by a verbal one to the same effect, the latter may be received as independent evidence, though not to prove the contents of the writing nor as a substitute for it: the payment of money may be proved by oral testimony, though a receipt be taken; a verbal demand of goods may be shown, though a demand in writing was made at the same time; the admission of a debt is provable by oral testimony, though a written promise to pay was simultaneously given; and the like (6) With regard to objections as to the improper reception of secondary evidence, see notes to s. 5 ante.

Admissions. Oral admissions as to the contents of a document are not relevant, unless and until the party proposing to prove them shows that he is entitled to give secondary evidence of the contents of such documents, or unless the genuine- [illegible] ...ary evidence may be [illegible] have been proved. [illegible] is proved or by his [illegible] section does not of course apply to documents which are admitted and the contents of which are not in dispute. For a fact which is admitted need not be proved at all (9) So where a party admits by his pleading the terms of an agreement and its execution, the other party is not called upon to prove the execution of the document or put it in evidence (10) It is further common practice to allow

(1) Vincent v. Code, 3 C. & P., 481; and see observations of Best, C. J., in Strother v. Barr, ante.

(2) Taylor, Ev., § 396

(3) Taylor, Ev., § 409.

(4) Taylor, Ev., § 409. See Bonnerji v Sitanath Das, 24 Bom L. R., 565 (P. C).

(5) R v Thistlewood (1820), 33 How. St. Tr., 691. Taylor, § 409.

(6) Taylor, Ev., § 415; see s 59, ante. See the passage in Best, Ev., p 282, 2nd Ed., cited and approved in Balbhadar Prasad v. Maharajah of Betia, 9 A., 355 (1887).

(7) See notes to s 22, ante

(8) S 65, cl (b), post

(9) S. 58, ante.

(10) Burjorji Cursetji v Muncherji Kuverji, 5 B., 143 (1880): but a party's admission as to the contents of a document, not made in the pleadings but in a deposition, is secondary evidence only Slatta Ibrahim v. Parrata, 8 Bom H. C. R., A. C. J., 163 (1871).

copies of documents to be tendered in evidence by the consent of all parties concerned.

Cases in which secondary evidence relating to documents may be given

65. Secondary evidence may be given of the existence, condition or contents of a document in the following cases:—

(a) When the original is shown or appears to be in the possession or power—of the person against whom the document is sought to be proved, or of any person out of reach of, or not subject to, the process of the Court, or of any person legally bound to produce it, and when, after the notice mentioned in section 66,(1) such person does not produce it;

(b) When the existence, condition or contents of the original have been proved to be admitted in writing by the person against whom it is proved or by his representative in interest;

(c) When the original has been destroyed or lost, or when the party offering evidence of its contents cannot, for any other reason not arising from his own default or neglect, produce it in reasonable time;

(d) When the original is of such a nature as not to be easily movable;

(e) When the original is a public document within the meaning of section 74;

(f) When the original is a document of which a certified copy is permitted by this Act, or by any other law in force in British India, to be given in evidence;

(g) When the originals consist of numerous accounts or other documents which cannot conveniently be examined in Court, and the fact to be proved is the general result of the whole collection.

In cases (a), (c) and (d), any secondary evidence of the contents of the document is admissible.

In case (b), the written admission is admissible.

In case (e) or (f), a certified copy of the document, but no other kind of secondary evidence, is admissible.

In case (g), evidence may be given as to the general result of the documents by any person who has examined them, and who is skilled in the examination of such documents.

---

(1) Kameshuar Pershad v. Amanutulla, 26 C. 53 (1898).

Principle.—The general rule having been stated in the preceding section the present one states the exceptional cases in which secondary evidence is admissible Some of these exceptions rest upon considerations which are obvious. This is the case with exceptions (c) and (d). The exceptions (e) and (f) are based on considerations of convenience. In the case of exception (g) it is not, properly speaking, secondary evidence which is admitted in substitution for the originals, but the general result as stated by a person who has examined them (1) The written admission in cl. (b) affords a reliable guarantee of truth With regard to cl (a), as in the case of (c) and (d), the production of primary evidence is out of the party's power; see Commentary, post.

s 63 (Meaning of "secondary evidence")
s 3 ("Document.")
s 3 ("Court.")
s 66 ("Rules as to notice to produce.")
s. 22 ("Oral admissions as to contents of documents")
s 74 ("Public documents.") ss 76-79, 89 ("Certified copies.") s 89 ("Presumption as to documents called for and not produced after notice to produce.")

Taylor, Ev., §§ 429, 437, 439—460, 918, 919; Roscoe, N. P. Ev., 7—14, 157—160; Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed., 516—521; Powell, 9th Ed, 367—377; Steph Dig., Arts. 72, 118, 119; Wharton, Ev., Ch. III; Greenleaf, Ev., §§ 91—97; Burr. Jones, Ev., 197—232.

COMMENTARY.

When secondary evidence may be given

The last section having declared the general rule as to the proof of documents, the present deals with the exceptions to that rule, namely, the cases in which secondary evidence may be given. Secondary evidence of the contents of a document cannot be admitted without the non-production of the original being first accounted for in such a manner as to bring it within one or other of the cases provided for in section 65 of this Act.(2) By the law of evidence ad- [illegible] sure, with respect to deeds, [illegible] to give secondary evidence [illegible] is the accounting for the non-production of the original (3) It must in the first place, be shown that there is, or was, a document in existence capable of being proved by secondary evidence, and, secondly, that the circumstances are such that secondary evidence may be given, or, to use the technical expression, a proper foundation must be laid for the reception of such evidence (4) There are cases in which secondary evidence is admissible even though the original is in existence and [illegible] producible, as in the case of clauses (e) [illegible] but ordinarily it must be shown that [illegible] natural sense of the word, for this is th[illegible] evidence is admitted. When one of the questions on appeal to the Privy Cou[illegible]

(1) Markby, Ev, 97; Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed., 488

(2) Krishna Kishori v Kishori Lall, 14 C., 486 (1887), 14 I. A, 71.

(3) Bhubaneswari Devi v Harisaran Surma, 6 C., 720 (1880); see also Mussamut Ameeroonissa v Mussamut Abedoonnissa, 23 W. R, 208, 209, P C (1875); 2 I. A., 87; Sreemutty Gour v Huree Kishore, 10 W. R, 338 (1868); Roopmonjoorie Chowdhuranee v. Ram Lal, 1 W. R., 145 (1864); Shookram Sookul v. Ram Lal, 1 W R, 248 (1868); Mufeezoodeen Kazee v Meher Ali, 1 W. R, 213 (1864): Ishen Chunder v. Bhyrub Chunder, 5 W. R 21 (1866); Mussamut Ustoorun v. Baboo Mohun, 21 W. R, 333 (1874); Muhammad Abdul v. Ibrahim, 3 Bom H C. R., A C. J., 160 (1866); Wuzeer Ali v Kalee Koomar, 11 W. R., 228 (1869); Krishna Kishori v Kishori Lall, 14 C., 486 (1887); Rakhal Das v Indra Monee, 1 C. L R, 155 (1877)

(4) This is a matter to be judicially determined by the Court which tries the case, its conclusions on this head will not generally be disturbed in Special Appeal; Shookram Sookul v. Ram Lal, 9 W R, 249 (1868); see also Horripria Debi v. Rukhmini Debi, 19 C., 438 (1892)

(5) Krishna Kishori v Kishori Lal, 14 C, 491 (1887).

was whether secondary evidence had been properly admitted on a case that had arisen for its admission, such question was decided in the affirmative on the ground that whether the evidence offered would itself prove the making of the document or not, it formed good ground for holding that there was a document capable of being proved by secondary evidence admissible with reference to sections 65 and 66 of this Act (1) This section is applicable to both civil and criminal cases (2)

The last four paragraphs provide what kind of secondary evidence is to be given in the particular cases mentioned in the section, and in cases (b), (e), (f), (g) establish exceptions to the general rule that there are no degrees of secondary evidence (3) With reference to these paragraphs, it will be observed that there is no provision for cases in which two causes for non-production of the original are combined as for instance, when the original is a record of a Court of Justice, which has also been lost or destroyed, a case which has occurred more than once in India (4) But it has been held that the rule laid down in this section that a certified copy is the only secondary evidence admissible when the original is a document of which a certified copy is permitted by law to be given in evidence does not apply where the original has been lost or destroyed. In such a case any secondary evidence is admissible (5) So where one B B, an official in the Sikhur Court in the Native State of Jeypore, gave evidence of litigation there between R B and one C, and said that in his presence evidence of C was taken by the Judge, Moonshi M M, and that in his presence the suit was adjudicated and the order passed ; and he put in a document which he swore was a copy of C's deposition, in the handwriting of one of the Court Amlas, [illegible] in the handwriting and bear [illegible] irt, the High Court excluded [illegible] and that they were not proved [illegible] this Act The Privy Council, [illegible] e other proof and observed as [illegible] of the Evidence Act, secondary evidence may be given of public documents, (which these are under section 74) without notice to the adverse party, when the person in possession of the document is out of the reach of, or not subject to, the process of the Court, which is the case here" If the Privy Council held that the effect of B B's evidence was to supply proof that the copy produced was a certified copy (there being no presumption under either section 79 or 86) and the document was admitted as a certified copy, then it was so admitted in accordance with the last paragraph but one of the section. This, however, appears for several reasons not to be the case, for amongst others, the Privy Council say that no notice was necessary as the person in possession of the document was not subject to process But the provisions as to notice apply to cl. (a) only and not to cl. (e). It would appear, therefore, that it was held that the case fell under both clauses, and that as it also fell under cl (a) any secondary evidence was admissible (6) In a suit for a declaration that certain survey numbers were kept joint at a partition between the parties' ancestors in 1809, the plaintiff relied upon a certified copy of a partition deed passed

(1) Luchman Singh v. Puna, 16 C., 753 (1889), s c, L. R, 16 I A, 125

(2) v. Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 231

(3) v ante

(4) Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 230; see Baboo Garoo v. Durbaree Lal, 7 W R, 18 (1867) [record lost in transit]; secondary evidence ordered to be given, Bunwarry Lall v James Furlong, 8 W. R, 38 (1867), record lost · direction to take further evidence Ranee Emamun v. Hurdyal Singh, W. R, 1864, 301 [lost decree].

(5) Kunneth Odongal v Vayoth Palliyal, 6 M, 80 (1882); In the matter of a collision between the "Ava" and the "Brenhilda," 35 C., 568 (1879).

(6) Horranund Roy v. Ram Gopal, 4 C. W. N., 429 (1899).

between the parties in that year. The copy which was produced showed that the original document was produced in Court in a suit of 1823: held that the Court could rely upon the certified copy as showing the terms of the partition as there was no reason to doubt, owing to the lapse of time, that the certified copy retained on the file of the suit of 1823 was a correct copy of the original (1)

The question whether secondary evidence was in any given case rightly admitted, is one which is proper to be decided by the Judge of first instance and is treated as depending very much on his discretion. This conclusion should not be overruled except in a very clear case of miscarriage (2) With regard to objections on appeal to the admission of secondary evidence, see note below.(3)

[illegible] provides that "when the [illegible] oral evidence may be giver [illegible] of the contents shall be received. Still this was not meant to exclude secondary evidence of the contents of the acknowledgment, under section 65 of the Evidence Act, when a proper case for the reception of such evidence is made out.(4)

CLAUSE (A).

The first case in which secondary evidence of a written document is admissible is when a document is in the possession or power of the adversary, or other persons mentioned in this clause, who withhold it at the trial, and a notice to produce(5) the original has been duly served, where such notice is requisite.(6) The rule applies equally both in civil and criminal cases. In either mode of proceeding, in order to render the notice available, it must be first shown that the document is in the hands or power of the party required to produce it.(7) The reason of this rule is self-evident, for otherwise the party calling for the document might foist upon the Court an alleged copy of an original which never had any existence.(8) Slight evidence, however, will suffice to raise a presumption of this where the document exclusively belongs to, or in the regular course of business ought to be, in the custody of a party served (9) What is sufficient evidence is in the discretion of the Court. If papers were last seen in the hands of a defendant, it lies upon him to trace them out of his possession.(10) When a party has notice to produce a particular document which has been traced to his possession, he cannot, it seems, object to parol evidence of its contents being given, on the ground that, previously to the notice, he had ceased to have any control over it, unless he has stated this fact to the

(1) Chudasama Khodaba Sartansang v Chudasama Takhatsang Narsingji, 46 B., 32 (1922)

(2) Ningawa v. Ramappa, 5 Bom L R, 708 (1903).

(3) [illegible] notes, [illegible] 2 W. [illegible] Mohes [illegible] James Fegredo v. Mahomed Modussur, 10 W. R, 267 (1868).

(4) Shumbu Nath v Ram Chandra, 12 C, 267 (1885); Wajibun v. Kadir Buksh, 13 C., 292 (1886); Chathu v. Virayan, 15 M., 491 (1892). The contrary appears to have been held in Zulnissa Ladli v. Motidev Ratandew, 12 B, 268 (1887), but the report does not show that the earlier decisions were cited When the date has been altered, see Sayad Gulamali v. Miyabhai, 26 B., 128 (1901), and s. 106, post

(5) See s 66.

(6) See Taylor, Ev, § 440; and Luchman Singh v. Puna, 16 C, 753 (1889). In Dwarka Singh v. Ramanand Upadhya, 41 A, 592; s c, 17 All. L. J, 711: notice was held unnecessary as the defendants must have known that they were required to produce the document

(7) Sharpe v Lamb, 11 A & E., 805

(8) Norton, Ev, 246

(9) Henry v Leigh, 3 Camp, 502; see also Robb v Starkey, 2 C. & K, 143; see Bhubaneswari Debi v. Harisaran Surma, 6 C., 724 (1881) Presumptively the document is in the possession of the one to whom it belongs Burr. Jones. § 218 opposite party, and has pointed out to him the person to whom he delivered it.(1) Neither can he escape the effect of the notice, by afterwards voluntarily parting with the instrument, which it directs him to produce.(2) The documents must be traced to the possession of the party on whom notice is served or some one in privity with him, such as his banker, agent, servant, deputy, or the like. Such persons need not be served with a subpœna duces tecum, or even be called as a witness, but a notice given to the party himself will suffice (3) Possession may be proved by showing that the document was last seen in the adversary's possession or power; or by calling his solicitor, who may be compelled to testify to its possession(4), or by the admission of his counsel(5); or presumptively, by showing that it belongs exclusively to him, or would, in the ordinary course of business, be in his custody (6) The adversary may, on the other hand, interpose evidence to disprove the possession (7) Secondary evidence tendered to prove the contents of an instrument which is retained by the opposite party after notice to produce it, can only be admitted in the absence of evidence to show that it was unstamped when last seen (8) A copy of a document should not be received in evidence until all legal means have been exhausted for procuring the original.

(10) R. v Thistlewood, 33 How. St Tr., 757, 758; R v. Ings, id., 989.

possession or power of a certain part he has ever had the document is not processes the law provides for his testimony, and his being called on to produce the original. If a Judge is satisfied of a plaintiff's inability to produce an original pottah on which he relies, he ought to allow secondary evidence to be given of the contents of the document, but he should be satisfied, on reasonable grounds that the evidence gives a true version of its contents, and he should require sufficient evidence of the execution of the pottah.(9)

Any secondary evidence is admissible in a case falling within clause (a).(10)

Secondary evidence may also be given when the original is in the possession or power of any person who is out of reach of, or not subject to, the process of the Court (11) No notice is required when the person in possession of the document is out of reach of, or not subject to, the process of the Court.(12) If a document be deposited in a foreign country, and the laws or established usage of that country will not permit its removal, secondary evidence of the contents will be admitted, because in that case it is not in the power of the party to produce the original (13) But ordinarily, being filed in another Court, is not sufficient reason for non-production.(14) Any secondary evidence will be admissible.(15)

---

(1) Sinclair v Stevenson, 1 C. & P., 582, Knight v Martin, Gow, R, 103

(2) Knight v Martin, Gow R, 104

(3) Taylor, Ev, § 441; Partridge v Coales, Ry. & M, 156, Burton v Payne, 2 C & P., 520, Sinclair v Stevenson, 1 C. & P., 582, Bhubaneswari Debi v Harisaran Surma, 6 C, 724 (1881)

(4) Bevan v Waters, M & M, 235; Dwyer v Collins, 7 Exch, 639; see Notes to ss 126—129, post

(5) Duncombe v. Daniell, 8 C & P, 222; see s 58, ante

(6) v ante, Burr Jones, Ev., § 218

(7) Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 516, 517; Taylor, Ev, §§ 440, 441

(8) Sennandan v Kollakiran, 2 M, 208 (1880).

(9) Shookram Sookul v. Ram Lal, 9 W. R, 248 (1868)

(10) S 65.

(11) See Ralli v Gau Kim, 9 C, 939 (1883), Bishop Melius v. Vicar Apostolic, 2 M, 295 (1879). In s 36 of Act II of 1855, it was the document that must be out of the process of the Court, here it is the person in whose possession it is

(12) S 66, cl 6 From s 65 (which is not happily worded in this respect) it might be gathered that notice was necessary; see last para. of cl (a), and Ralli v. Gau Kim, 9 C, 939 (1883).

(13) Burnabie v Rallie, 42 Ch. D, 282, 291; Crispin v. Doglioni, 32 L J, P & M, 109; Alivon v Furnival, 1 C. M. & R, 277, 291, 292; Boyle v. Wiseman, 10 Ex. R, 647; Quilter v Jorss, 14 C B, N. S, 747. See 14 & 15 Vic, c. 99.

(14) Sreemutty Gour v Huree Kishore, 10 W. R., 338 (1868).

(15)S. 65.

The third case in which secondary evidence is admissible under this clause is when the original is shown or appears to be in the possession or power of any person legally bound to produce it. The construction of these, as of other words in this section, raises difficulties which it is not easy to satisfactorily solve It is therefore necessary in the first place to state the English law upon the subject of the admissibility of secondary evidence where the party served with notice to produce a document is not compellable to produce it in evidence.

The general rule which requires primary evidence assumes that it can be given; when it cannot, secondary evidence may be adduced. So where a party calls for a document in the possession of another, which document the latter is entitled to refuse to produce on the ground of privilege (e g., as being his title-deed)(1), secondary evidence may be given of the document as everything has been done to obtain it (2) The English rule on the point has been thus summarised. Secondary evidence may be given of the contents of a document "when the original is shown or appears to be in the possession or power of a stranger not legally bound to produce it, and who refuses to produce it after being served with a subpœna duces tecum, or after having been sworn as a witness and asked for the document and having admitted that it is in Court (3) Further, according to English law, the disobedience of a person served with a subpœna duces tecum will not render admissible secondary evidence of the contents of the document which he is called upon to produce.(4) To do this the witness must be justified in refusing the production, for otherwise the party will have no remedy, except as against him.(5) Again, when a document is withheld, not on the ground of privilege, but on that of lien, secondary evidence may be inadmissible So, if a solicitor refuses to produce a deed as claiming a lien upon it(6), secondary evidence of its contents cannot be received provided the party tendering such evidence be the person liable to pay the solicitor's charges (7) But a witness will not be allowed to resist a subpœna duces tecum on the ground of any lien he may have on the document called for as evidence, unless the party requiring the production be himself the person against whom the claim of lien is made (8)

A solicitor who has not acted for either of the parties to an action may be summoned as a witness on a subpœna duces tecum and compelled to produce documents on which he claims a lien.(9) He will also be ordered to produce to the trustee of a bankrupt documents over which he has a lien, but which are the property of the bankrupt (10) Where a litigant can show that the retention by his solicitor of papers over which the latter has a lien would embarrass the litigant in his action, the solicitor may be ordered to deliver up the papers on payment into Court or security given.(11) If a solicitor has a lien over documents belonging to his client, he is nevertheless bound to produce them for the benefit of a third person, if his client would have been bound to do so (12)

The question then arises how far such rules or any of them are applicable under this Act. As already observed, no construction of this clause is free from

---

(1) See ss 130, 131, post

(2) Hibberd v. Knight, 2 Ex. 11, 12, per Parke, B, Sayer v. Glossop, id, 409, 410, 411, per Pollock, C B; Doe v. Ross, 7 M. & W., 122, per Parke, B, Phelps v. Prew, 3 E. & B, 438, 442, 443.

(3) Steph Dig, Art 71, see Taylor, Ev, § 457.

(4) Jesus Coll v. Gibbs, 1 Y. & C, Ex. R., 156.

(5) R. v. Llanfaethly, 2 E. & B, 940; Taylor, Ev, § 457, by an action for damages See Acts XIX of 1853, s. 26, on failure to give evidence or produce a document)

(6) See Contract Act, s 171; Bai Kasserbai v. Narranji Walji, 4 B, 353 (1880)

(7) Attorney-General v Ashe, 10 Ir. Eq, R. N. S., 309.

(8) Taylor, Ev, § 458, and cases there cited

(9) Re Hawke (1898), 2 Ch. 16

(10) Re Toleman (1880), 13 Ch D, 885

(11) Re Foster (1904), 116 L T. J. 388

(12) [illegible] (1894), 1 Ch. 556

difficulty.(1) In the first place it must be noted that every person summoned to produce a document must, if it is in his possession or power, bring it to Court notwithstanding any objection which there may be to its production or to its admissibility The validity of such objection is a matter to be decided on by the Court (2) Assuming the present clause to have reference to that class of documents only which a person is not justified in refusing, on the ground of privilege, to produce; in other words, documents which a person is legally he being ex concessis, legally bound to produce it, and its non-production being therefore unjustifiable, secondary evidence will be admissible forthwith upon such non-production, under the terms of this clause It will appear, therefore, that the English rule abovementioned, according to which secondary evidence is not admissible of a document which is, without justification, withheld, is not law under this section (3) Much, however, may be said in favour of a departure from the English rule upon this point It may be argued that it is not

(1) In Norton Ev 244, 246 248, it appears to be considered that the clause ought and was meant to run "if any person not legally bound to produce it," the word 'not" having been omitted by accident Mr Markby also thinks probable that the word 'not' has been omitted by mistake though he concedes that no question of there being any misprint in the Act seems to have been raised in this country Ev Act p 58 v post If this be correct, the clause would then be in agreement with the rule of English law as above stated, and there would be no difficulties of construction on the points hereafter dealt with One point of variance from English law is, however, suggested, by Mr Norton as arising out of a later portion of the section, viz, that whereas under that law where a person refuses to produce a document which he is legally compellable to produce, the party calling for the document cannot give secondary evidence and has no remedy except as against him on the other hand, under the Act such a case may have been provided for in the second portion of cl (c) dealing with inability to produce in reasonable time The learned author says "Perhaps under this too [cl (c), portion referred to, supra], a party might give secondary evidence of a document, which person having no legal right to refuse the production of, nevertheless refuses on notice to produce" Ib, 248

(2) S 162, post, R v Daye (1908), 2 K B, 333, R v Lord John Russell (1839), 7 Dow, 693

(3) Mr Markby says (Ev Act, p 58) "We have now to consider s 65 (a), and to understand this we must refer to the Code of Civil Procedure That Code only speaks of a notice to produce documents in connection with their production before the trial so that they may be inspected and preparation made to meet them" (O. XI, r 15 2nd Ed p 794) "Still it can hardly be doubted that if A and B were in litigation and A were to give B notice to produce a document in the possession of B at the trial, and B did not do so, the Court would consider this to be reasonable notice within the meaning of s 66 and would admit secondary evidence under the first clause, s 65 (a) So again if the document were not in the possession of A or B but of C, a third person, and C were out of reach secondary evidence could be produced without any notice of any kind [s 65 (a), cl 6, s 66] But suppose C is within reach and subject to the process of the Court By the Code of Civil Procedure, O XVI, r 1, Woodroffe & Ameer Ali's, 2nd Ed, p 825, a summons to produce the document must be issued, and if it is not obeyed, then proceedings may be taken to compel C to produce the document, and special powers are granted for that purpose If, however, we are to take the words 'of any person legally bound to produce it' as they stand, there is no necessity to take any steps to procure the production of the document, as secondary evidence of it at once becomes admissible I can hardly believe that this is what was intended I think it probable that the word 'not' has been omitted here by mistake and that the case intended to be dealt with, here is the case of a person who, though within reach of the Court, is not legally bound to produce the document Several such cases are mentioned in ss 122–131. This would be quite intelligible and in accordance with English law It must, however, be admitted that no question of there being any misprint in the Act seems to have been raised in India; if there is no misprint then, if in the case above put, C, having been summoned to produce the document, omits to obey it, secondary evidence is at once admissible"

The third case in which secondary evidence is admissible under this clause is when the original is shown or appears to be in the possession or power of any person legally bound to produce it. The construction of these, as of other words in this section, raises difficulties which it is not easy to satisfactorily solve It is therefore necessary in the first place to state the English law upon the subject of the admissibility of secondary evidence where the party served with notice to produce a document is not compellable to produce it in evidence.

The general rule which requires primary evidence assumes that it can be given; when it cannot, secondary evidence may be adduced. So where a party calls for a document in the possession of another, which document the latter is entitled to refuse to produce on the ground of privilege (e.g., as being his title-deed)(1), secondary evidence may be given of the document as everything has been done to obtain it.(2) The English rule on the point has been thus summarised. Secondary evidence may be given of the contents of a document "when the original is shown or appears to be in the possession or power of a stranger not legally bound to produce it, and who refuses to produce it after being served with a subpœna duces tecum, or after having been sworn as a witness and asked for [illegible] that it is in Court (3) Further, according [illegible] person served with a subpœna duces tecum [illegible] evidence of the contents of the document which he is called upon to produce (4) To do this the witness must be justified in refusing the production, for otherwise the party will have no remedy, except as against him.(5) Again, when a document is withheld, not on the ground of privilege, but on that of lien, secondary evidence may be inadmissible. So, if a solicitor refuses to produce a deed as claiming a lien upon it(6), secondary evidence of its contents cannot be received provided the party tendering such evidence be the person liable to pay the solicitor's charges (7) But a witness will not be allowed to resist a subpœna duces tecum on the ground of any lien he may have on the document called for as evidence, unless the party requiring the production be himself the person against whom the claim of lien is made (8)

A solicitor who has not acted for either of the parties to an action may be summoned as a witness on a subpœna duces tecum and compelled to produce documents on which he claims a lien (9) He will also be ordered to produce to the trustee of a bankrupt documents over which he has a lien, but which are the property of the bankrupt.(10) [illegible] retention [illegible] the by his solicitor of papers over whicl [illegible] on litigant in his action, the solicitor m [illegible] payment into Court or security given (11) If a solicitor has a lien over documents belonging to his client, he is nevertheless bound to produce them for the benefit of a third person, if his client would have been bound to do so (12)

The question then arises how far such rules or any of them are applicable under this Act. As already observed, no construction of this clause is free from

(1) See ss 130, 131, post

(2) Hibberd v. Knight, 2 Ex 11, 12, per Parke, B, Sayer v. Glossop, id, 409, 410, 411, per Pollock, C. B; Doe v. Ross, 7 M. & W., 122, per Parke, B; Phelps v. Prew, 3 E & B, 438, 442, 443

(3) Steph. Dig, Art 71, see Taylor, Ev, § [illegible]457. [illegible] sus Coll v. Gibbs, 1 Y. & C, Ex

(4) [illegible] v Llanfaethly, 2 E & B, 940;

(5) [illegible] Ev., § 457, by an action for [illegible] see Acts XIX of 1853, s 26, [illegible] on failure to give evidence or produce a document)

(6) See Contract Act, s 171; Bai Kasserbai v. Narranji Walji, 4 B, 353 (1880).

(7) Attorney-General v. Ashe, 10 Ir. Eq, R. N. S., 309.

(8) Taylor, Ev, § 458, and cases there cited.

(9) Re Hawke (1898), 2 Ch, 16

(10) Re Toleman (1880), 13 Ch D, 885.

(11) Re Foster (1904), 116 L. T. J., 388.

(12) Re L[illegible] (1894), 1 Ch, 556 therefore, he would consider secondary evidence inadmissible under the clause as it now stands. And this also appears to be the view taken by Mr. Field, who says that " as section 65, clause (a), para. 4, admits secondary evidence of the existence, condition or contents of a document only when a person legally bound to produce it r [illegible] owner nor any one e [illegible] which the person in [illegible]

so, it is contrary to [illegible]

a document in the hands of a stranger, who is not compellable by law to produce it, and who refuses to do so "(1)

If the case is not covered by the words of the section, according to those constructions already given favouring the admissibility of secondary evidence, there has been either an intentional or accidental omission to provide for the admission of secondary evidence under the circumstances mentioned. It is difficult to assign any reason for its intentional omission. For the effect of such omission should be to establish a rule contrary to English law, and to the general principles controlling the reception of secondary evidence, which might in many cases cause serious and unreasonable injury to a litigant. If, therefore, it be held that this section does not make provision for the case mentioned, it may perhaps nevertheless be held upon the English cases and the general principles and considerations adverted to, that where a person is justified in refusing to produce a document on the ground of privilege, secondary evidence may be given by the party calling for the document, for he has, in the words of Parke, B(2), done everything in his power to obtain it (3) It is also apprehended that the rule with regard to documents, the subject of lien, is the same under this Act as it is in England (4)

Where oral evidence was given to prove the contents of a letter, which was neither produced nor called for, but no objection was raised to the giving of the evidence, held that this was secondary evidence of the contents of a document and could not be given without satisfying the conditions of this section. Section 66 rendered it legally inadmissible, although no objection was raised to the giving of it (5) This decision is unsustainable, and has been dissented from.(6) It fails to draw the distinction between evidence which is irrelevant and relevant evidence proved in a particular manner without [illegible] proof should not be entertained [illegible] this head has been taken in the [illegible]

CLAUSE (B)

Oral admissions of the contents of documents are ordinarily inadmissible, unless and until the party proposing to prove them shows that he is entitled to give secondary evidence (8) The present clause, however, provides that a written admission is receivable as proof of the existence, condition, or contents of a document, even though the original is in existence, and might be, but is [illegible]

(1) Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 423.

(2) See Hibberd v Knight, 2 Ex, 12 ante

(3) But see also Field, Ev., 6th Ed, 423; Cunningham, Ev, 213

(4) v ante, p 512.

(5) Kameshwar Pershad v Amanutulla, 26 C, 53 (1898), s c, 2 C. W N, 649; Rampini, J, observing that "there is no law in this country that the absence of objection to evidence, which is legally inadmissible, makes it admissible"

(6) Kishori Lal v. Pathak [illegible], 21 C., 155 (1903) Approved in Ram Lochan Misra v. Pandit Harinath Misra, [illegible] 606, approving Chimnaji Govind Godbole v. Dhinkar Dhandev Godbole, 11 B., 320; Lakshman Govind v. Amrit Gopal, 24 B., 591.

(7) See Notes to [illegible] by parties," and Skinner [illegible] v. Secretary of State for India, [illegible] 34 C., 1059; L. R., 34 I. A., 134.

(8) S 22 ante

not, produced.(1) The written admission is the secondary evidence admissible in the case mentioned in this clause.(2) This clause will not apply or avail a party where the original document is inadmissible for want of a stamp(3) or of registration.(4) In the undermentioned criminal case(5) it was held that inasmuch as the record of the statement of the accused was not admissible, secondary evidence thereof could not be given; the Court observing as follows: —" Reference is made by the Sessions Judge to section 65 of the Evidence Act, the words appearing in clause (b) of that section being quoted: but for the reasons above stated, I am of opinion that it was not open to the Magistrate to procure an admission in writing—if the affixing of his mark to the whole statement by the accused can be held to constitute an admission in writing for this purpose—in respect of the contents of the previous statements."

This clause must be read with section 22. The result seems to be this.— The written admission may always be proved. The oral admission can only be proved in the cases stated in section 65, (a), (c) and (d). Of course, admissions as to the contents of documents are frequently made by the parties or their pleaders at the hearing. The reference now under consideration has no application to such admissions(6) which are governed by section 58 The admissions spoken of in sections 22 and 65 are evidentiary admissions. Admissions under section 58 dispense with proof.

CLAUSE (C).

When the original has been destroyed(7) or lost(8) or when the party offering evidence of its contents for any other reason, not arising from his own default or neglect, produces it in reasonable time(9), any(10) secondary evidence of the contents of the document is admissible. " If the instrument be destroyed or lost, the [illegible] contents must give some eviden [illegible] ust then either prove its destruc [illegible] as by showing that it has been [illegible] lish its loss, by proof that a search has been unsuccessfully made for it, in the place or places where it was most likely to be found. What degree of diligence is necessary in the search cannot easily be defined, as each case must depend much on its own peculiar circumstances(1[illegible] to show that he has, in good faith, exha [illegible] ources of information and means of dis [illegible] would naturally

(1) Cunningham, Ev, 214; Phillips and Arn, Ev, 325, 320; Goss v. Quinton, 3 M & G, 285

(2) See last para but two of s 65.

(3) Damodar Jagannath v Atmaram Babaji, 12 B, 443, 446 (1888).

(4) Divethi Varada v Krishnasami Ayyangar, 6 M, 117 (1882); Sambayya v Gangayya, 3 M, 308 (1890).

(5) R v Virani, 9 M, 234, 240 (1886).

(6) Markby, Ev, Act, 59

(7) See Syed Abbas v Yadeem Ramy, 3 Moo I A., 156 (1843); Luchmeedhur Pattuck v. Raghoobur Singh, 24 W. R, 284, 285 (1874), [destruction of record during the mutiny]; Kunneth Odanga v. Vayoth Palliyil, 6 M, 80 (1882); Muhammad Abdul v Ibrahim, 3 Bom H. C. R, A. C J, 160, 162, 163 (1866), Krishna Kishori v. Kishori Lal, 14 C, 489, 490 (1887).

(8) See Hurrish Chunder v Prosunna Coomar, 22 W R., 303 (1874); in the matter of a Collision between the 'Ava' and the 'Brenhilda,' 5 C., 568 (1879); Khettur Chunder v. Khettur Paul, 5 C., 886, Roopmonjoorie Chowdhranee v Ram Lall, 1 W. R., 145 (1864); Luchman Singh v. Puna, 16 C, 755, 756 (1889).

(9) See Womesh Chunder v Shama Sundari, 7 C, 98, 100 (1881) and post

(10) v pp. 517–518, post

(11) Doe v. Wittcomb, 6 Ex. R., 601, 605, 606.

(12) See Mufeezooddeen Kazee v Meher Ali, 1 W. R., 212, 213 (1864).

(13) R. v Johnson, 7 East., 66, 29 How St. Tr., 437—440, S. C.

(14) Brewster v. Sewell, 3 B & A, 301; See Gully v. Bp. of Exeter, 4 Bing, 298. R v. Pardoe v. Price, 13 M. & W., 267; R v. Gordon, 25 L. J., M. C., 19.

suggest and which were accessible to him.(1) As the object of the proof is merely to establish a reasonable presumption of the loss of the instrument, and as this is a preliminary inquiry addressed to the discretion of the Judge(2), the party offering secondary evidence need not on ordinary occasions have made a search for the original document, as for stolen goods, nor be in a position to negative every possibility of its having been kept back (3) If the document be important, and such as the owner may have an interest in keeping, or if any reason exist for suspecting that it has been fraudulently withheld, a very strict examination will properly be required, but if the paper be supposed to be of little or no value, a very slight degree of diligence will be demanded, as it will be aided by the presumption of destruction or loss, which that circumstance affords "(4) It is not necessary that the search should be recent or made for the purpose of the trial(5), though it will be more satisfactory if the search be made shortly before the trial. Hearsay evidence of the answers given by persons likely to have had the document in their custody is admissible (6) Where there is one person chiefly interested in a document, enquiry should be made of him, where two persons have an equal title to its custody, as a lessor and lessee enquiry should be made of both; though perhaps such strictness is not legally necessary (7) If the party entitled to the custody of the document be dead, enquiries should generally be made of his heirs and representatives, though such steps will not be necessary should it appear that another party is in possession of the papers of the deceased (8) It has been already observed that before copies of other secondary evidence will be admissible there must be evidence of a search for the originals.(9) Whether or not sufficient proof of search for, or loss of, an original document, to lay ground for the admission of secondary evidence, has been given, is a point proper to be decided by the Judge of first instance and is treated as depending very much on his discretion His conclusion should not be overruled, except in a clear case of miscarriage (10)

Where the plaintiff stated the accidental destruction of a document and prayed leave to put in evidence a registered copy, which the Court allowed, and at the same time ordered the fragments of the original bond to be produced, which was done, and the Court admitted the registered copy as evidence, the Judicial Committee reversed this finding, on the ground that the registered copy, in the absence of satisfactory evidence of the destruction of the original bond, was improperly admitted as secondary evidence There was nothing to show that the fragments produced were fragments of the original.(11) In a suit by the purchaser of a debt, the plaintiff stated that in 1873, A executed a bond in favour of B to secure the repayment of Rs. 1,000, and that he had purchased the interest of B, at a sale in execution of a decree against him. The plaintiff now sued A upon the bond, making B a party. At the trial, A denied the execution of the bond, and it was not produced by the plaintiff who, having

(1) R v Saffron Hill, 22 L J, M C., 22, and E & B, 93 (S C) See Moriarty v Gray, 12 Ir Law R, N S, 129

(2) Taylor, Ev, § 23 (a)

(3) McGahey v Alston, 2 M. & W, 214, Hart v. Hart, 1 Hare, 9

(4) Taylor, Ev, § 429, Gathercole v Miall, 15 M & W, 319, 322, 329, 330, 335, 336, Brewster v. Sewell, 3 B & A, 299, 300, 303, Kensington v. Inglis, 8 East, 278; R v East Fairley, 6 D & R, 153; Freeman v Arkell, 2 B & C, 494

(5) Fitz v. Rabbits, 2 M. & Rob, 60; Taylor, Ev, § 435

(6) R. v Braintree, 28 L J, M. C, 1; R v. Kenilworth, 7 Q. B, 642; Taylor, Ev, § 430.

(7) Taylor, Ev, § 432

(8) Taylor, Ev, § 434

(9) Meer Usdoollah v. Mussumat Beeby, 1 Moo. I A, 41 (1836); Bhubaneshwari Debi v. Harisaran Surma, 6 C, 723, 724 (1881); Krishna Kishori v Kishori Lal, 14 C, 490 (1887); Harripriya Debi v. Rukmini Debi, 19 C, 438 (1892).

(10) Haripriya Debi v Rukmini Debi, 19 C, 843 (1892); see also Shookram Sookul v Ram Lall, 9 W. R, 249 (1868).

(11) Syud Abbas v. Yadeem Ramy, 3 Moo I. A, 156 (1843).

served B with notice to produce, tendered secondary evidence of its contents, B was not examined as a witness, and no evidence was given of the loss or destruction of the bond. It was held by Pontifex and Morris, JJ. (Prinsep, J., dissenting), that secondary evidence was not admissible.(1) Secondary evidence of the contents of a document requiring execution, which can be shown to have been last in proper custody, and to have been lost, and which is more than 30 years old may be admitted under this clause and section 90, post, without proof of the execution of the original.(2) In the Court of Probate where a will itself has, after the death of the testator, been irretrievably lost or destroyed, if its substance can be distinctly ascertained (ei copy of the will, or even by the recollec read), probate may be granted of a copy

It was held prior to the Act that when a party himself fraudulently destroys a document he is not entitled to give secondary evidence of it.(4) But a party in possession of a document cannot refuse to produce it and give secondary evidence because the document has been in the possession of the opposite party who might have, or had, tampered with it.(5)

The second portion of this clause deals with the case of a person, who by no fault of his own, is unable to procure the production of the original. It has been said that perhaps under this portion of the clause if the word 'not' has been omitted from the penultimate paragraph of clause (a), a party might give secondary evidence of a document which a person having no legal right to refuse the production of, nevertheless refuses on notice to produce.(7) If the party interested in th had difficulty i not enough for of a document
duce it ... that its non-registration was not due ... rt, or he must shew that the party a ... of such fraud in the matter of non-registration that he cannot be allowed to object on that ground to the production of the secondary evidence.(9) In the undermentioned case(10) it became necessary to prove that in July 1877 certain immovable property vested in one K S as a purchaser at an auction-sale. A certified copy under section 57 of the Registration Act was tendered and objected to. The case was remanded by the Appellate Court in order that a subpœna duces tecum might be served on K S, the Court observing that if the party seeking the production of the document could not compel K S to produce it and could show that the non-production was not due to his own default or neglect, then secondary evidence could be given under this clause; and in such a case by section 57 of the Registration Act a copy of the entry made in the registration-record was admissible.

Any secondary evidence may be given in this case (11) So where a registered deed of sale had been lost, it was held that oral evidence of the transaction

(1) Womesh Chunder v Shama Sundari, 7 C, 98 (1881).

(2) Khettur Chunder v Khettur Paul, 5 C, 886 (1880); 6 C. L R., 199.

(3) Taylor, Ev, § 436, and cases there cited, and see Harris v. Knight, L. R, 15 P. D., 170; Woodward v. Goulstone, L R, 11 Ap. Cas., 469; Sugden v. St Leonards, 1 P. D, 154; see Act X of 1865 (Indian Succession), ss 208, 209; Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed, 306. See notes on ss. 101—104, post, sub voc. "Wills."

(4) Sheikh Abdulla v. Sheikh Muhammud, 1 Bom. H C R, A. C. J, 177 (1864).

(5) Hira Lall v Ganesh Prasad, 4 A., 406, 411 (1882)

(6) v. ante, p. 513, note (1).

(7) Norton, Ev, 247, 248

(8) Wuzeer Ali v. Kalee Coomar, 11 W. R., 228 (1869).

(9) Kumeezooddeen Holdar v. Rajjub Ali, 9 W. R., 528 (1868).

(10) Vasanji v. Haribhai, 2 Bom. L. R., 533 (1900).

(11) S. 65.

might be received, and that it was not necessary to insist upon the production of a certified copy.(1) And in the undermentioned case it was held that oral evidence was admissible to prove the contents of a written acknowledgment which had been lost In this case it was said by Channell, J., that a Judge should carefully scrutinize such evidence, following the analogy of claims against the estate of a deceased person which are often disallowed unless corroborated.(2) Where a deed has been executed and lost or destroyed, it is not necessary that the witnesses called to give oral testimony of its contents should be attesting witnesses; if they have seen and know the contents of the deed it will be sufficient, provided the Court gives credit to them and is satisfied of the due execution (3)

CLAUSE (D).

Secondary evidence may be given when the production of the original is either physically impossible or highly inconvenient. Thus inscriptions on walls(4) and fixed tables, mural monuments, gravestones(5), surveyor's marks on boundary trees, notices fixed on boards to warn trespassers, and the like, may be proved by secondary evidence, since they cannot conveniently, if at all, be produced in Court For instance, on one occasion, a man was convicted of writing a libel on the wall of the Liverpool gaol, on mere proof, of his handwriting In order, however, to let in this description of secondary evidence, it must clearly appear that the document or writing is affixed to the freehold, and cannot be easily removed; and, therefore, where a notice was merely suspended to the wall of an office by a nail, it was considered necessary to produce it at the trial If, too, a document be deposited in a foreign country, and the laws or established usage of that country will not permit its removal, secondary evidence of the contents will be admitted, because in that case, as in the case of mural inscriptions, it is not in the power of the party to produce the original (6) Any secondary evidence of the contents of the original is here admissible (7)

CLAUSE (E).

Secondary evidence may be given when the original is a public document within the meaning of section 74.(8) This provision is intended to protect the originals of public records from the danger to which they would be exposed by constant production in evidence.(9) In this case a certified copy(10) of the document is admissible, but other secondary evidence of the contents has been admitted under cl (g) (11) But this provision applies only when the public

(1) Hurish Chunder v Prosunno Coomar, 22 W R, 303 (1874)

(2) Read v Price (1909), 1 K B, 577

(3) Syud Lootfoollah v Mussamat Nuseebun, 10 W R, 24 (1868)

(4) See s 3 (definition of "document")

(5) See s 32, cl (6), ante

(6) Taylor, Ev., § 438, and authorities there cited The case last cited in the text would not strictly come within the wording of s 65, clause (d), which refers to originals not easily movable; in the instance given the originals are not movable at all In Whitley Stokes' Anglo-Indian Codes ii, 892, it is suggested that such a case is not provided for unless perhaps by the latter part of cl. (c) But it can hardly be said that the original cannot be produced in reasonable time when it cannot be produced at any time. It is apprehended that the case would come within the purview of the third paragraph of cl (a), because the document would under the circumstances given be in the possession or power of a person or persons out of reach or not subject to the process of the Court

(7) S. 65

(8) See Notes to s 74, post: so an examined copy of a quinquennial register was held to be evidence without the production of the original, Sreemuty Oodoy v. Bishonath Dutt, 7 W R, 14 (1867). See as to this clause Krishna Kishori v. Kishori Lal, 14 C., 491 (1877).

(9) Kunneth Odangal v. Vayoth Palliyil, 6 M, 80, 81 (1882); Doe v Ross, 7 M. & W, 106

(10) See ss 76, 77, post

(11) Sandar Kuar v. Chandreshwar Prasad Narain Singh (1907), 34 C, 293.

document is still in existence on the public records, and does not interfere with the g[illegible] origin[illegible]
Civil[illegible]
1879[illegible]
allow secondary evidence of it to be given under this clause (2) A certified copy of a rubakari is admissible.(3) See further p 509, ante, as to cases in which two causes for non-production of the original are combined, and notes, to s. 86, post

CLAUSE (F).

When the c[illegible] is permitted by this Act(4), or b[illegible]ven in evidence, a certified copy [illegible] he words "to be given in evidence" mean to be given in evidence in the first instance without having been introduced by other evidence.(6) A registered deed of sale is not a document of which a certified copy is permitted by law to be given in evidence in the first instance without having been introduced by other evidence. Section 57 of the Registration Act only shows that when secondary evidence has in any way been introduced, as by proof of the loss of the original document, a copy certified by the registrar shall be admissible for the purpose of proving the contents of the original, that is, it shall be admitted without other proof than the Registrar's certificate of the correctness of the copy, and shall be taken as a true copy; but that does not make such a copy a document which may be given in evidence without other evidence to introduce it (7) Section 86 of this Act contains an instance of documents to which this clause seems to refer (8) The Bankers' Books Evidence Act (XVIII of 1891) is an instance of an Act, other than the present one, which permits certified copies of original documents to be given in evidence (9) So also under the Powers of Attorney Act a certified copy of an instrument deposited shall without further proof be sufficient evidence of the contents of the instrument and of the deposit thereof in the High Court.(10) And as to production of verified copies of entries in business books, see Civil Procedure Code, O. XI, r. 19.(11) Although the section provides that in clause (f) a certified copy of the document, but no other kind of secondary evidence is admissible, yet in a case, falling under clause (f) and also under clause (a) or (c) of the same section, any secondary evidence is admissible (12)

---

(1) Kunneth v Vayoth, note (9), supra; see also In the matter of a collision between the "Ava" and the "Brenhilda," 5 C, 568 (1879), Bishendyal Sing v Musst Khadeema, Marshall's Rep, 213 (1862).

(2) Vasanji v. Haribhai, 2 Bom L R, 533 (1900), per Candy, J

(3) Radhanath Kabarta v Emperor, 22 C W N, 742; s c, 19 Cr L J, 769.

(4) See s 78: and as to this clause, Krishna Kishori v. Kishori Lal, 14 C., 491 (1887).

(5) Eg, Act XVIII of 1891 (The Bankers' Books Evidence Act), v post, see also Woodroffe and Ali's Civ. Pr. Code. O. XLV, r. 15, 2nd Ed, p 1343.

(6) Hurrish Chunder v. Prosunno Coomar, 22 W. R, 303 (1874).

(7) Hurrish Chunder v. Prosunno Coomar, 22 W. R, 303 (1874); and although such a copy may be taken as a correct copy of some document registered in the office, this circumstance does not make that registered document evidence or render it operative against the persons who appear to be affected by its terms A document registered in and brought from a public registry office requires to be proved when it is desired that it should be used as evidence against any party who does not admit it, quite as much as if it came out of private custody Saikh Faiz v Omedee Singh, 21 W R, 265 (1879)

(8) Hurrish Chunder v Prosunno Coomar, supra

(9) Act XVIII of 1891, s 4: see Appendix to last Edition

(10) Act VII of 1882, s 4, cl (d).

(11) P. 797. (2nd Ed).

(12) In the matter of a collision between the "Ava" and the "Brenhilda," 5 C, 569 (1879).

CLAUSE (G).

This provision is for the saving of public time. If the point to be ascertained were, for instance, the balance in a long series of accounts in a merchant's books, evidently great inconvenience would arise, and much public time be wasted, if a witness were compellable to go through the whole of the books and to make his examination and calculations before the Court. He is allowed, therefore, to do this before he comes to be sworn, and then to give the general result of his scrutiny. He can, of course, be tested by cross-examination and the books should always, where it is practicable, be in Court and open to the opposite side's inspection and to that of the Court (1). So a witness who has inspected the accounts of the parties, though he may not give evidence of their particular contents, will be allowed to speak to the general balance without producing the accounts, and where the question is as to the solvency of a party at a particular time, the general result of an examination of his books and securities may be stated in like manner (2). But the word "result" must be construed strictly to mean the actual figures or facts arrived at. The "exception under consideration will not enable a witness to state the general contents of a number of letters received by him from one of the parties in the cause, though such letters have been since destroyed, if the object of the examination be to elicit from the witness not a fact but merely an opinion or impression, for instance, the impression which the destroyed letters produced on his mind with reference to the degree of friendship subsisting between the writer and a third party. In the other cases mentioned, the fact in question is one which simply depends on the honesty of the witness, whereas he might from the perusal of the documents, conscientiously draw a very different opinion or inference from that which would be drawn by a jury"(3). In case (g) secondary evidence may be given as to the general result of the documents by any person who has examined them and who is skilled in the examination of such documents. The competence of the witness must, therefore, be proved to the satisfaction of the Court before such evidence is tendered. In the under-mentioned case it was held that the general result of the examination of many documents may be given under this clause, even though they may be "public documents" within the meaning of clause (e) and section 74, since the evidence was admitted not because the documents were public, but because they were such as could not be conveniently examined in Court, and because the fact to be proved was the general result of the examination (4).

Upon the analogy of the rule contained in this clause, if bills of exchange or the like have been drawn between particular parties in one invariable mode, this may be proved by the testimony of a witness conversant with their habits of business, who speaks generally of the fact, without production of all the bills (5). But if the mode of dealing has not been uniform, the case does not fall within this exception, but is governed by the rule requiring the production of the writings.(6)

66. Secondary evidence of the contents of the documents referred to in section 65, clause (a) shall not be given(7), unless the party proposing to give such secondary evidence has previously given to the party in whose possession or power the Rules as to notice to produce.

(1) Norton, Ev., 248; see also Civ. Pr. Code, O. XXVI, r. 11, 2nd Ed., p. 1097 (Commissions to investigate and adjust accounts.)

(2) Taylor, Ev., § 462.

(3) Ib.

(4) Sandar Kuar v. Chandreshuar Prasad Narain Singh (1907), 34 C., 293.

(5) Spencer v. Billing, 3 Camp. (310).

(6) Taylor, Ev., § 462.

(7) See Kameshuar Pershad v. Amanutulla, 26 C., 53 (1898); s. c., 2 C. W. N., 649, cited ante p. 515, and the observations on the case.

document is(1), or to his attorney or pleader, such notice to produce it as is prescribed by law, and if no notice is prescribed by law, then such notice as the Court considers reasonable under the circumstances of the case :

Provided that such notice shall not be required in order to render secondary evidence admissible in any of the following cases, or in any other case in which the Court thinks fit to dispense with it :—

(1) when the document to be proved is itself a notice;

(2) when, from the nature of the case, the adverse party must know that he will be required to produce it;(2)

(3) when it appears or is proved that the adverse party has obtained possession of the original by fraud or force;

(4) when the adverse party or his agent has the original in Court;

(5) when the adverse party or his agent has admitted the loss of the document;

(6) when the person in possession of the document is out of reach of, or not subject to, the process of the Court.

Principle.—Notice is required in order to give the opposite party a sufficient opportunity to produce the document, and thereby to secure, if he pleases, the best evidence of its contents. Notice to produce also excludes the argument that the opponent has not taken all reasonable means to secure the original.(3) See further, Notes, post, as to the ground of the rule and of the provisos.

s. 63 (Meaning of secondary evidence) s 3 ("Document") s 65, Cl. (a) (Proof by secondary evidence.) s. 3 ("Court")

Steph. Dig., Art. 72; Taylor, Ev., §§ 442—456; Woodroffe and Amir Ali's Civ Pr. Code, 2nd Ed., O. V, r. 7, p 641; O. XIII, pp 805—812; O. XI, rr. 15—18; pp. 794—796; Cr. Pr Code, ss. 94—98, 485; Ch. VI, ib, Penal Code, s 175.

COMMENTARY.

Notice to produce. A proper notice to produce is, in the cases mentioned in section 65, clause (a), necessary before secondary evidence(4) becomes admissible. The true principle on which a notice to produce a document on the trial of a cause is required is not to give the opposite party notice that such a document will be used by a party to the cause in order to enable him to prepare evidence to explain or confirm the document, but is merely to give him a sufficient opportunity to produce it, and thereby secure, if he pleases, the best evidence of the

(1) These words in s. 66 were inserted by Act XVIII of 1872, s 6.

(2) See Dwarka Singh v. Ramanund Upadhya, 41 A, 592; s. c., 17 A. L. J, 711.

(3) Dwyer v Collins, 7 Ex, 639—647.

(4) In s. 65, "existence, condition, or contents" are spoken of In s. 66 secondary evidence of the "contents" is alone mentioned. Quære, whether secondary evidence of "existence" or "condition" can be given in any case without notice; Apparently yes. Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 232.

contents; and, therefore, when a document is shown to be in Court, a request to produce it immediately is sufficient (1)

Section 65, clause (a), refers to documents in the possession of both parties and strangers. According to English practice a notice to produce is used for an adversary in the cause; while a stranger legally compellable to produce a document is served with a summons to produce a subpœna duces tecum. A notice to produce is a notice by party or his solicitor to another party or his solicitor, calling upon the latter to produce at the trial a particular document or particular documents specified in the notice. A subpœna duces tecum is a process used not by the party but by the Court. It would appear from clause (a) of section 65 that the notice to produce referred to in sections 65 and 66 is a notice served either on an adversary or on a stranger(2), and is a notice issued by process of Court under the Civil(3) or Criminal(4) Procedure Code In the Mofussil all notices are served through the Court, but on the Original Side of the High Court, the party himself or his solicitor serves a notice to produce on the opposing party or his solicitor. Where, however, the person in possession of the document is a stranger to the suit, a subpœna duces tecum will be necessary in the High Court as in the English Courts, whose practice in this respect is followed.

The notice to produce must be such as is prescribed by law; and if no notice is prescribed by law, then such notice as the Court considers reasonable under the circumstances of the case. It must be shown that the party to whom the notice has been given has the document in his possession or power. Possession is the very foundation of notice; reasonable evidence of possession must be given, and then on proof of service of notice and non-production, secondary evidence may be offered (5) If the document is in the possession or power of the person who desires to use it as evidence, he must produce it.(6) " It is difficult to lay down any general rule as to what a notice to produce ought to contain, since much must depend on the particular circumstances of each case No mis-statement or inaccuracy in the notice will, however, be deemed material if not really calculated to mislead the opponent. Neither is it necessary by condescending minutely to dates, contents parties, etc , to specify the precise to the matters in dispute in the action "(9) But a notice to produce " letters and copies of letters and all books relating to the cause " has been held to be too vague to admit secondary evidence of a letter.(10) Inaccuracies will not

(1) Dwyer v. Collins, 7 Ex., 639, further notice to produce excludes the argument that the opponent has not taken all reasonable means to procure the original ib, 647, v post, Proviso (4), p (497) But see also Bate v Kinsey, 1 C M & R, 38

(2) Field Ev, 6th Ed, 233, Whitley Stokes ii, 893

(3) See Woodroffe & Ali's Civ Pr Code (2nd Ed), O V r 7, p 641; O XI, rr. 15—18, pp 794—796

(4) See Woodroffe & Ali's Cr Pr Code, ss 94—98, Ch VI, ib., s. 485, ib., and ss 162, 165, post, persons omitting to produce documents after service of notice may be proceeded against under s 175 of the Penal Code

(5) See Sinclair v Stevenson, 1 C & P, 585, as to the order in which the evidence may be given see s 136, post

(6) Hira Lal v Ganesh Prasad, 4 A., 406, 410 (1882)

(7) Taylor, Ev, § 443

(8) Rogers v Custance, 2 M. & Rob, 181.

(9) Jacob v Lee, 2 M & Rob, 33; Morris v Hauser, id, 392.

(10) Jones v Edwards, M'Cl. & Y., 139. Recent decisions justify a greater laxity of practice than prevailed formerly, but it is believed that many English Judges still act upon the old principles Taylor, Ev., 443

vitiate a notice unless the recipient has been misled thereby.(1) As to the time and place of the service, when not fixed by law, no more precise rule can be laid down than that it must be such as to enable the party, under the known circumstances of the case, to comply with the call.(2) The sufficiency of the service is a question for the Judge, who must be satisfied that it was such that the recipient might, by using reasonable diligence, have complied with the notice (3) If the notice has not been properly served, or if served in insufficient time(4), or if the party calling for a document does not take all the means in his power to compel its production(5), secondary evidence will not be permitted to be given.

When a party calls for a document which he has given the other party notice to produce, and such document is produced and inspected by the party calling for its production, he is bound to give it as evidence, if the party producing it required him to do so.(6) And when a party refuses to produce a document which he has had notice to produce, he cannot afterwards use the document as evidence without the consent of the other party or the order of the Court (7) The rules with regard to the admission of secondary evidence are the same in criminal as in civil trials, and the necessity for notice the same; though it will comparatively seldom happen that documents are required to be produced at a criminal trial and notice will consequently have but seldom to be issued (8) The Court shall presume that every document called for and not produced after notice to produce was attested, stamped and executed in the manner required by law (9)

Provisos.

Notice is not required in order to render secondary evidence admissible in any of the following cases :—

(a) When the document to be proved is itself a notice. This exception appears to have been originally adopted in regard to notices to produce, for the obvious reason, that if a notice to produce such a document were necessary, the series of notices would become infinite. The exception has subsequently been extended to other notices, and now lets in proof by copies of a notice to quit, of a notice of dishonour, provided the action be brought upon the bill, but not otherwise; and of all such notices of action, or written demands, as are necessary to entitle the plaintiff to recover.(10)

(b) When from the nature of the case, the adverse party must know that he will be required to produce it. The second of the cases is where from the nature of the action, or indictment, or from the form of the pleadings, the defendant must know that he will be charged with the possession of an instrument, and be called upon to produce it. Thus in an action of trover for converting a bond, a bill of exchange or other writing, or in a prosecution for stealing any document, the counsel for the plaintiff or the Crown may at once produce secondary evidence of its contents, even though the defendant should offer to produce

(1) Laurence v Clarke, 14 M. & W., 251.

(2) Taylor, Ev., § 445; see ib, § 446, when the papers are in a foreign country.

(3) Lloyd v Mostyn, 10 M. & W., 483, 484

(4) Sugg v. Bray, 54 L. J Ch, 132; Taylor, Ev., § 445; but if a party, on being served with a notice to produce a document, states that it is not in existence, parol proof of the contents will be received, and no objection can be taken to the lateness of the service: Foster v. Pointer, 9 C & P., 720.

(5) Shambati Koeri v. Jago Bibee, 29 C, 749 (1902).

(6) S 163, post; see Notes to that section

(7) S. 164, post; see Notes to that section, and see Civil Procedure Code (2nd Ed), O. XI, r. 15, p 794, O VII r 18, p. 725

(8) Norton, Ev, 251

(9) S 89, post.

(10) Taylor, Ev, §§ 450, 451, and cases there cited Quære, whether the 'notice' referred to in cl. (1) is a notice to produce only or includes also the other notices to which the doctrine has been extended by the English cases the document itself.(1) In a suit for redemption the plaintiffs were allowed to give secondary evidence without notice to produce the original mortgage bond as the defendants must have known that they would be required to produce it in a suit for redemption (2) A like rule prevails in an action on contract against a carrier for the non-delivery of written instruments, as also in indictments for conducting a traitorous correspondence. It has, however, been held inapplicable in a charge of forging a deed, and no doubt can be entertained that an indictment for arson, with intent to defraud an insurance office, does not convey such a notice that the policy will be required, as to dispense with a formal notice to produce. Similarly it is the necessary (though reverse) consequence of this rule that if the maker of a note or cheque, or the acceptor of a bill, does not, as defendant in an action, deny by the plea his making or acceptance, the plaintiff who is not bound to produce the instrument as part of his case, since it is admitted on the record, may object to the defendant's giving secondary evidence of its contents for the purpose even of identification, unless a notice to produce has been duly served or unless the instrument is shewn to be in Court (3)

(c) When it appears or is proved that the adverse party has obtained possession of the original by fraud or force, as where after action brought, he has received it from a witness, in fraud of a subpœna duces tecum (4) In such cases in odium spoliatoris a notice to produce is not required to be given to him before admitting secondary evidence of the contents of the document of which he has improperly obtained possession (5)

(d) When the adverse party or his agent has the original in Court For the object of the notice is not, as was formerly thought, to give the opposite party an opportunity of providing the proper testimony to support or impeach the document, but merely to enable him to produce it, if he likes, at the trial, and thus to secure the best evidence of its contents (6)

(e) When the adverse party or his agent has admitted the loss of the document, for in such case the notice would be nugatory.(7) The loss must be admitted Under this exception, however, a party cannot call witnesses to prove the destruction of a document that has been traced into the hands of his opponent and then show its contents by secondary proof, unless he has first served a notice to produce, since (notwithstanding the evidence to the contrary), the document may still be in existence, or at any rate the opponent may dispute the facts of its having been destroyed (8)

(f) When the person in possession of the document is out of reach of, or not subject to, the process of the Court (9) On this point, sections 65 and 66 are not happily drafted Section 65 appears to require a notice to be given in this case, for the last paragraph of Clause (a) applies to everything that has gone before ; while the present Clause expressly enacts that notice is not necessary (10) Where a commission to take evidence is issued to any place beyond the jurisdiction of the Court issuing the commission, it is not necessary, in order to admit secondary evidence of the contents of a document, that the party tendering it should have given notice to produce the original, nor is it necessary for him to prove a refusal to produce the original (11)

(1) See Whitehead v Scott, 1 M & Rob, 2

(2) Dwarka Singh v Ramanund Upadhya, 41 A, 592, s c, 17 All L J, 711, see s 90, post.

(3) Taylor, Ev, § 452, and cases there cited

(4) Leeds v Cooks, 4 Esp, 256, Doe v Rise, Bing, 724

(5) Taylor, Ev, § 453

(6) Dwyer v Collins, 7 Ex, 639, ante, p 523, see Taylor, Ev, § 456

(7) Taylor, Ev § 455

(8) Doe v Morris, 3 A & E 46

(9) See Bishop Mellus v Vicar Apostolic, 2 M, 295, 301 (1879), Haranand Roy v Ram Gopal, 4 C W N, 429 (1899) s c, 27 C, 639 cited, ante

(10) See the argument in Ralli v. Gau Kim, 9 C 939 (1883)

(11) Ralli v Gau Kim, supra.

The Court may dispense with notice.

It will be observed that under this section, besides the specified cases in which notice is not required, the Court has the power of dispensing with the notice "in any case in which it thinks fit." This is a relaxation of the procedure in force in the English Courts.(1)

Proof of signature and handwriting of person alleged to have signed or written document produced

67. If a document is alleged to be signed or to have been written wholly or in part by any person, the signature or the handwriting of so much of the document as is alleged to be in that person's handwriting must be proved to be in his handwriting.

Principle.—The person who makes an allegation must prove it. Notes post

s 3 ("Document") s. 3 ("Proved") s 45 ("Expert evidence in handwriting.") s. 47 (Non-expert evidence as to handwriting.)
s 73 ("Comparison of handwriting.")

COMMENTARY.

Proof of signature and handwriting.

In addition to the question which arises as to the contents of a document dealt with in sections 61—66, the further question arises when a document ... hat which it purports to be; whether, ... The latter question is dealt with in ... dence will greatly depend upon the nature of the document. Proof of handwriting, signature and execution, must be given. Formalities attend or form part of such execution of either an universal or special nature. Signature is almost universal; for which sometimes, but more rarely, sealing is substituted. Sometimes both are used If a person cannot write and has no seal he generally makes a mark, and some other person writes his name. Attestation, as to which see sections 68—72, is sometimes an imperative formality. Whatever the document may be, it cannot be used in evidence until its genuineness has been either admitted or established by proof, which should be given before the document is accepted by the Court.(2) Although under this section no particular kind of proof is required for the purpose of establishing the fact of execution, it must nevertheless be shown to the satisfaction of the Court that the mark or signature denoting execution was actually fixed to the document by the person who professed to execute it A Court is not bound to treat the registration endorsement as conclusive proof of the fact of execution. If there are suspicious circumstances attending the execution of the document, such endorsement cannot be resorted to for the purpose of holding that the execution has been proved (3) The word "signing" means the writing of the name of a person so that it may convey a distinct idea to somebody else that what the writing indicates is a particular individual whose signature or sign it purports to be. A mark is a mere symbol, and does not convey any idea to the person who notices it—very often probably even to the person who made it (4) This section has not provided for the case of marks and seals, as to the proof of which, however, see ante. notes to section 47, and section 73, which assumes that seals are capable of proof. This section merely states with reference to documents what is the universal rule in all cases that the person who makes an allegation must prove it. It is in no way restrictive as to the kind of proof

(1) Cunningham, Ev, 218.
(2) Markby, Ev Act, 60
(3) Jagannath v Dhirajao, 5 O. L. J., 191; s. c, 46 I. C., 279.
(4) Nirmal Chunder v. Srimati Saratmani, 2 C. W. N., 642, 648 (1898); as to "signature" including a mark, see ante, notes to s 47, pp. 437–438.

which may be given: the proof may be by any of the recognized modes, as for instance, by statements admissible under section 32; and thus handwriting may be proved by circumstantial evidence.(1) In that respect the rule is precisely the same as it stood before. It leaves it, as before, entirely to the discretion of the presiding Judge of fact to determine what satisfies him that the document is a genuine one.(2) So in the undermentioned case(3), it appeared that the evidence which was given in support of the document upon which the defendant's case depended was that of a Cazi before whom the vendor came and admitted the deed to be his, and caused it to be registered, bringing witnesses to his execution thereof. Upon that evidence the lower Court came to the conclusion that the deed was proved, but it was contended in appeal that the present section rendered it necessary that direct evidence of the hand-writing of the person who was alleged to have executed the deed should have been given by some person who saw the signature affixed. But the Court, making the observations cited above, held, that it was not so expressly stated in this section, and that that was not the intention of the Legislature.(4) So also this Act does not require the writer of a document to be examined as a witness; nor does the present section require the subscribing witnesses to a document to be produced (5)

It has been stated(6) to be commonly the practice with Subordinate Judicial Officers, when taking the evidence required by this section, to record merely that the witness verified ('tasdik' kiya or some similar expression) the document without stating the exact nature of the evidence offered, or the statement made by the witness. In Ganga Persad v. Inderjit Singh(7) the Judicial Committee said:—"The Documentary evidence on which the defendant's case principally rested consisted of two documents and the endorsements of payment thereon, which purported to have been signed by the plaintiffs; because these, if really signed by them, were proof of settled accounts comprehending most of the disputed payments. In this country, or in any country where the administration of justice is conducted with any degree of formality and regularity, one would have expected to find that these documents had been put into the hands of the plaintiffs, and that they had been called upon to admit or deny their alleged signatures, and that the proof of these documents to be given by the defendants would have been far more specific than a mere statement that they were identified and verified, as the Judge says, by the witnesses, the witnesses would have been called upon to state whether they saw B S sign the first, or B S and J sign the second, or, if not, whether they could speak to the handwriting, and generally what took place on the two occa ns on which the accounts are vaguely said by one of the witnesses to have been adjusted."(8) As to the presumptions which exist in the case of documents thirty years old, see section 90, post.

Proof of execution

"'Executed' means completed. 'Execution' is, when applied to a document, the last act or series of acts which completes it. It might be defined as formal completion. Thus execution of deeds is the signing, sealing, and delivering of them in the presence of witnesses. Execution of a will includes attestation. In each class of instruments we have to consider when the instrument is formally complete"(9) Thus the contract on a negotiable instrument

(1) Abdulla Paru v. Ganmbai (1887), 11 B, 690, Barindra Kumar Ghose v. R (1909), 37 C, 91, and as to the methods of proof see section 47, ante

(2) Neel Kanto v. Jugobundho Ghose, 12 B L R., App 18 (1874) per Markby, J.

(3) Ib.

(4) Ib

(5) Abdool Ali v. Abdoor Rahman, 21 W R, 429 (1874), as to attesting witnesses, see s 68

(6) Field Ev, 6th Ed 233

(7) 23 W R, 390 (1875)

(8) 23 W R 390 (1875)

(9) Bhavanii Harbhum v. Devu Punja, 19 B 635, 638 (1894), per Farran, J.

is, until delivery, incomplete and revocable.(1) The execution of documents to the validity of which attestation is not necessary may be proved by the admissions of the party against whom the document is tendered, whether such admissions are of an evidentiary nature, or made for the purposes of the trial only In the case of attested documents, the admission of a party to such document of its execution by himself is sufficient proof of its execution as against him (section 70, post), whether such admission be evidentiary or made at the trial for the purpose of dispensing with proof. When there had been no admission as to the execution of a document which has been produced, it becomes necessary to prove the handwriting, signature, or execution thereof (2) As to the various methods of proving handwriting, see section 47, ante, and the Notes to that section. The English cases with regard to deeds and their sealing are not of much importance in this country where writings under seal or, as they are technically called, " deeds " are not generally required, and contracts under seal have no special privilege attached to them, being treated on the same footing as simple contracts. According to English law, where the signature of a deed has been proved and the attestation-clause is in the usual form, sealing(3) and delivery may be presumed ; so if signature and sealing are proved, delivery will be presumed (4) Where the seal of a corporation is not judicially noticed(5) it may be proved by anyone who knows it, no witnesses are required to the affixing of such seal, and attestation is not necessary unless the Article of Association otherwise provide. The presumption is that the seal has been properly affixed (6)

If the writing which is tendered in evidence is one which receives its character from being passed from one hand to another, the delivery, if necessary, must be proved. So until delivery a hundi is not clothed with the essential characteristics of a negotiable instrument.(7) No particular form of delivery is necessary.(8) Lastly, certain special rules exist as to the proof of execution of documents which are required by law to be attested (9) An attested document not required by law to be attested may be proved as if it was unattested.(10) In respect of the proof of plans, it is not a sufficient reason for admitting a plan in evidence, that a witness says it was prepared in his presence, unless the witness also says that to his own knowledge the plan is correct (11)

Proof of execution of document required by law to be attested.

68. If a document is required by law to be attested, it shall not be used as evidence until one attesting witness at least has been called for the purpose of proving its execution, if there be an attesting witness alive, and subject to the process of the Court and capable of giving evidence.

Proof where no attesting witness found.

69. If no such attesting witness can be found, or if the document purports to have been executed in the United Kingdom, it must be proved that the attestation of one attesting

(1) See foot note (9), page 527.

(2) See Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 488, 489; Taylor, Ev, § 972, et seq., § 149.

(3) See last Note.

(4) Taylor, Ev., § 149, Roscoe, N. P. Ev, 18th Ed, 137.

(5) v, s. 57, ante

(6) Moises v. Thornton, 8 T. R., 307, see as to this case Taylor, Ev, § 1852; as to the presumption of genuineness of certain seals see s 82, post and as to comparison of seals, s 73, post

(7) Bhawanji Harbhum v Devji Punja, 19 B, 638 (1894).

(8) Phipson, Ev (5th Ed, 492), and cases there cited; see as to the presumption in favour of the due execution of instruments, Taylor, Ev., §§ 148, 147; and as to Presumption of delivery, v. ante.

(9) Ss 68—71, post.

(10) S. 72, post.

(11) R. v. Jora Hasje, 11 Bom H C R. 242, 246 (1874).

witness at least is in his handwriting, and that the signature of the person executing the document is in the handwriting of that person.

70. The admission of a party to an attested document of its execution by himself shall be sufficient proof of its execution as against him, though it be a document required by law to be attested. Admission of execution by party to attested document.

71. If the attesting witness denies or does not recollect the execution of the document, its execution may be proved by other evidence. Proof when attesting witness denies the execution

72. An attested document not required by law to be attested may be proved as if it was unattested. Proof of document not required by law to be attested Principle.—Attestation of documents is a common formality, and in some cases is imperative. The object with which it is made or required is to afford proof of the genuineness of the document It is clear that the provi- [illegible]

by law as barriers against perjury and fraud must be strictly observed (1) On the other hand the fate of a document is not necessarily at the mercy of the attesting witnesses The mere fact that they repudiate their signatures or the like does not invalidate the document if it can be proved by evidence of a reliable character that they have given false testimony (2) Where, however, attestation is optional, a party is free to give such evidence as he pleases, the case not being one in which the law has required a particular form of proof. See Notes, post

s. 3 ("Document")	ss 45, 47, 67, 73 (Proof of handwriting)
s. 3 ("Evidence")	s 17 ("Admission")
s. 3 ("Court")	ss 89, 90 (Presumption of attestation.)
s 8 ("Proof")

Steph Dig, Arts, 66—69, Taylor, Ev, §§ 1839—1861, Act X of 1865, ss. 50, 331, Act XXI of 1870, s 2, Act IV of 1882, ss 59, 123, Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed, 492—496; Harris, Law of Identification in §§ 327—381

COMMENTARY.

Documents required by law to be attested

Section 68 is imperative.(3) There are but few documents which are required by law to be attested in India Wills made after the first day of January 1866, by persons other than Hindus, Muhammadans, or Buddhists(4), and Wills made by Hindus, Jainas, Sikhs and Buddhists, on or after the first day of [illegible] Lieutenat-Governor of Bengal, [illegible] relating to immovable property [illegible] In the case of wills, attestation

(1) Arjun Chandra Bhadra v Kailas Chandra Das, 36 C L J, 373 (1922)

(2) Mahraj Lal Behari v Anjuman-un-nissa, 5 O L J, 667, s c, 48 I C, 538

(3) Sudhanya Kumar Singha v Gour Chandra Pal, 35 C L J, 473

(4) Act X of 1865 (Indian Succession), ss 50, 331

(5) Act XXI of 1870 (Hindu Wills), s 2 As to whether strict affirmative proof of due attestation is absolutely necessary, see Sibo Sundari Debi v Hemangini Debi 4 C W N, 204 (1899). Cf Hindu Transfers and Bequests Acts (Madras Act I of 1914).

either of the execution or of the admission of execution by the testator is expressly made sufficient for the purpose.(1) So the signature of the Registrar at the foot of the registration endorsement embodying the admission of the executant has been held to be sufficient attestation within the meaning of section 50 of the Indian Succession Act.(2) But this does not, however, hold good in the case of mortgages.(3) A mortgage, the principal money secured by which is 100 rupees or upwards, can be effected only by a registered instrument signed by the mortgagor and attested by at least two witnesses. Where the principal money is less than 100 rupees, a mortgage may be effected either by an instrument signed and attested as aforesaid, or (except in the case of a simple mortgage) by delivery of the property.(4) The attestation here contemplated, is attestation of the act of signing by the executant and cannot, in the absence of any express provision to that effect, be taken to include the attestation of the executant's admission of having signed the document.(5) Therefore, the requirements of section 59 of the Transfer of Property Act are not satisfied when a mortgage-bond is signed by the mortgagor attested by one witness and contains the Sub-Registrar's signature to the endorsement, recording the admission of the execution by the executant (6) The Madras High Court held in one case that a mortgage for more than 100 rupees which has been prepared and accepted, but which is not attested, is invalid; and that it cannot be used [illegible]

[illegible] though a document purporting to hypothecate immovable property was not registered and attested, a personal decree could be passed on it, inasmuch as it was evidence of a money-debt(8) And the Full Bench of the Madras High Court held that a document which purports to be a mortgage but is not one owing to the lack of the attestation required by section 59 of the Transfer of Property Act, is not a document which requires attestation within the meaning of the present section; and so (whether it is registered or unregistered) is admissible to prove the personal cove[illegible] does not require attestation (9) But in a more [illegible] by the Privy Council)(10) and in a F[illegible] Court(11) it has been held that a document which purports to be a mortgage

(1) Act X of 1865, s. 50; Girindra Nath v Bejoy Gopal, 26 C, 246, 248, 249 (1898)

(2) Nitya Gopal v Nagendra Nath, 11 C., 429 (1885); Horendra Narain v. Chandra Kanta, 16 C., 19 (1888); Girindra Nath v. Bejoy Gopal, supra; Tofaluddi Peada v. Mahar Ali, 26 C, 78, 80 (1898).

(3) See last two cases cited and post

(4) Act IV of 1882 (Transfer of Property), s. 59.

(5) Tofaluddi Peada v. Mahar Ali, 26 C, 78 (1898); Girindra Nath v. Bejoy Gopal, 26 C., 246 (1898); Abdul Karim v. Salimun, 27 C., 190 (1899); Sasi Bhusan Pal v. Chandra Peshkar, 33 C., 1864; and Dinamoyce Debi v. Bon Behari Kapur, 7 C W. N., 160; Ranu v. Laxmanrao, 33 B., 44 (1908); Badri Prasad v. Abdul Karim 35 A., 254 (1913), Shamu Patter v. Abdul Kadir Ravuthan, P. C, 35 M., 607 (1912); 39 I. A., 218, Collector of Mirzapur v. Bhagwan Prasad, F. B., 35 A., 164 (1913).

(6) Tofaluddi Peada v. Mahar Ali (supra).

(7) Madras Deposit Society v Oonnamalai Ammal, 18 M, 29 (1894), overruled v. post, N. 9.

(8) Sonatun Shaha v Dino Nath 25 C., 222 (1898); s. c., 2 C. W N., cccxxv, 3 C. W. N, 228; Tofaluddi Peada v. Mahar Ali, 26 C, 78 (1898).

(9) Pulaka Veetil Muthalakulangara Kunhu Moidu v. Thiruthipalli Madhava Menon (F. B.), A. C. (1908), 32 M., 410, over-ruling Madras Deposit Society v Oonnamalai Ammal (1894), 18 M., 29; and following Sadakaraur v. Tadepally Basaviah (1907), 30 M, 284.

(10) Shamu Patter v. Abdul Kadir Ravathan, P. C., 35 M, 607 (1912), Samu Patter v. Abdul Sammad Sahib (1908), 31 M., 337, following Royzuddi Sheikh v. Kali Nath Mookerjee, 33 C., 985, and [illegible] Narayan v. Lakshmandas, 7 B., 931 but is invalid as one for want of due attestation under section 59 of the Transfer of Property Act cannot operate as a mortgage or to create a charge on immovable property within the meaning of section 100 of that Act. A gift of immovable property can only be effected by a registered instrument signed by or on behalf of the donor, and attested by at least two witnesses (1)

(11) Collector of Mirzapur v Bhagwan Prasad, F. B, 35 A., 164 (1913).

"'To attest' is to bear witness to a fact Take a common example, a notary public attests a protest; he bears witness, not to the statements in that protest, but to the fact of the making of those statements; so I conceive, the witnesses in a will bear witness to all that the Statute requires attesting witnesses to attest, namely, that the signature was made or acknowledged in their presence."(2) To 'attest' an instrument is not merely to subscribe one's name to it as having been present at its execution, but includes also, essentially, the being in fact present at its execution.(3) In the case of a purdanashin, witnesses who are separated from her by a chick and recognize her by her voice without seeing her face are present at her execution of a document.(4) The ordinary sense of the expression "attestation by witnesses" is attestation by witnesses of the execution of the document, not of the admission of execution (5) The term "attesting witness" in this section has the same meaning as "attesting witness" under section 59 of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882) (6) "Attesting witness" means a witness who has seen the deed executed and who signs it as a witness(7), but in another view the term includes a scribe who has in fact witnessed the execution (8) When a document is produced and tendered as evidence, the first point for consideration is whether it is one which the law requires to be attested. There are many such documents in England In India they are comparatively few The above sections contain the rules relative to the admission in evidence of attested documents. Sections 68—71 apply only to documents required by law to be attested Their general object is to give effect to the law relating to the attestation of documents, which is itself enacted for the purpose of ensuring the genuineness of certain documents in respect of which claims are made. An attested document not required by law to be attested may be proved as if it was unattested (9) For a long time it was held that when a document was attested, even though the law did not require attestation, one at least of the attesting witnesses should be produced But as this worked great hardship on suitors, the Common Law Procedure Act of 1854(10) in England, and the Indian Evidence Act of 1855(11) whose provisions on this point are produced in section 72, (ante) introduced the present more reasonable practice In respect of the persons who may be attesting witnesses, it has been held that a Attestation.

---

(1) Act IV of 1882 (Transfer of Property), s 123 Baijnath Singh v Mt Biraj Koer, 2 Pat, 52, ref to Shamu Patter, supra As to the special rules relating to proof of attested documents under the Merchant Shipping Act see 17 & 18 Vic, c 104, s 526

(2) Hudson v Parker, 1 Robert, 26

(3) Stroud's Judicial Dictionary, 146, 147, Roberts v Phillips, 4 E & B, 450, Bryan v White, 2 Robert, 315, Sharp v Birch, 8 Q B D, 111 [cited in Girindra Nath v Bejoy Gopal, 26 C, 246, 248 (1898), post, Doe d Spilsbury v Burdett, 4 A & E, 1, 9 A & E, 936, 1 P & D, 670, Freshfield v Reed, 9 M & W, 404, Ranu v Laxmanrao (1908), 33 B, 44, Badri Prosad v Abdul Karim, 35 A, 254 (1913)

(4) Padarath Halwai v Ram Nain, P C, 37 A, 474 (1914), 42 I A, 163, Rukmini Koeri v Nilmony Bandapadhyaya, 19 C W N, 1309 (1915)

(5) Girindra Nath v Bejoy Gopal, 26 C, 246, 248 (1898), followed in Abdul Karim v Salimun, 27 C, 190 (1899), and see Baijnath Singh v Mt Biraj Koer, 2 Pat, 52

(6) Jagannath Khan v Bajrang Das, 48 C, 61 (1921)

(7) Dalichand Shibram v Lotu Sakharam, 44 B, 405

(8) v post

(9) S 72 ante, see Dastary Mahanto v Jugabundhoo, 23 W. R, 293, 295 (1875)

(10) 17 & 18 Vic, c. 125 s 26 and see 28 & 29 Vic., c. 18, ss 1, 7 (criminal cases)

(11) S. 37.

party to a deed is not a competent witness to attest it(1), and in the case of a Will, it will not be considered as insufficiently attested by reason of any benefit thereby given, either by way of a bequest or by way of appointment to any person attesting it, or to his or her wife or husband ; but the bequest or appointment will be void so far as concerns the person so attesting, or the wife or husband of such person, or any person claiming under either of them. A legatee, however, under a Will does not lose his legacy by attesting a codicil which confirms the Will (2) It has been held by the Allahabad High Court that a deed may be legally proved by the evidence of the scribe thereof who has signed his name, but not explicitly as an attesting witness on the margin, and has been present when the deed was executed.(3) But in a later case in that High Court it has been held that to be an 'attesting witness' within the meaning of this section, the witness must have seen the document executed and must have signed it as a witness and that the scribe of a mortgage-deed cannot be reckoned as an attesting witness merely because he has signed the deed, even though the deed may have been executed in his presence.(4) More recently the Calcutta High Court has held that a person who is present and witnesses the execution of a mortgage bond and whose name appears on the document, though he is therein described merely as the writer of the deed is a competent witness to prove the execution of a mortgage bond.(5) The Madras High Court formerly held that a document which is required by law to be attested, but which is unattested, is inadmissible in evidence for any purpose.(6) But the Calcutta High Court has dissented from this view, holding that though a document may be invalid and inadmissible in so far as it purports to operate for a purpose for which attestation is required, it may be admissible for other purposes.(7) And this view has now been rejected by a Full Bench decision of the Madras High Court.(8) More recently the Calcutta High Court has held that section 68 does not permit the use of the attested instrument for any purpose whatever unless and until it is proved in strict accordance with the provisions of the section. Only one exception is made to this rule by section 70. Section 68 is imperative. It is not only applicable to cases where the attested instrument is the ground of action but to cases where it is used in evidence for collateral purposes. The absence of objection is immaterial (9) But in a case in the Allahabad High Court a duly registered mortgage deed was sued on, but owing to the failure

---

(1) Seal v Claridge, 7 Q B D, 517, referred to in Penwarden v Roberts, 9 Ch D, 137.

(2) Act X of 1865 (Indian Succession) s. 54, and see further, Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 493, as to the signature, of the directors and secretary of a company

(3) Radha Kishen v Fateh Ali, 20 A, 532 (1898). See Krishna Jiva Tewari v Bishnath Kalwar, 34 A, 612 (1912), proof of handwriting of deceased scribe who had signed for two witnesses and himself.

(4) Badri Prasad v Abdul Karim, 35 A, 254 (1913), following Ranu v. Laxmanrao, 33 B, 44 (1908); Shamu Patter v. Abdul Kadir Ravuthan, P. C., 35 M., 607 (1912) (attestation under Section 59 of Transfer of Property Act) and Burdett v Spilsbury, 10 C. & F., 340 (1843) distinguishing Radha Kishen v. Fateh Ali Khan (supra) and Muhammad Ali v. Jafar Khan, W. N., 146 (1897), and discussing Raj Narain Ghosh v. Abdur Rahim, 5 C. W. N, 454 (1901), Dinamoyee Debi v. Bon Behari Kapur, 7 C. W. N., 160 (1902); Dali Chand Shibram v Lalu Sakharam, 44 B, 405 See as to these cases Jagannath Khan v Bajrang Das Agarwalla, 48 C., 61 (1921)

(5) Jagannath Khan v. Bajrang Das Agarwalla, 48 C, 61 (1921), foll Raj narain Ghosh v. Abdul Rahim, 5 C W N, 454 (1901); Dinamoyee Debi v. Bon Behari Kapur, 7 C. W. N, 160 (1902), dist. Shamu Patter v. Abdul Kader Ravuthan, 35 Mad, 607 (1912), and diss. from Badri Prasad v. Abdul Karim, 35 A, 254 (1913). Ram Bahadur Singh v. Ajodhya Singh 2? C W. N, 699 (1916). See Nageshwar Prasad v Bachu Singh, 4 P. L. J., 511

(6) Madras Deposit Society v. Oomamalai Ammal, 18 M, 29 (1894)

(7) Sonatun Shaha v Din Nath, 26 C., 222 (1898), s c, 3 C. W. N, 228

(8) Pulaka Veetil Muthalakulangara Kunhu Moidu v. Thiruthipalli Madha[illegible] Menon, F. B. (1908), 32 M, 410

(9) Sudhanya Kumar Singha v Gour Chandra Pal, 35 C. L. J. 473.

of the plaintiff to examine the attestor, the document was rejected as inadmissible in evidence: Held, that it was admissible for the purpose of interpreting the rights and obligations of parties even though as an independent legal document it was itself inadmissible. It was held that by the terms of section 68 when its provisions are not complied with a document cannot be used as evidence at all as a document either requiring attestation or in fact attested; but this does not prevent it from being used in evidence as something else or for any other purpose. Section 68 is subject to the limitation viz., that if the document were produced in some other proceeding for the purpose of proving the handwriting of the scribe, it could not be objected to on the ground that no attesting witness being called to prove it, it could not be used in evidence at all.(1)

The rules with regar[d] to the attestation of documents may be thus summarised

(a) An attested document not required by law to be attested may be proved as if it was unattested.(2) The words "required by law" apply to documents of which attestation is required by some Act (3)

(b) The Court shall presume that every document called for and not produced was attested in the manner required by law (4) The Court in such a case shall presume, that is, it shall regard attestation as proved unless and until it is disproved. And the person so refusing to produce, if he be a party to the suit, cannot rebut this presumption by subsequent production of the document (5)

(c) There is a presumption of due attestation in the case of documents thirty years old The Court may in such cases dispense with proof of attestation (6)

(d) Where a document is required by law to be attested, and there is an attesting witness available, at least one attesting witness must be called (7) When the original document is in the possession of another and not forthcoming after notice to produce, and secondary evidence is given of its contents, the Court shall, as has been already observed(8), presume that the document was duly attested. It is not, however, clear from the section whether the attesting witness, when producible, must be called if the original document itself is not forthcoming (by reason of loss or the like) and is therefore not itself "used as evidence," but secondary evidence is offered of its contents under section 95, ante (9) The English rule requiring the production of the attesting witnesses, provided their names be known, holds although the document is lost or destroyed (10) And the same rule would seem to apply under this Act, since a document is "used as evidence," whether the mode of proof by which it is brought before the Court is primary or secondary only. Where one of the witnesses who have attested a mortgage-bond is available, the execution of such bond cannot under section 68 be proved otherwise than by the evidence of such witness, even when the object of proving such execution has reference only to a personal covenant to pay which is severable from the security created by the bond (11) A witness must be available, that is, the production of the witness must not be legally or physically impossible Thus if all the witnesses be proved

(1) Moti Chand v Lalta Prasad, 40 A., 256, s c, 44 I C., 596

(2) S 72, ante, corresponding with s 37 of the Repealed Act II of 1855 and with s 26 of the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854

(3) Field, Ev, 6th Ed., 237, as to the document of which attestation is necessary, v. ante

(4) S 89, post, the rule is, therefore, not limited to the case of possession by the adverse party—see Taylor, Ev., § 1847.

(5) S 164, post

(6) S 90, post

(7) S 68, ante

(8) S 89, post

(9) Field, Ev, 6th Ed., 237.

(10) Gillies v Smithers, 2 Stark, R., 528, Keeling v Ball, Peake, Add Cas, 88, Taylor, Ev, § 1843, or the case in which the names are unknown, v. post to be out of the jurisdiction of the Court, or dead, or incapable of giving evidence as if they be insane(1), the next following rule will be applicable.

(11) Veerappa Kavundan v Ramasami Kavundan (1907), 30 M., 251.

(e) If there be no attesting witness available, or if the document purports to be executed in the United Kingdom, the attestation of at least one attesting witness and the signature of the person executing the deed must be proved by other evidence to be in their handwriting.(2)

This rule will apply when the document purports to have been executed in the United Kingdom, or the witnesses are dead, insane or out of the jurisdiction, or when they cannot be found after diligent enquiry, or have absented themselves by collusion with the opposite party.(3) The degree of diligence required in seeking for the attesting witnesses to a document, the attestation of which is required to be proved by an attesting witness, is the same as in the search for a lost paper. The principle is in both cases identical.(4) If an instrument be necessarily attested by more than one witness, the absence of them all must be duly accounted for in order to let in secondary evidence of the execution.(5) In a case in the Allahabad High Court where the mortgagor ... of that his signature ... handwriting raised ... f unless this was rebutted (6) And in another case in the same Court where a mortgage-deed purported to be attested by several witnesses and the mortgagee called one who gave evidence that he had seen the mortgagor sign, and had signed himself, it was held that in the absence of question on this point or rebutting evidence the execution of the mortgage-deed was sufficiently proved (7) As to proof of handwriting, see sections 45, 47, 67, ante, and section 73, post. Section 69 might seem to imply that the attestation of the attesting witness must be in his own hand-writing, which implication assumes that the witness knows how to write. As a matter of fact, however, the greater number of attesting witnesses in India are marksmen.(8) The Act further contains no definition of the term "signature." But having regard to the definition of the word given in the General Clauses Acts of 1887 and 1897(9), Registration Act(10), and the ... general policy of our law(12), the term in ... the case last cited it was argued that as ... was a marksman, the bond in suit was not legally established as required by section 59 of the Transfer of Property Act and by section 68 of this Act which, read with section 69, shows that an attesting witness must be one who can sign his name. It was, however, held

(1) Taylor, Ev., § 1851; with respect to capability of giving evidence, it has been held in England that the attesting witness must be called, though subsequently to the execution of the deed he has become blind and that the Court will not dispense with his presence on account of illness, however severe; ib, § 1843-a; but both of these decisions have been doubted or reluctantly followed, and it is submitted that under this Act in both of these cases the witness would be incapable of giving evidence under the terms of the section

(2) S 69, ante; see Taylor, Ev., § 1851.

(3) Taylor, Ev., § 1851.

(4) Ib, § 1855 and cases there cited; v. ante, s. 65.

(5) Ib, § 1856; Cunliffe v. Sefton, 2 East, 183; Bright v Doe d Tatham, A. and E., 22; Whitelock v. Musgrove, 1 C. and M, 511

(6) Uttam Singh v. Hukam Singh, 39 A, 112 (1917); see Wright v. Sanderson, 9 P. D, 149 (1884)

(7) Shib Dayal v Sheo Gulam, 39 A., 241 (1917), and see Ram Dei v. Munna Lal, 39 A, 109 (1917).

(8) Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 236; the attesting witnesses to a will must affix their signatures and not merely their marks. Nitye Gopal v. Nogendra Nath, 11 C., 229 (1885); Fernandes v. Alves, 3 B., 382 (1879); and see Bissonath Binda v Dayaram Jana, 5 C., 738 (1880); but see Amayee v. Yolumalai, 15 M., 261, 663 (1891).

(9) Act I of 1887, s 3, cl 12; Act X of 1897, s 3 cl. 52.

(10) Act XVI of 1908, s 3

(11) Act V of 1908, s. 2, 2nd Ed., p 32, and see Act X of 1865 (Indian Succession), s 50.

(12) Pran Krishna v. Jadu Nath, 2 C. W. N., 603, 605 (1898).

that this contention was not correct; that "
that a marksman cannot be an attesting wi 59 of the Transfer of Property Act and sec to the general policy of our law a signature no reason why the case of a mortgage-deed should form an exception. It was further argued that marksmen in this country often only touch the pen, and even the mark, generally a cross, is not made by them, but is made by the writer of the deed But it was held that in this case no question arose as to whether a mark made by a person other than the witness can be sufficient, the mark being shown to have been made by the witness himself.(1) In a case in the Allahabad High Court where a mortgage-deed purported to have been executed by three illiterate mortgagors (marksmen), and attested by more than two witnesses, and all the mortgagors and witnesses were dead, a later deed of usufructuary mortgage, executed by one of these mortgagors and by representatives of the other two and recognizing the genuineness of the said mortgage, was tendered (inter alia) in proof of its execution, and it was contended that this section 69 does not forbid indirect evidence and should be supplemented by the English rules, but it was held that this section reproduces part only of the English Law in this subject and does not permit a party to rely on presumption or other evidence if he is unable to comply with its provisions (2)

(f) The admission of a party to the document will, so far as such party is concerned(3), supersede the necessity either of calling the attesting witnesses or of rule, deed dmisfrom
the admission mentioned in section 22, ante, and from that mentioned in section 65, clause (b), ante, which relate to the contents or to the existence, condition or contents of a document Section 70 relates only to the admission of a party in the course of proceedings in which the document is produced, made (for instance) in the pleadings or by the party in his examination (6) It does not include evidential admissions made before, and sought to be proved by witnesses in a suit (7) The certificate of admission of execution endorsed by a registering officer cannot be used as an admission of registration under this section (8)

The view here taken that the admission of a party (at any rate during the course of the trial) will dispense with the necessity of calling the attesting witnesses appears to be at variance with the undermentioned case(9), in which it was held that the only effect of section 70 is to make the admission of the

(1) Ib, as to proof of marks, v Index

(2) Gobardhan Das v Hori Lal, 35 A, 364 (1913)

(3) As against other parties the document must be proved in accordance with s 68 Nibaran Chandra Sen v. Ram Chandra Sen, 22 C W N, 444; s c, 44 I A, 984, so also execution must be proved against a minor Nageshwar Prasad v Bachu Singh, 4 Pat L J., 511.

(4) S 70, ante, which is the same as s 38, Act II of 1855.

(5) Taylor, Ev, § 1843

(6) Raj Mangal Misra v Muthura Dobain, 38 A, 1 (1916) But see Nageshwar Prasad v Bachu Singh, 4 Pat L J., 511

(7) Abdul Karim v Salimun, 27 C, 190 (1899), this case, though in some respects distinguishable, appears in substance to be at variance with the decision in Priyanath Chatterjee v Bissessur Dass, 1 C W. N, ccxxii, in which it was held that the admission of execution of a mortgage in the recitals of subsequent further charges rendered the calling of an attesting witness to the mortgage unnecessary, the further charges having been proved in the usual way by the evidence of attesting witnesses And see Nageshwar Prasad v Bachu Singh, 4 Pat L J, 511

(8) Ib

(9) Jogendra Nath v Nitae Churn, 7 C W N 384 (1903) Ref to in Arjun Chandra Bhadra v Kailas Chandra Das, 36 C L J, 373 (1922), but see Asharfi Lal v Nanhi, 19 A L J, 855 (1921), post.

executant sufficient proof of execution and that the section is not sufficient to dispense with the necessity of proof of attestation to make a mortgage valid under section 59 of the Transfer of Property Act. It seems to have been assumed in Abdul Karim v. Salimu [illegible] that provided the admission was [illegible] have the effect here submitted. [illegible] attested documents If the admission of the executant has not the effect of dispensing with proof of attestation, there was no necessity for the section at all, as recourse may be had to the general provisions of the Act relating to admissions if the admission of execution is to be used only in the sense of an admission of signing only. Attestation is only a form of solemn proof required in certain contested cases by special Legislative Enactment, and it is difficult to understand why witnesses should be called to prove a document against a party who formally admits that it is a valid document as against him It is, therefore, respectfully submitted that this decision, if it has the effect here attributed to it, is erroneous. The observation, moreover, was obiter, as in the case it was found that there was proof of attestation independent of the admission It has more recently been held that section 70 was intended to dispense with the calling of attesting witnesses and with formally proving execution in a case where the party admitted it. Therefore where in the pleadings there was admission of execution of an attested document but the Lower Appellate Court found as a fact that none of the attesting witnesses had seen the executants put their signatures on the deed and therefore deemed it not proved, its decision was reversed on appeal.(2) It has been held that execution of a document means something more than mere signing by the party and includes delivery and signing in the presence of witnesses where witnesses are necessary. Admission in section 70 means admission of a party to a document which is on the face of it an attested document. No admission is effectual under this section unless it amounts to an acknowledgment of the formal validity of the instrument. Where the admission of execution is unqualified it may well be equivalent to an admission of due execution or a waiver of proof of due execution within the meaning of section 70 (3) When however the admission of signature by the defendant is coupled with an express denial that the document was signed in the presence of the attesting witness the plaintiff must at least call one attesting witness. Such an admission is not sufficient proof of the instrument.(4) In a case in the Calcutta High Court where one defendant, a sole mortgagor, admitted a mortgage but pleaded satisfaction, and the other defendants, who were subsequent purchasers, impeached the mortgage as fraudulent, it was held that the effect of this section (70) is merely to supersede the necessity of evidence so far as the party admitting is concerned and that therefore it does not dispense with the necessity of complying with the provisions of these sections as against other parties.(5)

(1) 27 C., 190.

(2) Asharfi Lal v. Nanhi, 44 A., 127; s. c., 19 A. L. J., 855 (1921); and see Srimati Kabiyan Bibi v. Krishna Das Maity, 20 C. W. N., xlviii, where one attesting witness was examined by the defendant In Jagganath v. Ravji, 47 B., 137; s. c., 24 Bom. L. R., 1296, it was held that the plaintiff was not put to proof of attestation, dist. Dalichand v. Lotu, 44 B., 405.

(3) Per Richardson J. in Arjun Chandra Bhadra v. Kailas Chandra Das, 36 C. L. J., 373 (1922) and per Suhrawardy J. "execution is used in the sense of due execution or execution in the way in which a particular document is required to be executed." In Jagganath v. Ravji, 47 B., 137, Crump, J., held that where a party admits execution he does not necessarily admit attestation.

(4) Arjun Chandra Bhadra v. Kailas Chandra Das, 36 C. L. J., 373 (1922), referring to Jogendra Nath Mukhyopadhyaya v. Nitai Churn Bandopadhyaya, 7 C. W. N., 384 (1903); Satish Chandra Mitra v. Jogendro Nath Mahalanabis, supra and Nibaran Chandra Sen v. Ram Chandra, 22 C. W. N., 444 (1917).

(5) Satish Chandra Mitra v. Jogendranath Mahalanabis, 44 C., 345 (1917), per Woodroffe, J., distinguishing Jogendra Nath v. Nitai Churn (supra).

(g) If the attesting witness denies or does not recollect the execution of the document, its execution may be proved by other evidence. In such case it is the not clear whether other evidence can be given to prove it, if there be another attesting witness alive, subject to the process of the Court and capable of giving evidence, who is not produced (2) In proving the execution of a document the attesting witness frequently states that he does not recollect the fact of the deed being executed in his presence, but that, seeing his own signature to it, he has no doubt that he saw it executed; this has always been received as sufficient proof of the execution.(3) Where one of the attesting witnesses to a mortgage bond was dead at the time of the suit and the other stated that he had attached his signature to the document without knowing what it was and without witnessing its execution, held that the plaintiff was entitled under section 71 to succeed on the bond on proof of its due execution.(4) A statement of the attesting witnesses to a mortgage deed that they signed the blank paper and not the completed deed is sufficient to attract the operation of section 71 and entitles the mortgagee to prove execution by evidence other than that of the attesting witnesses (5)As to the presumptions which may exist relative to this section, see section 114, post.

Comparison of signature, writing or seal, with others admitted or proved

73. In order to ascertain whether a signature, writing or seal is that of the person by whom it purports to have been written or made, any signature, writing or seal admitted or proved to the satisfaction of the Court to have been written or made by that person, may be compared(6) with the one which is to be proved, although that signature, writing or seal, has not been produced or proved for any other purpose.

The Court may direct any person present in Court to write any words or figures for the purpose of enabling the Court to compare the words or figures so written with any words or figures alleged to have been written by such person.

This section applies also, with any necessary modifications, to finger-impressions.

Principle—Facts which are not otherwise relevant to the issue are admissible when they can be shown to be for the particular purpose in hand identical with some relevant fact (8) It is on a similar principle that documents not

(1) See Talbot v Hodson, 7 Taunt, 251, Bowman v Hodson, L R, 1 P and M, 362, Wright v Rogers, id, 678, the same rule applies where the instrument is lost and the names of the witnesses are unknown, Keeling v Ball, Peake, App Cas, 88

(2) Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 236

(3) Roscoe, N P Ev, 135, and cases there cited

(4) Lakshman Sahu v Gokul Maharana 1 Pat, 154 (1922).

(5) Dinabandhu Patra v Sanatan Dandapat, 48 I C, 624

(6) "By comparison of handwriting is meant the examination of writings brought at the time into juxtaposition" Lawson's Expert and Opinion Evidence, 323, in order by such comparison to ascertain whether both were written by the same person, Starkie, Ev, Part IV 654 As to evidence of experts and method of proving handwriting, Sarojini Dasi v Hari Das Ghose, 49 C, 235 (1922)

(7) The words in brackets were added by s 3, Act V of 1899 see s 45, ante

(8) Wills, Ev, 47, thus where the issue was as to the line of boundary of a particular estate evidence having been given that the estate was conterminous with a certain hamlet, evidence was admitted to prove the boundary of the hamlet, Thomas v Jenkins, 6 A and E, 525.

otherwise relevant to the issue are admissible for the purpose of comparison of handwritings when proved to be in the handwriting of the party whose signature is in question.(1) And see Note, post.

s 3 ("Proved") ss. 45, 46, 67 (Proof of handwriting.)
s 3 ("Court")

Steph. Dig, Art. 52; Taylor, Ev., §§ 1869—1874; Wharton, Ev., §§ 711—719; Roscoe, N. P. Ev, 138—142; Rogers' Expert Testimony, §§ 130—144; Lawson's Expert and Opinion Evidence, 323—416; Harris, Law of Identification, 266—332.

COMMENTARY.

"Purports" The word "purports" in this section does not limit the scope of the section to such documents only as are signed or contain some intrinsic statements of the identity of the writer. Any document alleged by a party to be in the handwriting of a particular person may for the purpose of proof be compared with another writing or signature admitted or proved to the satisfaction of the Court to have been made or written by that person.(2)

Comparison of hands In addition to the modes of proving handwriting which have already been dealt with by section 47 and 45, ante, there remains direct comparison of the disputed document with one proved or admitted to be genuine under this section(3), which is in general accordance with the present English law(4) upon the subject as amended by Acts of the years 1854 and 1865 Although all proof of handwriting, except when the witness either wrote the document himself, or saw it written, is in its nature comparison(5), it being the belief which a witness entertains upon comparing the writing in question with an exemplar formed in his mind from some previous knowledge, yet the English law until the first of the abovementioned dates, did not allow the witness or even the jury, except under certain special circumstances, actually to compare two writings with each other, in order to ascertain whether both were written by the same person. But the English rule is now otherwise (6) By the terms of the section, any writing, the genuineness of which is admitted or proved(7) to the satisfaction of the Court, may be used for the purposes of comparison, although it may not be relevant or admissible in evidence for any other purpose in the cause.(8) In applying this section, it is important to note its terms which do not sanction the comparison of any two documents but require that the signature, writing or seal which is to be proved must purport to be by the

(1) Wills, Ev., 2nd Ed, 65.

(2) Veeraraghava Aiyangar v. Souri Aiyangar, 35 M. L. J., 608; s c, 48 I. C., 68

(3) The section differs in its terms from the corresponding section (48) of the repealed Act II of 1855 which was as follows —"On an inquiry whether a signature, writing or seal is genuine, any undisputed signature, writing or seal of the party whose signature, writing or seal is under dispute may be compared with the disputed one, though such signature, writing or seal be on an instrument which is not evidence in the cause" As to s 48 of Act II of 1855, see R. v Amanoolah Mollah, 6 W. R., Cr., 5 (1866)

(4) See 28 & 29 Vic, c. 18, ss 1, 8; Taylor, Ev, §§ 1869—1874.

(5) See p 437, ante

(6) Taylor, Ev., § 1869; Lawson, op. cit, 324

(7) See Sreemutty Phoodee v. Gobind Chunder, 22 W. R, 272 (1874); R v. Kartick Chunder, 5 R. C & C. R, Crim Rul, 58, 62 (1868); R v. Amanoolah Moollah, 6 W. R., Cr, 5 (1866), Purna Chunder v. Grish Chunder, 9 W. R., Cr. R., 450 (1868). In Tara Prasad v. Lukhee Narain, 21 W. R, 6 (1873), certain ryots swore that they got their pottahs from the hands of the persons who purported to sign them, this was held to be sufficient proof under this section that the signatures were those of the lessor.

(8) See Birch v. Ridgway, 1 Fost. & Fin, 270; Cresswell v. Jackson, 2 Fost. & Fin, 24; Brookes v. Tichborne, 5 Ex. 929; it makes no difference what the writing is which is proved for purposes of comparison; it may be a love letter or it may be a testament, Wharton, Ev. § 711.

person in question, that is, must itself state or indicate that fact.(1) The comparison can be made either by witnesses or by expert witnesses skilled in decipheri intervention of any witnesses at all, by the of there being no jury, by the Court (5) I of a handwriting expert is only admissible under section 45 when the writing with which the comparison is to be made has been admitted or proved to be the writing of the person alleged and when the comparison is made in open Court and in the presence of such person.(6) The genuineness of ancient documents, i e., more than 30 years old, may be proved by comparison with other ancient documents which have been shown to have come from proper custody and to have been uniformly treated as genuine (7) The witness should generally have before him in Court the writings compared It has, however, been held in America that where the loss of the original writing has been signature of the same person on papers already in the case (8) The original and not the copy is what the Court must act upon Copies of any kind, whether photographic or otherwise, are merely secondary evidence and cannot be used as equivalent to primary evidence. But when the use of photographic copies is not objectionable, as being an attempt improperly to use secondary evidence as equivalent to primary the writing in dispute and of admit have been received in evidence, con ven that the copies were accurate in all respects except as to size and colouring. (9) The party whose writing is in dispute may also be required to write, for purpose of comparison in the Judge's presence, and such writing will then itself be admissible (10) Though this provision is useful, yet the comparison will often be less satisfactory, as a person may feign or alter the ordinary character of his handwriting with the very view of defeating a comparison (11) It is, moreover

---

(1) Barindra Kumar Ghose v R (1909), 37, C, 91

(2) S 47, ante, the witness need not be a professional expert or a person whose skill in the comparison of handwritings has been gained in the way of his profession or business, such a question is one of weight only R v Silverlock (1894), 2 Q B, 766 As to the opinions of native Judges on native writing see Rajendra Nath v Jogendra Nath, 7 B L R, 216, 233 (1871)

(3) S 45, ante

(4) See Cobbett v Kilminster, 4 Fost & Fin, 490, and observations as to comparison by a jury in R v Harvey, 11 Cox, 546, 548

(5) Taylor, Ev, 1870

(6) Suresh Chandra Sanyal v. R (1912), 39 C, 606 and v Debendra Nath Sen v Abdul Samed Seraji (1909), 10 C L J, 150, Doe v Vickers, 4 Ad & E, 782, Doe v Stone, 3 C B, 176

(7) Taylor, Ev, § 1873—1874

(8) Rogers's Expert Testimony, § 139

(9) Ib, § 140 In Haynes v McDermott, 82 N Y, 41, the New York Court said "We may recognise that the photographic process is ruled by general laws that are uniform in their operation and that almost without exception a likeness is brought forth of the object set before the camera Still somewhat for exact likeness will depend upon the adjustment of the machinery, upon the atmospheric conditions and the skill of the manipulator, etc" Other circumstances were mentioned in a preceding case (Taylor Will case, 10 Abr Pr N S 300) such as the correctness of the lens, the state of the weather, the skill of the operator, the colour of the impression, the purity of the chemicals, accuracy of forming the angle at which the original was inclined to the sensitive plate, the possible fraud of the operator, etc

(10) See second clause of section and Cobbett v Kilminster, supra, Doe d Devine v Wilson, 10 Moo P C R, 502, 530, Rogers, op cit, § 142 In America it has been held that a party cannot be compelled in cross-examination to write his name, ib, and the section says "the Court may direct"

(11) Norton, Ev, 256, see observations of the Privy Council in Jaswant Singh v Sheo Narain 16 A, 157, 161 (1893), s c., 21 I A, 5, 8 to be observed with regard to documents not written in Court that many men are capable of writing in several differe object they have in view is to relieve easier than to produce to the Court gen for the express purpose of proving that no similitude exists between them and the writing in dispute (1) A comparison of writings, therefore, for these and other reasons is a mode of ascertaining the truth which ought to be used with very great caution(2), especially if no skilled witness has been called to make the comparison (3) So with regard to seals it has been judicially observed that "at the best, the test of comparison between the impression of one Native seal and another is but a fallible one and must always be received with extreme caution "(4) Writings which it is sought to use against accused persons for purposes of comparison should be clearly proved before being so used.(5) Comparison of writings is one of those tests which, ordinarily, Appellate Courts are cases of com-respectively writings produced.' In doing so, they will sometimes derive much aid from the evidence of experts with respect to the general character of the handwriting,—the forms of the letters, and the relative number of diversified forms of each letter,—the use of capitals, abbreviations, stops and paragraphs,—the mode of effecting erasures or adoption of peculiar expressions, tical construction of the sentence on the act of one or more of the documents being written in a feigned hand."(7) It has been held under the English Act that all the documents sought to be compared must be in Court (8) As to finger-impressions, see s. 45, ante.

(1) Taylor, Ev, § 1872, the method of proof dealt with by this section, commonly called "by comparison of hands," has met with strong opposition both in England and America from its doubtful value and supposed dangers Best Ev, p 239

(2) Sreemutty Phoodee v Gobind Chunder, 22 W R, 272 (1874), per Markby and Romesh Chunder Mitter, JJ, see Nobin Krishna v. Rassick Lall, 10 C., 1047, 1051 (1884) [evidence by comparison held not to be sufficient], Kurali Prasad v Anantaram Hajra, 8 B. L R, 490, 502 (1871), 16 W R, P C, 16 [finding of forgery on comparison of handwriting only disapproved]

(3) R. v. Silverlock (1894), 2 Q B., 766; R v. Harvey, 101 Cox, 546

(4) R. v. Amanoollah Mollah, 6 W. R. Cr, 5 (1866), per Kemp and Seton-Karr, JJ.

(5) R. v. Kartick Chunder, 5 R. C. & C. R., Crim Rul, 5862 (1868); R v. Amanoollah Mollah, 6 W. R, Cr, 5 (1866).

(6) R. v. Amanoollah, supra, 6; and see Sreemutty Phoodee v. Gobind Chunder, 22 W. R., 272 (1874).

(7) Taylor, Ev, § 1871.

(8) Arbon v. Fussell, 3 F. & Fr., 152; v. ante.

PUBLIC DOCUMENTS.

DOCUMENTS are of two kinds, public and private. Section 74 accordingly supplies a definition of the term "public document," and section 75 declares all documents other than those particularly specified to be private documents. The following sections (74—78) deal with (a) the nature of the former class of documents, and with (b) the proof which is to be given of them. Section 74 defines their nature, and sections (76—78) deal with the exceptional mode of proof applicable in their case, the proof of private documents, as defined by section 75, being subject to the general provisions of the Act relating to the proof of documentary evidence contained in sections (61—73).

An inquiry as to public documents may be directed (a) to the means of obtaining an inspection or copy of them; (b) to the method of proving them; (c) to their admissibility and effect (1).

With respect to (a) the means of obtaining an inspection or copy of a public document, the matter is one which is not dealt with by this Act. Section 76 provides for the giving of certified copies of public documents which the public have a right to inspect, but there is no general provision as to the right of inspection in the case of public documents in any enactment in force in British India. Every person, however, has a right to inspect public documents, subject to certain exceptions, provided he shows that he is individually interested in them. When the right to inspect and to take a copy is expressly conferred by Statute, the limit of the right depends on the true construction of the Statute. When the right to inspect and take a copy is not expressly conferred, the extent of such right depends on the interest which the applicant has in what he wants to copy and in what is reasonably necessary for the protection of such interest. The common law right is limited by this principle (2). It may be inferred that the Legislature intended to recognise the right generally, that is the right to inspect public documents, for all persons who can show that they have an interest for the protection of which it is necessary that liberty to inspect such documents should be given. In such cases in the absence of a Statutory there is a Common Law right (3). There are some special provisions applicable to particular cases. Though these special provisions do not generally contain any particular remedy to which resort may be had if inspection or copies be refused; yet an order in the nature of a mandamus directing the public officer concerned to do his duty in the matter may be obtained from the High Court under the provisions of Chapter VIII of the Specific Relief Act.(4)

(b) The method of proving public documents is, as already observed, the subject of sections 76—78, post(5), and (c) the admissibility and effect of

---

(1) Taylor Ev. § 1479.

(2) R. v. Arumugam, 20 M. 189, 191, 192 (1897), per Subramania Ayyar and Davies, JJ. Collins, C. J., held that the accused was a person interested in the documents in question, and that if they were public documents he would be entitled to inspect and have copies of them at p. 194. Shephard, J., was of the same opinion as the referring Judges as to the right of inspection, but held that two of the documents in question were not public documents at p. 196.

(3) Chandi Charan v. Boistub Charan 31 C. 284, 293 (1903). R. v. Arumugam 20 M. 189, 196 (1897).

(4) Act I of 1877. Field Ev. 6th Ed., 240, 242, as to the means of obtaining an inspection or copy in England see Taylor, Ev. §§ 1479—1522, and see Greenleaf Ev., p. 471.

(5) See post and as to the English law Taylor Ev. §§ 1523—1659, 1747 et seq.

non-judicial public documents is dealt with by sections 35—38, and of judicial public documents by sections 40—44, ante.(1) The question of the admissibility and proof of a public document involves four points of consideration (a) The contents must relate to a fact in issue or a fact relevant under the earlier sections of the Act. (b) If the contents are a statement of such facts and are not acts forming such facts, the statement must be relevant under sections 35—38, chiefly section 35. (c) The contents of the original document must be proved subject to, and with the benefit of, section 65, clause (e), and sections 76—78(4). The accuracy of the preparation of the original may be proved or presumed as provided by sections 80—87, and the correctness of certified copies may be presumed under section 79. In this connection section 57 relating to judicial notice should also be considered.(2)

Firstly, as to the nature of public writings. They have been defined to consist of "the acts of public functionaries, in the Executive, Legislative and Judicial Departments of Government, including under this general head the transactions which official persons are required to enter in books or registers in the course of their public duties and which occur within the circle of their own personal knowledge and observation. To the same head may be referred the consideration of documentary evidence of the acts of State, the Laws, and Judgments of Courts of Foreign Governments. Public documents are susceptible of another division, they being either (a) judicial or (b) non-judicial."(3) Under the latter head come acts of State, such as proclamations and other acts and orders of the Executive of the like character, Legislative Acts, Journals of the Legislature, Official Registers or books kept by persons in public office, in which they are required to write down particular transactions occurring in the course of their public duties; such as parish registers; the books which contain the official proceedings of corporations and matters respecting their property, if the entries are of a public nature; the books of the post-office and custom house and registers of other public offices; prison-registers; registers of births, deaths and marriages; registers of patents, designs, trade-marks, copy-rights; and other like documents, an enumeration of the whole of which would be practically impossible.(4) Under the former head come all judicial writings, whether domestic or foreign (5) Section 74 is in substantial accordance with the abovementioned definition, but also includes therein public records kept in British India of private documents. In the case of Sturla v. Freccia(6), it was said that "a 'public document' means a document that is made for the purpose of the public making use of it, especially where there is a judicial or quasi-judicial duty to enquire. Its very object must be that the public, all persons concerned in it, may have access to it." That case dealt with the admissibility of statements in public documents. It will, however, be observed that under section 74 of the Act the question whether a document is or is not a public document, within the meaning of that section, is distinct from the question whether or not the public have a right to inspect it. It is only of public documents which the public have a right to inspect that certified copies may be given in evidence, but it may well be that a document may be "public" within the meaning of this Act, and also one which is not open to the inspection of the public and of which, therefore, no proof by certified copy may be given.

(1) See pp. 390—419, ante, and as to the English law, Taylor, Ev., §§ 1660—1747 A., et seq; and see Greenleaf, Ev., § 522, et seq

(2) The Evidence Act by Kishori Lal Sarkar, 2nd Ed., p. 174.

(3) Greenleaf, Ev., § 470.

(4) Ib., §§ 479—484; Taylor, Ev., § 1600-n; Powell, Ev., 9th Ed., 243 261; Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed., 354—358; Roscoe, N. P. Ev., 125.

(5) See Powell, Ev., 9th Ed., 253—260; Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed., 385—393

(6) L. R., 5 App. Cas. 639, 642, 643, per Lord Blackburn.

Secondly, with regard to the proof of public documents As has been already observed(1), the contents of documents must be proved either by the production of the document, which is called primary evidence, or by copies or oral accounts of the contents, which are called secondary evidence. Primary evidence is required as a rule, but this is subject to seven exceptions(2) in which secondary evidence may be given. The most important of these are (a) cases in which the document is in the possession of the adverse party(3); and (b) cases in which certified copies of public documents(4) are admissible in place of the documents themselves (5) The grounds upon which the last mentioned exception rests are grounds of public convenience Public documents are, "comparatively speaking," little liable to corruption, alteration, or misrepresentation—the whole community being interested in their preservation and in most instances entitled to inspect them, while private writings, on the contrary, are the objects of interest but to few, whose property they are, and the inspection of them can only be obtained if at all by application to a Court of Justice The number of persons interested in public documents also renders them much more frequently required for evidentiary purposes, and if the production of the originals were insisted on, not only would great inconvenience result from the same documents being wanted in different places at the same time, but the continual change of place would expose them to be lost, and the handling from frequent use would soon insure their destruction For these and other reasons, the law deems it better to allow their contents to be proved by derivative evidence, and to run the chance, whatever that may be, of error arising from inaccurate transcription, either intentional or casual But true to its great principle of exacting the best evidence that the nature of the matter affords, the law requires this derivative evidence to be of a very trustworthy kind, and has defined with much precision, the forms of it which may be resorted to in proof of the different sorts of public writings (6) Thus, it must, at least in general, be in a written form, i e, in the shape of a copy(7), and as already mentioned, must not be a copy of a copy In very few, if in any, instances, is oral evidence(8) receivable to prove the contents of a record or public book which is in existence "(9) With regard to the proof of documents of a public character in England, and the legislation relating thereto, see the notes to section 82, post Proof of public documents under this Act may be given either by means of certified copies under the provisions of sections 76 and 77, or in the case of certain public documents particularly mentioned in section 78, in the particular modes referred to and allowed by that section When such proof has been offered, certain presumptions arise in respect of the documents which form the subject of the third division of this Chapter of the Act (10)

(1) See Introd, Ch V

(2) S 65, ante

(3) Ib, cl (a)

(4) Ib, cl (e)

(5) Steph Introd, 170 It will be noticed, therefore, that the so-called "best evidence rule" has in strictness no application to the case of public writings, a properly authenticated copy being a recognized equivalent for the original itself Best, Ev, Amer Notes, 432, Greenleaf, Ev, 482

(6) By several modern Acts of Parliament special modes of proof are provided for many kinds of records and public documents see 31 and 32 Vic, c 37, 14 and 15 Vic, c 99, 8 and 9 Vic, c 113, 42, Vic, c 11, 45 Vic, c 50, a large number of similar enactments are to be found in the recent statute-books, see Taylor, Ev, §§ 1073—1290

(7) In England the principal sorts of copies used for the proof of documents are (1) Exemplifications under the great seal (2) Exemplifications under the seal of the Court where the record is (3) Office copies, i e, copies made by an officer appointed by law for the purpose (4) Examined copies as to which, see s 82, post (5) Copies signed and certified as true by the officer to whose custody the original is entrusted This Act refers to certified copies (s 76) and certain other copies particularly specified (s 78)

(8) See Best Ev, Amer Notes, p 433

(9) Best Ev, § 485, and see §§ 218, 219, ib, Starkie, Ev, 315

(10) See Introduction to ss 79—90, post.

Public documents

74. The following documents are public documents:—

(1) documents forming the acts or records of the acts—

(i) of the sovereign authority,

(ii) of official bodies and tribunals, and

(iii) of public officers, legislative, judicial and executive whether of British India, or of any other part of Her Majesty's dominions, or of a foreign country;

(2) public records kept in British India of private documents.

Private documents

75. All other documents are private.

s. 3 ("Document") ss. 76-78 (Presumptions as to documents)
ss. 79-90 (Proof of public documents.)

COMMENTARY.

Public and private documents

See Introduction, ante. It has been held that in construing section 74 it may fairly be supposed that the word "acts" in the phrase "documents forming the acts or records of the acts" is used in one and the same sense; that the act of which the record made is a public document must be similar in kind to the act which takes shape and form in a public document; that the kind of act which section 74 has in view is indicated by section 78 in which section the acts are all final completed acts as distinguished from acts of a preparatory or tentative character. Thus, the enquiries which a public officer may make, whether under the Criminal Procedure Code or otherwise, may or may not result in action. There may be no publicity about them. There is a substantial distinction between such measures and the specific act in which they result, and it is to the latter only that section 74 was intended to refer.(1) Consult the definition given in the second section of the Civil Procedure Code of a "public officer"(2), and see the following sections for references to documents which are of a public nature,—sections 35-38, 57, 78,(3) as well as the following decisions which have nearly all been given under this Act. A certificate of sale granted under the Civil Procedure Code (Act VIII of 1859) and before section 107 of Act XII of 1879 was enacted is a document of title but is not a public document.(4) The Loan Register of the Public Debt Office in the Bank of Bengal is a public document and under section 76 any person having an interest therein is entitled to inspect the same and obtain certified copies thereof.(5) A certified copy of an order of a Probate Court granting letters of administration with the Will

---

(1) R. v. Arumugam, 20 M., 189, 197 (1897), per Shephard, J. So also Benson, J., at p. 204, said: "It may, I think, well be doubted whether the word 'acts' in s. 74 is used in its ordinary and popular sense and not rather in the restricted and technical sense in which it is used in s. 78," but see also remarks of S. Aiyar, J., at p. 203 and note on this case, post.

(2) A policeman is a public officer; R. v. Arumugam, 20 M., 189, 194 (1897); as to the Secretary of a Municipal Board, see reference to Full Bench, 19 A., 293, 295 (1897). The Gorait of a village is a public servant, R. v. Suddu, 1 All. L. J., 243 (1903), the following are public officers—The Official Trustee: Shatch-zadee Shahunshah v. Ferguson, 7 C., 499 (1881): Official Assignee; Jeevah Hari v. Kemp, 26 B., 809 (1902). The Administrator-General since the passing of the Act of 1902; Bholaram Choudhry v. Administrator-General, 8 C. W. N., 913 (1904), and under Act V of 1908, every member of the Indian Civil Service.

(3) Now represented by O. I, r. 12: O. III, r. 3; O. VII, r. 10, and O. V, r. 15, of present Code (Act V of 1908).

(4) Vasanji v. Haribhai, 2 Bom. L. R. 531 (1900), per Candy, J.

(5) Chandi Charan v. Bassiah Charan, 31 C., 254 (1903); 8 C. W. N. 125.

annexed is a public document under this section and admissible under section 66.(1) A jamabandi prepared by a Deputy Collector while engaged in the settlement of land under Regulation VII of 1822 has been held to be a public document within the meaning of this section on the ground that the act of the Collector in making a settlement or even an inquiry under the provisions of that Regulation is that of a public officer, whether it be judicial or executive (it probably partaking of both characters), and that the record of such acts is a public document.(2) But his decision has been since said to be open to some degree of doubt.(3) In any case, however, it is evident that the question whether a document is admissible in evidence as a public document, and the question whether that which is in it is binding upon tenants without reference to the question of consent or notice, are entirely separate matters (4) An anumatipatra, or instrument giving permission to adopt, is clearly not a public document(5) ; nor is a teis khana register (so called from the number of columns in the statement or register), prepared by a patwari under rules framed by the Board of Revenue under the 16th section of Reg XII of 1817, nor is the patwari preparing the same a public servant.(6) It has been held that the record of a confession of an accused person recorded by the Magistrate of Bhind in Gwalior is probably a public document (7) Where a suit was compromised and a petition presented in the usual way, and the Court made an order confirming the agreement which with the order, as well as the power of attorney, were all entered upon record, it was held that these papers became as much a part of the record in the suit as if the case had been tried and judgment given between the parties in the ordinary way, and that that record was a [illegible] an office-copy (8) In the case cited [illegible] alleged trespass, certified copies of [illegible] suit between the parties as well as [illegible] ublic documents ; certified copies of the plaint and written statements were also tendered in evidence, on the ground of their being public documents, and objected to The plaint was admitted, but the written statement was rejected. The correctness, however, of this decision, so far as it held the plaint to be admissible has been for a long time doubted(10) and has not been followed on the Original Side of the Calcutta High Court. The decision is, it is submitted, erroneous ; there being no principle upon which the case of a plaint can be distinguished from that of a written statement. Both are the acts or record of the acts of private parties and not of a public tribunal or its officers

That class of documents which consists of plaints, written statements, affidavits and petitions filed in Court, cannot be said to form such acts or records of acts as are mentioned in the section, and are, therefore, not public documents. But depositions of witnesses taken by an officer of the Court are public documents(11) and so of course are judgments, decrees and other orders

(1) Habiram Das v Hem Nath Sarma, 19 C W N, 1068 (1915)

(2) Taru Patur v Abinash Chander, 4 C, 79 (1878)

(3) Akshaya Kumar v Shama Charan, 16 C, 586, 590 (1889), Ram Chunder v Banseedhur Naik, 9 C, 741, 743 (1883)

(4) Akshaya Kumar v Shama Charan, supra, at p 590

(5) Krishna Kishori v Kishori Lal, 14 C, 486, 491 (1887); s c, L R, 14 I A, 71, nor of course are kobalas, conveyances and the like. Hurrechur Mozoomdar v Churn Mahjee, 22 W. R, 355 (1874), Hurish Chunder v Prosunno Coomar, 22 W. R, 303 (1874)

(6) Baij Nath v Sukhu Mahton, 18 C, 534 (1891), Samar Dosadh v Juggul Kishore 23 C, 366 (1895), in the judgment in which case s 35, ante, is fully considered

(7) R v Sunder Singh, 12 A, 595 (1890)

(8) Bhagain Megu v Gooroo Pershad, 25 W R, 68 (1876)

(9) Shazada Mahomed v Daniel Wedgerberry, 10 B L R App 31 (1873)

(10) Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 243 244 see as to the admissibility of quasi records, Taylor, Ev, § 1534

(11) Haranund Roy v Ram Gopal, 4 C W N, 429 (1899) [Foreign Judicial of the Court itself. In a suit for ejectment the defendant pleaded a compromise As evidence of it he tendered a certified copy of a petition which bore an order of the Court on it. This document was rejected by the lower Court as not proved, but it was held by the High Court that the document did not require to be proved and was admissible in evidence under section 77 of this Act (1) A quinquennial register is a document of a public nature.(2) Letters which have passed between district authorities are public documents forming a record of the acts of public officers.(3) But the question whether a letter or report from one official to another is an entry in a public record within the meaning of section 35 will depend on the circumstances of each case (4) An abstract or copy of a Government measurement chitta which has been produced from the Collectorate, but as to which there is nothing to show that it is the record of measurements made by a public officer, is not admissible as a public document(5); [illegible] view to resump- [illegible] by Government [illegible] ertificate granted by the Board of Trade is not a public document.(7) As to ayakut accounts prepared for administrative purposes by village officers, see case below.(8) Entries in a register made under (B. C.) Act VII of 1876 by the Collector are entries made in an official register kept by a public servant under the provisions of a Statute, and certified copies of such entries are admissible in evidence for what they are worth (9) It has been held by the Madras High Court that reports made by a police-officer in compliance with sections 157 and 168 of the Criminal Procedure Code are not public documents, and that consequently an accused person is not entitled before trial to have copies of such reports.(10) There is, however, a difference of opinion in that Court whether the same rule applies to reports made in compliance with section 173 of the Criminal Procedure Code(11), or whether reports under that section are public documents of which an accused person is entitled under section 76 to have copies before trial.(12) The fifth Clause of section 78 brings the records of the proceedings of a municipal body in British India within the second clause of the first sub-section of section 74 as the record of the acts of an official body The records of the proceedings of a Municipal Board is a public document, and the officer who is authorized by the ordinary course of his official duties to give

---

Records]. A witness's deposition is part of the records of the acts of an official tribunal within the meaning of s. 74, Reg. App No. 110 of 1900; 10 June 1902, Cal. H C.

(1) Mangal Sen v. Hira Singh, 1 All. L J., Part I, p 101 (1904); 1 All. L. J, 396 (1904) [Certified copy of application for compromise with an order of the Court on it is admissible in evidence under s. 77 and need not be proved].

(2) Sreemutty Oodoy v. Bishonath Dutt, 7 W. R, 14 (1867). See Kashee Chunder v Noor Chunder, S D A., 1849, pp 113, 116.

(3) Pirthee Singh v Court of Wards, 23 W R, 272 (1875)

(4) Mallikarjuna Dugget v. Secretary of State, 35 M., 21 (1912).

(5) Nityanund Roy v. Abdur Raheem, 7 C, 76 (1881).

(6) Ram Chunder v. Bunsheedhur Naik, 9 C., 741, 743 (1883); see Dwarka Nath v. Tarita Moyi, 14 C, 120 (1886).

(7) In the matter of a Collision between The Ava and The Brenhilda, 5 C., 568 (1879).

(8) Sivasubramanya v. Secretary of State, 9 M., 285, 294 (1884).

(9) Shosi Bhoosun v Girish Chunder, 20 C., 940 (1893).

(10) R. v. Arumugam, 20 M., 189 (1897), F. B. Subramania Aiyar, J. dissentiente. Whatever may be said upon the matter from the point of view of convenience and public policy, which do not strictly touch the pure question of construction, there is, it is submitted, great force in the argument of Subramania Aiyar, J. (at p. 203), that even if such a document be not a record of at least some of the investigating officer's acts, it is itself a document forming an act of his, he being enjoined to act in a particular way, that is, to submit such a report.

(11) R. v. Arumugam, 20 M., 189 (1897), F. B.; Subramania Aiyar, J. dissentiente, per Collins, C. J. and Benson, J.

(12) Ib, per Shephard, J. and Subramania Aiyar, J.

copies of public documents is for these purposes a public officer (1) In support of a claim instituted in a Court in British India for a share in her deceased father's estate, plaintiff tendered in evidence a document which purported to be a certified copy of the will executed by her late father at Colombo where he was said to have been at the date of the execution of the alleged will. The document was filed as an exhibit in the suit, but the Subordinate Judge held that it was not admissible in evidence It bore an endorsement purporting to be signed by the Assistant Registrar-General for Ceylon to the effect that it was a true copy of a last will and testament made from the Protocol of record filed in his office No evidence was tendered before the Subordinate Judge that the copy had been made from and compared with the original. On the question of the admissibility in evidence of the said document; held that it was inadmissible, that it was not a public document within the meaning of clauses 1 (iii) or 2 of this section, and that in the absence of evidence that it had been made from and compared with the original, the provisions of that Act relating to secondary evidence of public documents were inapplicable.(2) Census Registers are not public documents (3)

Public records kept in British India of private documents are also under the second Clause public documents within the meaning of the section. Thus certain register-books are directed to be kept in all registration-offices.(4) Under this clause entries of the copies of private documents in Books Nos. 1, 3 and 4 of the Registration-office being public records kept of private documents, are public documents, and as such may be proved by certified copies; that is certified copies may be offered in proof of those entries, but neither those entries, nor certified copies of these entries, are admissible in proof of the contents of the original documents so recorded unless secondary evidence is allowable under the provisions of this Act (5) Section 91, second exception, provides that Wills admitted to probate in British India may be proved by the probate. Public documents are provable in the exceptional modes provided for in sections 76—78.

All documents other than those specially mentioned in section 74 are private documents(6) and are provable under the general provisions of the Act relating to the proof of documents

Certified copies of public documents.

76. Every public officer having the custody of a public document, which any person has a right to inspect(7), shall give that person on demand a copy of it on payment of the legal fees therefor, together with a certificate written at the foot of such copy that it is a true copy of such document or part thereof, as the case may be, and such certificate shall be dated and subscribed by such officer with his name and his official title, and shall be sealed, whenever such officer is authorized by law to make use of a seal, and such copies so certified shall be called certified copies.

Explanation.—Any officer who, by the ordinary course of official duty, is authorised to deliver such copies, shall be deemed

(1) Reference to Full Bench under s. 46 of Act I of 1879, 19 A. 293, 295 (1897).

(2) Ponnammal v Sundaram Pillai, 23 M. 499 (1900).

(3) R v. Bhavanrao Vithalrao, 6 Bom L. R. 535 (1904)

(4) See Act XVI of 1908, ss 51, 57.

(5) v ante, s. 65, cl. (f)

(6) S 75

(7) v ante, Introd to ss. 74—78, see with reference to this and following section, Ali Khan v. Indar Prashad, 23 C. 950 (1896) where certified copies of income-tax returns were held to be inadmissible.

This Act is silent as to the right of inspection, and there is no general provision on the subject in any other enactment in force in British India, though there are certain special provisions applicable to particular circumstances only. Thus, Registers prepared under the provisions of Chapter IV of the Oudh Land Revenue Act, are declared to be public documents and the property of Government, and are declared to be open to public inspection.(1) If a person is personally interested in a public document it would seem that in the absence of a right conferred by Statute, he has a common law right to inspect it. It may be inferred that the Legislature intended to recognise the right to inspect public documents generally for all persons who can show that they have an interest for the protection of which it is necessary that liberty to inspect such documents should be given. When the right to inspect and take a copy is expressly conferred by Statute, the limit of the right depends on the true construction of the Statute. When the right to inspect and take a copy is not expressly conferred, the extent of such right depends on the interest which the applicant has in what he wants to copy and on what is reasonably necessary for the protection of such interest. If therefore a person has a right to inspect, it becomes necessary to see what is the extent of his right to inspection. Every officer appointed by law to keep records ought to deem himself for the production of documents a trustee.(2) An act may both give a right of inspection and provide a penalty and remedy in case of its refusal Thus by Act VI of 1882, section 55 (Indian Companies Act), if inspection or copy of the Register of members is refused, the Company incur by such refusal a specific penalty and in addition to that penalty any Judge of a High Court may by order compel an immediate inspection of the Register. Where such Acts give a right of inspection but do not enact any particular remedy to which resort may be had if inspection or copies be refused, an application may be made, in Presidency Towns, to the High Court under the Provisions of Chapter VIII of the Specific Relief Act. If there exists no such special provision, and the disclosure of the contents of any of the general records of the realm, or of any other documents of a public nature, would, in the opinion of the Court or of the Chief Executive Magistrate, or of the head of the department under whose control they may be kept, be injurious to the public interests an inspection would certainly not be granted.(3)

---

(1) Act XVII of 1876, s 67; so also the books of account of the Administrator-General are open to public inspection· Act III of 1913, s 44 (for present Act see Act V of 1902 and as to the right to inspection and to certified copies in the case of other public Registers, see ante notes to s. 35 Act XVI of 1908 as amended by Acts V and XV of 1917 (Registration), ss 18, 51, 55, 57; Act XX of 1874, s 3; 5 & 6 Vic, c 45, s 11; 25 & 26 Vic., c. 68, s 5 (Copyright), 46 & 47 Vic, c 57, ss. 23, 55, 87—89, Act V of 1888, ss 13, 14, 61 (Patents, Designs and Trade-marks) (now see ss 20, 71 of Act II of 1911 as amended by Acts XXVIII and XXIX of 1920); Act XXV of 1867, s. 18 (Printing Presses); Acts V of 1865, XV of 1872, s 79 (Christian Marriage); XV of 1865 as amended by Act XXXVIII of 1920 (Parsi Marriage); III of 1872, s 14 (Marriage); Act VI of 1886, ss 7—9, 35 (Registration, Births, Deaths and Marriages) as amended by Act XXXVII of 1920; Act I (B C) of 1876 (Mahomedan Marriage); Act, XXI of 1860, s 19 (Societies); Act VI of 1882, ss 55, 60, 255, 220, 68 (Companies), now see Act VII of 1913, as amended by Acts X and XI of 1914 and Act XLII of 1920, ss. 36, 40, 288, 248, 112, 123, 124; 57 & 58 Vic, c 60, ss 64, 239, 695 (2) (Merchant Shipping); Act VII of 1882, s 4 (Powers-of-Attorney); Calcutta High Court Rules of 1866 R, 54 (Winding-up of Company); (now see Calcutta High Court Rules of 1914, Ch XXXI, r. 10, p 307, as to the records of Courts, v post

(2) Chandi Charan v. Boistab Charan, 31 C., 284, 293 (1903); Bank of Bombay v. Suleman Somji, P. C (1908), 32 Bom., 466

(3) Taylor, Ev, § 1483; Field, Ev, 6th Ed., 240, 241 In the case first mentioned in the preceding note an application was made to Court in the suit calling upon the Bank of Bengal to comply with an order of Court.

The Civil Procedure Code provides that certified copies of judgments(1) [illegible] shall be furnished to the parties [illegible] There is no express provision [illegible] copies of any other portions of the records of the Civil Courts but as a matter of practice, copies are usually given to any of the parties who may apply for them (3) The Calcutta High Court has, however, made the following rules on the subject.—(a) A plaintiff or a defendant, [illegible] e suit to obtain copies [illegible] been put in and final [illegible] been ordered to file a written statement is not entitled to inspect or take a copy of a written statement filed by another party until he has filed his own, (b) A stranger to the suit may after decree obtain, as of course, copies of the plaint, written statements, affidavits and petitions filed in the suit, and may, for sufficient reason shown to the satisfaction of the Court, obtain copies of any such [illegible]

In criminal cases, an accused person, committed under the Code of Criminal Procedure to the High Court or the Court of Session, is entitled to a copy of the charge, free of all expense, and, if he apply within a reasonable time, to copies of the deposition, these latter copies to be made at his expense unless the Magistrate see fit to give them free of cost (5) He is entitled free of cost to a copy of the evidence of any witness examined by a Magistrate (other than a Presidency Magistrate) after commitment (6) Under the provisions of the undermentioned section(7), "on the application of the accused a copy of the judgment, or when he so desires, a translation in his own language, if practicable, or, in the language of the Court, shall be given to him without delay"

Such copy shall, in any case other than a summons-case, be given free of cost In trials by [illegible] of the heads of the charge to the jury shall, on [illegible] e given to him without delay and free of cost [illegible] a judgment or order passed by a Criminal Court desires to have a copy of the Judge's charge to the jury or of any order or deposition or other part of the record, he shall, on applying for such copy, be furnished therewith, provided that he pay for the same, unless the Court for some special reason, thinks fit to furnish it free of cost "(8) A previous conviction or acquittal may be proved in addition to any other mode provi[illegible] tract certified under the h[illegible] the Court in which such [illegible] ntence or order; or (b) in case of a conviction, either by a certificate signed by the officer in charge of the jail in which the punishment or any part thereof was inflicted, or by production of the warrant of commitment under which the punishment was suffered—together with, in each of such cases, evidence as to the identity of the accused person with the person so convicted or acquitted (9)

(1) In matters before the Calcutta Small Cause Court, for "judgment," read "Proceedings" Notification of the 18th Feb. 1889

(2) O XX, r 20, p 889, O XLI, r 36, 2nd Ed, p 1321, as to certified copies of decrees and orders in execution of Privy Council decrees and orders v ib., O XLV, r 15, 2nd Ed, p 1343

(3) Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 242

(4) General Rules and Circular Orders. Part, IV, Ch XV, rr. 1—4 (1891).

(5) Cr Pr Code, ss 210, 548

(6) Ib, s 219.

(7) Ib, s 371

(8) Ib, s 548.

(9) Cr Pr Code, s. 511; [See also as to certified copies of convictions, Reg. III of 1872]; as to offences committed by European British subjects in Indian Allied States, v. ib., s. 189.

Proof of documents

Private documents must generally be proved by the production of the originals coupled with evidence of their handwriting, signature, or execution as the case may be.(1) An exception to this rule exists under the Act in the case of Wills admitted to probate in British India which may be proved by the probate (2) The contents of public documents may be proved either by the production of certified copies(3) under section 77, or if they be documents of the kind mentioned in section 78, by the various modes described in that section. The contents of private documents such as kobalas, conveyances, leases and the like, though filed in a Court or public office for purposes of evidence in a suit, are not provable in another suit by means of certified copies.(4)

The word 'may' in section 77 is used only as denoting another mode [illegible] ly, the production of [illegible] within the meaning [illegible] er kind of secondary [illegible] ncil rejected a docu- [illegible] hich purported to be an authenticated copy of the original document, but was not certified to be a true copy as required by section 76, and was not shown to have been examined by any witness with the original.(6) This last provision, however, must be read subject to the provisions of sections 78 and 82, post, and the last paragraph of the second section ante. Thus by virtue of the provisions contained in section 82, post, a foreign and colonial document may be proved by an authenticated copy within the meaning of 14 and 15 Vic., c. 99, s. 7; such authenticated [illegible] to be admissible in evidence without proof [illegible] of the person making such signature. Se [illegible] ian a certified copy, is admissible both in the cases expressly mentioned by this Act and in those where an unrepealed or other Act has especially enacted that such other evidence shall be admissible.(7) Section 79 raises a presumption of genuineness in the case of certified copies Proof of a special character may be offered as to the official documents which are the subjects of individual mention in section 78. In connection with the third clause of that section may be read the provisions of the Documentary Evidence Act, 1868,(8) as amended by the Documentary Evidence Act, 1882,(9) which, subject to any law that may be from time to time made by the Legislature of any British Colony or Possession (including therein India) is declared to be in force in every such Colony and Possession.(10) As to the fifth Clause v ante, p. 548, n. 4. Fourth and sixth Clauses deal with foreign

(1) See s 59. 61—73, supra.

(2) S 91, Exception 2, post

(3) It is doubtful whether ss 76 and 79 apply to copies given before the passing of the Act Jakir Ali v Raj Chunder, 10 C L. R, 476.

(4) Hurechur Mojoomdar v. Churn Majhee, 22 W. R., 355 (1874); as to the decision in Shazada Mahomed v. Wedgeberry, 10 B. L. R, App. 31, ante; notes to ss. 74, 75 As to proof of order of Government sanctioning prosecution, see Muhammad Oziullah v. Beni Madhab Chowdhury, 36 C L. J, 180 (1922).

(5) S 65, ante; the provisions of which appear to have been overlooked in Norton, Ev., 258.

(6) Krishna Kishori v. Kishori Lal, 14 C., 486, 4901 (1887); s c, L R., 14 I. A, 71.

(7) So in cases governed by the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894 (57 & 58 Vic, c 90; s. 695), examined copies are admissible equally with certified copies The difference between a certified and an examined copy, is that the former is made by an official whose duty it is to furnish such copies to parties who have an interest in the subject-matter, and a right to apply for them, on payment or otherwise; the latter are those which any private individual makes from the original with which, having himself compared it by examination, he is enabled to swear that it is a true copy, Norton, Ev, 258

(8) 31 & 32 Vic, c. 37.

(9) 45 Vic, c. 9.

(10) See Taylor, Ev, § 1527; Field, Ev. 6th Ed. 245—247.

public documents.(1) The words "of any other class," in the sixth Clause mean "other than the documents mentioned in the fourth Clause." Where a ... be a ... Court ... n the record; but such presumption may be displaced by proving the want of jurisdiction.(2) As to the presumption declared by the Act with regard to certified copies of foreign judicial records, see section 86, post; and for the presumption as to documents admissible in England without proof of seal or signature, see section 82, post. See also Note to sections 74, 75, ante

(1) As to the proof of foreign judicial record v. s 86, post, and s 65, ante. Haranund Roy v Ram Gopal, 4 C W N 429 (1899)

(2) Woodroffe & Ali's, Civ Pr Code, s 14 2nd Ed, p 101

PRESUMPTION AS TO DOCUMENTS.

When a document, whether private or public, has been offered in evidence, certain presumptions may arise in respect of it which are enumerated in the following sections (79—90). Those presumptions, however, are not conclusive. An inference is drawn from certain facts in supersession of any other mode of proof. That inference may be one which the Court is bound to accept as proved until it is disproved; in this case it is said that the Court "shall presume"; or the inference may be one as to which the Court is at liberty either to accept it as proved until it is disproved, or to call for proof of it in the first instance; in this case it is said that the Court "may presume." All that the law does for this last class of inferences is to allow the Court to dispense with evidence should it think fit to do so. The two latter classes of inferences play an important part in the proof of documents. Sections 79—85, and section 89 provide for cases in which the Court shall presume certain facts about documents; sections 86—88, 90, provide for cases in which the Court may presume certain things about them. In the one case the Court, is bound to consider the presumption as proved until the contrary is shown; in the other, the Court may, if it pleases, regard the presumption as proved until the contrary is shown, or may call for independent proof in the first instance.(1) Many classes of documents, which are defined in the Act, are presumed to be what they purport to be, but this presumption is liable to be rebutted. Two sets of presumptions will sometimes apply to the same document. For instance, what purports to be a certified copy of a record of evidence is produced. It must by section 79 be presumed to be an accurate copy of the record of evidence. By section 80 the facts stated in the record itself as to the circumstances under which it was taken, e.g., that it was read over to the witness in a language which he understood, must be presumed to be true.(2) All the following sections, down to section 90 inclusive, are illustrations of, and founded upon, the principle, omnia præsumuntur rite esse acta.(3) The presumption which is directed to be raised by the last-mentioned section is of great importance in obviating the effects of the lapse of time as to the proof of documents. As years go on, the witnesses who can personally speak to the attestation or execution of a document, or to the handwriting of those who executed or attested it, gradually die out. If strict proof of execution or handwriting were necessary, it would, after a generation, become impossible to prove any document. On the other hand, there is some reason to suppose that documents, of which people take care for a long series of years [illegible] authentic. The law acts upon this probabi- [illegible] in the case of documents proved or pur- [illegible] duced from proper custody, that is the place in which, the care of the person with whom, it would naturally be, the Court may presume that the signature and every other part of such a document is in the handwriting of the person by whom it purports to be written, and that it was duly executed and attested by the persons by whom it purports to be executed and attested.(4) This section concludes the express provision contained in the Act as to presumptions in the case of documents, but other presumptions

(1) Cunningham, Ev., 45, 46; see ante, notes to s. 4.

(2) Steph. Introd., 170, 175

(3) Norton, Ev., 260

(4) Cunningham, Ev., 48, 49.

may, of course, be raised under the provisions of section 114, as is indeed indicated by Illustration (i) to that section, according to which the Court may presume that when a document creating an obligation is in the hands of the may have stolen it.(1) There are many other presumptions as to documents, known to English law, for which no express provision is made in the Act, and which, therefore can be raised only under the general provision contained in section 114, post(2), under which section the more important of those presumptions will be found considered.

79. The Court shall presume every document purporting to be a certificate, certified copy or other document, which is by law declared to be admissible as evidence of any particular fact, and which purports to be duly certified by any officer in British India, or by any officer in any native State in alliance with Her Majesty, who is duly authorized thereto by the Governor-General in Council, to be genuine: Presumption as to genuineness of certified copies.

Provided that such document is substantially in the form and purports to be executed in the manner directed by law in that behalf.

The Court shall also presume that any officer by whom any such document purports to be signed or certified, held, when he signed it, the official character which he claims in such paper.(3)

Principle.—Omnia præsumuntur rite esse acta—a maxim of peculiar force when applied to official acts and documents The last clause of the section is also based upon the above quoted maxim It is very old law that where a person acts in an official capacity, it shall be presumed that he was duly appointed, and it has been applied to a great variety of officers and illustrated by many cases. For it cannot be supposed that any man would venture to intrude himself into the public station which he was not authorized to fill. See Introduction, ante, and note, post.

s. 3 ("Court") ss 63, CL. (1), 65, CLS (e), (g) 76, 77 (Certified copies)
s. 4 ("Shall presume")
s. 3 ("Document") s 3 ("Evidence")

Norton, Ev., 260, 261; Field, Ev, 6th Ed., 248, Taylor, Ev, § 171

COMMENTARY

As is indi... certified copies duly authorized similar presum...

PRESUMPTION AS TO DOCUMENTS.

WHEN a document, whether private or public, has been offered in evidence, certain presumptions may arise in respect of it which are enumerated in the following sections (79—90). Those presumptions, however, are not conclusive. An inference is drawn from certain facts in supersession of any other mode of proof. That inference may be one which the Court is bound to accept as proved until it is disproved; in this case it is said that the Court "shall presume"; or the inference may be one as to which the Court is at liberty either to accept it as proved until it is disproved, or to call for proof of it in the first instance; in this case it is said that the Court "may presume" All that the law does for this last class of inferences is to allow the Court to dispense with evidence should it think fit to do so. The two latter classes of inferences play an important part in the proof of documents. Sections 79—85, and section 89 provide for cases in which the Court shall presume certain facts about documents, sections 86—88, 90, provide for cases in which the Court may presume certain things about them. In the one case the Court, is bound to consider the presumption as proved until the contrary is shown; in the other, the Court may, if it pleases, regard the presumption as proved until the contrary is shown, or may call for independent proof in the first instance (1) Many classes of documents, which are defined in the Act, are presumed to be what they purport to be, but this presumption is liable to be rebutted. Two sets of presumptions will sometimes apply to the same document. For instance, what purports to be a certified copy of a record of evidence is produced It must by section 79 be presumed to be an accurate copy of the record of evidence. By section 80 the facts stated in the record itself as to the circumstances under which it was taken, e g., that it was read over to the witness in a language which he understood, must be presumed to be true.(2) All the following sections, down to section 90 inclusive, are illustrations of, and founded upon, the principle, omnia præsumuntur rite esse acta.(3) The presumption which is directed to be raised by the last-mentioned section is of great importance in obviating the effects of the lapse of time as to the proof of documents. As years go on, the witnesses who can personally speak to the attestation or execution of a document, or to the handwriting of those who ex[illegible]ted or attested it, gradually die out. If strict proof of execution or hand[illegible] were necessary, it would, after a generation, become impossible to pr[illegible] On the other hand, there is some reason to suppose that doc[illegible] tale care for a long series of years, are authentic. Th[illegible] lity and provides the presumption that in the cas[illegible] porting to be thirty years old, and produced fro[illegible] place in which, the care of the person with whom, [illegible] ports to [illegible] ted and attested.(4) This section concludes the express provision contain[illegible] the Act as to presumptions in the case of documents, but other presumption[illegible]

(1) Cunningham, Ev., 45, 46; see ante, notes to s 4.

(2) Steph. Introd, 170, 175.

(3) Norton, Ev, 260

(4) Cunningham, Ev., 48, 49

ıy, of course, be raised under the provisions of section 114, as is indeed dicated by Illustration (i) to that section, according to which the Court may e hands of the l whether such n the Court will so have regard to such facts as the following, viz., that though the bond is in e possession of the obligor, the circumstances of the case are such that he ay have stolen it.(1) There are many other presumptions as to documents, ıown to English law, for which no express provision is made in the Act, and ııich, therefore can be raised only under the general provision contained in ction 114, post(2), under which section the more important of those presumpɔns will be found considered.

79. The Court shall presume every document purporting o be a certificate, certified copy or other document, which is y law declared to be admissible as evidence of any particular ct, and which purports to be duly certified by any officer in ritish India, or by any officer in any native State in alliance ith Her Majesty, who is duly authorized thereto by the Goverɔr-General in Council, to be genuine: Presumption as to genuineness of certified copies.

Provided that such document is substantially in the form nd purports to be executed in the manner directed by law in ıat behalf

The Court shall also presume that any officer by whom any ıch document purports to be signed or certified, held, when he gned it, the official character which he claims in such paper.(3)

Principle.—Omnia præsumuntur rite esse acta—a maxim of peculiar force hen applied to official acts and documents. The last clause of the section also based upon the above quoted maxim. It is very old law that where person acts in an official capacity, it shall be presumed that he was duly ppointed, and it has been applied to a great variety of officers and illustrated y many cases. For it cannot be supposed that any man would venture to ıtrude himself into the public station which he was not authorized to fill. See ıtroduction, ante, and note, post.

s. 3 ("Court")
s. 4 ("Shall presume")
s. 3 ("Document")
ss. 63, CL. (1), 65, CLS (e), (f) 76, 77 (Certified copies)
s 3 ("Evidence")

Norton, Ev, 260, 261, Field, Ev, 6th Ed., 248, Taylor, Ev., § 171.

COMMENTARY.

As is indicated by its terms, this section applies only to certificates(4), ertified copies, or other documents certified by officers in British India, or by uly authorized officers in allied Native States. Section 82, post, provides for imilar presumptions in the case of documents of a like character certified by Genuineness of certified copies.

(1) S 114, ill (i), post.

(2) Cunningham, Ev, 222

(3) It is doubtful whether this section applicable to copies given before the ssing of the Act; Jakir Ali v Raj Chunder, 10 C. L R, 476.

(4) E g., a certificate given by a registering officer under s 60, Act III of 1877; and see Cr. Pr. Code, ss 467, 473, 511.

provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code relating to the recording of confessions, v. ante, s. 24, and the cases cited in the notes to that section.

"Judicial proceeding." The section only raises a presumption in the case of documents taken in the course of a judicial proceeding. Therefore statements by way of a confession recorded by a Magistrate in his character of an Executive officer, there being no law authorizing the taking of such statements, are not receivable under this section(1) v. post. As to statements made to the police, v. ante.

Taken in accordance with law The statements as to which this section says that certain presumptions are to be drawn are statements or confessions taken in accordance with law. This section does not render admissible any particular kind of evidence but only dispenses with the necessity for formal proof in the case of certain documents taken in accordance with law. If a document has not been taken in accordance with law, section 80 docs not operate to render it admissible The section merely gives legal sanction to the maxim "Omnia præsumuntur rite esse acta," with regard to documents taken in the course of a judicial proceeding.(2) So in the case last cited it was contended that when the confessions there in question were taken by [illegible] under the Criminal Procedure Code bu [illegible] of 1859); it was, however, held t [illegible] ing the examination of a suspected [illegible] ent or confession and that though such a course might not be improper but even advisable, this section did not, therefore, apply. The Deputy Magistrate might have been acting in an Executive c [illegible] of the District Magistrate, but the statement if reco [illegible] were not receivable under this section.(3)
As to the manner in which evidence should be taken and recorded in Civil and Criminal Proceedings, see Civil Procedure Code, O. XVIII.(4); Criminal Procedure Code sections 353—365 As to confessions, see sections 24—30, ante: and the Criminal Procedure Code, sections 164, 364, 533.

Presumptions. With respect to these presumptions, firstly, if the provisions of the first clause of the section are fulfilled, the Court must in all cases presume that the document is genuine. viz, that it is, as it purports to be, a record of evidence given or of a confession made, and that the signature appended is that of the Judge, Magistrate, or other officer by whom it purports to be signed This presumption is, however, independent of the others. Thus, it may well be that the document is genuine in the sense above-mentioned, and yet it may not have been duly taken under the general provision of the law regulating the recording of depositions and confessions. If there be no obligation to do an act, and it is not stated upon the document that such act has been done, there may be a presumption of genuineness and due taking, but there will be none as to that act having been done. Thus, before the deposition of a medical witness taken by a committing Magistrate, can, under section 509 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, be given in evidence at the trial before the Court of Session, it must either appear from the Magistrate's record, or be proved by the evidence of witnesses to have been taken and attested by the Magistrate in the presence of the accused. The Court ought not, if it do not so appear, or if it be not so proved, presume either under section 80 or section 114, ill. (e) of this Act, that the deposition was so taken and attested (5) There is no provision in the Code which makes the attestation of the deposition by the Magistrate in the presence of the accused obligatory. Unless it is made obligatory the concluding

(1) R v. Viram, 9 M, 224, 227, 228 (1886)
(2) Id
(3) Ib.
(4) Woodroffe & Amir Ali, pp. 842—849
(5) Kachali Hari v. R, 18 C., 129 (1890); R. v. Riding, 9 A, 720 (1887); R. v. Pohp Singh, 10 A., 174, 177, 178 (1887).

words of this section as to its having been "duly taken" cannot apply The document may be genuine and yet not attested in the presence of the accused; and if there be no obligation to so attest the deposition, the statement might have been duly taken though not so attested.(1) Though this section will not be of assistance in a case under section 509 of the Criminal Procedure Code where there are no "statements as to the circumstances under which the deposition was taken purporting to be made by the person signing it," yet if a Magistrate records a statement at the foot of the deposition to the effect that the deposition was taken in the presence of the accused and was attested by him, the Magistrate in the presence of the accused, and signs such statement, the Court would be bound to presume that such statement was true and to admit the deposition under section 509 of the Criminal Procedure Code (2) If there be no such statement, it must be proved in such a case aliunde that the requirements of the Code have been fulfilled

Secondly.—The Court must presume that any statements as to the circumstances under which the document was taken purporting to be made by the person signing it are true The memorandum endorsed upon or appended to the record of evidence on confession is to be taken as evidence of the facts stated in the memorandum itself (3) Thus, if the evidence has been recorded in a different language from that in which the witness spoke, the Court will presume that the records contain the equivalent of the words spoken by him, if from the memorandum attached to the deposition it appears to have been read over to the witness in his own language and to have been acknowledged by him to be correct.(4) There may be a presumption that the statements as to the circumstances under which the document was taken are true and none as to the document having been duly taken, for the circumstances, if assumed to be true, may not disclose a due taking (5) Such statements if made are to be taken as true whether or not there is any obligation either to do the acts recorded or to make a record of them (6)

Thirdly—The document must be presumed to have been duly taken. In certain cases the document will not be presumed to have been "duly taken" unless it purports to give all the facts as to which such presumption is to be raised.(7) In the case last cited it was said that the law allows certain presumptions as to certain documents and on the strength of these presumptions dispenses with the necessity of proving by direct evidence what it would otherwise be necessary to prove One of these presumptions relates to confessions. This section says that, such confession is to be presumed to be duly taken But as a necessary basis for this presumption the document must purport to show all the facts of which it would otherwise be necessary for the Court to be satisfied by direct evidence before the confession could be used against the accused. Those facts are, firstly, that the confession was accurately taken down or repeated; secondly, that the confession was taken in the immediate presence of a

(1) R v Pohp Singh, supra, 187
(2) Kachali Hari v R, supra, 133
(3) R v Gonouri 22 W R, 2 (1874); R v. Nussuruddin, 21 W R Cr, 5 (1873), Kachali Hari v R, 18 C, 129 (1890)
(4) R v Gonouri, 22 W. R, 2 (1874); R. v. Mungal Dass, 23 W R, 28 (1875) In the former case the deposition of the prisoner had been taken in English The only evidence offered for the purpose of satisfying the Court that this deposition represented a true translation of the words which the accused person actually spoke in Hindustani was an endorsement or memorandum to be found at the foot of the deposition signed by the Magistrate in these words "The above was read to the witness in Hindustani, which he understood, and by him acknowledged to be correct" It was held that the memorandum was evidence of the facts stated in the memorandum itself which facts themselves afforded some evidence that the translation was correct.
(5) R v. Nussuruddin, 21 W. R., Cr., 5 (1874).
(6) Kachali Hari v R, 18 C. 1 (1880)
(7) R. v. Shivya, 1 B., 219, 222 (1

Magistrate; thirdly, that no inducement had been held out to the accused. If these three facts, viz., the accuracy of the record, the presence of a Magistrate, and the voluntary nature of the confession, would otherwise have to be proved by direct evidence, they must all be stated on the face of the document before the Court can draw a presumption of their having occurred; and these are the very three facts which are stated in the memorandum and certificate mentioned in section 164 and 364 of the Criminal Procedure Code. If, therefore, such a memorandum and certificate in the terms required by the Code be not attached to the confession, no presumption will be raised, and it will not be admissible in evidence.(1)

In other cases, however, the presumption of due taking may be raised independently of the question whether facts are expressly stated on the record which may form the basis of the presumption.(2)

The distinction between these cases is that no presumption that a document is duly taken can arise when, on the face of the document, it appears that it has not been duly taken.(3) Therefore (a) if the law expressly requires a statement of the circumstances under which a document was taken to be and that an express statutory provision has not been carried out. (b) Where the law casts no obligation upon the Magistrate or Judge to record the circumstances under which a statement was made and taken, it will be presumed that the statement was "duly taken," that is, that all the conditions required by law have been fulfilled, notwithstanding that the document does not purport to give the facts as to which such presumption is to be raised: for when the law creates an obligation to take a statement in a particular manner it will be presumed upon the maxim omnia rite acta that it has been duly taken.

aken".

, if the

(1) Ib, 222

(2) Cf Budree Lall v. Bhoossee Khan, 25 W. R, 134 (1876), R v Samiappa, 15 M, 63 (1891), R v Pohp Singh, 10 A, 174 (1887); R v Viram, 9 M, 224 (1886) The case, however, of R v. Nussuruddin, 21 W. R., Cr, 5 (1874), does not appear to be in conformity with the text or the words of the section, but the grounds of the decision in this case are not at all clear. A statement of a witness in the shape of a former deposition can only be used as evidence against an accused person if it was duly taken in his presence before the Committing Magistrate (Cr. Pr. Code, s 288) In this case, a document purporting to be the deposition of a witness made before a Magistrate appeared on the record, but there was no evidence to prove that the document exhibited evidence of this witness duly taken by the Committing Magistrate in the presence of any of the persons who were tried in the Sessions Court and against whom it was used. The Court observed that a certificate was, no doubt, appended to it, initialled by some person, and on the supposition certificate would under this section afford primâ facie evidence of the circumstances mentioned in it relative to the taking of the statement. But this certificate was merely in these words—"Read to deponent and admitted correct," and did not give any of the facts necessary to render a deposition admissible under s 288 of the Criminal Procedure Code. It was held, therefore, that the presumption of due taking could not be raised under this section. But s. 353 of the Code requires all evidence (except when otherwise provided) to be taken in the presence of the accused And though there was no evidence in the case to show that the deposition had been so taken, this section should, it would seem, have dispensed with the necessity of such proof. The statement in the Magistrate's certificate was a complete statement required by law for the purpose of affecting the witness himself and had nothing to do with any possible future use of the deposition against the prisoner

(3) See R. v. Viram, supra, 240

(4) As in cases under ss 164, 364 of the Criminal Procedure Code.

B. 222 (1876).

act be not obligatory, it may well be that the statement may have been duly taken and yet that that particular act has not been done.(1)

One of the presumptions arising under this section is that the witness did actually say what is recorded. The section provides inter alia that the Court shall presume that the evidence was duly taken, and it cannot be considered to have been duly taken if it does not contain what the witness actually stated (2)

The presumptions raised by this section are applicable in the case of confessions recorded by Magistrates of Native States (3) All the presumptions are rebuttable(4), thus a person who questions the accuracy of the record will be at liberty to give evidence to show that the statements made and language used have not been accurately recorded Witnesses confronted by their former depositions often swear that they were never explained to them before signature or that what they said has not been correctly taken down.(5) Where a witness when examined before the Sessions Court and asked about his deposition taken before the Committing Magistrate denied that it was the deposition made by him, it was said that the presumption allowed by this section could not be made.(6) It is conceived, however, that in such cases the presumption may still be operative notwithstanding the statement of the witness, for though such a statement is given on oath, and affords some evidence against the presumption, still the Court may consider the fact to which the presumption relates not "disproved," and that the deposition was in fact duly taken (7)

Identity of party making statement.

[illegible] for th[illegible] sition[illegible] quen[illegible] exam[illegible] and his evidence was recorded by the Magistrate Subsequently, the pardon was revoked, and he was put on his trial before the Sessions Judge along with the other accused. At the trial the deposition given by him before the Magistrate was put in and used in evidence against him(8) without any proof being given that he was the person who was examined as a witness before the Magistrate It was held that the deposition was inadmissible without proof being given as to the identity of the accused with the person who was examined as a witness before the Magistrate (9)

Presumption as to Gazettes, newspapers, private Acts of Parliament and other documents.

81. The Court shall presume the genuineness of every document purporting to be the London Gazette or the Gazette of India, or the Government Gazette of any local Government, or of any colony, dependency or possession of the British Crown, or to be a newspaper or journal, or to be a copy of a private Act of Parliament printed by the Queen's Printer, and of every

(1) R v Pohp Singh, 10 A, 174, 177, 178 (1887), v ante

(2) R v Samiappa, 15 M, 63, 65 (1891). The case of R. v Fatik Biswas, 1 B L R, A Cr, 13 (1868), is now of no authority, the decision having been given before this Act and based upon the ground of the non-existence of any general provision of the law such as is enacted by the present section.

(3) R v Sunder Singh, 12 A, 595 (1890)

(4) See s 4, definition of "shall presume"

(5) Norton, Ev., 262

(6) R. v. Nussuruddin, 21 W. R., Cr., 5 (1873) The ground of this ruling and the exact nature of the denial made by the witness do not appear in the report; possibly there may have been a question as to the identity of the deponent in which case, of course, no presumption would arise until that was proved; v. post.

(7) See s. 3, ante, definition of "disproved"

(8) See Cr. Pr Code, s. 339.

(9) R v Durga Sorer, 11 C., 580 (1885)

document purporting to be a document directed by any law to be kept by any person, if such document is kept substantially in the form required by law and is produced from proper custody.

Principle.—Omnia præsumuntur rite esse acta: the documents mentioned are official documents or in the nature of such. See Introduction ante.

s. 3 ("Court")
s. 4 ("Shall presume.")
s. 3 ("Document")
s. 37 (Relevancy of statements in Gazettes)
s. 57, Cl. (2) (Judicial notice of Acts)
s. 35 (Entries in public records)
s. 90 (Definition of "proper custody")

COMMENTARY.

Gazettes, newspapers, private Acts and documents directed by law to be kept.

The presumption effects a primâ facie in[illegible] be rebutted.(1) In the case cited it has [illegible] that a certain person is the publisher of a [illegible] a presumption that a newspaper bearing that particular name is the newspaper in question and that every copy of it was issued by him.(2) See as to the relevancy of statements made in notifications appearing in the Gazette, section 37, ante, and as to notifications in the Gazettes of the appointment of public officers, section 57, seventh clause, ante (3) All public Acts are the subject of judicial notice, as are also all local and personal Acts directed by Parliament t[illegible] refers to and includes [illegible] documents by that section to [illegible] under are said to be in [illegible] custody the care of the p[illegible] is improper, if it is proved to have had a legitimate origin, or if the circumstances of the case are such as to render such an origin probable.

Presumption as to document admissible in England without proof of seal or signature.

82. When any document is produced before any Court, purporting to be a document which, by the law in force for the time being in England or Ireland, would be admissible in proof of any particular in any Court of Justice in England or Ireland, without proof of the seal or stamp or signature authenticating it, or of the judicial or official character claimed by the person by whom it purports to be signed, the Court shall presume that such seal, stamp or signature is genuine, and that the person signing it held, at the time when he signed it, the judicial or official character which he claims, and the document shall be admissible for the same purpose for which it would be admissible in England or Ireland.(5)

(1) S. 4, ante, "shall presume"
(2) Jeremiah v. Vas, 36 M., 457 (1912). But Benson, C. J., doubted whether this section is not confined to public documents
(3) See p. 472, ante; as to proclamations, orders, and regulations contained in the London Gazette, see s. 78, cl. 3; and as to the King's Print, 45 Vic., c 9, §§ 2, 4
(4) S 57, cl. 2, and see ante, notes on that clause.
(5) See 14 & 15 Vic., Cap 99, ss. 9—11, and post, notes to this section Principle.—See Introduction, ante, and notes, post.

s. 3 ("Document.") s. 3 ("Court.") s. 4 ("Shall presume.")

8 & 9 Vic., Cap. 113, s. 1; 14 & 15 Vic, Cap. 99, ss. 9—11, 14; Steph. Dig., Arts, 79, 80; Wills, Ev., 2nd Ed., 407—412; Taylor, Ev, 10th Ed., pp. 1147—1158; Phipson, Ev., 5th, Ed. 507; Roscoe, N. P. Ev, 96—102.

COMMENTARY.

Documents admissible in England or Ireland without proof of seal, stamp, signature or official character.

This section which reproduces the provisions of the 9th and 10th sections of 14 & 15 Vic., Cap 99, a Statute making certain documents admissible throughout the Queen's Dominions(1) lays down a rule both of presumption [illegible] which are the proper subject-matter of this portion of the Act, the section further enacts that the document shall be admissible in India for the same purpose for which it would be admissible in England or Ireland. As the documents which are the subject-matter of the section are documents admissible in England without proof of seal(2), stamp or signature, it is necessary shortly to consider the provisions of the abovementioned Statute and the English law anterior thereto in respect of the proof of documents of a public character.

At Common Law when a document was of such character that its preservation and settled custody was of concern to the public at large, or to a considerable section of the public, the production of the original was generally either excused or disapproved of by the Court, and the document was admitted to proof by means of a copy. The ordinary mode of proof of such document was by means of an examined copy, that is, a copy taken on behalf of the party, generally by some clerk or other private person who produced it in the witness-box and proved that he had examined it with the original and that it was correct. It was, however, a matter of doubt what evidence, if any, it was necessary in such case to give of the original, but it seems that, whereas judicial notice would be taken of the existence, authenticity and custody of those of wide public importance, such as the journals of the Houses of Parliament, some evidence would be necessary on these points with regard to documents of less [illegible]

Whenever any book or other d[illegible]

It will be observed that this section does not define what is intended by the words "of such a public nature as to be admissible in evidence, on its mere

(1) Steph Dig., Art. 80

(2) As to the seals of which English Courts take judicial notice, see ante, s. 37, cl. 6, and notes on that clause.

document purporting to be a document directed by any law to be kept by any person, if such document is kept substantially in the form required by law and is produced from proper custody.

Principle.—Omnia præsumuntur rite esse acta: the documents mentioned are official documents or in the nature of such. See Introduction ante.

s. 3 ("Court.")
s. 4 ("Shall presume")
s. 3 ("Document")
s. 37 (Relevancy of statements in Gazettes)
s. 57, Cl. (2) (Judicial notice of Acts)
s. 35 (Entries in public records)
s. 90 (Definition of "proper custody")

COMMENTARY.

Gazettes, newspapers, private Acts and documents directed by law to be kept.

The presumption effects a primâ facie [illegible] which may be rebutted.(1) In the case cited it has [illegible] that a certain person is the publisher of a c[illegible] a presumption that a newspaper bearing that particular name is the newspaper in question and that every copy of it was issued by him.(2) See as to the relevancy of statements made in notifications appearing in the Gazette, section 37, ante, and as to notifications in the Gazettes of the appointment of public officers, section 57, seventh clause, ante.(3) All public Acts are the subject of judicial notice, as are also all local and personal Acts directed by Parliament to be judicially noticed.(4) The last part of the section refers to and includes the documents mentioned in section 35, ante, and most of which are declared to be public documents by section 74. As to the meaning of "proper custody" [illegible] the care of the person with whom, they would naturally be; but no custody is improper, if it is proved to have had a legitimate origin, or if the circumstances of the case are such as to render such an origin probable.

Presumption as to document admissible in England without proof of seal or signature.

82. When any document is produced before any Court, purporting to be a document which, by the law in force for the time being in England or Ireland, would be admissible in proof of any particular in any Court of Justice in England or Ireland, without proof of the seal or stamp or signature authenticating it, or of the judicial or official character claimed by the person by whom it purports to be signed, the Court shall presume that such seal, stamp or signature is genuine, and that the person signing it held, at the time when he signed it, the judicial or official character which he claims, and the document shall be admissible for the same purpose for which it would be admissible in England or Ireland.(5)

(1) S. 4, ante, "shall presume."

(2) Jeremiah v. Vas, 36 M., 457 (1912). But Benson, C. J., doubted whether this section is not confined to public documents

(3) See p. 472, ante; as to proclamations, orders, and regulations contained in the London Gazette, see s. 78, cl. 3; and as to the King's Print, 45 Vic., c. 9, ss. 2, 4.

(4) S. 57, cl. 2, and see ante, notes on that clause.

(5) See 14 & 15 Vic., Cap 99, ss. 9–11, and post, notes to this section Principle.—See Introduction, ante, and notes, post.

s. 3 ("Document.") s 3 ("Court.") s 4 ("Shall presume")

8 & 9 Vic., Cap. 113, s. 1, 14 & 15 Vic, Cap 99, ss 9—11, 14, Steph Dig, Arts, 79, 80; Wills, Ev, 2nd Ed., 407—412; Taylor, Ev, 10th Ed., pp. 1147—1158; Phipson, Ev, 5th, Ed. 507, Roscoe, N. P. Ev, 96—102.

COMMENTARY.

Documents admissible in England or Ireland without proof of seal, stamp, [si]gnature [or] official [ch]aracter.

This section which reproduces the provisions of the 9th and 10th sections of 14 & 15 Vic, Cap 99, a Statute making certain documents admissible throughout the Queen's Dominions(1) lays down a rule both of presumption and admissibility with regard to the documents therein mentioned. The Court must presume (a) that the seal or stamp or signature is genuine; and (b) that the person signing the document hel[illegible] or official character which he claims [illegible] which are the proper subject-matter [illegible] enacts that the document shall be admissible in India for the same purpose for which it would be admissible in England or Ireland. As the documents which are the subject-matter of the section are documents admissible in England without proof of seal(2), stamp or signature, it is necessary shortly to consider the provisions of the abovementioned Statute and the English law anterior thereto in respect of the proof of documents of a public character.

At Common Law when a document was of such character that its preservation and settled custody was of concern to the public at large, or to a considerable section of the public, the production of the original was generally either excused or disapproved of by the Court, and the document was admitted to proof by means of a copy The ordinary mode of proof of such document was by means of an examined copy, that is, a copy taken on behalf of the party, generally by some clerk or other private person who produced it in the witness-box and [illegible] rect. It [illegible] in such c[illegible] would be taken of the existence, authenticity and custody of those of wide public importance, such as the journals of the Houses of Parliament, some evidence would be necessary on these points with regard to documents of less notoriety, such as the Roll of a Manor Court In cases of the latter description [illegible]

[illegible]

sum for [illegible]

It will be observed that this section does not define what is intended by the words "of such a public nature as to be admissible in evidence, on its mere

(1) Steph Dig, Art 80

(2) As to the seals of which English Courts take judicial notice, see ante, s. 37, cl. 6, and notes on that clause.

production from the proper custody; " and it is doubtful whether this description would be held to comprise the Rolls of Manor Courts or any others which ordinarily require some verification as abovementioned.(1) This section of Lord Brougham's Act refers only to such documents as are not provable by means of copies under any other statutable provision. But there are many registers and documents, certified copies of which are receivable in evidence by virtue of some special enactment having special reference to them.(2) Before this general Act several Statutes had enacted provisions with regard to the proof of particular public documents by means of certified and other copies, and various documents were made by them receivable in evidence of certain particulars, provided they were authenticated in the manner prescribed by such Statutes, but in consequence of the omission of any provisions dispensing with the proof of the genuineness of such copies, the beneficial effect of the enactments was much diminished. In order to remove this inconvenience, the Statute 8 and 9 Vic., Cap. 113, by section 1, enacted that(3) :—

Whenever by any Act now in force or hereafter to be in force any certificate, official [illegible]

[illegible] pressed with a stamp [illegible] r made, without any [illegible] ie signature or of the [illegible] without any further [illegible] ve been received in evidence.

The general result of these two Statutes therefore seems to be this, that save where some special statutory provision exists as to the mode of proof of a public document, the proof of an examined copy, or the mere production in Court of a copy purporting to be certified by a person purporting to have the due custody of the original, will be sufficient primâ facie proof of a public document except in the cases where verification of the original was necessary by the Common Law before an examined copy could be given in evidence (4) Where therefore either under the provisions of some special enactment, a certificate, certified copy or other document, or under the general provisions of 14 and 15 Vic., Cap. 99, section 14, a certified copy is admissible in proof of any particular, provided they are respectively authenticated in the manner prescribed, they will be so admissible, if they purport to be so authenticated, without proof of the seal, stamp, signature and official character of the person appearing to have signed the same. Where, in short, a particular is provable by an authenticated document, the Act dispenses with proof of authentication.

Besides the section referred to, Lord Brougham's Act of 1851 (14 and 15 Vic., Cap. 99) contains several clauses which greatly facilitate the proof of

(1) Wills, Ev, 2nd Ed., 409—412.

(2) Taylor, Ev., § 1601-n. where some of the principal of these registers are enumerated

(3) This Act which is known as "The Documentary Evidence Act, 1845," does not extend to Scotland; see Taylor, Ev., § 1601-n The effect of this Statute has been thus concisely stated:—It is provided by many Statutes that various certified copies and other documents are receivable in evidence of certain particulars, provided they are authenticated in the manner provided by such Statutes Whenever by virtue of any such provision any such certified copy or other document as aforesaid is receivable, it is admissible if it purports to be authenticated in the manner prescribed by law without proof of any stamp, seal or signature required for its authentication or of the official character of the person who appears to have signed it. Steph Dig, Art 79.

(4) Wills, Ev., 2nd Ed, 410. 411, in the Appendix A to which is given a tabular list of some of the public documents in most frequent use and their mode of proof.

English documents in Ireland, of Irish documents in England and of English and Irish documents in the colonies. Thus it enacts(1) that :—

Every document, which, by any law now in force or hereafter to be in force, is, or shall be, admissible in evidence of any particular in any Court of Justice in England or Wales, without proof of the seal, or stamp, or signature, authenticating the same, or of the judicial or official character of the person appearing to have signed the same, shall be admitted in evidence to the same extent, and for the same purposes, in any Court of Justice in Ireland, or before any person having in Ireland, by law or by consent of parties, authority to hear, receive and examine evidence, without proof of the seal or stamp, or signature, authenticating the same, or of the judicial or official character of the person appearing to have signed the same

It also enacts(2) that :—

Every document, which, by any law now in force or hereafter to be in force, is or shall be, admissible in evidence of any particular in any Court of Justice in Ireland, without proof of the seal, or stamp, or signature, authenticating the same, or of the judicial or appearing to have signed the same

It further enacts(3) that :—

Every document, which, by any law now in force or hereafter to be in force, is, or shall be, admissible in evidence of any particular in any Court of Justice in England or Wales or Ireland, without proof of the seal, or stamp, or signature, authenticating the same, or of the judicial or official character of the person appearing to have signed the same, shall be admitted in evidence to the same extent and for the same purposes in any Court of Justice of any of the British colonies, or before any person having in any of such colonies by law or consent of parties, authority to hear, receive and examine evidence without proof of the seal or stamp, or signature, authenticating the same, or of the judicial or official character of the person appearing to have signed the same

As already observed, the present section produces the provisions of the 9th and 10th sections of the Statute The 11th section, already cited, which contains similar provisions rendering admissible to the same extent and for the same purpose in the British colonies (including thereby in India)(4) without proof of seal, etc, such documents as are so admissible in England, Ireland or Wales, as also so much of the 19th section as relates to British India, are repealed by the second section and the Schedule of this Act, as also by the Statute Law Revision Act of 1875, and in lieu thereof the provisions of the present section are substituted which is it[illegible] iments whicl[illegible] will be necessary, as the occasion arises, to refer either to the English text-books on [illegible] s, or if the docu- [illegible] with the subject [illegible] ection 11, above-mentioned. The following are some of the documents which in England can [illegible] occurrence in Indian Courts; [illegible] ll. IV., Cap 86, as amended by [illegible] r similar Registers mentioned

(1) S 9

(2) Ss 9, 10

(3) S 11, repeated by this Act; see s 2 and schedule, and post

(4) S 19

(5) See Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed, 507; Wills, Ev, 2nd Ed, 407—412; Steph. Di, Arts 73—84 For a list of the various Statutes referred to by 8 & 9 Vic, Cap 113, making certified copies of documents of a public nature evidence; see Taylor, Ev, foot-note to § 1601 and pp. 1153—1158; Roscoe, N P., Ev, 96—102. For a list of some of the principal public documents which may be proved under s 14 of 14 & 15 Vic., Cap 99; see Taylor, Ev, §§ 1599 A, 1600; Roscoe, N. P. Ev., 101, 120.

in Taylor, Ev., pp. 1056, 1057; ib., 10th Ed., pp. 1150—1151; certain documents relating to Companies (8 & 9 Vic., Cap 16, § 60; 25 & 26 Vic., Cap. 89, §§ 61, 174, rr. 4, 5, 8; 40 & 41 Vic, Cap. 26, § 6); Copyright Registers (5 & 6 Vic., Cap. 45, § 11; 7 & 8 Vic., Cap 12, § 8; 25 & 26 Vic., Cap. 68, §§ 4, 5); Orders in Lunacy (53 Vic., Cap 5, §§ 144, 152; Lunacy Orders, 1883, Order CIX); Newspapers Proprietors' Register (44 & 45 Vic., Cap. 60, § 15); Patent Office Registers (46 & 47 Vic, Cap. 57, §§ 89, 100); Registers and other Documents under the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894 (57 & 58 Vic., Cap. 60; see Taylor, Ev., 10th Ed., pp. 1157—1158). Official books and registers may be proved either by production of the originals or copies. In practice they are now always proved by means of examined or certified copies unless the circumstances render it necessary that the Court should examine the original entry.(1) Other documents are provable by examined or certified copies under the general provisions of 14 & 15 Vic, Cap. 99, section 14 (v. ante),(2) or by certified copies under the provisions of particular Statutes.

In the case of a document tendered in evidence under this section, the question for determination will be whether, assuming that the fact to be proved thereby is a relevant fact, the document is or is not one which is admissible in England in proof of that fact without proof of its authentication. If it is so, then the document is admissi ... d if so admissible, the Court must raise th are declared by this section sible in England must be determined by reference to the particular Statute governing the case, or if there be none to the general provisions of 14 & 15 Vic., Cap. 99, section 14, abovementioned. If under either Statute proof by means of an authenticated document is admissible, then under 8 & 9 Vic., Cap. 113, no proof of the authentication is necessary, and the document is one which in England is the subject of the provisions of sections 9, 10, and 11 of 14 & 15 Vic., Cap. 99, and in India the present section (3)

Thus the Chief Magistrate of the City of Glasgow being a person lawfully authorised to administer oaths, ... of a power-of-attorney taken before him and seal of the City of Glasgow, an cient proof of the execution c were made under section 16 of held that since a declaration as to the execution of a power taken under ... Act or the Probate and Letters of Administration Amendment Act, 1858(6), at any place to which the Act extends, before a person "lawfully authorised to administer oaths" would be admissible in England or Ireland as evidence of the execution of the power, it should for that purpose, if both conditions be fulfilled, be also admissible in this country under the provisions of the present section.(7)

(1) Taylor, Ev., § 1595, and see notes to those paragraphs as to the principal instances in which it is necessary to produce the original document itself. Quære, whether this is so in regard to such documents in India.

(2) See Taylor, Ev, § 1600.

(3) Ib, § 1601.

(4) In the goods of Henderson, deceased, 22 C., 491 (1895).

(5) 5 & 6 Will IV, Cap 62

(6) 21 & 22 Vic., Cap 95.

(7) It is not clear why in this case it should have been considered necessary, in the matter of the seals appended to the certificates, to have recourse to the provisions of s 57, cl. (6) (judicial notice of seals), since if the document in question was one which was admissible in England without proof of seal or signature (and only in such case was the evidence offered within the scope of this section), the Court was bound to presume the genuineness of the seal and signature under the provisions of the present section, wholly independent of the question whether the seal was one which came within the pr*view of s. 67, cl. (6).*

In the following cases(1) decided on the Original Side of the High Court at Calcutta, similar evidence was held to be admissible. A power-of-attorney of Lyme Regis and the Mayor under the Statutory Declara- minister oaths in the Supreme Court of Judicature in England was accepted as proved (2) A power-of-attorney executed in England in the presence of a solicitor and a clerk in his service, the former of whom made a declaration before the Mayor of the Borough of Guildford, who was also a Justice of the Peace, and who authenticated the declaration by his certificate and official seal, was accepted as proved (3) A power-of-attorney executed in Scotland in the presence of a writer to the signet and a law clerk, and certified by a declaration of the writer to the signet, and which declaration was authenticated by a certificate of the Lord Provost of Edinburgh under the seal of the Corporation of the City of Edinburgh, was rejected as not having been executed before, and authenticated by, any of the persons mentioned in section 85 of this Act (4) The present section does not appear to have been considered. It is submitted, however, with reference to the observations in that case to section 85, post, that this latter section is an enabling section, its object being to add to the facilities of proof and not to exclude any other mode of proof than that allowed by that section It has been since so held, it being pointed out that in arriving at this decision, Norris, J, seems to have assumed, contrary to the fact, that the provision contained in section 85 is of an exhaustive character, and that no other mode of proving the execution of a power is admissible. So on an application for letters of administration with the will annexed, made by the attorney of the executors therein named, it appeared that the applicant's power-of-attorney was not executed in the presence of a Notary Public, but with regard to the execution by each of the executors, one of the attesting witnesses had made a declaration before a Notary Public to the effect that he witnessed the execution of the power-of-attorney by one of the executors, and that the signature of the other attesting witness was the proper signature of the person bearing that name, and such declaration was signed, sealed and certified by a notary public; it was held that the power-of-attorney was sufficiently prc of Administration was mad in the presence of unofficial execution of the power be Aberdeen" The declaratio
Provost under his signature and seal of office, and the Lord Provost's certificate was authenticated by the certificate of a Notary Public under his hand and official seal. The declaration was accepted.(6) An application for Letters of Administration was made under a power-of-attorney executed in England in the presence of unofficial witnesses, one of whom under the Statutory Declarations Act, 1835, made a declaration as to the execution of the power before a Notary Public who authenticated the declaration by a certificate under his signature and official seal. The declaration was accepted.(7) An original will executed in England was sent to Calcutta with a power-of-attorney authorizing the person named therein to apply to this Court for Letters of Administration with a copy of the will annexed. The power was executed in England before

(1) The authors are indebted for the notes of these cases to Mr Belchambers, the late Registrar of the High Court, Original Side

(2) In the goods of John Eliot, deceased, December 15th, 1886, per Trevelyan, J

(3) In the goods of William Abbott, deceased, November 19th, 1887, per Trevelyan, J.

(4) In the goods of Primrose, deceased, 16 C 776, July 13th, 1889, per Norris, J, see s 85, post

(5) In re Sladen, 21 M, 492 (1898).

(6) In the goods of Henderson, deceased, April 6th, 1892, per Hill, J.

(7) In the goods of Henry Pack ceased, June 20th, 1892 per Hill, two solicitors. One of the attesting witnesses, who was also an attesting witness to the will, made a declaration as to the execution of the power under the Statutory Declarations Act, 1835, before a Notary Public who authenticated the declaration by a certificate under his signature and official seal The only evidence of the execution of the will was a declaration made under the Statutory Declarations Act, 1835, before a Commissioner to administer oaths in the Supreme Court of Judicature in England. The will and the power were both (as they would have been in England or Ireland) deemed to have been sufficiently proved.(1) An application for Letters of Administration with a copy of the will annexed was made under a power-of-attorney executed in England before two persons described as solicitor's clerks. One of these persons made a declaration as to the execution of the power under the Act above-mentioned before the Lord Mayor of London. The declaration authenticated by a certificate of the Lord Mayor under his signature and seal of office was accepted.(2) An application for Letters of Administration with a copy of the will annexed was made under a power-of-attorney executed in England before a solicitor who made a declaration as to the execution of the power under the Statutory Declarations Act, 1835, before the Lord Mayor of London This declaration authenticated by a certificate of the Lord Mayor under his signature and seal of office was accepted.(3) An application for Letters of Administration with the will annexed was made under a power of-attorney executed in England. In order to furnish proof of the execution of the power, one of the attesting witnesses made a declaration under the above-mentioned Acts of the facts before a notary public who authenticated the declaration by a certificate under his signature and the official seal. It was held that as a certificate of a Notary Public in the Queen's Dominions authenticating a declaration made before him as to the execution of the power would be admissible in England or Ireland in proof of the execution of the power, such a declaration was also admissible for the same purpose under the present section (4) In the case cited it has been held that a Register of Births and Deaths kept under Madras Act III of 1899 is a public document and a certified copy of an entry in it is admissible under this section and section 35(5)

It is to be noted that the provisions of this section are, as are also those of section 85, post, cumulative (v. ante). Thus in addition to the mode of proof here admitted other methods are, in particular cases, provided for by section 78 ante.

Presumption as to maps or plans made by authority of Government.

83. The Court shall presume that maps or plans purporting to be made by the authority of Government were so made, and are accurate; but maps or plans made for the purposes of any cause must be proved to be accurate.

Principle.—The presumption in this, as in other sections, is based on the maxim omnia rite esse acta; for it will be presumed that Government in the preparation of maps and plans for public purposes will appoint competent officers to execute the work entrusted to them, and that such officers will do their duty. Survey maps are official documents prepared by competent persons and with such publicity and notice to persons interested as to be admissible and valuable evidence as to the state of things at the time that they were prepared. They are not, however, conclusive and may be shown to be wrong.

(1) In the goods of H. W. Agar, deceased, Aug. 31st, 1892, per Hill, J.

(2) In the goods of William Cornell, deceased, Sept 16th, 1892, per Pigot, J.

(3) In the goods of Henry Francis, deceased, May 2nd. 1893, per Sale, J.

(4) In the goods of Anna Hinde, deceased, January 11th, 1895, per Ameer Ali, J.

(5) Krishnamachariar v. Krishnamachariar, 38 M., 166 (1915).

but in the absence of evidence to the contrary, they are judicially receivable as correct when made (1)But maps and plans made for the purposes of any cause are not the subject of such a presumption being made post litem motam.

See Note, post

s. 3 ("Court")
s. 4 ("Shall presume")
s. 36 (Relevancy of statements in maps or plans made under the authority of Government.)

Field, Ev, 6th Ed., 166—171, 252, Norton, Ev, 200, 201

COMMENTARY.

The map must purport to have been made by the authority of Government, that is, by the Government, as such, for public purposes. This section does not deal with the admissibility of a private map which will depend on whether it is otherwise relevant (2) Therefore a map prepared by an officer of Government, while in charge of a Khas-mehal, Government being at the time in possession of the mehal merely as a private proprietor, is not a map purporting to have been made under the authority of Government within the meaning of this section, the accuracy of which is to be presumed, but such a map may be evidence under the 13th section of this Act (3) The maps and plans mentioned in the section are maps and plans made by the Government for public purposes, as for instance a Government survey-map(4), and a map or plan made by the Government for private purposes or where the Government is acting otherwise than in a public capacity, is not the subject of this section (5) In the case which is undermentioned a map was tendered in evidence purporting to be a map of the silted bed of the river Sankho It was held that, as the map upon the face of it was neither a thak map nor a survey-map, such as is made by, or under the authority of, Government for public purposes, and as it appeared to have been made by Government for a particular purpose, which was not a public purpose, namely, the settlement of the silted bed of a certain river, the provisions of section 36 and of the present section were not applicable to this map (6) But though in the case of a map not coming within this section no presumption of accuracy can be made, the mode in which the case has been dealt with and the absence of objection may lead to the inference that any objection to want of proof of its accuracy has been waived (7)

The word "accurate" in this section means accuracy of the drawing and correctness of the measurement It may be assumed that the map was correctly drawn according to the scale on which it is said to have been prepared, but that is all (8) Thus the accuracy of a thakbust Ameen's map, which may be

(1) Maung Thin v Ma Zi Zan, 44 I C, 247

(2) Sib Charan Dey v Nilkantha Mahto, 17 C L J, 642 (1913)

(3) Junmajoy Mullick v Dwarka Nath, 5 C, 287 (1879), s c, 4 C L R, 574, Ram Chander v Bunseedhur Naik, 9 C, 741, 743 (1883), Kanto Prasad v Jagat Chandra, 23 C, 335, 338 (1895), Dinomoni Chowdhrani v Brojo Mohini, 29 C, 191 199 (1901), in which the map was held to be sufficiently proved, but see Tarucknath Mookerjee v Mahendronath Ghose, 13 W R, 56 (1870).

(4) Jogessur Singh v Bycunt Nath, 5 C., 822 (1880), Omrita Lall v Kalee Pershad, 25 W R, 179 (1876), Niamutoollah Khadim v Himmu Ali, 22 W. R, 519, 520 (1874), survey-maps and survey-proceedings being public documents are provable by certified copies (see ss 74—77), sometimes, however, these copies, and occasionally the maps made by public officers, are prepared with little skill See observations in Field, Ev, 4th Ed, p 221, note, and in Protab Chunder v. Ranee Surnomoyee, 19 W R, 361—364 (1873).

(5) Ram Chunder v. Bunseedhur Naik, 9 C., 743, supra.

(6) Kanto Prasad v Jogat Chandra, 21 C., 335, 338 (1895)

(7) Madhabi Sundari v Gaganendra Nath, 9 C. W. N., 111, 113 (1904)

(8) Omrito Lall v. Kalee Pershad, 25 W. R, 179 (1876).

assumed under this section, does not refer to the laying down of boundaries according to the rights of the parties. If it were so, a Deputy Collector would be usurping the functions of the Civil Court. To be binding on the parties to a suit such a map must be supported by evidence that it was drawn in their presence or in that of their agents (1) Nor can a thakbust map be regarded as raising a presumption of correctness as to the amount of debutter land in one of the villages shown in the map, as the Ameen who made it had no authority to determine what lands were debutter but only to lay down, and to map, boundaries (2) The presumption in regard to the accuracy of a map is in no way affected by the fact that such map has been supers[illegible] the same authority, and by an order of [illegible] prove the presumption to show that [illegible] because it is quite consistent with that order that the actual bearing of the land in suit should be correct.(3) Where a Civil Ameen makes a local inquiry as to the situation of certain disputed lands with reference to the Collectorate map put in by the plaintiffs, and not objected to by the defendants who are present and recognise the boundary as that whereon the inquiry is to be based, the map must be taken to be one which the parties recognise as correct and trustworthy irrespective of the question whether it was prepared with the authority of Government.(4)

Maps or plans made for the purposes of any cause must be proved to be accurate. They must be proved by the persons who made them. They are post litem motam and lack the necessary trustworthiness. Where maps are made for the purposes of a suit, there is, even apart from fraud, which may exist, a tendency to colour, exaggerate, and favour which can only be counteracted by swearing the maker to the truth of his plan.(5) The rights of property as between two parties cannot be affected by a map drawn for a totally different purpose, and a purpose totally irrelevant to the subject of the dispute between them.(6)

Presumption as to collections of laws and reports of decisions

84. The Court shall presume the genuineness of every book purporting to be printed or published under the authority of the Government of any country, and to contain any of the laws of that country, and of every book purporting to contain reports of decisions of the Courts of such country.

Principle.—See Introduction, ante, and notes to section 38, ante.

s. 3 ("Court.") s. 38 (Relevancy of statements as to any law contained in law books.)
s. 4 ("Shall presume.")

COMMENTARY.

Law-books and reports

When the Court has to form an opinion as to a law of any country, any statement of such law contained in a book purporting to be printed or published under the authority of the Government of such country and to contain any such law, and any report of a ruling of the Courts of such country contained in a book purporting to be a report of such rulings, is relevant (7) This section

(1) Ib.
(2) Juroo Kumari v. Lalonmoni, 18 C., 22 (1890), s c, 17 I. A., 145.
(3) Joggessur Singh v. Bycunt Nath, 5 C., 822 (1880); s. c., 6 C. L. R., 519.
(4) Gunga Narain v. Radhika Mohun 21 W. R., 115 (1873).
(5) Norton, Ev., 200, 201.
(6) John Kerr v. Nussur Mahomed, 2 W. R. (P. C.), 29 (1864).
(7) S. 28, ante; see ante, notes to that section and Act XVIII of 1875 (Indian Law Reports).

which corresponds with the 12th section of the preceding Act, lays down a rule of presumption in relation to such books, which is, however, rebuttable, and dispenses with proof of the genuineness of the books of any country containing laws and rulings. Section 57, first and second clauses, ante, requires Courts to take judicial notice of the existence of all laws and Statutes in British India and in the United Kingdom Section 74, ante, declares statutory records to be public documents, and section 78, ante, enacts a method of proof in the case of Acts and Statutes

Presump-tion as to powers-of-attorney.

85. The Court shall presume that every document purporting to be a power-of-attorney, and to have been executed before, and authenticated by, a Notary Public, or any Court, Judge, Magistrate, British Consul or Vice-Consul, or representative of Her Majesty, or of the Government of India, was so executed and authenticated (1)

Principle.—See Introduction, ante The fact of execution before and authentication by, persons of the position and office of those in the section mentioned affords a guarantee and primâ facie proof of such execution and authentication respectively.

s 3 ("Court") s 4 ("Shall presume") s. 57 Cls (6), (7), (Judicial notice)

Act VII of 1882 (Powers-of-attorney). Act XVI of 1908 as amended by Act IV of 1914 and Acts V and XV of 1917, ss 32, 33 (Registration), 52 & 53 Vic, Cap 10, s 6

COMMENTARY.

Powers-of-attorney.

A power-of-attorney is a writing given and made by one person authorizing another, who, in such case, is called the attorney of the person (or donee of the power) appointing him to do any lawful act in the stead of that person, as to receive rents, debts, to make appearance and application in Court(2) before an officer of registration(3) and the like (4) It may be either general or special, to do all acts or to do some particular act. The nature of this instrument is to give the attorney the full power and authority of the maker to accomplish the acts intended to be performed, and its scope may be interpreted by implication of the nature of the business with which the attorney is entrusted.(5) Provision is made for these i [illegible] which, among other thing [illegible] of-attorney has been duly [illegible]

(1) See s 69 of the earlier Act, which contained a restriction which is not in the present section, viz, that the power should have been executed at a place distant more than 100 miles from the place of production, in order that its execution and authenticity could be presumed.

(2) See O III, r. 2, p. 631, Woodroffe & Ameer Ali, Civ Pr Code, 2nd Ed

(3) See as to powers-of-attorney executed in favour of persons authorized hereby to present documents for registration, Act XVI of 1908, ss 32, 33. By the terms of the latter section any power-of-attorney mentioned therein may be proved by the production of it without further proof, when it purports on the face of it to have been executed before, and authenticated by, the person or Court therein before mentioned Except for registration purposes there is no presumption as to the genuineness or otherwise of a registered power-of-attorney, Field, Ev, 6th Ed., 252, and mere registration is not itself sufficient evidence of its execution, Salimatul Fatima v. Koylashpati, 17 C., 903 (1890), dissenting from the report in Kristo Nath v. Brown 14 C., 176, 180 (1886)

(4) Wharton, Law Lexicon, sub voce. See also Belchambers' Practice of the Civil Courts, p 405.

(5) Bank of Bengal v [illegible] manathan Chetty, P C, 43 C., 52 [illegible] Bryant Powis and Bryan [illegible] People, A. C., 170 (1893).

of Rangoon, a certified copy of such instrument shall, without further proof, be sufficient evidence of the contents of the instrument and of the deposit hereof in the High Court. This section enacts a presumption of due execution and authentication in favour of powers-of-attorney executed before, and authenticated by, the persons therein mentioned. The Court may be required to take judicial notice of the seals, signatures and office of the persons so authenticating the power.(1) A Notary Public has by the law of nations credit everywhere (2) not, however, draw any such distinction. In order to comply with the provisions of this section, the power-of-attorney must be executed before, and authenticated by, one of the persons mentioned therein.(5) So on an application for letters of administration to the estate of a deceased who was domiciled in Scotland, and to whose estate one P had been appointed executor dative qua Father, the application being made by one K under a power-of-attorney granted by P, such power not having been executed and authenticated in the manner prescribed by this section, it was held that the application must be refused.(6) Though the power-of-attorney was not admissible under this section it seems to have been assumed that the provision herein contained is of an exhaustive character and that no other mode of proving the execution of a power is admissible. That assumption is not wa[illegible] it have been intended to exclude o[illegible] a document, purporting t[illegible] before and authenticated by a Notary Public, is produced before the Court, an affidavit of identification as to the person purporting to make the power being

(1) See s 57, cls (6) and (7), ante

(2) Hutcheson v. Mannington, 6 Ves, 823

(3) But under Act XXVI of 1881, as amended by Act V of 1914 and by Act VIII of 1919 (Negotiable Instruments, s. 138), the Governor-General is empowered to appoint any person to be a Notary Public under this Act and to make rules for such Notaries Public See also ss 399, 100—102, ib; under the first of these sections a "Notary Public" is defined to also include any person appointed by the Governor-General in Council to perform the functions of a Notary Public under this Act As to Notarial acts by persons abroad and judicial notice of the seal and signature of such person, see 52 & 53 Vic, Cap 10, s 6; Taylor, Ev, §§ 1567, 1568.

(4) Taylor, Ev, § 6 and cases there cited which are not uniform. But see Armstrong v. Storkham, 24 L. J., Ch, 176, in which a power-of-attorney executed in British Honduras and in the presence of a Notary Public was proved in England under the Chancery Procedure Act, by the production of the Notary's certificate under his hand and official seal See also Hayward v. Stephens, 36 L. J, Ch, 135. A distinction has, however, been drawn between foreign Notaries Public in countries not under the King's Dominions and Notaries Public within the King's Dominions In the former case proof is required in verification of the signature of the Notary Public; Lord Kinnaird v Lady Saltoun, 1 Maddock, 227; Garvey v Hibberd, 1 J. & W., 180; 5 D M & G, 910; In re Earl's Trusts, 4 K. & J, 300, In re Davis' Trusts, L. R, 8 Eq. 98, Cook v Wilby, L R, 25 Ch D, 769 In the other case no proof is required See also Nye v. MacDonald, L. R., 3 P C, 331.

(5) In the goods of A J. Primrose, deceased, 16 C., 776, 779, the judgment in that case says "executed before or be authenticated by"; the section, however, says "executed before and authenticated by."

(6) Ib.; referring to Anonymous case in Fulton, 72 (1837); in the goods of Macgowan, Morton, 370 (1841); see, however, observations on this case in notes to s 82, ante, the notes of cases referred to under s. 82, and In re Sladen, 21 M., 492 (1898), in which case the power-of-attorney was not executed in the presence of any of the persons designated in this section There is a clear distinction between the two modes of proof There declarations of execution having taken place were made before Notaries Public; in the case of the present section the power must be executed before and authenticated by the Notary Public to be admissible

(7) In re Sladen, 21 M., 492, 494 (1898), v. ante, s 82.

the person named therein is unnecessary (1) A power-of-attorney executed in England before a Justice of the Peace and authenticated by his signature alone without his official seal was, in the undermentioned case, accepted.(2) The presumption raised by the section is rebuttable (3)

86. The Court may presume that any document purporting to be a certified copy of any judicial record of any country not forming part of Her Majesty's dominions is genuine and accurate, if the document purports to be certified in any manner which is certified by any representative of Her Majesty or of the Government of India in or for such country, to be the manner commonly in use in that country for the certification of copies of judicial records.

Presumption as certified copies of foreign judicial records.

An officer who, with respect to any territory or place not forming part of Her Majesty's dominions, is a Political Agent therefor, as defined in section 3, clause (40) of the General Clauses Act, 1897(5), shall for the purposes of this section, be deemed to be a representative of the Government of India in and for the country comprising that territory or place.

Principle.—See Introduction, ante. In addition to the presumption of accuracy, which exists in the case of the certified copy itself, there is an additional guarantee afforded by the authenticating certificate.

s 3 ("Court")
s 4 ("May presume")
s 78, Cl. (6) (Proof of foreign public document)

COMMENTARY

This section says that if a copy of a foreign judicial record purports to Foreign judicial brought in a certain foreign Court between R and C, one B was examined who deposed that in his presence the evidence of C was taken by the Judge and the suit was adjudicated and the order passed. He also put in a document which

(1) In the goods of Mylne, 9 C W N, 986 (1905)

(2) In the goods of Briddon, Nov 19th, 1889, per Wilson, J In another case (In the goods of Homfray, June 27th, 1891, per Wilson, J), a power-of-attorney executed in England in the presence of unofficial witnesses, and accompanied by an original letter from the person who executed the power, which letter was proved by the affidavit of the applicant, was accepted. But this was apparently under the provisions of s. 82, ante

(3) See s 4, ante, "shall presume"

(4) These words in s. 86 were substituted for the original words by Act III of 1891, s. 8

(5) The words in brackets were substituted by s 4, Act V of 1899, for the words "of the Foreign Jurisdiction and Extradition Act, 1879, and section 190 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1882." According to the General Clauses Act, 1897, the term 'Political Agent' includes "(a) the principal officer representing the Government in any territory or place beyond the limits of British India, and (b) any officer of the Government of India or of any Local Government appointed by the Government of India or the Local Government to exercise all or any of the powers of a Political Agent for any place not forming part of British India under the law for the time being in force relating to foreign jurisdiction and extradition" As to the position of Political Agents, see Sir William Harcourt's argument in Damodar Gordhan v Deoram Kanji, I B, 443 (1876).

(6) This para, other than the words added by s 4, Act V of 1899, was added to s 86 by Act II of 1891, s. 8.

he swore was a copy of C's deposition and was in the handwriting of one of the ... ne manner he proved the deposition of R ... this evidence on the ground that it did ... present section. But it was held that this section does not exclude other proof than that provided by it. That the statement of B, that R sued C, and that C gave evidence in his presence was primary evidence of those matters. That the depositions of C and R were public documents under section 74, and the proof of those records by B was secondary evidence, and as such admissible under sections 65 and 66.(1) Foreign judicial records are provable in this country under the provisions of section 78, 6th clause, ante. The present section enacts a presumption in the case of certified copies of such records when authenticated in the manner mentioned therein. Having regard to the definition of "may presume"(2), the Court may either regard the genuineness and accuracy of such copies as proved, unless and until it is disproved, or it may call for proof of it. In a recent case in which a copy of a document which had been proved in a German Court was admitted, it was held that there might be cases in which a copy would not suffice and the original must be produced.(3) This section is an instance of documents to which section 65, clause (f), refers.(4) And now section 14 of the Civil Procedure Code enacts that "the Court shall presume upon the production of any document purporting to be a certified copy of a foreign judgment, that such judgment was pronounced by a Court of competent jurisdiction, unless the contrary appears on the record, but such presumption may be displaced by proving want of jurisdiction.(5)

The substitution in the first clause of this section of the words 'in' and 'for' in place of "resident in," as also the addition of the second clause(6), were occasioned by the ruling in the case under-mentioned(7), in which it was held that there was no representative of Her Majesty or of the Government of India residing in the State of Kuch Behar, and that consequently certified copies of judicial records of that State could not be received in evidence in the Courts of British India under the provisions of this section as then framed. In the case cited below(8) a copy was admitted of a judgment of the Court of a French Colony, at which neither Her Majesty nor the Indian Government had a representative, on the testimony of a witness who was acquainted with the handwriting of the Registrar of such Court, and who swore that such Registrar was the keeper of the Court's records and had duly signed and sealed the document.

Presumption as to books, maps and charts.

87. The Court may presume that any book to which it may refer for information on matters of public or general interest, and that any published map or charts, the statements of which are relevant facts, and which is produced for its inspection, was written and published by the person, and at the time and place, by whom or at which it purports to have been written or published.

Principle.—See Introduction and Notes to sections 36, 57, ante.

s. 3 ("Court")
s. 4 ("May presu... as ...
s. 36 (Relevancy of statement in maps, charts and plans.)

(1) Haranund Roy v. Notaietlangia Ram, 4 C. W. N., 429 (1899) ... al s, 27 C., 639; see s. 65, ante ... L.
(2) S. 4, ante.
(3) In the matter of R...olf Stallman (1911), 39 C., 164.
(4) Hurish Chunder v. Prosunno Coomar, 22 W. R., 303 (1874).
(5) Civil Procedure Code, s. 14, 2nd Ed., p. 101.
(6) By s. 8, of Act III of 1891.
(7) Ganee Mahomed v. Tarini Charan, 14 C., 546 (1847).
(8) Monmohiney Dossee v. Greeshchunder Bose, 8 Mad. L. J., 14 (1873).

s. 3 ("Relevant")
s. 3 ("Fact.")
s. 57 (Documents of reference.)
s. 83 (Maps or plans made by the authority of Government.)
s. 90 (Maps or plans 30 years old.)

COMMENTARY.

Books; Maps; Charts

In all the cases when the Court is called upon to take judicial notice of a fact, and also in all matters of public history, science or art, the Court may resort for its aid to appropriate books or documents of reference.(1) The Court under this section may presume(2) that such books were written and published by the person, and at the time and place by whom, or at which, they purport to have been written or published. Further, statements of facts in issue, or relevant facts, made in published maps or charts generally offered for public sale, or in maps or plans, made under the authority of Government, as to matters usually represented or stated in such maps, charts, or plans, are themselves relevant facts (3). Under this section the Court may presume(4) that any published map or chart was written and published by the person and at the time and place by whom, or at which, it purports to have been written or published. The section raises no presumption of accuracy, but this might, if the case were a proper one, be presumed under the general provisions contained in section 114, post. In the case, however, of maps and plans purporting to be made by the authority of Government, the Court must presume that they were so made and that they are accurate; but maps or plans made for the purposes of any cause, that is, maps specially prepared for that purpose and with a view of their use in evidence must be proved to be accurate.(5) In the [illegible] and e[illegible]
cular [illegible]

Presumption as to telegraphic messages.

88. The Court may presume that a message, forwarded from a telegraph office to the person to whom such message purports to be addressed, corresponds with a message delivered for transmission at the office from which the message purports to be sent; but the Court shall not make any presumption as to the person by whom such message was delivered for transmission.(7)

Principle.—See Introduction and Notes, post.

s. 3 ("Court")
s. 4 ("May presume.")
s. 16 (Course of Business.)
s. 114 ILLUST. (f) (General presumptions.)

Roscoe, N. P. Ev., 43; Wharton, Ev., §§ 76, 1323, 1329; Wood's Practice, Ev., 2. A Treatise on communication by Telegraph by Morris Gray (Boston), 1885, Chapters X—XII.

COMMENTARY.

Telegraph messages.

If a telegraphic message is forwarded, that is, delivered by the office to the person to whom such message purports to be addressed, the Court may make the presumption mentioned. The section itself therefore does not, in the first

(1) See s. 57, penultimate clause, and ante, notes on that clause.
(2) See s. 4, ante.
(3) S. 36, ante, see notes on that section, ante.
(4) See s. 4, ante.
(5) S. 83, ante.
(6) S. 90; see s. 3, ante, illust. A map or plan is a "document."
(7) Nor in this respect does the Act contain any special provision as to Government Telegrams, Varadarajulu Naidu v. King Emperor, 42 M., 885; s. c., 20 Cr. L. J., 455.

place, raise any presumption of delivery, but assumes, on the contrary, that such delivery has taken place. But, in the case of the post office, there is a presumption that a letter properly directed and posted will be delivered in due course(1); and this presumption will be extended to postal telegrams, now that the inland telegraphs form part of the Government postal system.(2) Proof that the message was sent over the wires, addressed to a particular person at a particular place, he being shown to be at the primâ facie case of the reception ( presumption may be raised under where there is a question whether a particular act was done, the existence of any course of business, according to which it would naturally have been done, is a relevant fact and may be proved.(4) But the sending of a telegram addressed to a person at a given place and the receipt of an answer purporting to be from him in due course are not admissible to prove that he was in the place at the time in question.(5) T at the time in question, the re very of the message.(6) The fold character; firstly, a presumption of conduct that the due course of business has been followed (omnia rite esse acta), viz., that the officials of the telegraph office have forwarded a message which is in the same terms as that which they have received for transmission; secondly, a presumption based upon an experience of a physical law, viz., that the message as sent by wire from the office of transmission corresponds with that which has been received at the office of despatch. The Court shall not, however, make any presumption as to the person by whom such message was delivered for transmission.(7) Presumably this refers to the entries on telegrams indicating the persons by whom they are sent. It is obvious that there is no guarantee that the person named in the telegram as the sender thereof was in fact the actual sender. As to the proof of the contents of telegrams, see section 91, post.

Presumption as to due execution &c., of documents not produced

89. The Court shall presume that every document called for and not produced after notice to produce, was attested, stamped and executed in the manner required by law.

Principle.—See Notes, post.

s. 3 ("Court")
s. 4 ("Shall presume")
ss. 65, Cl. (a), 66, (Notice to produce.)
ss. 68—72 (Attestation.)
s. 164 (Using documents, production of which was refused on notice.)

Steph. Dig., Art. 86; Norton, Ev., 265; Taylor, Ev., §§ 1171, 1847, 148

COMMENTARY.

Presumption as to due execution, &c., of documents not produced.

There is here not only a presumption in favour of innocence, whence it may be assumed that everything has been done which the law required, but a presumption which is, or is in the nature of, that which is raised contra spoliatorem from the non-production of the document.(8) As against the party refusing or neglecting to produce it on notice, there is a presumption that it has

(1) See British and American Telegraph Co. v. Colson, L. R., 6 Ex., 122, per Bramwell B., Stocken v. Collin, 7 M. & W., 515, Roscoe, N. P. Ev., 43; Wharton, Ev., § 1323.

(2) Roscoe, N. P., Ev., 43.

(3) Wharton, Ev., § 76 and see ib., §§ 1323, 1329

(4) S. 16, see notes to that section.

(5) Wharton, Ev., § 76. The rule with regard to replies by telegram appears to stand on a different footing from that relating to letters, see Wood's Practice Ev., 2, note (3).

(6) See ib., § 1328

(7) S. 88. See, as to mode of proof of telegrams, Burr. Jones, Ev., § 207

(8) Norton, Ev., 265.

been properly stamped(1), attested(2), and executed Evidence to the contrary that the document was not properly stamped, attested or executed may be given. So it was held that if secondary evidence be tendered to prove the contents of an instrument either lost or detained by the opposite party after notice to produce(3), it will be presumed that the original was duly stamped, unless some evidence to the contrary, as for example that it was unstamped, when last seen(4), can be given (5) But this power of giving rebutting evidence is subject to the rule enacted by section 164, post, namely, that, when a party refuses to produce a document which he has had notice to produce, he cannot afterwards use the document as evidence without the consent of the other party or the order of the Court Thus A sues B on an agreement, and gives B notice to produce it. At the trial, A calls for the document, and B refuses to produce it. A gives secondary evidence of its contents B seeks to produce the document itself to contradict the secondary evidence given by A, or in order to show that the agreement is not stamped He cannot do so (6) As already observed English Courts presume that a lost document was duly stamped unless and until evidence to the contrary is given (7) Under this Act also in the case of documents not coming within the terms of this section, either by reason of notice not being necessary, or the document having been lost or the like, the Court has power in a proper case to make a similar presumption under the provisions of section 114, post.(8)

Presumption as to documents thirty years old.

90. Where any document, purporting(9) or proved to be thirty years old, is produced from any custody which the Court in the particular case considers proper, the Court may presume that the signature and every other part of such document, which purports to be in the handwriting of any particular person, is in that person's handwriting, and, in the case of a document executed or attested, that it was duly executed and attested by the persons by whom it purports to be executed and attested

Explanation.—Documents are said to be in proper custody if they are in the place in which and under the care of the person with whom, they would naturally be; but no custody is improper if it is proved to have a legitimate origin(10), or if the circumstances of the particular case are such as to render such an origin probable. This explanation applies also to section 81.

Illustrations

(a) A has been in possession of landed property for a long time. He produces from his custody deeds relating to the land, showing his titles to it. The custody is proper.

(1) Hart v Hart, 1 Hare, 1; Taylor, Ev, § 117

(2) Taylor, Ev, § 1847: in this case a party who is driven to give secondary evidence of the contents of the document need not call an attesting witness.

(3) See ss 65, cl. (a), 66 ante

(4) Marine Investment Co v Haviside, L. R, 5 H L, 624

(5) Taylor, Ev., § 148, and cases there cited, Steph Dig, Art 86

(6) S 164, post, Illust

(7) Taylor, Ev, § 148

(8) In Markby, Ev., 67, 68, the opinion is expressed that the section is restricted to cases where a notice to produce is delivered to the adverse party, and that it does not extend to cases where a summons to produce is delivered to a stranger to the suit See Ahmed Raza v. Abid Husain, P C, 38 A, 494 (1916) (document lost in the Mutiny).

(9) That is "stating itself to be" ib, 68 See Charittar Rai v. Kailash Behari, 3 Pat. L. J., 306; s c., 44 I. C., 422.

(10) See Sharfudin v. Govind, 27 B., 452, 462 (1902); s c. sub voc. Tajudin v. Govind, 5 Bom. L. R., 144.

(b) A produces deeds relating to landed property of which he is the mortgagee The mortgagor is in possession. The custody is proper.

(c) A, a connection of B, produces deeds relating to lands in B's possession which were deposited with him by B for safe custody The custody is proper

Principle.—The ground of the rule is the great difficulty, indeed in many cases the impossibility, of proving the handwriting, execution and attestation of documents in the ordinary way after the lapse of many years, as also the presumption that the attesting witnesses, if any, are dead.(1) Proof of custody is required as a condition of admissibility to afford the Court reasonable assurance of the genuineness of the document as being what it purports to be (2)

See also Note, post ·

s 3 ("Document.")
s. 3 ("Proved.")
s. 3 ("Court.")
s 4 ("May presume.")
ss. 67, 45, 73 (Proof of signature and handwriting.)
ss. 68—72 (Attestation of documents)

Steph Dig, Art. 88, Taylor, Ev., §§ 87, 88, 658—667, Stark, Ev, 291—293, 521—524; Roscoe, N. P. Ev., 102, 103; Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed., 496—498, Powell, Ev., 9th Ed., 282—288; Wills' Ev., 2nd Ed., 383—386.

COMMENTARY.

Ancient documents. This section in no way touches the question of the relevancy of a document, but deals only with the amount of credit which is to be attached to certain documents whose age and custody raise a presumption of genuineness It does away ordinarily with the necessity of proving those documents (3) For documents thirty years old are said to prove themselves, that is, no witnesses need, unless the Court so requires, be called to prove their execution or attestation.(4) This presumption is not affected by proof that the witnesses are living, and, it seems, even actually in Court; nor in the case of wills, by showing that the testator died within the thirty years (5) The presumption applies in the case of any document, deeds, wills, letters, entries, receipts and the like.(6) It arises in the case of copies as well as originals.(7) The presumption enacted by this section is often treated as a part of the subject of ancient possession as to which, see notes to the seventh clause of section 32, ante. But the presumption is applicable whether the document be tendered in support of ancient possession or of any other fact. With regard to the exception to the hearsay rule in favour of ancient documents(8) when

(1) Wynne v. Tyrwhitt, 4 B. & Ad., 376; Taylor, Ev, §§ 88, 1874; Andrews v. Motley, 32 L. J., C. P., 128, 131; Doe v. Wolley, 8 B & C, 22.

(2) Doe v Phillips, 8 Q. B, 158; Bidder v. Bridges, 34 W. R. (Eng), 514

(3) Varvar Nicholas v. Asphar, Suit 775 of 1894 (Calcutta High Court), per Ameer Ali, J.

(4) Norton, Ev, 266, see Mahomed Fedye v Ozc-ooddeen, 10 W. R., 340 (1868). [When a document is 30 years old it is not necessary to produce the subscribing witnesses to it; Taylor, Ev, § 1845 See, however, as to firmans of the Kings of Delhi or sunnuds, purwannahs or other grants of any viziers or of any potentates or persons formerly exercising authority in territory now under the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, Reg. II of 1819, s. 28 As to the Scheduled Districts, see Reg. III of 1872; Reg III of 1886, s 2, Gazette of India, Part I, 5th March 1881, p 74, and 22nd October 1881, pp 507—511; Calcutta Gazette, Part I A, 9th March 1881, p. 74, 2nd November 1881, pp 192, 194, 195.

(5) Taylor, Ev, § 87.

(6) Ib, § 88, see s 3, ante, "definition of document." As to Wills see Badri Prasad Singh v. Annapurna Kuer, 6 O L J, 311; s c, 52 I. C., 837.

(7) Subramanya v Suthayya 46 M., 92 (F B)

(8) Though ancient documents are usually spoken of as hearsay evidence of ancient possession, yet they seem rather to be parts of the res gestæ, and therefore admissible as original evidence tendered in support of ancient possession it has been said: "These are often narratives of past events, but purport to have formed a part of the act of ownership, exercise of right, or other transaction to which they relate This species of proof demands careful scrutiny, for first, its effect is to benefit those from whose custody they have been produced, and who are connected in interest with the original parties to the documents, and next the documents are not proved but are only presumed to have constituted part of the res gestæ. Forgery and the suspicion of being fabricated, since even in England this evidence when unsupported is of very little weight (2) Should the genuineness of the document be for any reason doubtful, it is perfectly open to the Court or Jury to reject it, however ancient it may be Even if proper custody be also shown, the Court has still power to reject the document if it is of opinion that it is a fabrication (3) The section only says that the Court may raise the presumptions mentioned in it, not that it must do so, and experience shows that "may presume" in such instances ought generally to be construed in the more rigorous of the senses allowed by the fourth section of this Act (4) And in the under-mentioned case it was held that when a document which is over thirty years old

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

reason in the latter event, and in the former whether the presumption has been rebutted or not (5) In the Madras Presidency, the practice is that the Court marks a document as an exhibit if primâ facie evidence of custody and age is produced, and at a later stage of the proceedings gives the hostile party an opportunity of producing evidence to rebut the presumption under this section.(6)

---

(1) Taylor Ev, § 658, Best, Ev, § 499

(2) Trailockya Nath v Shurno Chungoni, 11 C, 539 541, 542 (1885), per Garth, C J, Mussamut Phool v Gour Surun, 18 W R 485, 493 (1872), per Couch, C J [Accordingly it was not allowed to prevail in this case, in which there was other evidence inconsistent with the title the documents professed to create Field, Ev, 412; ib, 6th Ed, 256; Boikunt Nath v Lukhun Majhi, 9 C. L. R, 425 429, per Field J Shaik Husain v Govardhandas Purmanandas, 20 B, 1, 5 (1895); ["We are fully aware of the danger of treating old documents as established merely because they are 30 years old and come from the proper custody," per Farran, C. J] See Jasa Lal v Ganga Devi, 48 P. R C J, 81, p 289 (1915). Shripuja v. Khanhaypalal, 15 N L. R, 192; s. c., 53 I C, 947

(3) Gooroo Pershad v Bykunto Chunder 6 W R, 82 (1886); Uggrakant Choudhry v Huro Chunder, 6 C, 209 (1880)

(4) Timangavda v. Rangangavda, 11 B, 94, 98 (1878) cf s. 4, ante. The Court has a discretion in this matter with which the Appellate Court will be slow to interfere Mahomed Usman v Rahim Baksh, 57 P W R; s c., 41 I C., 559

(5) Srinath Patra v Kuloda Prosad Banerjee, 2 C. L J, 592.

(6) Raikurien v Veerappudyana, 37 M, 455 (1914).

Where a document more than 30 years old purporting to come from proper custody, is required by the Court before which it is produced to be proved, and is left unproved: and there are circumstances, both external and internal which throw great doubts upon the genuineness of the document, the Court can, in the exercise of the discretion vested in it under s. 90, decline to admit it in evidence without formal proof, and their Lordships of the Privy Council will be always slow to overrule the discretion exercised by a Judge under s. 90.(1) A Judge should not reject a document without giving the party producing it an opportunity of supporting the presumption.(2) The rule of law which requires the party tendering in evidence an altered instrument to explain its appearance does not apply to letters and ancient documents coming from the right custody merely because they are in a mutilated or imperfect state(3) In a suit for redemption of a mortgage the plaintiffs tendered in evidence a c executed in 1876. The plaintiffs h on them to produce the original d by this section applies to the certified copy of the mortgage deed and the original deed being presumably in the possession of the defendants, the plaintiffs were entitled to give secondary evidence of the contents without notice to the defendants in as much as they must have known that they would be required to produce it in the suit for redemption.(4)

The presumptions raised by the section are confined to handwriting, execution and attestation(5); so where a document more than thirty years old purports to be signed by an agent on behalf of a principal, no presumption arises as to the agent's authority, which must be proved.(6) Where an old deed purported to be an appointment under a special power and to be executed by the attorney of the donee of the power, the Court presumed only the execution of the deed, but not in the absence of the power or evidence thereof the authority of the solicitor to execute it.(7) The presumption arising under this section can be applied to a deed executed by an illiterate person whose signature has been made by some other person on his behalf.(8) This section merely allows a party to ask the Court to presume that a document which is more than thirty years old and purports to have been prepared or signed by a particular person was in fact prepared or signed by such person But when a party producing such a document cannot show and the document itself does not purport to show who prepared or signed it, the mere fact of the document being more than thirty years old does not make it admissible without proof under this section.(9)

Secondary evidence.

The use by the Legislature of the words "when any document is produced" does not limit the operation of the section to cases in which the document is actually produced in Court, and, consequently, secondary evidence of an ancient document is admissible without proof of execution of the original when the

(1) Mussamut Shafiq-un-nissa v. Shaban Ali, 6 Bom. L. R., 750 (1904), s. c., 26 A., 581, 9 C. W. N., 105

(2) Imrit Chamar v. Sibdhari Pandey, 17 C. W. N., 108 (1911).

(3) Taylor, Ev., § 1838. As to the effect of the alteration of a document in a material particular, see Mangal Sen v. Shanker Shahai, 25 A., 580 (1903)

(4) Dwarka Singh v. Ramanand Upadhya, 41 A., 592; s. c., 17 All. L. J., 711; 51 I. C., 295. See s. 66, Prov. (2).

(5) See Khageshwar Bhattacharya v Someshwar Bhattacharya, 33 C. L. J., 332 (1921).

(6) Ubilack Rai v. Dallial Rai 3 C., 557 (1878), Thakoor Pershad v Mussamut Bushmutty, 24 W. R., 428 (1875); Uggrakant Choudhry v. Hara Chunder, 6 C., 209 (1880).

(7) Re Airey, 1 Ch., 164 (1897)

(8) Sher Ahmad v. Ibrahim, 52 I. C., 314.

(9) Charittar Rai v. Kailash Behari, 3 Pat. L. J., 306; s. c., 44 I. C., 422.

document is shown to have been lost and to have been heard of last in proper custody.(1)

The Madras High Court observed with reference to a document of which secondary evidence had been permitted to be given(2), but in respect of which there was no evidence of execution :—" It is not necessary to consider whether we should be prepared to follow the decision in Khetter Chunder Mookerjee v. [illegible] that case, that [illegible] having been lost. [illegible] document, which [illegible] could not have been produced if proper steps to procure its production had been taken," and [illegible] grounds of admissibility are not stated, secondary evidence was permitted to be given, and that though the original document in the Calcutta case was in fact lost, there is nothing in that decision which limits the applicability of this section to one only of the cases in which secondary evidence is allowed, viz., loss of the original No presumption can be made in favour of any document unless such document itself is produced before the Court invited to make the presumption. The production of a copy is insufficient.(4) Where, however, the production of the original document is impossible the Court is entitled to presume regarding the same on the production of a certified copy (5) In the case cited(6) a darmakarari lease was granted in 1830. The original of this document was not in existence and a copy which was taken in 1881 was produced in Court as it has been so produced on several previous occasions. There was no proof of execution of the original: Held, that the presumption was applicable to the copy produced. It is open to a party when producing an old document to rely on the presumption under this section and also on its proof, and a Court may presume a deed to be genuine even though it is not satisfied with the evidence tendered to prove its execution (7)

"Thirty years old." The period of thirty years is to be reckoned, not from the date on which the document is filed in Court, but from the date on which, it having been tendered in evidence, its genuineness or otherwise becomes the subject of proof.(8) It is not until the case comes on for hearing and the party producing the document is called upon to prove it, that the Court, after being satisfied that it comes from proper custody, can be asked to make the presumptions allowed by this section.(9)

Corroboration. Ancient documents are admissible under this section without proof of any acts, transactions or state of affairs necessarily, properly, or naturally referrible to them. Inconsiderable (if any), weight, however, will be attached to documents, which, though ancient, are not corroborated by evidence of ancient or modern enjoyment or by other equivalent or explanatory proof (10)

---

(1) Khetter Chunder v. Khetter Paul, 5 C., 886 (1880), followed in Ishri Prasad v Lalli Jas, 22 A., 294 (1900)

(2) Appathura Pathar v. Gopala Panikkar, 25 M., 674 (1901)

(3) 5 C., 886 (1880).

(4) Shripuja v Kanhaypalal, 15 N. L. R., 192, s c., 53 I. C., 947

(5) Raj Bahadur Lal v. Bindeshri, 50 L. J., 219; s c., 46 I. C., 344

(6) Banwari Lal v Dwarkanath Misser, 29 C. L. J., 577; s c., 52 I C., 825.

(7) Dwarka v Makka, 49 I. C., 419

(8) Minu Sirkar v. Rhedoy Nath, 5 C. L. R., 135 (1879).

(9) Field, Ev., 6th Ed., 259.

(10) Taylor, Ev., §§ 665, 666, Field, Ev., 6th Ed., 257; Markby, Ev., 68, 69; Boikunt Nath v Lukhun Majhi, 9 C. L. R., 425, 429 (1881); Anund Chunder v. Mookta Keshee, 21 W. R., 130 (1874); Grant v. Byjnath Tewaree, 21 W. R., 279 (1874); Sreekunt Bhuttacharjee v. Raj Narain, 10 W. R., 1 (1868); Bisheshur Bhuttacharjee v. Lamb, 21 W. R., 22 (1873); Timangavda v. Rangangavda, 11 B., 94, 98, 102 (1877); Hari Chintaman v Moro Lakshman, 11 B., 89 (1886).

Where a document more than 30 years old purporting to come from proper custody, is required by the Court before which it is produced to be proved, and is left unproved: and there are circumstances, both external and internal which throw great doubts upon the genuineness of the document, the Court can, in the exercise of the discretion vested in it under s. 90, decline to admit it in evidence without formal proof, and their Lordships of the Privy Council will be always slow to overrule the discretion exercised by a Judge under s. 90.(1) A Judge should not reject a document without giving the party pro- [illegible] of law [illegible] explain [illegible] rom the [illegible] state (3)

In a suit for redemption of a mortgage the plaintiffs tendered in evidence a [illegible] executed in 1876. The plaintiffs [illegible] on them to produce the original [illegible] by this section applies to the certified copy of the mortgage deed and the original deed being presumably in the possession of the defendants, the plaintiffs were entitled to give secondary evidence of the contents without notice to the defendants in as much as they must have known that they would be required to produce it in the suit for redemption.(4)

The presumptions raised by the section are confined to handwriting, execution and attestation(5); so where a document more than thirty years old purports to be signed by an agent on behalf of a principal, no presumption arises as to the agent's authority, which must be proved.(6) Where an old deed purported to be an appointment under a special power and to be executed by the attorney of the donee of the power, the Court presumed only the execution of the deed, but not in the absence of the power or evidence thereof the authority of the solicitor to execute it.(7) The presumption arising under this section can be applied to a deed executed by an illiterate person whose signature has been made by some other person on his behalf (8) This section merely allows a party to ask the Court to presume that a document which is more than thirty years old and purports to have been prepared or signed by a particular person was in fact prepared or signed by such person But when a party producing such a document cannot show and the document itself does not purport to show who prepared or signed it, the mere fact of the document being more than thirty years old does not make it admissible without proof under this section.(9)

Secondary evidence.

The use by the Legislature of the words "when any document is produced" does not limit the operation of the section to cases in which the document is actually produced in Court, and, consequently, secondary evidence of an ancient document is admissible without proof of execution of the original when the

---

(1) Mussamut Shafig-un-nissa v Shaban Ali, 6 Bom L R, 750 (1904), s c, 26 A, 581; 9 C. W. N., 105.

(2) Imrit Chamar v. Sibdhari Pandey, 17 C W. N, 108 (1911).

(3) Taylor, Ev., § 1838. As to the effect of the alteration of a document in a material particular, see Mangal Sen v. Shanker Shahai, 25 A, 580 (1903)

(4) Dwarka Singh v. Ramanand Upadhya, 41 A, 592, s. c, 17 All L. J., 711; 51 I C, 295 See s 66, Prov. (2).

(5) See Khageshwar Bhattacharya v. Someshwar Bhattacharya, 33 C. L J. 382 (1921)

(6) Ubilack Rai v Dallial Rai, 3 C, 557 (1878); Thakoor Pershad v Mussammut Bushmutty, 24 W R, 428 (1875); Uggrakant Chowdhry v. Huro Chunder, 6 C, 209 (1880)

(7) Re Airey, 1 Ch, 164 (1897).

(8) Sher Ahmad v Ibrahim, 52 I. C., 314.

(9) Charittar Rai v. Kailash Behari, 3 Pat L J., 306; s c, 44 I C, 422

there may be various and many that are reasonable and probable, though differing in degree. some being more so, some less, and in those cases the proposition to be determined is, whether the actual custody is so reasonably and probably to be accounted for, that it impresses the mind with the conviction that the instrument found in such custody must be genuine That such is the character and description of the custody, which is held sufficiently genuine to render a document admissible, appears from all cases' Many decisions have been given both in England(1) and in India(2) as to the conditions which constitute proper custody, but each case must depend upon its own particular circumstances, it being impossible to lay down any rule which shall apply to all (3) Thus in a suit to eject a tenant who had been in possession of a small homestead for forty years, the tenant produced a pottah purporting to be sixty years old granted to her father who had held possession under it, for twenty years until his death. It appeared that her father had left an infant grandson who was his sole heir, but who had never either before or after attaining his majority made any claim to the property. The Court held that her custody of the pottah was a natural and proper one within the meaning of this section (4) When property had been in the possession of the plaintiff's father, and documents relating to the property were found among the papers of a deceased gomastah, who had been in the father's employ and had managed the property for the plaintiff during his majority, this was held to be a proper custody (5) And although a person appointed manager of the property of an insane person by the [illegible] prop[illegible] not [illegible] section (6) The mere fact that an ancient document is produced from the records of a Court does not raise any presumption that it was filed for a proper purpose, and that, consequently, the Court's custody was a proper custody. [illegible] to the adjudication [illegible] which had actually [illegible], the Privy Council [illegible] to the evidence in support of the bond, and particularly with respect to the custody of the bond, it is in their Lordships' opinion sufficient to state that the bond was produced in the usual manner by the persons who claimed title under the provisions of it and who therefore were entitled to the possession of it, so that the bond must be held to have come from the proper custody."(8)

No custody is improper if it is proved to have had a legitimate origin, or if the circumstances of the particular case are such as to render such an origin probable This provision is applicable to those cases in which the custody is

(1) See Taylor, Ev §§ 660—664; Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 497—499

(2) v post

(3) Norton, Ev, 267 For meaning of 'custody,' under Indian Penal Code, section 27, see Emperor v Fateh Chand Agarwalla, F. B, 44 C, 477 (1917) (possession on behalf of another).

(4) Trailokia Nath v Shurno Chungoni, 11 C, 539 (1885)

(5) Hari Chintaman v Moro Lakshman, 11 B, 89 (1886)

(6) Shyama Charan Nundy v. Abhiram Goswami, 3 C. L J., 306, 10 C. W. N. 738; 33 C, 511.

(7) Guddadhur Paul v. Bhyrub Chunder, 5 C, 518 (1880).

(8) Devaji Gaya v Godabhai Godbhai, 2 B L R, P. C, 85, 86 (1869); s. c, 11 W R, P C, 35; see also as to proper custody, Thakoor Pershad v. Bashmutty Kooer, 24 W R, 428 (1875) Ekowrie Singh v Koylash Chunder, 21 W R., 45 (1874); Mussumut Fureedoonissa v. Ram Onogra, 21 W. R., 19 (1873); Chunder Kant v Brojo Nath, 13 W. R., 109 (1870); Gour Paroy v. Wooma Soondaree, 12 W. R, 472 (1869); Gurudas Day v. Sambhu Nath, 3 B. L. R., 258 (1869); Sreekanth Bhuttacharjee v. Raj Narain, 10 W. R., 1 (1868), Mahomed Awaddi v Shaffi Mulla, 8 B. L. R., 26, 29 (1871) Vital Mahadeb v Mahummad Husen, 6 Bom. H. C. R., 90 (1869).

not, perhaps, that where it might be most reasonably expected, but is yet sufficiently reasonable to constitute such custody not improper. Thus in the two first illustrations to the section the documents are produced from their natural place of custody; in the third illustration the documents ordinarily would be with the owner B: but under the circumstances A's custody is proper.(1)

In the undermentioned case(2) Batty, J., was of opinion that the section read with the explanation seemed to insist only on a satisfactory account of the origin of the custody and not in the history of its continuance: and that possibly the origin of the custody was alone regarded as material because it is intelligible that ancient documents may be overlooked and left undisturbed, notwithstanding a transfer of old, or creation of new interests.

(1) Norton Ev., 267

(2) Sharfudin v. Govind, 27 B., 452, 462 (1902), s. c., sub voc. Tejudin v. Govind, 5 Bom. L. R., 144

CHAPTER VI.

OF THE EXCLUSION OF ORAL BY DOCUMENTARY EVIDENC

IN so far as the present Chapter deals not only with cases in evidence is excluded by documentary evidence, but also with thos oral evidence is admissible, notwithstanding the existence of a doc subject-matter may properly, and in conformity with the English be described as the "admissibility of extrinsic evidence to affect doc a branch of the law of evidence which is perhaps of all the most application The construction of a document is a question of law t mined by grammar or logic, the primary organs of interpretation, a necessary, by evidence to make the words which are used fit th things to which the words are appropriate (s. 92 Proviso 6) and by the character mentioned in sections 95 to 98 When the meaning of a has been truly ascertained that document itself is evidence of the of the writer. Intention is a psychological fact and can be pro section 14 when the existence of intention is in issue or relevant, pro the collateral fact is not too remote (1)

It is necessary, in the first place, to bear in mind in this conne (as has been already provided by the Act) the contents of all docume ever be their nature, whether dispositive or non dispositive (v post proved by the production of the document itself, except in those case secondary evidence is admissible (sections 61—65) If, however th is not primarily as to the contents of a document, but as to the ex matters of fact of which documents form the record and proof other ations come into play, which are the peculiar subject-matter of this the Act. The question then arises whether the fact of such recor other evidence of the matters which are so recorded, and whether the can, and if so, in what manner, be affected by such other evidence. comprehend this distinction it is necessary to distinguish between (or in the language of Bentham, "pre-determined") documents, or which are uttered dispositively, i e, for the purpose of disposing of ri non-dispositive (or in the language of Bentham, "casual") docu those which are uttered non-dispositively, i e, not for the purpose of of rights. A casual or non-dispositive document (e g a letter or men thrown off hurriedly in the ease and carelessness of familiar intercours intending to institute a contract, and which is offered, not to prove but to establish a non-contractual incident) is peculiarly dependent traneous circumstances; is often inexplicable unless such circumstanc in evidence; and employs language, which, so far from being made up selected for their conventional business and legal limitations, is mark writer's idiosyncrasies, and sometimes comprises words peculiar to But whether such documents are informally or formally constituted, t in this, that as far as concerns the parties to the case in which they a they were not prepared for the purpose of disposing of the rights of from whom they emanate Dispositive documents, such as contract of property and the like, on the other hand, are deliberately prepared usually couched in words which are selected for the purpose, because t a settled legal or business meaning. Such documents are meant to party uttering them in both his statements of fact and his engagements of further action; and they are usually accepted by the other contracting party (or, in case of wills, by parties interested), not in any occult sense, requiring explanation or correction, but according to the legal and business meaning of the terms.(1)

(1) In re Amrita Bazar Patrika Press, Ltd 47 C 190 s. c 30 C L J

The Chapter commences by enacting that no evidence in proof of the terms of dispositive documents and of matters required by law to be reduced to the form of a document (whether these matters be dispositions or not) shall be given, except the document itself, or secondary evidence thereof when admissible. The very object for which writing is used is to perpetuate the memory of what is written down, and so to furnish permanent proof of it. In order to give effect to this, the document itself must be produced. Assuming that the document has been produced as required, the next section, with certain provisos, excludes oral evidence for the purpose of contradicting, varying, adding to, or subtracting from its terms. To give full effect to the object with which writing is used, not only is it necessary that the document itself should be put before the Judge for his inspection, but also in cases where the document purports to be a final settlement of a previous negotiation, as in the case of a written contract, it is essential that the document shall be treated as final and not be varied by word of mouth If the first of these rules were not observed, the benefit of writing would be lost. There is no use in writing a thing down unless the writing is read. If the second rule were not observed, people would never know when a question was settled, as they would be able to play fast-and-loose with their writings (2) But though extrinsic evidence is thus inadmissible (a) to supersede (section 91), or (b) to control, that is to contradict, vary, add to or subtract from the terms of the document (section 92), it may yet (c) be admissible in aid of, and to explain, the document (section 92, sixth proviso, sections 93—100)

It is proposed to shortly observe upon these three rules, which form the subject-matter of this Chapter of the Act. The general distinction between the sections just quoted is that sections 91, 92, define the cases in which documents are exclusive evidence of transactions which they embody, while sections 93—100 deal with the interpretation of documents by oral evidence. The two subjects are so closely connected together that they are not usually treated as distinct; but they are so in fact. Thus A and B make a contract of marine insurance on goods and reduce it to writing. They verbally agree that the goods are not to be shipped in a particular ship, though the contract makes no such reservation. They leave unnoticed a condition usually understood in the business of insurance, and they make use of a technical expression, the meaning of which is not commonly known. The law does not permit oral evidence to [illegible] 92). It does permit it shall not be regarded as exclusive evidence of the terms of the actual agreement between the parties. It also allows the technical term to be explained (section 98), and in so doing it interprets the meaning of the document itself. The two operations are obviously different, and their proper performance depends upon different principles. The first depends upon the principle that the object of reducing transactions to a written form is to take security against bad faith or bad memory, for which reason a writing is presumed, as a general rule, to embody the final and considered determination of the parties to it. The second

(1) Wharton, Ev, § 920; this distinction is recognized by Sir J Stephen in substance, though not in terms in s. 91 of this Act, and in Art 90 of his Digest of Evidence. The classification is not, however, entirely exclusive with reference to the subject-matter of s 91, for matters which the law requires to be reduced to writing may (e g, mortgages) or may not (e g., depositions of witnesses), constitute dispositions of rights depends on a consideration of the imperfections of language and of the inadequate manner in which people adjust their words to the facts to which they apply. The rules contained in this Chapter of the Act are not perhaps difficult to state, to understand, or to remember; but they are by no means easy to apply, inasmuch as from the nature of the case an enormous number of transactions fall close on one side or the other of most of them. Hence, the exposition of these rules and the abridgment of all the illustrations of them which have occurred in practice occupy a very large space in the different text-writers(1); and hence also the difficulty, not infrequently experienced, of reconciling apparently conflicting cases, the facts of which, upon which the decision rested, are seldom, if ever, fully reported.

(2) Steph. Introd, 171, 172.

When a transaction has been reduced into writing, either by requirements of law or agreement of the parties, the writing becomes the exclusive memorial thereof, and no extrinsic evidence is admissible to independently prove the transaction (section 91). Oral proof cannot be substituted for the written evidence. Some of the grounds of the rule have already been considered. Others are that in the case of dispositive documents the written instrument is, in some measure, the ultimate fact to be proved, and it has been tacitly treated by the parties themselves as the only repository and the appropriate evidence of their agreement. The instrument is not collateral, but is of the very essence of the transaction, and consequently in all proceedings, civil or criminal, in which the issue depends in any degree upon the terms of the instrument, the party whose witnesses show that the disposition was reduced to writing must either produce the instrument or give secondary evidence thereof.(2) So also in the case of instruments which the law required to be in writing, the law having required that the evidence of the transaction should be in writing, no other proof can be substituted for that, so long as the writing exists and is in the power of the party. Accordingly parol evidence is inadmissible to prove judicial documents, or private formal documents, such as wills and other dispositions of property which the law requires should be reduced to the form of a document. To admit inferior evidence when the law requires superior would be to repeal the law.(3) Extrinsic evidence is inadmissible to control the document.

Extrinsic evidence is not only inadmissible to supersede the document but also to control, that is to contradict, vary, add to, or subtract from, the terms of the document, though the contents of such document may be proved either by primary or secondary evidence according to the rules stated in the preceding sections of the Act. This Common Law rule may be traced back to a remote antiquity. It is founded on the inconvenience that might result, if matters in writing, made by advice and on consideration, and intended finally to embody the entire agreement between the parties, were liable to be controlled by what Lord Coke calls "the uncertain testimony of slippery memory." When parties have deliberately put their mutual engagements into writing in language which imports a legal obligation, it is only reasonable to presume that they have introduced into the written instrument every material term and circumstance. Consequently, extrinsic, or as it is often loosely called "parol," evidence, is equally inadmissible in this connection whether it consists of casual conversations, declarations of intention, oral testimony, documents (provided they are of inferior solemnity to the writing in question) or facts and events not in the nature of declarations, and whether such conversations were previous or subsequent to, or contemporaneous with, the date of the principal document. Such evidence, while deserving far less credit than the writing itself, would inevitably tend in many instances to substitute a new and different contract for that really agreed upon, and would thus, without any corresponding benefit, work infinite Extrinsic evidence is inadmissible to supersede the document.

(1) Steph. Digest, pp. 184, 185. (2) Taylor, Ev., § 401.
(3) Ib., § 399.

to convey as beneficial owner, (being then under the belief that he was beneficially entitled) and not as an executor, it was held by the Privy Council that the plain legal interpretation of a document could not be affected by speculation as to what particular rights were present in the mind of a party, and that, in the circumstances, he had conveyed as executor.(1) There may, however, be an ambiguity which again may be either patent or latent. In the case of a patent ambiguity, no extrinsic evidence in explanation of the instrument will be admissible (section 93, post) (2) If, on the other hand, there be a latent ambiguity, extrinsic evidence will be admissible (sections 95—97, post). (3) When extrinsic evidence is thus admissible in explanation of latent ambiguities all forms of evidence including declarations of intention by the author of the instrument(4), will be receivable.

So the conduct and acts of, and course of dealing between, the parties will be admissible in aid of the interpretation of documents, the meaning of which is doubtful (5) It was held by the Privy Council that though a power-of-attorney did not expressly authorize certain transactions, the authority was implied by the nature of the business with which the attorney was entrusted (6) And in another it was held by the Privy Council that all the facts and circumstances taken in conjunction with the statements in a document showed that it was not part of a bonâ fide family arrangement.(7) In the case of Purmanandas Jeewandas(8) the admissibility of this form of evidence was observed upon as follows :—" The authorities in favour of interpreting the lease by the acts of the parties are summed up in Broom's Legal Maxims (3rd edition, 608), under the title 'Contemporanea expositio est optima et fortissima in lege' The rule is that ambiguous words may be properly construed by the aid of the acts of the parties. See Doe d. Pearson v. Ries(9), per Tindal, C. J., and Chapman v. Black(10), per Park, J. The widest effect given to the acts of parties as assisting the interpretation of written instruments is in the case of ancient grants and charters, specially in determining what passed thereunder,

(1) Bijraj Nopani v Tara Sundary Dasee, P C, 42 C, 56 (1915), see Tara Sundary Dasee v Bijraj Nopani, 37 C, 362

(2) See s 93, post

(3) See ss 95—97, post

(4) See ib, post

(5) In re Purmanandas Jeewandas, 7 B, 109, 116 (1882), Mohan Lall v. Urnopoorna Dossee, 9 W R, 566, 569 (1868) [evidence as to the mode in which the parties had dealt with the property in dispute], Baboo Rambuddun v. Ranee Kunowar, W R, 1864, Act X, 22, 24 [evidence of subsequent dealings between the parties], Baboo Dhunput v Sheikh Jowahar, 8 W R, 152, 153 (1867), see s 8, ante p 145, and cases cited in note 5 on that page, and in Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 580–581 but see also Ford v. Yates, 2 M & Gr, 549, Lockett v Nicklin, Exch, 30, Jafar Husen v Ranjit Singh, 21 A, 4 (1898) [in construing a mortgage deed the terms of which are of a doubtful character, the intention of the parties as deducible from their conduct at the time of execution and other contemporaneous documents executed between them is to be looked at] In a case before the Privy Council in which the document was unambiguous the committee held that the legal effect of an unambiguous document such as that in suit could not be controlled or altered by evidence of the subsequent conduct of the parties Balkrishen Das v Ram Narain, 30 C, 738 (1903), and Vissanji Sons v Shapurji Burjorji Bharoocha, P. C. (1912), 36 B., 387, and for construction of a doubtful grant in favour of the grantee see Higgins v Nobin Chander, 11 C W. N, 809.

(6) Bank of Bengal v Ramanathan Chetty, P. C. 43 C. 527 (1915), see Bryant Powis and Bryant v. Banque du Peuple A C, 170 (1893).

(7) Nrityamoni Dossee v Lakhan Chandra Sen, P. C. 43 C., 660 (1916)

(8) 7 B, 109, 116 (1882)

(9) 8 Bing, 178, 181. ["Upon the general and leading principle in such cases, we are to look to the words of the instrument and to the acts of the parties to ascertain what their intention was if the words of the instrument be ambiguous we may call in aid the acts done under it as a clue to the intention of the parties"]

(10) 4 Bing, N. C, 187, 195. ["The intention of the parties must be collected from the language of the instrument and may be elucidated by the conduct they have pursued: Morgan v Bissell, 3 T. R. 735; Baxter v. Brown, 2 W. Bl., 973"]

depends on a consideration of the imperfections of language and of the inadequate manner in which people adjust their words to the facts to which they apply. The rules contained in this Chapter of the Act are not perhaps difficult to state, to understand, or to remember; but they are by no means easy to apply, inasmuch as from the nature of the case an enormous number of transactions fall close on one side or the other of most of them. Hence, the exposition of these rules and the abridgment of all the illustrations of them which have occurred in practice occupy a very large space in the different text-writers(1); and hence also the difficulty, not infrequently experienced of reconciling apparently conflicting cases, the facts of which, upon which the decision rested, are seldom, if ever fully reported.

Extrinsic evidence is inadmissible to control the document.

When a transaction has been reduced into writing, either by requirements of law, or agreement of the parties, the writing becomes the exclusive memorial thereof, and no extrinsic evidence is admissible to independently prove the transaction (section 91). Oral proof cannot be substituted for the written evidence. Some of the grounds of the rule have already been considered. Others are that in the case of dispositive documents the written instrument is, in some measure, the ultimate fact to be proved, and it has been tacitly treated by the parties themselves as the only repository and the appropriate evidence of their agreement. The instrument is not collateral, but is of the very essence of the transaction; and consequently in all proceedings, civil or criminal, in which the issue depends in any degree upon the terms of the instrument, the party whose witnesses show that the disposition was reduced to writing must either produce the instrument or give secondary evidence thereof.(2) So also in the case of instruments which the law required to be in writing, the law having required that the evidence of the transaction should be in writing, no other proof can be substituted for that, so long as the writing exists and is in the power of the party. Accordingly parol evidence is inadmissible to prove judicial documents, or private formal documents, such as wills and other dispositions of property which the law requires should be reduced to the form of a document. To admit inferior evidence when the law requires superior would be to repeal the law.(3)

Extrinsic evidence is inadmissible to supersede the document.

Extrinsic evidence is not only inadmissible to supersede the document but also to control, that is to contradict, vary, add to, or subtract from, the terms of the document, though the contents of such document may be proved either by primary or secondary evidence according to the rules stated in the preceding sections of the Act. This Common Law rule may be traced back to a remote antiquity. It is founded on the inconvenience that might result, if matters in writing, made by advice and on consideration, and intended finally to embody the entire agreement between the parties, were liable to be controlled by what Lord Coke calls "the uncertain testimony of slippery memory." When parties have deliberately put their mutual engagements into writing in language which imports a legal obligation, it is only reasonable to presume that they have introduced into the written instrument every material term and circumstance. Consequently, extrinsic, or as it is often loosely called "parol," evidence, is equally inadmissible in this connection whether it consists of casual conversations, declarations of intention, oral testimony, documents (provided they are of inferior solemnity to the writing in question) or facts and events not in the nature of declarations, and whether such conversations were previous or subsequent to, or contemporaneous with, the date of the principal document. Such evidence, while deserving far less credit than the writing itself, would inevitably tend in many instances to substitute a new and different contract for that really agreed upon, and would thus, without any corresponding benefit, work infinite party uttering them in both his statements of fact and his engagements of further action, and they are usually accepted by the other contracting party (or, in case of wills, by parties interested), not in any occult sense, requiring explanation or correction, but according to the legal and business meaning of the terms (1)

(1) Steph. Digest, pp. 184, 185. (2) Taylor, Ev., § 401. (3) Ib., § 399.

The Chapter commences by enacting that no evidence in proof of the terms of dispositive documents and of matters required by law to be reduced to the form of a document (whether these matters be dispositions or not) shall be given, except the document itself, or secondary evidence thereof when admissible. The very object for which writing is used is to perpetuate the memory of what is written down, and so to furnish permanent proof of it. In order to give effect to this, the document itself must be produced. Assuming that the document has been produced as required, the next section, with certain provisos, excludes lding to, or subtract-which writing is used,

put before the Judge

for his inspection, but also in cases where the document purports to be a final settlement of a previous negotiation, as in the case of a written contract, it is essential that the document shall be treated as final and not be varied by word of mouth. If the first of these rules were not observed, the benefit of writing would be lost. There is no use in writing a thing down unless the writing is read. If the second rule were not observed, people would never know when a question was settled, as they would be able to play fast-and-loose with their writings (2) But though extrinsic evidence is thus inadmissible (a) to supersede (section 91), or (b) to control, that is to contradict, vary, add to or subtract from the terms of the document (section 92), it may yet (c) be admissible in aid of, and to explain, the document (section 92, sixth proviso, sections 93—100)

It is proposed to shortly observe upon these three rules, which form the subject-matter of this Chapter of the Act. The general distinction between the sections just quoted is that sections 91, 92, define the cases in which documents are exclusive evidence of transactions which they embody, while sections 93—100 deal with the interpretation of documents by oral evidence. The two subjects are so closely connected together that they are not usually treated as distinct; but they are so in fact. Thus A and B make a contract of marine insurance on goods and reduce it to writing. They verbally agree that the goods are not to be shipped in a particular ship, though the contract makes no such reservation They leave unnoticed a condition usually understood in the business of insurance, and they make use of a technical expression, the meaning of which is not commonly known. The law that for another,

it shall not be regarded as exclusive evidence of the terms of the actual agreement between the parties. It also allows the technical term to be explained (section 98), and in so doing it interprets the meaning of the document itself. The two operations are obviously different, and their proper performance depends upon different principles. The first depends upon the principle that the [illegible] security against bad

a general rule, to

it. The second

(1) Wharton Ev, § 920, this distinction is recognized by Sir J Stephen in substance, though not in terms in s. 91 of this Act, and in Art 90 of his Digest of Evidence. The classification is not, however, entirely exclusive with reference to the subject-matter of s 91, for matters which the law requires to be reduced to writing may (e g, mortgages) or may not (e g, depositions of witnesses), constitute dispositions of rights

(2) Steph Introd, 171, 172

depends on a consideration of the imperfections of language and of the inadequate manner in which people adjust their words to the facts to which they apply. The rules contained in this Chapter of the Act are not perhaps difficult to state, to understand, or to remember, but they are by no means easy to apply, inasmuch as from the nature of the case an enormous number of transactions fall close on one side or the other of most of them. Hence, the exposition of these rules and the abridgment of all the illustrations of them which have occurred in practice occupy a very large space in the different text-writers(1); and hence also the difficulty, not infrequently experienced of reconciling apparently conflicting cases, the facts of which, upon which the decision rested, are seldom, if ever, fully reported.

Extrinsic evidence is inadmissible to control the document.

When a transaction has been reduced into writing, either by requirements of law, or agreement of the parties the writing becomes the exclusive memorial thereof, and no extrinsic evidence is admissible to independently prove the transaction (section 91). Oral proof cannot be substituted for the written evidence. Some of the grounds of the rule have already been considered. Others are that in the case of dispositive documents the written instrument is, in some measure, the ultimate fact to be proved, and it has been tacitly treated by the parties themselves as the only repository and the appropriate evidence of their agreement. The instrument is not collateral, but is of the very essence of the transaction, and consequently in all proceedings, civil or criminal, in which the issue depends in any degree upon the terms of the instrument, the party whose witnesses show that the disposition was reduced to writing must either produce the instrument or give secondary evidence thereof (2). So also in the case of instruments which the law required to be in writing, the law having required that the evidence of the transaction should be in writing, no other proof can be substituted for that, so long as the writing exists and is in the power of the party. Accordingly parol evidence is inadmissible to prove judicial documents, or private formal documents, such as wills and other dispositions of property which the law requires should be reduced to the form of a document. To admit inferior evidence when the law requires superior would be to repeal the law (3).

Extrinsic evidence is inadmissible to supersede the document.

Extrinsic evidence is not only inadmissible to supersede the document but also to control, that is to contradict, vary, add to, or subtract from, the terms of the document, though the contents of such document may be proved either by primary or secondary evidence according to the rules stated in the preceding sections of the Act. This Common Law rule may be traced back to a remote antiquity. It is founded on the inconvenience that might result, if matters in writing, made by advice and on consideration, and intended finally to embody the entire agreement between the parties, were liable to be controlled by what Lord Coke calls "the uncertain testimony of slippery memory." When parties have deliberately put their mutual engagements into writing in language which imports a legal obligation, it is only reasonable to presume that they have introduced into the written instrument every material term and circumstance. Consequently, extrinsic, or as it is often loosely called "parol," evidence, is equally inadmissible in this connection whether it consists of casual conversations, declarations of intention, oral testimony, documents (provided they are of inferior solemnity to the writing in question) or facts and events not in the nature of declarations, and whether such conversations were previous or subsequent to [illegible] f the principal document. Such [illegible] e writing itself, would inevitably [illegible] different contract for that really agreed upon, and would thus, without any corresponding benefit, work infinite mischief and wrong.(1) The rule equally applies in the case of dispositions reduced to writing by the agreement of parties and of those which have been so reduced in obedience to the requirements of the law in that respect. The rule, however, only applies as between the parties to any such instruments or their representatives in interest. Persons who are not parties to a document or their representatives in interest may give evidence of any facts tending to show a contemporaneous agreement varying the terms of the document (section 99) The rule is subject further to certain provisos which will be found dealt with in the notes to section 92, post.

(1) Steph Digest, pp 184, 185. (2) Taylor, Ev., § 401.
(3) Ib., § 399.

xtrinsic idence is missible aid and planation the cument.

It has been already observed that extrinsic evidence is inadmissible either to supersede or to control the document, that is, the document itself only must be produced in proof of the transaction which it embodies, and when so produced its terms may not be contradicted, added to, or varied by, other evidence But on its production it becomes necessary to construe the document. Putting a construction upon a document means ascertaining the meaning of the signs or words made upon it and their relation to facts (2) Construction may be effected from an inspection and consideration of the terms of the document itself, or from such an inspection and consideration coupled with a consideration of certain classes of extrinsic evidence admissible in aid, explanation, and interpretation of documents (3)

The construction of a document before the Court is a question of law to be determined by Grammar and Logic, the primary organs of interpretation, aided where necessary by the subsidiary one of usage (section 98), where admissible to throw light upon the meaning of the words used.(4) To construe a document oral evidence of its author as to his intention is not admissible, though accompanying circumstances (section 92, prov 6) may be shown and considered (5) The effect of a document depends on the intention of the parties as gathered from the terms of the instrument and from the surrounding circumstances (6) In construing mercantile instruments, it is particularly the duty of a Court of Justice to regard the intention rather than the form, and to give effect to the whole instrument The intention must be collected from the instrument, but resort may be had to mercantile usage (section 98) in certain cases as a key to its exposition.(7) In a case in the House of Lords it was said by Lord Loreburn, L. C, " there is no cannon of construction by which the rigour of interpretation in some commercial documents must be proportioned to the importance of the stipulation to be construed. There is only one standard of construction (except where the words have acquired a special conventional meaning), namely, what do the words mean on a fair reading of the whole document."(8) As for

(1) Taylor, Ev, §§ 1132, 1148; Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 544

(2) Steph Dig, Art 91.

(3) See Raboo Rambuddun v. Ranee Kunwar, W. R, 1864, Act X, 22, 42 (though undoubtedly a document may be explained by oral evidence, the latter cannot be admitted to vary the terms of a written instrument, which terms are in themselves clear and undoubted)

(4) Mahalachmi Ammal v. Palani Chetti, 6 Mad H. C R., 245, 246, 247 (1871). In re Amrita Bazar Patrika Press, Ltd, 47 C, 190

(5) Beti Maharani v. Collector of Etawah, 17 A, 198, 209, P. C. (1894); Balkishen Das v. Legge, 4 C. W. N., 153 (1899); s c, 22 A, 149.

(6) Succaram Morarji v. Kalidas Kalianji 18 B., 631 (1894); Balkishen Das v. Legge, supra See Mathura Prosad v Rukmini Koer, 17 C. L J., 87 (1913) (ekrarnama), Nrityamoni Dassi v Lakhan Chandra Sen, 43 C., 660 (1916) (deed of covenant); Bank of Bengal v Ramanatha Chetty, P C., 43 C., 527 (1915) (power of attorney), Vissanji Sons & Co v. Shapurji Burjorji, P. C 36 B, 387 (1912); Doorga Prosad v Gosta Behari Nandi, 17 C L J, 53 (1913)

(7) Braddon v Abbott, Taylor's Report, 342, 356 (1848); Supreme Court, Plea Side, per Sir L Peel, C. J.

(8) Nelson Line v. Nelson & Sons, H L. (1907); Com cases, pp 13, 104; & see also Sheik Mahamad Ravuther v. British India Steam Navigation Co, 32 M, 95; & Price & Co v Union Lighterage Co (1903), 1 K. B, 750.

to convey as beneficial owner, (being then under the belief that he was beneficially entitled) and not as an executor, it was held by the Privy Council that the plain legal interpretation of a document could not be affected by speculation as to what particular rights were present in the mind of a party, and that, in the circumstances, he had conveyed as executor (1) There may, however, be an ambiguity which again may be either patent or latent. In the case of a patent ambiguity, no extrinsic evidence in explanation of the instrument will be admissible (section 93, post) (2) If, on the other hand, there be a latent ambiguity, extrinsic evidence will be admissible (sections 95—97, post). (3) When extrinsic evidence is thus admissible in explanation of latent ambiguities all forms of evidence including declarations of intention by the author of the instrument(4), will be receivable.

So the conduct and acts of, and course of dealing between, the parties will be admissible in aid of the interpretation of documents, the meaning of which is doubtful (5) It was held by the Privy Council that though a power-of-attorney did not expressly authorize certain transactions, the authority was implied by the nature of the business with which the attorney was entrusted (6) And in another it was held by the Privy Council that all the facts and circumstances taken in conjunction with the statements in a document showed that it was not part of a bonâ fide family arrangement (7) In the case of Purmanandas Jeewandas(8) the admissibility of this form of evidence was observed upon as follows :—" The authorities in favour of interpreting the lease by the acts of the parties are summed up in Broom's Legal Maxims (3rd edition, 608), under the title 'Contemporanea expositio est optima et fortissima in lege' The rule is that ambiguous words may be properly construed by the aid of the acts of the parties. See Doe d Pearson v. Ries(9), per Tindal, C. J., and Chapman v. Black(10), per Park, J The widest effect given to the acts of parties as assisting the interpretation of written instruments is in the case of ancient grants and charters, specially in determining what passed thereunder,

(1) Bijraj Nopani v Para Sundary Dasee, P C, 42 C 56 (1915), see Para Sundary Dasee v Bijraj Nopani, 37 C, 362

(2) See s 93, post

(3) See ss 95—97, post

(4) See ib, post

(5) In re Purmanandas Jeewandas, 7 B, 109, 116 (1882), Mohan Lall v. Urnopoorna Dossee, 9 W R, 566, 569 (1868) [evidence as to the mode in which the parties had dealt with the property in dispute], Baboo Rambuddun v. Ranee Kunowar, W R, 1864, Act X, 22, 24 [evidence of subsequent dealings between the parties], Baboo Dhunput v Sheikh Jowahar, 8 W R, 152, 153 (1867), see s 8, ante p 145, and cases cited in note 5 on that page, and in Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 580-581 but see also Ford v Yates, 2 M & Gr, 549, Lockett v Nichn, Exch, 30, Jafar Husen v Ranjit Singh, 21 A, 4 (1898) [in construing a mortgage-deed the terms of which are of a doubtful character, the intention of the parties as deducible from their conduct at the time of execution and other contemporaneous documents executed between them is to be looked at] In a case before the Privy Council in which the document was unambiguous the committee held that the legal effect of an unambiguous document such as that in suit could not be controlled or altered by evidence of the subsequent conduct of the parties Balkrishen Das v. Ram Narain, 30 C, 738 (1903), and Vissanji Sons v Shapurji Burjorji Bharoocha, P. C (1912), 36 B, 387, and for construction of a doubtful grant in favour of the grantee see Higgins v. Nobin Chander, 11 C W N, 809

(6) Bank of Bengal v Ramanathan Chetty, P C. 43 C. 527 (1915), see Bryant Povis and Bryant v Banque du Peuple A C, 170 (1893).

(7) Nrityamoni Dossee v. Lakhan Chandra Sen, P. C. 43 C, 660 (1916)

(8) 7 B, 109, 116 (1882).

(9) 8 Bing, 178, 181. [" Upon the general and leading principle in such cases, we are to look to the words of the instrument and to the acts of the parties to ascertain what their intention was: if the words of the instrument be ambiguous we may call in aid the acts done under it as a clue to the intention of the parties "]

(10) 4 Bing, N. C, 187, 195 [" The intention of the parties must be collected from the language of the instrument and may be elucidated by the conduct they have pursued: Morgan v. Bissell, 1 T. R., 735; Baxter v. Brown, 2 W. Bl, 973 "]

a matter naturally hard to discover from the instrument itself after the lapse of many years. The case of Waterpark v. Fennel(1) seems to be the one which goes furthest in this direction, in which case the word 'village' was held to include 'a mountain' On the other hand, the rule is plain that the acts of parties cannot be allowed to affect the construction of written instruments if that construction be in itself unambiguous, the cases of Moore v. Foley(2) and Iggulden v. May(3) already cited on the first point reserved are also authorities on this point "(4) Thus where an ancient document is not ambiguous its interpretation cannot be affected by evidence that the parties have for a long time acted as if they understood it otherwise (5) In a case in the Privy Council it was said that contemporanea expositio as a guide to the interpretation of a document is often dangerous and that great care must be taken in its application (6)

The English practice on this point is now much modified The modern rule allows circumstantial evidence of intent in all cases of ambiguity, patent or latent, provided the former be not inherently incurable, but confines direct declarations of intent strictly to equivocations (7)

The Indian Succession Act. The Indian Succession Act in Part XI contains similar provisions to some of those in this Chapter, which it is declared (section 100) is not to be taken to affect any of the provisions of the former Act relating to the construction of Wills(8), and section 68 of that Act has now been incorporated in the Hindu Wills Act

Evidence of terms of contracts, grants and other dispositions of property reduced to form of document.

91. When the terms of a contract, or of a grant(9) or of any other disposition of property, have been reduced to the form of a document, and in all cases in which any matter is required by law to be reduced to the form of a document, no evidence(10) shall be given in proof of terms of such contract, grant or other disposition of property, or of such matter,(11) except the

---

(1) 7 H L Cal 684

(2) 6 Ves, 232

(3) 9 Ves 325 and 7 East 237

(4) In re Purmanandas Jeevandas, 7 B, 109 116 (1882) So in Balkishen Das v Ram Narain 7 C W N 578 (1903), the Privy Council held that it would not be right to hold that the legal construction or legal effect of an unambiguous document, like the ekrarnama in that case, could be controlled or altered by evidence of the subsequent conduct of the parties, and that the case of Baboo Doorga v. Mussamat Kundun, 1 I A, 55 (1873), was no authority for such a proposition

(5) Kulada Prosad Deghorea v Kali Das Naik, 42 C, 536 (1915)

(6) Raghojirao Saheb v. Lakshmanrao Saheb, P. C 36 B, 639, 17 C. L J, 17 (1913)

(7) See Phipson, 5th Ed, 580, 581—Thayer, p 424, Hawkins, 2 Jur Soc Pap, 298; Colpoys v Colpoys, Jacob, 451, & Theobald on Wills, 7th edition (1908), p 123, and Jarman on Wills, 6th edition, p 516.

(8) See ss 93—104, post, and for operation of Hindu Transfers and Bequests Act, Madras Act I of 1914 see Muthuswamy Ayyar v. Kalyani Ammal, 40 M, 818 (1917)

(9) In Somasundara Mudaly v Duraisami Mudaliar, 27 M, 30 (1903), the question was referred to whether the word "grant" in this section meant a grant of property only or whether it refers to other grants also, in which latter case it was doubted whether the authority to adopt set up in that case could be proved For meaning of "grant" in India where relating to property see Shashi Bhusan Misra v. Jyoti Prasad Singh, P. C. 44 C, 585 (1917) (it has not the special and technical meaning assigned to it in English Law). See Hari Narayan Singh Deo v. Srirani Chakravarti, P. C 37 C, 723 (1910); 37 I A, 136, Durga Prasad v Braja Nath Bhose, P C. 39 C, 696 (1912); 39 I A, 133, and for construction of grant see Secretary of State v. Srinivasa Charia, 40 M, 268 (1917)

(10) Evidence may, however, be taken where a Criminal Court finds that a confession or other statement of an accused person has not been recorded in manner prescribed—See Act V of 1898, s. 533, and post

(11) Where an unregistered lease is rejected evidence may be given as to the relationship of landlord & tenant: Nago document itself, or secondary evidence(1) of its contents in cases in which secondary evidence is admissible under the provisions herein-before contained.

Exception 1.—When a public officer is required by law to be appointed in writing, and when it is shown that any particular person has acted as such officer, the writing by which he is appointed need not be proved.

Exception 2.—Wills admitted to probate in British India may be proved by the probate.

Explanation 1.—This section applies equally to cases in which the contracts, grants or dispositions of property referred to are contained in one document, and to cases in which they are contained in more documents than one.(3)

Explanation 2.—Where there are more originals than one one original only need be proved.(4)

Explanation 3.—The statement, in any document whatever, of a fact other than the facts referred to in this section, shall not preclude the admission of oral evidence as to the same fact.(5)

Illustrations.

(a) If a contract be contained in several letters, all the letters in which it is contained must be proved.

(b) If a contract is contained in a bill-of-exchange, the bill-of-exchange must be proved (6)

(c) If a bill-of-exchange is drawn in a set of three, one only need be proved.

(d) A contracts, in writing with B, for the delivery of indigo upon certain terms The contract mentions the fact that B had paid A the price of other indigo contracted for verbally on another occasion.

Oral evidence is offered that no payment was made for the other indigo

The evidence is admissible.

(e) A gives B a receipt for money paid by B.

Oral evidence is offered of the payment. The evidence is admissible.

Principle.—It is a cardinal rule of evidence, not one of technicality but of substance, which it is dangerous to depart from, that where written documents contents (7) evidence of the matter

v. Tukaram, 49 I. C, 843 Again a document may not be admissible to prove a transfer but may be used to show nature of possession taken· Varada Pillai v. Jeera Ratnammal, 24 C. W. N., 346

(1) E g, see Entisham Ali v. Jamna Prasad, 24 Bom L. R, 675 (1922).

(2) These words in brackets in s. 91, Exception (2), were substituted for the original words by Act XVIII of 1872, s. 7.

(3) See Illusts. (a) & (b).

(4) See Illust (c).

(5) See Illusts. (d) & (e)

(6) This illustration does not prevent a plaintiff from resorting to his original consideration in cases of unstamped documents in a suit on the consideration where there is an independent admission of the loan Krishnaji v Rajmal, 24 B, 360, 364 (1899)

(7) Dinomoyi Debi v. Roy Luchmiput, 7 I A, 8, 15 (1879).

other evidence is excluded from being used either as a substitute for such instruments, or to contradict or alter them. This is a matter both of principle and policy; of principle, because such instruments are in their nature and origin entitled to a much higher degree of credit than parol evidence of policy, because it would be attended with great mischief, if those instruments upon which men's rights depended were liable to be impeached by loose collateral evidence. Where the terms of an agreement are reduced to writing, the document itself, being constituted by the parties as the expositor of their intentions, is the only instrument of evidence in respect of that agreement which the law will recognise, so long as it exists for the purpose of evidence."(1) The very object for which writing is used is to perpetuate the memory of what is written down and so to furnish permanent proof of it. Unless the rule required the production of the document, the benefit arising from a written record of past transactions would be lost (2). See Introduction, ante and Notes, post.

s. 3 ("Document")
s. 3 ("Evidence.")
s. 63 ("Secondary evidence") ss. 65, 66 (Cases in which secondary evidence is admissible)
s. 92 (Exclusion of evidence of oral agreement)
ss. 92—100 (Admissibility of extrinsic evidence to affect documents)
s. 144 (Objection to oral evidence as to matters in writing)

Steph. Dig., Art. 90, pp. 184, 185; Taylor, Ev., §§ 398—427: Best, Ev., § 223; Roscoe, N. P. Ev., 1—4.

COMMENTARY.

Extrinsic evidence inadmissible to supersede the document.

The cases under the rule requiring the contents of a document to be proved by the document itself, if its production be possible, may be arranged in three classes(3): the first class containing all writings, other than those contained in the second and third classes, material to the issue, the existence or contents of which are disputed (4). This class is provided for by section 64, ante, which enacts that documents must be proved by primary evidence, except in the cases thereinafter mentioned (5). The second and third classes are provided for by the present section. The second class contains those instruments which the parties themselves have put in writing; and the third, those instruments which the law requires to be in writing. As to the cases in which secondary evidence may be given, see sections 65, 66, ante.

When it is stated that oral testimony cannot be substituted for any writing included in either of the three classes abovementioned, a tacit exception must, in England, perhaps be made in favour of the parol admissions of a party and of his acts amounting to admissions, both of which species of evidence are always received as primary proof against himself, and those claiming under him, although they relate to the contents of a deed or other instrument which are directly in issue in the cause (6). On this point the Indian Evidence Act introduces a stricter rule, oral admissions of the contents of documents not being admissible as primary but only as secondary evidence (7). Written admissions

(1) Starkie, Ev., pp. 648, 655, cited in Kasheenath Chatterjee v. Chundy Churn, 5 W. R., 68, 60 (1866).
(2) Step. Introd., 171, 172, Step. Dig., pp. 184, 185; Best, Ev., § 223.
(3) Taylor, Ev., § 398.
(4) Taylor, Ev., § 398.
(5) v. ante, notes to s. 64, and Taylor, Ev., § 409.
(6) Taylor, Ev., §§ 410, 411.
(7) S. 22, ante.

of the existence, condition or contents of a document, are admissible under cl. (b), section 65, ante, without notice, proof of loss or the like; but they are only secondary and not primary evidence.(1) A witness may, however, give oral evidence of statements made by other persons about the contents of documents if such statements are in themselves relevant facts.(2) As to the taking of objection to the giving of evidence excluded by this section, see section 144, post.

Matters reduced to the form of a document by the agreement of parties

In the first place, oral proof cannot be substituted for the written evidence of any contract, grant or other disposition of property, which the parties have put in writing. Here the written inst as the ultimate fact to be proved, esp and in all cases of written contracts, t ties themselves as the only reposito agreement.(3) In every country cer place before a contract is reduced to the contract should, with more or les the written instrument embodying t has once been put in writing and signed by the parties, the written instrument contains, and is, the only evidence of the contract, and the parties cannot give it the go-by, and fall back upon the original verbal agreement.(4) The written contract is not collateral, but is of the very essence of the transaction(5), and consequently in all proceedings, civil or criminal, in which the issue depends in any degree upon the terms of a contract, the party whose witnesses show that it was reduced to writing must either produce the instrument, or give some good reason for not doing so. Thus, for example, if, in an action to recover land against a tenant holding over, or in an action for the use and occupation of real estate, it should appear either on the direct or cross-examination of the plaintiff's witnesses, that a written contract of tenancy has been signed, the plaintiff must either produce it, or account for its absence.(6) So, if a landlord were to bring an action against a tenant for rent and non-repair, and it should appear that the parties had agreed by parol that the tenant should hold the premises on the terms contained in a former lease between the landlord and the stranger, a

(1) S 65, cl (b).

(2) S. 144, post.

(3) Taylor, Ev., § 401, cited in Benarasi Das v Bhikhari Das, 3 A, 17, 721, 722 (1881).

(4) Jivandas Keshavji v. Framji Nanabhai, 7 Bom. H. C. R., O. C. G, 45, 68 (1870), Pothi Reddi v. Velayudasivan, 10 M, 94, 97, 95 (1886).

(5) See R v Castle Morton, 3 B & A, 590 per Abbott, C J The principles on which a document is deemed part of the essence of any transaction, and consequently, the best or primary proof of it, are thus explained by Domat:—"The force of written proof consists in this: men agree to preserve by writing the remembrance of past events, of which they wish to create a memorial, either with a view of laying down a rule for their own guidance, or in order to have, in the instrument, a lasting proof of the truth of what is written Thus contracts are written, in order to preserve the memorial of what the contracting parties have prescribed for each other to do, and to take for themselves a fixed and immutable law as to what has been agreed on. So testaments are written, in order to preserve the remembrance of what the party, who has a right to dispose of his property, has ordained concerning it, and thereby to lay down a rule for the guidance of his heir and legatees On the same principle are reduced into writing all sentences, judgments, edicts, ordinances and other matters, which either confer title, or have the force of law The writing preserves unchanged the matters entrusted to it, and expresses the intention of the parties by their own testimony The truth of written acts is established by the acts themselves, that is, by the inspection of the originals"—See Domat's Civ. Law, L. 3, Tit. 6, § 2.

(6) Taylor, Ev., § 401; Brewer v Palmer, 2 Esp, 213, per Lord Eldon; Fenn v. Griffith, 6 Bing, 533; 4 M. & P., 299 S. C.; Henry v. M. of Westmeath, Ir. Cir. R., 809, per Richard, B; Thunder v. Warren, 8 Ir. Law R., 181; Rudge v. McCarthy, 4 id, 161.

nonsuit would be directed unless this lease could be produced.(1) Where it was alleged that an oral agreement to pay was made when a pro-note was executed, it was held that the latter could alone supply evidence of the agreement, and since it was inadmissible through default in stamping no proof could be tendered (2)

The same strictness in requiring the production of the written instrument has prevailed where the question at issue was simply what amount of rent was reserved by the landlord(3), or who was the actual party to whom a demise had been made(4), or under whom the tenant came into possession(5); and in an action for the price of labour performed, where it appeared that the work was commenced under an agreement in writing but the plaintiff's claim was for extra work, it has been several times held that, in the absence of positive proof that the work in question was entirely separate from that included in that agreement, and was in fact done under a distinct order, the plaintiff was bound to produce the original document, since it might furnish evidence not only that the [illegible] herein, but also of the rate of [illegible] On like principles where an [illegible] were let by auction, a written paper signed by himself containing the terms of the lease, the landlord was held bound, in an action for use and occupation, to produce this paper duly stamped as a memorandum of an agreement (7) A deed of partition was executed among three brothers C, N & B, on the 19th March 1867, but was not registered. It recited that, some years previously to its date, a division of the family property with the exception of three houses, had been effected, and it purported to divide these houses among the brothers In a suit brought by C's widow for the recovery of the house which fell to C's share, it was held that, although the deed did not exclude secondary evidence of the partition of the family property previously divided, yet it affected to dispose of the three houses by way of partition made on the day of its execution and, therefore, secondary evidence of its contents was inadmissible by the terms of the present section (8) Oral evidence of the fact of partition is admissible even when the deed embodying the terms of the partition is inadmissible in default of registration.(9)

The fact, that in cases of this kind, the writing is in the possession of the adverse party, does not change its character, it is still the primary evidence of the contract; and its absence must be accounted for by notice to the other party to produce it, or in some other legal mode, before secondary evidence of its contents can be received (10)

---

(1) Id, Turner v Power, 7 B & C, 625, M & M, 131, S C.

(2) Ganga Ram v Amir Chand, 66 P R. (1901), and see Azimat Singh v. Kalwant Singh, 71 P. R (1906).

(3) Ib, § 402; R v. Merthyr Tidvil, 1 B & Ad, 29, Augustine v Challis, 1 Ex R., 280 where Alderson, B, observed: "You may prove by parol the relation of landlord and tenant, but without the lease you cannot tell whether any rent was due." See as to this, Nago v. Tukaram, 49 I C, 843

(4) Ib, R v Rawden, 8 B. & C, 708; 3 M & R, 426, S. C.

(5) Ib Doe v. Harvey, 8 Bing, 239; 1 M & Sc., 374, S. C.

(6) Taylor, Ev, § 401; Vincent v. Cole, M & M, 257, per Lord Tenterden; 3 C & P., 481, S. C, Burton v Cornish, 1 Dowl & L, 585, 12 M & W, 426, S. C.; Jones v Howell, 4 Dowl, 176; Holbard v. Stephens, 5 Jur, 71, Bail, C, per Williams, J; Parton v. Cole, 6 Jur, 370, Bail, C., per Patteson, J.; see Reid v. Batte, M. & M, 413, and Edie v. Kingsford, 14 Com. B, 759.

(7) Ib., Ramsbottom v. Morley, 2 M. & Sel, 445. See Ramsbottom v. Tunbridge, ib, 434. See also Hawkins v. Warre, 3 B & C., 697, where Abbott, C J., draws the distinction between papers signed by the parties or their agent, and those which are unsigned.

(8) Kachubaibin Gulabchand v. Krishnabaikom Babaji, 2 B, 635 (1877).

(9) Chhotal Aditram v. Bai Mahakore, 41 B, 466 (1917).

(10) Taylor, Ev., § 404.

It has been held, however, both in England(1) and in this country(2), that if a plaintiff can establish a primâ facie case without betraying the existence of a written contract relating to the subject-matter of the action, he cannot be precluded from recovering by the defendant subsequently giving evidence that the means to rely on a in the event of its the duty and

, the plaintiff ant knows to ntiff is forced the parol evi-defendant is not to get rid of it by suggesting the existence of a writing which he is unable legally to produce, and on the subject of which he might have cross-examined the plaintiff's witnesses. In the case last cited, the facts were as follows:—The plaintiffs alleged that in 1866 the defendant's father had let land to their predecessor in title in perpetuity on fazendari tenure for building purposes, subject to a certain rent. They complained that the defendant sought to eject them, and they prayed for a declaration that they were entitled to the land in perpetuity sub[illegible] held that they be ordered to [illegible]

plaintiffs made out a primâ facie case without showing, or its being shown, that there was any agreement of lease. Before the case had concluded, however, a document was produced which was said to be a counterpart of the agreement of letting made in 1866. It was not registered, and was, therefore, inadmissible in evidence. It was not tendered, but it was shown to the defendant in cross-examination, and he denied that it was a genuine document. In this case it was held that, as the document was not referred to in the plaint, written statement or issues, and was not before the Court, the evidence should be looked at to ascertain the terms of the tenancy by which the plaintiffs and their predecessors in title held the property.(5) It has been held by a Full Bench of the Madras High Court that an agreement to execute a sub-lease and have it registered at a future date affects immovable property as a lease within the meaning of section 3 of the Indian Registration Act (III of 1877) and cannot if unregistered be received in evidence of the transaction.(6)

Moreover, where the written communication or agreement between the parties is collateral to the question in issue, it need not be produced. Thus, if during an employment under a written contract, a verbal order is given for separate work, the workman can perhaps recover from his employer the price of this work, without producing the original agreement, provided he can show distinctly that the items for which he seeks remuneration were not included therein; as, for instance, if it clearly appears, that whilst certain work was in progress in the inside of a house under a written agreement, a verbal order was

---

(1) Taylor, Ev., § 404; Reed v. Deere, 7 B. & C., 261; Stevens v. Pinney, 8 Taunt., 327; Fielder v. Ray, 6 Bing., 332; R. v. The Inhabitants of Padstow, 4 B. & Ad., 208; Marston v. Dean, 7 C. & P., 13; Magnay v. Knight, 1 Man. & Gr., 944, followed in the case cited in next note.

(2) Yeshwadabai v. Ramchandra Tukaram, 18 B., 66, 74 (1893).

(3) And this even though a notice to produce the document has been served on the plantiff Taylor, Ev., § 404, and cases there cited.

(4) Taylor, Ev., § 404.

(5) Yeshwadabai v. Ramchandra Tukaram, 18 B., 66, 74 (1893).

(6) Naryenan Chetty v. Muthiah Servai, F. B., 35 M., 63 (1912), distinguishing Raja Venkatagiri v. Naryana Reddi, 17 M., 456 (1894), and overruling, Konduri Srinivasa Charyulu v. Gothumukkala Venkataraj, 17 M. L. J., 218.

given to execute some alterations or improvements on the outside (1) So also the fact of the existence of a particular relationship may be shown by parol evidence, though the terms which govern such relationship appear to be in writing The section only excludes other evidence of the terms of the document. Thus, if the fact of the occupation of land is alone in issue, without respect to the terms of the tenancy, this fact may be proved by any competent parol evidence, such as payment of rent, or the testimony of a witness who has seen the tenant occupy, notwithstanding it appears that the occupancy was under an agreement in writing (2) And where a tenant holds lands under written rules, but the length of his term is agreed on orally, the landlord need not produce these rules in an action of trespass under a plea denying his possession, because such plea only renders it necessary for the plaintiff to prove the extent of the tenant's term, which, having been agreed to by parol, does not depend upon the written rule.(3) Where money is lent and a promissory note is given therefor, held per curiam that the creditor can sue for the money due as on the original contract of loan if the promissory note can not be proved Per Pratt, J , If the promissory note is given at the time the loans were taken the presumption would ordinarily be that there was no cause of action independently of the note. This, however, is matter of evidence and if in any particular case there is a cause of action on the loan independently of the promissory note the plaintiff can sue on the original contract (4) The fact of partnership may be proved by parol evidence of the acts of the parties without producing the deed(5), and the fact of partition though the partition-deed is inadmissible for want of registration.(6) And the fact that a party has agreed to sell goods on commission may be established by oral testimony, though the terms respecting the payment of the commission have been reduced into writing (7) And in the undermentioned case it was held that there is nothing in this section to depart from the rule of English Law that in an action on a written contract oral evidence is admissible to show that the party liable on the contract contracted for himself and [illegible] such partners are liable to be sued on the [illegible] them in it (8) In a case in the Calcutta [illegible] buliat, which was inadmissible because unregistered, there [illegible] be in possession of [illegible] that such evidence [illegible] tenant existed (apart from how it originated), and that the rent was as specified(9). And in another case in the same High Court it was held that where the terms of a contract for payment of interest were reduced to writing and such writing was excluded from evidence by section 10B of the Court of Wards

(1) Taylor, Ev, § 405, Reid v Batte, M & M, 413, per Lord Tenterden; commented on by Patteson, J, in Parton v. Cole, 6 Jur, 370, Bail, C See Vincent v Cole, M & M, 257, and cases cited in Taylor, Ev, § 402, n (1)

(2) Kedar Nath v Shurfoonnissa Bibee, 24 W R, 425 (1875); R v. Holy Trinity, Hull, 7 B & C., 611; 1 M. & R, 444; s c, Doe v Harvey, 8 Bing, 239, 242; 1 M & Sc. 274, s c., Spiers v William, 4 Cranch, 398, Dennet v Cracker, 8 Greenl, 239, 244. See, however, the observations of Best, C J, on the case of R v. Holy Trinity, in Strother v Barr, 5 Bing, 158, 159, see also Tuynam v. Knowles, 13 Com. B, 222, Taylor, Ev, § 405; Varada Pillai v Jeevaratnammal, 24 C. W. N, 346.

(3) Taylor, Ev., § 405; Hey v. Moorhouse, 66 Bing N C, 652; s. c, 8 Scott, 156.

(4) Maung Kyi v Ma Ma Gale, 54 I. C, 84 F B, s c, 12 Bur. L. T., 137.

(5) Alderson v Clay, 1 Stark. R, 405, per Lord Ellenborough

(6) Chhotal Aditram v. Bai Mahakore, 41 B, 466 (1917).

(7) Whitefield v Bland, 16 M. & W., 282 See Explanation (3), post.

(8) Venkatasubbiah Chetty v. Govindarajulu Naidu (1908), 31 M, 45. Ref to in Ebrahimbhoy v. Mamooji, 45 B, 1242 (1921), s c, 23 Bom. L. R., 767.

(9) Amir Ali v Aykup Ali, 19 C. L J, 428 (1913), Jenkins, C J, and Mukherjee, J, following Banku Behary Christian v. Raj Chandra Pal, 14 C. W. N., 141 (1909).

Act, oral evidence was inadmissible to prove the terms of the contract but was admissible to show that the contract had been reduced to writing (1)

Parol evidence will be admissible when the writing only amounted either to mere unaccepted proposals or to minutes capable of conveying no definite information to the Court, and could not by any sensible rule of interpretation, be construed as memoranda, which the parties themselves intended to operate as fit evidence of their several agreements.(2) Section 91 refers to cases where the contract has, by the intention of the parties, been reduced to writing.(3)

So where at the time of letting some premises to the defendant, the plaintiff had read the terms, from pencil minutes, and the defendant had acquiesced in these terms, but had not signed the minutes(4) and where, upon a like occasion a memorandum of agreement was drawn up by the landlord's bailiff, the terms of which were read over, and assented to, by the tenant, who agreed to bring surety and sign the agreement on a future day, but omitted to do so(5); and where in order to avoid mistakes the terms upon which a house was let, were at the time of letting reduced to writing by the lessor's agent, and signed by the wife of the lessee, in order to bind him; but the lessee himself was not present, and did not appear to have constituted the wife as his agent, or to have upon and occupying the premises(6) written paper was delivered to the bidder by the auctioneer concerning the terms of the letting, but this paper was never signed either by the auctioneer or by the parties(7); and where, on the occasion of hiring a servant the master and servant went to the chief constable's clerk, who, in their presence and by their direction, took down in writing the terms of the hiring but neither party signed the paper, nor did it appear to have been read to them(8); and where the document in question was not a promissory note or bond or acknowledgment of debt but appeared to be nothing more than a mere memorandum or note drawn up between the parties as to a trans-

the terms of such contract, in proof of whic evidence can be given, this section does not consideration, and that a landlord may prove the improvements in consideration of which an enhanced rent was agreed on.(10)

On the same principle it has frequently been held that, where the action is not directly upon the agreement or non-performance of its terms, but is in tort for its conversion or detention or negligent loss, the plaintiff may give parol evidence descriptive of its identity, without giving notice to the defendant to (1) Ram Bahadur v. Dusuri Ram, 17 C. L. J., 399 (1913).

(2) Taylor, Ev, § 406.

(3) Balbhadar Prosad v. Maharajah of Betia, 9 A, 351, 356 (1887); Jamna Dass v. Srinath Roy, 17 C, 177. See cases cited in note to s 92, post.

(4) Taylor, Ev., § 406; Trewhitt v Lambert, 10 A. & E, 407; s. c, 3 P. D, 676; See Drant v. Brown, 3 B. & C., 665; s. c, 5 D. & R., 582, and Bethell v. Blencowe, 3 M. & Gr., 119, where the Court held that written proposals made pending a negotiation for a tenancy might be admitted without a stamp as proving one step in the evidence of the contract

(5) Ib., Doe v. Cartwright, 3 B. & C., 326; see Hawkins v. Warre, 3 B. & C., 690; s c, 5 D & R, 512.

(6) Ib.; R. c St. Martin, Leicester, 2 A. & E, 210; s c, 4 N. & M, 202.

(7) Taylor, Ev, § 406; Ramsbottom v Tunbridge, M & Sel., 434 See Ramsbottom v. Morley, 2 M & Sel, 445, cited Taylor, Ev, 402.

(8) R. v. Wramble, 2 A. & E, 514 See for other instances, Ingram v. Lea, 2 Camp, 521; Dalison v. Stark, 4 Esp, 163; Wilson v. Bowie, 1 C. & P., 8.

(9) Udib Upadhia v. Bhawandin, 1 All. L. J., 483 (1904).

(10) Probat Chandra Gangapadhya v. Chirag Ali (1906), 33 C, 607 (& Probat Chandra v. Chirag. Ali, 11 C. W. N., 62), distinguished in Idityam Iyer v. Ram Krishna Iyer, 38 M., 514 (1915) (evidence to vary consideration in sale-deed inadmissible).

produce the document itself(1); and even though the defendant be willing to produce it without notice, the plaintiff is not bound to put it in, but may leave his adversary to do so, if he think fit, as part of his case (2) For, as has been observed for the purpose of identification, no distinction can be drawn between written instruments and other articles, between trover for a promissory note and trover for a wagon and horses.(3)

The same rule prevails in criminal cases; and, therefore, if a person be indicted for stealing a bill or other written instrument, its identity may be proved by parol evidence, though notice to produce it has been served on the prisoner or his agent.(4) If, however, the indictment be for forgery, and the forged instrument be in the hands of the prisoner, the prosecutor must serve him or his solicitor with a notice to produce it, before he can offer secondary evidence of its contents.(5)

Matters required by law to be reduced to the form of a document.

The next class of cases in which oral evidence cannot be substituted for the writing are those in which there exists any instrument which the law requires to be in writing The law having required that the evidence of the transaction should be in writing, no other proof can be substituted for that so long as the writing, which is the best evidence, exists (6) The words in this section "in all cases in which any matter is required by law to be reduced to the form of a document" indicate this class, some of the chief instances of which in India are(7) —In judicial proceedings the judgments and decrees in civil cases(8), judgments and final orders in criminal Courts(9); the depositions of witnesses in civil cases(10); and in criminal trials, depositions,(11) confessions(12) and examinations of accused persons (13) The case of an informal deposition has not been specially provided for.(14) The Code of Criminal Procedure, however, has expressly provided for the taking of oral evidence of statements made by accused persons when the writing is informal. It provides that, if any Court before which a confession or other statement of an accused person recorded, or purporting to be recorded under section 164 or section 364 of the Criminal Procedure Code, is tendered in evidence or has been received in evidence, finds that any of the provisions of either of such sections have not been complied with by the Magistrate recording the statement, it shall take evidence that such person duly made the statement recorded; and notwithstanding anything contained in section 91 of the Evidence Act, such statement shall be admitted, if the error has not injured the accused as to his defence on the merits (15) These provisions apply to Courts of Appeal, Reference and Revision. Section 533 of the Criminal Procedure Code modifies, therefore, as regards confessions, section 91 of this Act It does not, however, apply when no attempt at all has been made to conform to the provisions of sections

(1) Scott v Jones, 4 Taunt, 865, How v Hall, 4 East, 274, Bucher v Jarrat, 3 B. & P, 143, Red v. Gamble, 10 A & Ev, 597; Ross v. Bruce, 1 Day, 100; The People v. Holbrook, 13 Johns, 90; M'Lean v Hertzog, 6 Serg & R, 154. These cases overrule Crown v. Abrahams, 1 Esp, 50.

(2) Whitehead v. Scott, 1 M & Rob, 2, per Lord Tenterden

(3) Jolly v. Taylor, 1 Camp, 143, per Sir J. Mansfield

(4) R v. Aickles, 1 Lea, 294, 297 n a 300, n a.

(5) R v. Haworth, 4 C & P., 254; per. Parke, J., R v. Fitzsimons, I R, 4 C. L 1. See Taylor, Ev, § 408

(6) Taylor, Ev, § 399.

(7) See Field, Ev, 6th Ed., 262, 263

(8) Civ. Pr. Code (2nd Ed), O. XX. rr. 4—6, pp. 854—855; O. XLI, r. 31, p. 1311.

(9) Cr Pr Code, ss 367, 424, 411, See Yasin v. R, 5 C. W. N, 670 (1901), post; s. c, 28 C, 689

(10) Woodroffe & Amir Ali's Civ. Pr. Code, O XVIII, rr. 5—14, 2nd Ed., pp 844—847.

(11) Cr. Pr. Code, ss 354—362.

(12) Ib, s 364. See Legal Remembrancer v Lalit Mohon Singh Roy, 49 C., 167 (1922).

(13) Ib., s 364

(14) Field, Ev, 6th Ed., 263; see Taylor, Ev., § 400.

(15) Act V of 1898, Cr. Pr. Code, s. 533. See first paragraph of notes to ss 24, 33, ante; cf, R. v. Reed, 1 M. & M., 403; R. v. Christopher, 2 C. & K., 994.

164 and 364 of the Code(1), and though it was doubtful whether, under the Code of 1882, it contemplated or provided for cases in which there had been not merely an omission to comply with the law, but an infraction of it, yet under the present section, as amended by the Code of 1898, it seems that omission to comply with any of the provisions of section 164 or section 364 would be remediable.(2) If a document framed under section 164 of the Criminal Procedure Code is inadmissible owing to a non-compliance with the provisions of the law, the Court must proceed under section 533, if the defects are curable by the provisions of that section. If they are not so cured the document recording the confession is inadmissible and no other proof of the confession can be given.(3) When a confession is inadmissible under the provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code, oral evidence to prove that such a confession was made or what the terms of that confession were, is also inadmissible by virtue of the terms of this section.(4) No similar provision is contained in the Codes of Criminal or Civil Procedure for the rectification of informally recorded depositions of witnesses. It is clear that when depositions are required by law to be recorded in writing no evidence may be given of the statements of the witnesses other than their recorded depositions or secondary evidence of the contents of depositions where secondary evidence is admissible. It is further submitted that, if depositions are informally recorded they are not admissible in evidence if excluded by the terms of this section. But it has been held in the Madras High Court that if a deposition irregularly taken has been admitted by the witness to be correct and signed by him, it may be used against him, though he will not be estopped from proving that the record was in fact incorrect (5) A failure to comply with the provisions of sections 182, 183 of Act X of 1877 (Civil Procedure)(6), in a judicial proceeding has been held to be an informality which rendered the deposition of an accused inadmissible in evidence on a charge of giving false evidence based on such deposition and under the present section no other evidence of such deposition was admissible.(7) But where the law either does not require the statements of witnesses to be reduced to writing(8), or merely requires the substance of the evidence of witnesses(9), or of witnesses and parties called as witnesses to be recorded; in the first of these cases oral evidence of such statements would be clearly admissible, as also upon principle in the second case, of such statements as had not been recorded, such evidence not being in either case excluded by the terms of the present section.(10) Section 161 of the Code of Criminal Procedure does not make it obligatory upon a police-officer to reduce to writing any statements made to him during an investigation. Neither that section nor section 91 of this Act renders oral evidence of such statements inadmissible.(11) It has been held in a recent case in the Madras High Court that while under section

(1) R v Viram, 9 M, 224 (1886), R. v Raghu, 23 B, 221, 228 (1898)

(2) Jai Narayan v R., 17 C, 862, 871 (1890), doubted in Lalchand v. R, 18 C, 549 (1891), dissented from in R v Visram Babaji, 21 B, 495 (1896); R. v. Ragou, 23 B, 221, 225 (1898), in which it was said there was no ground for a nice distinction between omissions to comply with the law and infractions of it.

(3) Jai Narayan v. R, 17 C., 868

(4) R v Rai Ratan, 10 Bom, H C. R., 166 (1873); R. v. Shivya, 1 B, 219 (1876); R. v. Viram, 9 M, 224 (1886).

(5) Bogra v R (1910), 34 M, 141.

(6) Now Order XVIII, rr 5 and 6

(7) R v Majadeb Gossami, 6 C, 762 (1881); and see R. v. Mungul Das, 23 W. R, Cr, 28 (1875), and Hari Churn Singh v R (1900), 4 C. W. N, 249, but the failure of the Civil Court, in a case of perjury, to make a memorandum of the evidence of the accused when examined before it does not vitiate the depositions, if the evidence itself was duly recorded in the language in which it was delivered in such Court. In the matter of Beharee Lall, 9 W. R, Cr, 68 (1868)

(8) Cr. Pr Code, s. 263.

(9) Ib, ss 264, 355.

(10) See ante, first para. of notes to s 33 and see cases cited in Taylor, Ev, § 416

(11) R v Utamchand Kapurchand, 11 Bom. H C. R., 120 (1874)

162 of the Criminal Procedure Code the written record of a statement made to a police-officer in the course of an investigation is inadmissible, the section does not exclude oral evidence of such statement, whether the statement had been taken down in writing or not (1) It has also been held that a not tion of in several recent cases, and it has been held that search-lists, being merely declarations not on oath, recording facts which must be proved in Court, are not affected by this section (3) Also it has been held that even if the narrative of an extrinsic fact must by law be reduced to writing, it may still be proved by oral evidence (4) Previous conviction should, having regard to the provisions of section 91 of the Evidence Act and section 511 of the Code of Criminal Procedure be proved by copies of judgments or extracts from judgments or by any other documentary evidence of the fact of such previous convictions (5) Where there is a document it may be inadmissible for want of registration notwithstanding that its execution has been admitted.(6)

Acknowledgments extending the period of limitation must be made in writing signed by the party against whom the property or right is claimed or by some person through whom he derives title or liability (7) When the evidence is made out (9) It has been held by the Privy Council that an acknowledgment of liability only extends the period of limitation and does not confer title and is not a 'thing done' within the meaning of section 6 of the General Clauses Consolidation Act with reference to section 2 of the Limitation Act of 1877 (10) In this case it was also held that the Limitation Act applicable to an acknowledgment is the act in force when the suit is instituted The Allahabad High Court has held that section 31 of the present Limitation Act (IX of 1908) is not to be construed as reviving rights already barred under the Limitation Act of 1871 and refers only to Act XV of 1877.(11) An acknowledgment may be to another person, not a creditor, under section

(1) Muthukumaraswami Pillai v King-Emperor, 35 M, 397 (1912), reversing R v Nilkanta, 35 M, 247 (1912). See Fanindra Nath Banerjee v R, 36 C, 281 (1908), Emperor v Hanmaraddi, 39 B, 58 (1915)

(2) Gouridas Namasudra v R, A C. (1909), 36 C, 665

(3) Solai Naik v R, F B. (1910), 34 M, 349, Public Prosecutor v Sarabu Channaya (1909), 33 M, 413, Elamathan v R (1910), 33 M, 416

(4) Solai Naik v R (supra)

(5) Yasin v. R, 5 C. W N, 670 (1901), s c, 28 C, 689

(6) Bissesswar Lal v Must Bhuri, 1 Lahore, 436

(7) On the subject of such acknowledgment see Santishwar Mahanta v. Lakhikanta Mahanta (1908), 35 C, 813 (when a debtor can write, an endorsement merely signed by him is not enough), Domi Lal Sahu v Roshan Dubey, 13 C W, N, 107 (effect of part-payment appearing in handwriting of mortgagor); Dharam Das v Ganga Devi (1907), 29 A, 773 (such part-payment must appear in debtor's handwriting), Jugal Kishore v. Fakhr-ud-din (1907), 29 A, 90 (the person making an acknowledgment need not have an interest at that time) and Gobind Dass v Surju Das (1908), 30 A, 268 (such acknowledgment must contain an express promise to pay) Soni Ram v. Kanhaiya Lal, 35 A, 227 (1913).

(8) Act IX of 1908, s 19 (Limitation).

(9) Shambu Nath v. Ram Chandra, 12 C, 267 (1885); Wajibun v. Kadir Buksh, 13 C., 292 (1886); Chathu v. Virarayan, 15 M, 491 (1892), contra Zinlnissa Saheb v Moti Ratendev, 12 B, 268 (1887).

(10) Soni Ram v Kanhaiya Lal, P. C., 35 A, 227 (1913); 17 C L J., 499

(11) Jai Singh Prasad v Surja Singh, 35 A, 167 (1913); Vasudeva Mudaliar v. Srinivasa Pillai, P. C., 30 M., 426 (1907).

19 of the present Limitation Act, as for instance in a deposition in Court(1), and 'interest' in section 20 of that Act means the whole or part of the interest due (2)

Agreements made without consideration(3); contracts for reference to arbitration(4), mortgages when the principal money secured is Rs. 100 or upwards(5); leases of immovable property from year to year or for any term exceeding one year or reserving a yearly rent, must be in writing.(6) The Statute of Frauds (29 Car. II, C. 3) was introduced into India under the Charter of 1726, but was formerly only in force in the Presidency Towns, though it applied perh[illegible] that within [illegible] sections 1—1 [illegible] been repeale [illegible]
wills(10); and trusts of immovable and (except in cases where the ownership of the property is transferred to the trustee) of movable property, must also be in writing.(11)

eption (1). First Exception is in accordance with the English rule on this point. Due appointment may fairly be presumed from acting in an official capacity, it being very unlikely that any one would intrude himself into a public situation, which he was not authorized to fill; or that if he wished, he would be allowed to do so. See p. 555, ante.

eption (2). Wills admitted to probate in British India may be proved by the probate. Upon proof of the will a copy thereof under the seal of the Court is issued and the original will is retained. This copy, which is called the probate, is secondary evidence, but is made admissible by the terms of this section. The words in italics were substituted for "under the Indian Succession Act" by the amending Act XVIII of 1872. It was held prior to this Act and subsequent to the passing of Act XXI of 1870 (Hindu Wills), that the effect of the Hindu Wills Act, which makes (among others) sections 180 and 242 of the Succession Act (X of 1865) applicable to Hindus, is to make the probate of the will of a Hindu evidence of the contents of the will against all persons interested thereunder (12) The decision last cited turned upon the interpretation of the Acts abovementioned, and was contrary to the rule previously followed, according to which probate of the will of a Hindu was evidence only so far as a decree of the Court granting it would be, namely, between the parties and those privy to the suit in which the decree is made.(13) In the case of probates granted otherwise than under the above Acts, this rule would have continued to prevail, but for [illegible] e brackets.(14)
[illegible] and Irish wills [illegible] the probate under the provisions of section 82, ante, or by any other means available in England and Ireland and in this country by the terms of that section. Probate

(1) Megh Raj v. Mathura Das, 35 A. 437 (1913).

(2) Abdul Ahad v. Madhab Bibi, 35 A., 378 (1913)

(3) Act IX of 1872 (Contract), s. 25

(4) Ib, s. 28, Exception (2).

(5) Act IV of 1882 (Transfer of Property), s. 59.

(6) Ib., s 107; Sarat Chandra Dutt v Jadab Chandra Goswami, 44 C., 214 (1917).

(7) Muttia Pillai v Western, 1 Mad H C R., 27 (1862)

(8) Borrodaile v. Chainsook Buxyram, 1 Ind Jur., O. S, 71 (1862).

(9) Act IV of 1882, s 123.

(10) Act X of 1865 (Indian Succession), s 50, extended to Hindus, &c, by Act XXI of 1870. An exception exists in the case of privileged wills; see s 53, ib. As to charitable bequests v. ib, s 105.

(11) Act II of 1882 (Trusts), s. 5

(12) Brajanath Dey v. Anandamayi Dasi, 8 B L. R, 208, 214. 215, 219 220 (1871).

(13) Sharo Bibee v. Baldeo Das, 1 B. L R, O. C., 24 (1867); and see Srimati Jaikali v. Shibnath Chatterjee, 2 B L. R, O C. J, 1 (1866).

(14) Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 265.

or letters may, amongst other modes, be proved in England by production of the document itself when the seal will be judicially noticed, or by a certified or examined copy of the Act, Book or Register (1) The original will can under no circumstances be admitted in England to prove title to personal estate(2), though aliter when required merely to prove a declaration by the testator or to construe the will. Probate is not only conclusive proof against all persons of the contents of the will, but also of its validity and of the legal character conferred upon the executor (3)

Further in the undermentioned case it has been held that the general rule in this section is subject to the exceptions laid down in sections 95 and 96, post.(4)

Explanation (1).

See Illustrations (a) and (b) A contract or grant or other disposition of property may as well be executed by several as by one document, as in the familiar instance of a contract the terms of which are to be gathered from a series of letters passing between the parties (5) This section necessitates the production and proof of all the originals, except when secondary evidence is admissible, in which case secondary evidence of all the originals must be given.

Broker's books, bought and sold notes.

A broker is often spoken of as a middleman or negotiator between two [illegible] broker broker is as it affair onsists f them entrusts him with But primarily he is deemed merely the agent of the party by whom he is originally employed Thus to make the other side liable to pay him brokerage, it must be shown that he has been employed by such party to act for him, or that in the contract such party has agreed to pay the brokerage (6) When the contract is not in writing it is to be inferred from the course of dealing between the parties (7) A broker, when he closes a negotiation as the common agent of both parties, usually enters it in his business-book and gives to each party a copy of the entry or a note or memorandum of the transaction. The note which he gives to the seller is called the sold note, and that which he gives to the buyer is called the bought note (8)

It has generally been held that bought and sold notes, though not necessarily constituting the contract, do, as a general rule, constitute it (9) But as

(1) See Taylor, Ev, §§ 1588, 1590, Roscoe, N P Ev, 117, 118, Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 528, 529, 411—412, 14 & 15 Vic, C 99, s 14, by 20 & 21 Vic, 77, all probates, letters of administration, orders, and other instruments and exemplifications and copies thereof respectively, purporting to be sealed with any seal of the Court of Probate, shall, in all parts of the United Kingdom, be received in evidence without further proof thereof

(2) Pinney v Pinney, 8 B & C, 335, Pinney v. Hunt, 6 Ch. D, 243.

(3) S 41, ante, Whicker v. Hume, 7 H L C, 120, 124; Concha v Concha, L R, 11 App Cas, 541, De Mora v Concha, L R, 29 Ch D, 268; see Taylor, Ev., §§ 1759—1761, Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 411—413, Roscoe, N P. Ev, 201, 202; Coote's Probate, 10th Ed, 352—356; Williams on Executors, 369, 556—577; 1902—1903 As to Probate of Wills lost or destroyed, see Act X of 1865, ss 208, 209; the remarks on these sections in Field, Ev., 421, ib, 6th Ed, 265, and Ishur Chunder v. Dayamoy Debea, 8 C., 864 (1882), s c, 11 C L. R, 135

(4) Karappa Goundan v Thoppala Goundan (1907), 30 M, 397, and Santaya v. Sabitri, 4 Bom L. R, 871

(5) See Allen v Bennett, 3 Taunt, 169, and cases cited in Taylor, Ev., § 1026

(6) Municipal Corporation of Bombay v. Cuverjee Hirji, 20 B, 124, 129, 130 (1895)

(7) Sushil Chandra Das v. Gauri Shankar, 39 A, 81 (1917).

(8) See Benjamin on Sales, § 276; where the varieties of these notes are described; Wharton, Ev., § 75

(9) See an article in which the subject is discussed in 8 C W. N., ccxxx, ccxxxviii.

pointed out by Erle, J., in Sievewright v. Archibald.(1) "The form of the instrument is strong to show that they were not intended to constitute a contract in writing, but to give information(2) from the agent to the principal of that which has been done on his behalf. The buyer is informed of his purchase, the seller of his sale, and experience shows that they are varied as mercantile convenience may dictate. Both may be sent, or one or neither. They may both be signed by the broker, or one by him and the other by the party. The names of both contractors may be mentioned, or one may be named and the other described They may be sent at the time of the contract or after, or one at an interval after the other. No person acquainted with legal consequences would intend to make a written contract depend on separate instruments, sent at separate times or in various forms, neither party having seen both instruments. Such a process is contrary to the nature of contracting, of which the essence is interchange of consent at a certain time."

According to the law of England, by which, under the provisions of the Statute of Frauds, a memorandum is required in certain cases of sale of goods, bought and sold notes have been held to constitute a sufficient memorandum under the Statute, but the English decisions point out the distinction between making a contract and a memorandum showing that a contract has been made (3) While there, as in this country, evidence is not ordinarily admissible to vary a contract reduced to writing in the case of a memorandum, on the other hand, evidence is admissible to show that the document does not duly record the contract, or that no contract was in fact concluded (4) Though (as pointed out in [illegible] ways be open to a party [illegible] up a new contract, he [illegible] orandum, for under the Statute such new contract could not be proved by parol evidence. Therefore a plaintiff who repudiated the bought and sold notes ran the chance of losing all rights under the contract, unless he had other documentary evidence of the description which would satisfy the Statute. Therefore in cases where material discrepancies have been discovered in the bought and sold notes, the plaintiff's action has been dismissed for want of statutory evidence, the memorandum being, owing to the discrepancies, reduced to a nullity. In this country, however, the Statute of Frauds does not apply, and a contract for sale of goods can be proved by parol.(5) There may be a complete binding contract if the parties intend it, although bought and sold notes are to be exchanged or a more formal contract is to be drawn up.(6)

When, however, bought and sold notes have been exchanged, it has been a question, upon which differing opinions have been expressed, whether they constitute the contract in writing, and to what extent, if at all, oral evidence is admissible of the terms of the contract. In the case last mentioned the notes differed in their terms, and parol evidence of the contract actually entered into was allowed to be given. It has also been held that bought and sold notes unobjected to may be evidence of the contract, but they do not necessarily constitute the whole contract.(7) Subsequent decisions(8), however, treated the bought and sold notes which were tendered in evidence in those cases as constituting the contract between the parties and so precluding oral evidence The rule, after consideration of the Privy Council decision of Cowie v. Remfry(9), (1) 20 L J, Q B, 529.

(2) See Clarton v. Shaw, 9 B. L. R., 245 (1872).

(3) Jumna Dass v. Srinath Roy, 17 C, 177.

(4) Hussey v. Horne Payne, 4 A. C, 320; and see Jervis v. Berridge, 8 Ch, 360.

(5) Durga Prosad v. Bhajan Lal, 8 C W N, 489 (1904).

(6) Clarton v Shaw, 9 B L. R, 245, 252 (1872).

(7) Jumna Dass v. Srinath Roy, 17 C, 177 (1889).

(8) Jadu Rai v. Bhubotaran Nundy, 17 C, 173, Ralli v. Kasamali Fazzal, 14 B., 102 (1890).

(9) 3 Moo. I. A, 448 (1846).

has been stated by the Calcutta High Court to be that when parties who are merchants enter into a contract which is evidenced by bought and sold notes, the presumption is that they intend to be bound by the contract as expressed in the bought and sold notes, and by that only. This, however, is a presumption which may be rebutted by clear evidence.(1) The Privy Council, however, in disposing of the appeal in the last mentioned case, held that bought and sold notes do not constitute a contract of sale, but are mere evidence which may be looked to for the purpose of ascertaining whether there was a contract and what the terms of the contract were. The rights of the parties do not depend either for constitution, or for evidence, on the bought and sold notes. The High Court upon the original trial had found that through fraud the notes did not express fully and correctly the arrangement actually made. In this finding of fact the Privy Council agreed. On the assumption, therefore, that the notes constituted the contract, it would have been open to them to have held that oral evidence was admissible under s. 92, by reason of the fraud which had been proved. The Judicial Committee, however, in conformity with the opinion expressed that the notes do not constitute, but are evidence merely of, the contract, held that the case was not touched by section 92 of this Act.(2) Oral evidence being admissible as to the terms of the contract and the notes being regarded merely as a piece of evidence like any other, the only question is as to their value. This must depend upon the circumstances of each case In some instances the notes may be of little value. In other cases, particularly where they have been accepted and signed by the parties, they may be of great weight.

If the notes agree, are delivered and accepted without objection, such acceptance without objection is evidence of mutual assent to the terms of the notes, but the acceptance is to be inferred from the acceptance of the notes without objection, not from the signature to the writing, which would be proof if they constituted the contract in writing (3)

In the undermentioned case(4) in which it was held that the contract was not concluded until bought and sold notes had been signed, and that these notes were the only evidence of the contract, the buyer added some terms in Chinese as to quality, which the seller either did not understand or notice, and the Privy Council held that the terms in Chinese were not to be disregarded If the seller did not notice the addition made by the buyer, it only showed that the buyer and seller were not ad idem as to the quality, and the contract failed. If the seller did notice or understand the addition and offered a different quality, the contract was voidable.

A contract intended to have been entered into between the plaintiff and the defendant, was entered, by a mistake on the part of the broker, in the sold rson and the defendant. In a al evidence was given to show plaintiff and the defendant.
The Judge of the Small Cause Court found that the mistake did not mislead the defendant, and gave judgment in favour of the plaintiff, contingent on the

(1) Durga Prosad v Bhajan Lall, 8 C W N, 492, 493, per Sale, J

(2) Durga Prosad v Bhajan Lall, 8 C W N, 499 (1904) The earlier Privy Council decision Cowie v Remfry, 3 Moo. I A, 448 (1846), the correctness of which was questioned in Heyworth v Knight, 33 L J C P, 298 (1864), ignored in Clarton v Shaw, 9 B L R, 245 (1872); Ah Thain v Moothia Chetty, 4 C W N, 453 (in which the facts were somewhat similar to those in Cowie v Remfry), and in the latest Privy Council decision though expressly referred to by the High Court, may be said to be no longer law See Article referred to in 8 C W N, ccxxxi, ccxxxii

(3) Sievewright v Archibald, per Erle, L J, 20 Q B., 529.

(4) Ah Thain v Moothia Chetty, 4 C. W. N., 453 (1899).

...ke in the sold note was a bar ... It was held that there was a ... the plaintiff could sue for damages (1)

Telegrams. In the case of telegrams, ordinarily the original message is the primary evidence, and only on proof excusing its production can its contents be shown aliunde : but on proof of its destruction or non-producibility (as where it is out of the jurisdiction) it can be proved by copy or parol. This is upon the grounds that the message as written, is the original, while that received is merely a copy and therefore without any of the essential elements of primary evidence. But it ... are instances ... rule relative ... r it may be, must be produced, and in all cases where the company can be considered the agent of the s ... der and the pers ... ly proved, can, ... te a contract, and so may a telegraphic answer, duly proved, to a written proposal In such case the contract rests on the telegram as received by the sender and his answer as delivered to the company. It is scarcely necessary to add that when the original message is produced against a party it must be duly proved. The message must be shown to have been sent by the party from whom it purports to come, either by proof that it was in his handwriting, or that it was sent by his direction or authority.(2)

Explanation (2) See Illustration (c), and the first and second Explanations to section 62, ante. Instances of the case dealt with by ... of which three are usually executed call... change, and bills-of-lading which are usual... When a document is executed in several ... of the document

Explanation (3) When the writing does not fall within either of the three classes already described, no reason exists why it should exclude oral evidence.(3) "When the contents of any document are in question, either as a fact in issue or a subalternate principal fact, the document is the proper evidence of its own contents, and all derivative proof is rejected, until its absence is accounted for. But when a written instrument or document of any description is not the fact in issue, and is merely used as evidence to prove some fact, independent proof aliunde is receivable. Thus, although a receipt has been given for the payment of money, proof of the fact of payment may be made by any person who witnessed it.(4) So, although when the contents of a marriage-register are in issue, verbal evidence of these contents is not receivable, yet the fact of the marriage(5) may be proved

(1) Mahomed Bhoy v. Chutterput Singh 20 C, 854, 857 (1903).

(2) Wharton, Ev, § 76; Wood's Practice, Ev, pp 2, 3, Gray on Communication by Telegraph, see ib, Index.

(3) Taylor, Ev, § 415.

(4) See s. 91, Illus (c), Lambert v Cohen, 4 Esp, 213. Jacob v Lindsay, 1 East, 460, Taylor Ev, § 415; Benarsi Das v. Bhikari Das, 3 A., 717, 721 (1882). [It is a fact stated in a document, but it is not evidence of the terms of written contract]; Kedar Nath v. Shurfoonissa Bibee, 24 W. R., 425 (1875); Jivandas Keshavji v. Framji Nanabhai, 7 Bom. H. C. R, 45, 63 (1870); Dalip Singh v. Durga Prasad, 1 A, 442 (1877); Waman Ramchandra v. Dhondiba Krishnaji, 4 B, 126, 137 (1879); Soorjoo Coomar v. Bhuguan Chunder, 24 W R, 328 (1875); Venkayyar v Vencata Subbayar, 3 M, 53, 56 (1881); the receipt itself is nothing more than a collateral or subsequent memorial of that fact affording a convenient and satisfactory mode of proof.

(5) So also in the case of birth, death, burial; Taylor, Ev., § 416, and cases there cited; and see Jivandas Keshavji v. Framji Nanabhai, 7 Bom H C. R, 63 (1870).

by the independent evidence of a person who was present at it."(1) For though when a contract has been reduced into writing by the parties the writing is the best evidence of it, and must be produced; yet it is not in every case necessary when the matter to be proved has been committed to writing, that the writing should be produced. If, for instance, the narrative of an extrinsic fact, such as a payment, has been committed to writing, as in a receipt, it may yet be proved by parol evidence. So a verbal demand of goods is admissible in trover, though a demand in writing was made at the same time. And, as already observed, the fact of birth, baptism, marriage, death or burial may be proved by parol testimony, though a narrative or memorandum of these events may have been entered in registers which the law requires to be kept, for the existence or contents of these registers form no part of the fact to be proved, and the entry is no more than a collateral subsequent memorial of the fact, which may furnish a satisfactory and convenient mode of proof, but cannot exclude other evidence, though its non-production may afford grounds for scrutinising such evidence with more than ordinary care (2) So also the fact of partnership may be proved by parol evidence of the acts of the parties without producing the deed(3), and the fact of partition, though the partition-deed embodying the terms is inadmissible because unregistered (4) So in accordance with these principles and their application in English cases, the third Explanation to this section enacts that "The statement, in any document whatever, of a fact other than the facts referred to in this section, shall not preclude the admission of oral evidence as to the same fact" In connection with this Explanation should be read Illustrations (d) and (e). In the first of these cases, the incidental mention of what was done on another occasion had no reference to the terms of the contract embodied in writing. In the second case, the writing was merely a memorandum of the fact of the payment, and oral evidence of the payment was therefore admissible (5) other independent fact, as for instance, the payment of the consideration-money, the fact of payment may be proved orally as well as by the writing It is a fact independent of the contract (6) Written receipts for payments are important, but by no means necessary as proof, nor are they of the nature of primary evidence, the loss of which must be shown in order to let in secondary (7) [illegible] immovab [illegible]

[illegible]

17th sect [illegible]
section 49 of the said Act. It was, however, held in the case undermentioned that under Illustration (e) of this section, such payments might nevertheless be proved by parol evidence, which was not excluded owing to the inadmissibility of the documentary evidence.(8) When the contents of a pottah (lease)

---

(1) Best, Ev, 2nd Ed, p 282, cited in Balbhadur Prasad v Maharajah of Betia, 9 A, 351, 356, 357 (1887)

(2) Jivandas Keshavji v Framji Nanabhai, 7 Bom H C R, 45, 62, 63 (1870), citing Taylor, Ev, §§ 415, 416, as to nature of evidence required in India in proof of date of birth; see Shah Ara Begam v. Nanhi Begam, P. C (1906), 29 A., 29, 34 I. A, 1

(3) Alderson v Clay, 1 Star R, 405, Venkatasubbiah Chetty v Govindarajalu Naidu (1908), 31 M., 35 Ref to in Ebrahimbhoy v. Mamooji, 45 B, 1242 (1921), s c, 23 Bom L R, 767

(4) Chhotal Aditram v Bai Mahakore, 41 B 466 (1917), see Taylor on Evidence, 10th Edition, p 405

(5) Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 268

(6) Norton, Ev, 269

(7) Rameswar Koer v Bharat Pershad, 4 C W N, 18 (1899)

(8) Dalip Singh v. Durga Prasad, 1 A, 442 (1877), and see Waman Ramchandra v Dhondiba Krishnaji, 4 B, 126, 137 (1879), Soorjoo Coomar v. Bhugwan Chunder, 24 W. R., 328 (1875); Venkayyar v Venkatasubbayyar, 3 M., 53, 56 (1881); Appama Nayumulu v. Ramanna, 23 M., 92 (1899); as to the proof of receipt, see are in any way in question, it is necessary to prove them by the production of the document; where this is not the case, but the fact of occupation and possession of land be in issue without respect to the terms of the tenancy, this fact may be proved by parol evidence, and notwithstanding such occupation has been under a pottah, such pottah need not be produced.(1) The document called a Sodi Razinama (whereby a party relinquishes his right of occupancy of land in his possession to his land' [illegible] in the name of another party to [illegible] kind mentioned in section 91 o[illegible] clude the Courts from basing their findings upon other evidence, should any such exist.(2) When a kabuliyat was executed but not registered and never came into operation, it was held that oral evidence to prove the rent agreed by the parties was admissible (3) Where a plaintiff sued on a renewed set of hundis and they were found to be inadmissible as insufficiently stamped, it was held that he could fall back on the previous set and give secondary evidence of their contents after proving that they had been returned to the defendant.(4)

Exclusion of evidence of oral agreement

92. When the terms of any such contract, grant, or other disposition of property, or any matter required by law to be reduced to the form of a document, have been proved according to the last section, no evidence of any oral agreement or statement shall be admitted, as between the parties to any such instrument or their representatives in interest, for the purpose of contradicting, varying, adding to, or subtracting from, its terms(5):

Proviso 1.—Any fact may be proved which would invalidate any document, or which would entitle any person to any decree or order relating thereto; such as fraud, intimidation, illegality want of due execution, want of capacity in any contracting party, want or failure of consideration, or mistake in fact or law.(6)

Surja Kant v Baneswar Shaha, 24 C, 251 (1896), as to tenant's receipt as evidence of value, see Girish Chunder v Soshi Sikhareshwar, 4 C W N., 631 (1900)

(1) Kedar Nath v Shurfoonissa Bibee, 24 W R, 425 (1875)

(2) Venkatesa v. Sengoda, 2 M, 117 (1879)

(3) Ameer Ali v. Yakub Ali Khan, 41 C., 347 (1914)

(4) Jagan Prasad v Indar Mal, 36 A, 259 (1914).

(5) See Illustrations (a), (b), (c) As to strangers to the instrument, see s. 99, post. In England the rule also only applies to cases in which some civil right or liability is dependent upon the terms of a document in question Steph. Dig, Art. 92 The act makes no allusion to this As to contradiction, see Lano v. Neale, 2 Starkie, 105, Abbott v Hendricks, 1 M & G 794· Higgins v. Senior, 8 M. & W., 854, foll in Ebrahimbhoy v. Mamooji, 45 B., 1242 (1921); s. c., 23 Bom. L. R., 767.

As to variation, see Mease v. Mease, Cowper, 47; Rawson v. Walker, 1 Starkie, 361; Hoare v. Graham, 3 Camp. 57, Morley v Harford, 10 B & C., 729.

As to addition, see Miller v. Travers, 8 Bing, 254; Preston v. Merceau, 2 Wm. Bl, 1249, Maybank v. Brooks, 1 Brown Ch Ca., 84; Meres v Ancelle, 3 Wils, 275; Khetridas Agurwallah v Shib Narayan, 9 C. W. N., 178, 187 (1904), Krishnamarazu v. Manaju, 28 M, 495 (1905).

As to subtraction, see Kaines v. Knightly, Skinner, 54, Western v. Emes, 1 Taunt, 115, Norton, Ev., 273, 274; Goodeve Ev, 362, 364, no absolute classification of the cases under these headings is, however, possible, as the evidence tendered frequently has the effect of offending in several or all of these points

(6) See Illustrations (d), (e) Illustration (i) has been cited under this proviso (Field, Ev., 434; ib, 6th Ed., 279), but it is not clear to what, if any, portion of the section it refers The receipt is not a dispositive document at all [see s 91, Ill. (e)] and it is only to such that the section applies.

Proviso 2.—The existence of any separate oral agreement as to any matter on which a document is silent, and which is not inconsistent with its terms, may be proved. In considering whether or not this proviso applies, the Court shall have regard to the degree of formality of the document.(1)

Proviso 3.—The existence of any separate oral agreement constituting a condition precedent to the attaching of any obligation under any such contract, grant or disposition of property, may be proved.(2)

Proviso 4.—The existence of any distinct subsequent oral agreement to rescind or modify any such contract, grant or disposition of property, may be proved, except in cases in which such contract, grant or disposition of property, is by law required to be in writing, or has been registered(3) according to the law in force for the time being as to the registration of documents.

Proviso 5.—Any usage or custom by which incidents not expressly mentioned in any contract are usually annexed to contracts of that description, may be proved:

Provided that the annexing of such incident would not be repugnant to, or inconsistent with, the express terms of the contract.

Proviso 6.—Any fact may be proved which shows in what manner the language of a document is related to existing facts.

Illustrations.

(a) A policy of insurance is effected on goods "in ships from Calcutta to London." The goods are shipped in a particular ship which is lost. The fact that the particular ship was orally excepted from the policy cannot be proved. (4)

(b) A agrees absolutely in writing to pay B Rs. 1,000 on the first March, 1873 The fact that, at the same time, an oral agreement was made that the money should not be paid till the thirty-first March cannot be proved (5)

(c) An estate called "the Rampur tea estate" is sold by a deed which contains a map, of the property sold. The fact that land not included in the map had always been regarded as part of the estate and was meant to pass by the deed cannot be proved (5)

(d) A enters into a written contract with B to work certain mines, the property of B, upon certain terms. A was induced to do so by a misrepresentation of B's as to their value. This fact may be proved (6)

(e) A institutes a suit against B for the specific performance of a contract, and also prays that the contract may be reformed as to one of its provisions, as that provision was

(1) See Illustrations (f), (g), (h).

(2) See Illustration (j) which should run "A & B make contract in writing and orally agree that it shall take effect, etc;" v. note to Ills (j) post.

(3) So where a deed has been executed and registered it can only be amended by a subsequent registered transfer Entisham Ali v. Jamna Prasad, 24 Bom. L. R., 675 (1922)

(4) Illustrates the section See Ramjiban Serowgy v. Oghur Nath, 2 C. W. N., 188 (1897); Vishnu Ramchandra v. Ganesh Sathe, 23 Bom L R, 483 (1921).

(5) Illustrates the section. See Ramjiban Serowgy v Oghur Nath, 2 C. W. N., 188 (1897).

(6) See Prov. (1).

inserted in it by a mistake. A may prove that such a mistake was made as would by law entitle him to have the contract reformed.(1)

(f) A orders goods of B by a letter in which nothing is said as to the time of payment, and accepts the goods on delivery. B sues A for the price. A may show that the goods were supplied on credit for a term still unexpired.(2)

(g) A sells B a horse and verbally warrants him sound. A gives B a paper in these words: 'Bought of A a horse for Rs. 500.' B may prove the verbal warranty.(2)

(h) A hires lodgings of B and gives B a card on which is written—"Rooms Rs. 200 a month." A may prove a verbal agreement that these terms were to include partial board

A hires lodgings of B for a year and a regularly stamped agreement drawn up by an attorney is made between them. It is silent on the subject of board. A may not prove that board was included in the term verbally.(2)

(i) A applies to B for a debt due to A by sending a receipt for the money. B keeps the receipt and does not send the money In a suit for the amount A may prove this (3)

(j) A and B make a contract in writing to take effect upon the happening of a certain contingency. The writing is left with B who sues A upon it. A may show the circumstances under which it was delivered (4)

Principle—When parties have deliberately put their mutual engagements into writing, it is only reasonable to presume that they have introduced into the written instrument every material term and circumstance. Consequently other and extrinsic evidence will be rejected, because such evidence, while deserving far less credit than the writing itself, would invariably tend in many instances to substitute a new and different contract for the one really agreed upon.(5) See Note upon the principle of last section, as also the introduction, ante, and Notes, post. Unless the rule enacted by this section were observed, people would never know when a question was settled, as they would be able to play fast and loose with their writings. Therefore if a document purports to be a final settlement of a previous negotiation, as in the case of a written contract, it must be treated as final and not varied by word of mouth (6) And where the law expressly requires that a matter should be reduced to the form of a document the admission of extrinsic evidence would plainly render such requirement nugatory. So also where the law requires registration and stamp and for lack of them a document is not admissible in evidence, oral evidence is inadmissible.(7)

s. 3 ("Document.")
s. 91 (Evidence inadmissible to supersede document.)
s. 3 ("Fact.")
s. 3 ("Court.")
s 13 (Facts relevant to prove custom.)
s. 3 ("Evidence.")
s. 99 (Who may give evidence in variance of a document.)
s. 100 (Saving of provisions of Succession Act.)

Steph. Dig, Art. 90; Taylor, Ev., §§ 1132—1158; Starkie, Ev., 665—678; Wharton, Ev., §§ 920—1071; Best, Ev., §§ 226—228; Wood's Practice, Ev., § 14—52; Greenleaf, Ev., Ch. XV; Roscoe, N. P. Ev., 16—27.

---

(1) Illustrates Proviso (1).
(2) Illustrates Proviso (2).
(3) See p. 608, note (6), ante.
(4) Illustrates Proviso (3) see p. 607, note (8), ante. Ramjiban Serowgy v. Oghur Nath, 2 C. W. N., 188 (1897); Vishnu Ramchandra v. Ganesh Sathe, 23 Bom. L. R., 488 (1921).
(5) Taylor, Ev., §§ 1132, 1158; Greenleaf, Ev., § 275; Best, Ev., § 226; Banapa v Sundardas Jagjivandas, 1 B., 333, 338 (1876). [The apparent object of the section is the discouragement of perjury]; Starkie, Ev., 655.
(6) Steph Introd., 172.
(7) Jai Ram Das v. Raj Narain, 20 All. L. J., 777.

COMMENTARY.

Inadmissibility of extrinsic evidence to control document.

... ibility of oral evidence to vary the terms ... by the English law of evidence but by ... be admissible must come under one or other of the provisions of this section.(1)

Extrinsic evidence is inadmissible to control the document, that is, to contradict, vary, add to, or subtract from its terms Illustrations (a), (b) and (c) exemplify this proposition It has been observed that this section which formulates the rule is not quite free from ambiguity. The words 'no evidence of any oral agreement or statement shall be admitted as between the parties to any such instrument, &c,' correspond with and have clear reference to the words 'contract, grant or other disposition of property' in the beginning of the section, but their application to 'any matter required by law to be reduced to the form of a document' is not so evident (2) It does not seem, however, that there is really any such ambiguity as is suggested in the above quoted passage. The words "contract, grant or other disposition of the property" in this section refer to the similar words in section 91, viz., "when the terms of a contract or of a grant or of any other disposition of property have been reduced to the form of a document;" that is, cases where such reduction is the act of the parties. The words "or any matter required by law to be reduced to the form of a document" in this section refer to the similar words in section 91 But a matter so required to be reduced may be either a contr... or it may be a fact, such as the evid... which is neither a contract, grant or ... section, in this respect unlike the last, deals only with those matters which the law requires to be reduced to the form of a document, and which are contracts, grants or other dispositions of property This is indicated by the words "as between the parties to any such instrument or their representatives in interest, which are only applicable in the case of documents which are of a dispositive character. The subject-matters of this section, therefore, are contracts, grants and other dispositions of property, whether embodied in documents by consent of parties or by requirements of law, and therefore the words "no evidence of any oral agreement or statement shall be admitted as between the parties to any such instrument" have reference both to the words "contract, grant or other disposition of property" in the beginning of the section and to the words "any matter required by law, &c," which follow them The section deals with a different set of facts from those contained in section 91, and proceeds upon a different principle from that section The reasons which preclude extrinsic evidence in substitution of the document are not the same as those which prohibit evidence varying the document when produced Thus if the matter required by law to be reduced to writing be a disposition, oral evidence is admissible for the purpose of contradicting the writing (3) The presumption raised by section 80, ante, is not an irrebuttable one Those reasons which preclude a person from giving evidence to vary a contract into which he has himself entered do not operate to prohibit evidence in variance of a document made by others as a record of his evidence.

Not only is the section limited in its operation to dispositive documents but also to the parties thereto or their representatives in interest. Oral evidence to contradict, vary, add to, or subtract, from the terms of the writings is excluded only as between the parties to the instrument or their representatives in interest(4). The section is confined to proceedings between the parties to

(1) Harok Chand v Bishun Chandra, 8 C. W N, 101 (1903)
(2) Field, Ev, 6th Ed., 271.
(3) Ibid
(4) Megha Ram v. Makhan Lal (1912), 47 P R, No 67, p. 258; Tara Chand v. Baldeo (1890), 117 P. R.; Parma Nand v. Airepat Ram (1889), 20 P. R.; Ganu

the deed or their representatives in interest, and has no application to claims by or against third persons. Other persons may give evidence of any facts tending to show a contemporaneous agreement varying the terms of the document (section 99, post). A doubt has been expressed(1) whether the word varying must not be understood as restricted to "varying," in contradistinction to "contradicting, adding to or subtracting from," the terms of the document. There is, however, no reason to suppose that any such distinction, which is certainly unknown to English law, was intended. The word "varying" was without doubt employed as embracing (as in fact it does) both contradictions, additions and subtractions.(2)

Any person other than a party to a document or his representative may, notwithstanding the existence of any document prove any fact which he is otherwise entitled to prove(3) and any party to any document or any representative in interest of any such party may prove any such fact for any purpose other than that of varying or altering any right or liability depending upon the terms of the document.(4) The section prohibits variance of the terms of the document. The rule is, therefore, not infringed by the introduction of parol evidence contradicting or explaining the instrument in some of its recitals of facts. So it may be shown that lands described in a deed as being in one parish were in fact situated in another. So also evidence is admissible to contradict the recital of the date of a deed.(5)

It is to be observed that the rule does not restrict the Court to the perusal of a single instrument or paper; for while the controversy is between the original parties or their representatives, all contemporaneous writings, relating to the same subject-matter are admissible in evidence.(6) Nor does this section affect the proof of an independent agreement collateral to some other agreement reduced into writing. So in the undermentioned case(7) an agreement to pay Rs. 500 a month to a lessor in consideration of receiving from him a permanent lease of portions of his zemindari, which agreement was come to before, but

v. Bhau, 42 B., 512; s. c., 20 Bom. L. R., 684, Bishunath Singh v. Baldeo Singh, 21 O. C., 165, s. c., 47 I. C., 194

(1) Field, Ev., 6th Ed., 271

(2) Cunningham, Ev., 280 The view here taken has been approved in Pathammal v. Kalai Ravuthar, 27 M., 329, 331 (1903), in which it was held that oral evidence was admissible, the question not arising as between the parties to an instrument or their privies so as to bring it within the purview of s. 92. In Hara Kumar Saha v. Ram Chandra Pal, 47 I. C., 943, there was held to be a variation [subsequent oral undertaking to waive right].

(3) Bageshri Dayal v. Pancho, A. W. N. (1906), 28 A., 473. Persons who are not parties to a document may adduce oral evidence to show that the rights of parties to it are at variance with the rights ostensibly created and declared by the instrument, Krishnaswami Aiyar v. Mangala Thammal, 53 I. C., 243.

(4) Steph. Dig., Art. 92; as to the restriction of the rule in England to civil cases, v. ib., R. v. Adamson, 2 Moody, 286.

(5) Greenleaf, Ev., § 285, and cases there cited, Sah Lal Chand v. Indrajit, 4 C. W. N., 485 (1900); s. c., 22 A., 370; Achutaramaraju v. Subbaraju, 25 M., 7, 11, 14 (1901); R. v. Scammonden, 3 T. R., 474; Doe v. Ford, 3 A. & E., 649; Gale v. Williamson, 8 M. & W., 407; R. v. Wickham, 2 A. & E., 517; Hall v. Cazenove, 4 East., 477; and see Greenleaf, Ev., § 305. In the application of the rule it is necessary to bear in mind rather the principle in which it originated than its formal character; and this principle is simply to make the instruments, the record of the transaction, conclusive of its obligations Accordingly the rule does not exclude contradictory evidence of mere formal matter, such as dates, recitals and so forth, not being of the essence of the transaction; since while it is presumable that they have not been stated with formal precision, their correction would not trench on the obligatory portion of the instrument. Goodeve, Ev. Evidence of matters not forming a term of obligation is not excluded, ib.

(6) Greenleaf, Ev., § 283; and cases there cited; Leeds v. Lancashire, 2 Campb., 205; Hartley v. Wilkinson, 4 Campb., 127; Stone v. Metcalfe, 1 Stark, R., 53; Boverbank v. Monteiro, 4 Taunt., 846, per Gibbs, J.; Hunt v. Livermore, 5 Pick, 395.

(7) Subramanian Chettiar v. Arunachalam Chettiar, 25 M., 603 (1902); s. c., 4 Bom. L. R., 839.

reduced to writing after, the execution of the lease, was held to be not affected

To the general rule are annexed certain provisos. This rule is, however, not infringed by the admission of evidence in the cases dealt with by the provisos. These cases do not form exceptions to the general rule enacted by the section, but are merely instances to which attention is drawn as not coming within the purview of the rule at all.

This section was framed in accordance with the current of English decisions upon the question of how far parol evidence can be admitted to affect a written contract, and care must be taken in placing a construction upon it, not to create a precedent that would open a door to indiscriminate parol proof of transactions where documents have recorded what has passed between the parties.(1) Where, however, an agreement is admitted by both plaintiff and defendant, and it is therefore not necessary to prove it, the section has no application.(2)

The rule applies only where a disposition in its entirety has been reduced to the form of a document.

Therefore evidence may be given—firstly, to show that there was really never any disposition at all; and secondly, to show that the document produced is not the whole disposition. The rule operates only when there has been in fact a disposition, the whole of which was meant by the intention of the parties to be embodied in the form of a document.

Firstly.—Though evidence to vary the terms of an agreement in writing is not admissible, yet evidence to show that there is not an agreement at all is admissible. Notwithstanding a paper writing which purports to be a contract may be produced, it is still competent to the Court to find upon sufficient evidence that this writing is not really the contract. And the risk of groundless defence does not affect the rule itself, though it suggests caution in acting on it.(3) In the case last cited, which was one for money lent with interest, there was an agreement touching the transaction of loan, although the rate of interest was still unsettled and under discussion. Before any final agreement and while the transaction was still incomplete, a promissory note was given, not as a writing which expressed or was meant to express the final contract, but rather as a voucher, or a temporary and provisional security for the money pending ... at if the note was ... ntract between the ... the true contract.

The Court cited the observations of Erle, J., in Pym v Campbell(4), who said: "the point made is that this is a written agreement, absolute on the face of it and that evidence was admitted to show it was conditional; and if that had been so, it would have been wrong. But I am of opinion that the evidence shewed that in fact there was never any agreement at all. The production of begins one step earlier: the parties met and expressly stated to each other that

(1) Cohen v. Bank of Bengal, 2 A., 602 (1880), per Straight, J.

(2) Satyesh Chunder v. Dhunput Singh, 24 C., 20 (1896) See also Burjorji v Muncherji, 5 B., 143, cited in notes to s. 58, ante

(3) Guddalur Ruthna v. Kunnattur Arumuga, 7 Mad H C. R., 189 (1872), following Pym v Campbell, 6 E & B, 350, Harris v. Rickett, 28 L J, Exch., 197

(4) 6 E. & B., 370, followed in Guddalur Ruthna v. Kunnattur Arumuga, 7 Mad H. C. R., 189, 196, 197 (1872).

though for convenience they would then sign the memorandum of the terms, yet they were not to sign it as an agreement until A was consulted: I grant the risk that such a defence may be set up without ground; and I agree that a jury should, therefore, always look on such a defence with suspicion; but, if it be proved that in fact the paper was signed with the express intention that it should not be an agreement, the other party cannot fix it as an agreement upon those so signing. The distinction in point of law is that evidence to vary the terms of an agreement in writing is not admissible, but evidence to show that there is not an agreement at all is admissible." And Lord Campbell said: "I agree. No addition to, or variation from, the terms of a written contract can be made by parol: but in this case the defence was that there never was any agreement entered into Evidence to that effect was admissible; and the evidence given in this case was overwhelming. It was proved in the most satisfactory manner that before the paper was signed it was explained to the plaintiff that the defendants did not intend the paper to be an agreement till A had been consulted, and found to approve of the invention; and that the paper was signed before he was seen only because it was not convenient for the defendants to remain. The plaintiff assented to this, and received the writing on those terms. That being proved, there was no agreement" In the undermentioned case, the Privy Council held that the document which the plaintiff relied on as the contract between the parties contemplated only the making of a contract in the future when all the terms were left to be arranged (1)

Secondly.—The rule laid down in section 92 applies only when, upon the face of it, the written instrument appears to contain the whole contract. It is not necessary that the whole agreement should be in writing, and if, upon the face of that part of it, which is in writing, it appears that there are other conditions, oral or otherwise, which go to make up the entire contract, there is no reason why these conditions, if made orally, should not be orally proved (2) So where the plaintiffs sued for specific performance of an agreement in writing, which set forth, inter alia, that the defendants had agreed to sell it under "certain conditions as agreed upon," and the defendants alleged that the written agreement did not contain the whole of the agreement between the parties, and offered parol evidence in support of their contention; it was held that such evidence was admissible to show what was meant by the clause "certain conditions as agreed upon."(3)

Section 92 applies only to cases where the whole of the terms of the contract have been intended to be reduced into writing. This is shown by the [illegible] Were it not for those words [illegible] -cluded evidence, contradicting, [illegible] the terms of a contract as had [illegible] l it was held that this section [illegible] t substituting a new executory contract in place of an original decree.(5)

A written agreement cannot be added to, because when a writing takes place all other matters which were open before, are considered as settled by the written agreement being entered into and executed. It is otherwise when parties agree that a written document shall be executed, not embodying all the terms by which they are to be bound, and when by express arrangement the written document does not embody all the terms, but only a part, parol evidence is admissible to show what was the entire agreement between the parties.(6)

(1) Maung Shwe v. Maung Tun, 9 C. W. N., 147 (1904), s. c., 32 C., 96.
(2) Cutts v. Brown, 6 C., 328, 337 (1880); Greenleaf, Ev, § 384*a*.
(3) Ib.
(4) Jumna Das v. Srinath Roy, 17 C., 178
(5) Lachman Das v. Babu Ramnath, 44 A., 258 (1922), s. c., 20 All L. J., 65 per Walsh, J.
(6) Bholanath Khettri v. Kaliprasad Agurualla, 8 B L. R., 89, 92 (1871).

In Harris v. Rickett(1), Pollock, C. B., says: "We are of opinion that the rule shou ... ng does not contain and was not ... bankrupt. They have not foun ... was intended to contain the whole agreement, and we are, therefore, of opinion that the rule relied upon the plaintiffs only applies where the parties to an agreement reduce it to ing and agree or intend to agree that that writing shall be their agreement." Bramwell, B, says: "The principle of the rule is that it must be assumed that the parties agreed that the written agreement should be the evidence of the contract. The difficulty is that in this case there was evidence that the parties did not agree that the written agreement should be the evidence of the contract."

The rule that verbal evidence is not admissible to vary or alter the terms ... ld not intend that the ... ; and this may appear ... The rule is grounded upon this—that the parties to the instrument must be presumed to have committed to writing all which they deemed necessary to give full expression to their meaning. Where that appears not to have been their intention the the Court considering that the paper was meant merely as a memorandum of the transaction or an informal receipt for the money and not as containing the terms of the contract itself (3) Therefore, as in such cases oral evidence of the contract will not be excluded by section 91, ante(4), neither will the terms of the present section constitute a bar to its admission. Oral evidence may be given to show that a document does not, and was not, intended to contain the whole of the contract between the parties. But if that evidence when given shows that the document or documents do contain the whole contract, evidence to contradict, vary, add to, or subtract from its terms will be excluded, and the intention of the parties will be gathered from a construction of the document or documents only.(5) In the abovementioned cases oral evidence may be given. But there is also a third case which is distinguishable(6) from the last, viz., that dealt with by the second Proviso where there is a principal contract in writing and a separate collateral oral agreement as to a matter on which the document is silent and which is not inconsistent with its terms, in which case evidence of such agreement may be given under the terms of the Proviso mentioned. The fact that a lease or agreement has been signed will not preclude parol evidence of a collateral warranty that the drains are in perfect condition in a case where the lease or agreement was silent on the question of drainage.(7)

(1) 28 L J, Exch, 167, followed in Guddalur Ruthna v Kunnatur Arumuga, 7 Mad H C R, 189, 198, 199 (1872)

(2) Beharee Lall v Kaminee Soondaree, 14 W R, 319 (1870)

(3) Allen v Pink, 4 M & W, 140, cited in Beharee Lall v Kaminee Soondaree 14 W R, 319 (1870), see Taylor, Ev, § 1134

(4) See ante, s 91, second para of notes to section

(5) Cohen v Sutherland, 17 C, 919, 922 (1890), Harris v Rickett, 4 H & N, 1, followed in Kasheenath Chatterjee v Chundy Churn, 5 W. R, 68, 73 (1866), and Guddalur Ruthna v Kunnattur Arumuga, 7 Mad H C R., 189, 198, 199 (1852), supra [Where it is shown that a written agreement does not contain, and was not intended to contain, the whole agreement between the parties, the rule that parol evidence is not admissible to add to a written agreement has no application]

(6) See Cutts v Brown, 6 C at p 338, where evidence was admitted, though the case was held by Garth, C J, not to come within the terms of Proviso (2).

(7) De Lassalle v Guildford (1901), 2 K. B 215, Lloyd v Sturgeon Falls Pulp Co (1901), 85 L. T., and see Motebhoy Mulla

Oral evidence is also admissible to show the moment of time at which a document becomes a contract, and to show, not that which was agreed to, but what was the condition of the paper when the parties agreed that it should be an agreement between them.(1) Where there is an oral agreement to grant a lease this section does not stand in the way of proof that there has been an agreement by implication or inferrible from the circumstances as to the time of commencement of the lease. The Statute of Frauds has no application to this country.(2) There is nothing in this section to exclude evidence of an oral agreement which contradicts, varies, adds to or subtracts from, not the terms of the contract but some recitals on the contract itself.(3)

Evidence of conduct.

The section says "no evidence of any oral agreement or statement shall be admitted." There has been very considerable discussion on the question whether its terms, therefore, do or do not exclude evidence of conduct where such conduct is relevant. It does not, it has been held, necessarily follow from this section that subsequent conduct and surrounding circumstances may not be given in evidence for the purpose of showing in certain circumstances the real nature of the transaction. Thus when a woman had through her attorneys conveyed a property [illegible] by way of a sale, it was held by the Privy [illegible] took under the document and alleged that it [illegible] purchase-price, the transaction was in reality not a sale but a gift.(4) So, too, there have been a large number of decisions in India in which the admissibility of such evidence has come in question with reference to the question whether evidence can be given to show that what purports to be an out-and-out conveyance was in reality a mortgage only. But it is not only in cases of mortgage that the Courts have drawn a distinction between parol evidence of a transaction and evidence of conduct indicating such a transaction, and while compelled by law to reject the one has not felt itself precluded from admitting, and acting upon, the other, though(5), as already observed, the illustration of this distinction is chiefly to [illegible] In however, the case cited where the [illegible] that it amounted to a substantial unc[illegible] :d and part of it repaid to the plaintiff, it was said that everyone is now agreed that what took place after the execution of the document can have no bearing on its construction.(7)

The matter was at an early date, the subject of consideration of a Full Bench in the case of Kasheenath Chatterjee v. Chundy Churn.(8) In that case Peacock, C. J. (in whose opinion the majority of the Full Bench concurred), said :—" I am of opinion that verbal evidence is not admissible to vary or alter the terms of a written contract in cases in which there is no fraud or mistake, and in which the parties intend to express in writing what their words import. If a man writes that he sells absolutely, intending the writing which he executes

---

Essabhoy v. Mulji Haridas, P. C, 39 B., 399 (1915). Discussed in Badal Ram v. Jhulai, 19 A. L. J., 816 (1921).

(1) Stewart v Eddowes, L. R., 9 C. P., 311.

(2) Kailash Chandra Bhowmick v. Bejoy Kanta Lahiri, 23 C. W. N., 190; s. c., 50 I. C., 177.

(3) Mukhi Singh v. Kishun Singh, 51 I. C., 320.

(4) Ismail Mussajee v. Hafiz Boo, 10 C. W. N., 570, and v Hanif-un-Nissa v. Faiz-un-Nissa, P. C. (1911); 33 A., 340, post. See Bishunath Singh v. Baldeo Singh, 21 O. C., 165; s. c., 47 I. C., 194.

(5) Kashi Nath v. Hurrihur Mookerjee, 9 C., 898, 900; Baksu Lakshman v. Govinda Kanji, 4 B., 594, 601, per Melvill, J. (1880); and see Chango v. Kalaram, 4 Bom. H. C. R., 120 (1866).

(6) See The Law of Mortgage in India by Rash Behary Ghose, 3rd Ed., p. 221; Shyama Charan v. Herus Mollah, 26 C., 160 (1898), which was the case of a lease.

(7) Vissanji Sons & Co. v. Shapurji Burjorji Bharoocha, P. C., 36 B., 387 (1912).

(8) 5 W. R., 68 (1866).

to express and convey the meaning that he intends to sell absolutely, he cannot by mere verbal evidence show that at the time of the agreement both parties intended that their contract should not be such as their written words express, but that which they express by their words to be an absolute sale should be a mortgage. It is said that there is no Statute of Frauds, and therefore, parties may enter into verbal contracts for the sale of lands in the Mofussil without nd or other con-hat if the parties

rard mere verbal ended something ıded to express.
tradict a written contract, it would apply to every other case, and a man who writes 'one thousand' intending t

the words 'one tl

'one hundred.'

evidence. Furth effect of the new Registration Act would be frustrated..... The plaintiff in the present case alleged that he took possession in 1266, and that in 1270, the defendant forcibly dispossessed him. The defendant says that the plaintiff never took possession and that he was never forcibly ousted. If possession did not accompany or follow the absolute bill-of-sale, it would be a strong fact to show that the transaction was a mortgage and not a sale; and it, therefore, becomes material to try whethe- bly dispossessed as alleged by him unt of the alleged purchase-money, old and the acts and conduct of the an

: for I am of opinion parties, as for example
ance of the bill-of-sale, if it be found that the defendant retained possession and that the plaintiff never ver forcibly dispossessed "(1) And of the parties are at variance with possession of the property has not been transferred nor full value paid, then parol evidence to explain these facts may be admitted. I would hold that, although parol evidence may not be admitted purely and simply to contradict the terms of a formal and public written instrument duly acted on, it may, as between the original parties themselves be admitted in support of substantial acts and facts which negative or detract from the effect of the instrument."(2) The case was accordingly remanded to the first Court to try the issue whether, having regard to the acts and conduct of the parties, and having reference to the amount of the alleged purchase-money and the real value of the interest alleged to be sold, the parties intended the deed to operate as an absolute sale and treated the transaction as an absolute sale or as a mortgage only.

This decision does not appear to have been always entirely acquiesced in nor did some of the subsequent cases follow the principles which had been laid down by it.(3) In one case it appears to have been considered that this decision

(1) Kashee Nath v Chundy Churn, 5 W R, 68 (1866)

(2) Ib

(3) Madhub Chunder v Gungadhur Samunt, 11 W. R, 470 (1869); s c, 3 B L R, 86 ("I confess that I have some difficulty in comprehending the distinction between the admissibility of evidence of a verbal contract to vary a written instrument, and the admissibility of evidence showing the acts of the parties, which, after all are only indications of such unexpressed unwritten agreement between the parties") Per Jackson J, commented upon in Baksu Lakshman v Govinda Kanji, 4 B, 594, 600 (1880), Ram Doolal v Radha Nath, 23 W R, 167 (1875), Diamooddee Paik v Kasim Taridar, 5 C, was overridden by section 92 of this Act.(1) It has, however, been subsequently held that the law on this point under the Act and in England is the same, the rule contained in this section being that of the Common Law modified by equitable considerations(2) ; and that the present section made no change in the law as laid down in Kasheenath Chatterjee v. Chandy Churn (3) the principles of which case have been approved and followed, and applied in numerous subsequent cases (4)

A Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court has also held that oral evidence of the acts and conduct of the parties, such as oral evidence that possession remained with the vendor notwithstanding the execution of a deed of out-and-out sale, is admissible to prove that the deed was intended to operate only as a mortgage.(5) The principle of this decision was applied to a lease in a subsequent case in which it was held that evidence of conduct, as for instance return of the lease, was admissible to prove that such return was due to an intention to make the lease inoperative.(6) It is, however, a question whether these decisions are not affected by the decision of the Privy Council in Balkishen v. Legge.(7)

It has been held by the Calcutta High Court that the Privy Council decision in Balkishen v. Legge(8), holding oral evidence of intention to be inadmissible, does not in any way affect the rule laid down in the last mentioned Full Bench case, but rather supports it, there being a distinction between mere oral evidence of intention and evidence as to the acts and conduct of the parties.(9) This Court has, however, recently held that where the terms of a contract are unambiguous no evidence can be given of the conduct of the parties in contravention of such terms (10)

---

300 (1879); s c, 4 C L. R., 419, Ram Dyal v Heera Lall, 3 C. L R., 386 (1878), [following Banapa v Sundardas Jagjivandas, 1 B, 333 (1876)] dissented from in Hem Chunder v Kally Churn, 9 C., 528 (1883).

(1) Diamooddee Paik v. Kaim Taridar, 5 C, 300, 302 (1872) See as to this case Khetridas Agarwalla v. Shib Narayan, 9 C W N, 178, at p 183 (1904) The question was later raised again in Datoo v Ramchandra Totaram, 7 B. L. R, 669 (1905)

(2) Baksu Lakshman v Govinda Kanji, 4 B, 594, 606, 607 (1880).

(3) See Hem Chunder v. Kally Churn, 9 C., 528 (1883), s. 92 of the Evidence Act lays down in terms the same rule as Sir Barnes Peacock then stated to be law, following the case in last note and dissenting from Diamooddee Paik v Kaim Taridar, supra; and followed in Kashi Nath v Hurrihur Mookerjee, 9 C., 898 (1883).

(4) Pheloo Monee v. Greesh Chunder, 8 W. R., 515 (1887), Sheikh Parabdi v Sheikh Mohammed, 1 B. L. R, A. C., 87 (1868); Nundo Lall v. Prosunno Moyee, 19 W. R., 333 (1873), Hasha Khand v. Jesha Premaji, 4 B, 609n (1878), s c., 7 B, 73; Baksu Lakshman v Govinda Kanji, 4 B, 594 (1880); Hem Chunder v Kally Churn, 9 C., 528 (1883); s c. 12 C L R., 287; Kashi Nath v. Hurrihur Mookerjee, 9 C., 898 (1883); Behary Lall v Tej Narayan, 10 C., 764 (1884); Venkatratnam v. Reddiah, 13 M, 494 (1890); Rakken v. Alagappudayan, 16 M, 80 (1892); Kader v. Nepean, 21 C P C., 882 (1894); s c, 21 I. A, 96 [See also Holmes v Mathews, 9 Moo P. C, 413 (1855); Mutty v. Annundo, 5 Moo I. A, 72 (1849)]. See Barton v. Bank of New South Wales, L. R., 15 App Cas, 379; Balkishen Das v. Legge, 19 A, 434 (1897).

(5) Preonath Shaha v. Madhu Suddan, 25 C, 603 (1898); foll. in Khankar v Ali, 28 C, 256 (1900), Mahomed v Nazur, 28 C, 289 (1901); Ram Sarup v. Allah Rakha, 107 P L R. (1905); ref. to Narendra v. Bhola, 27 C. W. N, 336 (1920).

(6) Shyama Charan v. Heras Moolah, 26 C., 160 (1898); but see Mayandi Cheti v Oliver, 2 M, 261 (1898).

(7) 22 A, 149 (1899), dist., Narendra v. Bhola, 27 C W. N., 336 (1920).

(8) 27 I. A., 58 (1899), s c, 22 A, 149.

(9) Khankur Abdur v. Ali Hafez, 28 C, 256 (1900), (evidence admissible of repayment of money, return of deed, and acts of possession by vendors); s c., 5 C. W N, 351; Mahomed Ali v. Nazur Ali, 28 C, 289 (1901); evidence admissible of promise by vendee to restore the property on repayment in two or three years; s c., 5 C. W. N., 326; Second Appeal, Calcutta High Court, 696 of 1899

(10) Secretary of State v. Kumar Narendranath Mitter, 32 C. L J, 402; Bhupendra Chandra Singha v. Harihar Chakravarti, 24 C. W. N., 874; Kironshashi

A different view from that expressed in the cases in the last note but one has been expressed by the Bombay High Court(1) where it was said in answer to a contention that the circumstances required the Court to draw an inference that the document was not what it appeared to be :—" We can only understand that as meaning that the document was accompanied by a contemporaneous oral agreement or statement of intention, which must be inferred from these several circumstances." This, it was held, was opposed to the Privy Council decision in cases in which a party was not entitled to rely on any of the provisos to the section. And in another case in the same Court when the plaintiff desired to set aside a deed of sale by proving that a misrepresentation, agreement or promise, was made to him at the time of execution that the deed would not be enforced as a deed of sale, it was held that such evidence would be inadmissible, since its effect would not be to prove fraud, but to prove the existence of a different contract without proof of fraud to invalidate it.(2)

The High Court of Madras has also taken a different view of the decision, [illegible] the parties is excluded thereby, [illegible] relevant only by reason of the [illegible] t there was a contemporaneous oral agreement or statement between the parties that a deed was to operate in different manner than it purports to operate, and that no exception is made in any of the provisos to this section or elsewhere in the Act in favour of evidence which consists of the acts and conduct of the parties from which an inference might be drawn that there was an oral agreement to vary the terms of the contract or grant (3)

The principle upon which evidence of conduct has been admitted is explained by Melvill, J, in his judgment in the case of Baksu Lakshman v Gobinda Kanji(4), in which he held that: " A party whether plaintiff or defendant, who sets up a contemporaneous oral agreement as showing that an apparent sale was really a mortgage, should not be permitted to start(5) his case by offering direct parol evidence of such oral agreement, but if it appears clearly and unmistakeably from the conduct of the parties that the transaction has been treated by them as a mortgage, the Court will give effect to it as a mortgage, and not as a sale, and therefore, if it be necessary to ascertain what were

---

Debi v Ananda Chandra, 32 C L J, 15, Raja Nirod Chandra v. Harihar Chakravarty, 32 C L. J, 19

(1) Dattoo v Ramchandra Totaram, 7 Bom L R, 669 (1905)

(2) Dagdu Valad Sahu v Nanu Valad Sahu, 35 B, 93, and v Samana Basappa v Gadigaya Komaja (1910), 35 B, 231.

(3) Achutaramaraju v Subbaraju, 25 M, 7 (1901)

(4) 4 B, 795 (1880), referring to this case, Garth, C J, said "In the latter case there will be found an excellent judgment of Mr Justice Melvill, in which he very clearly explains this principle of Equity, and the mode and the circumstances under which it may be applied" Hem Chunder v Kally Churn, 9 C, at p. 533 (1888), and see Behary Lall v Tej Narayan, 10 C, 764 (1884), at pp 767, 768 "If we may say so, we entirely concur in these decisions (Baksu Lakshman v Govinda Kanji, supra; Hem Chunder Soor v. Kally Churn, supra), indeed the luminous and able judgment of Melvill, J, in the Bombay case cannot but commend itself to the mind of every lawyer," per Tottenham and Norris, JJ Baksu Lakshman v Gobinda Kanji, has been followed in Hem Chunder v Kally Churn, supra, Behary Lall v Tej Narayan, supra; Kashi Nath v Hurrihur Mookerjee, 9 C, 898 (1883), Venkataratnam v Reddiah, 13 M, 494 (1890) For more recent decisions in the Bombay High Court on this point (sales or mortgages by conditional sale), see Tukaram v Ramchand, F B, 26 B, 252 (1901), Madhavrao Keshavrao v Sahebrao, 39 B, 119 (1914), Kasturchand Lakhmaji v Jakhia Padia Patel, 40 B, 74 (1916), following Meruli v Balaji, 2 Bom L R, 1058 (1900), Narayan Ramkrishna v Vighneshwar, 40 B 378 (1916), Rakken v Alagappudayan, 16 M, 80 (1892)

(5) This rule prohibiting parol evidence in the first instance was applied in Behary Lall v Tej Narain, 10 C 764 768 (1884), but dissented from in Rakken v Alagappudayan, 16 M 80, 83 (1892), v post

was overridden by section 92 of this Act.(1) It has, however, been subsequently held that the law on this point under the Act and in England is the same, the rule contained in this section being that of the Common Law modified by equitable considerations(2); and that the present section made no change in the law as laid down in Kasheenath Chatterjee v. Chandy Churn (3) the principles of which case have been approved and followed, and applied in numerous subsequent cases (4)

A Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court has also held that oral evidence of the acts and conduct of the parties, such as oral evidence that possession remained with the vendor notwithstanding the execution of a deed of out-and-out sale, is admissible to prove that the deed was intended to operate only as a mortgage (5) The principle of this decision was applied to a lease in a subsequent case in which it was held that evidence of conduct, as for instance return of the lease, was admissible to prove that such return was due to an intention to make the lease inoperative.(6) It is, however, a question whether these decisions are not affected by the decision of the Privy Council in Balkishen v. Legge.(7)

It has been held by the Calcutta High Court that the Privy Council decision in Balkishen v. Legge(8), holding oral evidence of intention to be inadmissible, does not in any way affect the rule laid down in the last mentioned Full Bench case, but rather supports it, there being a distinction between mere oral evidence of intention and evidence as to the acts and conduct of the parties (9) This Court has, however, recently held that where the terms of a contract are unambiguous no evidence can be given of the conduct of the parties in contravention of such terms.(10)

---

300 (1879); s c, 4 C L. R., 419; Ram Dyal v Heera Lall, 3 C L R., 386 (1878), [following Banapa v. Sundardas Jagjivandas, 1 B, 333 (1876)] dissented from in Hem Chunder v Kally Churn, 9 C., 528 (1883).

(1) Diamooddee Paik v. Kaim Taridar, 5 C, 300, 302 (1872). See as to this case Khetridas Agarwalla v. Shib Narayan, 9 C W N, 178, at p. 183 (1904) The question was later raised again in Datoo v Ramchandra Totaram, 7 B L. R, 669 (1905).

(2) Baksu Lakshman v Govinda Kanji, 4 B, 594, 606, 607 (1880).

(3) See Hem Chunder v. Kally Churn, 9 C, 528 (1883), s. 92 of the Evidence Act lays down in terms the same rule as Sir Barnes Peacock then stated to be law, following the case in last note and dissenting from Diamooddee Paik v. Kaim Taridar, supra, and followed in Kashi Nath v. Hurrihur Mookerjee, 9 C, 898 (1883)

(4) Pheloo Monee v Greesh Chunder, 8 W R., 515 (1887); Sheikh Parabdi v. Sheikh Mohammed, 1 B. L. R, A. C., 87 (1868); Nundo Lall v. Prosunno Moyee, 19 W R., 333 (1873); Hasha Khand v. Jesha Premaji, 4 B., 609*n*. (1878), s c, 7 B, 73, Baksu Lakshman v. Govinda Kanji, 4 B, 594 (1880); Hem Chunder v Kally Churn, 9 C., 528 (1883); s c, 12 C L R, 287; Kashi Nath v. Hurrihur Mookerjee, 9 C., 898 (1883); Behary Lall v. Tej Narayan, 10 C, 764 (1884); Venkatratnam v. Reddiah, 13 M., 494 (1890); Rakken v. Alagappudayan, 16 M, 80 (1892); Kader v. Nepean, 21 C P. C, 882 (1894); s c, 21 I. A., 96 [See also Holmes v Mathews, 9 Moo P. C, 413 (1855); Mutty v Annundo, 5 Moo I. A., 72 (1849)]. See Barton v Bank of New South Wales, L. R., 15 App. Cas., 379; Balkishen Das v. Legge, 19 A., 434 (1897).

(5) Preonath Shaha v. Madhu Suddan, 25 C, 603 (1898), foll in Khankar v. Ali 28 C., 256 (1900); Mahomed v. Nazur, 28 C, 289 (1901); Ram Sarup v. Allah Rakha, 107 P. L. R. (1905); ref. to Narendra v Bhola, 27 C. W. N., 336 (1920).

(6) Shyama Charan v. Heras Moolah, 26 C., 160 (1898); but see Mayandi Cheti v. Oliver, 2 M, 261 (1898).

(7) 22 A., 149 (1899), dist, Narendra v. Bhola, 27 C W. N, 336 (1920).

(8) 27 I. A, 58 (1899), s. c, 22 A, 149

(9) Khankur Abdur v. Ali Hafez, 28 C., 256 (1900), (evidence admissible of repayment of money, return of deed, and acts of possession by vendors); s c, 5 C. W. N, 351; Mahomed Ali v. Nazur Ali, 28 C., 289 (1901); evidence admissible of promise by vendee to restore the property on repayment in two or three years; s. c, 5 C. W. N. 326; Second Appeal, Calcutta High Court, 696 of 1899.

(10) Secretary of State v. Kumar Narendranath Mitter, 32 C. L. J., 402; Bhupendra Chandra Singha v. Harihar Chakravarti, 24 C. W. N., 874; Kironshashi

A different view from that expressed in the cases in the last note but one has been expressed by the Bombay High Court(1) where it was said in answer to a contention that the circumstances required the Court to draw an inference that the document was not what it appeared to be :—" We can only understand that as meaning that the document was accompanied by a contemporaneous oral agreement or statement of intention, which must be inferred from these several circumstances." This, it was held, was opposed to the Privy Council decision in cases in which a party was not entitled to rely on any of the provisos to the section. And in another case in the same Court when the plaintiff desired to set aside a deed of sale by proving that a misrepresentation, agreement or promise, was made to him at the time of execution that the deed would not be enforced as a deed of sale, it was held that such evidence would be inadmissible, since its effect would not be to prove fraud, but to prove the existence of a different contract without proof of fraud to invalidate it.(2)

The High Court of Madras has also taken a different view of the decision, [illegible] ct of the parties is excluded thereby, [illegible] ld be relevant only by reason of the [illegible] that there was a contemporaneous oral agreement or statement between the parties that a deed was to operate in different manner than it purports to operate ; and that no exception is made in any of the provisos to this section or elsewhere in the Act in favour of evidence which consists of the acts and conduct of the parties from which an inference might be drawn that there was an oral agreement to vary the terms of the contract or grant (3)

The principle upon which evidence of conduct has been admitted is explained by Melvill, J, in his judgment in the case of Baksu Lakshman v. Gobinda Kanji(4), in which he held that "A party whether plaintiff or defendant, who sets up a contemporaneous oral agreement as showing that an apparent sale was really a mortgage, should not be permitted to start(5) his case by offering direct parol evidence of such oral agreement, but if it appears clearly and unmistakeably from the conduct of the parties that the transaction has been treated by them as a mortgage, the Court will give effect to it as a mortgage, and not as a sale, and therefore, if it be necessary to ascertain what were

---

Debi v Ananda Chandra, 32 C L J, 15. Raja Nirod Chandra v. Harihar Chakravarty, 32 C L J, 19

(1) Dattoo v Ramchandra Totaram, 7 Bom L R, 669 (1905)

(2) Dagdu Valad Sahu v Nanu Valod Sahu, 35 B, 93, and v Samana Basappa v Gadigaya Komaya (1910), 35 B, 231.

(3) Achutaramaraju v Subbaraju, 25 M, 7 (1901)

(4) 4 B, 795 (1880), referring to this case, Garth, C J, said "In the latter case there will be found an excellent judgment of Mr Justice Melvill, in which he very clearly explains this principle of Equity, and the mode and the circumstances under which it may be applied" Hem Chunder v Kally Churn, 9 C, at p 533 (1888), and see Behary Lall v Tej Narayan, 10 C, 764 (1884), at pp 767, 768 "If we may say so, we entirely concur in these decisions (Baksu Lakshman v Govinda Kanji, supra, Hem Chunder Soor v Kally Churn, supra), indeed the luminous and able judgment of Melvill, J, in the Bombay case cannot but commend itself to the mind of every lawyer," per Tottenham and Norris, JJ Baksu Lakshman v Gobinda Kanji, has been followed in Hem Chunder v Kally Churn, supra, Behary Lall v Tej Narayan, supra; Kashi Nath v Hurrihur Mookerjee, 9 C, 898 (1883), Venkataratnam v Reddiah, 13 M, 494 (1890) For more recent decisions in the Bombay High Court on this point (sales or mortgages by conditional sale), see Tukaram v Ramchand, F B, 26 B 252 (1901), Madhavrao Keshavrao v. Sahebrao, 39 B, 119 (1914), Kasturchand Lakhmaji v Jakhia Padia Patel, 40 B, 74 (1916), following Meruti v Balaji, 2 Bom L R, 1058 (1900); Narayan Ramkrishna v Vighneshwar, 40 B, 378 (1916), Rakken v Alagappudayan, 16 M, 80 (1892)

(5) This rule prohibiting parol evidence in the first instance was applied in Behary Lall v Tej Narain, 10 C 764 768 (1884); but dissented from in Rakken v. Alagappudayan, 16 M 80, 83 (1892), [illegible]

the terms of the mortgage, the Court will for that purpose allow parol evidence to be given of the original oral agreement."(1)

"Although parol evidence will not be admitted to prove directly that simultaneously with the execution of a bill-of-sale there was an oral agreement by way of defeasance, yet the Court will look to the subsequent conduct of the parties, and, if it clearly appears from such conduct that the apparent vendee treated the transaction as one of mortgage, the Court will give effect to it as a lence of the conduct an indication of an
, no doubt, evidence ry much more. In ase it is clear that evidence of conduct would be strictly admissible under section 115 of this Act. And even when conduct falls short of a legal estoppel, there is nothing in the Evidence Act which prevents it from being proved, or, when proved, from being taken into consideration. Courts of Equity in England will always allow a party (whether plaintiff or defendant) to show that an assignment of an estate, which is, on the face of it, an absolute conveyance, was intended to be nothing more than a security for debt, and they will not only look to the conduct of the parties, but will admit mere parol evidence to show or explain the real intention and purpose of the parties at the time. The exercise of this remedial jurisdiction is justified on two grounds, viz., part-performance and fraud"

"The Courts in India are not precluded by the Indian Evidence Act from exercising a similar jurisdiction The rule of estoppel, as laid down in section 115, covers the whole ground covered by the theory of part-performance. That section does not say, that in order to constitute an estoppel, the acts which a person has been induced to do, must have been acts prejudicial to his own interest. Its terms are sufficiently wide to meet the case of a grantor who has simply been allowed to remain in possession on the understanding and belief that the transaction was one of mortgage, and thus every instance of what the English Courts call 'part-performance' would be brought within the Indian rule of estoppel. But the ground upon which this jurisdiction of the Courts in India may most safely be rested is the obligation which lies upon them to prevent fraud (2) The Courts will not allow a rule or even a Statute which was passed to suppress fraud, to to it, and, accordingly, in England the ( fraud, have in some cases set aside the C Statute of Frauds. The Courts in India have the same justification in dealing similarly with the obstacle interposed by the Indian Evidence Act. In thus modifying the rules laid down by sections 91 and 92 of that Act, the Courts will not be acting in opposition to the intention of the Legislature, which, by enacting the provisions of section 26, clause (c) of the Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), has shown an intention to relax the rules of the Indian Evidence Act, so as to bring them into conformity with the practice of the English Courts of Chancery."

---

(1) As was observed by Wigram, V. C., in Dale v. Hamilton (5 Hare, 381), and also by Jessel, M. R., in Ungley v. Ungley (L. R., 5 Ch. D. 1887), the conduct of the parties shows that some contract reconcilable with such conduct must have taken place between the litigant parties, and the Court is consequently compelled to admit evidence of the terms of the contract in order that justice may be done between the parties (v. post)

(2) See Bholanath Khetri v Kaliprasad Agurualiah, 8 B. L R, 89 (1871); Hem Chunder v. Kally Churn, 9 C, 528, 533 (1883); Kashi Nath v. Harrihur Mookerjee, 9 C., 898 (1883); Rakken v. Alagappudayan, 16 M., 80, 81, 83 (1892). See Field, Ev., 429; ib., 6th Ed., 273.

Melvill, J., further intimated that in his opinion the First Proviso to this section was large enough to let in evidence of such subsequent conduct as in the view of the Court of Equity would amount to fraud, and would entitle a grantor to a decree restraining the grantee from proceeding upon his document. If the admission of this evidence can be justified on the grounds that it is within the purview of the First Proviso of the section, there can clearly be no ground for the contention that it in any sense contravenes its terms. As already observed, this was the opinion of Melvill, J, in the case cited who said(1): " Or they may think, and this is a view which is certainly capable of being supported by argument, that the case may be made to fall within the First Proviso to section 92, which admits parol evidence of fraud to invalidate a document. It is true that it was held in Banapa v. Sundardas(2) that the fraud mentioned in the section must be fraud contemporaneous with, and not subsequent to, the making of the document, and the Court refused to entertain the argument, which is suggested by Mr. Dart in his work on Vendors and Purchasers (p. 954, 4th Ed.), that the refusal to fulfil a promise may be taken to show that the promise was originally fraudulent. But, admitting that such an argument can hardly be maintained, I must still say that the words of the first proviso to section 92 are very wide, and declare that any act of fraud may be proved which would entitle any person to any decree relating to a document, and it is not quite clear to me that these words are not large enough to let in evidence of such subsequent conduct as, in the view of a Court of Equity, would amount to fraud, and would entitle a grantor to a decree restraining the grantee from proceeding upon this document."(3)

Similarly in the later case of Rakken v. Alagappudayan(4) Muttusami Ayyar, J., said: "I desire, however, to rest my decision on the ground stated by Lord Justice Turner in Lincoln v. Wright.(5) His Lordship said in that case " without reference to the question of part-performance on which I do not think it necessary to give any opinion, I think the parol evidence is admissible and is decisive upon the case. The principle of this Court is that the Statute of Frauds was not made to cover fraud. If the real agreement in this case was that as between the plaintiff and W, the transaction should be a mortgage, it is in the eye of this Court a fraud to insist on the conveyance as being absolute, and parol evidence must be admissible to prove the fraud Assuming the agreement proved, the principle of the old cases as to mortgages seems to me to be directly applicable Here is an absolute conveyance when it was agreed that there should be a mortgage, and the conveyance is insisted on in fraud of the agreement The question then, as I view it, is whether there was such an agreement as this bill alleges, and, upon the evidence I am perfectly satisfied that there was Besides, the agreement for the mortgage was only part of the entire transaction, and the appellant cannot, as I conceive adopt one part of the transaction and repudiate the other. Thus the ratio decidendi was that the conveyance formed only part of the real agreement, and that the oral agreement which gave a claim to equitable relief formed another part of the same transaction. Again, the ground for departing from the ordinary rule of evidence, was subsequent unconscionable conduct in taking advantage of that rule, and thereby endeavouring to mislead the Court into the belief that what was only an apparent sale but a real mortgage was a real sale and not a mortgage The fraud referred to by the Lord Justice

(1) At p 603.

(2) 1 B, 333 (1876). See also Cutts v. Brown, 6 C., 328, 338 (1880). The Law of Mortgage in India by Rash Behary Ghose, 3rd Ed, p 221

(3) For subsequent conduct see Vesanji Sons & Co. v. Shapurji Burjorji Bharoocha, P C. 36 B, 387 (1912).

(4) 16 M, 80, 82, 83 (1892).

(5) 4 DeG & J, 16; also referred to in Balkishen Das v. Legge, 19 A., 443 (1897).

was not fraud practised at the time when the document was executed, but the advancement of a claim in fraud of the true intention or the real agreement of the parties. It seems to me that section 92 of the Evidence Act, as observed in Venkatratnam v. Reddiah(1) does not render evidence of the oral agreement inadmissible, for, if the real agreement were proved, it would invalidate the document as a deed of absolute sale within the meaning of the first Proviso to section 92 of the Evidence Act, and constitute a ground for a Court of Equity and good conscience giving effect to it only as a mortgage." It has, however, been also held that the fraud referred to in this Proviso must be contemporaneous and not subsequent frau[illegible]
this Proviso so far as it makes pro[illegible] be applicable(2) (v. post). The sam[illegible] whether or not a party should or[illegible] proof of a contemporaneous oral agreement expressed his dissent from the rule laid down in that respect in Baksu Lakshman v. Govinda Kanji, saying(3) "Nor do I see my way to adopting the rule that a party should not first start his case with proof of a contemporaneous oral agreement, and then confirm it by evidence of subsequent acts and conduct of the parties, but that he should prove the latter first and then proceed to prove the former. The subsequent acts and conduct are only indications of the contemporaneous oral agreement, and it is such agreement that is the real ground of Equitable relief. Such rule involves in it the anomaly that, while indirect evidence of the true agreement is admissible, notwithstanding section 92, direct evidence of the same is not admissible. I do not, however, desire to be understood as saying that it would be safe to rely on the uncorroborated oral evidence of the contemporaneous oral agreement at variance with the terms of a document, but I think the absence of corroborative evidence in the shape of subsequent possession and conduct and other circumstances, is an objection that ought to go to the credit due to the parol evidence and not to its admissibility. In the case before us, there was such corroborative evidence, though the weight due to it was a matter for the Judge to determine."

But in the absence of fraud or of conduct indicating fraud, parol evidence [illegible] for the perform-[illegible] vent
[illegible] that if a party do or refrain from doing any particular thing, a certain sum shall be paid by him, then the sum stated may be treated as liquidated damages. A bond for Rs. 20,000, which, provided for payment of interest at the rate of Re. 1-4 per cent. per month, contained the following clause: "We hereby promise and give in writing that we shall pay year by year a sum of Rs. 3,000 on account of the interest. And in the case of our failing to pay year by year the said sum of Rs. 3,000, the same shall be considered as principal and thereon interest shall run also at the rate of Re. 1-4 per cent. per month. In a suit on such bond the defendant sought to adduce evidence to show that after the execution of the bond the plaintiff stated that the clause was intended to operate as a penal clause, and that the conditions therein would not be enforced: but it was held that the clause was not penal, but in the nature of an agreement to pay liquidated damages, and that the plaintiff was entitled to a decree for the amount due on the bond with interest as agreed upon, and approving and distinguishing the cases of Baksu Lakshman v. Govinda Kanji(4), and Chunder Soor v. Kaly Churn Das(5), that the evidence tendered was not admissible.(6)

(1) 13 M., 495.
(2) Banapa v. Sundardas Jagjivandas, 1 B., 333 (1876), Cutts v. Brown, 6 C., 328, 338 (1880), and see The Law of Mortgage in India, by Rash Behary Ghose, 3rd Ed., p. 221.
(3) 16 M., at p. 83.
(4) 4 B., 594.
(5) 9 C., 528.
(6) Bihary Lal v. Tej Narain, 10 C., 764 (1884).

And in the undermentioned case it was held that a registered instrument of mortgage takes effect against any oral agreement relating to the hypothecated property and no parol agreement which purports to modify the terms of the contract of mortgage can be proved.(1)

As this rule turns on the fraud which is involved in the conduct of the person who is really a mortgagee, and who sets himself up as an absolute purchaser, the rule of admitting evidence for the purpose of defeating this fraud would not apply to an innocent purchaser, without notice of the existence of the mortgage, who merely bought from a person who was in possession of title-deeds and was the ostensible owner of the property.(2)

In the decision of the Privy Council, already referred to(3), the Judicial Committee with reference to the admission by the High Court and Subordinate Judge of the evidence of a party to the suit and one of his witnesses for the purpose of proving the real intention of the parties observed as follows :—" Their Lordships do not think that oral evidence of intention was admissible for the purpose of construing the deeds or ascertaining the intention of the parties. By section 92 of the Indian Evidence Act, no evidence of any oral agreement or statement can be admitted as between the parties to any such instrument or their representatives in interest for the purpose of contradicting, varying or adding to or subtracting from its terms, subject to the exceptions contained in the several provisos It was conceded that this case could not be brought within any of t' [illegible] referred to by [illegible]

[illegible] with such extrinsic evidence of surrounding circumstances as may be required to show in what manner the [illegible] existing facts."(5) In a later case in the [illegible] while under this section and section 93 [illegible]w what was intended by the parties, for such intention must be gathered from the language of the instrument, evidence of previous transaction between them may be admissible for a limited purpose as, for instance, in anticipation of an obvious defence (6) And in a recent case in the Privy Council where it was a question whether the amount of land, named in a kabuliyat was more than was contained by the specified boundaries, it was held that the kabuliyat could not be varied by extrinsic evidence on this point or as to the negotiation before it was completed.(7)

In a later case where the respondents claimed possession of lands under deeds purporting to be absolute conveyances, and the appellants, contending that those were intended to be mortgages and had always been so treated by all the parties, offered evidence of conduct in support of that view, and this evidence had been rejected in this country under this section, the Privy Council held that the case for the appellants disclosed a charge of fraud antecedent to the deeds, and without expressing any opinion on the application of this

(1) Maharaj Singh v. Raja Bulwant Singh (1906), 28 A., 508

(2) Kashi Nath v Hurrihur Mookerjee, 9 C., 1898 (1883); Rakken v. Alagappudayan, 16 M., 80, 81, 82 (1892).

(3) Balkishen Das v. Legge, 22 A., 149, 158, 159 (1899); s c, 4 C W. N, 153 The decision of the High Court is upheld in 19 A, 434 (1897).

(4) Alderson v White, DeG & J., 105; Lincoln v. Wright, 4 DeG & J., 16, were referred to by the High Court. See as to this class of cases, Rochefoucauld v. Boustead, L. R., 1897, 1 Ch., 196.

(5) Balkrishen Das v. Legge, 22 A., 158, 159 (1899); Jhanda Singh v. Wahid-ud-din, P. C, 38 A, 570 (1916), but see Hanifun-nissa v Faiz-un-nissa, P. C., 33 A, 340 (1911).

(6) Protap Chandra Saha v. Mohammad Ali Sarkar, 19 C. L. J, 64 (p. 70) (1914), per Mookerjee, J.

(7) Durga Prasad Singh v. Rajendra Narain Bagchi, P. C., 41 C., 493 (1913); 18 C. W. N., 66.

section, ordered that the rejected evidence should be heard subject to any objection which the respondents might take.(1)

As already stated, it has been held by some decisions of the Calcutta High Court, that the decision in Balkishen Das v. Legge does not in any case exclude evidence of conduct. It does not, it is said, lay down any rule of exclusion of evidence over and above that contained in this section which excludes any oral agreement or statement, but not evidence of the acts and conduct of the parties not being in the nature of an oral agreement or statement. The evidence which the Privy Council held inadmissible consisted of the statements of one of the parties to the transaction and of a pleader which went to show that at the time when the negotiations were going on, which led to the execution of the deeds under consideration, one of the parties said that he would not execute the deeds unless it was a mortgage and the other answered, and that answer was supported by the pleader that the two deeds which they were going to have would together amount to a mortgage only. That was adduced as evidence of the intention of the parties, and that evidence was considered inadmissible.

That evidence consisted only of oral statements of the parties, and there-
[illegible]

So evidence of a contemporaneous oral agreement at the time of sale of immovable property that the property was to be reconveyed on payment of the consideration-money has been held inadmissible (3) There are, however, decisions both earlier and later than that of the Privy Council in which the Courts have, in order to judge of the nature of a transaction, had recourse to the acts and conduct of the parties and to the circumstances, as for example, where it was sought to show that an apparent sale was really a mortgage, to the circumstance that the property which was worth Rs. 250 was apparently sold for Rs. 35.(4) Whilst, however, these cases decide that evidence of conduct is admissible, they leave untouched the question whether, when evidence of conduct has been admitted to show that a transaction is not what on its face it appears to be, oral evidence may then be given to show what were the terms of the real transaction. It has been held that such evidence may be given (5) There are, however, decisions of the Calcutta High Court which adopt or approximate to the views of the Madras and Bombay High Courts.(6)

In a case in the Calcutta High Court it was held that in determining whether a transaction is a mortgage or a sale with option to repurchase, a Judge should take the transaction as expressed in the documents and may also consider facts which may be legitimately proved with a view to showing the relation of the language of the document to existing facts and is justified in referring to a difference between the value and the consideration.(7) And in a later case in the Privy Council, where a deed purporting to be one of absolute sale had been followed, a month later, by one in which the purchaser

(1) Maung Kyin v. Ma She La, P. C, 38 C, 892 (1911).

(2) Khonkar Abdur v. Ali Hafez, 2 C., 256, 258, 259 (1900); Mohamed Ali v. Nazar Ali, 28 C, 289 (1901): 2nd Appeal, Cal. H C, 696 of 1899 (4th June, 1901). Contra see Achutaramaraju v. Subbaraju, 25 M, 7 (1901).

(3) S A, 32 of 1904, Mad. H. C., 6th Sept. 1905, 15 Mad. L. J., s. n, 9.

(4) Second Appeal, Cal. H. C., 696 of 1899 (11th June, 1901), cor. Ameer Ali and Pratt, JJ.

(5) v. ante, p. 620, Baksu Lakshman v. Govinda Kanji, 4 B., 594 (1880). In Rakken v. Alagappudayan, 16 M., 80, 82, 83 (1892); the Court disagreed with the limitation imposed in the former case preventing a party from starting his case by direct parol evidence of the alleged oral agreement.

(6) Radha Raman v. Bhowani Prasad, 5 C. W. N, cccxcvi (1901), Rahiman v. Elahi Buksh, 28 C, 70 (1900). v post, and see ante p 618.

(7) Abdul Gaffur v. Sheikh Jamal, 18 C. L. J, 228 (1913), per Jenkins, C. J.

reserved to the vendor a right to repurchase within a specified time, and these had been separately stamped and registered, and the right to repurchase had not been exercised, it was held that the transaction was a sale (1) In this case it was said that the intention of the parties was to be gathered from the document viewed in the light of the surrounding circumstances In several cases the Bombay High Court has decided the question whether a transaction was a mortgage by conditional sale by deducing the real intention of the parties from the circumstances of each case (2)

As already stated, the position adopted by the High Courts following the decision of the Privy Council is this :—

The English Chancery cases are inapplicable The question must be determined by the provisions of this section, which precludes evidence of any oral agreement or statement. Admittedly direct evidence of any statement of intention is excluded. But evidence of conduct is only relevant as leading to the inference of a contemporaneous oral agreement.(3) Subsequent acts and conduct are only indications of the contemporaneous oral agreement which agreement is the ground for relief. The admission of evidence of conduct involves the anomaly that, while indirect evidence of the true agreement is admissible notwithstanding this section, direct evidence of the same is not admissible (4) If evidence of conduct does not establish an agreement other than that appearing on the face of the document, it is irrelevant. If it does, then it is excluded by this section, which prohibits evidence whether direct or

It has been more recently held that (5) the rights of the parties may nduct of the parties, but in any case where the terms are unambiguous no evidence can be given of the conduct of the parties in contravention of the terms of the contract.(6)

The true rule would therefore appear to be that any evidence, whether of conduct or otherwise, tendered for the purpose of contradicting, varying, adding to, etc , a document is excluded by the terms of this section unless it can be shown to be admissible under the Provisos(7), as on the ground of fraud (8) If a case comes within the Provisos, then any evidence of conduct or otherwise may be given. In short, the same principles apply to the admission of evidence of conduct as indirect evidence of the existence of a contemporaneous oral agreement as to the admission of direct evidence. Neither is admissible

(1) Jhanda Singh v Wahid-ud-din, P C. 38 A, 570 (1916), see Bhagwan Sahai v Bhagwan Din, P. C., 12 A, 387 (1890)

(2) Kasturchand Lakhmaji v. Jakhia Padia, 40 B, 74 (1916); Narayan Ramkrishna v Vigneshuar, 40 B, 378 (1916); Madhavrao Keshavrao v Sahebrao, 39 B, 119 (1914); Tukaram v. Ramchand, F. B, 26 B, 252 (1901)

(3) Achutaramaraju v Subbaraju, 25 M, 7 (1901), Dattoo v. Ramchandra, 7 Bom L R, 669 (1905); Radha Raman v Bhowani Prasad, 5 C. W. N, ccxcvi (1901)

(4) Rakken v Alagappudayan, 16 M, 80 at p 83 (1892)

(5) See Secretary of State v. Kumar Narendranath Mitter, 32 C. L. J, 402

(6) Ib · Bhupendra Chandra Singha v. Harihar Chakravarti, 24 C. W. N, 874; Kironshashi Debi v. Ananda Chandra, 32 C. L. J, 15; Raja Nirod Chandra v. Harihar Chakravarti, 32 C L. J., 19

(7) Dattoo v Ramchandra, 7 Bom L. R, 669, 670 (1905). "This of course does not preclude a person from relying on the proviso of the section, but there is no case made here which would enable us to say that any of these provisions are applicable to the circumstances of the case" And in Balkishen v Legge, 22 A, 149 (1899), the Privy Council said it was conceded that the case could not be brought within any of the provisions.

(8) Rahiman v Elahi Baksh, 28 C., 70 (1900); Maung Bin v. Ma Hlaing (F. B), 3 L B R, 100; Abbaji Annaji v. Lurman Tukaram, 8 Bom. L. R., 553; Sangira Malappa v. Ramappa (1909), 34 B, 59. In Haridas Ranchoredas v. Mercantile Bank, 44 B, 474, it was held that there was nothing in this section which prevented an implied agreement by acquiescence being proved.

unless the case can be shown to come within the Provisos to the section. The Dekhan Agriculturists Relief Act (XVII of 1879) section 10A creates an exception to the rule by admitting oral evidence to enable a Court to ascertain the real nature of a transaction(1) but it only applies in the case of one who was an agriculturist at the time of the transaction.(2)

"As between the parties to any such instrument or their representatives in interest."

Persons who are not parties to a document or their representatives in interest may give evidence of any facts tending to show a contemporaneous agreement varying the terms of the document.(3) Though under this section oral evidence is not admissible for the purpose of ascertaining the intention of the parties to a written document as between the parties to such written instrument or their representatives in interest, where evidence is tendered as to a transaction with a third party, the ordinary rules of equity and good conscience come into play unhampered by the statutory restrictions of the section (4) A party to what is on the face of it a sale deed cannot in a suit with a person who is no party to the deed produce evidence to show that the deed was really a deed of gift.(5) Further, the words in this section " between the parties to any such instrument," refer to the persons who on the one side and the other came together to make the contract or disposition of property, and would not apply to questions raised between parties on the one side only of a deed regarding their relations to each other under the contract. The words do not preclude one of two persons in whose favour a deed of sale purported to be executed, from proving by oral evidence in a suit by the one against the other, that the defendant was not a real but a nominal party only to the purchase, and that the plaintiff was solely entitled to the property to which it related. Thus M conveyed certain houses and premises to plaintiff and defendant jointly by a sale-deed. Plaintiff sued defendant for ejectment from the premises, alleging that he alone was the real purchaser, and that defendant was only nominally associated with him in the deed. Held that section 92 of the Evidence Act did not preclude plaintiff from showing by oral evidence that he alone was the real purchaser, notwithstanding the defendant was described in the sale-deed as one of the two purchasers (6) The Court in this case said : " In the case before us, the ' parties ' in this sense would be the vendor on the one part and the two vendees on the other part. ' As between ' the vendor and themselves, neither of the vendees would be heard to plead, or would be allowed to offer oral evidence to show that both were not parties to the buying of the house. Neither vendees could resist the vendor's claim for the price, or for any other relief properly arising to him out of the contract, [illegible] was a nominal party only to the [illegible] ors of a bond or bill-of-exchange [illegible] 's action on the joint instrument to maintain a plea that he was a surety only ; except of course in a case where a money-lender made advances on the security of a joint and separate note, being well aware at the time that one of its makers was a surety only. In such case, notwithstanding the form of the note, the surety has been allowed to plead, as an equitable defence, and prove, that he was known by the lender to be surety when the note was made, and that without his consent, the principal had time given to him by the lender. Such a case as this would fall probably under the first Proviso to section 92. But, on the other hand, we think that this

(1) Gopal Ghela v Rajaram Amtha, 36 B, 305 (1912).

(2) Sawantrana v Giriappa Fakirappa, 38 B, 18 (1914).

(3) S. 99, post; see note to that section. See Pathammal v. Syed Kalai, 27 M, 329, 331 (1903), dissenting in this respect from Rahiman v. Elahi Baksh, 28 C., 70 (1900); and v. Mehgad Ram v. Makhan Lal (1912); 47 P. R, No. 67, p. 258

(4) Maung Kyin v. Ma Shwe Sa. 45 C, 320; s. c, 22 C. W. N., 257, P. C. See Sukumari Debi v Kalipada Mukerjee, 45 I. C, 13

(5) Ashfaq Husain v. Syed Nazir Husain, 22 O. C., 222; s c., 53 I. C., 961.

(6) Mulchand v. Madho Ram, 10 A., 421 (1888).

section would not apply to questions, like that of the present case, raised by the parties on one side, inter se and not affecting the other party to the contract, touching their relations to each other in the transaction. The evidence in this respect would be offered not to vary, contradict, add to, or subtract from, the terms of the vendees' joint liability under the contract of purchase and sale from their vendor, but only to show as between themselves, the two vendees, to wit, which was the real purchaser, or rather whether M was not the trustee only of his brother G. P Analogously, in the case of the promisors of a joint note, it is competent to one of them, who has had to pay the entire debt, to show in variation of the terms of the note, as against a co-promisor, that the payer was a surety only, and proving this to get a decree for indemnification against his co-promisor.(1)

"For the purpose of contradicting, varying, adding to, or subtracting from its terms."

See Illustrations (a), (b), (c). The following cases may also be taken together with those cited, ante, and post, in the Note to the second Proviso as illustrations of the meaning of these words In a suit for ejectment in which the defendant pleaded that there was an oral agreement between him and his lessors that he should be entitled to a renewal of the lease for three years, it was held that evidence of this oral agreement was inadmissible as it was inconsistent with the terms of the second clause of his lease, which provided for the defendant giving up possession of the premises on receiving a month's notice to quit, and which was as follows " If you mean me to vacate at the completion of the term, you must give one month's notice In accordance therewith I will vacate and give up possession to you."(2) Where, again, in a suit on a promissory note the defendants pleaded that the note was passed to the plaintiff only as a security to him against an apprehended loss in certain transactions going on between the parties and sought to prove an agreement between them that accounts would be settled at a later date and money would be paid or received in accordance with such later settlement: held that such a defence could not be allowed to be raised and that the evidence sought to be adduced was inadmissible under this section (3)

In the case next cited, R N, prior to his death, was a partner with defendants in the firm of N. C. and Co He died on the 8th November 1884. On the 9th November 1885, his executors passed a release to the defendants, which recited that R's share in the firm and future business had ceased on his death; that the surviving partners had requested the executors to settle the account of their testator with the firm, and that after examining the books and taking accounts, etc , a balance of Rs. 8,395-11-0 was found due, on payment whereof the executors released the defendants from all claims in respect of the share and interest of R, &c. On the 7th April 1887, the executors assigned over to the plaintiff a one-anna share in the said firm, and the plaintiff, as assignee [illegible] to the share and for an account.
[illegible] examination of the books at the [illegible] ue to the testator's estate by the firm had not been ascertained; and that it had been agreed on by the partners at the time of the release, that, in addition to the sum therein mentioned, the [illegible] one-anna share
[illegible] laintiff, and con-[illegible] ip ceased at his death. They relied on the release, and denied any agreement to give the executors a share; and contended that, under section 92 of the Evidence Act

(1) Mulchand v. Madho Ram, supra, at pp 423, 424.

(2) Ebrahim Pir v. Cursetji Sorabjee, 11 B, 644 (1887). See as to terms in contravention and defeasance of those of the instrument: Moran v. Mittu Bibee, 2 C, 58 (1876); Cohen v. Bank of Bengal, 2 A, 598, 602 (1880); Jadu Rai v. Bhubotaran Nundy, 17 C., 173, 186 (1889).

(3) Sree Ram v Firm Sobha Ram Gopal Rai, 20 All. L. J., 315.

no evidence could be given of the alleged agreement. For the plaintiff, it was contended, that the agreement as to the one-anna share was quite independent of the release. It was held, that evidence of the agreement that the executors should continue to have a one-anna share in the partnership was inadmissible as being inconsistent with the written release. By the release the executors of R released the partners from all claims whatever in respect of R's share, and the consideration for that release was stated in the document to be a lump sum, on payment of which under the writing, all claims arising out of the old partnership ceased and determined. The oral agreement added another term to the consideration for the release in respect of the past accounts, viz., the continuance of a one-anna share in the partnership. Such an agreement was not a purely collateral or additional agreement. It was an addition to the terms of a contract that had been reduced to writing and was inconsistent with those terms.(1)

And where in a suit on a promissory note payable on demand, the defendant admitted execution and consideration, but pleaded that it was agreed between the plaintiff and the defendant at the execution of the note that the plaintiff should not bring any suit to enforce payment of the instrument, until a certain event, and that as such event had not happened the suit was premature, it was held that such a defence as that raised could not be admitted under this section and the suit was accordingly decreed against the defendant (2) Had this evidence been admitted it would have had the effect of contradicting the terms of the document. As the third Proviso under which the evidence was tendered, is a Proviso only, and not an Exception to the section, it leaves the general rule enacted thereby in its integrity. The condition precedent to which that proviso refers is a condition the subject-matter of which is dehors the contents of the instrument, and, therefore, if effect be given to this condition it cannot affect the terms of the document itself. In a case in the Privy Council where a mortgagor had contended that the real intention of the parties should be ascertained from negotiations and conversations alleged to have taken place before the mortgage was executed, it was held that where there is an express and unambiguous stipulation in a mortgage-deed that the profits of the property shall belong to the mortgagee in lieu of interest, this cannot be contradicted or varied by re[...] that this is no more perr[...] clear on that point.(3) [...] question whether the area stated as demised in a kabuliyat exceeded the quantity of land contained by the specified boundaries it was held that the construction of the kabuliyat could not be contradicted or varied by extrinsic evidence to this effect or by evidence of the preliminary negotiations which led to the contract (4)

[...]able by instal[...]d, it was orally [...]ssession of part [...]nd should have [...] agreement the plaintiff obtained possession of the land; and that he had thus realized the whole of the amount due. It was held that the oral agreement was not one

---

(1) Cowasji Ruttonji v Burjorji Rus[...], 21 B., 335 (1888), followed in tom[...] am Iyer v. Rama Krishna Iyer, 38 M., Adity[...] 915). 514 (...) amjiban Serowjee v Oghur Nath, (2) [...] N., cviii, 2 C W. N., 188 (1897). I C W [...] Ramchandra Joshi v. Ganesh Vishnu [...] Krishna Sathe, 23 Bom L. R., 448 (1921).

(3) Saiyid Abdullah Khan v. Saiyid Besheret Hushin, 40 I. A., 31 (1912), 17 C L J., 312.

(4) Durga Prasad Singh v. Rajendro Narain Bagchi, P. C. 41, C. 493 (1912), 18 C W. N., 66 s c, 19 C. L. J., 95.

which detracted from, added to, or varied the original contract, but only provided for the means by which the instalments were to be paid, and that it was, therefore, admissible in evidence (1) Where there was a registered partition-a particular sharer, the latter, it was held, could not set up an oral agreement to give him the right as the same was not admissible under this section.(2) In the undermentioned case(3) it was held that an alleged agreement to pay interest was either a part of the agreement embodied in the khata or it was a separate agreement. If the former, then under this section evidence of it was inadmissible If it was a separate agreement, then it would not vitiate the agreement embodied in the khata which, apart from this supposed oral agreement, would not have been open to objection under section 257A of the last Civil Procedure Code, now omitted.

In the absence of a contract to that effect an agent cannot personally enforce or be bound by contracts (4) The agent is liable if, by the terms of the contract, he makes himself the contracting party. Evidence is not admissible to show that a person who appears on the face of a written contract to be personally a contracting party is not really a contracting party, and, therefore, not liable as such upon the contract (5) When it appears upon a written contract that the agent is liable, he is not, unless he can show that there was a mistake and that the writing did not properly express the intention of the parties,(6) entitled to discharge himself by reason of his agency, for the effect of the written instrument cannot be varied by oral evidence (7) In a suit on a contract signed by the defendant personally, the latter attempted to lead oral evidence to show that he was contracting as agent and that the name of his principal was disclosed at the time of the contract On objection it was held that such evidence was not admissible for the purpose of exonerating a contracting party from liability, for that would be substituting a different agreement from that evidenced by the writing.(8) The Contract Act, moreover, provides that such a contract by the agent personally shall be presumed to exist in three specified cases, unless the contrary appears, one of which cases is where the agent does not disclose the name of his principal. This probably means in the case of a written contract where the name of the principal is not disclosed on the face of the contract. The Contract Act should be read subject to the provisions of this section, and if on the face of a written contract an agent appears to be personally liable, he cannot probably escape liability by the evidence of any disclosure of his principal's name apart from the document (9) On the other hand, it has been held that there is nothing to prevent the production of evidence to show that the person who is not liable upon the face of the contract is in fact chargeable under it.(10)

---

(1) Ram Baksh v Durjan, 9 A, 392 (1887) See Badal Ram v Jhulai, 44 A. 53, 19, A L J, 826 (1921)

(2) Kristnamraju v Marrazu, 15 Mad. L J, 255 (1905)

(3) Raichand Motichand v Naran Bhikha, 28 B, 310 (1904)

(4) Contract Act (IX of 1872), s 230, in which the converse rule to that which obtains in England is laid down, see 5 C, 77, as to Negotiable Instruments, see s 28, Act XVI of 1881, as to evidence of usage v post. In Calcutta, where a vendor of goods deals with the banian of an European firm, qua banian, he can only look to the latter for the price. Sheik Faizulla v. Ramkamal Mitter, 2 B L R, O C J, 7, 8, 9 (1866)

(5) Bepinbehari v. Ramchandra, 5 B. L R, 234, 242, 243 (1870).

(6) Wake v Harrop, 6 H. & N, 768

(7) See Cunningham and Shephard, Contract Act, note to s 230; Taylor, Ev, § 1153.

(8) Ebrahimbhoy v. Mamooji, 45 B., 1242 (1921).

(9) Soopromonian Setty v Heilgers, 5 C, 71, 79 (1879)

(10) Taylor, Ev, §§ 1135, 1174; Bepin Behari v. Ram Chundra, 5 B L R., 443

In the undermentioned case(1)Jackson, J., speaking of benami transactions observed: "In this very large class of cases it seems to me that the rule in regard to the admission of parol evidence to vary written contracts will not app[illegible] ;ent, who enters intc [illegible] parol evidence for [illegible] ›e before us."(2) In [illegible] of two persons primarily liable is not affected by a private arrangement between them as to suretyship.(3) Oral evidence is not admissible to show that one of the executants of a note of hand signed it only as surety and that his liability was only to the extent of standing as a surety for one month.(4)

In the undermentioned case the plaintiff sued to recover money which he had been compelled to pay in virtue of a mortgage executed by his two half-sisters and himself. His claim was based on the plea that, though appearing in the bond as a co-obligor, he was in reality merely a surety. Held that evidence was admissible to show that the plaintiff executed the mortgage-bond as a surety only.(5)

Where the contention was as to whether evidence could be given to show that a will was really intended for the benefit of a person, other than the one mentioned therein, the Court, stating that there was no authority in India upon the subject, held that in the absence of any such authority, it doubted whether it was open to adduce such evidence unless the Courts here acted upon the principle which, in cases of this class, is acted upon in the English Courts, namely, that a party setting up a secret trust must adduce evidence to prove that it was communicated by the testator to the universal legatee, and that the legatee agreed to accept the property bequeathed in the terms of trust (6) In a later case it was held that where the testator, at the time of the disposition or after it, informs a legatee of a secret trust, which the latter accepts expressly or by implication, the legatee becomes a trustee as in English law and the trust may be proved by oral evidence.(7) In this case it was said that the English rule was made applicable by section 5 of the Indian Trusts Act. This decision has been followed in a later case where a testator made bequests in favour of a person not named in the will, stating that he would give private instructions on this point to a trustee who would disclose the name of the beneficiary (8) [illegible] ct. Thus in the case c [illegible] npromised their disput[illegible] The execution case was struck off as the decree was satisfied. Held that the order of the Court was binding on the parties and there was no longer an operative decree in existence. The fact that the liabilities under the decree formed the consideration for the compromise, did not prevent that compromise from being a new and independent contract which might form the basis of a suit and which (1870). [It is quite another matter whether evidence may be admitted to charge another person as the principal].

(1) Bepin Behari v. Ram Chandra, 5 B. L. R, 234, 248, 249, s. c., 14 W. R., 12 (1870).

(2) And see Donzelle v. Kedarnath Chuckerbutty, 7 B. L. R, 720, 727 (1871); the benamidar is not an agent for either party but a stranger to the whole business, whose name only is used.

(3) S. 132 of Contract Act, and see Pogose v. Bank of Bengal, 3 C., 174 (1877), distinguished in Harek Chand v. Bishnu Chundra, 8 C. W. N., 101 (1903); Taylor, Ev, § 1153.

(4) Harek Chand v. Bishnu Chandra, 8 C W. N., 101 (1903).

(5) Shamsh-ul-jahan Begum v. Ahmad Wali, 25 A, 337 (1903).

(6) Kali Churn v. Ram Chandra, 30 C, 783 (1903).

(7) Manuel Louis Kunha v. Juana Coelho (1907), 31 M, 187.

(8) Bayabai Sakalkar v. Haridas Ranchhordas, 40 B, 1 (1916), and see post Commentary in section 93, ambiguity in Wills, p. 616

(9) Ratan Lal v. Anwar Khan, 53 I. C. 527.

might be proved by oral evidence and such evidence would not amount to contradicting and so forth the terms of the decree.

Proviso (1

The rule of evidence embodied in the first paragraph of this section presupposes the validity of the transactions evidenced by the documents to which that rule is to be applied. If, therefore, that validity is impeached, it is no defence to point to the apparent rectitude of the document and to claim protection from enquiry under a rule which exists against the contradiction and variance of the terms only of those instruments the validity of which is not in question. In such case the Court is not bound by the mere "paper expressions" of the parties and is not precluded from enquiry into the real nature of the transaction between them. Hence the declaration in this Proviso (1) In order that an agreement may constitute a perfect contract it must have been made by the free consent of parties (i e, without coercion, undue influence, fraud, misrepresentation or mistake), competent to contract, for a lawful consideration and with a lawful object, and it must not be one which is expressly declared by the Contract Act to be void.(2) And in order to dispose of property by will a person must be of sound mind and not a minor (3) And a will or any part of a will, the making of which has been caused by fraud or coercion or by such importunity as takes away the free agency of the testator, is void (4) Such being the conditions imposed by law as necessary to the existence of a perfect contract, grant, or other disposition of property, the want of such conditions as invalidate the document or entitle any person to any decree or order relating thereto may clearly be proved without infringing the general rule enacted by the section. The rule st be

and

Oral

alid-

ate a document Thus agreements by way of wager are void (5) So, though the burden of proof that an agreement is a wager, that is, that it is not in substance what it appears to be in form, lies on the party so alleging, he may yet, as by way

o also order

relating thereto. Thus A institutes a suit against B for the specific performance of a contract, and also prays that the contract may be reformed as to one of its provisions as that provision was inserted in it by mistake. A may prove that such a mistake was made as would by law entitle him to have the contract reformed.(7) Where neither party is in error as to the matters in respect of which

(1) Beni Madhab v Sadasook Kotary, 9 C W N, 305, 308 (1905), s c, 1 C L J, 155, 32 C, 437, per Woodroffe, J.

(2) Act IX of 1872 (Contract), s 10, as to competency to transfer property, see Act IV of 1882 (Transfer of Property), s 7, the Chapters and sections of which Act relating to contracts are to be taken as part of the Indian Contract Act.

(3) Krishnamachariar v Krishnamachariar, 38 M, 166 (1915).

(4) Act X of 1865 (Indian Succession), ss 46, 48, extended to the wills of Hindus, etc., by Act XXI of 1870, s. 2

(5) Act IX of 1872 (Contract), s 30. See Balgobind v Bhaggu Mal, 35 A., 558 (1913) (part of consideration for gambling debts)

(6) Eshoor Doss v. Venkatasubba Rau, 17 M, 480 (1894); Anupchand Hemchand v. Champsi Ugarchand, 12 B, 785 (1888); both cases dissenting from Juggernath Sow v Ram Dyal, 9 C, 791 (1883), which last decision is incorrect and has since been overruled [Beni Madhab v. Sadasook Kotary, 9 C. W. N., 305, F. B (1905)]; s c, 1 C. L. J, 155; 32 C, 437, and in which as was pointed out in the subsequent cases above cited the effect of Proviso (1) to s. 92 does not appear to have been considered. See also as to contracts forbidden by statute or common law. Kasheenath Chatterjee v. Chundy Churn, 5 W. R, 68, 71 (1866).

(7) S 92, Illust. (e); Field, Ev., 432; Mahendra Nath v Jogendra Nath, 2 C. W. N, 260 (1897), cited post.

they are contracting, but there is a mutual error in the reduction of the contract into writing, then the Court interferes for the purpose of reforming the contract and not of rescinding it.(1) This proviso is not exhaustive, that is merely confined to cases of fraud, intimidation, etc. As appears from the use of the words "such as" these are set out by way of illustration only. Any fact may be proved which would invalidate any document.(2)

(a) Fraud. A party will be allowed to give parol evidence when the execution of such document was obtained from him by fraud.(3) Thus in a suit by a purda lady to set aside a bill-of-sale, execution of which by her had been obtained by collusion and fraud, the Court admitted parol evidence to show that the bill-of-sale was intended by her to operate only as a mortgage.(4) So a plaintiff sued to recover rent under a kabuliyat. The defendant admitted execution of the kabuliyat, but asserted that he executed it in order to enable the plaintiff to sell the land at a high price, the plaintiff agreeing to make over to him Rs. 282 out of the purchase-money and to obtain for him from the purchaser a mourasi pottah of the land, it never having been intended that any rent should be payable under the kabuliyat. It was held that under this proviso evidence of the oral agreement was admissible for the purpose of proving the fraudulent character of the transaction between the parties.(5)

There is a conflict of opinion on the point whether the fraud referred to in this Proviso is(6), or is not(7), contemporaneous fraud. In the first of the cases cited, it was held that the fraud referred to in this proviso must be contempowere otherwise has been held aud as would
, Garth, C. J., observed with regard to the Proviso as follows :—" That proviso seems to me to apply to cases where evidence is admitted to show that a contract is void, or voidable, or subject to ref illegality, etc., in its inception ; and in itself perfectly valid and free fro attempts to make a fraudulent use l that the rule laid down in section 92 of the Evidence Act is taken almost verbatim from Taylor on Evidence (1st Edition), section 813; and the exceptions which follow in the several provisos are discussed in sections 816 to 841 of the same work. That being so, I think it is quite legitimate to refer to those sections, as one means of ascertaining the true meaning of the provisos. The substance of the proviso, and the examples showing the meaning of that proviso, are contained and explained in sections 816 to 819, and it will be found that they all relate to the reception of evidence for the purpose of invalidating contracts

(1) Fry on Specific Performance, § 787 For alteration made without fraud to express real intention see Ananda Mohan Saha v. Ananda Chandra Saha, 44 C., 154 (1917), Woodroffe and Mookerjee, JJ

(2) Beni Madhab v Sadasook Kotary, 9 C. W. N, 305 (1905); s. c, 32 C, 437, per Woodroffe, J

(3) As to fraud, see Act IX of 1872, ss. 17, 14, 19, Kassim Mundle v. Sreemutty Noor Bibee, 1 W R, 76 (1864), Ganu v. Bhau, 42 B, 512, per Shah, J., Asatulla v Sadatulla, 28 C. L J., 197.

(4) Manohar Das v. Bhagbati Dasi, 1 B L R, O C, 28 (1867)

(5) Kashi Nath v Brindaban Chuckerbutty, 10 C, 649 (1884).

(6) Banapa v Sundardas Jagjivandas, 1 B, 333, 338 (1876); Cutts v. Brown, 6 C, 328, 338; s c., 7 C. L R, 11 (1880), per Garth, C. J; Preonath Shaha v. Madhu Sudan, 25 C., 606 (1898)

(7) Baksu Lakshman v. Govinda Kanji 4 B, 594, 608 (1880); Rakken v Alagappudayan, 16 M., 80, 83 (1892); Cutts v Brown, supra, at p 335, per Pontifex, J.

(8) Banapa v Sundardas Jagjivandas, supra, and see remarks in The Law of Mortgage in India by Rash Behary Ghose, 3rd Ed, p 221.

(9) Dagdu valad Sahu v Nana valad Sahu, 35 B, 93.

(10) 6 C., 328 (1880), at p 338, and see Keshararao Bhagwant v Ray Pandu, 8 Bom L R, 287

by reason either of fraud, illegality, etc., in their inception, or of some subsequent failure of consideration. For this reason, as well as from the language of the proviso itself, I think that it is not intended to apply to a case where the contract itself being valid, one of the parties wishes to make an improper use of it."(1) On the other hand, it had been observed that the jurisdiction of the Courts to admit parol evidence of conduct of the parties to show that an apparent sale was really a mortgage rested on the basis of fraud, and that the words of the first proviso to section 92 were very wide and declared that any act of fraud might be proved which would entitle any person to any decree relating to a document, and that it was not clear that these words were not large enough to let in evidence of such subsequent conduct as in the view of a Court of Equity would amount to fraud and would entitle a grantor to a decree restraining the grantee from proceeding upon his document

A person cannot both approbate and reprobate the same transaction. A party cannot show the true nature of a transaction by proof of fraud for his own relief and insist on its apparent character to prejudice his adversary. Their Lordships of the Privy Council in Shah Makhanlal v. Srikrishna Singh(2) observed upon this principle as follows: "The rules of evidence, and the law of estoppel, forbid any addition to, or variation from, deeds or written contracts." The law, however, furnishes exceptions to its own salutary protection; one of which is, when one party for the advancement of justice is permitted to remove the blind which hides the real transaction, as for instance, in cases of fraud, illegality, and redemption, in such cases the maxim applies, that a man cannot both affirm and disaffirm the same transaction, show its true nature for his own relief, and insist on its apparent character to prejudice his adversary. This principle, so just and reasonable in itself, and often expressed in the terms, that you cannot both approbate and reprobate the same transaction, has been applied by their Lordships in this Committee to the consideration of Indian Appeals, as one applicable also in the Courts of that country, which are to administer justice according to equity and good conscience. The maxim is founded not so much on any positive law, as on the broad and universally applicable principles of justice The case of Forbes v Ameeroonissa Begum(3) furnishes one instance of this doctrine having been so applied, where it is said in the judgment of their Lordships · "The respondent cannot both repudiate the obligations of the lease, and claim the benefit of it" coercion (and similarly by undue (b) Intimidation at the option of the party whose "Undue influence" are defined by sections 15 and 16 of the Indian Contract Act A will or any part of a will, the making of which has been caused by fraud or coercion or by such importunity as takes away the free agency of the testator, is void.(5) Parol evidence may be given to prove such coercion or undue influence, as for instance, that the writing sued upon was obtained by improper means such as duress.(6)

The consideration or object of an agreement is unlawful if it is forbidden (c) Illegality. by law; or is of such a nature that, if permitted, it would defeat the provision of any law; or is fraudulent; or involves or implies injury to the person or property of another, or the Court regards it as immoral or opposed to public policy. Every agreement of which the object or consideration is unlawful is

(1) Baksu Lakshman v Govind Kanji, 4 B, 594, 608 (1880) and see to same effect Rakken v Alagappudayan, 16 M., 80, 83 (1892), Cutts v Brown, 6 C, 328, 335 (1880), per Pontifex, J.

(2) 2 B L R, P C, 44, 48, 49 (1869); the rule was followed and applied in Lala Himmat v Llewhellen, 11 C., 486, 490 (1885), v. post.

(3) 10 Moo I. A, 356.

(4) Act IX of 1872 (Contract), s. 19.

(5) Act X of 1865 (Indian Succession), s 43.

(6) Taylor, Ev, § 1137.

void.(1) So also a bequest upon a condition the fulfilment of which would be contrary to law or to morality is void.(2) Under this Proviso parol evidence may be given of illegality, namely, the unlawful character of the object or consideration of the agreement or condition in question, as for example to show that a contract not disclosing these, was really made for objects forbidden either by Statute or by common law.(3)

(d) Want of due execution or capacity.

Due execution of a document being necessary to make operative the disposition therein contained, want of such execution may be proved for the purpose of invalidating the document. In some cases as in the matter of wills(4), the law has enacted that their execution shall be governed by certain rules. It may be shown that those rules have not been followed and that [illegible] So also it may be shown [illegible] of some legal impediment [illegible] An agreement is not a contract, if made by a party who is not competent to contract.(7) Contractual competency is defined by the 11th and 12th sections of the Indian Contract Act.

(e) Want or failure of consideration.

An agreement made without consideration is void, unless it is made on [illegible] promise to [illegible] by the law [illegible] it in a docu- [illegible] ve evidence of such payment and may be rebutted by evidence of non-payment (9) So also this section prevents the admission of oral evidence for the purpose of contradicting or varying the terms of a contract, but does not prevent a party to a contract from showing that there was no consideration, or that the consideration was different from that described in the contract. Where, however, a deed of sale described the consideration to be Rs. 100 in ready cash received, but the evidence showed that the consideration was an old bond for Rs. 63-12-0 and Rs. 36-4-0 in cash, it was held that there was no real variance between the statement in the deed and the evidence as to consideration, having regard to the fact that it is cus- [illegible] of an [illegible] (10) [illegible] ,000 as bonus to the plaintiff by the defendant, the mode of payment being stated to be in cash in one lump sum The plaintiff sued to recover the sum of Rs. 1,850, alleging that only Rs 150 had been paid and not Rs. 2,000 as recited in the putowa. The defendant admitted that Rs 850 was due, and as to the remaining Rs. 1,000

(1) Act IX of 1872 (Contract), s 23, as to consideration and object unlawful in part, see ss 24, 55, 58, ib Cf definition of "illegal" in Penal Code, s 43

(2) Act X of 1865, s 114.

(3) See Collins v. Blantern, 2 Wills, 347, s c, 1 Smith, L. C., Benyon v Nettlefold, 3 Mac. and G 94; Taylor, Ev, § 1137, 1 Smith, L. C. (Note, to Collins v. Blantern), and cases there cited; Hill v. Clarke, 1 All. L. J., 632 (1904), s c, 27 A, 266 [the Court will take notice of illegality even though not pleaded]

(4) Act X of 1865 (Indian Succession), Part VIII, extended to Hindus by Act XXI of 1870, s 2, Part IX.

(5) See Taylor, Ev, § 1135.

(6) See ib, § 1137.

(7) Act IX of 1872, s. 10

(8) Act IX of 1872 (Contract), s. 25.

(9) Chowdhry Deby v Chowdhry Doulat, 3 Moo I. A, 347 (1844); and see Shaikh Walee v Shaikh Kumar, 7 W. R., 428 (1867), Dookha Thakoor v. Ram Lall, 5 W R, 408 (1865); the case of Mussammut Ramdee v. Shib Dayal, 7 W. R., 334 (1867); and Mussamut Ram v Bishen Dyal, 8 W. R, 339 (1867), are no longer law. See s. 115, post.

(10) Hukum Chand v. Hiralal, 3 B, 179 (1876); distinguished in Adityam Iyer v. Rama Krishna Iyer, 38 M, 514 (1915) (as referring to difference in kind of consideration with difference in amount) see also Vasudeva Bhattu v. Narasamma, 5 M., 6, 8 (1882); [the provisions of s 92 do not prohibit the disproof of a recital in a contract as to the consideration that has passed by showing that the actual consideration was something different to that alleged]; Kumara v. Srinivasa, 11 M., 233, 215 (1887).

alleged that, at the time of the transaction, it was agreed that the sum of Rs 1,000 was to be retained by him on account of a debt due by one of the plaintiff's relations to him. The plaintiff objected that the evidence of the agreement set up by the defendant was inadmissible But it was held, that, inasmuch as it was open to the plaintiff under the first Proviso of section 92 of the Evidence Act to prove by oral evidence that the whole of the consideration-money had not been paid, it was equally competent to the defendant, in answer to such case, to adduce evidence to prove the true nature of the contract, and that the consideration was different from that stated in the contract. It was held, also, that the plea [illegible] and that on this ground the oral evidence tendered was admissible under the [illegible] had any consideration for it and that he accepted it for the accommodation of the drawer or some other party (2) Section 92 will not debar a party to a contract in writing from showing, notwithstanding the recitals in the deed, that the consideration specified in the deed was not in fact paid as therein recited, but was agreed to be paid in a different manner.(3) The Privy Council have held that it is a settled law that notwithstanding an admission in sale-deed that the consideration has been received, it is open to the vendor to prove that no consideration has been actually paid. The Evidence Act does not say that no statement of fact in a written instrument may be contradicted, but the terms of the contract may not be varied, etc. So where the contract was to sell for Rs 30,000, which was stated in the deed to have been received, it was held competent for the vendor, without infringing any provision of the Act, to prove a collateral agreement that the purchase-money should remain in the hands of the vendee for the purposes and subject to the conditions alleged by him (4) Where one of the parties to a deed is, under any of the provisions of this section, permitted to go into oral evidence, it is open to the other party also to rebut that evidence by oral evidence So where a deed recited the payment of a certain consideration, and the plaintiff denied the passing of any consideration and adduced evidence in support of his contention, it was held open to the defendant to go into oral evidence to show that there was some consideration for the deed, though not the same as recited in the deed (5) And it has been held that the "want or failure of consideration" contemplated by this proviso is a complete want or failure of consideration, since no consequence invalidating the document could otherwise follow.(6) In a case in the Madras High Court it has been held that while such want or failure or difference in kind of consideration may be proved, evidence to vary the amount of the consideration in a registered sale-deed is inadmissible (7) It another case in that High Court it

(1) Lala Himmat v. Lleuhellen, 11 C., 486

(2) Pogose v. Bank of Bengal, 3 C., 174, 184 (1877).

(3) Inderjit v. Lal Chand, 18 A, 186 (1895).

(4) Shah Lalchand v Indrajit, 4 C. W. N, 485 (1900); s c, 22 A, 370; in which it was held that evidence was admissible to show that consideration had not been received notwithstanding the recital of that fact in the deed; followed in Faiz-un-nissa v. Hanif-un-nissa, 2 All L J, 360, 364 (1905).

(5) Kailash Chandra v. Harish Chunder, 5 C. W N, 158 (1900).

(6) Keshavarao Bhagwant v. Ray Pandu, 8 Bom L R, 287

(7) Adityam Iyer v Rama Krishna Iyer, 38 M, 514 (1915), following Cowasji Ruttonji v. Burjorji Rustomji, 12 B, 335 (1886), Inderjit v Lal Chand, 18 A, 168 (1896); Salamba Goundan v. Palana Goundan, M. W. N, 650 (1913); and Probhat Chandra Gangopadhya v. Chiraj Ali, 33 C, 607 (1906), distinguishing Gopal Singh v. Laloo Lal, 10 C. L. J., 27 (1909) and Kumara v. Srinivasa, 11 M, 213 (1882).

has been held that (assuming evidence is admissible to show that the real consideration was not the one stated but a promise to maintain the grantor) the deed would not be set aside without proof of undue influence, misrepresentation or fraud.(1) The Allahabad High Court has held that where one party to a deed proves that the whole of the consideration did not pass, this proviso enables the other party to prove what the real consideration was (2) and in another that the recital of receipt of consideration in a mortgage-deed raises a strong, though rebuttable, presumption that such consideration was paid.(3) In a suit on a promissory note the question whether the defendant executant of the note signed it by way of security for others cannot be tried or determined except so far as it affects the question of consideration.(4)

f) Mistake in fact or law

Mistake may exist either in the intention or purpose of the parties or be a mistake in rendering their intention into words. As regards the first, an agreement is void when both parties are under a mistake as to a matter of fact(5) and for this purpose a mistake as to a law not in force in British India has the same effect as a mistake of fact.(6) In such cases there is no contract at all. Further where a contracting party who cannot read has a written contract falsely read over to him and the contract written differs from that pretended to be read, the signature on the document is of no force, because he never intended to sign and therefore in contemplation of law did not sign, the document on which the signature is, though if a person executes a document, knowing its contents but misappreciates its legal effect, he cannot deny its execution (7) But a contract is not voidable merely because of the mistake of one party as to a matter of fact(8), nor because it was caused by a mistake as to any law in force in British India.(9) Oral evidence is admissible of such mistake which, if established, shows that there was no agreement at all.

But the mistake may be one in rendering the intention into words, an agreement being not void if the mistake be one for which a remedy may be obtained by the reformation of a document. In such cases there is an agreement, but the words in which it is expressed do not rightly represent the meaning of the parties. When through fraud or mutual mistake a contract or other instrument does not truly express the intention of the parties, either may institute a suit to have the instrument rectified(10) and oral evidence is again admissible to correct the mistake. What in such case is rectified is not the agreement but the mistaken expression of it (11) Thus in a recent case(12) where upon the renewal of a mortgage one of the mortgaged properties was, apparently by clerical error, misdescribed in the later deed though correctly described in the former deed, and the mortgagor had no such property as was incorrectly described in the later deed: held that, under this Proviso, evidence was admissible to prove the mistake by reference to and comparison of the former deed In the Madras High Court where a defendant in a suit for possession of property which had been the subject of a sale-deed pleaded that the property had been wrongly described in the sale-deed by the use of a wrong survey number it was held that the combined effect of this Proviso and of section 31 of the Specific Relief Act (I of 1877) was to enable either party to a contract

(1) Subbayar v Moniant Subramania Ayyar, 36 M, 8 (1913).
(2) Chunnu Bibi v. Basanta Bibi, 36 A., 537 (1913).
(3) Ram Sarup v. Keramullah, 36 A, 464 (1914)
(4) Durga Charan Bose v Lakhi Narain Bera, 47 I C, 917.
(5) Act IX of 1872 (Contract), s 20
(6) Ib, s 21. See Taylor, Ev., §§ 1139 1140
(7) Dagdu v Bhana, 28 B, 420, 427 (1904).
(8) Act IX of 1872, s. 22.
(9) Ib., s 21, & Taylor, Ev. supra
(10) Act I of 1877 (Specific Relief), s. 31.
(11) Dagdu v. Bhana, 28 B, 420, 425 (1904), where the subject of mistake is discussed Cf. Abdul Hakim Khan v. Ram Gopal, 44 A, 246 to prove a mistake (1) And in another later case the Allahabad High Court held that where one of several villages, the subject of a registered mortgage-deed, was described as being in the wrong tappa but the description was otherwise sufficient for identification, the mistake did not vitiate the registration on the mortgage of the village in question (2) But where the misdescription is intentional as where an imaginary property in Calcutta was described in a mortgage-deed, apparently for the purpose of securing registration there, this registration was held by the Privy Council to be invalid(3), and in another case it was held by the Allahabad High Court that a sale-deed fraudulently registered at Bareilly by a similar trick conveyed no title to property situated elsewhere (4)
(12) Abdul Hakim Khan v. Ram Gopal, 44 A, 246; s c., 20 All. L J., 53

If some plain and palpable error has crept into the written instrument, Equity formerly, and the Courts of Common Law now, sanction the admission of evidence to expose the error (5) In such cases, especially where recourse is had to Equity for relief, the extrinsic evidence is not offered to contradict a valid existing agreement, but to show that from accident or negligence the instrument in question has never been constituted the actual depository of the intention and meaning of the parties. Cases of this nature are nearly of kin to those of fraud, it is in point of conscience and equity an actual fraud to claim an undue benefit and advantage from a mere mistake contrary to the real intention of the contracting parties. Such evidence, however, ought not, for obvious reasons, to be allowed to prevail, unless it amount to the strongest possible proof The most satisfactory evidence for this purpose consists of the written materials and instructions which were intended by the parties to be the basis and ground plan for the construction of the intended instrument (6) Thus where parties covenanted to convey an estate in trust, to raise £30,000 to pay off debts and encumbrances, with remainder over, parol evidence was admitted to show that it was the concurrent intention of all the parties to raise that sum in addition to the sum of £24,000, with which the estate was encumbered (7) So also in cases of marriage-settlements where mistakes have been committed, and in consequence, the deeds have varied from the instructions of the parties, they have been rectified by the Court. The same has also been done in instances of mercantile and other contracts (8) The first Proviso does not limit the admissibility of oral evidence to a suit to obtain a [illegible] plaintiffs brought a suit to recover [illegible] it was covered by the conveyance [illegible], and the defence was to the effect that what was intended to be sold and purchased was the revenue-paying estate of the defendant, but that the land in suit, which was the homestead

(1) Rangasami Ayyangar v Souri Ayyangar, 39 M, 792 (1916), following Mohendra Nath Mookerjee v. Jogendra Nath Roy Chowdry, 2 C W N, 260 (1897) and Mahadeva Ayyar v Gopala Ayyar, 34 M, 51 (1911)

(2) Parsotam Das v Patesri Partab Narain Singh, 35 A, 250 (1913) But see Durga Prosad Singh v. Rajendra Narain Bagchi, P. C, 18 C W. N, 66, 41 C, 493, 19 C L J, 95 (1914)

(3) Harendra Lal Roy Chowdhuri v. Hari Dasi Debi, P. C. 41 C, 972; 41 I A, 110

(4) Mangali Lal v. Abid Yar Khan, 39 A, 523 (1917).

(5) Guardhouse v. Blackburn, L R, 1 P & D, 109, 115, citing Wake v. Harrop, 6 H & N., 768; Ram Sarup v. Allah Rakha, 107 P L R (1905)

(6) Starkie, Ev., 675—677, and cases there cited See as to the rectification of instruments on the grounds of mistake: Act I of 1877, Ch III, Nelson's Specific Relief Act, pp 51—62, 223, 228; Story, Eq Jur, Ch V, Taylor, Ev §§ 1139, 1140, Pollock's Law of Fraud in British India, 123; Kassim Mundle v. Noor Bibee, 1 W R, 76 (1864); Babu Dunput v. Sheikh Juwahur, 8 W. R., 152 (1867); Dagdu v Bhana, 28 B, 420 (1904).

(7) Shelbourne v Inchiquin, 1 Bro. C. C, 338

(8) Starkie, Ev., 676, and cases there cited. In Durga Prosad v. Bhajan Lall, 31 C., 614, 626 (1904), the P. C held that no rectification was needed and that the case was not touched by this section.

of the defendant, though found included in the estate, was not expressly excepted, because both the parties were under the mistaken impression that it was not so included, but was lakhiraj, and it was contended that it was not open to the defendant to raise such a defence in this suit; it was held that it was open to the Court to allow oral evidence to prove the mutual mistake, and that where there is a mutual mistake of fact in a case, as here, a Court administering Equity will interfere to have the deed rectified so that the real intention of both parties may be carried into effect and will not drive the defendant to a separate suit to rectify the instrument.(1) Where a deed of mortgage, under which the possession of the mortgaged property was handed over to the mortgagee, provided that there was to be no accounting between the parties at the time of redemption, and it appeared that a portion of the mortgage consideration was set down in the deed as being due to the mortgagee from the mortgagor, merely by guess without any account having been really taken at the time. Held that the mortgagor could show that there was a mistake in the statement of consideration and that the mortgagor was entitled to have an account taken (2)

Proviso (2) The rule excluding parol evidence to vary or contradict a written document is not infringed by proof of any collateral parol agreement which does not interfere with the terms of the written contract, though it may relate to the same subject-matter(3); it does not prevent parties to a written contract from proving that, either contemporaneously or as a preliminary measure, they [illegible] on some collateral matter.(4) See Illust [illegible] however, whether or not such proof may [illegible] to the degree of formality(5) of the document. The evidence moreover, will in no case be admissible, if the oral agreement is inconsistent(6) with the terms of the written instrument. If, however, the document is silent on the matter and the agreement is consistent(7) with its terms, it may be proved.

So when a promissory note is silent as to interest, a verbal argreement made subsequent to the execution of the note to pay interest may be proved under this clause.(8) And in a suit upon a hathchitta the Court, having regard to the informal nature of the document sued upon, allowed evidence to be given of a verbal agreement to repay the amount acknowledged with interest, no mention having been made as to interest in the hathchitta itself.(9) In a case where a mortgagee inserted the words 'per cent' in a mortgage-bond, thus changing the rate of interest payable under it, the Calcutta High Court held that the alteration was made in good faith to carry out the intention of the partner and

---

(1) Mohendra Nath v. Jogendra Nath, 2 C. W. N, 260 (1897); Rangasami Ayyangar v. Souri Ayyangar, 39 M., 792 (1916); Parsotam Das v. Patesri Partab Narain, 35 A, 250 (1913).

(2) Partab Singh v. Balwant Singh, 50 L J, 670, s. c., 48 I. C, 550.

(3) Kasheenath Chatterjee v. Chundi Churn (F. B), 5 W. R, 68, 69, citing Taylor, Ev, § 1147. See Badal Ram v. Jhulai, 44 A., 53; 19, All. L. J, 816 (1921); Gur Buksh Singh v. Chatta Singh, 50 O J., 471; Bhan Singh v. Gopal Chandi, [illegible] C, 137; Yado v. Behari Lal, 53 I. C., [illegible] [illegible]han Singh v. Gokul Chand, 1 Lahore, [illegible] Ib.

[illegible] Ev., § 1135.

[illegible] [illegible]stration (h); Mayen v. Alston, 16 M, 238, 254, 255 (1892): and post

(6) See Ebrahim Pir v Cursetji Sorabji, 11 B., 544 (1887); Cowasji Ruttonji v Burjorji Rustomji, 12 B, 335 (1888); Cutts v Brown, 6 C, 328, 338 (1880); Sabapathy Mudali v. Kupusami Mudali, 15 M. L J, 225.

(7) See Lala Himmat v. Llewhellen, 11 C., 486 (1885), cited supra; Mayen v. Alston, 19 M, 238, 254, 255, 261 (1892), and cases cited in next two notes

(8) Sowdamonee Debya v. Spalding, 12 C. L. R., 163 (1882). Yado v. Behari Lal, 53 I. C., 242

(9) Umesh Chunder v. Mohini Mohun, 9 C. L. R., 301 (1881).

did not vitiate the instrument.(1) See for a further application of this Proviso, Himmat Sahai Singh v. Llewhellen (2)

When an instrument is not formal, it may, as already observed, often be shown that some additional and supplementary agreement was made contemporaneously with the principal one. When an instrument is a formal one, it is often extremely difficult to say what is really "collateral" to it Obviously, unless some restriction be imposed, the general rule may be rendered nugatory. It has been suggested in America that a matter ought not to be considered "collateral" except where it is evident from the writing itself that such writing contains part only and not the whole of the agreement. And so the section makes the degree of formality the condition upon which, if the other terms of the section are fulfilled, the admissibility of the evidence depends. In a recent case it was held that having regard to the concluding words of this Proviso evidence of an agreement to pay interest on the amount shown due in an entry was admissible, such entry not being of a formal character (3)

The case provided for by this Proviso and that in which evidence is admitted because the document does not and was not intended to contain the whole agreement between the parties(4) agree in this, that in neither case does the document in fact contain the whole agreement between the parties; but differ in that in the latter case the document was not intended to contain the whole agreement, the document being subject to, or merely a memorandum of, a transaction which was in fact entered into orally, and therefore oral and inconsistent evidence may be given; while in the former case the document was intended to and does contain the principal contract, which has, however, been orally supplemented by other terms upon matters on which it is silent. In so far as in the latter case, the document does, with the exception of such terms, constitute the contract, these terms must be consistent with those embodied in the instrument itself An agreement in writing to refer certain disputes to arbitrators was made outside Court and it was stated therein that whatever award was made by the arbitrators would be binding upon the parties to the reference The award was made only by a majority of the arbitrators and it was sought to be proved that there was a separate contemporaneous oral agreement between the parties to the effect that the decision of a majority of the arbitrators would be binding upon the parties held that the oral agreement was admissible under this Proviso.(5)

In a case where in a suit on a promissory note the defendant pleaded that by an oral agreement his liability on the note was to cease a month after its date, and the plaintiff replied that this was conditional on further security which had not been produced, the Appellate Court held that evidence of the oral agreement was inadmissible under this section, but the Privy Council held that since a mere amendment of the pleadings would have brought this defendant's contention within this Proviso, it was unsatisfactory to decide against him without hearing this evidence, but that it had been incumbent on him to tender substantive proof of the oral agreement.(6) In this case it was said that while there are cases in which it is permitted to plead an oral agreement which would have the effect of leaving matters otherwise than they would have been left by the written agreement taken alone, such oral agreement must then be clearly proved and the onus is on the party advancing it. Evidence relating to an oral agreement entered in a Bahi to pay interest is admissible

---

(1) Ananda Mohan Saha v Ananda Chandra Raha, 44 C., 154 (1917), per Woodroffe and Mookerjee, JJ.

(2) 11 C, 486, 490 (1885)

(3) Bhan Singh v. Gokal Chand, 1 Lahore, 83

(4) See ante, para. 2 to notes of the section

(5) Gur Baksh Singh v Chatta Singh, 5 O L J, 471

(6) Motabhoy Mulla Essabhoy v Mulji Haridas, P C, 39 B., 399 (1915); discussed in Badal Ram v Jhulai, 44 A. 53, 19 A L. J. 816 (1921).

under this Proviso.(1) In the case cited(2), it was held that where a promissory note made no mention regarding the payment of interest oral evidence was admissible under this Proviso.

Proviso (3) This Proviso, with which should be read Illustration (j), is intended to introduce the well-established rule in England(3); that when at the time of a written contract being entered into, it is orally(4) agreed between the parties that the written agreement shall not be of any force or validity, until some condition precedent has been performed, parol evidence of such oral agreement is admissible to show that the condition has not been performed, and consequently, that the written contract has not become binding. Until the condition is performed, there is in fact no written agreement at all.(5) For instance, it may be shown by parol evidence that an instrument apparently executed as a deed, had really been delivered simply as an escrow(6); that is a writing deposited with a third person(7) to be by him delivered to the person, whom it purports to benefit, upon the performance of some condition, upon which only the writing is to have effect. Also it may be shown that a document was really meant to be conditional on the happening of an event which had never occurred.(8) The admission of such evidence shows that the contract was never to come into operation as a contract at all, unless the condition precedent were complied with: it neither varies nor contradicts the writing, but suspends the commencement of the obligation.(9)

An oral stipulation that an instrument is not to become binding, unless and until some stipulation be first fulfilled, may always be shown Thus evidence has been admitted to show that an agreement in writing was not intended to operate as an agreement between the parties, until a third party had approved of it(10), and that a written instrument by way of lease containing no date was to operate only when the date was filled in, and which was not to be filled in, until certain repairs had been done (11) So where the plaintiff declared upon an agreement by the defendant to transfer to him a farm which he, the defendant, held under X, and the defendant pleaded that the agreement declared on was made subject to the condition that it should be null and void, if X should not within a reasonable time after the making of the agreement consent and agree

---

(1) Bhan Singh v Gokal Chandi, 53 I. C, 37.

(2) Yado v Behari Lal, 53 I C, 242

(3) See Taylor, Ev., § 1135

(4) See Illustration (j) which should run "A & B make a contract in writing and orally agree that it shall take effect, &c"

(5) Jugtanund Misser v. Nerghan Singh, 6 C., 433, 435 (1880). See Badal Ram v. Jhulai, 19 A L J, 816 (1921).

(6) Murray v Lord Stair, 2 B & C, 82.

(7) In Shah Mosum v. Balasoo Koer, Hay's Rep, 576 (1863), it was held that, where a deed of sale of a portion of an estate was delivered to the party in whose favour it had been executed, evidence could not be admitted to show that it was intended to operate as an escrow only, as might have been the case had it been delivered to a third party. Technically, it is true, that the document was not in such case an escrow. But in principle it was the same thing. For it was alleged that, until the condition was performed, no interest was to pass to the transferee (Bell v. Ingestre, 12 Q B, 317, 319, 320). The report of this decision, which may perhaps have been justified on other grounds, is not full or clear and does not appear to be in accordance with the terms of this proviso or of the cases upon which the latter is founded. See Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 281.

(8) Taylor, Ev, § 1135, and cases there and hereinafter cited

(9) See Ramjiban Serowgy v Oghur Nath, 2 C. W. N, 188 (1897), cited post. Discussed in Vishnu Ramchandra Joshi v Ganesh Krishna Sathe, 23 Bom. L R, 488 (1921).

(10) Pym v Campbell, 6 E. F. B, 370; followed in Guddalur Ruthna v. Kunnattur Arumuga, 7 Mad. H C. R., 189, 196, 197 (1872); Dada Honaji v. Babaji Jagushet, 2 Bom. H. C. R, 38, 41 (1865); Jugtanund Misser v. Nerghan Singh, supra. Dinanath Law v. Metharam, 33 C. L J, 577 (1921) (subject to confirmation by principals).

(11) Davis v. Jones, 25 L J, C P, 91; followed in Jugtanund Misser v. Nerghan Singh, supra.

to the transfer of the farm to the plaintiff; it was held that it was competent to the defendant to prove by extraneous evidence this contemporaneous oral agreement, as it operated only as a suspension of the written agreement and not in defeasance of it.(1) And where a plaintiff attempted to enforce as a contract of loan binding upon the defendant immediately upon its execution an instrument which he verbally agreed at the time should not so operate, and for which the defendant received no consideration, the latter was allowed to give evidence of the verbal agreement.(2) It is open to the Court to decide under this Proviso that an ijara patta granted by a landlord, was intended to be operative only in the event of the lessee being able to obtain possession of the leasehold property and that such possession was a condition precedent to the attaching of any obligation under the lease upon which a suit could be based (3) So also evidence of a contemporaneous oral agreement to suspend the operation of a written contract of sale, until an agreement for a re-sale was executed, is admissible.(4) The same doctrine applies to wills, though it must be used with very great caution. So a duly executed paper, testamentary on the face of it, is not entitled to probate, if it is clearly proved by parol evidence that it was executed by the deceased without any intention that it should affect the disposition of his property after death (5) The first Proviso does not permit the terms of a written contract to be varied by a contemporaneous proper meaning

written contract

ose no obligation

at all until the happening of a certain event, may be proved So the terms of a promissory note purporting to be an absolute engagement to pay on demand cannot be varied by a contemporaneous oral agreement constituting an undertaking on the part of the plaintiff not to enforce the note by a suit till the happening of a certain event, or implying that the legal obligation of payment was to be postponed to, or made conditional upon, the happening of a certain event (6) In the case cited the Madras High Court held that when a document was apparently intended to have immediate operation and, according to its tenor, vested certain property in the grantor at once, the executant could not be permitted to set up or prove that the real intention was to vest such property at a future time or after his own death (7) In this case it was said that the English rule permitting evidence that a document was intended to operate in a manner different from its ostensible effect cannot be followed in India under this Act. And in another case in the same High Court it has been held that the question whether a document operates as a present conveyance or as an agreement to create a future right must be decided according to the intention of the parties as expressed in it (8)

---

(1) Wallis v Littell, 11 Scot Rep, N S, 369; followed in Dada Honaji v Babaji Jagushet, 2 Bom H C R, 38, 41 (1865), see also Bell v Ingestre, 12 Q B, 317, Gudgen v Bissett, 6 E & B, 986; Lindley v Lacey, 17 Scott, Rep, N S, 578; Taylor, Ev, § 1135

(2) Annagurubala Chetti v Krishna swami Nayakkan, 1 Mad H C R, 475 (1863), cited and approved in Jugtanund Misser v. Nerghan Singh, 6 C, 433, 435 (1880) See also Tirutengada Ayyangar v Rangasami Nayak, 7 M, 19 (1883), Dada Honaji v Babaji Jagushet, 2 Bom H C R, 38 (1865), in which evidence was also admitted under this proviso, and Cohen v Bank of Bengal, 2 A, 598 (1880), in which the admissibility of the evidence in question was held to be doubtful.

(3) Kafiluddin Biswas v Sabdar Ali Biswas, 29 C L J., 478, s c., 50 I C., 918

(4) Dada Honaji v Babaji Jagushet, 2 Bom H C R, 38 (1865)

(5) Lister v Smith, 3 S & T, 282

(6) Ramjiban Serowgy v Oghur Nath, 2 C W N, 188 (1897) Foll in Vishnu Ramchandra v Ganesh Krishna, 45 B., 1155 (1921).

(7) Motayappan v Palani Goundan, 38 M, 226 (1915), citing Chella Venkata Reddi v. Devabhaktuni, M W N, 169 (1912), and Jiban Nisa v. Asgar Ali, P C, 17 C, 937 (1890), distinguishing Chandra Mehdi Hasan v Muhammad Hasan, P C, 28 A, 439 (1906)

(8) Mangamma v Rasumma, 37 M., 480 (1914)

A distinction must be drawn between the cases where the matter sought to be introduced by extraneous evidence is a condition precedent or a defeasance. It may be shown that the instrument was not meant to operate, until the happening of a given condition ; but it cannot be shown by parol that the agreement was to be defeated on the happening of a given event.(1)

Upon the question whether the words " condition precedent to the attaching of any obligation under any such contract " mean a " condition precedent to the contract being of any force or validity," or a " condition precedent to some particular obligation contained in the contract being of force or validity," it has been held that the rule contained in this proviso does not apply to a case where the written agreement had not only become binding, but had actually been performed as to a large portion of its obligations, and that the words " any obligation " in this proviso mean any obligation whatever under the contract, and not some particular obligation which the contract may contain.(2) The condition precedent to which this proviso refers is a condition the subject-matter of which is dehors the contents of the instrument, and, therefore, if effect be given to this condition, it cannot affect the terms of the document itself.(3) In a case where the defence was that one of the executants of the note signed it only as surety and that his liability was only to the extent of standing as a surety for one month, it was held that this proviso was inapplicable, as the liability attached from the date of the note of hand and ceased upon the expiry of one month, and the defence was not that no liability attached to the note of hand until some event happened or something was done (4)

Proviso (4). The rule merely binds to a ... tion itself. According ... proviso incorporates ... who said : " After an agreement has been reduced into writing, it is competent to the parties at any time before breach of it, by a new contract not in writing either altogether to waive, dissolve, or annul the former agreement, or in any manner to add to, or subtract from, or vary or qualify the terms of it, and thus to make a new contract which is to be proved partly by the written agreement, and partly by the subsequent verbal terms engrafted upon what will be thus left of the written agreement "; but modifies that rule, in that it declares that the new contract cannot be a verbal one in cases in which the old contract (a) is by law required to be in writing, or (b) has been registered.(6) For the rule is, nihil tam conveniens est naturali æquitati quam unum quodque dissolvi eo ligamine, quo ligatum est (" Nothing is so agreeable to natural equity as that a thing be unbound in the manner in which it was bound.") It is of course incumbent on the party sett ... ablish it and to show that both parties we ... the terms of which they both understoo ... " or " should be read as " and," and that ... document, though registered in

(1) See Wallis v Littell, 11 Scott, Rep., N. S., 369, 374.

(2) Juggtanund Misser v. Nerghan Singh, 6 C., 433 (1880) See Tiruvengada Ayyangar v Rangasami Nayak, 7 M., 19, 22 (1883).

(3) v. ante, pp. 627—629.

(4) Harek Chand v. Bishun Chandra, 8 C. W. N., 401 (1903).

(5) Goss v. Lord Nugent, 5 B. & Ad., 58, 65 cited, and applied in Guddalur Ruthna v. Kunnattur Arumuga, 7 Mad. H. C. R., 189, 197, 198 (1872); see Taylor, Ev., §§ 1141—1145. See Ganu v. Bhan, 42 B., 512, per Martin, J.

(6) See Umedmal Motiram v. Davubin Dhondiba, 2 B., 547 (1878), where it was held that a conveyance having been registered, no oral agreement to rescind could be proved under this proviso, and Dwarka Nath v Bhogoban Panda, 7 C. L. R., 577 (1880); Banku Behari v. Shama Churn, 2 C W. N., cclxv Mark d'Cruz v Jitendra Nath Chatterji, 46 C., 1079, ... c., 30 C. L. J., 94.

(7) F ... , 33 C. L. J., 577 fact, is not compulsorily registerable. But the contention was overruled.(1) In a case in the Calcutta High Court where a receipt for simple interest paid on a mortgage-bond, which stipulated for compound interest, was produced as a proof that simple interest was to be charged, this was held admissible as a waiver which had to be in writing but did not require registration (2) Where it is alleged that a new contract which the law requires to be in writing has been substituted for a prior contract, such substituted contract must be complete in itself and embody distinctly the terms of the new contract. If it is not complete, then extraneous evidence is inadmissible to prove the substituted contract, with the result that the first contract is not varied and remains in force (3) One contract is rescinded by another only when the latter is valid and inconsistent with it and makes its performance impossible, and evidence of rescission or waiver must be as clear as the proof of the original contract.(4) The exception at the end of this Proviso applies to executory as well as to executed agreements.(5) It has been held by the Madras High Court that the word ' oral ' is used in this proviso in the sense of being not committed to writing, and that the words ' oral agreement ' include all unwritten agreements whether arrived at by word of mouth or otherwise So where the lessor of certain land

[illegible]

subsequent conduct of the is void, is inadmissible.(7)

a different view, holding any oral agreement or statement, evidence of conduct, as for instance, return of a lease, is admissible to prove that such return was due to an intention to make the lease inoperative (8) In, however, a subsequent case in the same Court a different view of the admissibility of evidence of conduct was taken It was held that acts and conduct of parties could only be proof (a) either of a contemporaneous oral agreement varying the terms of the registered contract, or (b) of a subsequent oral agreement having the same effect. In the former case the evidence was excluded by the section itself and in the latter by this Proviso (9) If a discharge valid under s. 63 of the Contract Act has been given, it is immaterial lleged oral agreement,

(10) Evidence will be to rescind or modify

---

(1) Nocoor Chunder v Ashutosh Mukerjee, 9 C W N, ccxiv (1905)

(2) Kailash Chandra Nath v Sheikh Chhenu 42 C, 546 (1915), following Jiwan Ali Beg v Basa Mal, 9 All, 108 (1886)

(3) Jnanendra Mohan v Gopal Das, 8 C. W N, 923 (1904) [The consent in writing by the landlord to the division of a tenure or holding has the effect of substituting a new contract for the old]

(4) Mathura Mohan Saha v Ram Kumar Saha & Chittagong District Board, 43 C., 790 (1916)

(5) Goreti Sabburow v. Varigonda Narasimham, 27 M, 368 (1903), s c, 14 Mad L J, 218

(6) Mavandi Chetti v Oliver 22 M, 261 (1898) followed in Karampali v Thekku, 26 M, 195 (1902)

(7) Srinivasa Swami v Athmaruma Aiyar (1908), 32 M, 281

(8) Shyama Charan v Heras Mollah, 26 C, 160, 163 (1898), but v ante, p 618

(9) Radha Raman v Bhowani Prasad 5 C W N, cccxvi (1901), Maung Bin v Ma Hlan (F B) 3 L B R 100 see Notes ante, on "Evidence of Conduct"

(10) Karampalli v Thekku 26 M 195 (1902)

the original transaction, but is an entirely new transaction.(1) Oral evidence is of course admissible to prove the discharge and satisfaction of a mortgage-bond and is not excluded by this proviso (2) This applies to any transaction which operates validly as a mode of payment; but oral evidence of an invalid oral conveyance of the equity of redemption in a portion of a mortgaged estate is inadmissible.(3) Only those agreements come within the section which affect the terms of the previous transaction, not indirectly, as a consequence of an independent and valid contract between some only of the parties, but directly by virtue of the consensus of those who alone are competent to rescind or modify the original contract, viz., all the parties concerned or all their representatives (4) Where a tenant had given a written undertaking to occupy on certain conditions, it was held that this was not a document by which a lease could be made, nor an instrument referred to by section 107 of the Transfer of Property Act, and so was admissible to prove an oral lease (5)

In 1875 certain lands were mortgaged for Rs. 675. The mortgage-bond provided that the mortgagee was to enjoy the rent and profits in lieu of interest on Rs. 475 and that the remaining Rs. 200 were to carry interest at 6 per cent. per annum. In 1880 a receipt was passed by the mortgagee to the mortgagor, reciting that on taking accounts Rs. 525 were due on account of the mortgage, that Rs. 100 were paid on the day of the receipt, that a further sum of Rs 100 was to be paid in a month and a half, and the rents and profits of the property were in future to be taken for the interest on the balance of Rs. 325 only. In 1896 the mortgagor sued for redemption and relied on the receipt in support of his case. Held that the receipt did not require registration It purported to be a mere settlement of accounts and was not intended to modify or supersede the original mortgage-contract. This clause had therefore no application to the case.(6)

In the undermentioned case(7) the plaintiff mortgaged certain property to the first defendant on the 28th December 1895. By the mortgage-deed the mortgage-debt was made repayable on 28th December 1896. On the 12th May 1897 the first defendant sold it by auction under the power of sale contained in the mortgage-deed and the second defendant was the purchaser. The plaintiff now sued to set aside the sale and to be allowed to redeem, alleging that on the day before the sale the first defendant had orally promised and agreed to postpone the sale for four days, and that the second defendant had notice of this fact before he purchased the property. Held that evidence of such oral agreement was admissible. It was not an agreement to modify any [illegible] ...erely an agreement to forbear, for a period [illegible] power of sale given by the mortgage. It [illegible] ...oviso. As to the proof required when a substituted verbal agreement is set up, the following observations of Lord Cranworth may be referred to:—"When parties who have bound themselves by a written agreement depart from what has been so agreed upon in writing, and adopt some other line of conduct, it is incumbent on the party insisting on, and endeavouring to enforce, a substituted verbal agreement, to show not merely what he understood to be the new terms on which the parties were

(1) Rakhmabai v Tukaram, 11 B, 47 (1886), Herembdev Dharnidhardev v Kashinath Bhaskar, 14 B., 472 (1890); Autu Singh v Ajudhia Saha, 9 A., 249 (1887).

(2) Ramlal Chundra v. Gobinda Karmokar, 4 C. W. N., 304 (1900); Kettika Bapanamma v Kettika Kristanamma (1906), 30 M, 231.

(3) Arijaputhira Padayachi v Muthukumaraswami Padayachi, 37 M, 423 (1914).

(4) Goreti Subbarow v. Varigonda Narasimham, 27 M, 368; s. c, 14 Mad. L. J., 218 (1903) [Oral evidence held not to be excluded]

(5) Kuki Subhanadri v. Muthu Rangayya (1909), 32 M., 532; and Turof Sahib v. Esuf Sahib (1907); 30 M., 322.

(6) Lukshman v. Damodar, 24 B., 609 (1900).

(7) Trimbak Gangadhar v. Bhagwandas Mullchand, 23 B., 348 (1898).

proceeding but also that the other party had the same understanding—that both parties were proceeding on a new agreement, the terms of which they both understood."(1 [illegible] as balance due on two register [illegible] leaded that the mortgagee had [illegible] tgage debt. The Lower Courts allowed oral evidence to show that the mortgages in suit were discharged by the payment of Rs. 800 Held that oral evidence was inadmissible to prove discharge of the mortgage debt under this Proviso.(2)

In the case of contracts, the evidence is not confined to the explanation under s. 98, post, of the written terms. Provided they are not repugnant to, or inconsistent with, the express terms of the contract,(3) it is allowed to supply terms of known usage in control of the contract, and which is known by the expression of "annexing incidents" This is upon the principle that the contract was itself framed with reference to the usage; and so as to incorporate the usage in, and as part of, itself Indeed, it is in part also upon this principle, that even as respects the actual terms of the contract, it is by the usage they are expounded.(4)

Accordingly, where a ship was to depart with convoy, but without any definition of the spot at which the convoy was to start, evidence was allowed to fix this as from the place of rendezvous.(5) So a sale of tobacco was allowed to be explained as a sale by sample, though the bought and sold notes were silent on the point (6) And in England, prior to the statutory enactment with regard thereto, a bill-of-exchange was by custom allowed three days' grace for payment beyond the day specified on the face of the bill itself

These incidents are sometimes the creatures of mere usage. But usage may come at length, by judicial recognition, to be received as part of the Law Merchant, and this would be obligatory without special evidence Consequently, the Law Merchant annexing to a Marine Insurance the condition of seaworthiness at the commencement of the voyage, it would ipso facto become annexed to any ordinary contract of such insurance (7)

In the case of that which is strictly usage or custom, the Courts are at liberty to import into the contract incidents not excluded by the terms of such contract even though a party to the contract was not actually cognizant of the usage. But this is not so in the case of a mere particular practice. Thus in order that the practice on a particular estate may be imported as a term of the contract into a contract in respect of land in that estate, it must be shown that the practice was known to the person whom it is sought to bind by it and that

---

(1) Earl of Darnley v L C and D Railway, 2 E & I, App, 60

(2) Jagannath v Sankar, 44 B, 55 Cf Maung Shwe v Chetty, 43 I C, 913

(3) Thus Evidence of Customs in respect of tenancies is inadmissible where the custom alleged is contradictory to the terms of the written instrument (Mahammad Ayezuddin Khan v Prodyot Kumar Tagore, 48 C, 359 (1921), s c, 25 C W N, 13

(4) Goodeve, Ev, 378, Greenleaf, Ev, §§ 292, 294, Roscoe, N P Ev, 22—27 As to proof of usage, see Phipson, 3rd Ed, 84, ib, 5th Ed, p 91 Such proof may be given (1) by direct evidence of witnesses, in which case particular instances of its occurrence or non-occurrence will be admissible in corroboration or rebuttal, or (2) by a series of particular instances in which it has been acted upon, or (3) by proof of similar customs in the same or analogous trades in other localities, etc., ib "In mercantile contracts the inten- [illegible]

Supreme Court, Plea Side (1848). "A condition not expressly made between the parties to a contract may nevertheless be attached, to such contract by custom;" Koonj Beharee v Shiva Baluk, Agra Rep., F B, 119 (1867); Protap Chandra Saha v Muhammad Ali Sarkar, 19 C. L. J, 66 (1914)

(5) Lathulan's case, 2 Salk., 443

(6) Syres v Jones, 2 Exch. R, 111.

(7) Goodeve, Ev, 378

he assented to its being a term of the contract; and when the person sought to be bound by the practice is an assignee for value of rights under that contract, it must also be shown that he and all prior assignees, if any, for value, knew that the practice was a term of the original contract.(1)

In the undermentioned case(2), where there had been a contract for purchase by brokers, not disclosing their principal, and evidence was admitted to show a usage of trade holding the brokers liable, Lord Campbell, C. J., laid down the law in extenso on this subject as follows :—

"Now, neither collateral evidence, nor the evidence of a usage of a trade, is receivable to prove anything which contradicts the tenor of a written contract; but subject to this condition both may be received for certain purposes. [illegible] II, p. 415, 10th edition :—'Evidence [illegible] relating to transactions of commerce [illegible] the purpose of defining what would [illegible] peculiar term, or to explain what was obscure, or to ascertain what was equivocal, or to annex particular incidents, which, although not mentioned in the contracts, were connected with them or with relations growing out of them; and the evidence in such cases is admitted with the view of giving effect, as far as can be done, to the present intention of the parties.' Now, here the plaintiff did not seek by the evidence of usage to contradict what the tenor of the note primarily imports, namely, that this was a contract with the defendants made as brokers. The evidence is based on this: [illegible] assumption of their having acted [illegible] made with their principal. But [illegible] ıat, according to the usages of the trade, and as those concerned in the trade understand the words used, they [illegible] that if the buying broker did not disclose the [illegible] come a contract with the broker as principal, [illegible] this evidence be treated as explaining the language used or adding a tacitly implied incident to the contract beyond those which are expressed, is not material. In either point of view it will be admissible, unless it labours under the objection of introducing something repugnant to, or inconsistent with, the tenor of the written instrument; and upon consideration of the sense in which that objection must be understood with reference to this question, we think it does not. In a certain sense every material incident which is added to a written contract varies it, makes it different from what it appeared to be, and so far is inconsistent with it. If by the side of the written contract without, you write the same contract with, the added incident, the two would seem to import different obligations and be different contracts. Take a familiar instance by way of illustration. On the face of a bill-of-exchange, at three months after date, the acceptor will be taken to bind himself to the payment precisely at the end of the three months; but by the custom he is only bound to do so at the end of the days of grace; which vary according to the country in which the same is made payable, from three up to fifteen. The truth is, that the principle on which the evidence is admissible is, that the parties have not set down on paper the whole of their contract in all its terms but those only [illegible] ular case by specific agreement, [illegible] to implication and tacit under- [illegible] which a uniform usage would [illegible] on be understood to contract, [illegible] hin the exception, therefore,

(1) Mana Vikrama v. Rama Patter, 20 M., 275 (1897).

(2) Humfrey v. Dale, W. R. (Eng.), 1856-7, p. 467. See also judgment of Parks, B., in Hutton v. Warren, 1 M. & W., 474, cited in Smith v. Ludho Ghella, 17 B., 143 (1892); and see Juggomohun Ghose v. Kaisreechund, 9 Moo. I. A., 260, 261 (1862) [custom as to interest].

ressed on the written contract, warrant bacon to be prime, n Yates v. Pym(1), or to
, all not slung on the quarter,' Company(2), and other cases of the same sort scattered through the books, would be instances of contracts in which both the two parts could not have full effect given to them, if written down. Therefore, when one part only is expressed it would be unreasonable to [illegible] her also Without repeating applies, where the evidence

"Merchants and traders with a multiplicity of transactions pressing on them, and moving in a narrow circle, and meeting each other daily, desire to write little and leave unwritten what they take for granted in every contract In spite of the lamentations of Judges, they still continue to do so, and, in a vast majority of cases of which Courts of Law hear nothing, they do so without loss or inconvenience; and upon the whole they find this mode of dealing advantageous even at the risk of occasional litigation. It is the business of Courts reasonably so to shape their rules of evidence, as to make them suitable to the habits of mankind, and such as are not likely to exclude the actual facts of the dealings between parties when they are to determine on the controversies which grow out of them. It cannot be doubted, in the present case, that in fact this contract was made with the usage understood to be a term in it; to exclude the usage is to exclude a material term of the contract, and must lead to an unjust decision" The case was affirmed on appeal As has been well observed in reference to these cases of mercantile contracts :—" The witnesses for this purpose may be considered to be the sworn interpreters of the mercantile language in which the contract is written" Indeed the observation applies to all usage evidence (3)

Where there is a usage or custom of trade, the intention of the parties to exclude a contract from its operation must be shown by the contract itself and cannot be proved by other evidence Thus, where there was a sale of rum, no mention being made of warehouse rent, evidence was admitted that, by custom of trade, an allowance for warehouse rent was incorporated in such contracts, but evidence that the parties had orally agreed to make an allowance different from the customary one, was rejected (4) Usage and custom cannot be restored to control or vary positive stipulations in a written contract, and á fortiori not in order to contradict them. An express contract of the parties is always admissible to supersede, or vary, or control a usage or custom, for the latter may always be waived at the will of the parties But a written and express contract cannot be controlled, or varied, or contradicted by usage or custom, for that would be not only to admit parol evidence to control, vary or contradict written contracts but it would be to allow mere presumptions and implications, properly arising in the absence of any positive expressions of intention, to control, vary, or contradict the most formal and deliberate declarations of the parties (5) Therefore, where an usage conflicts with the expressed intention of the document, the latter must be followed. So where in

(1) 6 Taune, 446

(2) 2 C & J, 244

(3) Goodeve, Ev, 378—381 See Birch v Defeyster, Starkie, 210, Bowes v Shand, 2 App Cas, 468, cited in Smith v Ludha Ghella, 17 B, 144 (1892)

(4) Fawkes v Lamb, 31 L J, Q B, 98

(5) Story, cited Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 283 Indur Chunder v Luchmi Bibi, 7 B L R, 682 (1871), [custom cannot affect the express terms of a written contract] Macfarlane v Carr, 8 B L R, 459 (1872) [custom at variance with contract], Smith v Ludha Ghella, 17 B, 129 (1892), [usage repugnant to, and inconsistent with, contract] Hari Mohun v Krishna Mohan, 9 B L R, App 1 (1872) evidence was admitted, but quære, however, whether the custom was consistent with the terms of the instrument. See also Morris v Panchnada Pillay, 5 Mad H. C R, 135 (1870).

an agreement between an African merchant and an African captain, the latter was to have a commission of "£ 6 per cent. on the net proceeds of the homeward cargo, after deducting the usual charges," parol evidence was not admitted to show that, according to the course of trade between African captains and merchants, the captain was entitled to a commission on the whole amounts for which the cargo had been sold, and not merely the net profits.(1) If the usage is inconsistent with the express terms of the contract, evidence thereof is inadmissible, and the inconsistency may be evinced (a) by the express terms of the instrument, or (b) by implication therefrom.(2) When the Court of first instance had permitted plaintiffs to put in evidence to show the terms on which the parties must be presumed to have contracted, as to which the document was silent, according to the provisions of this proviso, it was held on appeal that what the plaintiff sought to make use of, was not any custom of the port or usage of trade, but the terms on which the plaintiff and defendant had dealt with each other on prior occasions: and that evidence of previous dealings was admissible only for the purpose of explaining the terms used in a contract, and not to impose on a party an obligation as to which the contract was silent (3) In a case in the Bombay High Court where it was contended that a contract to buy unascertained goods was subject to a trade-custom according to which if the goods proved to be off sample, the buyer was bound to take them with an allowance if with such allowance they could be considered a fair tender, it was held that in the absence of a clause in the contract to that effect, evidence of such trade-custom was inadmissible (4) Under this section oral evidence is inadmissible to prove that the interest mentioned in a promissory note is not payable either by custom or agreement.(5)

Proviso (6) This Proviso relates to the admissibility of evidence necessary to point the operation of the document. It relates to the admissibility of evidence necessary to make the words which are used fit the external things to which the words are appropriate (6) Thus if an undescribed dispute is referred to arbitration, evidence is admissible to show what the actual dispute was at the time of the submission (7) Up to a certain stage and apart from any question of ambiguity, extrinsic evidence is necessary to point the operation of the simplest instrument Thus, were it the case of a deed conveying all the lands at A in the grantor's occupation, until it was defined by proof what lands were in his occupation, the operation of the deed could not be known. So, were it a case of a will, and a bequest to the children of a party, or even the testator's own children; to give effect to the bequest it would be necessary to define who the children were.(8) "Some evidence," says Wood, V. C, in the case undermentioned "is necessary in any case of a will, that is to say, evidence to show the subject and objects of the gift."(9) And again, "in interpreting any instrument which purports to deal with property, some extrinsic information is necessary in order to make the words, which are but signs, fit the external things to which these signs are appropriate. In reality, external information is requisite in construing every instrument; but when any subject is thus discovered, which not

(1) Caine v. Horsefall, 2 C. & K., 349

(2) Smith v. Ludha Ghella, 17 B., 129, 144 (1892).

(3) Ghellabhai v Nandubhai, 12 B., 344 (1896).

(4) Ruttonsi Rowji v. Bombay United Spinning and Weaving Co, 41 B., 518 (1917).

(5) Pillay v Maistry, 10 Bur. L. T., 242

(6) Faiz-un-nissa v Hanif-un-nissa, 2 Al L. J, 360, 365 (1905).

(7) Haji Mahomed v Spinner, 24 B., 510, 515, 525 (1900).

(8) Goodeve, Ev, 385; Goodeve's Evidence Act, p. 57; Greenleaf, Ev., § 286; Babu Dhunput v. Sheik Jowahur, 8 W. R., 152 (1867). [Evidence of every material fact which will enable the Court to ascertain the nature and extent of the subject-matter of the instrument, or in other words, to identify the things to which that instrument refers, is admissible. The acts of the parties may also be explained by parol evidence.]

(9) In the matter of Feltham, 1 Kay & J., 528

only is within the words of the instrument, according to their natural construction, but exhausts the whole of those words, then the investigation must stop; you are bound to take the interpretation which entirely exhausts the whole of the series of expressions used by the author of the instrument, and are not permitted to go any further. Thus to that extent the Court is always at liberty to go in interpreting a will; in other words, the Court is to place itself in the position of the testator with the knowledge of all the facts with which he was acquainted, but it is not in the course of interpretation to introduce any evidence whatever of what were the intentions of the testator as contracted with, or extending or contracting the language which he has used."(1) So also Sir James Wigram says: "The most accurate description possible must require some development of extrinsic circumstances to enable a Court to decide upon its sufficiency, and the least accurate description which is sufficient to satisfy the mind of a Judge or Jury as to a testator's meaning, must be within the same principle. The principle cannot be affected by the consideration that a more ample development of circumstances is necessary in one case than in another."(2)

These observations are cited only as illustrative of the principle. Practically, it is upon some imperfection of the instrument, as applied to the facts that the difficulty as to determining its meaning usually arises; and nothing is more settled than that evidence is receivable of all the circumstances surrounding the instrument, for the purpose of throwing their light on its interpretation Indeed, it is by these, as by a lamp, the Court reads the document (3)

The question has more often arisen upon wills than upon other documents, and it is from cases on these, accordingly, that the law has mainly to be taken The principles, however, which they enunciate are alike applicable to other instruments generally (4)

In Doe d Hiscocks v Hiscocks(5), a very leading authority on the subject, Lord Abinger, Chief Baron, thus propounds the admissibility of this species of evidence, and the purport of its admission :—

"It must be admitted that it is not possible altogether to reconcile the different cases that have been decided on this subject, which makes it the more expedient to investigate the principles upon which any evidence to explain the will of a testator ought to be received. The object, in all cases, is

(1) Webb v Byng, 1 K & J, 580, 585, 586, per Wood, V C

(2) Wigram on Extrinsic Evidence, p 35

(3) Goodeve, Ev, 386

(4) The principle is one of general application See Macdonald v Longbottom, 7 W R (Eng), 507, Munford v Gething, 8 W R (Eng), 187, where it was applied to cases of mercantile contract In the former case, which was a contract for the purchase of wool, the quantity, the subject of purchase, was not otherwise defined than by the expression "your wool" and evidence was admitted to show its meaning Lord Campbell, C J, said "I am clearly of opinion that when a specific thing is the subject of a contract and it is doubtful upon the contract, what that specific thing is, then any fact may be given in evidence, in order to identify it, which is within the knowledge of both parties—meaning by that expression, the knowledge upon the strength of which both parties dealt' And Earle, J, said, "the defendant says 'I will buy your wool' now it is the universal practice to admit parol evidence to identify the subject-matter of a contract as no Judge can have judicial knowledge of what it is It is not contended that this contract is, on the face of it void for uncertainty, parol evidence must, therefore, be admissible to explain to what it refers" to discover the intention of the testator. The first and most obvious mode of doing this, is to read his will as he has written it and collect his intention from his words. But as his words refer to facts and circumstances, respecting his property and his family, and others whom he names or describes in his will, it is evident that the meaning and application of his words cannot be ascertained without evidence of all those facts and circumstances. To understand the meaning of any writer we must first be apprised of the persons and circumstances that are the subject of his allusions or statements, and if these are not fully disclosed in his work, we must look for illustrations to the history of the times in which he wrote, and to the works of contemporaneous authors All the facts and circumstances, therefore respecting persons or property to which the will relates, are undoubtedly legitimate. and often necessary, to enable us to understand the meaning and application of his words." Again :—" The testator may have habitually called certain persons or things by peculiar names by which they were not commonly known. If these names should occur in his will, they could only be explained and construed by the aid of evidence, to show the sense in which he used them, in like manner as if his will were written in cypher, or in a foreign language The habits of the testator in these particulars must be receivable as evidence to explain the meaning of his will."

(5) 5 M & W, 363 And for other English cases, see In re Sharp, Maddison v Gill, C A (1908), 2 Ch, 190 In re Jameson, King v Winn (1908), 2 Ch, 111, In re Ofner, Samuel v Ofner, C A (1909), 1 Ch., 61, 78, L J, Ch, 50 Great Western Ry Co v Bristol Corporation, 87 L J, Ch (H L), 419 424, 428 Lovell v Wall 104 L T 85 (C A) See 20 Law Quarterly Review, 252—254, Charrington v. Wooder, 1914, A C, 71, 77.

In this case the testator, after the gift of a life-estate to his own son, John Hiscocks, devised the property in question to " John, the eldest son of the said John Hiscocks." The son had been twice married; and his actual eldest son was Simon, the child of his first marriage, but John was the eldest son by the second marriage, and the question was, which of the two sons was intended to take.

Cases indeed abound illustrative of the same principle; and from their general result the doctrine is thus stated by V. C. Wigram(1) :—" In considering questions of this nature it must always be remembered that the words of a testator, like those of every other person, tacitly refer to the circumstances by which, at the time of expressing himself, he is surrounded. If, therefore, when the circumstances under which the testator made his will are known, the words of the will c [illegible] strict limits of expositio [illegible] e construction of the will, [illegible] it is certain the language of the will refers. It may be true that, without such evidence, the precise meaning of the words could not be determined, but it is still the will which expresses and ascertains the intention ascribed to the testator. A page of history (to use a familiar illustration) may not be intelligible until some collateral extrinsic circumstances are known to the reader. No one, however, would imagine that he was acquiring a knowledge of the writer's meaning from any other source than the page he was reading because in order to make that page intelligible he required to be informed to what country the writer belonged, or to be furnished with a map of the country about which he was reading. The extrinsic evidence in the cases now adverted to, does not per se approach the question of intention. It is wholly collateral to it. It explains the words only by removing the cause of their apparent ambiguity, where, in truth, there is no real ambiguity. It places the Court which expounds the will in the situation of the testator who made it and the words of the will are then left to their natural operation."

So too in Bernasconi v. Atkinson(2) it was said by Woods, V. C., " the Courts have a right to ascertain all the facts which were known to the testator at the time he made his will, or to place themselves in his position, in order to ascertain whether there exist any person or thing to which the description can be reasonably and with sufficient certainty applied; the presumption being that the testator intended some existing matter or person" And in another case(1) it has been said that to construe the will of a testator "you may place yourself so to speak in his arm-chair and consider the circumstances by which he was surrounded when he made his will, to assist you in arriving at his intention."

---

(1) Wigram on Extrinsic Evidence, proposition 7.

(2) Bernasconi v. Atkinson (1873), 10 Hare, 345.

The principles here propounded have been recognized by the Privy Council as applicable to India. In the undermentioned case(2), Turner, L J., in delivering the judgment of the Court, thus expresses himself:—

"This, therefore, is the question which we are called upon to decide. It is a question between the estate of S C and the parties claiming under the gift over, and as it seems to us, it must depend wholly on the construction What we must look to, is the intention of the testator. The Hindu law, no less than the English law, points to the intention as the element by which we are to be guided in determining the effect of a testamentary disposition; nor, so far as we are aware, is there any difference between the one law and the other, as to the materials from which the intention is to be collected Primarily, the words of the will are to be considered They convey the expression of the testator's wishes; but the meaning to be attached to them may be affected by surrounding circumstances, and where this is the case, those circumstances, no doubt, must be regarded. Amongst the circumstances thus to be regarded, is the law of the country under which the will is made, and its dispositions are to be carried out. If that law has attached to particular words a particular meaning, or to a particular disposition a particular effect, it must be assumed that the testator, in the dispositions which he has made, had regard to that meaning or to that effect, unless the language of the will or the surrounding circumstances displace that assumption. These are, as we think, the principles by which we ought to be guided in determining the case before us; and we must first, therefore, consider what was the intention of this testator to be collected from the words of his will." And again:—"If, therefore, we are to impute to this testator any intention different from that which is to be collected from the words of his will it must be upon the ground that there are extrinsic circumstances which disprove the expressed intention, and prove the different intention The expressed intention ought, as we conceive, to prevail, unless the different intention be clearly demonstrated We may doubt whether the testator really intended, what his words import, but a Court of Construction must found its conclusions upon just reasoning and not upon mere speculative doubts" Further, it has been held as regards the construction of Hindu Wills that it is not improper to take into consideration what are known to be the ordinary notions and wishes of Hindus with respect to the devolution of property and from these infer the testator's intention (3)

And in the Privy Council the same view was adopted in a judgment by Lord Moulton (4) "In all cases the primary duty of a Court is to ascertain

---

(1) Boyes v Cook, 14 Ch D, 53, In re Gibbs, Martin v Harding (1907), 1 Ch 465

(2) Sreemuty Soorjeemony v Denobundoo Mullick, 6 Moo I A, 526 [cited in Mathura Das Bhikhan, 19 A, 19 (1896)] See also Beti Maharani v Collector of Etawah, 7 A, 198, 209 (1894), Succaram Morarji v Kalidas Kalianji 18 B, 631 (1894) cited ante, in Introd to Ch VI Mussummut Bhagbutti v Chowdry Bholanath 2 I A, 256 260 (1875), Act X of 1865 s 62 As to evidence of surrounding circumstances see ante, cases cited in Introd to Ch VI

(3) Mahamed Shamsool Hooda v Shewakram, P C (1874), 2 I A, 7, 14 B L R, 226, and Radha Prasad Mullick v Ranee Mani Dasse, P C (1908), 35 C, 896, 35 I A, 18, 8 C L J, 48, Ponindra Nath Sen v Hemangini Dasi (1908), 36 C, 1, Sher Bahadur v Ganga Baksh P C, 19 C L J 277 (1914), 18 C W N, 401, 36 A, 101, 41 I A, 1

(4) Meka Venkata v Sri Raja Parthasarathy Appa Row, P C, 19 C L J, 369 (1913), p 380 and see Chuni Lal v Bai Samrath, P C, 19 C L J, 563 (1913)

from the language of a testator what were his intentions. It is true that in so doing they are entitled and bound to bear in mind other matters than merely the words used. They must consider the surrounding circumstances, the position of the testator, his family relationships, the probability that he would use words in a particular sense and many other things—which are often summed up in the figure : ' The Court is entitled to put itself into the testator's arm-chair.' Among such surrounding circumstances which the Court is bound to consider, none would be more important than race and religious opinions, and the Court is bound to regard as presumably (and in many cases certainly) present to the mind of the testator influences and aims arising therefrom . . . . . This fundamental principle does not clash with the principle that the Court will not necessarily [illegible] Will as we have here to deal with. [illegible] d on English necessities and Eng [illegible] justification in taking them as [illegible] That native tes [illegible] oper to express their intentions or [illegible] is one of the most important of [illegible] Court must bear in mind."

When a letter had been addressed by the defendant to a Mrs. W., containing an acknowledgment of a debt, it was held that evidence was admissible to show that Mrs. S., the defendant, was known as Mrs. W., and also for the purpose of identifying the debt to which the acknowledgment referred.(1) Where a deed stated that the property was sold "subject to the payment of all taxes, rates, charges, assessments leviable or chargeable," leaving the question open as to what the taxes, etc., were which were "leviable and chargeable," it was held that extrinsic evidence of that was admissible, for it neither contradicted nor varied the terms of the deed, but explained the sense in which the parties understood the words of the deed, which, taken by themselves, were capable of explanation.(2) In cases where the question is whether a lease to a person named in it is perpetual, i.e., whether it is to him and his heirs, evidence as to the surrounding circumstances is admissible because it explains what, standing alone, is incapable of explanation, whether a grant to a person is a grant to him alone, or to him and his heirs. The mere fact that words of inheritance do not occur in a lease does not make it the less a permanent lease, if from the language of the document, taken as a whole, the object of the lease, and other surrounding circumstances, such as the conduct of the parties, it appears that their intention was that it should operate as a lease in perpetuity.(3) And evidence has been held admissible under this proviso because it showed how the document was related to existing facts, and because the nature of the landed tenures was a special matter which could not be stated off-hand but required to be elucidated by a reference to the particular facts.(4)

The short exposition of the whole matter is, that the knowledge of the external circumstances of which their proof puts the Court in possession, places [illegible] er party to the instrument; [illegible] him, he exercises the office [illegible] made to divert a charitable

(1) Umesh Chandra v Sageman, 5 B. L. R., 633 (1869); see Valampuducherri Padmanabhan v. Chowakaren, 5 Mad. H. C. R, 320 (1850).
(2) Dadoba v. Collector of Bombay, 25 B., 714, 751 (1901)
(3) Babu v. Sitaram, 3 Bom. L. R., 768 (1901).
(4) Raja Gour Chandra v. Raja Makunda Deb, 9 C. W. N., 710
(5) Goodeve, Ev., 309; Raghojirao Sahib v. Lakshmanrao Sahib, P. C., 36 B., 639 (1912).

bequest in altered circumstances to another charitable purpose cypres, on proof of a general charitable intention, the Judge will decide each case according to the particular facts and circumstances proved.(1) In an English decision to prove that the word "securities" had been used by a testator in the sense of "investments" and stock and shares in railway and other companies, Vaughan Williams, L. J., allowed independent evidence to be given, and observed as follows:—"I think that evidence is admissible to show that the expressions used in the Will had acquired an appropriate meaning, either generally, or by local usage, or amongst particular classes, and that, where any doubt arises upon the true sense and meaning of the words themselves or any difficulty as to their application under surrounding circumstances the sense and meaning of the language may be investigated and ascertained by evidence dehors the instrument itself; for both reason and common sense agree that by no other means can the language of the instrument be made to speak the real mind of the party."(2) In a recent case the facts were as follows:—In 1865 a possessory mortgage deed was passed in favour of the father of the defendant No I. In 1867 the mortgagors sold by a document purporting to be a sale-deed the ıving sued for he transaction re of opinion ıf certain sur-r of considerasaction was a mortgage On appeal to the High Court it was held, that the document of 1867 was termed a sale-deed, and on the face of it was anything except a sale-deed. And that the Courts should not have taken into consideration extrinsic evidence in construing the document On general principles it would be extremely undesirable after the document had stood more than fifty years to allow evidence to be led to show that the document was not what appeared on the face of it. Where the document itself is a perfectly plain straightforward document, no extrinsic evidence is required to show in what manner the language of the document is related to existing facts There may be cases where such extrinsic evidence is required, and it will therefore be admitted But it can only be in cases where the terms of the document themselves require explanation, that extrinsic evidence can be led within the restriction laid down in this proviso of the section.(3)

In another case where by a deed of settlement almost the whole of the settlor's immovable property was transferred to trustees together "with buildings and appurtenances thereto" and the question was raised as to whether certain specific properties were included in the deed: held, that the ambiguity in the deed being latent, in construing the deed the subsequent conduct of the parties could be looked into under this proviso for the purpose of ascertaining nded to apply (4) he nature of the eld that extrinsic property) might

(1) Hormasji Framji (in re) (1907), 32 B, 214, following Campden Charities (in re) (1881), 18 Ch D, 310, and Lyons v. Advocate-General of Bengal, 1 App C., 91, and Advocate-General of Bengal v Belchambers (1908), 36 C., 261

(2) Rayner v Rayner, 1 Ch, 176 (1904), and see s 98, post

(3) Gunput Rao v Bapu, 44 B, 710

(4) Subbamma Ayyar v Raja Rajeshtara Dorai, 40 M, 1016

(5) Dinabandhu Nandi Choudhuri v. Mannu Lal Paik, 52 I C, 443

Exclusion of evidence to explain or amend ambiguous document

93. When the language used in a document is, on its face ambiguous or defective(1), evidence may not be given(2) of facts which would show its meaning or supply its defects.

Illustrations.

(a) A agrees in writing to sell a horse to B for Rs. 1,000 or Rs. 1,500.

Evidence cannot be given to show which price was to be given.

(b) A deed contains blanks.

Evidence cannot be given of facts which would show how they were meant to be filled.

Principle.—The main principle on which the rule is founded is that the intention of parties should be construed, not by vague evidence of their intentions, independently of the expressions which they have thought fit to use, but by the expressions themselves. If extrinsic evidence were admissible in the case of patent ambiguities, it would be tantamount to permitting wills to be made verbally and would also be a violation of the principle that, where a contract, or other substantial matter of issue, has been reduced to writing, that writing is the only admissible proof of such contract or transaction.(3) In the cases governed by this section the instrument fails for want of adequate expression. It is the province of the Court to interpret and not to make instruments for parties. It will construe the expressions the parties have themselves furnished, but will not supply others. And though evidence may be given to explain, it is inadmissible for the purpose of adding to the document And see Notes post.

s. 3 ("Document.")
s. 3 ("Evidence.")
s. 3 ("Fact.")
ss. 95—97 ("Latent ambiguities")

Steph. Dig, Art. 91; Wigram on Extrinsic Evidence; Taylor, Ev., §§ 1212, 1213; Wharton, Ev, §§ 956, 957, Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed., 572; Roscoe, N. P. Ev., 29—33; Norton, Ev., 278—281; Powell, Ev., 9th Ed., 544, 555, 562; Wood's Practice Evidence, 37—43; Starkie, Ev., 653; Gresley, Ev., 279, et seq; Goodeve, Ev., 391, et seq; Brown on Parol Evidence, 116—124; Thayer's Cases on Evidence, 1021.

COMMENTARY.

Patent ambiguity cannot be cleared up by extrinsic evidence.

This section embodies the rule with regard to "patent ambiguities," as sections 95—97 relate to "latent ambiguities." Ambiguities in documents are said to be either patent or latent, the former arising where the instrument on its face is unintelligible, as where in a will the name of a legatee is left wholly

(1) With reference to the term "defective" in this section, Norton, Ev., 278, refers to the case of Benodhee Lall v Dulloo Sircar, Marsh, 620 (1863), in which it was held that parol evidence is properly admissible to supply words in an old deed lost in consequence of the parts on which they were written having been eaten by insects. But in this case the parol evidence was not admitted to explain the document, but merely to show what the document expressed, the same rule which allows secondary evidence of a document entirely destroyed, admits evidence to supply parts wanting by reason of partial destruction

(2) In Markby, Ev, 74, it is said: "This section can only apply where a writing is required by law. If no writing is required by law, and if the writing is so incomplete that its meaning cannot be ascertained (which is, I suppose, the case contemplated), it may be disregarded or used as an admission, and oral evidence given"

(3) Starkie, Ev, p 653; Powell, Ev., 9th Ed, 555.—Goodeve, Ev., 391, 392: though this section does not affect the provisions of the Succession Act (s 100, post), the rule thereunder (see s 68) is the same as that enacted by this section As to agreements void for uncertainty, see Contract Act, s 29. As to conduct and ambiguity, see notes to s. 92, ante

he latter arising where the words of the instrument are clear, but their ion to the circumstances is doubtful, as where a legacy is given to "my ne," the testator having two nieces of that name. The admission of evidence to explain ambiguities is confined to such as are latent. A mbiguity, or one in which the imperfection of the writing is so obvious idea that it was intended cannot be absolutely excluded, cannot be d by parol. A patent ambiguity may exist either in the want of adetificiality in the composition or in the omission of something requisite operation to the document. The section thus applies to cases (a) in ther no meaning at all has been expressed, the sentence having been left ed [see Illustration (b)], or (b) where, though the language is intellimeaning [see Illustraown incapacity either ice of the writing. His in a particular relation he fails to exhibit, and the writing shows the A patent ambiguity
the writer himself:
iguity in the thing l
ral reasons. He ma an idea which would be to contra-him say what he did not intend to se the writer intends it to be so, as t-law.' In such case extrinsic evi-it would frustrate his real intention was to have the question of heirship determined not by himself but by urt (2) Or a document may be ambiguous for want of adequate lity in the composition. So where certain persons describing themselves

o discover and distinguish so as to carry out the writer's intent. Hence vidence is admissible to solve such an ambiguity. A latent ambiguity, solely raised by extrinsic evidence, is allowed to be removed by the same (4) good test of the difference between the two forms of ambiguities is to put trument into the hands of an ordinarily intelligent educated person. If Goodeve, Ev, 391, Cunningham, 2.

See authorities cited in note, post, Chandra Saha v Mahomed Ali 41 C., 342 (1914); 19 C. L. J., Jenkins, C. J. and Mookerjee, J., ing Monmotha Nath Chowdhury v. Chandra Sanyal, 14 C. W. N., 1100 , not following Mahomed Sam- v. Moonshee Abdul Huq, W. R, 864) (decided before this Act).
Deojit v. Pitambar, 1 A., 275

Wharton, Ev, §§ 956, 957. See aylor, Ev, §§ 1212, 1213; Phipson, th Ed, 579, Roscoe, N. P. Ev., , in which a large number of patent and latent ambiguities will be found collected; Wigram on Extrinsic Evidence; Steph. Dig, Art. 91; Powell, Ev., 9th Ed, 562, 544, 555,—Wood's Practice Evidence, 37—43; Gresley, Ev, 297, et seq; Goodeve, Ev, 391, et seq The rule was the same prior to this Act: Ram Lochun v Unnopoorna Dossee, 7 W. R., 144 (1876) [where there is a latent ambiguity in the wording, parol evidence is admissible to explain it.] Umesh Chunder v. Sageman, 7 B. L R., 633, 634 (1869) In Hussonally v Tribhowandas, 25 C. W. N., 385 (1921), the P. C. admitted extrinsic evidence to reconcile statements in the body and Schedule of a document.

on perusal he sees no ambiguity, but there is nevertheless an uncertainty as to its application, the ambiguity is latent; if he detects an ambiguity from merely reading the instrument, it is patent. Thus in Illustration (b) to this section the blanks would be patent ambiguities, and they could not be filled in by parol testimony as to the intention of the parties or the like. In the Illustration to section 95, no one could detect any ambiguity from merely reading the instrument. The ambiguity does not consist in the language, but is introduced by extrinsic circumstances, and the maxim is quod ex facto oritur ambiguum verificatione facti tollitur.(1) The distinction has prevailed since the time of Lord Bacon, who says: "There be two sorts of ambiguities of words, the one is ambiguitas patens, and the other latens. Patens is that which appears to be ambigu- [illegible] hat which seemeth certain and with- [illegible] upon the deed or instrument; but ... deed that breeedth the ambiguity. Ambiguitas patens is never holpen by averment, and the reason is, because the law will not couple and mingle matter of speciality, which is of the higher account, with matter of averment, which is of inferior account of law; for that were to make all deeds hollow and subject to averments; and so, in effect, that to pass without deed, which the law appointeth shall not pass but by deed. Therefore, if a man give land to J D and J S et hæredibus, and do not limit to whether of their heirs, it shall not be supplied by averment to whether of them the intention was (that) the inheritance should be limited." "But if it be ambiguitas latens, then otherwise it is; as if I grant my manor of S to J F and his heirs, here appeareth no ambiguity at all. But if the truth be, that I have the manors both of South S and North S, this ambiguity is matter in fact and, therefore, it shall be holpen by averment, whether of them it was, that the party intended should pass."

The above distinction which, as already observed, was originally taken by Lord Bacon, was so taken with reference to pleading upon instruments under seal, and cannot, it has been said(2), be relied on as a test of the admissibility of evidence in the present connection, for there have been cases of patent ambiguity in the sense abovementioned, in which evidence has been admitted in explanation thereof "It is true that a complete blank cannot be filled up by parol testimony, however strong. Thus a legacy to Mr.—— cannot have any effect given to it(3); nor a legacy to [illegible] words to which a reasonable meaning may be a[illegible] to show what that meaning is. Thus a [illegible] as to 'Mrs. C.,' admits explanation as by shewing that the testator was accustomed to speak of a particular person by the initial of her name.(5) And when a blank was left for the Christian name, parol evidence has been admitted(6) to show who was intended."(7) And so also when the deceased, by his will,

(1) Norton, Ev., 279

(2) Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed., 579—and criticisms collected in Browne on Parol Evidence, p. 117, et seq.

(3) Baylis v Attorney-General, 2 Atk., 239. See Re Macduff, 2 Ch., 451, C. A. (1895).

(2) Hunt v Hort, 3 Bro. C. C., 311. The province of the Court is to interpret, not to make. It is to construe the expressions the parties have themselves furnished, not to supply others. Were the Court by the process of construction to insert in the blank, person, property, or thing omitted as if it were to say who was the lady—this would be to supply, not to interpret; and though the law admits evidence to explain, it excludes that which would only be to add to a document. Goodeve, Ev., 302. As the language expresses no definite meaning, if evidence were allowed to be given as to what the intention of the person using it was, the effect would be, not to interpret words, but to conjecture as to intention, and that this section forbids. Cunningham, Ev., 270.

(5) Abbott v. Massie, 3 Ves., 148; Clayton v. Lord Nugent, 13 M. & W., 207.

(6) Price v. Page, 4 Ves., 680

(7) Per Sir J. Hannen: In the Goods of De Rosaz, L. R., 2 P. D., 66, 69.

appointed certain executors, and amongst others "Percival——of Brighton, the father," the Court admitted evidence of the circumstances under which the deceased made his will, and of the persons about him, in order to satisfy itself who was meant by the imperfect description of the executor contained therein (1) The cases in which evidence will be admitted is clearly denoted in the case of In the Goods of De Rosaz (cited supra), and in the statement of this rule by Sir J. Stephen in his Digest(2), viz, "if the words of a document are so defective or ambiguous as to be unmeaning, no evidence can be given to show what the author of the document intended to say. In the last solution, Lord Bacon's famous and much vexed maxim has been said to amount to no more than this, that an incurable ambiguity (which is very rare) is fatal.(3)

The principles upon which evidence is in this connection both admitted and rejected is explained in Starkie on Evidence (p. 653), as follows:—"By patent ambiguity must be understood an ambiguity inherent in the words, and incapable of being dispelled, either by any legal rules of construction applied in themselves unconventional meaniat the intention of intentions indepenbut by the expres-pable of any legal construction and interpretation by the rules of art, are either so because they are in themselves unintelligible or because being intelligible they exhibit a plain and obvious uncertainty In the first instance, the case admits of two varieties; the terms, though at first sight unintelligible, may yet be capable of having a meaning annexed to them by extrinsic evidence, just as if they were written in a foreign language, as when mercantile terms are used which amongst mercantile men bear a distinct and definite meaning, although others do not comprehend them; the terms used, may, on the other hand, be capable of no distinct and definite interpretation. Now it is evident that to give effect to an instrument, the terms of which, though apparently ambiguous, are capable of having a distinct and definite meaning annexed to them, is no violation of the general principle; for in such a case effect is given, not to any loose conjecture as to the intent and meaning of the party, but to the expressed meaning and that, on the other hand, where either the terms used are incapable of any certain and definite meaning, or, being in themselves intelligible, exhibit plain and obvious uncertainty, and are equally capable of different applications, to give an effect to them by extrinsic evidence as to the intention of the party, idependently of any definite therefore, must be under-ed either by the ordinary f extrinsic and explanatory evidence, showing that expressions, primâ facie unintelligible, are yet capable of conveying a certain and definite meaning."

And Sir W. Grant in Colpoys v. Colpoys(4), says: "In the case of a patent ambiguity,—that is, one appearing on the face of the instrument,—as a general rule, a reference to matter dehors the instrument is forbidden. It must, if possible, be removed by construction, and not by averment. But in many

(1) In the Goods of De Rosaz, supra. So also evidence was admitted when the legatee was merely referred to by a term of endearment (Sullivan v. Sullivan, I. R., 4 Eq, 457), cited in Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed, 579—And where a document which began "I A & B" was signed "C D" the ambiguity apparent on the face of the writing was allowed to be explained by parol, Summers v. Moorhouse, 13 Q. B. D, 388

(2) Art 91, cited with approval in Wharton's Ev., § 956.

(3) Browne op. cit, 123, and see Thayer's Cases on Evidence, 1021.

(4) Jacob, 465.

cases this is ir d equivocal and carry on instrument furnishes no moved, if in such cases the Court were to reject the only mode by which the meaning could be ascertained, viz., the resort to extrinsic circumstances, the instrument must become inoperative and void. As a minor evil, therefore, common sense and the law of England (which are seldom at variance) warrant the departure from the general rule, and call in the light of extrinsic evidence. The books are full of instances sanctioned by the highest authorities both in Law and Equity. When the person or the thing is designated, on the face of the instrument by by them- ressly, for stances. it those cir- istrument. n name is t evidence mbiguous, So, with a eweller, it would not pass those that he had in his shop. Thus, the same expressions may vary in meaning according to the circumstances of the testator."

"Ambiguous or defective"

A document is not patently ambiguous because it is unintelligible to an uninstructed person, as to one uninstructed in technical terms of art or science, local peculiarity, obsolete meaning and the like. In such cases parol evidence is always admissible to ascertain the meaning of the terms used (see section 98 post). A document is ambiguous only, if found to be of uncertain meaning when persons of competent skill and information are unable to interpret it.(1) So also a distinction must be drawn between inaccuracy of expression and ambiguity. Language may be inaccurate without being ambiguous, and it may be ambiguous although perfectly accurate. If, for instance, a testator having only one house, a leasehold, devises it as his freehold house; the language is inaccurate but not ambiguous. If, however, a testator were to devise an estate "to J B, of Dale, the son of T," and there were two persons to whom the entire description accurately applied, this description, though accurate, would be ambiguous. It is obvious therefore that the whole of that class of cases in which an inaccurate description is found to be sufficient merely by the rejection of words of surplusage are cases in which no ambiguity really exists. The meaning is certain, notwithstanding the inaccuracy of the testator's language.(2)

Nothing in this Chapter is to affect the provisions of the Indian Succession Act as to the construction of will .(3) The rule, however, under that the same as that enacted by thi for where there is an amb deficiency on the face of the will, evidence as to the intent the testator will be admitted.(4) however, any word material full expression of the meaning ha ted, it may be supplied context. So if a testator gives a h hundred" to his d and a legacy of "five hundred rupee ughter B: A will take of five hundred rupees.(5) It has be the Indian Trusts Act, applies to India the English rule ac a legatee who to carry out a secret trust becomes purpose and

(1) Norton, E 280; Wigram on Extrinsic Evidence, 1865 (

(2) Wigram on Evidence, cited in Norton, Ev.,

may be proved by oral evidence.(1) In a case in the Bombay High Court, a testator had instructed his trustees to pay a sum of money to one of them to be used in accordance with private instructions which he was about to give him, and also to transfer certain shares to the person named in those instructions, whose name the said trustee would disclose. It was contended that this amounted to an ambiguity or deficiency on the face of the will and that oral evidence was inadmissible; but it was held that such evidence was admissible for the purpose of proving material facts, and that the trustee was bound to disclose the private instructions, which would take effect as if they had been expressed in the will.(2) This ruling was partly based on an English decision in which it was held that a bequest for 'the charitable purposes agreed on between us' was good, and evidence of such purposes admissible, and that equity will intervene to prevent fraud by the legatee.(3)

The present English view of the effect of the old distinction between latent and patent ambiguities in wills is discussed in Jarman on Wills (6th edition)(4) with this conclusion —"We come therefore to the conclusion either that the distinction taken is an unsubstantial one, or that the proposition does in its second branch assert the admissibility of evidence to show the testator's intention (as distinct from the meaning of his written words) and that consequently, if true, its application must be confined to a special class of cases"

94. When language used in a document is plain in itself, and when it applies accurately to existing facts, evidence may not be given to show that it was not meant to apply to such facts.

Exclusion of evidence against application of document to existing facts.

Illustration

A sells to B, by deed, 'my estate at Rampur containing 100 bighas.' A has an estate at Rampur containing 100 bighas. Evidence may not be given of the fact that the estate meant to be sold was one situated at a different place and of a different size.

Principle.—See Notes post.

s. 3 ("Document") s. 3 ("Fact") s. 3 ("Evidence.")

Norton, Ev., 281; Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 284; Cunningham, Ev., 256.

COMMENTARY.

Plain language accurately applying to existing facts.

Not only must a document be produced to prove its own contents or the disposition or other fact, which is its subject-matter, but when so produced the document must be allowed to speak for itself. This section expresses the rule of English law that where the words of a document are free from ambiguity, and external circumstances do not create any doubt or difficulty as to the proper application of the words, the document is to be construed according to the plain common meaning of the words, and that in such case, extrinsic evidence for the purpose of explaining the document according to the supposed intention of the parties is inadmissible (5) Where the terms of a document are plain and

(1) Manuel Louis Kunha v. Juana Coelho, 31 M., 187 (1908).

(2) Bayabhai Sakalkar v. Haridas Ranchhordas, 40 B., 1 (1916)

(3) Huxtable (in re), 2 Ch., 793 (1902)

(4) Jarman on Wills, 6th Edition, p 516

(5) Shore v Wilson, 5 Scott, N R., 658, 1037 Cunningham, Ev., 267, Ram Lochun v. Unnopoorna Dossee, 7 W. R., 144 (1887); [Extrinsic evidence is not admissible to alter a written contract, or where the wording of the document is perfectly clear, to show that its meaning is different from what its words import; the same rule is laid down by Wood, V. C., as to wills—"When any subject is discovered which not only is within the words of the instrument, according to their natural construction but exhausts the whole of these cases this [illegible] and carry [illegible] furnishes [illegible] such cases the Court were to reject the only mode by which the meaning could be ascertained, viz., the resort to extrinsic circumstances, the instrument must become inoperative and void. As a minor evil, therefore, common sense and the law of England (which are seldom at variance) warrant the departure from the general rule, and call in the light of extrinsic evidence The books are full of instances sanctioned by the highest authorities both in Law and Equity. When the person or the thing is designated, on the face of the instrument by terms imperfect and equivocal, admitting either of no meaning at all by themselves, or of a variety of different meanings, referring tacitly, or expressly, for the ascertainment and completion of the meaning to extrinsic circumstances it has never been considered an objection to the reception of the evidence of those cir- [illegible] the face of the instrument. [illegible] and the Christian name is [illegible] it is decided that evidence [illegible] stock, that is ambiguous, [illegible] a merchant. So, with a [illegible] ll; but if by a jeweller, it would not pass those that he had in his shop. Thus, the same expressions may vary in meaning according to the circumstances of the testator."

"Ambiguous or defective" A document is not patently ambiguous because it is unintelligible to an uninstructed person, as to one uninstructed in technical terms of art or science, local peculiarity, obsolete meaning and the like. In such cases parol evidence is always admissible to ascertain the meaning of the terms used (see section 98 post). A document is ambiguous only, if found to be of uncertain meaning when persons of competent skill and information are unable to interpret it.(1) So also a distinction must be drawn between inaccuracy of expression and ambiguity. Language may be inaccurate without being ambiguous, and it may be ambiguous although perfectly accurate. If, for instance, a testator having only one house, a leasehold, devises it as his freehold house; the language is inaccurate but not ambiguous. If, however, a testator were to devise an estate "to J B, of Dale, the son of T," and there were two persons to whom the entire description accurately applied, this description, though accurate, would be ambiguous. It is obvious therefore that the whole of that class of cases in which an inaccurate description is found to be sufficient merely by the rejection of words of surplusage are cases in which no ambiguity really exists. The meaning is certain, notwithstanding the inaccuracy of the testator's language.(2)

Nothing in this Chapter is to affect the provisions of the Indian Succession Act as to the construction of wills.(3) The rule, however, under that Act is the same as that enacted by this section, for where there is an ambiguity or deficiency on the face of the will, no extrinsic evidence as to the intentions of the testator will be admitted (4) Where, however, any word material to the full expression of the meaning has been omitted, it may be supplied by the context. So if a testator gives a legacy of "five hundred" to his daughter A, and a legacy of "five hundred rupees" to his daughter B: A will take a legacy of five hundred rupees (5) It has been held that the Indian Trusts Act, section 5 applies to India the English rule according to which a legatee who undertakes to carry out a secret trust becomes a trustee for that purpose and such trust

(1) Norton, Ev., 280, Wigram on Extrinsic Evidence, 105

(2) Wigram on Extrinsic Evidence, cited in Norton, Ev, 281.

(3) S. 100, post.

(4) Act X of 1865 (Indian Succession), s. 68

(5) Ib., s 64

may be proved by oral evidence (1) In a case in the Bombay High Court, a testator had instructed his trustees to pay a sum of money to one of them to be used in accordance with private instructions which he was about to give him, and also to transfer certain shares to the person named in those instructions, whose name the said trustee would disclose It was contended that this amounted to an ambiguity or deficiency on the face of the will and that oral evidence was inadmissible; but it was held that such evidence was admissible for the purpose of proving material facts, and that the trustee was bound to disclose the private instructions, which would take effect as if they had been expressed in the will.(2) This ruling was partly based on an English decision in which it was held that a bequest for 'the charitable purposes agreed on between us' was good, and evidence of such purposes admissible, and that equity will intervene to prevent fraud by the legatee (3)

The present English view of the effect of the old distinction between latent and patent ambiguities in wills is discussed in Jarman on Wills (6th edition)(4) with this conclusion:—"We come therefore to the conclusion either that the distinction taken is an unsubstantial one, or that the proposition does in its second branch assert the admissibility of evidence to show the testator's intention (as distinct from the meaning of his written words) and that consequently, if true, its application must be confined to a special class of cases."

94. When language used in a document is plain in itself, and when it applies accurately to existing facts, evidence may not be given to show that it was not meant to apply to such facts.

Exclusion of evidence against application of document to existing facts.

Illustration.

A sells to B, by deed, 'my estate at Rampur containing 100 bighas.' A has an estate at Rampur containing 100 bighas. Evidence may not be given of the fact that the estate meant to be sold was one situated at a different place and of a different size

Principle.—See Notes post.

s. 3 ("Document") s. 3 ("Fact") s. 3 ("Evidence.")
Norton, Ev, 281; Field, Ev., 6th Ed., 284; Cunningham, Ev., 256

COMMENTARY.

Plain language accurately applying to existing facts.

Not only must a document be produced to prove its own contents or the disposition or other fact, which is its subject-matter, but when so produced the document must be allowed to speak for itself. This section expresses the rule of English law that where the words of a document are free from ambiguity, and external circumstances do not create any doubt or difficulty as to the proper application of the words, the document is to be construed according to the plain common meaning of the words, and that in such case, extrinsic evidence for the purpose of explaining the document according to the supposed intention of the parties is inadmissible (5) Where the terms of a document are plain and

(1) Manuel Louis Kunha v. Juana Coelho, 31 M., 187 (1908)

(2) Dayabhai Sakalkar v Haridas Ranchhordas, 40 B, 1 (1916).

(3) Hurtable (in re), 2 Ch, 793 (1902).

(4) Jarman on Wills, 6th Edition, p 516.

(5) Shore v Wilson, 5 Scott, N R, 658, 1037, Cunningham, Ev, 267; Ram Lochun v Unnopoorna Dossee, 7 W. R., 144 (1887); [Extrinsic evidence is not admissible to alter a written contract, or where the wording of the document is perfectly clear, to show that its meaning is different from what its words import; the same rule is laid down by Wood, V. C., as to wills—"When any subject is discovered which not only is within the words of the instrument, according to their natural construction, but exhausts the whole of these unambiguous, the intention of the parties to it should be collected from the language of the document i[illegible]

The true construction of [illegible] the words used, and, if the [illegible] they cannot be explained [illegible] reasoning from probabilities.(2) Extrinsic evidence is admissible only to explain a document, but not to contradict it. In the case, the subject of the section, no explanation is necessary. There is here evidently no patent ambiguity, for by the terms of the section the language used in the document is "plain in itself;" and there is as evidently no latent ambiguity, for the language used in the document "applies accurately to existing facts." It follows, therefore, that there is no ground for the admission of explanatory extrinsic evidence. On the other hand, the admission of evidence to show that the language was not meant to apply to existing facts would be in effect to contradict the express provision of the document.(3) The same rule applies with regard to construction simply. A deed must be construed according to the plain ordinary meaning of its terms; and words may not be imported into it, from any conjectural view of its intention which would have the effect of materially changing the nature of the estate thereby created.(4) This section is a qualification of the rule contained in section 92 sixth Proviso.(5) In a case in the Allahabad High Court where three villages had been mortgaged in 1861 and a second mortgage which was intended to affect them, but in which one of them was described by a wrong name, had been executed in 1873, it was held that the language of the second mortgage-deed was not plain and that this section did not debar the mortgagee from proving the mutual mistake in it, which was indicated by the first mortgage-deed.(6)

Evidence as to document unmeaning in reference to existing facts.

95. When language used in a document is plain in itself but is unmeaning in reference to existing facts, evidence may be given to show that it was used in a peculiar sense.

Illustration.

A sells to B, by deed, 'my house in Calcutta.'

A had no house in Calcutta, but it appears that he had a house at Howrah, of which B had been in possession since the execution of the deed.

These facts may be proved to show that the deed related to the house at Howrah.

Evidence as to application of language which can apply to one only of several persons.

96. When the facts are such that the language used might have been meant to apply to any one, and could not have been meant to apply to more than one of several persons or things, words, then the investigation must stop. You are bound to take the interpretation which entirely exhausts the whole of the series of expressions used by the testator and are not permitted to go any further." Webb v. Byng, 1 K. & J., 580. The rule which is enacted by this section has been more recently affirmed by the House of Lords in North-Eastern Railway v. Hastings (1900), L. R., A. C., 260.

---

(1) Babu v. Sitaram, 3 Bom L R., 768 (1901); see however notes to s. 92, Prov. 6, ante.

(2) Alagaiya Tiruchettambala v. Saminada Pillai, 1 Mad. H. C. R., 264 (1863); Baboo Ramluddun v. Ranee Koonwar, W. R., 1864, Act X, Rulings 22, 24; Biraj Nopani v. Pura Sundary Dasi, 42 C., 56 (1915).

(3) Norton, Ev., 281; Field, Ev., 6th Ed., 284.

(4) Mussamat Bhagbutti v. Choudry Bholanath, 2 I. A., 256 (1875).

(5) Ghellabai v. Nandubhai, 21 B., 335, 334 (1896), in which case it was held that the language of the document was not so plain in itself nor did it apply so accurately to existing facts as to prevent evidence being given evidence may be given of facts which show which of those persons or things it was intended to apply to.

(6) Mahabir Prosad v. Massiatullah, 38 A. 103 (1916).

Illustrations.

(a) A agrees to sell to B for Rs. 1,000, 'my white horse' A has two white horses. Evidence may be given of facts which show which of them was meant

(b) A agrees to accompany B to Haidarabad.
Evidence may be given of facts showing whether Haidarabad in the Dekkhan or Haidarabad in Sindh was meant Evidence as to application of language to one of two sets of facts, to neither of which the whole correctly applies.

97. When the language used applies partly to one set of existing facts, and partly to another set of existing facts, but the whole of it does not apply correctly to either, evidence may be given to show to which of the two it was meant to apply.

Illustration

A agrees to sell to B, 'my land at X in the occupation of Y.' A has land at X, but not in the occupation of Y, and he has land in the occupation of Y, but it is not at X. Evidence may be given of facts showing which he meant to sell.

Principle:—See Notes, post.

s. 3 ("Document.") s. 3 ("Fact.") s 3 ("Evidence.")

Steph. Dig., Art. 91, Cls. (5—8), pp. 170—174; Taylor, Ev., §§ 1202, 1206, 1209, 1215, 1218—1226, 1131; Goodeve, Ev, 396, 398; Wigram's Extrinsic Evidence, loc cit, Thayer's Cases on Evidence, 1014, et seq

COMMENTARY.

Latent ambiguity.

cistence uestion words doubt- llowed cases as those in which peculiar usage may afford a construction to a term different from its natural one (see section 98, post), would be instances of latent ambiguity, since the double use of the term would leave it open to the doubt in which of its two senses it was to be taken. It is not, however, to this class of cases that reference is now made; but to those in which the ambiguity is rather that of description, either equivocal itself from the existence of two subject-matters, or two persons both falling within its terms (section 96), or imperfect when brought to bear on any given person or thing(2) (sections 94, 97).

Equivocation (s. 96).

Section 94, ante, provides that when the language of a document is plain and applies accurately to existing facts, evidence may not be given to show that it was not meant to apply to such facts. The present section (99) so far modifies the rule as to provide that when language correctly describes two sets of circumstances and cannot have been intended to apply to both, evidence may be given to show to which set it was intended to apply.(3) Where a description applies equally to several different subjects, an "equivocation" (which is a form of latent ambiguity) arises, and extrinsic evidence, including declarations of the author of the instrument, is admissible to identify the subject

(1) Umesh Chandra v. Sageman, 5 B. L. R., 633, 634 (1869); s. c., 12 W. R., O. J., 2.

(2) Goodeve, Ev., 395.

(3) Cunningham Ev, 276.

intended(1): Provided that such subject cannot be identified from the instrument itself.(2) This proposition has been held to apply to the case of two persons bearing the same name as that mentioned in the document, although one has also additional names not mentioned therein.(3) In the Illustrations appended to the section the language is certain. The doubt as to which of two similar persons or things the language applies has been introduced by, and may therefore be removed by, extrinsic evidence. The section says evidence may be given of "facts," a term which will include statements.(4) And as already observed, even according to English law, declarations of intention on the part of the author of the instrument are admissible. To use the words of Lord Abinger(5), this evidence of intention can properly be admitted "where the meaning of the testator's words is neither ambiguous nor obscure, and where the devise is on the face of it perfect and intelligible, but, from some of the circumstances admitted in proof, an ambiguity arises, as to which of the two or more things, or which of the two or more persons (each answering to the words in the will) the testator intended to express. Thus, if a testator devise his manor of S to A B, and has two manors of North S and South S, it being clear he means to devise one only, whereas both are equally denoted by the words he has used, in that case there is, what Lord Bacon calls, 'an equivocation,' i.e., the words equally apply to either manor, and evidence of previous intention may be received to solve this latent ambiguity, for the intention shows what he meant to do; and when you know that, you immediately perceive that he has done it by the general words he has used, which, in their ordinary sense, may properly bear that construction." If the language of a document directly describes two sets of circumstances, but cannot have intended to apply to both, evidence may be given to show to which it is intended to apply.(6)

The Indian Succession Act embodies the same rule as that contained in section 96 of this Act; enacting that when the words of a will are unambiguous, but it is found by extrinsic evidence that they admit of applications, one only of which can have been intended by the testator, extrinsic evidence may be taken to show which of these applications was intended.(7) Thus, a man having two cousins of the name of Mary, bequeaths a sum of money to "his cousin Mary." It appears that there are two persons each answering the description in the will. That description, therefore, admits of two applications, only one of which can have been intended by the testator. Evidence is admissible to show which of the two applications was intended.(8)

Imperfect description (ss. 95, 97).

As section 96 deals with equivocal descriptions, so sections 95, 97, may be said to deal with imperfect descriptions. Both of the latter sections refer to latent ambiguities. Section 97 is only an extension and application of the rule laid down in section 95.(9) The latter section formulates the general rule with regard to imperfect descriptions embodied in the maxim falsa demonstratio non nocet (a false description does not vitiate the document), while the former deals with a particular form of imperfect description, namely, when such description applies to a double and not to a single set of facts. There may be enough of description in the instrument to have indicated some specific thing as the object

(1) Doe v Hiscocks, 5 M. & W., 363; Charter v. Charter, L. R., 7 H. L., 364; Taylor, Ev., §§ 1207, 1208; Doe v. Needs, 2 M. & W., 129; Umesh Chandra v Sageman, 5 B. L. R., 633, 634 (1869).

(2) Doe v Westlake, 4 B. & Ald., 57; Webber v. Corbett, L. R., 16 Eq., 515.

(3) Bennett v. Marshall, 2 K. & J., 740; Webber v. Corbett, L. R., 16 Eq., 515; Doe v. Allen, 12 A. & E., 451. In re Wolverton, 7 Ch. D., 197.

(4) S. 3, ante

(5) In Doe v. Hiscocks, 5 M. & W., at pp. 368, 369

(6) Naga Cho v. Mi Se Mi, 10 Bur. L. T., 245.

(7) Act X of 1865, s. 67, extended to Hindu Wills, by Act XXI of 1870, s. 2.

(8) Ib., Illust.

(9) Cunningham, Ev., 276.

of its operation, or some given individual as the object of its provisions; but it might turn out, on seeking to apply the instrument to its supposed subject-matter or object, that, from an imperfection of description there was neither subject nor object in exact correspondence with it: so that it would be uncertain on what, or in whose favour, the instrument was designed to operate. Thus where a deed of release was silent as to the claim released, it was held that under section 95 extrinsic evidence was admissible to prove what claim was intended to be released by it (1) And thus where in the case of a devise of Trogue's farm "in the occupation of M," the testator had a farm called Trogue's, but a portion of it only was in M's occupation, the farm was allowed to pass.(2) In such a case the extrinsic circumstances create the uncertainty, and the question which extrinsic circumstances create, extrinsic evidence is admitted to clear up. The distinction is clear between clearing up an ambiguity and creating a subject.(3) The cases under this heading are (a) where a description is partly correct and partly incorrect (section 95); and (b) where part of a description applies to one subject-matter and part to another (section 97). If the document applies in part but not with accuracy to the circumstances of the case, the Court may draw inferences from those circumstances as to the meaning of the document, whether there is more than one, or only one thing or person to whom, or to which, the inaccurate description may apply.(4) In the case of an ambiguity in the description of land in a mortgage deed it is open to a party to show by other evidence what land was actually covered by the deed.(5) According to English law(6) declarations of intention on the part of the author of the instrument cannot be given in evidence in the cases above mentioned. But the propriety of a rule which excludes such evidence in the cases dealt with by sections 95 and 97, but admits it in the case dealt with by section 96 has been doubted; it being said that the evidence should be admitted or excluded in all cases alike. (7) No such distinction between declarations of intention and other evidence is observed by this Act(8), and therefore in all cases where extrinsic evidence is admissible, whether under sections 95 and 97 or section 96, declarations of intention will be admissible (9) When declarations of intention are receivable in evidence, their admissibility does not depend upon the time when they were made. Certainly contemporaneous declarations will, cœteris paribus, be entitled to greater weight than those made before or after the execution; but in point of law no distinction can be drawn between them, unless the subsequent declarations, instead of relating to what the declarant had done, or had intended to do, by an instrument, were simply to refer to what he intended to do, or wished to be done, at the time of the speaking (10)

Description partly correct, partly incorrect (s. 95).

When a description is partly correct and partly incorrect (section 95), and the former part is sufficient to identify the subject-matter intended, while the latter does not apply to any subject, the erroneous part will be rejected on the maxim falsa demonstratio non nocet cum de corpore constat(11) (a false description will not hurt when it can co-exist with the subject itself) (v. supra), unless

---

(1) Abraham v The Lodge "Goodwill" (1910), 34 M, 156.

(2) Goodtitle v Southern, 1 M & S, 299

(3) Goodeve, Ev, 395, 396.

(4) Steph Dig, Art 91, cl. (7)

(5) Ram Charan Das v Arsad Ali, 43 I C, 721.

(6) Ib, Taylor, Ev, §§ 1202, 1206, 1218 See note (4), ante.

(7) Steph. Dig, pp 170—174.

(8) It is to be noted, however, that while s. 96 says "evidence may be given of facts" (which would include statements under s 3), ss. 95, 97 say "evidence may be given to show" It is conceived, however, that this verbal variation does not indicate any real difference.

(9) Field, Ev., 6th Ed, 284; Cunningham, Ev, 275—277.

(10) Taylor, Ev, § 1209, and cases there cited.

(11) Taylor, Ev., §§ 1218—1223. (For an application of this maxim, see Cowen v. Truefitt, Ld, 1898, 2 Ch., 551).

it is introduced by way of exception or limitation.(1) The principle is that so much of the description as has no application being laid aside as mere surplusage, what remains is sufficient to identify the thing really meant. The words "in Calcutta" in the illustration have no application. The words "my house" have application when it is shown that A had a house at Howrah.(2) The description may not accurately specify even one person or thing; that is the description of the subject intended may be true in part but not true in every particular. But the instrument will not in consequence of the inaccuracy be regarded as inoperative. If after rejecting so much of the description as is false, the remainder will enable the Court to ascertain with legal certainty the subject-matter to which the instrument really applies, it will be allowed to take effect upon the principle of the maxim above cited. But the rule which rejects erroneous descriptions which are not substantially important, can, however, only be applied [illegible] nt plainly (3)

Thus by a devise o[illegible] rm, now in the occupation of C," the wl[illegible] in C's occupation.(4) So also it was held that a devise of all the testator's freehold houses in Aldersgate Street, when in fact he had only leasehold houses there, was, in substance and effect, a devise of his houses in that street, the word "freehold" being rejected as surplusage (5) And when a sale-certificate described as a jotedari interest what was really a shikmi taluk, this misdescription was held not to prejudice the purchaser's title.(6) A mortgage-deed of certain bhagdari lands stated that "all the properties appertaining to the entire bhaq," were thereby mortgaged to the plaintiff. The bhag comprised (inter alia) four gabhans (building-sites). But the clause which set forth the particulars of the property mortgaged thereby, specified only two gabhans, one only of which belonged to the bhaq and the other did not. The deed then proceeded:—"According to these particulars, lands, houses and gabhans, barn yards, wells, tanks, padars and pasture land also, together with whatsoever may appertain to the bhaq—all the properties appertaining to the whole bhag have been mortgaged and delivered into your possession............There is no other property appertaining to the said bhag of which mention is not made here." It was held that the particulars were "the leading description," and the supplementary description of them as constituting the entire bhag should be regarded as "falsa demonstratio."(7) A further illustration is afforded by a class of cases, of not infrequent occurrence in India, where there is a description of land in a conveyance, lease, or other document, such a description setting forth the boundaries and then specifying the quantity, as so many acres, bighas or the like. Here the maxim falsa demonstratio non nocet applies; it is considered to be a mere false description, if there is an error in the quantity; and the land within the boundaries passes by the conveyance or lease, whether it be less or more than the quantity specified.(8) And in the case cited it has been held

(1) Taylor, Ev, § 1224

(2) Field, Ev, 6th Ed 286.

(3) Taylor, Ev., §§ 1218—1220

(4) Goodtitle v. Southern, 1 M & S., 299, cited in Umesh Chandra v. Sageman, 5 B. L. R., 633, 634 (1869), and see West v. Lawday, 1 H L. C, 384; Travers v. Blandell, 6 Ch D, 436, cited and followed in Tribhobandas Jekisondas v. Krishnaram Kuberram, 18 B, 283, 288 (1893).

(5) Day v. Trig, 1 P. Wms, 286; and see other cases cited in Taylor, Ev., § 1221.

(6) Shaikh Kaleemooddeen v. Ashruf Ali, 19 W. R., 276 (1873); Taraknath Chuckerbutty v. Joy Soonduree, 21 W. R., 93 (1874).

(7) Tribhoobandas Jekisondas v Krishnaram Kuberram, 18 B, 283 (1893).

(8) Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 286, Pahalwan Singh v. Maharajah Muhessur, 9 B. L. R., 150, 169 (1871); 1 W. R, P. C. 5; Sheeb Chunder v Brojonath Aditya, 14 W. R., 301 (1870); Modee Huddin v. Sandes, 12 W. R., 439 (1869); Kazee Abdool v. Buroda Kant, 15 W. R, 394 (1871), Zeenut Ali v. Ram Doyal, 18 W. R, 25 (1872); Esan Chunder v. Protap Chunder, 20 W. R., 224 (1873); Virjivandas Madhabdas v. Mahomed Ali, 5 B, 208 (1880); see Taylor, Ev., §§ 1220, 1221.

by the Privy Council that extrinsic evidence is not admissible to prove that the area which a kabuliyat purported to demise exceeded the quantity of land within the specified boundaries (1) Where a testator made a bequest to "A B my aurasa son" knowing that A B was not his aurasa son, it was held, that the misdescription was immaterial and that A B took the bequest.(2) And where a sale-deed described the land sold by wrong survey numbers, extrinsic evidence was admitted to show that the lands intended to be sold and actually sold and delivered were lands bearing different survey numbers (3)

Part of description applying to one subject-matter, part to another (s. 97).

Though false statements introduced into an instrument by way of affirmation only, may, as has been seen, be rejected, provided the remaining description be sufficient to identify the person or thing intended ; yet they cannot be disregarded if they have been used by way of exception or limitation · because in this latter case, it is obvious that they were intended to have a material operation. Moreover, if there be one subject-matter as to which all the demonstrations in a written instrument are true, and another as to which part are true and part false, the instrument will be intended to contain words to pass only that subject-matter as to which all the circumstances are true (4)

[illegible] l part to another [illegible] hich the language [illegible] gatee may be so [illegible] to one claimant the remainder may apply to another So where a testator devised an estate to his nephew for life with remainder over to "Elizabeth Abbott, a natural daughter of E A of G, single woman who had formerly been in his service," and it appeared that at the date of the will E A the mother was the wife of J C, [illegible] born before [illegible] ervice and of [illegible] ed Margaret, who was born four years subsequently to her leaving the service, and was a legitimate daughter by C, and it further appeared that the testator had wished his nephew to marry his servant, that he was aware she had had a natural child, and that he had treated her kindly since its birth and up to date of the will ; but no proof was given that he knew whether the natural child was a boy or a girl ; it was held that the testator meant to provide for his nephew's natural child by his servant, Elizabeth Abbott, and that the mistake of the name and sex was not sufficient to defeat the devise (5)

Formerly the law attached somewhat greater weight to the name than to the description of the legatee, a doctrine which is embodied in the maxim veritas nominis tollit errorem demonstrationis. But it is doubtful whether this rule that the name in such cases is to prevail over the description, would be strictly followed now ; the modern inclination of the Courts being to free themselves when necessary from artificial rules and to decide the point purely by preponderance of probability.(6)

Summary

The following has been stated to be a summary of the English law upon these points(7) :—" From what precedes, the following rules may be collected :—

---

(1) Durga Prosad Singh v Rajendra Narain Bagchi, P C, 41 C, 493 (1913); 18 C. W. N, 66; 19 C L. J, 95.

(2) Court of Wards v Venkata Surya, 20 M., 167, 185—188 (1896); affirmed, 22 M., 383 (1898).

(3) Karuppa Goundan v. Thoppala Goundan, 30 M., 307 (1907); and Santya v. Savitri, 4 Bom. L. R., 871; Rangasami Ayyangar v. Souri Ayyangar, 39 M., 792 (1916); Mahadeva Ayyar v. Gopala Ayyar, 34 M, 51 (1911).

(4) Taylor, Ev, § 1224; and cases there cited

(5) Ryall v Hannam, 10 Beav., 536; Taylor, Ev., § 1216.

(6) Taylor, Ev, § 1215; and cases there cited; Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 588 and Cloak v Hammond, 34 Ch. D, 255; and see Act X of 1865 (Indian Succession), s 630

(7) Taylor, Ev, § 1226.

First, where in a written instrument the description of the person or thing intended is applicable with legal certainty to each of several subjects, extrinsic evidence, including proof of declarations of intention, is admissible, to establish which of such subjects was intended by the author.(1)

Secondly, if the description of the person or thing be partly applicable and [illegible] s, though extrinsic evidence of the [illegible] for the purpose of ascertaining to [illegible] yet evidence of the author's decla- [illegible]

Thirdly, if the description be partly correct and partly incorrect, and the correct part be sufficient of itself to enable the Court to identify the subject intended, while the incorrect part is inapplicable to any subject, parol evidence will be admissible to the same extent as in the last case, and the instrument will be rendered operative by rejecting the erroneous statements (3)

Fourthly, if the description be wholly inapplicable to the subject intended or said to be intended by it, evidence cannot be received to prove whom or what the author really intended to describe.(4)

Fifthly, if the language of a written instrument, when interpreted according to its primary meaning, be insensible with reference to extrinsic circumstance, collateral facts may be resorted to, in order to show that in some secondary sense of the words, and in one in which the author meant to use them, the instrument may have a full effect (5)

First rule here given corresponds with section 96; second rule with section 97; third and fifth rules correspond with section 95; and fourth rule corresponds with section 94; while no distinction is made in any case between declaration of intention and other evidence.(6)

The Indian Succession Act. The Indian Succession Act provides a similar rule enacting that, if the thing which the testator intended to bequeath can be sufficiently identified from the description of it given in the will, but some parts of the description do not apply, such parts of the description shall be rejected as erroneous and the bequest shall take effect (7) So also where the words used in the will to designate or describe a legatee or a class of legatees, sufficiently show what is meant, an error in the name or description will not prevent the legacy from taking effect A mistake in the name of a legatee may be corrected by a description of him, and a mistake in the description of a legatee may be corrected by the name."(8)

Evidence as to meaning of illegible characters, etc. 98. Evidence may be given to show the meaning of illegible or not commonly intelligible characters, of foreign, obsolete, technical, local and provincial expressions, of abbreviations and of words used in a peculiar sense.

Illustration.

A, a sculptor, agrees to sell to B 'all my models' A has both models and modelling tools Evidence may be given to show which he meant to sell.

Principle.—This description of evidence is admissible in order to enable the Court to understand the meaning of the words contained in the instrument

(1) Wigr., Wills, 160.
(2) Doe v. Hiscocks, supra.
(3) Wigr, Wills, 67—70.
(4) Ib, 133.
(5) Doe v. Hiscocks, supra; Wigr., Wills, 11, cited; Taylor, Ev, § 1131.
(6) Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 236, 237.
(7) Act X of 1865, s. 65, and see s 66, ib, both applying to Wills of Hindus; Act XXI of 1870, s 2.
(8) Ib., s 63, applicable to Hindu Wills Act XXI of (1870), s. 2.

itself by themselves and without reference to the extrinsic facts on which the instrument is intended to operate.(1) See Note, post.

s. 3 (Evidence.") s. 49 (Opinion as to meaning of words or terms)

Steph Dig., Art. 91, cl 2, Taylor, Ev, § 1162, Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed, 571-593; Rogers Expert Testimony, § 118.

COMMENTARY.

Meaning of characters, expressions, abbreviations and words

The principle upon which words are to be construed in instruments is very plain—where there is a popular and common word in an instrument, that word must be construed primâ facie in its popular and common sense. If it is a word of a technical or legal character, it must be construed according to its technical or legal meaning. If it is a word which is of a technical and scientific character, then it must be construed according to that which is its primary meaning, ... ut before evidence can be given ... rt must be satisfied from the ... the case, that the word ought to be construed, not in its popular or primary signification, but according to its secondary intention.(2) And in England it has been held that evidence that expressions were used in a technical sense ought not to be admitted without a distinct averment as to the particular words to which evidence is proposed to be directed and as to the technical or trade meaning which it is sought to attribute to them.(3)

In the case cited it was held that in construing wills the test to be applied is what did the testator mean having regard to the words used, and that technical words, or words of known legal import, must have their legal effect even though the testator uses inconsistent words, unless those inconsistent words are of such a nature as to make it perfectly clear that the testator did not mean to use the terms in their proper sense.(4)

Evidence may not be given to show that common words, the meaning of which is plain and which do not appear from the context to have been used in a peculiar sense, were in fact so used. The general rule is that the meaning of an English word, not a technical term, cannot be made known by an examination of witnesses. It has, therefore, been held error in an action for libel to allow a physician to testify as to the meaning of the word "malpractice."(5) It may happen, however, that from some peculiarity of the character in which it is written, the instrument is itself illegible to the Court called upon to expound it, without the aid of persons skilled in decipherment; its language may be foreign to the Court; or it may contain terms as being either of an obsolete character, or those of abbreviation, art, local or mercantile usage—which may not be understood by the Judges; or which having assigned to them by peculiar usage an interpretation different from their ordinary and popular one, may be themselves equivocal. Accordingly, until before the Court in a form deciphered, translated, or, as to the meaning of particular characters or expressions, explained, it would have no means of adjudication. Until brought before it by interpretation in a living shape, it would be a dead letter only which the Court would be called on to expound; and it is obvious, accordingly,

(1) Goodeve, Ev, 374, citing Shore v. Wilson, post

(2) Holt & Co v Collyer, 16 Ch D, 718, 520, per Fry, J: see Rayner v. Rayner (1904), 1 Ch, 176, cited in notes to s 92, Prov. 6, ante.

(3) Sutton v. Ciceri (1890), 15 A C., 144, Taylor, Ev, § 1131.

(4) Wilson v. Oakes (1908), 31 M, 283; following Lalit Mohan Singh v. Chukkun Lal Roy, P. C., 24 C, 834.

(5) Steph Dig, Art 91, cl 2, Rogers, op cit, § 118.

that to this extent at all events parol evidence must, from the very necessity of the case, be admitted. It is not because the language is ambiguous, however, but because it is unknown, that for this purpose evidence is received,—received not as proof of any particular intention in its use, but simply to affix an interpretation to characters or expressions used.(1) The question whether language is ambiguous depends upon the question whether it is ambiguous when addressed to a person competent to interpret language. Words cannot be ambiguous because they are unintelligible to a man who cannot read, and within the same reason words cannot be ambiguous merely because the Court which is called upon to explain them may be ignorant of a particular fact, art, or science which was familiar to the person who used the words, and a knowledge of which is therefore necessary to a right understanding of the words he has used (2)

The principle is thus stated by Tindal, C. J., in the case of Shore v. Wilson(3): "Where any doubt arises upon the true sense and meaning of the words themselves, or any difficulty as to their application under the surrounding circumstances, the sense and meaning of the language may be investigated and ascertained by evidence dehors the instrument itself; for reason and common-sense agree, that by no other means can the language of the instrument be made to speak the real mind of the party. Such investigation does of necessity take place in the interpretation of instruments written in a foreign language, —in the case of ancient instruments, where, by the lapse of time and change of manners, the words have acquired in the present age a different meaning from that which they bore when originally employed,—in cases where terms of art or science occur,—in mercantile contracts which, in many instances, use a peculiar language, employed by those only who are conversant in trade or commerce; and in other instances in which the words, besides their general common meaning, have acquired, by custom or otherwise, a well-known peculiar idiomatic meaning in the particular country in which the party using them was dwelling, or in the particular society of which he formed a member, and in which he passed his life. In all these cases, evidence is admitted to expound the real meaning of the language used in the instrument, in order to enable the Court or Judge to construe the instrument, and to carry such real meaning into effect.

In the same case, the law is thus stated by Lord Wensleydale in a judgment which marks the distinction which exists between the interpretation of instruments and their application to facts. "I apprehend that there are two descriptions of evidence (the only two which bear upon the subject of the present enquiry), and which are clearly admissible in every case for the purpose of enabling a Court to construe any written instrument, and to apply it practically. In the first place, there is no doubt that not only where the language of the instrument is such as the Court does not understand, it is competent to receive evidence of the proper meaning of that language, as when it is written in a foreign tongue; but it is also competent where technical words or peculiar terms, or indeed any expressions, are used, which, at the time the instrument was written, had acquired an appropriate meaning either generally or by local usage, or amongst particular classes. This description of evidence is admissible, in order to enable the Court to understand the meaning of the words contained in the instrument itself, by themselves, and without reference to the extrinsic facts on which the instruments are intended to operate. For the purpose of applying the instrument to the facts, and determining what passes by it, and who take an interest under it, a second description of evidence is admissible(4), viz., every material fact that will enable the Court to identify the person or thing mentioned in the instrument, and to place the Court, whose

(1) Goodeve, Ev, 371, 372.
(2) Wigram, Extrinsic Ev, p. 105.
(3) 9 C. & F., 555
(4) See s. 92, cl. (6), ante.

province it is to declare the meaning of the words of the instrument, as near as may be in the situation of the parties to it "

To the above citations may be added the short and terse statement by Gibbs C J, in a case on a charterparty involving the meaning of the term 'privilege' (a sum in lieu of privilege having been reserved to the captain) where he says: "Evidence may be received to show the sense in which the mercantile part of the nation use the term 'privilege'—just as you would look into a dictionary to ascertain the meaning of a word; and it must be taken to have been used by the parties in its mercantile and established sense."(1)

Illegible or not commonly intelligible characters.

This might arise either from the use of cypher, or shorthand or other peculiarity of character as the medium of expression; or it might be merely bad writing.(2) Referring to a case of cypher, Alderson, B., observed: "Words on paper are but the means by which a person expresses his meaning, and shorthand is, in this respect, like longhand, and equally admits of interpretation"(3) Experts have been allowed to be called to decipher abbreviated and elliptical entries in the book of a deceased notary.(4)

A word may be both descriptive and distinctive. If a word is primâ facie the name or description of an article, evidence will be admitted that it is also generally associated with the name of a particular manufacturer. But such evidence will not be conclusive that the word has become a distinctive one which cannot be used of the same article when made by others without risk of deception.(5)

Foreign obsolete, technical, local and provincial expressions and words used in a peculiar sense.

The translation in the High Courts of documents in the languages of this country, affords familiar illustration on the point of language foreign to the Court.(6) Makin[illegible]ying to find out in a dictionary the [illegible] f the words of the document; a tru[illegible] that which is the exact effect of the language used under the circumstances Not only is a competent translator required, but if the words in the foreign country had in business a particular meaning different from their ordinary meaning an expert will be admitted to say what that meaning is.(7) But it is not competent for a witness called to translate writing in a foreign language to give any opinion as to its construction, that being a question for the Court.(8) The opinion of experts is not binding on the jury, for it is with the jury and not with these witnesses that the determination of the case rests. The weight due to the testimony of these witnesses is a matter to be determined by the jury, and that weight will be proportioned to the soundness of the reasons adduced in its support.(9) A question has been raised as to whether official or Court translations are conclusive, or whether it is open to the parties to question their correctness and give evidence of the true translation (10) Such evidence has,

(1) Birch v. Deypester, Starkie, 210; Smith v. Ludha Ghella, 17 B, 144 (1892) See further as to wills, ss 70, 86, 87, Act X of 1865

(2) Goodeve, Ev, 376.

(3) Clayton v Nugent, 13 M. & W, 206

(4) Sheldon v Benham, 4 Hill, 129 (Amer.), cited in Rogers op cit., p. 276.

(5) Burberry's v. Cording & Co. (1909), Times L. R., 576

(6) Goodeve, Ev., 376

(7) Chatenay v. Brazilian Submarine Telegraph Co., 1891, 1 Q. B, 79, 92 See observation in R v. Tilak, 22 B, 143 (1897).

(8) So in Stearine v Heintzman, 17 C. B, N S, 56, a Belgian Consul was called to translate the following —"Les informations sur Gustave Sichel sont telles que nous ne pouvons lui livrer les 2,500 caisses que contre connaissement Si vous voulez, nous vous enverrons les connaissements, et vous ne les lui delivrerez que contre payement" He was asked to what the article "les" referred, and said it was applicable to the "connaissements" This was held to be error. See also Di Sora v. Phillips, 10 H L. Ca, 624.

(9) R. v. Kali Prasanna, 1 C. W. N., 465, 479 (1897).

(10) Nistarini Dassi v Nundo Lall, Cal. H Ct, 16th May, 1900, Suit No 311 of 1898. The decision on the preliminary however, on other occasions been admitted. So in the cases undermentioned(1) the accuracy of one of the Court translations was impugned, and in another(2) a translation of the defamatory matter prepared by the Court interpreter was put in by the prosecution The Court interpreter was examined at the instance of the Court, and was cross-examined by the accused. He was also corroborated by another witness. A translation of the poem was also put in by the defence, who as well as the prosecution, examined experts as to the meaning of the words used. Again, in the civil suit of Mahatala Bibee v. Haleem-uz-zaman(3) the official translation of the words "mukadarat mahalum" in a Persian document being impugned, both the Court interpreter and non-official expert witnesses were permitted to testify as to the correct translation of these terms. It is submitted that the true rule to be applied is that in the absence of any specific issue being raised as to the accuracy of a Court translation, such translation is binding, not because it is the act of a Court official, but because evidence is not generally admissible on points not specifically put in issue by the parties. But it is open to the latter to raise such an issue. If it were otherwise, the recovery of an estate worth a crore of rupees, or the innocence of a party charged with a crime, might be made to depend upon the decision of an official who, though in most instances both competent and honest, might in a particular case be wanting in either of these respects.

As regards obsolete expressions, the case of Shore v. Wilson(4) may be taken as an example. Here it being necessary in modern times to put a construction upon an ancient charitable foundation, and as to who were designed to take under the terms "Godly preachers of Christ's Holy Gospel;" evidence was allowed to be given from history, contemporaneous with the deed, of the existence of a particular sect assuming to themselves that denomination and of the founder's connection with them.

Local and provincial usage is admissible to explain local and provincial expressions. So in the case(5) of a lease of a rabbit-warren where the lessee covenanted to leave on the warren at the expiration of the term 10,000 rabbits, the lessor paying for them £60 per thousand; evidence was received to show that, according to the local usage of that part of the country, 1,000 as applied to rabbits meant 1,200. So also evidence has been allowed to show that "18 pockets of Kent hops at 100*s*." meant at 100*s*. per cwt.(6) Evidence has been admitted to show that the word "year" in a theatrical contract meant those [illegible] atre was open.(7) In mercantile contracts [illegible] usage is admissible to annex unexpressed [illegible] has frequently been also admitted to explain the meaning of words, as for instance, whether "months" mean "calendar or lunar months"(9); to explain the word "days" in a bill-of-lading(10); and that "October" in a certain contract of Marine Insurance argument in [illegible] in 26 C., [illegible] the Court, [illegible] 891. [illegible] the High Court, as also Major Jarrett, Moulvie Kabeeroodin Ahmed and Abdul Kazi, and on the other side, Boodin Ahmed and Mahomed Yusuff.

---

(4) 9 C. & F., 355.

(5) Smith v. Wilson, 3 B & Ad., 728

(6) Spicer v. Cooper, 1 Q. & B., 424. Grant v. Maddox, 15 M. & W., 737.

[illegible] 92, Prov. 5, ante.

[illegible] v. Young, 1 Esp., 186. Simp- [illegible] 11 Q. B., 32

[illegible] v. Reiberg, 3 Esp., 121; [illegible] 16 Q. B. D., 67;

[illegible] Co. v Dempsey, 1 C.

shall be given to A. This could not be shown as between A and B, but it might be shown by C, if it affected his interests.

Principle.—The rule excluding parol evidence to vary or contradict written instruments is applicable only in suits between the parties to the instruments and their representatives. These latter are to blame if the writing contains what was not intended, or omits what it should have contained. But third persons are not to be prejudiced by things recited in writing contrary to the truth through the ignorance, carelessness, or fraud of the parties, or thereby precluded from proving the truth, however contradictory it may be to the written statement.(1) This section is an enabling section as section 92 is a disqualifying section (2) See Note, post.

s 3 ("Document") s. 3 ("Fact.") s 3 ("Evidence.") s 92 (Exclusion of evidence of oral agreement)

Steph. Dig, Art. 92; Taylor, Ev, § 1149; Greenleaf, Ev., § 279; Wharton, Ev, § 923.

COMMENTARY.

Who may give evidence varying documents

In a dispositive document, so far as concerns the parties to it, the settled terms cannot, as has already been seen, be varied by parol because those terms were mutually accepted for the purpose of disposing of rights in certain relations A document may, however, be dispositive as to the parties and non-dispositive as to all others The party who utters a deed, prepares it deliberately in respect to all persons who through it may enter into business relations with him; but other persons are not contemplated by him, nor is the writing meant to bind him as to such persons who would in no way be bound to him. In respect to strangers, documents have usually no binding force, and hence a stranger against whom a document is brought to bear on trial may show, by parol, mistakes in such writing. The rule forbidding the variation of writings by parol, applies only to parties and privies, and nothing in the rule protects them from attack by strangers.(3) This section enables strangers to an instrument to prove the oral nature of the transaction by oral evidence. When therefore A purported [illegible] it was open to a creditor of X the hu[illegible] ality a sale to X and was [illegible] of a decree obtained against him.(4) It has been held in America, that even a party executing such a writing may prove by parol its mistake, when the issue is with a third person.(5) Thus where the question was, whether A, a pauper, was settled in the Parish of Cheadle, and a deed of conveyance to which A was a party was produced, purporting to convey land to A for a valuable consideration; the parish, appealing against the order, was allowed to call A as a witness, to prove that no consideration passed.(6)

Doubts have been expressed(7) whether under this section, the right conferred on persons, other than the parties to a document or their representatives, of giving evidence of a contemporaneous oral agreement "varying" the document, m[illegible]" in contradistinction to "[illegible] its terms. There is no reas[illegible] which is certainly unknown to English law, was intended. The word "varying" was no doubt employed as embracing (as in fact it does) both contradictions,

(1) Taylor, Ev., § 1149
(2) Krishnaswami Aiyar v. Mangalathammal, 53 I. C., 243.
(3) Wharton, Ev, § 923.
(4) Jagat Mohini v. Rakhal Das, 2 C. L. J., 7 (1905).
(5) Wharton, Ev, § 923
(6) R v. Cheadle, 8 B. & Ad., 338; Steph. Dig, Art. 92, ill (a); ib, p 190
(7) Field, Ev., 441; ib, 6th Ed., 287.

additions and subtractions.(1) It has been recently held(2) that the word "varying" in the section covers the same ground as the words "contradicting, varying, adding to or subtracting from" in section 92 ante.

100. Nothing in this Chapter contained shall be taken to affect any of the provisions of the Indian Succession Act (X of 1865) as to the construction of wills.

Saving of provisions of Indian Succession Act relating to wills.

Indian Succession Act.

The provisions referred to in this section are contained in Part XI of the Indian Succession Act (X of 1865), sections 61—77, 82, 83, 85, 88—103, of which part have been extended by Act XXI of 1870 (Hindu Wills Act) to the Wills of Hindus, Jains, Sikhs, and Buddhists in the territories subject to the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, and the towns of Madras and Bombay. It is therefore only to Wills other than those the subject of these Acts, and to instruments other than Wills, that the provisions of the present Chapter absolutely and unreservedly apply.(3) The section does not, however, declare that the present Chapter shall not apply at all in other cases, but only that nothing therein shall be taken to affect(4) any of the provisions in the Acts abovementioned.

---

(1) Cunningham Ev., Notes to s. 92. See ante, p. 610 and Pathammal v. Syed Falai, 27 M., 329 (1903).

(2) Krishnaswami Aiyar v. Mangalathammal, 53 I. C., 243

(3) For construction of Khoja Wills see Hassonally Meledina v. Popatlal Parbhudas, 37 B., 211 (1913)

(4) As to the meaning of the word "affect," see Administrator-General, Bengal v. Prem Lal, 21 C., 774 (1894).

PART III.

PRODUCTION AND EFFECT OF EVIDENCE.

In Part I, the Act dealt with the material of belief or the facts which may be proved, and in Part II with the mode in which that material must be brought before the Court, viz., by oral or documentary evidence according to the circumstances of the case.

From the question of the proof of facts, the Act passes to the question of the manner in which the proof is to be produced, and this is treated under the following heads: (i) burden of proof, (ii) estoppel; (iii) witnesses and their re-examination; (iv) improper admission and rejection of evidence.

In the first place, the Act deals with the question as to which of the parties before the Court is bound to supply the evidence which is to form the material of belief on the question at issue, or in other words on which of the parties the burden of proof lies. With regard to the burden of proof the Act lays down the broad rules well established in English law that the general burden of proof is on the party who, if no evidence at all were given, would fail, and that the burden of proving any particular fact is on the party who affirms it. After laying down the general principles which regulate the burden of proof (sections 101—106), the Act proceeds to enumerate the cases in which the burden of proof is determined in particular cases, not by the relation of the parties to the cause but by presumptions (sections 107—111). It notices two cases of conclusive presumptions (sections 112, 113), and finally declares in section 114, that the Court may, in all cases whatever, draw from the facts before it whatever inferences it thinks just. In respect of presumptions, the framers of the Act have not followed the precedent of the New York Code in laying down a long list of presumptions, being of opinion that it is better in this matter not to fetter the discretion of the Judges. A few of such presumptions have been admitted to a place in the Code, as in the absence of an express rule, the Judges might feel embarrassed. These are—the presumptions relating to the continuance of life, partnership, agency, and tenancy; of ownership, good faith, legitimacy and cession of territory. But the terms of section 114 are such as to reduce to the position of mere maxims which are to be applied to facts by the Courts in their discretion a large number of presumptions to which English law gives, to a greater or less extent, an artificial value. Nine of the most important of them are given by way of illustration.(1)

Of the two topics, of the production and effect of evidence, each legitimately embraces matters other than those dealt with in this portion of the Act. Thus the rules enforcing the attendance of witnesses and production of documents fall under the head of the first topic, and are dealt with by the Civil Procedure Code. And the subject of the effect of evidence would strictly include considerations as to the weight to be given to evidence were it possible, as it is not, that the weight of evidence could be regulated by precise rules as the admissibility of evidence may be.(2)

---

(1) Draft Report of the Select Committee.—Gazette of India, July 1st, 1871, Part V, p. 273; Steph. Introd., 174, 175; Cunningham, Ev., 52 As to presumptions v. ante, notes to s 4.

(2) v ante, Introduction, Kishori Lal Sircar's Evidence Act, 3, 24, 218.

This portion of the Act merely deals with the effect of evidence arising from the existence of presumptions as shifting the burden of proof, or as conclusive of facts, and from estoppels as precluding the admission of evidence upon the particular matter in respect of which the estoppels operate. Lastly, the Act deals with the effect of the improper admission or exclusion of evidence. The subject of the effect of evidence as produced by estoppels is dealt with by Chapter VIII. The subject of estoppels differs from that of presumptions in the circumstances that an estoppel is a personal disqualification laid upon a person peculiarly circumstanced from proving peculiar facts; whereas a presumption is a rule that particular inferences shall be drawn from particular facts, whoever proves them. Much of the English learning connected with estoppels is extremely intricate and technical, but this arises principally from two causes, the peculiarities of English special pleading, and the fact that the effect of prior judgments is usually treated by the English text-writers as a branch of the law of evidence and not as a branch of the law of Civil Procedure.(1)

Chapters IX and X of the Act consist of a reduction to express propositions of rules as to the examination of witnesses, which are well established and understood. In these rules as to the examination of witnesses, the Act has not materially varied the law or the practice of the Courts existing at the date of its introduction and has merely put into propositions the rules of English law upon this subject.(2) One provision, however, in Chapter X requires special notice, namely, the power given to the Judge by section 165 to put questions or to order the production of documents. The framers of the Act considered it necessary, having regard to the peculiar circumstances of this country, to put into the hands of Judges an amount of discretion as to the admission of evidence which, if it exists by law, is at all events rarely or never exercised in England. Judges in this country are expressly empowered to ask any questions upon any facts relevant or irrelevant at any period of the trial subject to the provisions in the section abovementioned.(3)

Lastly, the Act, in Chapter XI, deals with the subject of the effect of the improper admission and rejection of evidence, declaring that no new trial or reversal of any decision shall be held or made, if it shall appear that independently of the evidence objected to and admitted there was sufficient evidence to justify the decision, or that, if the rejected evidence had been received, it ought not to have varied the decision. This Chapter is in accordance with the spirit of the present rules of the Supreme Court in England, which, with the view of avoiding new trials on purely technical grounds, refuse a new trial except when a substantial wrong or miscarriage has been occasioned by the improper admission or rejection of evidence.(4)

The rules relating to the examination of witnesses are contained in Chapter X of this Act (sections 135-166), and will be found considered in detail in the notes to the sections of that Chapter. The order in which witnesses are produced and examined is regulated by the Civil and Criminal Procedure Codes or, in the absence of any specific provision, by the discretion of the Court.(5) Witnesses are examined upon oath or affirmation, upon the maxim in judicio non creditur nisi juratis, under the provisions of the Indian Oaths Act(6), which was an Act to consolidate the law relating to judicial oaths and for other purposes.

Witnesses.

Oaths.

---

(1) Steph. Introd., 175.

(2) Steph. Introd., 176; Draft Report of the Select Committee—Gazette of India, July 1st, 1871, Part V, p. 273.

(3) Draft Report of the Select Committee—Gazette of India, July 1st, 1871, Part V, p. 273.

(4) O. 39, r. 6; Taylor, Ev., §§ 1881—1885; Best, Ev., § 82.

(5) S. 135, post.

(6) Act X of 1873 (received the assent of the Governor-General on the 8th April 1873. For a full discussion of the nature of judicial oaths and affirmations and the history of Indian legislation on the subject, see R. v. Maru, 10 A., 207 (1888).

CHAPTER VII.

OF THE BURDEN OF PROOF.

CERTAIN facts require no proof (1) All other relevant facts, however, must be proved by evidence, that is, by the statements of witnesses, admissions or confessions of parties and the production of documents. The present Chapter deals with the rules regulating the question upon which of the parties to the cause rests the obligation of adducing that evidence, or as it is technically called the "burden of proof." The term "burden of proof" fails to convey a precise idea, because the term is often interchangeably employed in two entirely distinct senses. That in many cases this is done unconsciously in no way lessens the confussion, which arises, from transferring reasoning entirely applicable to the phrase in one sense to its use in another. As commonly used "burden of proof" means (a) the burden of establishing a case, whether by a preponderance of evidence or beyond a reasonable doubt; and (b) the duty or necessity of introducing evidence either to establish such a case, or to meet an adverse amount of evidence sufficient to constitute a primâ facie case. Burden of proof in the sense of "the burden of introducing evidence" is analogous to the phrase in its (a) sense, but analogous only. It rests, not as before, on the one party designated by the pleadings, but on the party, whether plaintiff or defendant, against whom the tribunal, at the time when the question is to be determined, would give its judgment, no further evidence being introduced. Before evidence is gone into, it rests on the party, who has the affirmative of the issue; after evidence is gone into, as the tribunal will only give its judgment in favour of a primâ facie case, the burden of introducing evidence is always on the party who has to meet such a primâ facie case.(2) The incidence of the burden of proof of a fact means that the person on whom it lies must prove the same. But the meaning of proof in s. 3 ante is not affected by the [illegible] burden of proof incidence of proof.(3) The answer to [illegible] rests includes the answer to another, [illegible] in the preliminary stages of a case, [illegible] the duty of, beginning. Practically no point in the law of evidence [illegible] more subtle principles of law; and none involves more important advantages and disadvantages, according to the circumstances, to the contending parties. It is, however, needless to insist on the importance which necessarily attaches to the order in which parties are allowed to state their cases to the Court.(4)

The general rule as to the onus of proof and the consequent obligation of beginning is, that the proof of any particular fact lies on the party who alleges it, not on him who denies it; ei incumbit probatio qui dicit, non qui negat. Actori incumbit probatio. The issue must be proved by the party who states an affirmative; not by a party who states a negative.(5) He who invokes the aid of the law must first prove his case. The plaintiff is bound in the first instance to show at least a primâ facie case, and, if he leaves it imperfect, the Court will not assist him. Hence the maxim: Potior est conditio defendentis.(6)

---

(1) See Introduction to Ch. III, ante

(2) Best, Ev., Amer. Notes, 11th Ed., 298–301.

(3) Muhammad Tunus v. Emp., 50 C., 318

(4) Powell, Ev., 9th Ed., 151; Taylor, Ev., § 378.

(5) Powell, Ev., 9th Ed., 150; Wills, Ev., 2nd Ed., 28; Best, Ev., § 267; Taylor, Ev., 364; for a criticism of the rule, see Wharton, Ev., §§ 353, 357.

(6) Best, Ev., § 267.

When, however, the defendant, or either litigant party, instead of denying what is alleged against him, relies on some new matter which, if true, is an answer to it, the burden of proof changes sides; and he in his turn is bound to show a primâ facie case at least and, if he leaves it imperfect, the Court will not assist him. Reus excipiendo fit actor.(1) The principle that the party who asserts the affirmative in any controversy ought to prove his assertion, and that he who only denies an allegation may rest on his denial, until, at least, the probable truth of the matter asserted has been established, is one which has received the widest recognition. The reason is obvious; to all propositions, which are neither the subject of intuitive or sensitive knowledge, nor probabilized by experience, the mind suspends its assent until proof of them is adduced, or as it has been said(2). "Words are but the expression of facts; and therefore, when nothing is said to be done, nothing can be said to be proved;" which is probably what is meant by the expression "per rerum naturam, factum negantis probatio nulla est."(3) But in order to determine the burden of proof it is necessary to look for the affirmative in substance of the issue and not the affirmative in form. Thus a legal affirmative is by no [illegible] ;ative always [illegible] party's case, [illegible] the nature of [illegible] expressed at pleasure in an affirmative or negative shape. The rule may therefore more correctly be laid down that the issue must be proved by the party who states the affirmative in substance and not merely the affirmative in form.(4) This general rule may be affected both by presumptions (v. post), or by legislative enactment casting upon a particular party the burden of proving some particular fact.(5) There are two tests for ascertaining on which side the burden of proof lies; first, it lies upon the party who would be unsuccessful, if no evidence were given on either side(6); secondly, it lies upon the party who would fail if the particular allegation in question were struck out of the pleading.(7)

The party on whom the onus probandi lies as developed by the record must begin. When the party on whom lies the obligation of beginning is prepared with adequate evidence, to begin is generally an advantage, since it enables him to impress his case first on the mind of the Court, and, if evidence be given on the other side, to have also the last word. From this point of view it is called the right to begin. In other cases, however, as where the party is unprepared with evidence, the obligation to begin may prove a burden to him, upon whom it rests.(8) "Whenever either party claims the right to begin, he thereby undertakes to offer evidence on that issue in respect of which he

---

(1) Best, Ev, § 267.

(2) Best, Pres. Ev., 39, citing Gilbert, Ev., 145.

(3) Best on Presumptions, 39, 40; and so in Co. Litt, it is laid down broadly: "It is a maxim in law that witnesses cannot testify a negative but an affirmative" From these and similar expressions it has been rashly inferred that "a negative is incapable of proof,"—a position wholly indefensible, if understood in an unqualified sense. See Best, Ev., § 270. Wharton, Ev., § 356.

(4) Powell, Ev., 9th Ed, 152; Best on Presumptions, 39, 40; Best, Ev, §§ 271, 272.

(5) See s 103 ("unless it is provided by any law that the proof of that fact shall be on any particular person") and ss. 104, 112, post, Best, Ev., § 268.

(6) S. 102, post; Amos v. Hughes, 1 M. & Rob, 464; and see other cases cited in Best, Ev, § 268; Kripamoyi Dabia v. Durga Govind, 15 C., 89, 91 (1887) ["The test which may well be applied in a case like this is, who would win if no evidence were given on either side, and it seems to us that upon the facts admitted the plaintiffs must win if the defendant does not prove the case set up by him," per Mitter & Ghose, JJ.]

(7) Miller & Barber, 1 M. & W., 427.

(8) Powell, Ev., 333; Wills, Ev., 2nd Ed, 35. See 2 Hyde, 182.

has claimed it(1); he cannot claim the right to begin in the sense of merely addressing the jury on the issue. Where there are several issues, some of which are upon the plaintiff, and some upon the defendant, the plaintiff may begin by proving those only which are upon him, leaving it to the defendant to give evidence in support of those issues upon which he intends to rely; and the plaintiff may then give evidence in reply to rebut the facts which the defendant has adduced in support of his defence.(2) If, however, the plaintiff in such a case gives in the first instance any evidence on the issues, which lies on the defendant, he is bound to complete his whole case, and will not be entitled to call a portion of his evidence in reply."(3)

The phrase "burden of proof" has two distinct meanings namely the burden of establishing a case and the burden of introducing evidence. The burden of establishing a case remains throughout the entire case, where the pleadings originally place it. It never shifts. The party, whether plaintiff or defendant, who substantially asserts the affirmative of the issue has this burden of proof It is on him at the beginning of the case; it continues on him throughout the case; and when the evidence, by whomsoever introduced, is all in, if he has not, by the preponderance of evidence required by law, established his position or claim, the decision of the tribunal must be adverse to such pleader. On the other hand, the burden of proof, in the sense of burden of evidence, may shift constantly as evidence is introduced by one side or the other,—as one scale or the other preponderates over its fellow. To carry out the same metaphor; so often and so long as the scale containing an adverse amount of evidence preponderates to a certain extent by reason of evidence adduced in that behalf, the duty or necessity rests on a party to introduce opposing evidence which shall restore the equipoise, or, if possible, strike a new balance.

This necessity or duty may, and usually does, alternate constantly between the parties This is "the burden of evidence"—burden of proof in the second of the senses abovementioned. But when the entire evidence is in, it is legally necessary to conviction, or other affirmative action by the tribunal, that the final balance should be one way, that a certain one of the scales should eventually preponderate and preponderate to a definite extent. This necessity has not any time shifted, but has remained constantly throughout the trial, on one of the parties alone; to wit on him who had the affirmative of the issue. This is the "burden of establishing"—burden of proof in the first of the senses abovementioned.(4) The question of onus of proof only arises where there is a question of fact to be determined and there is no evidence one way or the other which will enable the Judge to come to a conclusion In such a case the Court has to decide whether the burden of proving the fact lies upon the plaintiff or the defendant. If the burden of proof lies upon the plaintiff and [illegible] must fail because [illegible] the other hand if [illegible] proof is essential to the defendant's success in the case, then the defendant must fail because, he has failed to discharge the burden which lay upon him. Whether, however in the first instance the onus lies upon the plaintiff or the defendant, if there

(1) R. v. Tooke, 25 St. Tr., 446, 447; Smart v. Bayner, 6 C. & P., 721; Oakely v. Godden, 2 F. & F., 656

(2) Shaw v. Beck, 8 Ex., 392.

(3) Browne v. Murray, Ry. & M., 254; Wills, Ev., 26, 27; ib., 2nd Ed., 38; Taylor, Ev., §§ 384, 386. See Civil Pr. Code, s. 180.

(4) Best, Ev., Amer. Notes, 269, 270. Where all the evidence is in, the debate as to onus is academical. All that remains to do is to draw the necessary inferences from the facts. Shree Chidambora v. Velrama Reddi, 27 C. W. N., 245, 256. See Sudhanya Kumar Singha v. Gour Chandra Pal, 35 C. L. J., 473; Basiruddin v. Mokima Bibi, 22 C. W. N., 709, 713 and next note.

is evidence adduced by both the parties then the question of the burden of proof becomes immaterial and the Court has to determine upon the evidence before it (1)

As already observed, the burden of proof may be affected by presumptions.(2) The burden of proof is shifted by those presumptions of law which are rebuttable, by presumptions of fact of the stronger kind, and by every species of evidence strong enough
When a presumption is in favour affords an additional reason for c it is when a presumption is in favour of the party who asserts the affirmative, that its effect becomes visible, as the opposite side is then bound to prove his negative.(3) So sections 107—111, post, enumerate instances in which the burden of proof is determined in particular cases not by the relation of the parties to the cause (as is the case in sections 101—106), but by presumptions.(4) It is in fact in this connection, perhaps, more strongly than in any other, that the force of a so-called "presumption of law" becomes evident Such a presumption shifts the burden of proof in the sense of the "burden of evidence" —the burden of going forward with new evidentiary matter. The establishment by one party, in discharge of the onus of a legal presumption, casts on the other the burden of disproving it; in other words, it shifts the burden of evidence When conflicting evidence on the point covered by the presumption of law is actually gone into, the presumption of law is functus officio as a presumption of law. The presumption of fact upon which such legal presumption was founded is to be weighed by the tribunal with the other evidence in the case.(5)

In conclusion, the general principle with regard to the burden of proof may be stated to be that a party, who desires to move the Court, must prove all facts necessary for that purpose (sections 101—105). This general rule is however, subject to two exceptions: (a) He will not be required to prove such facts as are especially within the knowledge of the other party (section 106); nor (b) so much of his allegations in respect of which there is any presumption of law (sections 107—113), or, in some cases, of fact (section 114) in his favour.(6)

101. Whoever desires any Court to give judgment as to any legal right or liability dependent on the existence of facts which he asserts must prove that those facts exist. Burden of proof

When a person is bound to prove the existence of any fact it is said that the burden of proof lies on that person.

Illustrations

(a) A desires a Court to give judgment that B shall be punished for a crime which A says B has committed.

A must prove that B has committed the crime

(b) A desires a Court to give judgment that he is entitled to certain land in the possession of B, by reason of facts which he asserts, and which B denies, to be true

A must prove the existence of those facts.

(1) Jhari Singh v. Tokharam Marwari, 52 I. C. 860 and see last note.

(2) As to presumptions, v. ante, notes to s 4. As to presumptions shifting onus see Kundan Lal v Mussamut Begam-un-nissa, 2 C. W. N., 937 (P. C.).

(3) Best, Ev., § 273. The party who asserts the negative must begin whenever there is a disputable presumption of law in favour of an affirmative allegation. Taylor, Ev., § 367.

(4) Steph. Introd, 174

(5) Best, Ev, Amer. Notes, pp. 269, 270.

(6) See Taylor, Ev, §§ 367, 376A.

has claimed it(1); he cannot claim the right to begin in the sense of merely addressing the jury on the issue. Where there are several issues, some of which are upon the plaintiff, and some upon the defendant, the plaintiff may begin by proving those only which are upon him, leaving it to the defendant to give evidence in support of those issues upon which he intends to rely; and the plaintiff may then give evidence in reply to rebut the facts which the defendant has adduced in support of his defence (2) If, however, the plaintiff in such a case gives in the first instance any evidence on the issues, which lies on the defendant, he is bound to complete his whole case, and will not be entitled to call a portion of his evidence in reply."(3)

The phrase "burden of proof" has two distinct meanings namely the burden of establishing a case and the burden of introducing evidence. The burden of establishing a case remains throughout the entire case, where the pleadings originally place it. It never shifts. The party, whether plaintiff or defendant, who substantially asserts the affirmative of the issue has this burden of proof It is on him at the beginning of the case; it continues on him throughout the case; and when the evidence, by whomsoever introduced, is all in, if he has not, by the preponderance of evidence required by law, established his position or claim, the decision of the tribunal must be adverse to such pleader. On the other hand, the burden of proof, in the sense of burden of evidence, may shift constantly as evidence is introduced by one side or the other,—as one scale or the other preponderates over its fellow. To carry out the same metaphor; so often and so long as the scale containing an adverse amount of evidence preponderates to a certain extent by reason of evidence adduced in that behalf, the duty or necessity rests on a party to introduce opposing evidence which shall restore the equipoise, or, if possible, strike a new balance.

This necessity or duty may, and usually does, alternate constantly between the parties. This is "the burden of evidence"—burden of proof in the second of the senses abovementioned But when the entire evidence is in, it is legally necessary to conviction, or other affirmative action by the tribunal, that the final balance should be one way, that a certain one of the scales should eventually preponderate and preponderate to a definite extent. This necessity has not any time shifted, but has remained constantly throughout the trial, on one of the parties alone; to wit on him who had the affirmative of the issue. This is the "burden of establishing"—burden of proof in the first of the senses abovementioned.(4) The question of onus of proof only arises where there is a question of fact to be determined and there is no evidence one way or the other which will enable the Judge to come to a conclusion. In such a case the Court has to decide whether the burden of proving the fact lies upon the plaintiff or the defendant. If the burden of proof lies upon the plaintiff and [illegible] ...tiff must fail because [illegible] On the other hand if [illegible] its proof is essential to the defendant's success in the case, then the defendant must fail because, he has failed to discharge the burden which lay upon him. Whether, however in the first instance the onus lies upon the plaintiff or the defendant, if there

(1) R v. Tooke, 25 St. Tr., 446, 447; Smart v. Bayner, 6 C. & P., 721; Oakely v. Ooddeen, 2 F. & F., 656.

(2) Short v Beck, 8 Ex., 392

(3) Browne v Murray, Ry. & M., 254; Wills, Ev., 26, 27; ib., 2nd Ed., 38; Taylor, Ev., §§ 384, 386. See Civil Pr. Code, s. 180.

(4) Best, Ev., Amer. Notes, 269, 270. Where all the evidence is in, the debate as to onus is academical. All that remains to do is to draw the necessary inferences from the facts. Shree Chidambera v Velrama Reddi, 27 C. W. N., 245, 236. See Sudhanya Kumar Singha v. Gour Chandra Pal, 35 C. L. J., 473; Banwaji v. Mokima Bibi, 22 C. W. N., 709, 713 and next note.

COMMENTARY.

Burden of proof.

See, as to the general principles regulating the burden of proof, the Introduction to the present Chapter. Some illustrative reported cases in which those principles have been applied are cited hereafter, their subject matter being arranged in alphabetical order. It is incumbent on each party to discharge the burden of proof which rests upon him.(1) Where the burden of proof lies on a party and is not discharged, the suit must be dismissed.(2) When the issue raised by the Court is in substance whether the plaintiff's or defendant's story is true, it is possible that neither of the stories may be true, and the question then arises which of the two alternatives of the issue is the really material one Usually the really material one is the first of the issue viz., is the plaintiff's story true? If the defendant's defence is a plea in confession and avoidance, viz, a plea which admits that the plaintiff's story is true but avoids it, then if the defendant fails to prove his case, the plaintiff may recover. But if the defence is substantially an argumentative traverse [illegible]

[illegible] issue, the consequence is that he must fail, and the defendant may say, "it is wholly immaterial, whether I prove my case or not; you have not proved yours."(3) The burden of proof in the sense of the burden of introducing evidence may and constantly does shift during the trial (4) There are many cases in which the party on whom the burden of proof in the first instance lies, may shift the burden to the other side by proving facts giving rise to a presumption in his favour(5) or by showing an admission.(6) The amount of evidence required to shift upon a party the burden of displacing a fact may depend on the circumstances of each case (7) When the case of a plaintiff is scanty in point of evidence, it is a sufficient answer that from the situation of the plaintiff the evidence of that which is in contest between the parties is not so fully within his reach as it is within the reach of the other party, and that there is on the part of the plaintiff evidence enough primâ facie, as it is said in England, to go to a jury. It is then for the other side to consider how he shall meet that evidence. He may leave the plaintiff to prevail by the force of his own case, contending that he is not called upon to answer it, unless it is such as, if unanswered, disposes of the case. But if, instead of relying upon the weakness of the plaintiff's case, he meets it and undertakes to rebut it by counter evidence, the Court will look to the sort of evidence produced, and if it is not such as might have been expected, the Court will draw conclusions adverse to him from this fact. So in appeal it being incumbent on the appellant to show that the judgment of the Court below is wrong, the Court must consider what was the nature of the whole of the evidence before that Court.(8) The Court will generally, as respects the quantum of evidence

(1) Baijnath Sahay v. Rughonath Pershad, 12 C. L. R, 186, 193 (1892).

(2) Appa Rau v Subbunna, 13 M, 60 (1889).

(3) Raja Chandranath v. Ramjai Mazumdar, 6 B. L. R., 303, 308 (1870). Arumugam Chetty v. Perrijannam Servai, 25 W. R., 81, 82 (1876). See Haji Khan v. Baldeo Das, 24 A., 90 (1901).

(4) v ante, pp. 677, 678, Davlata v. Ganesh Shastre, 4 B, 295 (1880); Nistarini v. Kali Pershad Dass, 23 W. R, 431 (1875); Shields v Wilkinsons, 9 A, 398 (1887): Govinda v. Josha Premaji, 7 B., 73 (1878); Mano Mohon v. Mothura Mohun, 7 C., 225 (1881), Rameshwar Koer v. Bharat Pershad, 4 C. W. N, 18 (1899); Suleiman Kader v. Mehndi Afsur, 2 C. W. N, 186 (1897); Hem Chandra v. Kali Prosanno, 30 C, 1033, 1042 (1903).

(5) Mano Mohun v. Mathura Mohun, 7 C, 225 (1881).

(6) Bala v. Shiva, 27 B, 271, 278 (1902).

(7) Cassumbhoy Ahmedbhoy v. Ahmedbhoy Hubibhoy, 12 B, 280 (1887).

(8) Sooriah Row v. Cotaghery Boochia, 2 Moo. I. A., 113, 124 (1888).

required, consider the opportunities which in particular cases each party may naturally be supposed to have of giving evidence.(1)

The general rule of evidence is that if, in order to make out a title, it is necessary to prove a negative, the party who avers a title must prove it.(2) "A proviso is properly the statement of something extrinsic of the subject-matter of a covenant which shall go in discharge of that covenant by way of defeasance: an exception is a taking out of the covenant some part of the subject-matter of it. If these be right definitions, the plaintiff need never state a proviso, but must always state an exception: and whether particular words form a proviso or an exception, will not in any way depend on the precise form in which they are introduced, or the part of a deed in which they are found."(3) This has been laid down as a rule of pleading, but it holds good as a rule of procedure also upon the question of burden of proof. So if a clause in an instrument, such as a policy of assurance, be an exception, the plaintiff must not only state it, but show that it is not applicable; if it be a provision the defendant must state it, and show that it applies (4) Owing to particular circumstances, in some cases where the burden of proof is on the plaintiff very slight evidence may be sufficient to discharge the onus and shift it to the other side. In such cases slight evidence means evidence which does not go the whole length of proving a particular fact, but which suggests it. But slight evidence must not be confounded with suspicious evidence or evidence which is open to question.(5)

Accounts. When a claim is founded upon a distinct statement of account signed by the defendant, in which he acknowledges a particular sum to be due to the plaintiff, it is for the defendant to produce evidence to rebut the primâ facie [illegible] ges a transaction to be a mort- [illegible] he books of the defendant con- [illegible] ff, the burden of proof is shifted [illegible] the latter to produce evidence to neutralize or explain away the effect of these entries.(7) Where there is an obligation to render an account, it includes a duty to show primâ facie that the account rendered is correct and complete, and that duty extends to both sides of the account.(8) When the accounts of a mortgagee who has been in possession are being taken, his income-tax papers are inadmissible as evidence in his favour, though they may be used against him. It is the mortgagee's duty to keep regular accounts, and the onus lies in the first instance upon him. If he has not kept proper accounts, the presumption will be against him; but this does not mean that all statements of the mortgagor against him must therefore be taken as true (9) As to the burden of proof on taking of partnership accounts(10) and the presumption of dissolution of partnership from a brief account(11) see below. In an agency account the plaintiff has only to show that the defendant is an accounting party and then it is for the latter to prove the amount of his receipts (12)

---

(1) Rajah Kissen v. Narendra Singh, L. R., 3 I. A., 85, 88 (1875); see Ram Prasad v. Raghunandan Prasad, 5 A., 738 (1885).

(2) Poolin Behary v. Watson & Co., 9 W. R., 190, 192 (1868).

(3) Thursby v. Plant, 1 Wms. Saund., p. 233*b*, followed in Aga Syud v. Hajee Jackariah, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 308, 310 (1867); as to pleading exceptions, see Rash Behari v. Haramoni Debya, 15 C., 556–557 (1888).

(4) Aga Saduck v. Hajee Jackariah, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 308, 310 (1867)

(5) Hur Dyal v. Roy Kristo, 24 W. R., 107 (1875)

(6) Simon Elias v. Joranar Mull, 24 W. R., 202 (1875).

(7) Govinda v. Josha Premaji, 7 B., 73 (1876).

(8) Mayen v. Alston, 16 M., 245 (1892).

(9) Shah Gholam v. Mussamat Ewranum, 9 W. R., 275 (1867).

(10) Thirukumaresan Chetti v. Subaraya Chetti, 20 M., 313 (1895).

(11) Joopoody Sarayya v. Lakshmanaswamy, P. C., 36 M., 185 (1913)

(12) Ram Dass v. Bhagwat Dass, 1 All. L. J., 347 (1904); Ragunath v. Ganpathi, 27 All., 374.

The burden of proof as to the relationship in the case of principal and agent is dealt with by section 109, post, to the notes of which section reference should be made. See as to agency account, last paragraph. Agency.

When a claim has been made by a third party to property attached, it is for the claimant to begin, and he must prove that the property belonged to him or was in his possession (1) But if he starts his case sufficiently, as by showing that a deed of sale had been executed in his favour by the judgment-debtors, that possession had been given to him and that the consideration of the sale had passed, this is sufficient to shift the onus on to the defendant.(2) When a judgment-creditor has obtained a writ of attachment against the property of his judgment-debtor, but such debtor has no property against which the writ can be enforced, the judgment-creditor is entitled to an order for execution of his decree by attachment of the person of the debtor, and the burden of proof is on the latter to show that he has no means of satisfying the debt, and that he has not been guilty of any misconduct, not on the creditor to show that by sending the debtor to prison some satisfaction of the debt will be obtained.(3) See the undermentioned case(4) as to the burden of proof in the case of allegation of the non-observance of the formalities necessary to attachment. Where the decree-holder attached certain property in the hands of the judgement-debtor's sons, it was held to be for the latter to prove that the property sought to be sold in execution was the joint ancestral property of themselves and their father and could not be attached in execution after the father's death (5) Attachment.

Where an auction-purchaser brought a suit to obtain possession of certain julkurs, which he alleged formed part of his zemindary of S, the defendant being in possession thereof, and his possession having been confirmed in an Act IV case, it was held that the burden of proof rested on the plaintiff to show that the julkurs in dispute formed part of the assets of the zemindary at the time of the perpetual settlement (6) Auction-purchase

A person seeking to exercise the statutory right of avoiding an encumbrance given him by the 12th section, Ben Act VII of 1868, or by section 66 of Ben Act VI of 1869, must give some primâ facie evidence to show that the encumbrance, which he seeks to avoid, comes within the purview of the section.(7) In a suit to set aside a settlement where the defendant pleaded that the tenure was dur mokurari, it was held that the onus was on the defendant to prove the validity and propriety of the settlement (8) Where a collector in exercise of his lawful function, assumed the jurisdiction to sell a patni taluk the onus was on the plaintiff alleging it to show that he had no jurisdiction (9) Where a suit was brought under the provisions of the Bengal Tenancy Act, section 149, cl (3), and the plaintiff made out a very strong case in support of his title to the rents in deposit, it was held that the onus was then shifted on Avoidance of encumbrance Settlement. S[...] Thakbus[...]

(1) Nga Tha v Burn, 2 B L R, F B, 91 (1868), s c, 11 W R, F, B, 8, Govind Atmaram v Santai, 12 B, 20 (1887)

(2) Digumburee Dossee v Banee Madhab, 15 W R, 155 (1871)

(3) Seton v Bijhon 8 B L R, 255 (1872), s c, 17 W R, 165

(4) Ramkrishna v Surfunnissa Begum, L R, 7 I A, 157 (1880), s c, 6 C, 129.

(5) Hemnath Rai v Janke Rai, 2 All L J, 272 (1905)

(6) Forbes v Meer Mahomed 20 W R., 44 (1873), referred to in Nitvanand Roy v Banshi Chandra, 3 C W N, 341 (1899), in which case it was said that no hard and fast rule could be laid down as to where the burden of proof began or ended

(7) Koylashbashiney Dassee v Gocoolmoni Dassee, 8 C, 230 (1881), Gobind Nath v Reilly, 13 C, 1 (1886), decided under s 66 of Bengal Act VIII of 1869, but see also Rash Behari v Hara Moni, 15 C, 557 (1888)

(8) Nadiar Chand v Chunder Sikhur, 15 C, 765 (1888)

(9) Kalee Koomar v Maharajah of Burdwan 5 W R, 39 (1866)

the defendant.(1) The onus of proving that thakbust proceedings are wrong lies on the person alleging it.(2)

Benami transactions

It is very much the habit in India to make purchases in the names of others, and these transactions are known as benami transactions. But the person who impugns the apparent character of the benami transaction must show something or other to establish that allegation.(3) An important criterion in these cases is to consider from what source the money comes with which the purchase-money is paid.(4) In a great number of cases they are made in the names of persons ignorant at the time of their being so made (5) Though the source of purchase-money is an important fact in most of the cases raising the question of benami or not benami, it is not the only test of ownership(6), and accordingly the Privy Council, in the case last mentioned, held the source of money was consistent with the claimants having, as the defence alleged, intended to make a gift of the property to the holder of it; and the right inference from the facts was that it was not held benami for the claimant but belonged to the defendant.(7) But, however inveterate the holding of land benami may be in India, that does not justify the Courts in making every presumption against apparent ownership.(8) In cases of alleged benami sales, effect should be given to the evidence of possession and enjoyment since the purchase as showing who is the substantial owner The burden of proof lies on the person who maintains tha[illegible] real state of things and the apparent [illegible] purchaser, until the contrary be proved [illegible] who alleges that the certified purchaser and registered owner is a benamidar.(10) When a person sues for possession of land, and the defendant alleges that the plaintiff purchased the land benami for him, the onus is on the plaintiff to establish a primâ facie case, and the allegation of the defendant does not shift the burden of proof.(11) The presumption of the Hindu law, in a joint undivided family, is, that the whole property of the family is joint estate, and the onus lies upon a party claiming any part of such property as his separate estate to establish that fact. Where a purchase of real estate is made by a Hindu in the name of one of his sons, the presumption of the Hindu law is in favour of its being a benami purchase, and the burden of proof lies on the party in whose name it was purchased, to prove that he was solely entitled to the legal and beneficial interest in such purchased estate. The same rule applies to Mahomedans (12) The

---

(1) Trailokhya Mohini Dasi v Kali Prosanna Ghose (1907), 11 C. W N., 380

(2) Leelanund Singh v Luchmunar Singh, 10 C L R, 172 (1880).

(3) Hakim Maulvi Mahomed v Bharat Indu, 23 C. W N, 321, P. C.

(4) Bilas Kunwar v. Desraj Ranjit Singh, P. C., 37 A, 557 (1915), 42 I. A, 202; Dhurm Das Pandey v. Shama Soondri Dibiah, 3 Moo. I. A., 239 (1883); Parbati Dasi v. Raja Baikuntha Nath Dey, 18 C. W. N., 428 (1913).

(5) Gopeekristo Gosain v. Gungapersaud Gosain, 6 Moo I. A, 53, 72, 74 (1854). For a case in which the Privy Council held that the benami transaction "had been elaborated with a perfection that is uncommon even in India," see Rutta Singh v. Bajrang Singh, 13 C. L. R., 280 (1883).

(6) Ram Narain v. Mahomed Hadi, 23 C., 227 (1898).

(7) Ibid.

(8) Munshee Buzloor v. Shumsoonissa Begum, 11 Moo. I. A, 551, 602 (1867); s c., 8 W. R., P. C., 3.

(9) Deo Nath v. Peer Khan, 3 Agra Rep, 16 (1868); Suleiman Kader v. Mehudi Afsur, 2 C. W. N., 186 (1897); Ramabai v. Ramchandra Shitram, 7 Bom. L. R., 293 (1905).

(10) Baijnath Sahay v. Rughonath Pershad, 12 C. L. R., 186 (1882); and see Satya Moni v. Bhagobutty Churn, 1 C. L. R, 466 (1878).

(11) Huri Ram v. Raj Coomar, 8 C. 759 (1882); see Mookto Kashee v. Anundo Chundra, 2 C. L. R., 48 (1878).

(12) Huri Ram v. Raj Coomar, 8 C. 759 (1882); Naginbhai v Abdulla, 6 B., 717 (1882). But the evidence may destroy the presumption of benami, Syed Ashgar v. Syed Mehdi, L. R, 20 I. A. 38 (1892).

law as to benami conveyances taken by a father in the name of a son, whether in Hindu or Mahomedan families, should be considered in all Courts in India as conclusively settled by the rule laid down by the Privy Council decision cited in note (5), p. 684(1). But proof that the father's object was to affect the ordinary rule of succession as from him to the property in question will take the case without this rule.(2) This rule is equally applicable to an account opened in a man's books in the name of his son as to a purchase by him in his son's name. The frequency of benami transactions in this country forbids any presumption being raised in either case contrary to that which arises in favour of the person who provides the funds.(3) When a purchase is made by a Hindu or Mahomedan in the name of his son, and when the rights of creditors are in issue, very strict proof of the nature of the transaction should be and the burden of proof lies with mor lleging that the purchase was inten there was no evidence that a son had a separate fund, it was held that there was a strong presumption that property purchased had been bought by his father in his name and was not the son's self-acquired property.(5) In a suit to declare certain sales benami in a case where the property of a husband was sold to realize a fine of Court and passed from hand to hand until it was sold to the wife, who moreover was in possession of the property when the sale of the husband's right and interest took place, it was held that the plaintiff was entitled to a clear finding as to whether the wife held the property in her right or in trust for her husband; and that the onus of showing the source whence the money came was on the wife An uninquiring purchaser from a Hindu wife whose husband is living at the time is in no sense a bonâ fide purchaser without notice (6) But it has been stated that the general principle laid down in this case has been overruled by the Privy Council.(7) Quære, whether in the absence of any evidence to show the source from which the purchase-money was derived, there is a presumption that property purchased in the name of a Hindu wife is the property of her husband and has been purchased with his money Semble—There is no presumption one way or the other, but the burden of proof in each particular case must depend upon the pleadings and the position of the parties as plaintiffs or defendants (8) In a recent case in the Privy Council where a Hindu

---

(1) Ruknadowla v Hurdwari Mull, 5 B L R., 578, 583 (1870), s. c, 14 W R, P C, 14, 13 Moo I A, 395

(2) Ib; and see Raja Chandranath v Ramjai Mazumdar, 6 B L R, 303 (1871)

(3) Ashabai v Haji Rahimtulla, 9 B, 115, 122 (1885)

(4) Naginbhai v Abdulla, 6 B, 717 (1882), Ruknadowla v Hurdwari Mull, 5 B L. R, 578 (1870)

(5) Parbati Dasi v Raja Baikuntha Nath Dey, 18 C W N, 428 (1913) (P C)

(6) Bindo Bashinee v Pearee Mohun, 6 W R, 312 (1866), and as to the onus probandi, to prove the source of the purchase-money, see Sreeman Chunder v Gopal Chunder, 11 Moo I. A, 28 (1866); s c., 7 W R, P. C, 10 explained in Roop Rani v. Saseeram, 23 W R., 141 (1875), Faez Buksh v Fukeerooddeen Mahomed, 14 Moo I A, 234 (1871)

(7) Chowdrani v Tarini Kanth, 8 C, 545, 548, 553, 554 (1882)

(8) Ib, reversed on the facts, 13 C., 182, distinguished in Nobin Chunder v Dokhobala Dasi, 10 C, 686 (1884), where it was pointed out that the question considered was whether as between a husband or a purchaser at a sale in execution against the husband, there is any presumption that property standing in the name of the wife is held by her benami for her husband, which question is entirely different from that whether a wife, a member of a joint family, is, as regards property held in her name, in the same position as her husband with respect to property acquired in his name and subject to the same presumption in favour of the joint family, see also post sub. voc. "Hindu Law," "Joint-property." According to the law as prevailing in the Bombay Presidency a purchase by a husband in the name of his wife does not raise any presumption of a gift to the wife or of an advancement for her benefit. Motivahu v Purshotam Dayal, 6 Bom. L. R, 975 (1904), see also Barkatunnissa v. Fazl Haq, 26 A., 272, 288 (1904), in the defendant.(1) The onus of proving that thakbust proceedings are wrong lies on the person alleging it.(2)

Benami transactions

It is very much the habit in India to make purchases in the names of others, and these transactions are known as benami transactions. But the person who impugns the apparent character of the benami transaction must show something or other to establish that allegation.(3) An important criterion in these cases is to consider from what source the money comes with which the purchase-money is paid (4) In a great number of cases they are made in the names of persons ignorant at the time of their being so made (5) Though the source of purchase-money [illegible] the question of benami or not ben[illegible] accordingly the Privy Council, in [illegible] money was consistent with the claimants having, as the defence alleged, intended to make a gift of the property to the holder of it; and the right inference from the facts was that it was not held benami for the claimant but belonged to the defendant.(7) But, however inveterate the holding of land benami may be in India, that does not justify the Courts in making every presumption against apparent ownership.(8) In cases of alleged benami sales, effect should be given to the evidence of possession and enjoyment since the purchase as showing who is the substantial owner The burden of proof lies on the person who maintains that the apparent state of things is not the real state of things and the apparent purchaser must be regarded as the real purchaser, until the contrary be proved.(9) So the burden of proof is upon him who alleges that the certified purchaser and registered owner is a benamidar.(10) When a person sues for possession of land, and the defendant alleges that the plaintiff purchased the land benami for him, the onus is on the plaintiff to establish a primâ facie case, and the allegation of the defendant does not shift the burden of proof.(11) The presumption of the Hindu law, in a joint undivided family, is, that the whole property of the family is joint estate, and the onus lies upon a party claiming any part of such property as his separate estate to establish that fact. Where a purchase of real estate is made by a Hindu in the name of one of his sons, the presumption of the Hindu law is in favour of its being a benami purchase, and the burden of proof lies on the party in whose name it was purchased, to prove that he was solely entitled to the legal and beneficial interest in such purchased estate. The same rule applies to Mahomedans.(12) The

(1) Trailokhya Mohini Dasi v Kali Prosanna Ghose (1907), 11 C W N, 380.

(2) Leelanund Singh v. Luchmunar Singh, 10 C. L R, 172 (1880).

(3) Hakim Maulvi Mahomed v Bharat Indu, 23 C W N., 321, P. C.

(4) Bilas Kunwar v. Desraj Ranjit Singh, P. C., 37 A., 557 (1915), 42 I. A., 202; Dhurm Das Pandey v. Shama Soondri Dibiah, 3 Moo. I. A, 239 (1883); Parbati Dasi v. Raja Baikuntha Nath Dey, 18 C. W. N, 428 (1913).

(5) Gopeekristo Gosain v. Gungapersaud Gosain, 6 Moo. I. A., 53, 72, 74 (1854). For a case in which the Privy Council held that the benami transaction "had been elaborated with a perfection that is uncommon even in India," see Rutta Singh v. Bajrang Singh, 13 C. L. R., 280 (1883).

(6) Ram Narain v. Mahomed Hadi, 23 C, 227 (1898).

(7) Ibid.

(8) Munshee Buzloor v. Shumsoonissa Begum, 11 Moo. I A., 551, 602 (1867); s c, 8 W. R, P. C, 3.

(9) Deo Nath v. Peer Khan, 3 Agra Rep, 16 (1868); Suleiman Kader v. Mehudi Afsur, 2 C. W. N., 186 (1897); Ramabai v. Ramchandra Shivram, 7 Bom. L. R., 293 (1905).

(10) Baijnath Sahay v. Rughonath Pershad, 12 C. L. R., 186 (1882); and see Satya Moni v. Bhagobutty Churn, 1 C. L. R, 466 (1878).

(11) Huri Ram v Raj Coomar, 8 C., 759 (1882); see Mookto Kashee v. Arundo Chundra, 2 C. L. R., 48 (1878).

(12) Huri Ram v. Raj Coomar, 8 C., 759 (1882); Naginbhai v. Abdulla, 6 B., 717 (1882). But the evidence may destroy the presumption of benami, Sayed Ashgar v. Syed Mehdi, L. R., 20 I. A., 38 (1892).

law as to benami conveyances taken by a father in the name of a son, whether in Hindu or Mahomedan families, should be considered in all Courts in India as conclusively settled by the rule laid down by the Privy Council decision cited in note (5), p. 684(1). But proof that the father's object was to affect the ordinary rule of succession as from him to the property in question will take the case without this rule.(2) This rule is equally applicable to an account opened in a man's books in the name of his son as to a purchase by him in his son's name. The frequency of benami transactions in this country forbids any presumption being raised in either case contrary to that which arises in favour of the person who provides the funds.(3) When a purchase is made by a Hindu or Mahomedan in the name of his son, and when the rights of creditors are in issue, very strict proof of the nature of the transaction should be required from the objector to such rights, and the burden of proof lies with more than ordinary weight on the person alleging that the purchase was intended for the benefit of the son.(4) Where there was no evidence that a son had a separate fund, it was held that there was a strong presumption that property purchased had been bought by his father in his name and was not the son's self-acquired property.(5) In a suit to declare certain sales benami in a case where the property of a husband was sold to realize a fine of Court and passed from hand to hand until it was sold to the wife, who moreover was in possession of the property when the sale of the husband's right and interest took place, it was held that the plaintiff was entitled to a clear finding as to whether the wife held the property in her right or in trust for her husband, and that the onus of showing the source whence the money came was on the wife. An uninquiring purchaser from a Hindu wife whose husband is living at the time is in no sense a bonâ fide purchaser without notice (6) But it has been stated that the general principle laid down in this case has been overruled by the Privy Council (7) Quære, whether in the absence of any evidence to show the source from which the purchase-money was derived, there is a presumption that property purchased in the name of a Hindu wife is the property of her husband and has been purchased with his money. Semble—There is no presumption one way or the other, but the burden of proof in each particular case must depend upon the pleadings and the position of the parties as plaintiffs or defendants (8) In a recent case in the Privy Council where a Hindu

(1) Ruknadowla v. Hurdwari Mull, 5 B. L. R., 578, 583 (1870), s. c., 14 W. R., P. C., 14, 13 Moo. I. A., 395.

(2) Ib., and see Raja Chandranath v. Ramjai Mazumdar, 6 B. L. R., 303 (1871).

(3) Ashabai v. Haji Rahimtulla, 9 B., 115, 122 (1885).

(4) Naginbhai v. Abdulla, 6 B., 717 (1882); Ruknadowla v. Hurdwari Mull, 5 B. L. R., 578 (1870).

(5) Parbati Dasi v. Raja Baikuntha Nath Dey, 18 C. W. N., 428 (1913) (P. C.).

(6) Bindo Bashinee v. Pearee Mohun, 6 W. R., 312 (1866), and as to the onus probandi, to prove the source of the purchase-money, see Sreeman Chunder v. Gopal Chunder, 11 Moo. I. A., 28 (1866); s. c., 7 W. R., P. C., 10 explained in Roop Ram v. Saseeram, 23 W. R., 141 (1875), Faez Buksh v. Fukeeroodeen Mahomed, 14 Moo. I. A., 234 (1871).

(7) Chowdrani v. Tarini Kanth, 8 C., 545, 548, 553, 554 (1882).

(8) Ib., reversed on the facts, 13 C., 182, distinguished in Nobin Chunder v. Dokhobala Dasi, 10 C., 686 (1884), where it was pointed out that the question considered was whether as between a husband or a purchaser at a sale in execution against the husband, there is any presumption that property standing in the name of the wife is held by her benami for her husband; which question is entirely different from that whether a wife, a member of a joint family, is, as regards property held in her name, in the same position as her husband with respect to property acquired in his name and subject to the same presumption in favour of the joint family; see also post sub. voc. "Hindu Law," "Joint-property." According to the law as prevailing in the Bombay Presidency a purchase by a husband in the name of his wife does not raise any presumption of a gift to the wife or of an advancement for her benefit. Motivahu v. Purshotam Doyal, 6 Bom. L. R., 975 (1904); see also Barkatunnissa v. Fazl Haq, 26 A., 272, 288 (1904), in with two wives had a Mahommedan mistress for whom he had already provided and bought a house with his own funds in her name and registered it in her name but kept possession and took the rent of the house, it was held that on the evidence this was a benami transaction.(1) In Hindu law there is no presumption that transactions which stand in the name of the wife are the husband's transactions.(2) When a wife acquires property by her own exertions, she is entitled to hold it independently of her husband and on her death it descends to her heirs (3) When a plaintiff claims land as purchaser in good faith from a benamidar who has been registered as owner and who by the act of the true owners had been allowed to become the apparent owner, the burden of proof lies upon the plaintiff.(4) The onus of proving a particular transaction to be izm farzi lies on the person alleging it.(5)

Bonds. In a suit on a bond it is for the plaintiff to prove the amount of the debt, and this will be done sufficiently in the first instance by proof of the execution of the bond. It is for the defendant to prove in answer, if he can, that such amount is less than the sum sued for.(6) Where the plaintiff in a suit on a bond accounted for not producing it by alleging that the defendant had stolen it, and the defendant admitted execution but alleged that he had satisfied it, it was held that the defendant was bound to begin and to prove payment either by evidence to the fact or by the production of the bond, or both.(7) In the undermentioned case(8), the plaintiff sued on a deed which purported to be one of absolute sale. It was admitted that an ekrar had been executed in favour of the mortgagor restoring to him the equity of redemption. But the plaintiff produced this ekrar and said it had been made over to him by the mortgagor who had relinquished the equity of redemption. The defendant alleged that the ekrar had been lost and had somehow found its way to the plaintiff It was held that the presumption of law was in favour of the plaintiff, and that it lay on the defendant to prove its loss. Where the plaintiff sued on a bond and the defendant attempted to reduce the claim on the ground that the money had not been received in full, and endeavoured to substantiate this defence by calling for the books of the plaintiff, it was held that the burden of proof was entirely on the defendant.(9)

When the plaintiff sued on two bonds, and the defendant in his written statement as well as in his deposition admitted execution of the bonds, but pleaded non-receipt of consideration, it was held that the question of execution could not be gone into, and that the only question which could be tried was non-receipt of consideration.(10) Where the plaintiff was, as regards the promisor, the only person primâ facie entitled to payment, it was held to be on the promisor to show that a payment to a third party was binding on the plaintiff.(11) See further "Consideration," and "Recitals," post.

Boundaries. In a question of disputed boundaries the onus probandi lies upon the plaintiff to prove by independent evidence his right to recover (12) In a question of which it was held that there was no presumption of advancement

(1) Bilas Kunwar v. Desraj Ranjit Singh, P. C., 37 A., 557 (1915); 42 I. A., 202

(2) Manada Sundari v. Mahananda Sarnakar, 2 C. W. N., 367 (1897)

(3) Muthu Ramkrishna Naicken v. Marimutha Goundan, 38 M., 1036 (1915).

(4) Rutto Singh v. Bajrang Singh, 13 C. L. R., 290 (1883).

(5) Gumani Singh v. Chakkar Singh, 8 O. C., 349

(6) Sitaram Aiyar v. Samu Aiyar, 1 Mad. H. C., 447 (1863).

(7) Chuni Kuar v. Udai Ram, 6 A., 73 (1883).

(8) Raj Coomar v. Ram Sukaye, 11 W. R., 151 (1869).

(9) Rajeswari Kuar v. Bal Krishan, 9 A., 713 (1887); s. c., L. R., 14 I. A., 142.

(10) Gorakh Babaji v. Vithal Narayan, 11 B., 435 (1887).

(11) Adarkhalam Chetty v. Marimuthu, 22 M., 326 (1899)

(12) Raja Leelanund v. Maharaja Moheshur, 10 Moo. I. A., 81 (1864); s. c., 3 W. R., P. C., 19; Leelanund Singh v. Luchmunur Singh, 10 C. L. R., 169 (1880);

boundary the Judicial Committee, the Court of last resort, is extremely reluctant to reverse the judgment of an Indian Court, and will not do so, unless they are, upon the facts and evidence, satisfied that the decision of the Courts below was clearly wrong. There is a strong presumption against a plaintiff who seeks to set aside an award made by Government officers, on a revenue-survey, after full local inquiry, for the purpose of obtaining a rectification of the boundaries between two estates, and the onus of proof that the award was wrong lies on the party impeaching it (1) But when a disputed line of division runs between waste lands which have not been the subject of definite possession, the ordinary rule regarding the onus upon a plaintiff seeking demarcation does not apply. The duty is on the defendant as on the plaintiff to aid the Courts in ascertaining the true boundary.(2) In those cases where scientific accuracy in regard to boundaries cannot be attained, and especially in cases where the disputed line of division runs between waste lands which have not been the subject of definite possession, the ordinary rule in a suit of the onus falling on the plaintiff has no application. The parties to the suit are in the position of counter-claimants, and it is the duty of the defendant as much as the plaintiff to aid the Courts in ascertaining the true boundary referred to. When the defendant in a suit for recovery of possession of land is clearly shown or found to have been in actual possession of the disputed area, the burden falls on the plaintiff to establish his title (3) In a question of the boundary between a lakhiraj tenure and a zemindar's mal land, there is no presumption in favour of one or the other, but the onus is on the plaintiff to prove his case (4) Lands admittedly situate within the boundaries of zemindary are primâ facie to be considered as part of the zemindary; and it is for those who allege that they have been separated from the general lands of the zemindary and that they have been settled as a shikmi taluk to establish this allegation (5) When land is within the ambit of the plaintiff's zemindary and the defendants set up an adverse title by reason of an undertenure, the burden of proof is on the defendant. But where the plaintiff admits that there is a howla within his zemindary and that the defendant has lands in that howla, but alleges that he has exceeded the boundaries of that howla and has encroached upon his lands, the onus is on the plaintiff to show that the defendant has encroached.(6) When a dispute arises regarding the direction of a boundary which one of the parties to a suit has demolished, and the other party proves its general direction, the onus of proof, that the direction is wrongly stated, if it be so, lies on the former who removed the boundary.(7)

Where the defendant objects that the plaintiff omitted in a former suit to include the portion which he now claims and in respect of which he then had a cause of action, the objection being one of fact, the burden of proof lies on the objector.(8) In a dispute as to the valuation of a suit, where the defendant asserts that it is overvalued, the onus of proving the truth of the assertion is on him.(9) When a party complains in appeal that certain evidence has been rejected by a lower Court, he must be able to show that the evidence was Civil procedure.

Rajah Leelanund v. Rajah Mohendernarain, 13 Moo. I. A, 57 (1869)

(1) Rajah Leelanund v. Raja Mohendernarain, 13 Moo I. A, 57 (1869).

(2) Lukhi Narain v. Maharaja Jadu, 21 I. A, 39 (1893), s. c., 21 C, 504

(3) Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra v. Saradindu Ray, 27 C. L. J, 599; s. c., 45 I. C., 767

(4) Beer Chunder v Ram Gutty, 8 W. R. 209 (1867); and see Gurgamala Chowdhrain v. Madhab Chunder, 10 W. R., 413 (1868).

(5) Wise v. Bhoobun Moyee, 10 Moo I A, 165, 171 (1863); s c, 3 W. R., P. C, 5.

(6) Rhedoy Kristo v Nobin Chunder, 12 C. L. R, 457 (1880); see Nistarinee v Kaliprshad Dass, 23 W. R., 431 (1875)

(7) Judoonath Mullick v. Kalee Kristo, 25 W. R., 524 (1875).

(8) Skinner & Co. v. Ranee Shama, 19 W. R., 429 (1873).

(9) Uma Sankar v. Munsur Ali, 5 B. L. R, App, 6 (1870).

tendered and rejected.(1) As to the onus in criminal and civil appeals respectively, v. Notes, s. 3. If a person other than the defendant alleges that he has been dispossessed, in the execution of a decree, from land or other immovable property which was bonâ fide in his possession on his own account or on account of some person other than the defendant, and that it was not included in the decree, or if included in the decree, that he was no party to the suit in which such decree was passed; it was held under section 230, Act VIII of 1859, that it lay on him to prove his possession: that he might, if he wished, give evidence of title beyond possession, but it was not absolutely necessary for him to do so in the first instance.(2) The burden of proving that a summons was not served under the 19th section of Act VIII of 1859, now O. IX, r. 13, of the Civil Procedure Code, lies upon the person claiming the benefit of the section.(3) A defendant who pleads the minority of the plaintiff as a bar to the suit is bound to substantiate his plea (4) When a defendant impeaches the correctness of plaintiff, who should not rectness.(5) In a suit for ne onus lies on the defendant to prove that there was a material irregularity in publishing and conducting it.(6) In suits for mesne profits when the defendants have been in possession of the property as wrong-doers, the onus is on them to show what were the sums realized as rent during the time of their possession.(7) Where a person purchased at an execution-sale a tora garas huk, or the right to a certain annual payment made by Government, and sued the Collector to have his name inscribed on the books as the payee, it was held that the onus lay on the Government to show that the right was inalienable (8) In a claim by judgment debtors to properties seized in execution of a decree against them as representatives of the original debtor the burden of proof was held to lie on the decree-holder who asserted that the property seized in execution of his decree was the property of the deceased debtor and as such in the possession of the judgment-debtors.(9) The plaintiff in a suit under O. XXI, r. 63 of the Civil Procedure Code is neither in a better nor in a worse position than he was as a claimant in the summary proceeding. It is sufficient for him to produce evidence of possession or title If he sho... section 110 of this Act throws the onus on the defe

attachment of property which was disall

O. XXI, r 63, of Civil Procedure Code.

objector to prove that the deed he relied o

It lies on him who asserts it to prove

(1) Modee Kaikhooscrow v Coovorbhaee, 6 Moo I. A, 448 (1856).

(2) Radha Pyari v Nobin Chundra, 5 B L. R., 708 (1870); Brindabun Chunder v. Tarachand Bundopadhya, 11 B L. R, 237 (1873); Yusan Khatun v. Ramnath Sen, 7 B. L. R., App, 26 (1871); Sharoda Moyee v. Nobin Chunder, 11 W. R., 235 (1869); Mahomed Ausar v. Prokash Chunder, 8 W. R, 8 (1867).

(3) Torab Ali v. Chooramun Singh, 24 W. R, 262 (1875).

(4) Chyet Narain v Bunwaree Singh, 23 W. R., 395 (1875), Nil Monee v. Zuheerunnissa Khanum, 8 W. R, 371 (1867).

(5) Gouree Narain v. Madhoo Dutt, 2 W. R. (Act X), 1 (1865).

(6) Bandi Bibi v. Kalka, 9 A, (1887), see also Shib Singh v. Mukat Singh, 18 A, 437 (1896).

(7) Brajendra Coomar v. Madhub Chunder, 8 C., 343 (1882).

(8) Shambhoo Lall v. Collector of Surat, 8 Moo I. A, 1 (1859); 4 W. R., P. C, 55.

(9) Abdul Rahman v. Mahomed Azim, 4 C. W. N., xxviii (1899).

(10) Palaneappa Chetti v. Maung Pro Song, U. B. R (1905). See Narayan Ganesh v. Bhirrag, 2 N L R, 87.

(11) Laig Ram v Thola Singh, 47 P. L. R (1919). And see as to proof of possession Maung ... v. Ma Hnyem, 37 I. C, 767, ... T., 238

(12) Kumar ... Dhirendra Roy, 2 C that the law of a foreign State differs from ours, and in the absence of such proof it must be held that no difference exists, except possibly so far as the law here rests on the Specific Acts of the Legislature (1) See "Attachment," "Auction-purchaser," "Avoidance," ante; "Notices," post.

Consideration.

It is the established practice of the Courts in India, in cases of contract to require satisfactory proof that consideration has been actually received, according to the terms of the contract, and a contract under seal does not, of itself, in India, import that there was a sufficient consideration for the agreement. A plaintiff, however, suing to set aside a security admittedly executed by himself must make out a good primâ facie case before the defendants can be called on to prove consideration.(2) As to recitals of receipt of consideration in documents, see post, "Recitals" In a suit on an instrument the plaintiff is entitled to recover upon showing that it was executed by the defendant. The onus lies upon the defendant of showing the want of consideration.(3) Mere denial by the vendor of receipt of consideration acknowledged in the recitals of deed of sale is not in all cases sufficient to cast upon the vendee the burden of proving the payment of consideration. Where the plaintiff wished to set aside a contract of sale of which there had been performance and under which the defendant had been in possession and enjoyment of the subject-matter and in possession of the title deeds, he must establish at least a good primâ facie title to the relief which he seeks (4) In a suit to set aside a deed perfected by possession on the ground of failure of consideration, it lies upon the plaintiff to make out the case alleged by him, and to establish at least a good primâ facie title to the relief prayed for, so as to cast on the defendants the burden of proving the consideration. A party who comes into Court to enforce a bond is in a very different position from him who is suing to set aside a contract under which there has been possession and enjoyment and of which so far as it has yet been capable of being performed there has been performance.(5) It has been held that a recital of the receipt of such consideration in a deed may be sufficient proof of the receipt of such consideration for such deed: and an admission by recital in a document of further charge of the receipt of consideration upon a previous mortgage may be sufficient evidence of the receipt of consideration upon that mortgage (6) But in a later case it has been held that the recital of receipt of consideration in a mortgage-deed of which the execution has been proved only raises a rebuttable, though strong, presumption that the consideration was paid(7) and in another that recitals are not in themselves conclusive evidence of the facts alleged. (8) Where the defendant had admitted the receipt of consideration before the registering officer, the onus was held to be upon him to disprove such receipt (9) And where a mortgagor whose bond contained an admission of receipt of consideration denied receipt of consideration before the Registrar, it was held that

---

(1) Raghunathji Mulchand v Jivandas Madanjee, 8 Bom L. R, 525, and as to proof that settler of a settlement was a foreigner with foreign domicile, see Bonnaud v Charrol, 32 C, 631

(2) Raja Sahib v Budhu Singh, 2 B L R, 111, P C (1869) see Baboo Ghansum v Chukowree Singh, W. R, (1864), 197.

(3) Juggut Chunder v Bhugwan Chunder, Marsh Rep, 27 (1862)

(4) Rampal Ram v Suba Singh, 4 Pat L J, 517, s. c, 53 I C, 83, as to onus on plaintiff in case of denial, see Neki Ram v Khushi Ram, 39 P L. R, 1919

(5) Kaleepershad Tewaree v Pershad Sen 12 Moo I A, 282 (1869), s c., 2 B L R., P C, 122

(6) Priyanath Chatterjee v Bissessur Dass 1 C W N, ccxxii (1897) As to however admission dispensing with proof of attestation, see Abdul Karim v. Solimum, 27 C, 190 (1899).

(7) Babbu v Sita Ram, 36 A., 478 (1914), per Richards, C J.

(8) Khub Lal Singh v Ajodhya Misser, 43 C, 576 (1916), see Brij Lal v. Mola Kunwar, P C., 36 A., 187 (1914).

(9) Ali Khan v Indar Parshad, 32 C., 950 (1896).

the onus of proving non-receipt of consideration lay upon the mortgagor (1) But in the Allahabad High Court it has been held that the withholding of possession without protest raises a counter-presumption that the consideration has not been paid.(2) And in another case where the plaintiffs, who were usufructuary mortgagees, did not claim possession till the period of limitation had almost expired, and the defendant pleaded that the consideration had not been paid; it has been held that the burden of proof of the payment of the consideration had been shifted to the plaintiffs.(3) In the undermentioned case the plaintiff rested his case entirely upon the bond and the defendant's acknowledgment thereon that Rs 8,000 were received in cash. At the trial the defendants proved that acknowledgment to be fictitious and that only part of the money had been advanced; held that the onus was upon the plaintiff to prove in some other way the advance which he alleged.(4) When the execution of a mortgage or other conveyance is proved, it is not necessary to prove as against a third person that the consideration passed.(5) If in a suit on a hundi the execution is admitted by the executant, the burden of proving special circumstances exonerating him from liability to the amount of the hundi lies on the executant.(6) In a suit to impeach a deed to which he has been a party the onus lies on the plaintiff to make out a case for setting aside on equitable grounds a deed duly executed for valuable consideration (7) See further ante, "Bonds" and post, "Recitals."

Contract conveyance. Where a party alleges a contract and breach thereof, with resulting damages, it will, of course, be upon him, in the first instance, to prove the contract, the facts of its violation, and injury suffered thereby. But if a defendant answers to a contract made by him, that he acted exclusively as agent for [illegible] he set up infancy, [illegible] fraud, payment, [illegible] contract to sow indigo, not sowing would be primâ facie evidence of dishonesty, and in order to claim the benefit of th[illegible] 1823, the onus is on the [illegible] to sow had been accident[illegible] accidental injury to goods bailed depends upon the particular circumstances of each case and, if the bailee gives an explanation of the nature of the accident, which is not uncontradicted nor primâ facie improbable, the onus is shifted.(10) In the case cited the onus was placed on plaintiff to prove negligence of bailee (11) Where a razinamah is alleged to have been obtained by fraud or duress, the onus lies on the person alleging it to prove the fraud: it is not sufficient to say that it is a case of doubt; that there are suspicious

(1) Mahabir Prasad v Bishan Dyal, 1 All. L J. (Diary), 186 (1904), s c, 27 A, 71.

(2) Achobandil v. Mahabir (1896), 8 A, 641

(3) Bihari v Ramchandra, A C (1911), 33 A, 483. Distinguishing Mahabir Prasad v. Bishan Dyal, supra

(4) Lala Lakmi v Sayed Haidor, 4 C W N, 82 (1899)

(5) Chinnan v. Ramchandra, 15 M., 54 (1891), at p 53, and see Lal Achal v. Raja Kazim, 9 C. W. N, 477; s c, 32 I. A., 113, 121 (1905); Rup Chand v. Sarbessur Chandra, 10 C W N, 747 (1906) at p. 751.

(6) Ram Das v. Muthra Das, 6 P L R. (1905).

(7) Ashibagi v Abdulla Haji Mahomed, 31 B, 271, following Melbourne Banking Corporation v. Brougham (1882), 7 A C., 307.

(8) Wharton, Ev, § 357, and as to payment Chuni Kuar v. Udai Ram (1883), 6 A, 73. See, as to onus on subsequent purchaser without notice in suit for specific performance, 4 Pat L. W, 152

(9) Lall Mahomed v Watson & Co, 1 Ind Jur, 3 (1866).

(10) Shields v Wilkinson, 9 A, 398 (1887), Rampal Singh v Murray & Co, 22 A, 164 (1899); cf Wharton, Ev, §§ 363—365

(11) Dwarkanath Rajmohun Choudhuri v. River Steam Navigation Co, 27 C. L. J., 615, P C

circumstances &c , &c (1) In a suit by zur-i-peshgi mortgagees for possession and to set aside a mukururee lease, which it was alleged by the defendant was granted to him by the mortgagor before the mortgage, it was held that, as the [illegible] onus was on [illegible] the validity [illegible] ut. the onus [illegible] ow that the mukururee was executed before the zur-i-peshgi mortgage and was granted bonâ fide for a real consideration and was intended to be operative.(2) Where a claimant against the estate of a deceased Hindu relied upon a document which purported to be executed by his widow, it was held that the onus of proving the execution was upon the claimant.(3) Primâ facie when the execution of a mortgage or other conveyance is proved, further evidence is not required to show that the purchaser has taken the interest which the document purports to convey (4) The onus is on the grantor of a maintenance grant (which is primâ facie resumable on the death of the grantee) to show that he has a right to take minerals from the grantee s property during the subsistence of the grant (5)

When the law makes the validity of a document depend on certain formalities, then they must be duly proved by the plaintiff If an act, for instance, makes a document inoperative unless duly registered or stamped, then the document cannot be put in evidence without proof of such registry, or stamp. But a primâ facie compliance with the law in this respect is sufficient for the plaintiff's case If the document is, on its face, duly executed, then it will be presumed that the execution was regular, and the burden of contesting the execution falls on the party assailing the document (6) If one of the contracting parties alleges that an agreement is opposed to public policy, it is for [illegible] which will invalidate the [illegible] n the ground of want of [illegible] vant of authority (8) See [illegible] ante , "Fraud," "Good [illegible] Tenant," "Partnership," "Payment," "Recitals," post

The onus of proving everything essential to the establishment of the charge against the accused lies upon the prosecution who must prove the charge substantially as laid That onus never changes For every man is to be regarded as legally innocent until the contrary be proved, and criminality is never to be presumed (9)

Criminal Law.

So the burden of proving guilty intention lies upon the prosecution where the intent is expressly stated as part of the definition of the crime.(10)

(1) Motee Lall v Juggurnath Gurg, 1 Moo I A, 1 (1836)

(2) Shamnarain v Administrator-General of Bengal, 23 W R, 111 (1875)

(3) Ram Ratan v Nanda 19 C, 249 (1891)

(4) Chinnan v Ramchandra, 15 M, 54 (1891) at p 55

(5) Prince Mahomed v Rani Dhojamani, 1 Cal L J, 20 (1905)

(6) Wharton, Ev, § 369

(7) Bakshi Das v Nadu Das, 1 Cal L. J, 26 (1905)

(8) Bissessur Das v Smidt, 10 C W. N, 14 (1905).

(9) See notes to s. 3, ante and cases there cited; Wharton, Ev, § 1244; and Hathem Mondal v King Emperor, 24 C W N, 619, Panchanan Bose v Emperor, 23 C W N, 693, Khorshed Kazi v. R, 8 C L R, 542 (1881), Madapusi Srinivasa v Tirumalai Kasturi, 4 M., 393 (1881), Ramasami v. Lokanada, 9 M., 387 (1885) [newspaper libel, effect of Act XXV of 1867 in throwing onus on accused] And for proof of intention in sedition v ante, p. 208. In re Pandya Nayak, 7 M, 436 (1884). In re Rowthakonni, 9 M, 431 (1885); R. v. Balkrishna Vithal, 17 B, 573, 579 (1893); Deli Singh v R., 5 C. W. N, 413 (1901).

(10) Mahommed Siddiq v R. (1907), 11 C. W. N, 91.

Thus an accused cannot be convicted of the offence of fabricating false evidence under section 193 of the Penal Code in the absence of a finding that his intention was that the false entry might appear in evidence in a proceeding as contemplated by section 192 of the Penal Code (1) But, if there are several different intentions specified in a section of the Penal Code, it is not necessary to prove specifically which of the several guilty intentions the accused had; it will be enough if it is shown that the intention must have been one or other of those specified in the section in question, though it may not be certain which it was.(2) And though the prosecution must prove the existence of some one or more of the intentions in the Code, the proof need not be direct, that is, by the confession of the accused, showing that his intention was one of those mentioned in the Code, or by the evidence of witnesses proving that he admitted to them that such was his intention. It will be enough if it is proved like any other fact (and the existence of intention is a fact) by the evidence of conduct and surrounding circumstances (3) And the intention may be deduced, as when it is inferred from the fact that the offenders inflicted injuries which they knew were likely to cause death (4) Thus in some later decisions in the Allahabad High Court where several men attacked another with lathis and he died from his injuries, they were convicted of murder(5) but even in later similar cases in the Bombay High Court, the verdict was changed to culpable homicide on appeal, as it was held to be possible that the blow had been more violent than was intended.(6) So also guilty knowledge must, when necessary, be proved by the prosecution. Where facts are as consistent with a prisoner's innocence as with his guilt, innocence must be presumed; and criminal intent or knowledge is not necessarily imputable to every man who acts contrary to the provisions of the law (7)

These general rules laying the burden of proof upon the prosecution are qualified by those contained in sections 105, 106, post.

An accused person is not bound to account for his movements at or about the time an offence was committed, unless there has been given legal evidence sufficient primâ facie to convict him of the offence (8) In a reference by a Presidency Magistrate to the High Court under section 432 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, as to whether on the facts stated any offence has been committed by an accused person, it lies on the prosecution to make out that an offence has been committed and under the circumstances the prosecution must begin (9) When a former valid subsisting marriage has been proved, the onus is entirely upon the defence to show that the earlier subsisting marriage has been validly dissolved.(10) When an accused person alleges that an offence with which he is charged has been compounded so as to take away the jurisdiction of the Criminal Courts to try it, the onus is on him to show that there was a

(1) Balmakund Ram v. Ghansam Ram, 22 C, 391, 403 (1894), for s. 106, post, applies only to cases where the accused sets up an intent in his defence; see also Deputy Legal Remembrancer v. Karuna Baistobi, 22 C, 164, 173 (1894), Khorshed Kazi v R, 8 C L. R., 542 (1881); In re Rowthokonni, 9 M., 431 (1885) As to the effect to be given to the word "knowingly" in a penal enactment, see R. v. Fisher, 14 M, 359 (1891).

(2) Balmakund Ram v. Ghansam Ram, supra, 403, 404

(3) Balmakund Ram v. Ghansam Ram, supra, 406; Deputy Legal Remembrancer v. Karoona Baistobi, supra, 163, 174; R. v. Ishri (1907), 29 A, 46; R. v. Mulla, 37 A., 395 (1915); R. v. Gaya Bhor, 38 A, 517 (1916); Sellamuthu v Pellamutha Karuppan, 35 M., 186 (1912).

(4) Elam Molla v. R (1907), 37 C. 179.

(5) R. v Ram Newaz, 35 A., 506 (1913), R. v. Hanuman, 35 A, 560 (1913); R v. Kanhai, 35 A., 329 (1913)

(6) R. v Sardarkhan Jaridkan, 41 B., 2 (1917).

(7) R. v. Nobokristo Ghose, 8 W. R., Cr, 87, 89 (1867).

(8) R. v. Bepin Biswas, 10 C., 970 (1884).

(9) R. v. Haradhan, 19 C, 380 (1892).

(10) In re Milard, 10 M, 218, 221 (1887).

composition valid in law.(1) Where the prosecution proved that a place was a foreshore, that was held sufficient to throw the onus on the accused to show that the foreshore was a private market within the meaning of the Bombay Municipal Act.(2) Where the prosecution proved that an accused person had been found in the complainant's house at 2 A.M. and had not explained his presence there, it was held that his presence there at that hour raised a presumption of guilty intent which it was for him to rebut (3) When an order is passed by a Magistrate under the Criminal Procedure Code, requiring any person to "show cause" why he should not be ordered to furnish security for the peace, the onus lies upon the prosecution to establish circumstances justifying the action of the Magistrate in calling for security.(4) But section 7 of Act XXV of 1867, throws the onus on the accused.(5)

In a trial of an accused under sections 304 and 325, Indian Penal Code, certain witnesses, who deposed to seeing the homicide take place and who gave evidence before the Magistrate, were not called and examined in the Court of Session. Held, that every witness who was present at the commission of such an offence ought to be called(6); and that even if they give different accounts, it is fit that the jury should hear their evidence so as to enable them to draw their own conclusions as to the real truth of the matter.(7) Held, also, that the duty of producing the evidence primâ facie devolves on the public prosecutor(8), and though the burden of the prosecution is not to be thrown upon the Judge(9), there is an obligation upon him not merely to receive and adjudicate upon the evidence submitted to him by the parties but also to enquire to the utmost into the truth of the matter before him.(10)

It is the duty of the prosecution to produce all available witnesses and not merely those who support the charge (11) This rule is not a technical one but is founded on justice and humanity. And when the prosecution refrains from calling witnesses able to give important evidence, an inference adverse to it [illegible] the prosecution to show [illegible] er's guilt has been estab- [illegible]

It is incumbent upon a party to a suit, who relies upon a custom as overriding the general law of the land, or that of the community to which he belongs, to specify that custom distinctly and to establish it without any reasonable doubt.(13) So it has been held that the onus of proving that the adoption Custom.

(1) Murray v R, 21 C, 103 (1893).

(2) R v Budhoobai, 7 Bom L R, 726 (1905)

(3) R v Mulla, 37 A, 395 (1915)

(4) R v Abdul Kadir, 9 A, 452 (1886), R v Nirunjun Singh, All H. C R, p 431 (1870), Behari Patak v Mahomed Hyat, 4 B L R, F B, 46 (1869)

(5) See R v Phanendra Nath Mitter (1908), 35 Cal, 945

(6) See Nibaran Chandra Roy v. R (1907), 11 C W N, 1085, and cases cited, ante, in Introd to Part III

(7) R v Holden, 8 C & P, 610

(8) R v Dhunno Kazi, 8 C, 121 (1881), [referred to in Sadu Sheikh v. R, 4 C. W N, 576 (1900)], R. v Kasinath Dinkar, 8 Bom H C R, Cr, 153 (1871)

(9) R v Page, 2 Cox C C, 221.

(10) R. v Dhamba Porhya, 16 Ind, Jur, N S, 58 (1891), citing Melvil, J in R v. Tukaram, 17th August, 1871

(11) Ram Ranjan Roy v Emperor, 42 C, 422 (1915), Amrita Lal Hasra v. Emperor, 42 C., 957 (1915); see R. v. Holden, 8 C & P, 606 (1838).

(12) Kunchan Mallik v Emperor, 42 C, 374 (1915) See 34 M. L J, 48

(13) Mussumut Natukhee v. Chowdhry Chintamun, 20 W R, 247, 248 (1870); Gopal Narhar v Hanmant Ganesh, 3 B, 373 (1879); Hirbai v. Gorbai, 12 Bom. H C, 294 (1875), Rahimatbai v. Hirbai, 3 B, 34 (1877); Rajah Mahendra v. Jokha Singh, 19 W R, 211 (1873); Thakoor Jitnath v. Lokenath Sahee, 19 W. R, 239 (1873); Adrishappa v Gurushidappa, 4 B, 494 (1880); Gosain Rambharti v. Gosain Ishtarbharti, 5 B, 682 (1880); Cassumbhoy Ahmedbhoy v. Ahmedbhoy Hubibhoy, 12 B, 280 (1887); s. c., in appeal, 13 B., 534 (1887) Maharaja of Jeypore v.

Thus an accused cannot be convicted of the offence of fabricating false evidence under section 193 of the Penal Code in the absence of a finding that his intention was that the false entry might appear in evidence in a proceeding as contemplated by section 192 of the Penal Code.(1) But, if there are several different intentions specified in a section of the Penal Code, it is not necessary to prove specifically which of the several guilty intentions the accused had; it will be enough if it is shown that the intention must have been one or other of those specified in the section in question, though it may not be certain which it was.(2) And though the prosecution must prove the existence of some one or more of the intentions in the Code, the proof need not be direct, that is, by the confession of the accused, showing that his intention was one of those mentioned in the Code, or by the evidence of witnesses proving that he admitted to them that such was his intention. It will be enough if it is proved like any [illegible] fact) by the evidence of cond[illegible] intention may be deduced, as [illegible] inflicted injuries which they [illegible] some later decisions in the Allahabad High Court where several men attacked another with lathis and he died from his injuries, they were convicted of murder(5) but even in later similar cases in the Bombay High Court, the verdict was changed to culpable homicide on appeal, as it was held to be possible that the blow had been more violent than was intended (6) So also guilty knowledge must, when necessary, be proved by the prosecution. Where facts are as consistent with a prisoner's innocence as with his guilt, innocence must be presumed; and criminal intent or knowledge is not necessarily imputable to every man who acts contrary to the provisions of the law.(7)

These general rules laying the burden of proof upon the prosecution are qualified by those contained in sections 105, 106, post.

An accused person is not bound to account for his movements at or about the time an offence was committed, unless there has been given legal evidence sufficient primâ facie to convict him of the offence.(8) In a reference by a Presidency Magistrate to the High Court under section 432 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, as to whether on the facts stated any offence has been committed by an accused person, it lies on the prosecution to make out that an offence has been committed and under the circumstances the prosecution must begin.(9) When a former valid subsisting marriage has been proved, the onus is entirely upon the defence to show that the earlier subsisting marriage has been validly dissolved (10) When an accused person alleges that an offence with which he is charged has been compounded so as to take away the jurisdiction of the Criminal Courts to try it, the onus is on him to show that there was a

(1) Balmakund Ram v Ghansam Ram, 22 C, 391, 403 (1894), for s 106, post, applies only to cases where the accused sets up an intent in his defence; see also Deputy Legal Remembrancer v. Karuna Baistobi, 22 C, 164, 173 (1894), Khorshed Kazi v R, 8 C. L R, 542 (1881); In re Rowthokonni, 9 M, 431 (1885). As to the effect to be given to the word "knowingly" in a penal enactment, see R. v. Fisher, 14 M, 359 (1891).

(2) Balmakund Ram v. Ghansam Ram, supra, 403, 404

(3) Balmakund Ram v. Ghansam Ram, supra, 406; Deputy Legal Remembrancer v. Karoona Baistobi, supra, 163, 174; R v. Ishri (1907), 29 A, 46; R. v. Mulla, 37 A., 395 (1915), R. v Gaya Bhor, 38 A, 517 (1916); Sellamuthu v Pellamutha Karuppan, 35 M, 186 (1912).

(4) Elam Molla v. R. (1907), 37 C., 179

(5) R. v. Ram Newaz, 35 A, 506 (1913); R v. Hanuman, 35 A, 560 (1913); R v Kanhai, 35 A, 329 (1913).

(6) R v. Sardarkhan Jaridkan, 41 B., 2 (1917).

(7) R. v. Nobokristo Ghose, 8 W. R., Cr, 87, 89 (1867).

(8) R v. Bepin Biswas, 10 C., 970 (1884).

(9) R. v. Haradhan, 19 C, 380 (1892).

(10) In re Milard, 10 M., 218, 221 (1887).

composition valid in law.(1) Where the prosecution proved that a place was a foreshore, that was held sufficient to throw the onus on the accused to show that the foreshore was a private market within the meaning of the Bombay Municipal Act (2) Where the prosecution proved that an accused person had been found in the complainant's house at 2 A.M. and had not explained his presence there, it was held that his presence there at that hour raised a presumption of guilty intent which it was for him to rebut.(3) When an order is passed by a Magistrate under the Criminal Procedure Code, requiring any person to "show cause" why he should not be ordered to furnish security for the peace, the onus lies upon the prosecution to establish circumstances justifying the action of the Magistrate in calling for security.(4) But section 7 of Act XXV of 1867, throws the onus on the accused.(5)

In a trial of an accused under sections 304 and 325, Indian Penal Code, certain witnesses, who deposed to seeing the homicide take place and who gave evidence before the Magistrate, were not called and examined in the Court of Session Held, that every witness who was present at the commission of such an offence ought to be called(6), and that even if they give different accounts, it is fit that the jury should hear their evidence so as to enable them to draw their own conclusions as to the real truth of the matter (7) Held, also, that the duty of producing the evidence primâ facie devolves on the public prosecutor(8), and though the burden of the prosecution is not to be thrown upon the Judge(9), there is an obligation upon him not merely to receive and adjudicate upon the evidence submitted to him by the parties but also to enquire to the utmost into the truth of the matter before him (10)

It is the duty of the prosecution to produce all available witnesses and not merely those who support the charge (11) This rule is not a technical one but is founded on justice and humanity. And when the prosecution refrains from calling witnesses able to give important evidence, an inference adverse to it may be drawn. In a criminal appeal the burden is on the prosecution to show that its case is substantially true and that the prisoner's guilt has been established beyond reasonable doubt.(12)

Custom.

It is incumbent upon a party to a suit, who relies upon a custom as overriding the general law of the land, or that of the community to which he belongs, to specify that custom distinctly and to establish it without any reasonable doubt.(13) So it has been held that the onus of proving that the adoption

(1) Murray v R, 21 C, 103 (1893)
(2) R v Budhoobai, 7 Bom L R, 726 (1905)
(3) R v. Mulla, 37 A, 395 (1915)
(4) R v Abdul Kadir, 9 A, 452 (1886), R v Nirunjun Singh, All. H. C. R, p 431 (1870), Behari Patak v Mahomed Hyat, 4 B L. R, F B., 46 (1869)
(5) See R. v. Phanendra Nath Mitter (1908), 35 Cal, 945.
(6) See Nibaran Chandra Roy v. R. (1907), 11 C. W. N., 1085; and cases cited, ante, in Introd to Part III.
(7) R v. Holden, 8 C & P., 610.
(8) R. v. Dhunno Kazi, 8 C, 121 (1881). [referred to in Sadu Sheikh v. R., 4 C. W. N, 576 (1900)]; R v Kasinath Dinkar, 8 Bom. H. C. R, Cr., 153 (1871).
(9) R. v Page, 2 Cox. C. C., 221.
(10) R. v. Dhamba Porhya, 16 Ind, Jur, N S, 58 (1891), citing Melvil, J in R v. Tukaram, 17th August, 1871.
(11) Ram Ranjan Roy v Emperor, 42 C, 422 (1915); Amrita Lal Hazra v. Emperor, 42 C., 957 (1915); see R. v. Holden, 8 C & P, 606 (1838).
(12) Kunchan Mallik v Emperor, 42 C, 374 (1915). See 34 M. L. J, 48.
(13) Mussumut Natukhee v. Chowdhry Chintamun, 20 W. R, 247, 248 (1870); Gopal Narhar v. Hanmant Ganesh, 3 B, 373 (1879); Hirbai v Gorbai, 12 Bom. H C., 294 (1875); Rahimatbai v. Hirbai, 3 B, 34 (1877); Rajah Mahendra v Jokha Singh, 19 W. R., 211 (1873); Thakur Jitnath v. Lokenath Sahee, 19 W. R, 239 [illegible] in appeal, 13 I, [illegible] 534 (1882). Maharaja of Jeypore v. [illegible]

Thus an accused cannot be convicted of the offence of fabricating false evidence under section 193 of the Penal Code in the absence of a finding that his intention was that the false entry might appear in evidence in a proceeding as contemplated by section 192 of the Penal Code (1) But, if there are several different intentions specified in a section of the Penal Code, it is not necessary to prove specifically which of the several guilty intentions the accused had; it will be enough if it is shown that the intention must have been one or other of those specified in the section in question, though it may not be certain which it was.(2) And though the prosecution must prove the existence of some one or more of the intentions in the Code, the proof need not be direct, that is, by the confession of the accused, showing that his intention was one of those mentioned in the Code, or by the evidence of witnesses proving that he admitted to them that such was his intention. It will be enough if it is proved like any other fact (and the existence of intention is a fact) by the evidence of conduct and surrounding circumstances.(3) And the intention may be deduced, as when it is inferred from the fact that the offenders inflicted injuries which they knew were likely to cause death.(4) Thus in some later decisions in the Allahabad High Court where several men attacked another with lathis and he died from his injuries, they were convicted of murder(5) but even in later similar cases in the Bombay High Court, the verdict was changed to culpable homicide on appeal, as it was held to be possible that the blow had been more violent than was intended (6) So also guilty knowledge must, when necessary, be proved by the prosecution. Where facts are as consistent with a prisoner's innocence as with his guilt, innocence must be presumed; and criminal intent or knowledge is not necessarily imputable to every man who acts contrary to the provisions of the law (7)

These general rules laying the burden of proof upon the prosecution are qualified by those contained in sections 105, 106, post.

An accused person is not bound to account for his movements at or about the time an offence was committed, unless there has been given legal evidence sufficient primâ facie to convict him of the offence.(8) In a reference by a Presidency Magistrate to the High Court under section 432 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, as to whether on the facts stated any offence has been committed by an accused person, it lies on the prosecution to make out that an offence has been committed and under the circumstances the prosecution must begin.(9) When a former valid subsisting marriage has been proved, the onus is entirely upon the defence to show that the earlier subsisting marriage has been validly dissolved.(10) When an accused person alleges that an offence with which he is charged has been compounded so as to take away the jurisdiction of the Criminal Courts to try it, the onus is on him to show that there was a

(1) Balmakund Ram v Ghansam Ram, 22 C., 391, 403 (1894), for s 106, post, applies only to cases where the accused sets up an intent in his defence; see also Deputy Legal Remembrancer v Karuna Baistobi, 22 C, 164, 173 (1894), Khorshed Kazi v R, 8 C L. R, 542 (1881); In re Rowthokonni, 9 M, 431 (1885). As to the effect to be given to the word "knowingly" in a penal enactment, see R. v. Fisher, 14 M, 359 (1891).

(2) Balmakund Ram v Ghansam Ram, supra, 403, 404

(3) Balmakund Ram v. Ghansam Ram, supra, 406; Deputy Legal Remembrancer v. Karoona Baistobi, supra, 163, 174; R. v. Ishri (1907), 29 A, 46; R v. Mulla, 37 A, 395 (1915); R v Gaya Bhor, 38 A., 517 (1916); Sellamuthu v. Pellamutha Karuppan, 35 M, 186 (1912)

(4) Elam Molla v R (1907), 37 C., 179

(5) R. v Ram Newas, 35 A, 506 (1913), R. v Hanuman, 35 A, 560 (1913); R v. Kanhai, 35 A, 329 (1913).

(6) R. v. Sardarkhan Jaridkan, 41 B, 2 (1917).

(7) R v. Nobokristo Ghose, 8 W. R., Cr, 87, 89 (1867).

(8) R. v. Bepin Biswas, 10 C., 970 (1884)

(9) R. v. Haradhan, 19 C, 380 (1892).

(10) In re Milard, 10 M, 218, 221 (1887).

as Khojas and Cutchi Memons.(1) The main question for determination in the case cited was whether an alienee of ancestral immovable property from the person governed by custom is bound to prove necessity or enquiry as to necessity with respect to a debt due by the alienor to an antecedent creditor and which had been discharged by the alienee. In other words, is it the duty of the alienee to enquire not only as to the existence of the antecedent debt but also into the nature of the necessity thereof. Held, per Sadi Lal, J., that an alienee discharging an antecedent debt is not required to make an enquiry into the nature thereof and that this is in accord with the rule laid down in Debiditta v. Sowdagur Singh, 65 P R, 1900 (F. B). Held per Le Rossignol, J., that the principle laid down in Debiditta v. Sowdagur Singh is that the initial onus lies on the outsider alienee to show that the debts were due and when he has discharged that onus the turn of the opposite party then comes to show that the alienee made no proper enquiry or that if he made one he must have learned of the real nature of the debts The words ' made no enquiry whatever " in Debiditta v. Sowdagur Singh refer to an enquiry as to the existence of the debts, but include also an enquiry as to their nature if the party challenging the alienation can show that the result of the first enquiry should have raised doubts in the mind of an ordinarily prudent man as to the morality or reasonableness of the debts (2)

In a suit for damages for defamation of character the onus is on the plaintiff to prove that he was not guilty of the offence charged before the defendant can be called upon to show that he made the imputation in good faith and for the public good (3) Defamation.

Where a right of the nature of an easement is claimed, the onus of proving the existence of such right will be on the person claiming the right (4) Possession of an easement by order of a Magistrate passed under section 532 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act X of 1872) will not relieve the claimant from the onus of proving his claim.(5) No man can impose new or increased restriction or burden on his neighbour by his own act The burden is on the person who claims the easement to prove that when a hut was replaced by a two-storied building no additional burden was imposed on the servient tenement (6) Easements.

The party who maintains the validity of an election notwithstanding infringement of rule must satisfy the Court that the result of the election was not affected by the error or irregularity Estoppel cannot be pleaded where statutory requirements are disobeyed with full knowledge by the officers entrusted with the discharge of public duties (7) Election result.

A religious office can be held by a woman under the Mahomedan law unless there are duties of a religious nature attached to the office which she cannot perform in person or by deputy, and the burden of establishing that Exclusion from religious office

---

(1) As for primogeniture and rule in deorgation of Hindu Law see Shymanund Das Mahapatra v Ramakanta Das Mahapatra, 32 C, 6 & Abdul Hossain v Habibullah, 18 P R (1906), Badom Kumari v Suraj Kumari, 28 A, 458, Bai Baijee v Bai Santok, 20 B, 53 (1894)

(2) Jhundu v Niamat Khan 1 Lahore 472

(3) Mohendra Chandra v Surbo Khoja, 11 W. R 534 (1869), Raghabendra v Kashinath Bhat, 19 B, 717, 726 (1894) See Jardine J I see no difficulty in extending to cases like the present the rule as to burden of proof laid down in Abrath v North-Eastern Ry Co, Ltd, 11 Q B D, 440, 455, H L, 11 App Cas 247

(4) Hari Mohun v Kissen Sundari, 11 C, 52 (1884) Onract v Kissen Soondurie 15 W R 83 (1871)

(5) Obhoy Churn v Lukhy Monee, 2 C L R, 555 (1878) overruling Puchai Khan v Abed Sirdar, 21 W R, 140 (1874)

(6) Suresh Chandra Biswas v Jogendra Nath Sen, 32 C L J., 27.

(7) Shyam Chand Basak v Chairman Dacca Municipality, 47 C., 524

of a stranger is valid by custom rests on the adopted child.(1) And the more unusual a custom is, the stricter must be the proof (2) So, as the impartibility of a Raj does not render it inalienable as a matter of law, its inalienability depending upon family custom, the latter must be proved by him who alleges it.(3) And where a party alleges a Raj to be indivisible, and that he is, as heir, entitled to succeed to the whole, the onus of proof is upon him.(4) The question whether an estate is impartible is one of fact and in the absence of proof of the specific terms of a grant the circumstances must be considered.(5) The burden of proving that the custom in a particular family of primogeniture regulates the succession to their property is upon him who claims to inherit in that right.(6) So also in the case of maintenance out of impartible estate; (7) and a custom of collaterals to exclude daughter.(8) The burden of proving that the vatandar joshi of a village is not entitled to officiate and take fees in the family of any particular caste, lies upon the person asserting exemption (9) The onus of proving that a particular form of vicinage gives a preferential right of pre-emption rests on the persons asserting it.(10) When a person relies upon a local usage regulating the right to land the subject of alluvion or [illegible] m.(11) As to the [illegible] llowing principles [illegible] governs converts [illegible] n of such converts [illegible] ieral presumption [illegible]

(c) This custom should be confined strictly to cases of succession and inheritance. (d) If any particular custom of succession be alleged which is at variance with the general law applicable to these communities, the burden of proof lies on the party alleging such special custom. As under Mahomedan law adoption is not recognized, the onus of proving a custom of adoption contrary thereto lies on the person alleging it.(12)

If evidence is given as to the general prevalence of Hindu rules of succession in a Mahomedan community in preference to the rules of Mahomedan law, the burden of proof is discharged, and it then rests with the party disputing the particular Hindu usage in question, to show that it is excluded from the sphere of the proved general usage of the community Among Native Christians certain classes strictly retain the old Hindu usages, others retain these usages in a modified form, and others ag[illegible] Before the Indian Succession Act (X of 1865) the [illegible] attach himself to any one of these particular [illegible] by the usage of the class to which he so [illegible] principles are applied to the case of Hindu converts to Mahomedanism, such Vikrama Deo Garu, 32 C L J, 91 (P C.), s c, 24 C W. N., 226; Moman v. Musst Dhanni, 1 Lahore, 31.

(1) Moman v. Musst. Dhanni 1 Lahore, 31.

(2) Ganga Singh v Chedi Lal, 33 A, 605.

(3) Rajah Udaya v Jadablal Aditya, 8 I. A, 248 (1881); s c, 8 C, 199.

(4) Girdharee Singh v Koolahul Singh, 6 W. R., P C., 1 (1841); see Narasimha Appa Row v. Parthasarathy Appa Row, P. C., 37 M., 199 (1914)

(5) Baijnath Prasad Singh v Tej Bali Singh, 38 A, 590 (1916); Narasimha Appa Row v Parthasarathy Appa Row, 37 M, 199 (1914); Mallikarjuna v. Durga, P. C, 13 M, 406 (1906); 17 I. A., 134; see as to proof of custom, Mahamaya Debi v. Haridas Haldar, 42 C, 455 (1915); Janki Misir v. Ranno Singh, 35 A, 472 (1913).

(6) Garuradhwaja Prasad v Superundhwaja Prasad, 23 A, 37 (1900)

(7) Maharaja of Jeypore v Vikrama Deo Garu, 24 C. W. N, 226; s c, 31 C L. J., 91.

(8) Bhola Singh v. Babu, 1 Lahore, 464

(9) Rajah Valad v Krishnabhat, 3 B, 232 (1879)

(10) Dhumimal v Kalu, 67 P R. (1906).

(11) Rae Manick v Madhoram, 13 Moo I A., 1 (1869); see s. 2, Beng. Reg XI of 1825.

(12) Ghulam Ali Shah v Shahbal Singh, 3 P. R (1905).

(13) See Abraham v Abraham, 9 Moo. I A, 195 (1863).

as Khojas and Cutchi Memons.(1) The main question for determination in the case cited was whether an alienee of ancestral immovable property from the person governed by custom is bound to prove necessity or enquiry as to necessity with respect to a debt due by the alienor to an antecedent creditor and which had been discharged by the alienee In other words, is it the duty of the alienee to enquire not only as to the existence of the antecedent debt but also into the nature of the necessity thereof Held, per Sadi Lal, J , that an alienee discharging an antecedent debt is not required to make an enquiry into the nature thereof and that this is in accord with the rule laid down in Debiditta v. Sowdagur Singh, 65 P R , 1900 (F. B) Held per Le Rossignol, J , that the principle laid down in Debiditta v Sowdagur Singh is that the initial onus lies on the outsider alienee to show that the debts were due and when he has discharged that onus the turn of the opposite party then comes to show that the alienee made no proper enquiry or that if he made one he must have learned of the real nature of the debts The words " made no enquiry whatever " in Debiditta v. Sowdagur Singh refer to an enquiry as to the existence of the debts, but include also an enquiry as to their nature if the party challenging the alienation can show that the result of the first enquiry should have raised doubts in the mind of an ordinarily prudent man as to the morality or reasonableness of the debts (2)

Defamation. In a suit nus is on the plaintiff to prove efore the defendant can be called good faith and for the public good (3)

Easements. Where a right of the nature of an easement is claimed, the onus of proving the existence of such right will be on the person claiming the right (4) Possession of an easement by order of a Magistrate passed under section 532 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act X of 1872) will not relieve the claimant from the onus of proving his claim.(5) No man can impose new or increased restriction or burden on his neighbour by his own act The burden is on the person who claims the easement to prove that when a hut was replaced by a two-storied building no additional burden was imposed on the servient tenement (6)

Election result. The party who maintains the validity of an election notwithstanding infringement of rule must satisfy the Court that the result of the election was not affected by the error or irregularity. Estoppel cannot be pleaded where statutory requirements are disobeyed with full knowledge by the officers entrusted with the discharge of public duties (7)

Exclusion from religious office. A religious office can be held by a woman under the Mahomedan law unless there are duties of a religious nature attached to the office which she cannot perform in person or by deputy, and the burden of establishing that

---

(1) As for primogeniture and rule in deorgation of Hindu Law see Shymanund Das Mahapatra v Ramakanta Das Mahapatra, 32 C, 6, & Abdul Hossain v Habibullah, 18 P R (1906), Badom Kumari v Suraj Kumari, 28 A, 458, Bai Baijee v Bai Santok, 20 B, 53 (1894)

(2) Jhundu v Niamat Khan, 1 Lahore, 472

(3) Mohendra Chandra v Surbo Khoja, 11 W. R, 534 (1869); Raghabendra v Kashinath Bhat, 19 B, 717, 726 (1894) See Jardine, J I see no difficulty in extending to cases like the present the rule as to burden of proof laid down in Abrath v North-Eastern Ry Co, Ltd., 11 Q B D, 440, 455, H L, 11 App. Cas, 247

(4) Hari Mohun v Kissen Sundari, 11 C, 52 (1884), Onraet v Kissen Soondurec, 15 W R, 83 (1871)

(5) Obhoy Churn v Lukhy Monee, 2 C. L R, 555 (1878); overruling Puchai Khan v Abed Sirdar, 21 W. R., 140 (1874)

(6) Suresh Chandra Biswas v. Jogendra Nath Sen, 32 C. L J., 27.

(7) Shyam Chand Basak v. Chairman Dacca Municipality, 47 C., 524 a woman is precluded from holding a particular office is on those who plead the exclusion.(1)

Fraud.

In the undermentioned case(2) the Privy Council observed: "The habit may be superinduced by the manifold cases of fraud with which they have to deal; but Judges in India are perhaps somewhat too apt to see fraud everywhere."
...esumed or inf ... been effected l ... uence and the ... these grounds Fraud must be charged in the plaint, and vague allegations of fraud are not sufficient. When fraud is charged, it is a rule of pleading that the plaintiff must set forth the particulars of the fraud which he alleges. General allegations, however strong may be the words in which they are stated, are insufficient even to amount to an averment of fraud of which any Court ought to take notice.(5) When fraud is charged, the evidence must be confined to the allegations (6) It is a well-known rule, that a charge of fraud must be substantially proved as laid, and that when one kind of fraud is charged, another kind cannot, on failure of proof, be established for it.(7) A plaintiff who charges another with fraud must himself prove the fraud, and he is not released from this allegation because the defendant has himself told an untrue story.(8) When the plaintiff alleges that fraud only came to his knowledge at a certain time, it is for the defendant to prove that he was cognisant of it before that time (9) In a suit for a declaration that a decree in a certain rent suit was fraudulent the plaintiff must prove that the rent decree is fraudulent and absence of consistent the plainti

(1) Kassim Hassan v Hazra Begum, 32 C L J, 152

(2) Monshee Buzloor v Shumsoonissa Begum, 11 M I A, 602 (1867)

(3) Rajinder Narain v. Bijai Govind, 2 M I A, 181, 246 (1839); Achunth Singh v. Kishen Pershad, W R, 37 (1864); Mt. Sahordur v Joynarain, 1 W. R, 327 (1864), Annnd Moyce v Shib Dyal, 2 W. R, 2 (1865); Nawab Syed v Mt Amanee, 19 W R, 149, 150 (1878), P C, Kishen Dhun v Ram Dhun, 6 W. R, 235 (1866), Grish Chunder v Mohesh Chunder, 10 W R., 173 (1868), Ram Gutty v Mumtaj Bebee, 10 W R, 280 (1868), Lala Roodroo v. Binode Ram, 10 W. R., 32 (1868), Raj Narain v. Powshun Mull, 22 W. R, 124 (1874). [Mere speculation and probability will not in law support a finding of fraud]. Roop Ram v. Saseeram Nath, 23 W. R., 141 (1875); Bibee Kubeerun v. Bibee Sufeehun, 24 W. R, 388 (1875) Kubeeroodeen v. Jogal Shaha, 25 W. R, 133 (1876); Sikher Chund v Dulputty Singh, 5 C., 363 (1879), 5 C L R, 374 If the Court discredits the plaintiff's witnesses as regards the bonâ fides of a transaction which is impugned, it is at liberty to dismiss the suit, although the defendant gives no substantial evidence of fraud. Brajeshwore Peshakar v. Budhanuddi, 6 C, 268 (1880); Shib Narain v. Shankar Panigrahi, 5 C. W. N, 403 (1900).

(4) Motee Lal v. Jugghonnath Gurg, 1 M. I. A, 1 (1886), Zemindar of Ramnad v Zemindar of Yettiapooram, 7 M. I A, 441 (1859).

(5) Gung Narain v Tiluckram Chowdhry, 15 C., 533 (1888); s c, 15 I. A, 119; Prosunno Kumar v Kali Das, 19 C, 683 (1892); Krishnaji v. Wamnaji, 18 Bom., 144, 146 (1873); [instances must be given, it being unreasonable to require the opposite party to meet a general charge; Joomna Pershad v Joyrum Lall, 2 C. L R, 26 (1878), Land Mortgage Bank v Roy Luchmiput, 8 C. L R., 447 (1881); Wallingford v Mutual Society, 5 App. Cas, 697, 701. As to oral evidence of witnesses deposing in general terms being insufficient, see Sheboosoonduri Debea v. Syed Mahomed, W. R, 1864, 137.

(6) Krishnaji v. Wamnaji, 18 B, 144, 147 (1893).

(6) Abdul Hossein v Turner, 11 B, 620 (1887); 14 I. A., 111.

(8) Mahomed Golab v. Mahomed Sulliman, 21 C, 612 (1894).

(9) Natha Singh v. Jodha Singh, 6 A. 406 (1884); as to proof of knowledge of fraud, see Rahimbhoy Hubbibhoy v. Turner, 20 I A. 1 (1892).

proposition.(1) The burden rests upon the person who has committed a fraud to prove conclusively that the person injured by his fraud has had clear and definite knowledge of those facts which constituted the fraud at a time which is too remote to allow him to seek the assistance of the Court (2) But though fraud must be alleged specifically and proved as alleged, the proof offered need not be in all cases of a direct kind. "It is a truth confirmed by all experience, that in a great majority of cases fraud is not capable of being established by positive and express proofs. It is by its very nature secret in its movements, and if those whose duty it is to investigate questions of fraud were to insist upon direct proof in every case, the ends of justice would be constantly, if not usually, defeated We do not mean to say that fraud can be established by any less proof or by any different kind of proof from that which is required to establish any other disputed question of fact, or that circumstances of mere suspicion which lead to no certain result should be taken as sufficient proof of fraud, or that fruad should be presumed against anybody in any case, but what we mean to say is that, in the generality of cases, circumstantial evidence is our only resource in dealing with question of fraud, and if this evidence is sufficient to overcome the natural presumption of honesty and fair dealing and to satisfy a reasonable mind of the existence of fraud by raising a counter-presumption, there is no reason whatever why we should not act upon it "(3) An exception to the general rule with regard to the burden of proof exists where one party stands in a position of active confidence towards another, as to which, see the notes to section 111, post s for him

t a time ansfer of transfer prove his interest by showing conveyance for value If the consideration be grossly inadequate fraud is presumed and the transferee must prove that he took it in good faith (5)

Good and bad faith.

Good faith in a contracting party is a rebuttable presumption akin to the presumption of innocence, and, therefore, a person who charges bad faith has the burden of proving it (See notes to section 111, post) Section 111, post, the burden of proof, nfidence towards the l Law."

Government revenue.

Where the plaintiff sues to recover the amount of excess payment on account of Government revenue on behalf of co-sharers to save the estate from sale, the onus is on them to prove their shares and the amount of revenue payable on them (6) But of the revenue to the

a talukdar had receiv

whether particular sums had been received by the manager and used for payment of Government revenue was upon the creditor; the presumption being that the rents should have covered the revenue due, and, this having to be met, it was for the creditor to bring proof to overcome it (8)

(1) Amjad Ali Hasi v Ismail, 27 C L J, 137, s c, 44 I C, 504

(2) Ram Kinkar Tewari v Sthiti Ram Panja, 27 C. L J, 528

(3) Mathura Pandey v Ram Rucha, 3 B L R, A C, 108, 110, 111, per Dwarkanath Mitter, J; s c, 11 W R., 482

(4) Sukh Lal v Madhuri Prasad, 2 All L J, 350 (1905), Rajah Ratan Singh v. Thakur Man Singh, 1 N L. R., 20

(5) Jnanendra Nath Bose v Gadadhur Prasad, 50 I C, 463.

(6) Aghore Ram v Ramollee Sahoo, 24 W R, 209 (1874).

(7) Mahadeo Misser v. Lahore Misser, 24 W R., 250 (1875).

(8) Partab Singh v Chitphal Singh, 19 C, 174 (1891).

Hindu Law. Joint property

The following paragraphs which are not, and are not intended to be, exhaustive of the subject, should be read in conjunction with the matter treated under the same heading in the commentary to section 114. In consequence of the presumption that while a Hindu family remains joint, all property, includ- [illegible] joint family property, [illegible] ember who claims any [illegible] good deal of conflict, probably more apparent than real, between the decisions of the High Court of Bengal as to the question upon whom the onus of proof lies, where property is claimed by one person as being joint property and withheld by another as being self-acquired, or vice versa."(1) The normal state of every Hindu family is joint. Presumably every such family is joint in food, worship, and estate. In the absence of proof of division, such is the legal presumption, but the members of the family may sever in all or any of these three things(2) and there is no presumption that a family, because it is joint possesses joint property or any property. It has been held that where it is proved or admitted that a joint family possesses some joint property(3), and the property in dispute has been acquired or held in a manner consistent with that character, "the presumption of law is that all the property they were possessed of was joint property until it is shown by evidence that one member of the family is possessed of separate property." And the Privy Council has held that where a family is joint and a nucleus of joint property is shown to exist, the onus is on the party asserting a separate estate(4); this ruling has been recently followed by the Calcutta High Court in a case in which it was said that jointness is becoming less and less the rule and that the presumption is losing strength and may soon disappear.(5) This presumption would not be rebutted merely by showing "that it was purchased in the name of one member of the family and that there are receipts in his name respecting it." For all that is perfectly consistent with the notion of its having been joint property, and even if it had been joint property, it still would have been treated in exactly the same manner.(6) Under Art. 127 (Limitation Act), the onus is on the defendants to prove that exclusion from the joint family became known to the plaintiff more than twelve years before the suit (7) To render property in the hands of the members of a joint Hindu family joint property, the consideration for its purchase must either have proceeded out of ancestral funds or have been produced out of the joint property or by joint labour. But neither of these alternatives is matter of legal presumption.(8)

---

(1) Mayne's Hindu Law, 6th Edition, § 289 See ib, §§ 290, 291, from which this paragraph is in part taken (Ib 8th Ed, The Same articles) See also Field, Evidence, 6th Ed, 314 As to sons' suit to recover share of property sold see 5 Pat. L W, 127, and separate property, 20 O. C, 398

(2) Neelkristo Deb v Beerchander, 12 Moo I A, 540 (1869), s c, 3 B L R. (P. C), 13, 12 Suth (P. C.), 21; Naragunty v. Vengama, 9 Moo. I. A., 92 (1861), s c, 1 Suth. (P. C), 30

(3) Bhagubhai v Tukaram, 7 Bom L. R., 169 (1905). [The absence of any nucleus of joint property is important in the determination of the question whether the property gained by each co-parcener was his self-acquisition; for the mere fact that a family is joint does not raise the presumption of joint property in the absence of family property.]

(4) Anandrao Ganpatrao v. Vasantrao Madhavrao, P. C., 11 C. W. N, 478 (1907); 5 C. L. J., 338.

(5) Ganpat Marwari v Balmakund Behara, 18 C L. J, 548 (1913), per Carnduff, J

(6) Dhurm Das v. Shama Soonduri, 3 Moo I A, 229, 240 (1843); s c, 6 Suth. (P C), 43, referred to in Kanhai Lal v. Debi Das, 22 A, 141 (1899); Umrithnath v. Gourcenath, 13 Moo I. A., 542 (1870); s. c, 15 W. R (P C), 10; Rampershad Tewary v Sheochurn Dass, 10 Moo I A, 490, 505 (1866); Toolseydas Ludhea v Premji Tricumdas, 13 B, 61 (1888).

(7) Rama Nath Chatterjee v. Kusam Kamini, 4 Cal L. J., 76

(8) Hem Nath Rai v Janki Rai, A. W. (1907), 212; 2 All. L. J., 658.

The difficulty arises from attempting to lay down an abstract proposition of law, which will govern every case however different in its facts. But it is impossible to say generally of any piece of property in the possession of any member of the family that it is presumably joint estate. All that is laid down by the Bengal cases is that it is impossible to say what the presumption is, until it is known what proposition the plaintiff and defendant respectively put forward. The Judges say " tell us what your case is : when we find how much of it is admitted by the other side, we will then be able to say whether you are relieved of the necessity of proving any part of your case and how much of it."(1)

A plaintiff coming into Court to claim a share in property as being joint family property must lay some foundation before he can succeed in his suit. He starts with a presumption in his favour; but this presumption must be taken along with other facts, and those facts may so far remove the presumption arising from the ordinary condition of a Hindu family, as to throw back the burden of proof on the other side (2) It has been held in some decisions that the rule that the possession of one of the joint owners is the possession of all will apply to this extent, that, if one of them is found to be in possession of any property, the family being presumed to be joint in estate, the presumption will be, not that he was in possession of it as separate property acquired by him, but as a member of the joint family, but this has been contradicted in other rulings.(3) Again, if the plaintiff's case is that the property was ancestral and the defendant admits that it was purchased with his father's money, but alleges that the purchase was made in his own name and for his own exclusive benefit, the burden of proof would lie on him (4) Similarly, if the case is that the property is purchased out of the proceeds of the family estate, and it is admitted that there was family property of which the defendant was manager, the onus would be on the defendant to show that there was a separate acquisition (5) The same presumption will apply where the property is acquired by a member of a joint family and there is an admitted nucleus of family property (6) Where there was no evidence that property was purchased with money belonging to a son or that he had a separate fund, it was held by the Privy Council that there was decisive presumption that it was not self-acquired by him (7) Whereas in the case of a family governed by the Dayabhaga

---

(1) Mayne's Hindu Law 8th Ed § 291 Ram Pershad Singh v Lakhpati Koer, 30 C, 231 (1902), Gannu Singh v Bhagwati Koeri, 3 I A, 234 (1902)

(2) Bholanath v Ajoodhia, 12 B L R., 336 (1873), s c 20 Suth, 65, Bodh Singh v Ganesh Chunder, 12 B L R (P C), 317 (1873) s c, 19 Suth 356, Thakurani Tara Kumari v Chaturbhuj Narayan Singh, 42 I A, 192 (1915)

(3) Tarrack Chunder v Jogeshur Chunder, 11 B L R, 193, s c 19 Suth, 178 (1873), overruling Shiu Golam v Baran Sing, 1 B L R (A C), 164 (1868) s c, 10 W R, 198 differed from in Bholanath v Ajoodhia, 12 B L R, 336 s c 2 Suth, 65 and in Denonath v Harrynarain, 12 B L R, 349, affirmed in Gobind Chunder v Doorga Persaud, 14 B L R, 337, s c, 22 Suth, 248, Soshee Mohun v Mukhil, 25 Suth 232 (1876) Vedavalli v Narayana 2 M, 19 (1877), differed from in Dwarka Prosad Raghubir v Goodhan Das, 13 Bom L R, 133 (1910)

(4) Gopeekristo Gosain v Gangapershad Gosain, 6 Moo I. A, 53 (1854), Bissessur Lall v Luchmessur Singh, 6 I A 233 (1879), s c, 5 C L R, 477 (1879) See also Beer Narain v Teen Cowree, 1 W R, 316 (1864) [Suit by member of joint family for share of joint property plaint stating property to be joint admission by defendant that at one time it was joint held that onus was on the defendant to prove separation]

(5) Luximon Row v Muller Row, 2 Kn, 60, 5 W R (P C) 67 (1866); Pedru v Dogmoni, Mad Dec of 1880, 8, Janokee Dassee v Kisto Komal, Marsh, 1 (1859)

(6) Prankristo v Bhageruttee 20 Suth, 158 (1873), Moolji Lila v Gokuldass, 8 B, 154 (1883) Lakshman v Jamnabai, 6 B, 225 (1882), see Anandrao Ganpatrao v Vasantrao Madhavrao, P C 11 C. W. N, 478 (1907) 5 C L J 338, Ganpat Marwari v Balmakund Behara, 18 C L J., 548 (1913)

(7) Parbati Dasi v Rajah Baikuntha Nath Dey P C 18 C. W N, 428 (1913); 19 C L J 129

there is no jointness in property between the father and the sons, if property in dispute is acquired in the name of one of several brothers during the life-time of their father and is in possession of that brother, the burden of proof in such a case rests upon the party who asserts that the property in reality belonged to the father (1) The wives and mothers of the members of a joint undivided Hindu family, so long as they continue to live in the family and are supported out of its income, are just as much members of that family as their husbands and sons. When a Hindu husband and wife carry on a trade together the property purchased with the profits of the trade is joint; but her interest on it is her stridhanam.(2) So far as the ordinary and usual course of things is concerned, the practice of making benami purchases in the names of female members of joint undivided Hindu families is just as much rife in this country as that of making such purchases in the names of male members, and the presumption against separate acquisition is no less strong in the former case than in the latter.(3) But, if it is neither proved nor admitted that the family are living together or have their entire property in common, a plaintiff seeking to recover property as ancestral estate must prove the title set up by him.(4) And, if it is denied that there ever had been any family property or admitted that the defendant was not the person in possession of it, the plaintiff would fail, if he offered no evidence whatever. Where a Hindu, who had a son and that son's son living with him, made a gift of his property in favour of that grandson, and in the deed the property was described as self-acquired, and the deed was attested by the son, who was shown to have had knowledge of its contents, it was held that these facts led to the inference that the property was self-acquired.(5)

In the undermentioned case it was laid down that a person suing for a share in joint family property must show, not only that the property is joint family property but also that he has had possession of his share or received payments on account of it within twelve years.(6) And where the plaintiff admitted that certain properties were not acquired by the use of patrimonial funds, and the defendants had not acknowledged that such properties were acquired by any joint exertion of the plaintiff, it was held that the mere circumstances of the parties having been united in food at the time of the acquisition, raises no presumption so as to relieve the plaintiff from the onus of proving his averment that he had a joint share and interest in the acquisition.(7) Also where the whole property is self-acquired, the onus probandi will lie on the person seeking a share and alleging that the estate is joint.(8) But where a member of a Hindu family sued for a division of the family estate and admitted in his plaint that he took possession of part of the family property and had for sixteen years

---

(1) Saroda Prosad v Mahananda Roy, 31 C., 448 (1904). The headnote of this case is incorrect in stating that the presumption was held to be generally inapplicable to joint families governed by the Dayabhaga In this case there was no joint ownership between father and sons as there might have been between the sons themselves on the death of their father; and see Kharsondas Dharamsey v. Gangabai (1908), 32 B., 479 (different kinds of joint family).

(2) Muthu Ramkrishna Naicken v. Marimuthu Goundan, 38 M, 1036 (1915).

(1) Chunder Nath v Kristo Komul, 15 W. R., 357 (1871), followed in Nobin Chunder v. Dhokhbala Dasi, 10 C., 686 (1884); v. ante "Benami," p 684; Bilas Kunwar v. Desraj Ranjit Singh, P. C., 37 A, 557 (1915); 42 I A., 202.

(4) Banno v Kashee Ram, 3 C, 315 (1877), Obhoy Churn v. Gobind Chunder, 9 C, 237 (1882); Toolsey Das v Premji Tricumdas, 13 B, 61 (1888), (Unless there is an admitted nucleus of family property, the onus of proof lies on the claimant)

(5) Kallianji Ranchod v. Bezanji Nasarwanji (1908), 32 B, 512

(6) Gossain Dass v Siroo Koomaree, 12 B. L. R, 219 (1873).

(7) Kishoree Lall v. Chummun Lall, S. D R (1852), 111; see Shiu Golam v. Baran Singh, 1 B. L. R. (A. C), 164 (1868); overruled by Tarak Chunder v. Jogeshur Chunder, 11 B L R, 193 (1873).

(8) Soobhedur Dossee v. Belaram Dewan, W. R, Sp. No. 57 (1862).

lived separate, it was held that the onus lay on him to prove that the circumstances under which he became possessed of his portion of the property were consistent with his statement that the family remained undivided (1) And where a member of a joint Hindu family left the family home and started a shop with funds of his own, admittedly non-ancestral, it was held that any member of the family claiming to have a share in the shop must show by clear evidence that he was in some way associated with the business so as to be a partner.(2) A property acquired without the aid of joint funds or joint exertions may become joint property by being thrown into the common stock; but those who allege this must prove it (3) In the case cited where a managing member had kept one account of his ancestral and self-acquired property and had devoted the whole income to joint purposes and there was evidence that he had regarded his self-acquired property as separate, it was held that it had become joint.(4) In the case cited it was held that the succession of a Mahomedan being an individual succession there is no presumption in the case of a Mahomedan such as exists in the case of a Hindu joint family that property purchased in the name of a member of the family was purchased out of joint undivided property: that primâ facie therefore property bought in the name of a deceased brother was bought with his money (5)

Hindu Law: Partition.

A Hindu family, admitted or shown to be joint, is presumed to continue in a state of union, and, therefore, where a plaintiff alleges that the property has been divided and has by partition or otherwise become separate, the presumption being the other way, the onus is on him to prove it (6) But where there has actually been a partition, the burden of proving a re-union is on the person alleging it(7), and to establish it, it would be necessary to show not only that the parties already divided, lived or traded together, but that they did it with the intention of altering their status thereby Separate residence is not of itself conclusive, or even strong, evidence of partition (8)

In a case in the Privy Council where it was admitted that there had been a partition of another part of a joint estate, and there were separate entries in the Revenue record in the names of the members of the family as regards

---

(1) Somangouda v Bharmangoudu, 1 Bom H C R, 43 (1863), see also cases post, sub voc "Self-acquisition," and for a case in which a large number of authorities were reviewed, the evidence being held to establish separation, see Ram Pershad v Lakhpati Koer, 30 C, 231 (1902), distinguished in Ganpat Marwari v Balmakund Behara, 18 C L J, 548 (1913)

(2) Rijhu Ram v Mohan Lal, 25 P R (1906)

(3) Bhagubai v Tukaram, 7 Bom L R, 169 (1905)

(4) Munshi Inder Sahai v Kunwar Shiam Bahadur, 17 C L J, 299 (1913)

(5) Muhammad Wali Kahn v Muhammad Mohi ud-din, 24 C W N, 321

(6) Cheetha v Miheen Lal, 11 Moo I A, 380 (1867), Ram Chunder v Chunder Coomar, 13 Moo I A, 198 (1869), Prankishen Paul v Mathoora Mohun Paul, 10 Moo I A, 403, 441 (1865); Katama Natchier v Raja of Shivaganga, 9 Moo I A, 539, 543 (1863); Laximan Row v. Muller Row, 5 W. R, 67, s c, 2 Knapp's Rep, 60, P C. [The onus of proof is on the party seeking to except any property from the general rule of partition, according to Hindu Law] Bissumbhur Sircar v Soorodhuni Dassee, 3 W R, 21 (1865), Bhugobutty Misram v Domun Misser, 24 W R, 365, Amrit Nath v. Gouri Nath, 6, B L R, 232 (1870); Bissumbhur Sircar v Sooroodhuny Dassee, 3 W R, 21 (1865), Mun Mohini v Sodamonee Dabee, 3 W R, 31 (1865); Gooroo Pershad v Kele Pershad, 5 W R, 121 (1866), Treelochun Roy v Rajkishen Roy, 5 W R, 214 (1866), 3 B L R. (P C), 41, Prit Koeri v Mahadeo Pershad, 21 I A, 134 (1894), s c, 22 C, 85, Ram Ghulam v Ram Behari, 18 A., 90, 91 (1895) As to proof of re-union, see 5 Pat. L W, 127

(7) Prankishen v Mothooramohun, 10 Moo I A 403 (1865), s c., 4 Suth. (P C), 11, Gopal v Kanaram, 7 Suth., 35 (1867), Ram Hari v Trihiram, 7 B L R, 336 (1871), s. c., 15 Suth., 42; Venkata Gopala v Lakshmi Venkama, 3 B. L R. (P. C), 41 (1869); Balkrishen Das v Ram Narain, 7 C W. N, 578 (1903).

(8) Ranganatha Rao v. Narayanasami Naicker (1908), 31 M, 482

there is no jointness in property between the father and the sons, if property in dispute is acquired in the name of one of several brothers during the life-time of their father and is in possession of that brother, the burden of proof in such a case rests upon the party who asserts that the property in reality belonged to the father.(1) The wives and mothers of the members of a joint undivided Hindu family, so long as they continue to live in the family and are supported out of its income, are just as much members of that family as their husbands and sons. When a Hindu husband and wife carry on a trade together the property purchased with the profits of the trade is joint; but her interest on it is her stridhanam.(2) So far as the ordinary and usual course of things is concerned, the practice of making benami purchases in the names of female members of joint undivided Hindu families is just as much rife in this country as that of making such purchases in the names of male members, and the presumption against separate acquisition is no less strong in the former case than in the latter.(3) But, if it is neither proved nor admitted that the family are living together or have their entire property in common, a plaintiff seeking to recover property as ancestral estate must prove the title set up by him.(4) And, if it is denied that there ever had been any family property or admitted that the defendant was not the person in possession of it, the plaintiff would fail, if he offered no evidence whatever. Where a Hindu, who had a son and that son's son living with him, made a gift of his property in favour of that grandson, and in the deed the property was described as self-acquired, and the deed was attested by the son, who was shown to have had knowledge of its contents, it was held that these facts led to the inference that the property was self-acquired (5)

In the undermentioned case it was laid down that a person suing for a share in joint family property must show, not only that the property is joint family property but also that he has had possession of his share or received payments on account of it within twelve years.(6) And where the plaintiff admitted that certain properties were not acquired by the use of patrimonial funds, and the defendants had not acknowledged that such properties were acquired by any joint exertion of the plaintiff, it was held that the mere circumstances of the parties having been united in food at the time of the acquisition, raises no presumption so as to relieve the plaintiff from the onus of proving his averment that he had a joint share and interest in the acquisition.(7) Also where the whole property is self-acquired, the onus probandi will lie on the person seeking a share and alleging that the estate is joint.(8) But where a member of a Hindu family sued for a division of the family estate and admitted in his plaint that he took possession of part of the family property and had for sixteen years

---

(1) Saroda Prosad v Mahananda Roy, 31 C., 448 (1904). The headnote of this case is incorrect in stating that the presumption was held to be generally inapplicable to joint families governed by the Dayabhaga In this case there was no joint ownership between father and sons as there might have been between the sons themselves on the death of their father, and see Kharsondas Dharamsey v Gangabai (1908), 32 B, 479 (different kinds of joint family)

(2) Muthu Ramkrishna Naicken v. Marimuthu Goundan, 38 M, 1036 (1915).

(3) Chunder Nath v. Kristo Komul, 15 W. R., 357 (1871); followed in Nobin Chunder v Dhokhbala Dasi, 10 C., 686 (1884), v. ante "Benami," p 684; Bilas Kunwar v. Desraj Ranjit Singh, P. C., 37 A, 557 (1915), 42 I. A, 202.

(4) Banno v Kashee Ram, 3 C., 315 (1877), Obhoy Churn v. Gobind Chunder, 9 C, 237 (1882); Toolsey Das v. Premji Tricumdas, 13 B, 61 (1888), (Unless there is an admitted nucleus of family property, the onus of proof lies on the claimant)

(5) Kalliunji Ranchod v. Bezanji Nasarwanji (1908), 32 B., 512.

(6) Gossain Dass v. Siroo Koomaree, 12 B. L. R, 219 (1873).

(7) Kishoree Lall v. Chummun Lall, S D R (1852), 111; see Shiu Golam v. Baran Singh, 1 B L R (A C.), 164 (1868), overruled by Tarak Chunder v Jogeshur Chunder, 11 B L. R, 193 (1873).

(8) Soobhedur Dossee v Belaram Dewan, W. R, Sp. No 57 (1862).

lived separate, it was held that the onus lay on him to prove that the circumstances under which he became possessed of his portion of the property were consistent with his statement that the family remained undivided (1) And where a member of a joint Hindu family left the family home and started a shop with funds of his own, admittedly non-ancestral, it was held that any member of the family claiming to have a share in the shop must show by clear evidence that he was in some way associated with the business so as to be a partner.(2) A property acquired without the aid of joint funds or joint exertions may become joint property by being thrown into the common stock; but those who allege this must prove it.(3) In the case cited where a managing member had kept one account of his ancestral and self-acquired property and had devoted the whole income to joint purposes and there was evidence that he had regarded his self-acquired property as separate, it was held that it had become joint.(4) In the case cited it was held that the succession of a Mahomedan being an individual succession there is no presumption in the case of a Mahomedan such as exists in the case of a Hindu joint family that property purchased in the name of a member of the family was purchased out of joint undivided property: that primâ facie therefore property bought in the name of a deceased brother was bought with his money.(5)

Hindu Law· Partition.

A Hindu family, admitted or shown to be joint, is presumed to continue in a state of union, and, therefore, where a plaintiff alleges that the property has been divided and has by partition or otherwise become separate, the presumption being the other way, the onus is on him to prove it (6) But where there has actually been a partition, the burden of proving a re-union is on the person alleging it(7), and to establish it, it would be necessary to show not only that the parties already divided, lived or traded together, but that they did it with the intention of altering their status thereby Separate residence is not of itself conclusive, or even strong, evidence of partition.(8)

In a case in the Privy Council where it was admitted that there had been a partition of another part of a joint estate, and there were separate entries in the Revenue record in the names of the members of the family as regards

(1) Somangouda v Bharmangoudu, 1 Bom H C R, 43 (1863), see also cases post, sub voc "Self-acquisition," and for a case in which a large number of authorities were reviewed, the evidence being held to establish separation, see Ram Pershad v Lakhpati Koer, 30 C, 231 (1902), distinguished in Ganpat Marwari v Balmakund Behara, 18 C L J, 548 (1913)

(2) Rijhu Ram v Mohan Lal, 25 P R (1906)

(3) Bhagubai v Tukaram, 7 Bom L R, 169 (1905)

(4) Munshi Inder Sahai v Kunwar Shiam Bahadur, 17 C L J, 299 (1913)

(5) Muhammad Wali Kahn v Muhammad Mohi-ud-din, 24 C W. N, 321

(6) Cheetha v Miheen Lal, 11 Moo I A, 380 (1867), Ram Chunder v Chunder Coomar, 13 Moo I A, 198 (1869), Prankishen Paul v. Mathoora Mohun Paul, 10 Moo I A, 403, 441 (1865), Katama Natchier v Raja of Shivaganga, 9 Moo. I A, 539, 543 (1863), Laxman Row v. Muller Row, 5 W. R, 67; s c, 2 Knapp's Rep, 60, P C [The onus of proof is on the party seeking to except any property from the general rule of partition, according to Hindu Law] Bissumbhur Sircar v Soorodhum Dassee, 3 W. R, 21 (1865), Bhugobutty Misrain v Domun Misser, 24 W R, 365, Amrit Nath v. Gouri Nath, 6, B L R, 232 (1870); Bissumbhur Sircar v Sooroodhuny Dassee, 3 W R, 21 (1865), Mun Mohini v Sodamonee Dabee, 3 W R, 31 (1865); Gooroo Pershad v Kele Pershad, 5 W R., 121 (1866), Treelochun Roy v. Rajkishen Roy, 5 W R, 214 (1866), 3 B L. R. (P C), 41. Prit Koeri v Mahadeo Pershad, 21 J A, 134 (1894); s c, 22 C., 85; Ram Ghulam v Ram Behari, 18 A., 90, 91 (1895) As to proof of re-union, see 5 Pat L. W., 127.

(8) Prankishen v Mothooramohun, 10 Moo I A, 403 (1865); s c, 4 Suth. (P C), 11, Gopal v Kanaram, 7 Suth., 35 (1867); Ram Hari v. Trihiram, 7 B. L R, 336 (1871); s c, 15 Suth, 42; Venkata Gopala v Lakshmi Venkama, 3 B. L R. (P. C.), 41 (1869); Balkrishen Das v. Ram Narain, 7 C. W. N, 578 (1903).

(8) Ranganatha Rao v. Narayanasami Naicker (1908), 31 M, 482.

specified areas, and the members did not give evidence to show how these facts were consistent with jointness, it was held that the onus had been on them to prove this and that, in default of such proof, the facts were only consistent with jointness.(1)

Similarly, after a general separation in food and partition of estate, if any one of several brothers comes into Court alleging that a particular portion of property originally joint continues to remain so, the onus of proof will lie on him (2) But one member can sever his shares without affecting the jointness of the others (3) Any member is entitled to require partition which does not give him a title but enables him to demand what is already his own though undivided. An unequivocal intention to separate evinced by a declaration or by conduct amounts to a valid separation whether the co-sharers concur or not (4) Where the plaintiffs by their own evidence destroyed the presumption that the family was, at the commencement of the suit, a joint family, it was held to lie upon the plaintiffs to prove a separation at such a period as would entitle them to the relief which they sought (5) Where the plaintiff admitted that there had been a previous partition under which lands sued for had fallen to the defendant, but alleged that the partition was only a temporary one and that it had come to an end, it was held that the onus lay on the plaintiff to prove his plea.(6) A fortiori, where there have been admitted self-acquisitions and an actual partition, if one of the members sued subsequently for a share of the property left in the hands of one of the members as his self-acquired property, alleging that it was really joint property; or if a member of the family admitted a partition among some of the members, but asserted that the others had remained undivided, the onus would lie upon him to make out such a case (7) Where, though there had been a partition, there was no evidence to show that a certain passage had been allotted to either party exclusively, it was held that there was a rebuttable presumption that the passage remained joint.(8) In the case cited, the Privy Council held that though a Hindu father may in certain cases bind his minor sons by a partition, it may be impeached as made without consideration if by it a share is given to a stranger, unless such gift can be proved to be a bonâ fide compromise of a claim, and that a gift to a son invalidly adopted is made to a stranger (9) A decree for partition made in a suit instituted by a member of a joint family is res judicata between all members who were parties to the suit.(10)

(1) Ram Singh v Must Tursa Kunwar, P C, 17 C. W. N., 1085 (1913), 18 C. L J, 234, per Amir Ali, J

(2) Ram Gobind v Hosein Ali, 7 W. R, 90 (1897).

(3) Girja Bai v Sadashiv Dhundiraj, P. C, 43 C. 1031 (1916); 43 I. A, 151; (see for this point Mr Justice Amir Ali's judgment)

(4) Kawal Narain v Prabhu Lal, 44 I A., 159 (1917), Narain Prasad v. Sarnam Singh, 44 I A, 163 (1917)

(5) Ram Ghulam v Ram Behari, 18 A, 90 (1895).

(6) Obhoy Churn v Hurt Nath, 8 C, 72.(1881); s c., 10 C. L R, 81; see Hridoy Nath v Mohobutnissa Bibee, 20 C., 285.

(7) Badul Singh v. Chutterdharee Singh, 9 Suth., 558 (1868); Banoo v. Kashee Ram, 3 C, 315 (1877); Radha Churn v. Kripa Sindhu, 5 C., 474 (1879); Obhoy Churn v. Gobind Chunder, 9 C., 237 (1882); Bala Krishna v. Chintaman, 12 C, 262 (1895); Upendra Narain v. Gopee Nath, 9 C, 817 (1883) In the two latter cases it was held that the mere fact that one member of the family had separated from the joint stock raised no presumption that the other members had separated inter se, dissenting from Radha Churn v Kripa Sindhu, 5 C., 474 (1879); Mayne's Hindu Law, 6th Ed, § 291. See converse case Kristnappa Chetty v Ramaswamy Iyer, 8 Mad H C, 25 (1875).

(8) Nathubhai Dhirajram v. Bai Hansgavri, 36 B, 379 (1912).

(9) Ramkishore Kedarnath v Jainarain Ramrachpal, P. C., 40 C., 966 (1913); 40 I A, 213; see Balkishen Das v. Ram Narain Sahu, P. C, 30 C, 738 (1903); 30 I A, 139; Anandrao Ganpatrao v. Vasantrao Madhavrao, P. C., 11 C. W. N, 478 (1907); 5 C. L J., 338; Ganpat Marwari v Balmakurd Behara, 18 C. L J, 548 (1913)

(10) Nalini Kanta Lahiri v. Sarnomoyi Debya, 41 I. A., 247 (1914).

Hindu Law: Self-acquisition.

The general presumption being that, where there is admitted to be some joint property, all the family property is joint, the onus lies on the member of the family claiming property as self-acquired to prove it.(1) If one of the members of the family is found in possession of any property, the presumption would be, not that he was in possession of it as separate property acquired by him, but as a member of the joint family.(2) On the other hand, if the property is admitted to be originally self-acquired, but stated to have been thrown into the common stock, this would be a very good case, if made out, but the onus of proving it would be heavily on the person asserting it.(3) In a case(4) for partition of property alleged to be the property of a joint Hindu family of which the plaintiff was a member, it was held that, as the defendants set up their separate acquisition in a suit for the partition of a joint family which admittedly was possessed as such, of some property, the presumption was that the whole of the property of each individual belonged to the common stock and the burden of proving separate self-acquisition lay on the person asserting it, v ante, "Joint property"

Hindu Law: Stridhan.

Where after the death of a Hindu widow, the plaintiff claimed, as the reversionary heir of her husband, certain properties, some of which were inherited from her husband and some acquired by her after her husband's death, held that there was no presumption that property acquired by a Hindu widow after her husband's death forms part of his estate, and that the plaintiff must start his case with proofs sufficient to shift the onus, proof at least of facts from which an inference can be drawn.(5) The proposition that when a widow is found in possession of property of the acquisition of which no account is given, and it is shown that her husband died possessed of considerable property, then there is a presumption of law that the property found in the

(1) Yanumulu Venkayamah v Boochia Venkondora, 13 Moo I A, 333 (1870) Rampershad Tewary v Sheochurn Das, 10 Moo I A, 490 (1866), Lalla Beharee v. Lalla Modho, 6 W R, 69 (1860), Sheo Ruttun v Gour Beharee, 7 W R, 449 (1867), Radha Rumon v. Phool Kumaree, 10 W R, 28 (1868), Nilmony Bhoova v Ganga Narain, 1 W R, 334 (1865), Umbica Churn v. Bhugobutty Churn, 3 W R, 173 (1865). (Suit for share in joint family property denial that property was joint within period of limitation, and allegation of separation Held plaintiff must show joint enjoyment within the period of limitation, which having been done, it lay on defendants to prove the alleged separation) Bipro Pershad v Kena Dayee, 5 W R (1865), Shusee Mohun v Aukhil, 25 W R, 232 (1876), Vedavalli v Narayana, 2 M, 1 (1877), Chand Huree v Rajah Norendra, 19 W R 231 (1873), Moolji Lilla v Gokuldas Vulla, 8 B, 154 (1883); Anundo Mohun v Lamb, 1 Marsh, 169 (1862), Sidapa v Paneakooty, Morris, 100, Hait Singh v. Dabee Singh, 2 N-W P, 308 (1870), Jadoomoney Dassee v. Gangadhur Seal, 1 Bouln, 600 (1856), Bainee Singh v Bhurth Singh, Agra H C, 162 (1866), Nund Ram v Chootoo, 1 Agra H C, 255 (1866), Nursing Das v Narain Das, 13 N-W. P, 217 (1871); Dabee Subhai v Sheo Dass, 1 Agra P. C, 285 (1866). [Admission of property being joint ancestral, throws the burden of proving exclusive and adverse possession beyond limitation on the sharer refusing to admit other heirs Gopeekristo Gossain v Gungapersaud Gossain, 6 Moo I A, 53 (1854), Chand Huree v Rajah Norendra, 19 W R, 231 (1873), Nuronath Dass v Goda Kolita, 20 W R, 342 (1873), [Suit for possession of land under a pottah issued by eldest member of joint Hindu family onus of proving eldest brother's right to give such title is on the plaintiff] Makhun Lall v Ram Lall, 3 C W N, 134 (1898) [Presumption that business was started with funds of joint-family rebutted] In Vinayak Nursingh v Dutto Govind, 25 B 367 (1900) in which the defendant pleaded self-acquisition and limitation, it was held under the circumstances of the case that the onus lay on the plaintiffs See 20 C, 398

(2) Tarak Chunder v Jogeshur Chunder 11 B L R, 193 (1893), differs from Bholanath v Ajoodhia 12 B L R 336 (1873) s c., 20 Suth, 248

(3) Mayne's Hindu Law § 291 6th Ed Munshi Inder Sahai v Kunwar Shiam Bahadur, 17 C L J, 299 (1913)

(3) Kanhia Lal v Debi Das, 22 A., 141 (1899).

(5) Dakhina Kali v Jagadeshwar Bhattacharji, 2 C. W N, 197 (1897) As to onus on person setting up Stridhan, see 45 I. C., 879.

widow's possession was originally that of her husband, is according to a decision of the Privy Council, inconsistent with the general rule that he who claims property through some person must show the property to have been vested in that person, a rule which is as equally applicable to movable as to immovable property.(1) A person claiming under a deed of gift from a Hindu widow, which recites that the property to be conveyed was stridhan, must prove this in order to succeed in h[illegible] property from liability [illegible] must prove it.(3) The [illegible] Hindu woman governec[illegible] her brother in preference to her husband, irrespective of the form in which her marriage was celebrated.(4)

Hindu Law: Alienation by widow

If a Hindu widow mortgages or alienates property which in the ordinary course would descend to reversionary heirs on her death, or escheat to the Crown, the onus is upon those who derive their title from her to show that such alienation or mortgage was made with the consent of the immediate heirs(5), or for a purpose for which a Hindu widow is by Hindu law competent to charge the estate(6), and as between the widow and the person dealing with her, the transaction must be absolutely free from fraud and must be shown to have been entered into after the fullest explanation to her of its nature and consequences.(7) In a Full Bench decision of the Calcutta High Court it was said

---

(1) Dewan Ran v Indarpal Singh, 4 C. W N, 1 (1899)

(2) Chunder Monee v Joykissen Sircar, 1 W R, 107 (1864) [Referred to in Dakhina Kali v Jagadeshwar Bhattacharji, 2 C W N, 199 (1897)], Bissessur Chuckerbutty v Ram Joy, 2 W R, 326 (1865)

(3) Brojomohun Myttee v Radha Koomaree, W R, 60 (1864).

(4) Mahendra Nath Maity v Giris Chandra Maity, 19 C W N, 1287 (1915), and see Muthu Ramakrishna Naicken v Marimuthu Goundan, 38 M, 1036 (1915), Kenakammal v Ananthamanethi Ammal, 37 M., 293 (1914), Marya Pillai v Sivabagyathachi, 2 M W N, 168 (1911), Bai Raman v Jagjivandas Kashidas, 41 B, 618 (1917)

(5) Chunder Monee v Joykissen Sircar, 1 W. R, 107 (1864) Such consent is only a factor in the proof of legal necessity Moti Raiji v Laldas Jabhai, 41 B, 93 (1917). See same case for reversioners' consent to acceleration of their interests and Khawani Singh v. Chet Ram, 39 A, 1 (1917) and Behari Lal v. Madho Lal, P C, 19 I. A, 30 (1891). Contra as to effect of consent Nobokishore Sarma Roy v Hari Nath, 10 C., 1102 (1884), but see Debi Prosad Chowdry v. Gholap Bagi, F. B, 40 C, 721 (1913); 17 C. L J, 449 As to compromise of litigation by Hindu Widow, see 47 I. C, 697.

(6) Mayne's Hindu Law, 8th Ed, §§ 639, 640; Banga Chandra Dhur Biswas v. Jagat Kishore, P. C, 44 C, 186 (1917); Maheshwar Baksh v. Ratan Singh, 23 I. A., 57 (1896), Cavaly Venkata v. Collector of Masulipatam, 11 Moo I A., 619 (1867), 10 W. R (P C), 47, and Collector of Masulipatam v. Cavaly Venkata, 8 Moo I A, 500 (1861), 2 W. R. (P. C.), 61, Raj Lukee v Gocool Chunder, 13 Moo. I A, 209 (1869), s c, 3 B L. R. (P. C), 57; 12 Suth. (P C), 47; Kali Coomar v Ram Dass, W. R., 153 (1864); Bissonath Roy v Lall Bahadoor, 1 W. R, 247 (1864), Ram Dhone v. Ishanee Dabee, 2 W R, 123 (1865), Dhondo Ramchandra v Balkishna Govind, 8 B, 190 (1883); Laksman Bhaukhokar v. Radhaba, 11 B, 609 (1887); Rangilbhai Kalyandas v. Vinayak Vishnu, 11 B, 666 (1887); Mahomed Shumsool v. Shewukram, 22 W. R., 409, Rao Kurun v. Fyaz Alee, 10 B L. R, 112 (1871); s c, 14 Moo I A, 176. (There is no doubt that those who take security from a person having only a limited power to grant it are bound to show primâ facie at any rate that the money was raised for a legitimate purpose) Mohima Chunder v. Ram Kishore, 15 B. L R, 142 (1875). The estate of a Hindu family in which after the death of the father and his widow a daughter held an interest for life comprised a family trade carried on by a manager on her account. Held that the restriction upon her power to alienate remained the same (notwithstanding the trade) without being relaxed on that account. It is for the plaintiff to state and prove all that will give validity to the charge Sham Sundar v. Achhan Kuar, 21 A, 71 (1898).

(7) Mahomed Ashruf v Brijessuree Dasee, 19 W. R., 426 (1873). [The alienation by a Hindu widow of a portion of her estate in order to enable her to that to uphold such an alienation it must be shown either that there was legal necessity, or that after reasonable enquiry there was honest belief in such necessity, or that there was such consent of the next heirs as would serve a presumption of legal necessity or of reasonable enquiry and honest belief concerning it, or lastly, that there was a consent of the next heirs which involved an entire relinquishment of her interest and an acceleration of theirs (1) And in a case in the Privy Council it was said that it is the practice of the Privy Council to attach great weight to the sanction of the expectant reversioners as affording evidence that the alienation was lawful and valid.(2) But there must be positive evidence of such consent and that it was made with full knowledge (3) An alienation without such consent is voidable but not void, thus till it is avoided the alienee can recover the estate from a stranger(4), and the reversioners can make it valid by ratifying it.(5) The right to bring a suit to set aside an alienation belongs, as a rule, to the nearest reversioner, unless he has precluded himself, as by collusion (6) The Bombay and Allahabad High Courts have held that the consent of the reversioners can only validate alienations to others when made for a consideration, since its value depends on the inference of legal necessity, and so cannot validate gift.(7) And the Calcutta High Court has held that it cannot validate a bequest, for the widow's Will would not operate till her interest had ceased.(8) The consent of the next reversioners at the time of the alienation will conclude another person not a party to it, who is the actual reversioner upon the death of the widow. Ordinarily the consent of the whole body of persons constituting the next reversion should be obtained, but there may be cases in which special circumstances may render the strict enforcement of that rule impossible (9) Acts of alienation by a Hindu widow for pious and religious purposes calculated to promote the spiritual welfare of her deceased husband are no doubt valid(10) but acts of alienation for her own spiritual welfare, or that of persons other than the deceased owner, will be voidable (11) A daughter who takes her father's property on the death of the widow, in default of a son, takes the inheritance with a qualified power as regards alienation, in respect of which she is in no better situation than the widow. On the death of the daughter, the heir of her father succeeds as his heir, not as her heir.(12) The lender to, or purchaser from a Hindu widow is, however, not bound to see to the application of the money. It is sufficient if he satisfied himself as to the necessity for the loan; but he does not necessarily lose his rights, if upon bonâ fide inquiry he has been deceived make a pilgrimage to Gya to perform her husband's sradh was held good and proper] Bhagwat Dyal Singh v. Debi Dayal Sahu (1908), 35 C, 420

---

(1) Debi Prosad Chowdry v Golap Bhagat, F B, 40 C, 721 (1913), 17 C. L J, 499, Bagranji Singh v Manikarnika Baksh, 35 I A, 1 (1907)

(2) Bejoy Gopal Mukerjee v Girindra Nath, P. C, 41 C, 793

(3) Hari Kishore Bhagat v Kashi Pershad, P C, 42 C, 876 (1915), 42 I A, 64

(4) Deonandan Pershad v Udit Narain Singh, 18 C W. N, 940 (1914).

(5) Modhu Sudan Singh v Rooke, P. C, 25 C, 1 (1908); Bijoy Gopal v Krishna Mahishi Debi, P. C., 34 C., 329 (1907).

(6) Rani Anund Koer v. Court of Wards, 8 I A., 14 (1880); Jhandu v. Tarif, P. C., 37 A, 45 (1914).

(c) Khawhani Singa v. Chief Ram, 39 A, 1 (1917), Moti Raiji v Laldas Jebhai, 41 B, 1 (1917)

(8) Durga Sundari v. Ram Kishna Poddar, 18 C L. J, 162 (1914).

(9) Bagranji Singh v. Manikarnika Baksh Singh, P. C. (1907), Times L. R. v 24, p 46 See Debi Prosad Chowdry v Golap Bhagat, F. B, 40 C, 721 (1913). [Such consent throws on actual reversioner the onus of disproving the inference.]

(10) Puran Dai v Jai Narain, 4 A., 482 (1882).

(11) Deo Proshad v Lujoo Roy, 20 W R, 120 (1873) (void, see post).

(12) Ram Gopal v. Buldeb Bose, W. R., 385 (1864); Ram Pershad v. Najbungsh Kooer, 9 W. R., 501 (1868); Amar Nath v Achhan Kuar, 14 A., 420 (1892). [It must be at least shown that the grantee was led, on reasonable grounds, to believe that there was a legal necessity for the alienation]

as to the existence of the necessity which he had reasonable grounds for supposing to exist.(1) But a recital in a bond given for money borrowed by a Hindu widow is not sufficient evidence of the fact in a suit against the heirs or in a suit to charge the estate(2), neither is a recital in a deed of sale, as a rule, sufficient evidence of the existence of the necessity.(3) In a case where a Hindu widow sued to recover a share of property alleged to have been inherited from her husband and mortgaged by her husband's brother and sold under a decree obtained on the mortgage, it was held that the onus was on the brother (defendant) to show that the plaintiff had derived any benefit from the money. It was sufficient for the plaintiff to prove her title.(4) Where a voluntary transfer by a Hindu widow is alleged, the burden of proving that it was a free gift, made with knowledge by her of her rights, is on the donee.(5) In the case of alienation by one of two widows the burden of proof was held to be on the plaintiff to prove that the other widow did not consent to the sale.(6) The consent of the daughter to the alienation of immovable property by the widow does not raise a presumption of law that the purpose for which it was made was proper nor is it any evidence of the propriety of the transaction (7) But consent of some only of reversioners may be evidence of the propriety of the transfer. Where in a suit by reversioners the consent raises no presumption that the sale was necessary or proper, the onus of validating the sale lies on the defendant (8)

Hindu Law Alienation by a manager or guardian.

Where a guardian of a Hindu minor (who is often the widow mother) alienates or charges the estate or any portion of it, the onus is on the mortgagee or person relying on the charge to show that there was a necessity therefor, or at least that he had good ground for supposing that the transaction was for the benefit of the estate of the minor.(9) Under the Hindu, Law only the father or mother of a minor (with a possible exception in favour of an elder brother or a direct ancestor) is entitled to be a natural guardian; but alienations, by a de facto guardian, even when made without necessity, need not necessarily be set aside, if shown to be for the benefit of the estate.(10) A maternal guardian has not, as such, any power to affect the estate of the ward by admissions of previous transaction (11) "The power of the manager for an infant heir to charge the estate, is a limited and qualified power; it can only be exercised in a case of need or for the benefit of the estate. But where the charge is one that a prudent owner would make in order to benefit the estate, the boná fide

---

(1) Kameshwar Pershad v Run Bahadur, 6 C, 843 (1880), 8 C L R, 361, L R, 8 I. A, 8.

(2) Sunker Lall v Juddoobuns Suhaye, 9 W. R., 285 (1868).

(3) Rajlukee Debia v. Gokool Chunder, 12 W. R (P C.), 47 (1869), 3 L R (P. C.), 57. For case where recital held sufficient in the circumstances see Banga Chandra Dhur Biswas v. Jagat Kishore, P. C., 44 C., 186 (1917).

(4) Sreemutty v. Lukhee Narain, 22 W. R., 171 (1874).

(5) Deo Kuar v. Man Kuar, 17 A., 1 (1894).

(6) Mahadevappa v. Basagowda, 7 Bom. L. R, 258 (1905).

(7) Bepin Behari Kundu v Durga Charan Banerji (1908), 35 C., 896.

(8) Chandi Singh v Jangi Singh, 8 O. C., 21.

(9) Hunooman Pershad v Mussamut Babooee, 6 Moo. I. A., 392, 423 (1856). [Ref in Vat Vatta Nair v Kenath Puthen Vittil, 36 M L J, 630] Konwar Doorganath v Ram Chander, 2 C, 341, 351 (1876); Bemola Dossee v Mohun Dossee, 5 C, 792, 797 (1880); Lalla Banseedhar v. Kunwar Bindeseree, 10 M I A, 454 (1866), Narayan v. Political Agent, 7 Bom L. R., 172 As to debts and alienation by manager of Hindu joint family and onus of proof of legal necessity, see Guruswamy Nadan v. Gopalaswami Odayar, 42 M., 629; s c., 50 I. C, 775; Nawab Nazir Begum v. Rao Raghu Nath Singh, 36 M L. J., 521 P C.; Anant Ram v. Collector of Etah, 34 M L J, 221 P. C.

(10) Thavammal v. Kuppana Koundan. 38 M, 1125 (1915); (Art 44 of the Limitation Act does not apply to an alienation by an unauthorized guardian).

(11) Manokerani Debi v Haripada Mitter, 18 C. W. N., 718 (1914), P. C., per Jenkins, C J. and Woodroffe, J.

lender is not affected by the precedent mismanagement of the estate The actual pressure on the estate, the danger to be averted or the benefit to be conferred upon it in the particular instance, is the thing to be regarded. The lender is bound to enquire into the necessities for the loan and to satisfy himself as well as he can with reference to the parties with whom he is dealing that the manager is acting in the particular instance for the benefit of the estates If he does so enquire and act honestly, the real existence of an alleged sufficient and reasonably credited necessity is not a condition precedent to the validity of ... to the applica- ... from any mis- ... ake advantage of his own wrong to support a charge in his own favour against the heir grounded on a necessity which his wrong has helped to cause. Where it is not shown that the lender has acted malâ fide, he will not be affected, although it be shown that with better management the estate might have been kept free from debt "Money to be secured on an estate being obtainable on easier terms than a loan which rests on mere personal security, the mere creation of a charge securing a proper debt is not to be viewed as mismanagement. The purposes for which a loan is wanted are often future as respect the actual application, and a lender can rarely have, unless he enters on the management, the means of controlling and rightly directing the actual application: and a bonâ fide creditor, who has acted honestly and with due caution, ought not to suffer, should it turn out that he has himself been deceived." A lender of money may reasonably be expected to prove the circumstances connected with his own particular loan, but cannot reasonably be expected to know or to come prepared with proof of the antecedent economy and good conduct of the owner of an ancestral estate

If, therefore, the lender proves the circumstances of his own particular loan, so as to show that he acted honestly, that he made due and proper enquiry and that he had reasonable grounds for believing that the transaction was for the benefit of the minor and his estate, he will have sufficiently discharged the burden cast upon him Beyond this it is not possible to lay down any general and inflexible rule as to the person on whom should be placed the burden of proving that any particular alienation was bonâ fide The presumption, proper to be made, will vary with circumstances, and it must be regulated by and is dependent upon them In Malabar law there is no presumption

---

(1) Hunooman Pershad v Mussumut Babooee, 6 Moo I A, 425 (1856), Radha Kishore v Mirtoonjoy Gow, 7 W R, 23 (1867) Field's Evidence Act, 472 ib, 6th Ed, 317–318, Kameswar Pershad v Ram Bahadur, 6 I A, 8 (1880), 6 C, 843, 8 C L R 361 Their Lordships said that they had applied these principles to the case of a manager of an infant, alienations by a widow, and to transactions in which a father, in derogation of the rights of his son under the Mitakshara law, has made an alienation of ancestral family estate] Muddan Mohun v Kantoo Lal, L R 1 I A, 333 (1874) 14 B L R, 187, 22 W R, 56 [Decree is evidence of necessity to protect a purchaser at an execution-sale], Buzrung Sahoy v Mantra Chowdrain, 22 W R 119 (1874) Roop Narain v Gungadhur Pershad, 9 W R, 297 (1868), Nund Coomar v Gunga Pershad, 10 W. R, 94 (1868), Leoloo Singh v Rajendra Laha, 8 W R, 364 (1867), Bhoorun Kuar v Sahhzadee, 6 W R, 149 (1866), Wooma Churn v Haradaun Mojoomdar 1 W R, 347 (1864), Jugdel Narain v Lalla Ram 2 W R 292 (1865) Dagdu v Kamlle 2 Bom H C R, 369 (1864), Surub Narain v Shew Gobind, 11 B L R (App) 29 (1873), Runjeet Ram v Mahomed Waris, 21 W R, 49 (1874) [Digging a tank, although a great convenience, is not a legal necessity] Muthoora Dass v Keanoo Bharee 21 W R, 287 (1874) Suit by minor to set aside alienation by guardian, purchase-money applied to minor's benefit refund by minor of the purchase-money less the rents and profits received]; Sikher Chund v Dulputty Sing, 5 C, 363 (1879); 5 C L R, 374, [Sale by guardian under Act XL of 1858] Rameswar Mondal v Provabati Dabi, 19 C. W. N., 31 (1914).

as to the existence of the necessity which he had reasonable grounds for supposing to exist.(1) But a recital in a bond given for money borrowed by a Hindu widow is not sufficient evidence of the fact in a suit against the heirs or in a suit to charge the estate(2); neither is a recital in a deed of sale, as a rule, sufficient evidence of the existence of the necessity.(3) In a case where a Hindu widow sued to recover a share of property alleged to have been inherited from her husband and mortgaged by her husband's brother and sold under a decree obtained on the mortgage, it was held that the onus was on the brother (defendant) to show that the plaintiff had derived any benefit from the money. It was sufficient for the plaintiff to prove her title.(4) Where a voluntary transfer by a Hindu widow is alleged, the burden of proving that it was a free gift, made with knowledge by her of her rights, is on the donee (5) In the case of alienation by one of two widows the burden of proof was held to be on the plaintiff to prove that the other widow did not consent to the sale (6) The consent of the daughter to the alienation of immovable property by the widow does not raise a presumption of law that the purpose for which it was made was proper nor is it any evidence of the propriety of the transaction.(7) But consent of some only of reversioners may be evidence of the propriety of the transfer. Where in a suit by reversioners the consent raises no presumption that the sale was necessary or proper, the onus of validating the sale lies on the defendant (8)

Hindu Law Alienation by a manager or guardian. Where a guardian of a Hindu minor (who is often the widow mother) alienates or charges the estate or any portion of it, the onus is on the mortgagee or person relying on the charge to show that there was a necessity therefor, or at least that [illegible] nsaction was for the benefit [illegible] only the father or mother [illegible] an elder brother or a direct ancestor) is entitled to be a natural guardian; but alienations, by a de facto guardian, even when made without necessity, need not necessarily be set aside, if shown to be for the benefit of the estate.(10) A maternal guardian has not, as such, any power to affect the estate of the ward by admissions of previous transaction (11) "The power of the manager for an infant heir to charge the estate, is a limited and qualified power; it can only be exercised in a case of need or for the benefit of the estate. But where the charge is one that a prudent owner would make in order to benefit the estate, the bonâ fide

---

(1) Kameshwar Pershad v Run Bahadur, 6 C, 843 (1880), 8 C L R, 361, L R, 8 I. A, 8.

(2) Sunker Lall v Juddoobuns Suhaye, 9 W R., 285 (1868).

(3) Rajlukee Debia v. Gokool Chunder, 12 W. R (P C), 47 (1869), 3 L R (P. C.), 57 For case where recital held sufficient in the circumstances see Banga Chandra Dhur Biswas v. Jagat Kishore, P. C., 44 C., 186 (1917)

(4) Sreemutty v Lukhee Narain, 22 W. R., 171 (1874).

(5) Deo Kuar v Man Kuar, 17 A, 1 (1894).

(6) Mahadevappa v. Basagowda, 7 Bom. L. R., 258 (1905).

(7) Bepin Behari Kundu v. Durga Charan Banerji (1908), 35 C., 896.

(8) Chandi Singh v. Jangi Singh, 8 O. C., 21.

(9) Hunooman Pershad v Mussamut Babooee, 6 Moo I. A., 392, 423 (1856). [Ref. in Vat Vatta Nair v Kenath Puthen Vittil, 36 M. L. J, 630] Konwar Doorganath v. Ram Chander, 2 C., 341, 351 (1876); Bemola Dossee v. Mohun Dossee, 5 C., 792, 797 (1880); Lalla Banseedhar v Kunwar Bindeseree, 10 M I. A., 454 (1866); Narayan v. Political Agent, 7 Bom L R, 172 As to debts and alienation by manager of Hindu joint family and onus of proof of legal necessity, see Guruswamy Nadan v Gopalaswami Odayar, 42 M, 629; s c, 50 I. C, 775; Nawab Nazir Begum v Rao Raghu Nath Singh, 36 M. L. J., 521 P. C.; Anant Ram v Collector of Etah, 34 M L. J., 221 P. C.

(10) Thayammal v. Kuppana Koundan, 38 M., 1125 (1915); (Art 44 of the Limitation Act does not apply to an alienation by an unauthorized guardian)

(11) Manokerani Debi v Haripada Mitter, 18 C. W N, 718 (1914), P. C, per Jenkins, C. J. and Woodroffe, J

carry out the intention of the original endower can be ascertained from inference from the practice proved to have been followed in the case(1); but such rules must be consistent with the purpose of the endowment, and since the worship of the idol and the preservation of the dedicated property must be assumed to have been intended to be perpetual, a rule permitting alienation by the sebait would be repugnant.(2) Judgments obtained against a former sebait in respect of debts properly incurred are binding on succeeding sebaits.(3) Where it is contended that property has been inalienably conferred upon an idol to sustain its worship, the onus probandi lies upon the person who sets up this case.(4) The office of sebait is vested in the heirs of the founder if there is no evidence that he made another appointment (5) Where a man incapable of being a sebait, because he was not a Brahmin panda, had acted as one, it was held by the Privy Council that such action could not give rise to an estoppel or res judicata (6)

Hindu Law: Inheritance; Adoption.

[illegible]

vent[illegible]
tion [illegible]
the [illegible]
of [illegible]

[illegible] prove its invalidity, even though he [illegible] in support of it (7) Adoption must [illegible] ims as an adopted son must establish by evidence (a) the authority given by the husband to adopt a son to him, (b) his actual adoption as the son of the husband.(8) Where in a suit to recover the property of a deceased Hindu, the plaintiff, who claimed as his adopted son, was not examined on his own behalf and no attempt was made to search for or produce books of account said to contain entries of the expenditure at the adoption, the Privy Council found that he had failed to discharge the onus (9) The fact of adoption being admitted and its validity impugned on the ground of incapacity on the part of the adopted son, it is for the party so impugning the validity of the adoption to [illegible] No estoppel arises from an invalid adoptio[illegible] of the party setting up estoppel has been [illegible] In a suit brought to set aside an adoption [illegible] forbidden by the custom of the caste to whi[illegible]

(1) Ram Parkash Das v Anand Das, P C, 43 C, 707 (1916), 43 I. A., 73

(2) Palianappa Chetty v Sreenath Devasikamony, P. C, 40 M, 709 (1917).

(3) Prosunno Kumari v Golab Chund, 14 B L R, 450 (1875), L R, 2 I A, 145

(4) Koonwar Doorganath v Ram Chunder, 4 I A, 52, 61 (1876), s c., 2 C, 341

(5) Raj Krishna Day v Bepin Behary Dey, 17 C L J, 189 (1913)

(6) Jalandhar Thakur v Jharula Das, P C, 42 C, 244 (1915), 41 I A., 267, see Mohan Lalji v Gordhan Lalji Maharaj, P C, 17 C L J, 612 (1912), 40 I A, 97

(7) Tarini Charan v Saroda Sundari, 3 B L R. (A C), 145, 159 (1869); s c., 11 W. R, 368; Bissessur Chuckerbutty v Ram Joy, 2 W. R., 326 (1865); Ramprotap Misser v Abhilak Misser, 3 C L R (1878); and see Hur Dyal v. Roy Krishto, 24 W R, 107 (1875). [Deals with objection that s 110, post, might apply, Chowdhry Herasutollah v Brojo Soondur, 18 W R, 77 (1872)] [Factum of adoption admitted]; but see also as to fraud, Gooroo Prosunno v Nil Madhub, 21 W R, 84 (1873). Helar Dasi v Durga Das Mundal, 4 C. L J, 323

(8) Choudhry Pudum v Koer Odey, 12 Moo I. A., 350 (1869) See Satteraju v Venkataswami 40 M, 925 (1917); Somasundaram Chettiar v Vaithilinga Mudaliar, 40 M, 846 (1912). Madana Mohana v Purushotama, 38 M, 1105 (1913)

(9) Mussamat Lal Kunwar v Chiranji Lal, P. C. (1909), 3 I. A, 1.

(10) Kusum Kumari v Satya Ranjan, 30 C., 999 (1903); 7 C. W. N., 784

(11) Vaithilinga Mudali v. Natesa Mudali, 37 M., 529 (1914).

that every debt contracted by a karnavan of a tarwad is for the uses of the tarwad and chargeable on the tarwad estate. It is for the creditor to show that the karnavan had authority from the tarwad to contract the debt (1)

In the undermentioned case(2) the estate of a Hindu family, in which, after the death of the father and his widow, a daughter held an interest for life, comprised a family trade, carried on by a manager on her account. It was held that the case of a widow or daughter under such circumstances differs from that of the manager or head of an undivided family who manages an ancestral trade.(3) It is for the plaintiff to state and prove all that will give validity to the charge. The principles laid down in Hunooman Pershad Panday's Case apply to the alienation of property by the de facto manager of a Hindu endowment.(4) In a suit for possession of land in virtue of a pottah issued by the oldest members of a joint Hindu family where the other members dispute the claim on the ground that the lessor, as one of a joint family, could not give title to the whole of the land, the onus of proving the eldest brother's right to give such title is on the plaintiff.(5)

Hindu Law Alienation by Sebait.

Property devoted to religious purposes is, as a rule, inalienable, but it is competent for the sebait of property dedicated to the worship of an idol in his capacity as sebait and manager of the estate to incur debts and borrow money f [illegible]

[illegible]

be measured by the existing necessity for incurring them(6), for no definition of bene[illegible] The authority of the [illegible] the manager of an i[illegible] [illegible]unraj Koonwaree.(8) But he has no power of alienation in the general character of his rights, and so section 31 clause 2 of the Land Acquisition Act is applicable to him (9) When there is no deed of endowment forthcoming, the rules necessary to

(1) Kutti Mannadiyar v Payanu Muthan, 3 M, 288 (1881) As to the evidence required where there has been a loan for family purposes, see Krishna v. Vasudev, 21 B., 808 (1896)

(2) Sham Sundar v Achhan Kuar, 21 A., 71 (1898).

(3) For power of alienation by managing member of a joint Hindu family see Kandasami Asari v Someskanda Eli Nidhi, Ld, 35 M, 177 (1912), Annamalai Chetty v. Murugesa Chetty, 26 M., 544 (1903); Unni v. Kunchi Amma, 14 M, 26 (1891); Adikesavan Nadu v Gurunatha, F. B., 40 M, 338 (1911); Vadivelam Pillai v. Natesan Pillai, 37 M., 435 (1914); Gulab Singh v. Raja Seth Gokuldas, 17 C. L. J., 619 (1913).

(4) Sheo Shankar v. Ram Shewak, 24 C., 77 (1896).

(5) Nuronah Doss v. Goda Kolita, 20 W. R., 342 (1873); Murugasamy Pillai v. Manikarnika, P. C., 40 M., 402 (1917).

(6) Mayne's Hindu Law, § 397; Prosunno Kumari v. Golap Chand, 14 B. L. R., 450, 458 (1875); s c, 2 I. A., 145; Kalee Churn v. Banshee Mohun, 15 W. R., 339 (1871); Khusalchand v. Mahadevgiri, 12 Bom. H. C., 214 (1875). Fegredo v. Mahomed, 15 W. R., 75 (1871); Radha Bullub v. Juggut Chunder, 4 Sel R, 151; Shibessouree Debia v. Mothooranath Acharjee, 13 Moo. I A., 270 (1869); s c, 13 W. R (P. C.), 18 (1869); Juggeswar Butobyal v Roodra Naran, 12 W. R., 299 (1869); Tabhoonissa v. Koomar Sham, 15 W. R, 228 (1871). Arruth Misser v. Juggernath Indraswamee, 18 W. R, 439 (1872); Mohunt Burn v. Kashee Jha, 20 W. R, 471 (1872); Bunwaree Chund v. Mudden Mohun, 21 W. R., 41 (1873); Narayan v. Chintaman, 5 B, 393 (1881); Collector of Thana v Hari Sitaram, 6 B, 546, 554 (1882); Shunkar Bharati v. Venkapa Naik, 9 B., 422 (1885); Joy Lall v. Gosain Bhoobun, 21 W. R, 334 (1874); Balaswamy Ayyar v. Venkataswamy, 40 M., 745 (1917).

(7) Palianappa Chetty v. Sreenath Devasikamony, P. C., 40 M., 709 (1917).

(8) 6 Moo. I. A., 393 at p. 423 (1856); Koonwar Doorganath v. Ram Chunder, 4 I. A, 52, 61 (1876); s. c., 2 C., 341; Kamini Devi v. Promatha Nath Mookerjee, 13 C. L. J., 597 (1911); Ramprasanna Nandi Chowdhuri v. Secretary of State, 40 C., 895 (1913).

(9) Kamini Debi v. Promotha Nath Mookerjee, 13 C. L. J, 597 (1911); Ramprasanna Nandi Chowdhuri v. Secretary of State, 40 C., 895 (1913).

carry out the intention of the original endower can be ascertained from inference from the practice proved to have been followed in the case(1); but such rules must be consistent with the purpose of the endowment, and since the worship of the idol and the preservation of the dedicated property must be assumed to have been intended to be perpetual, a rule permitting alienation by the sebait would be repugnant.(2) Judgments obtained against a former sebait in respect of debts properly incurred are binding on succeeding sebaits.(3) Where it is contended that property has been inalienably conferred upon an idol to sustain its worship, the onus probandi lies upon the person who sets up this case.(4) The office of sebait is vested in the heirs of the founder if there is no evidence that he made another appointment (5) Where a man incapable of being a sebait, because he was not a Brahmin panda, had acted as one, it was held by the Privy Council that such action could not give rise to an estoppel or res judicata.(6)

Hindu Law: Inheritance; Adoption.

Where tl [illegible] vented, and [illegible] tion having b[illegible] the entrance [illegible] of the adopter to adopt and as regards the fact of the adoption, if it be questioned: and not upon the heir suing to prove its invalidity, even though he alleged fraud and adduced no evidence in support of it (7) Adoption must be strictly proved, and the party who claims as an adopted son must establish by evidence (a) the authority given by the husband to adopt a son to him; (b) his actual adoption as the son of the husband (8) Where in a suit to recover the property of a deceased Hindu, the plaintiff, who claimed as his adopted son, was not examined on his own behalf and no attempt was made to search for or produce books of account said to contain entries of the expenditure at the adoption, the Privy Council found that he had failed to discharge the onus.(9) The fact of adoption being admitted and its validity impugned on the ground of incapacity on the part of the adopted son, it is for the party so impugning the validity of the adoption to [illegible] No estoppel arises from an invalid adoptio[illegible] of the party setting up estoppel has been [illegible] In a suit brought to set aside an adoption [illegible] forbidden by the custom of the caste to wh[illegible]

---

(1) Ram Parkash Das v Anand Das, P C, 43 C, 707 (1916); 43 I A, 73

(2) Palianappa Chetty v Sreenath Devasikamony, P C, 40 M, 709 (1917).

(3) Prosunno Kumari v Golab Chund, 14 B L R, 450 (1875), L R, 2 I A., 145

(4) Koonwar Doorganath v Ram Chunder, 4 I A, 52, 61 (1876); s c., 2 C, 341

(5) Raj Krishna Day v Bepin Behary Dey, 17 C L. J, 189 (1913).

(6) Jalandhar Thakur v Jharula Das, P C., 42 C, 244 (1915), 41 I. A, 267; see Mohan Lalji v Gordhan Lalji Maharaj, P C, 17 C. L J, 612 (1912); 40 I A, 97

(7) Tarini Charan v Saroda Sundari, 3 B L R (A. C), 145, 159 (1869); s c., 11 W. R, 368; Bissessur Chuckerbutty v Ram Joy, 2 W. R., 326 (1865); Ramprotap Misser v Abhilak Misser, 3 C. L R (1878); and see Hur Dyal v. Roy Krishto, 24 W R, 107 (1875), [Deals with objection that s 110, post, might apply, Chowdhry Herasutollah v Brojo Soondur, 18 W R, 77 (1872)] [Factum of adoption admitted]; but see also as to fraud; Gooroo Prosunno v Nil Madhub, 21 W R, 84 (1873); Helar Dasi v Durga Das Mundal, 4 C. L. J., 323

(8) Chowdhry Pudam v Koer Odey, 12 Moo. I A., 350 (1869) See Satteraju v Venkataswami, 40 M, 925 (1917); Somasundaram Chettiar v Vaithilinga Mudaliar, 40 M, 846 (1912); Madana Mohana v. Purushotama, 38 M., 1105 (1918)

(9) Mussamat Lal Kunwar v. Chirangi Lal, P. C (1909), 3 I. A, 1.

(10) Kusum Kumari v Satya Ranjan, 30 C, 999 (1903); 7 C. W. N, 784.

(11) Vaithilinga Mudali v. Natesa Mudali, 37 M, 529 (1914).

proving such custom is on the plaintiff.(1) See further section 114, post, sub voc. "Adoption." It has been held that if a plaintiff sues as reversionary heir during the lifetime of the widow for a declaration that an adoption is invalid, the onus is on him to prove the invalidity.(2) But this view has been rejected in a case in the Madras High Court in which it was held that in such a suit the onus is on the adopted son to prove the validity of the adoption.(3) Where a plaintiff sues to set aside certain title-deeds, some evidence ought to be given by the plaintiff to impeach the deeds: it is not sufficient for him to prove heirship, nor by so doing can he throw the burden of showing a better title on the defendant.(4) If a plaintiff institutes a suit as collateral heir, the onus is on him to prove his title through the common ancestor in all its stages (5) Where the rule of succession as sebait laid down by the endower of a religious institution was not clear and there was no established usage, the onus was held to lie on the person claiming the property as sebait, to make out his claim.(6) In a suit by a Hindu widow for a moiety of the ancestral property, where the defendant alleged that her deceased husband was a leper and could not succeed to the property, the onus lay on the defendant to prove the alleged disqualification.(7) Similarly where the defendant set up a waseeutnamah or will (8) The Government claiming lands as an escheat, which are admittedly in the possession of the party claiming as heir, must show by proof that the last proprietors died without heir. They are in the same position as a plaintiff in an ordinary suit for ejectment and must prove their title. (9) The natural heirs of a Hindu, who has been taken as illatam into another family, are primâ facie entitled to succeed to the property acquired by the deceased by virtue of his illatam marriage, and the onus of proving any special circumstances to rebut this claim lies on the persons, who raise this plea (10) There is no inconsistency between a custom of impartibility and the right of females to inherit. The fact of there being a custom of impartibility in respect of family property does not take it outside the common law, and cannot cast the burden of proving the existence of any particular right, as of females to take by inheritance upon those who maintain it; for where a custom is proved to exist, it only so far supersedes the general law, which, however, still regulates all outside the custom.(11) In the undermentioned case it has been held by the Privy Council that in order to establish that an estate is descendable otherwise than by the ordinary laws of Hindu inheritance, there must be proof that it is impartible either in its nature or by a special family custom.(12) In this case it was held that the

---

(1) Virabhai Ajubhai v Bai Hiraba, 7 C W N, 716 (1903).

(2) Brojo Kishoree v. Sreenath Bose 8 W. R, 463, 467 (1868), Ashrafi Kunwar v. Rup Chand, 30 A, 197.

(3) Rajagopala Reddy v Sadasiva Reddy, 34 M, 329. Dissenting from Ashrafi Kunwar v. Rup Chand, 30 A., 197.

(4) Tacoordeen Tewaree v Hossein Khan, L R, 1 I. A., 192 (1874); s c., 13 B L R., 427, 21 W. R., 340.

(5) Kedarnath Doss v Protab Chunder, 8 C L R, 238 (1880), s c., 6 C, 626; Kali Kishore v. Bhusan Chunder, 18 C., 201 (1890), s c, 17 I. A, 159.

(6) Janok Debi v Gopal Acharji, 9 C., 766 (1882); s c, 13 C. L. R., 30; Muttu Ramalinga v. Setupati, I I. A., 209 (1874); (a zemindar claiming a customary right to grant confirmation of the election of a mohunt must prove the custom); Ramrutun Das v. Bunmalee Dass, 1 Sel. Rep. 170 (1806); Genda Puri v. Chhatur Puri, 13 I. A., 100 (1886); s c, 9 A, 1 (The only law to be observed is to be found in custom and practice which must be proved).

(7) Nullit Chunder v Bugola Sooduree, 21 W. R., 249 (1874).

(8) Sukoomut Bibee v. Wariss Ali, 22 W R, 400 (1874).

(9) Gridhari Lall v Government of Bengal, 10 W. R, 31; s. c, 1 B L R. (P C.), 44 (1868).

(10) Ramakristna v. Subbakka, 12 M., 442 (1889).

(11) Ram Nundun v. Maharani Janki, 7 C. W. N., 57 (1902). As to Jain custom of adoption vide Rup Chand v. Janchu Pershad, 37 I A., 93 and as to adoption in Burma v. Ma Twet v. Ma Me, P. C. 979, 36 C. (1909).

(12) Narasimha Appa Row v. Perthesarethy Appa Row, P. C., 37 M., 199 (1914); Baboo Gonesh Dutt Singh v.

existence of such a family custom and the nature of an estate are questions of facts and as such subject to the rule of concurrent findings.(1)

Hindu Law Alienation by father

The onus of proving that a particular property was ancestral lies on the person who claims it as such (2) Ancestral property in which the son as the son of his father acquires an interest by birth is liable to the father's debt: if, however, the debt of the father has been contracted for an immoral purpose or is of a ready-money character for which no credit is or ought to be given(3), the son would not be under any prior obligation to pay it and might object to the ancestral property being made liable for such a debt.(4) As regards what are immoral or improper debts(5), it has been held that "sons are not compellable to pay sums due by their father for spirituous liquors, losses at play or for promises made without consideration or under the influence of lust or wrath, debts due for tolls or fines (being ready-money payments for which credit will have been given at the risk of him by whom they ought to have been received(6) nor generally any debt for a cause repugnant to good morals.(7) The Mithila law is the same: a son cannot, under the Mithila law, set aside the sale of ancestral property by his father for the discharge of the father's debt and oust the purchaser; freedom on the part of the son, as far as regards ancestral property, from the obligation to discharge the father's debts can be successfully pleaded only by a consideration of the invalid nature of the debts incurred.(8) In the above case where the share of the father in the family dwelling-house had been attached by execution under a decree obtained on a bond executed by the father, it was held that the onus probandi lay on the son who on coming of age, brought the suit to recover, not his share but the whole property Similarly in another case(9), where the plaintiff

---

Maharajah Moheshur Singh 6 M I A, 164 (1855)

(1) Ib and see Mallikerjuna v Durga, P C, 13 M, 406 (1890), 17 I A, 134

(2) Mussamat Ram Kaur v Achhru, 35 P L R, 1918, s c, 47 I C, 17

(3) Stra H L, 166

(4) Girdharee Lall v Kantoo Lall, 1 I A, 321 (1874), followed, Innes and Muttusamy Ayer, JJ, dissenting in Ponnappa Pillai v Pappuvayyangar 4 M 1 (1881), and in Sivasankara Mudali v Purvati Anni, 4 M, 96 (1881), see also Nanomi Babuasin v Modhun Mohun, 13 C, 21 (1885), 13 I A, 1, Deendyal Lall v Jugdeep Narain, 4 I A, 247 (1877), Bhugbut Pershad v Girja Koer, 15 C, 717 (1888), Pannappa Pillai v Pappuvayyangar, 9 M, 343 (1885), 15 I A, 99, Sita Ram v Zalim Singh, 8 A, 231 (1886), Lal Singh v Deo Narain, 8 A, 279 (1886), Jamna v Nain Sukh, 9 A, 493 (1887) Badri Prasad v Madan Lal, 15 A, 75 (1893), Jagabhai Lalubhai v Vij Bhukandas, 11 B, 37 (1886), Chintamanrao Mehendale v Kashinath, 14 B, 320 (1889), Babu Singh v Behari Lal, 30 A 156 (Mere proof of father being man of immoral and extravagant habits not enough) Khalilul Rahman v Govind Parshad 20 C, 328 (1892), Baba v. Timma 7 M, 357 (1883), Collector of Monghyr v Hurdai Narain, 5 C, 425, 433 (1879), see also contra Sadabart Prasad v Foolbash Koer 3 B L R (F Bn.), 31 (1869), and Deendyal Lal v. Jugdeep Narain, 4 I A, 247 (1877), see also Suraj Bunsi v Sheo Proshad, 6 I A, 88 (1878), s c, 5 C, 148, see also Sivaganga v Lakshmana, 9 M, 195 (1885); Jamesetji v Kashinath, 26 B, 326 (1901).

(5) As to immoral debts, see Budree Lall v Kantee Lall, 23 W R, 260 (1875), Luchmee Dai v Ashman Singh, 25 W R, 421 (1876), s c, 2 C., 213; Wajed Hossein v. Nankoo Singh, 25 W. R, 311 (1876), Sita Ram v. Zalim Singh, 8 A, 231 (1886); Mahabir Proshad v. Bashdeo Singh, 6 A, 234 (1884), (a debt which was a mere money-decree against the father personally and not a debt which it was the duty of the sons to pay) Pareman Dass v Bhattro Mahton, 24 C, 672 (1897); McDowell v. Ragava Chetti, 27 M, 71 (1903)

(6) Stra H L, 166; see also Mayne's Hindu Law, § 279 ib, 8th Ed., § 303; Colebrooke's Digest of Hindu Law, 304, 307 and 309.

(7) Mahabir Prasad v Basdeo Singh, 6 A, 234 (1883)

(8) Girdharee Lall v Kantoo Lall, 1 I A, 321 (1874).

(9) Adurmoni Devi v. Chowdhry, 3 C, 1 (1887); see also Suraj Bunsi v. Sheo Prashad, 6 I. A, 88 (1878); Lekhraj Rai v. Mahtab Chand, 14 Moo I A, 393 (1871), 10 B L R, 42 (Where fraud and collusion were alleged by plaintiff); Hanuman Singh v Nanak Chand, 6 A, 193 (1884).

attained his majority seven or eight years before he took any steps to set this purchase aside. As regards the onus of proof that assets have come to the hands of the heir, it has been laid down by the Madras High Court that in a suit against an heir for debts of his ancestor, in the absence of special circumstances, the onus is on the plaintiff in the first instance to give such evidence as would primâ facie afford reasonable grounds for an inference that assets had or ought to have come to the hands of the defendant; when they have done this the onus is then on the defendant to show that the amount of such assets is not sufficient to satisfy the plaintiff's claim or that he was not entitled to be satisfied out of them, or that there were no assets, or that they had been disposed of in satisfaction of other claims.(1) The general result of these cases would seem, therefore, to be that under the Mitakshara law a son is always liable for his father's debts, and cannot set aside an alienation for these debts, unless they have been contracted for an immoral and improper purpose. It is not, however, sufficient tc vagant or immoral habits.
between the debt and the his father's debt when it judicial decisions from his down in the Hindu Texts.(3)

This subject was considered in the Privy Council case, Sahu Ram Chandra v. Bhup Singh(4) as follows. Under the Mitakshara Law the joint family property owned by all members as co-parceners cannot be the subject of a gift, sale or mortgage by one co-parcener, except with the consent, express or implied, of the others. Even the father is subject to the control of his sons, as of other members, with regard to immovable property. But he has certain powers as manager or head of the family, analogous to the powers of the head of a religious endowment or of a guardian to an infant, and can affect or dispose of the property for purposes denominated necessary; for in a case of legal necessity the consent of the other members is implied. The son's religious obligation to pay his father's debts and to refrain from cancelling their payments does not arise while the father is alive; for he can then pay them himself or set aside personal property for that purpose. But after the father's death the son is bound to pay debts which were antecedent or not immoral. This obligation in the case of an antecedent debt should not be extended. Much of the law on this point has arisen from the necessity of protecting purchasers in good faith; but this necessity would not justify the description of money borrowed by the father on a mortgage as an antecedent debt; for as manager of the family property he has no power to obtain money on its security for his own purposes as distinguished from the benefit of the estate.(5)

Where a son seeks to get rid of the effect, as against his interests in the joint family property, of a decree on a mortgage executed by his father obtained in a suit to which he was not made a party, the burden of proof lies on him to establish that the mortgagee when he brought his suit had notice of his interests in the mortgaged property.(6) In the decision cited the Privy Council has rejected the doctrine that in the cases of a mortgage made by a father neither

(1) Kottala Uppi v Shangara Varma, 3 Mad. H. C., 161 (1866); see also Joogul Kishore v Kalee Churn, 25 W. R., 224 (1876); Mayne's Hindu Law, § 277; ib. 8th Ed, § 305.

(2) Hanuman Singh v. Nanak Chand, 6 A., 193 (1884), Sita Ram v. Zalim Singh, 8 A., 231 (1886); Sadashiv v. Dinkar, 6 B., 520 (1882); Ramphul Singh v. Deg Narain, 8 C., 517 (1881); Ram Nath v. Luchman Rai, 21 A, 193, 194 (1899); Kasan Singh v. Bhup Singh, 27 A., 16; Sri Narain v. Lala Raghubans Rai, 17 C. W. N., 124 (1912).

(3) Narayanan Chettiar v. Veeratta Chettiar, 40 M., 581 (1917).

(4) Sahu Ram Chandra v. Bhup Singh, P. C, 39 A., 437 (1917), per Lord Shaw.

(5) See Narain Prosad v. Sarnam Singh, 44 I. A. 163 (1917).

(6) Ram Nath v. Lachman Rai, 21 A. 193 (1899) for an antecedent debt nor through legal necessity, his sons would be bound in equity to support his representation of capacity to mortgage the property and has held that such a mortgage is voidable.(1) The Allahabad High Court has held in recent decisions that when the sons successfully repudiate an alienation by the father they are not bound to refund the price paid to him by the purchaser and that a son unborn but in the womb at(2) the time of an alienation can contest it (3) In cases of this kind the substance and not the mere technicalities of the transaction should be regarded.(4) Where a person buys ancestral estate, or takes a mortgage of it from the father, whom he knows to have only a limited interest in it, for a sum of ready-money paid down at the time of the transaction, in a suit by the son to avoid it he must establish that he made

---

(1) Narain Prasad v Sarnam Singh, 44 I A., 163 (1917); see Lachman Prasad v Sarnam Singh, P C, 39 A, 500. It was said that while Mahabeer Prasad v. Ramayad Singh, 12 B L. R, 90 (1873), may have been correct in its special circumstances, it is not the general law, which is stated in Madho Prashad v. Mahaban Singh, P. C, 18 C, 157 (1890), 17 I A, 194 For an earlier case see Luchman Dass v Giridhur Chowdry, F B, 5 C, 855 (1880) which has been recently held by a Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court, Brijnandan Singh v Bidya Prasad Singh, F B, 42 C, 1069 (1915) to be still binding on that High Court and not affected as to limitation by Nanomi Babuasin v Modhun Mohun, 13 C, 21 (1885) on O XXXIV of the Civil Procedure Code

(2) Madan Gopal v Sita Prasad, 39 A, 485 (1917), following Ram Dyal v Suraj Mal, 23 Md. Ca, 891 (1914), and Chandradeo Singh v Mata Prosad, 31 A, 176 (1909), dissenting from Koer Hanmat Rai v Sundar Das, 11 C, 396 (1885), on ground that price not a debt till sale set aside

(3) Deo Narain Singh v Ganga Singh, 37 A, 162 (1915), see Nara Gopal Kulkarni v Paragauda, 41 B, 347 (1917) (son born after alienation).

(4) Sripat Singh Dugar v Prodyat Kumar, P C, 44 C, 524 (1917), 44 I. A, 1

(5) Lal Singh v Deo Narain, 8 A, 279 (1886); see also Jumna v Nain Sukh, 9 A, 493 (1887) See also on the whole subject the following cases Hunuman Dutt v Kishen Kishore (1870), 8 P. L R, 358, Mahabeer Persad v Ramayad Singh, 12 B L. R., 90 (1873), Pursid Narain v Hanuman Sahoy, 5 C, 845 (1880), Luchman Dass v Giridhar Choudhry, 5 C, 855 (1880), followed by Ganga Prasad v. Atudhia Pershad, 8 C., 131 (1881), 9 C L R, 417; Goburdhun Lall v Singessur Dutt, 7 C, 52 (1881); Surja Prasad v Golab Chand, 27 C., 762 (1900), Ramphul Singh v Deg Narain, 8 C, 517 (1881) (Suit by son to recover property sold by father during his minority, burden of proof on plaintiff to show that debt was incurred for illegal or immoral purpose), Ambica Prosad v Ram Sahay, 8 C, 898 (1881), 10 C L. R, 505, see also Sheo Prashad v Jung Bahadur, 9 C, 389 (1882), Ram Dutt v Mahender Prasad, 9 C, 452 (1882), s c, 12 C L R, 494, and similar case Baso Koer v Hurry Dass, 9 C, 495 (1882), s c, 12 C L R., 292, Jotadhari Lal v Raghubir Pershad, 12 C L R, 255 (1883), Sitanath Koer v Land Mortgage Bank, 9 C, 888; s c, 12 C. L R, 574 (1883), Jumoona Pershad v Deg Narain, 10 C, 1 (1883), Doorga Pershad v Kesho Pershad, 11 C L R (P. C), 210 (1882) (Liability of infant), Gangulee v Ancha Bapulu, 4 M, 73 (1881) [Where the sale is disputed by a coparcener (not a son), ruling in Girdharee Lal's case is not applicable and purchaser must show that the debts existed at time of sale and that debts were such as were incumbent on the minor to discharge] Sundaraja Ayyengar v Jogananda Pillai, 4 M., 111 (1881): Gurusami Chetti v Sadasiva Chetti, 5 M., 37 (1881), Vellyiammal v Katha Chetti, 5 M, 61 (1881) (Where purchaser at sale under decree against father has not possession of the whole property, son cannot recover his share without proving that debt for which decree was made, was illegal or immoral). Subramaniyayyan v Subramaniyayyan, 5 M, 125 (1879). (Elder of two brothers during minority of younger renewed mortgage executed by father for purpose neither illegal nor immoral Suit by mortgagee against elder brother; decree; sale in execution. Minor son not bound and entitled to recover his share of property without paying his share of the ancestral immovable property from a person governed by custom was bound to prove necessity or enquiry whether it was the duty of the alienee to enquire not only into the existence of the antecedent debt but also into the nature of the necessity thereof. Held (per Sadi Lal, J.), that an alienee discharging an antecedent debt is not required to make an enquiry into the nature thereof. Per Le Rossignol, J., that the principle laid down in the Full Bench decision cited(1) is that the initial onus lies on the outsider alienee to show that the debts were due and when he has discharged that onus it is the turn of the opposite party to show that the alienee made no proper enquiry or that if he made one he must have learnt of the real nature of the debts.(2) And it has been held that where money is lent to the father of a joint family on the security of the ancestral estate, at a high rate of interest, the onus is on the lender to prove not only that the father needed the money for the legal necessities of the joint-family but also that he could not have obtained it without paying the high rate of interest.(3) A Hindu father in order to satisfy such of his debts as would be binding on his heirs, can sell the entirety of the family property so as to pass even his son's interest therein, but it lies on him, who seeks to bind an infant, to prove justifying circumstances.(4) The Madras High Court has held in a recent case that marriage-expenses reasonably incurred by a twice-born male member of a Hindu joint-family are for a family necessity and therefore legally binding on the estate.(5)

Insolvency

In a suit against an insolvent and the Official Assignee for the sale of mortgaged property, the onus is on the plaintiff to prove that title-deeds in his possession after the insolvency were deposited with him as security before the adjudication.(6) The burden of supporting a purchase from the insolvent of the whole of his assets just prior to insolvency falls on the person claiming that the purchase can stand.(7)

Insurance

The following provisions contained in a prospectus to which a Policy was made subject "Age admitted in the Company's policy in all cases where proof mortgage-debt) Gurusami Sastrial v Ganapathia Pulai, 5 M., 337 (1879). (Suit against father for specific performance of contract to sell ancestral property proof of necessity must be required). Muttayan Chetti v Sangili Vira, 9 I. A., 128, s c, 6 M, 1 (1882); (Interest which son takes by heritage from father is liable as assets by descent for payment of father's debts) Yenamandra Sitaramasami v Nidatana Sanyasi, 6 M, 400 (1883). (No proof that mortgage-debt contracted by father was for necessary purpose) Phul Chand v Man Singh, 4 A, 309 (1882), where adult son was aware of mortgage by father for necessary purpose and did not protest: held son could not succeed unless he could show debt was for illegal or immoral purpose Ujagar Singh v Pitam Singh, 8 I. A, 190 (1881); Hurdey Narain v. Rooder Perkash 11 I A, 26 (1883), Ramakrishna v Namasivaya, 7 M, 275 (1884) As to "family necessity," see Babaji Mahadaji v. Krishnaji Devji, 2 B, 666 (1878) See also Luchman Das v Khunnu Lal, 19 A, 26 (1896): [liability of grandsons to pay interest on their grand-father's debts]: Pareman Dass v Bhuttu Mahton, 24 C. 672 (1897) [no antecedent debt]. McDowell v Ragava Chetti, 27 M, 71 (1903): Atar Singh v Thakar Singh (1908), 35 C, 1039, and Babu Singh v. Behari Lal, 30 A, 156; Kirpal Singh v Balwant Singh, P C., 40 C, 288 (1914) (onus) Narayana Annavi v. Ramalinga, 39 M, 587 (1916).

---

(1) Debiditta v Sondagur Singh 65 P R, 1900 (F. B).

(2) Jhundu v. Niamat Khan, 1 Lahore. 472 As to proof of legal necessity by mortgage, see Bhikhu Sahu v Kodai Pandey, 41 A, 523; s c, 17 A L J, 580

(3) Nand Ram v Bhupal Singh (1911), 34 A, 127.

(4) Jamsetji Tata v Kashinath, 26 B, 329 (1901) for case of son born after alienation, see Nara Gopal Kulkerni v. Paraganda, 41 B, 347 (1917); Hazari Mall Babu v. Abaninath Adhurjaya, 17 C. W. N, 280 (1912); Bunwari Lal v. Daya Sankar, 13 C. W. N, 815 (1908); Deo Narain Singh v Ganga Singh, 37 A., 162 (1915).

(5) Gopala Krishnan v Venkatanarana F. B, 37 M, 273 (1914), approving Kameswara v Veeracharlu, 34 M., 422 (1911). But such expenses cannot be anticipated in partition, Narayani Annavi v Ramalinga Annavi, 39 M., 304 (1916).

(6) Miller v Madho Das, 23 I A., 106 (1896)

(7) Re Seehase, 22 C W. N, 335.

is given satisfactory to the directors. Proof of age can be furnished, at any time; if not furnished, it will be necessary on settlement of claim"—impose on the assured or his representatives the obligation of giving proof of age before the Company can be called upon to pay. If the evidence had been given in the lifetime of the assured, and an admission of age was attached to the policy, no further proof would be needed, and the onus of disputing the age would be thrown on the Company(1), but in the absence of such evidence and of such admission it lies upon those claiming upon the policy by reasonable proof to satisfy the Court as to the age of the assured.(2) When a person sues on a policy of insurance which contains certain exceptions in the event of which the assurers are not liable, it lies upon the plaintiff to prove that the loss does not fall within any of those exceptions.(3)

Inventions

It is for the person who claims an exclusive privilege under the Inventions Act (V of 1888) and is in possession of the facts which, in his opinion, entitle him to that exclusive privilege, to show that those facts exist.(4)

Lakhiraj

"Proprietors of land in the Bengal Presidency are concerned with two classes [illegible] Grants made previous to the [illegible] bighas, the revenue of which [illegible] of Ben Reg. XIX of 1793 [illegible] arge of the revenue of the estate within the limits of which the lands are situate. The gift of this revenue was an act of liberality on the part of Government, inasmuch as these grants had been expressly excluded from the decennial and permanent settlements. The former lakhiraj holder was not dispossessed, but was allowed to hold the land as a dependant taluk, subject to the payment of revenue (b) Grants made after the 1st December 1790 and whether exceeding or under one hundred bighas. These grants (unless made by the Governor-General in Council were declared to be in all cases null and void, and as they had been included within the limits of permanently-settled estates, the proprietors of such estates were, by [illegible] authorized and required to dispos[illegible] their estates and collect the rent[illegible] oprietors were expressly required by law (section 11, Reg XIX of 1793) to institute suits in the Civil Courts for the recovery of the revenue made over to them by Government. With respect to the second class, proprietors were formerly allowed to dispossess the alleged revenue-free-holders, but the difficulty of doing so induced resort to the Courts in those cases also, and finally, this resort was made compulsory [section 28 of Act X of 1859] (5)

There is, however, an important difference as regards the burden of proof in each class of cases. In the first class of cases, where the allegation is that the lakhiraj tenure was created before the 1st December 1790, the onus probandi, in a suit for resumption of title, lies on the alleged lakhirajdar or person setting up the revenue-free title (6) If a person claims under a lakhiraj grant made since 1st December 1790, this will be a conclusive bar to a suit for

(1) In Oriental Government etc Assurance Co v Narasimha Chari, 25 M, 204 (1901) Bhashayam Ayyangar, J, was of opinion that such admission would preclude the company from producing evidence to disprove the age as admitted

(2) The Oriental Government etc Company v Sarat Chandra, 20 B, 99 (1895) Referred to in The Oriental Government etc, Co, Ltd v Narasimha Chari, 25 M, 183 (1901)

(3) Aga Syud v Hajee Jackariah 2 Ind Jur N S, 308 (1867)

(4) Elgin Mills Co v Muir Mills Co, 17 A 490 (1895)

(5) Field's Evidence Act, 481, and see Field's Regulations, 36, 245—261.

(6) Ib, Omesh Chunder v Dukhina Soondry W R, Sp No 95 (1863), Radhakristo Singh v Radha Nunghi; Sev. Rep, Aug—Dec (1863), 366, Lalla Sheeblal v Sheikh Gholam, Marsh. Rep, 255 (1861) see also Heera Lall v. Baikunnissa Bibee, 3 C, 501 (1878); Koylashbashine Dasee v. Goocoolmoree Dassee, 8 C 230 (1881); s c, 10 C. L R., 41.

resumption, although the suit may be brought within twelve years(1); but the zemindars' right to revenue is still subject to the twelve years' rule of limitation.(2)

In the second class of cases, where th [illegible] was created after the 1st December 1790, [illegible] or proprietor to show that the land clai[illegible] rent-paying estate, and was assessed with the public revenue at the time of the decennial settlement.(3) Where the plaintiff was the representative of an auction-purchaser at a sale for arrears of Government revenue and the suit was commenced within twelve years from the date of the purchase, the onus of proof was on the plaintiff to show that the lands were not lakhiraj.(4) This is generally done by showing that rent has been paid for the land in question at some time since December 1790.(5) The mere fact that lands fall within the geographical limits of an estate does not of itself show that such land is mal land.(6) But lands situated within the limits of a zemindari are primâ facie considered to be a part of such zemindari, and those who alleged that they are entitled to have any such lands settled as a separate shikmi taluk must make out this title.(7) In a question of boundary between a lakhiraj tenure and a zemindar's mal land, there is no presumption one way or the other, but the onus is on the plaintiff to prove his case.(8) If an alleged lakhirajdar institutes a suit for a declaration of title, the burden of proof is on him to prove his title, and no proof of possession (unless it be carried beyond 1790) will shift the burden to the zemindar.(9) Where the zemindar had already ousted the alleged lakhirajdar without resorting to the Courts, and the latter instituted a suit to recover possession, it was held that as the zemindar had no right to oust the lakhirajdar, unless the lakhiraj was created subsequently to 1st December 1790, the burden was on the zemindar to prove that the lakhiraj was created subsequently to that date To decide otherwise would be to allow the zemindar by his own wrongful act to shift the burden of proof.(10) Under section 8 of the Land Revenue Act (XIX of 1873, N.-W. P.), any person claiming land free of revenue, which is not recorded as revenue free, is bound to prove his title to hold such land free of revenue.(11)

---

(1) Act XIV of 1859, s 1, cl 14; Sristeedhur Sawunt v. Ramanath Rokhit, 6 W R, 58 (1866), Sheikh Sahab v. Lala Bissessuar, 1 W R, 110 (1864).

(2) See Field's Evidence Act, 6th Ed, 323, 324; see also Forbes v. Meer Mahomed, 20 W. R, 44 (1873); and Act XIV of 1859, s 1, cl 14; Act IX of 1908, Art 130

(3) Ib · Hurryhur Mukhopadhya v Madhab Chunder, 14 Moo I. A., 152 (1871), s c, 8 B L R, 566; 20 W. R., 459; Parbati Charun v. Rajkrishna Mookerjee, B L R, Sup Vol, F. B, 162, 165 (1865); Mahomed Akbur v. Reilly, 24 W. R, 445 (1875); Sonaton Ghose v. Abdool Turrub, 2 W. R., 205 (1865); Khelut Chunder v. Poorna Chunder, 2 W R, 258 (1865).

(4) Erfanoonnissa v Pearee Mohun, 25 W R, 209 (1876); 1 C, 378

(5) Beharee Lall v. Kalee Doss, 8 W. R, 451 (1867); Shumdan Ali v. Mathooranath Dutt, 14 W R, 226 (1870).

(6) Bishnath Chowdhry v Radha Churn, 20 W. R, 465 (1873), and see Sheikh Milan v. Mahomed Ali, 10 C. W. N, 434

(7) Wise v Bhoobun Moyee, 10 Moo I. A, 165 (1863); s c, 3 W. R, P. C., 5; Nistarinee v. Kalipershad Dass, 23 W. R, 431 (1875); see also Purseedh Narain v. Bissessur Dyal, 7 W. R., 148 (1867). (Suit by a zemindar for declaration that land sold in execution as lakhiraj was his mal land).

(8) Beer Chunder v. Ram Gutty, 8 W. R, 20 (1867); see also Mahabeer Persad v. Oomrao Singh, 1 All H C., 167; Tareenee Persad v. Kalicharan Ghosh, Marsh. Rep, 215 (1862)

(9) Ram Jeebun v. Pershad Shar, 7 W. R, 458 (1867).

(10) Mun Mohinee v. Joykissen Mookerjee, W. R, Sp No 174 (1864); see also Joykrishen Mookerjee v. Pearee Mohun, 8 W. R, 160 (1867); Sheikh Goburdhun v. Sheikh Tofail, 6 W. R, 190 (1866); Wooma Soonduree v. Kishoree Mohun, 8 W. R., 238 (1867)

(11) See Field's Evidence Act, 6th Ed., 325 and see for further information on Lakhiraj Tenures, Field's Bengal Regulation, pp 36, 345—361. See now N.-W. P. Act III of 1901.

When a public body seeks under the Land Acquisition Act to acquire any portion of a block of buildings which is structurally connected with the main work, the onus is on that body to show that the portion is not "reasonably required by the full and unimpaired use of the house."(1)

Land Acquisition

When the question is whether persons are landlords and tenants, and it has been shown that they have been acting as such, the burden of proving that they do not stand or have ceased to stand in that relationship, is on the person who affirms it. (Section 109, post). As to the tenant's estoppel, see section 116, post; and as to estoppels affecting the landlord, see section 115, post Where defendants admit the ownership of the land to be with the plaintiff but claim to hold possession of it as tenants, the onus lies upon them.(2) The burden of proving that a tenure has been held at a fixed and invariable rent for a period of twelve years antecedent to the permanent settlement in suit by a zemindar for enhancement of rent lies on the defendant, the tenure-holder.(3) But where the taluk is found to be a dependent taluk within the meaning of section 51, Reg. VII of 1793, the burden rests upon the plaintiff zemindar to show that the rent is variable (4) In another case it was laid down that there is no presumption that any tenure held is not a transferable tenure and the person alleging it must prove it(5): but in a subsequent case(6) where the plaintiff sued to recover possession, as part of his putni estate of a ryoti holding sold in execution of decree and purchased by the defendant, the onus was thrown on the defendant to prove that the ryoti tenure was of a permanent and transferable nature. When a ryot holds lands of considerable extent under a zemindar and alleges that one or two plots are held under a different title, the burden of proving this allegation is thrown on him(7); and similarly if a ryot, who has paid rent for several years, pleads that he has got possession of a portion only of the lands demised, the onus lies on him to prove this allegation.(8) In a suit by a kabulyatdar khot to recover rent, the onus is on the holder of the khoti land to show that he is exempted from paying rent according to the custom of the country.(9) The mere fact that a tenant some time ago gave a kabulyat for a limited period at a particular rate of rent is not sufficient in itself to throw upon the defendant the entire burden of proving what the present rent is, without any evidence on the part of the landlord that the rent specified in the kabulyat had ever been realized from him.(10) [illegible] w, vested [illegible] custom [illegible] trees.(11) The decision of a survey-officer as to tenure is under the Khoti Settlement

Landlord and tenant

(1) Venkataratnam Naidu v Collector of Godavari, 27 M, 350 (1903)

(2) Narsing Narain v Dharam Thakur, 9 C W N, 144 (1904), at p 146; dist Nawab Tarasseed v Behari Lal, 9 C W N, clx (1905) [suit for declaration of Khud-kasht right] See Dina Nath Das v Ganesh Chandra Saha, 18 C L J, 544 (1913) (claim to raiyati interest): Baraik Kamal Sahi v Lilhu Christraw, 8 C. L. J., 170 (1908); Matilal Karnani v. Darjeeling Municipality, 17 C L J, 167 (1913) (where no proof of contract no presumption of tenancy)

(3) Gopal Lal Thakur v Tilak Chandra, 10 Moo I A, 183 (1865), s c., 3 W. R., P C., 1

(4) Bamasoondery Dassyah v Radhika Chowdhrain, 13 Moo I A, 248 (1869); s c, 4 B L R, P C, 8 13 W R (P C), 11

(5) Doya Chand v Anand Chunder, 14 C, 82 (1887)

(6) Kripamoyi Dabia v Durga Gobind, 15 C, 89 (1887)

(7) Ram Coomar v Beejoy Govind, 7 W R, 535 (1867).

(8) Beni Madhab v Sridhur Deb, 10 C L R, 555 (1881).

(9) Muhammad Yakoub v Muhammad Ismail, 9 Bom. H C. R, 278 (1872).

(10) Mukunda Chundra v Arpan Ali, 2 C W N., 47 (1897)

(11) Kausalia v. Gulab Kour, 21 A., 297 (1899) A tenant at fixed rates having a transferable right in his holding the presumption is that the trees standing thereon are the property of the tenant. Harbans Lal v. Maharajah of Benares, 23 A, 126 (1900).

Act (I of 1800, Bom. C.), binding until reversed or modified by decree of Court and the burden of proof in such case lies upon the party seeking to vary the decision.(1) The possession by the defendant of a tenure of limited extent within the plaintiff's putni raises no presumption of title upon his seizure of a piece of land and claiming it as part of his tenure The onus lies upon the defendant to prove that the land was included in his mokurari holding and not upon the plaintiff to show that it was not.(2) In a suit for ejectment where the defendant sets up a permanent tenancy the onus is upon the defendant to show this.(3) A landlord who makes an increase of rent for increase of area must show the necessary circumstances justifying a decree.(4) In the case cited where it was alleged that the area demised by a kabulyat was more than was contained in the specified boundaries, it was held by the Privy Council that extraneous evidence was not admissible to vary the construction and that the onus was on the tenant to prove his right to a reduction of rent.(5) In a later case in the Calcutta High Court, it was said that there is no valid reason why the rebuttable presumption raised by section 5, clause 5, of the Bengal Tenancy Act should not be applied to a tenancy which existed before that Act came into force, for that Act merely codified a doctrine already recognized, shifting the burden of proof as to the tenure in certain cases.(6)

Landlord and tenant. Enhancement of rent.

In a suit for enhancement of rent, the burden of proof is on the landlord who seeks to disturb the previously existing arrangement.(7) And it has been recently held that section 91 does not preclude the landlord from proving improvements in consideration of which the enhanced rent was agreed; since the consideration did not constitute a term of the contract within that section (8) But where the tenant pleads that a portion of the land held by him and sought to be enhanced is held rent free, the onus is on him to prove this allegation (9) Where the defendant claimed to hold as a dependent taluk, the onus was held to be on the zemindar to show that the land was included in the zemindari at the time of the permanent settlement.(10) In a suit to recover arrears of rent at enhanced rates, the onus of proving both the quantity and the rates is upon the plaintiff and not upon the defendant.(11) The onus of proving what is the proper rate is also upon the plaintiff.(12) But, where the plaintiff, who claimed a bhaoli rent at the rate of nine annas of the crop, proved that in the mauzah in question the ryots paid rent at that rate, it was held that the onus was on the defendants, who alleged that the rate was eight annas, to prove their allegation.(13) When in answer to a suit for enhanced rent of a taluk, the existence of which as an ancient taluk is undoubted, it is pleaded that the rent has not been changed since the permanent settlement and is not liable to enhancement,

(1) Madhabrao v. Deonak, 21 B 695 (1896)

(2) Nanda Lal Goswami v Jagneswar Haldar, 5 C W N, cccii (1901); Dina Nath Das v Ganesh Chandra Saha, 18 C. L J, 544 (1913)

(3) Ismail Khan v Aghore Nath, 7 C W N, 734 (1903). As to the facts which raise a presumption of permanency, see notes to s 114

(4) Gowri Patra v Reiley, 20 C 579 (1892) Ratan Lall v Jadu Halsana, 10 C. W N, 46 (1905) Ishan Chandra Mitter v Ramranjan Chuckerbutty, 2 C. L J, 25

(5) Durga Prasad Singh v Rajendra Narayan Bagchi, P. C, 41 C., 493 (1914); 18 C. W. N, 66.

(6) Jagabandhu Saha v Magnamoyee Dassee, 44 C., 555 (1917); see Kripa Sindhu v. Annada Sundari, F. B, 35 C., 34 (1907); Bamandas Bhattacharjee v. Nilmadhub Saha, 44 C, 771 (1917)

(7) Mirza Mahomed v. Radha Romun, 4 W. R (Act X), 18 (1865)

(8) Probod Chandra Gangopadhya v Cherag Ali (1906), 11 C. W. N., 62

(9) Newaj Bundopadhya v Kali Prosonno, 6 C., 543 (1880); s. c., 8 C. L. R., 6, Govinda Priya v. Ratan Dhupi, 4 C. L. J, 37.

(10) Asanullah v Bussarat Ali 10 C. 920 (1884).

(11) Golam Ali v. Tagore, 1 W. R, 56 (1864), 9 W. R, 65.

(12) Sumeera Khatoon v Tagore, 1 W. R, 58 (1864).

(13) Lochun Choudhury v Anup Singh, 8 C. L. R., 426 (1881) See also s. 109, post.

the onus is on the defendant to prove that he has held at an uniform rent for twenty years and when he has discharged this burden of proof it lies upon the landlord to prove that the rent has varied since the permanent settlement (1) Where in a suit for arrears of rent, enhanced rates were claimed for two years on the ground that the lease contained a covenant by which the rent was to be increased if the tenant on holding over claimed occupancy-rights, it was held that this was in the nature of a penalty and not enforceable.(2)

If in a suit for arrears of rent the defendant claims an abatement on the ground that a portion of the land has been diluviated, th diluvion is on him (3) So also where the defendant, in there has been a remission of rent, the onus is on him to prove it (4) In the case cited it was held by the Privy Council that where diluviated lands formed part of a permanent, heritable and transferable tenure, the tenant did not abandon his right in them by claiming or accepting a remission of rent while they were submerged and could assert it on their re-formation in situ (5) And in another case the Privy Council has held that the constructive possession of diluviated land remains with the owner (6) Where a shareholder sues for a fractional portion of the rent, and it is alleged that the entire rent is payable together, the onus is on him to show that he is entitled to payment of the fractional portion separately (7) is eje

sec is c cla

Landlord and tenai Ejectmen claiming the rent, the onus is on him to prove actual receipt and enjoyment.(12) A person alleging that land is held by him as sir or proprietor's private land must prove it (13) As under the Tenancy Act a landlord has a right to eject a tenant whose holding consists entirely of sir land, the burden of proving the existence of a special contract under which he is entitled to resist ejectment lies on the tenant (14) In a suit for arrears of rent and ejectment for non-payment, where defendant challenged the rate claimed as well as plaintiff's right to sue alone, it was held that the onus lay on the plaintiff to prove his claim to the rate of rent sued for and to show he was sole proprietor.(15) A person alleging in a suit for ejectment the permanency of the tenure must prove it.(16) If a tenant is sued for rent, he can set up eviction by title paramount

---

(1) Rashmonee Dabee v Hurronath Roy, 1 W R, Civ Rul (1864), 280

(2) Mir Abdul Aziz v Karu, 18 C L J, 95 (1913)

(3) Savi v Obhoy Nath, 2 W R (Act X), 28 (1865).

(4) Bunwarry Lall v Furlong, 9 W R, 238 (1888).

(5) Arun Chandra v Kamini Kumar P C, 41 C, 683, 41 I A, 32, 18 C W N, 361, 19 C L J, 292 (1914), overruling Hemnath Dutt v Ashgur Sindar, 4 C., 894 (1879).

(6) Basanta Kumar Roy v Secretary of State, P C., 44 C., 858 (1917); see Munshi Mashar Hasan v. Behari Singh, 3 A L J, 567 (1906).

(7) Mt Lalun v Hemraj Singh, 20 W R, 76 (1873).

(8) Nilratan Mondal v Ismail Khan Mahomed, 8 C W N, 895 (1904), Ananda Hari Basak v Secretary of State, 3 C L J, 316

(9) Domun Lall v Pudman Singh, W R (Act X), 129 (1864)

(10) Rash Behari v Hara Moni, 15 C, 555 (1888)

(11) Thiagaraja v Ginaya Sambandha, 11 M 77 (1887)

(12) Kishen Chunder v Buratee Sheikh, 2 W R (Act X), 36 (1865)

(13) Hari Das v Ghansham Narain, 6 A, 286 (1884)

(14) Kesheo Rao v Puran Barai 1 N L R 32

(15) Sheikh Ashruf v Ram Kishore, 23 W R 289 (1875)

(16) Thiagaraja v Ginaya 11 M 77 (1887), Rangasami v Gnana 22 M, 264 (1898), Nilmoni Maitra v Mathura Nath, 4 C W N, clix (1900)

to that of the lessor as an answer, and, if evicted from part of the land, an apportionment of the rent may take place: but the onus lies on the lessor, who claims an apportionment, to show what is the fair rate for the lands out of which the tenant was not evicted.(1) Unless a landlord has a primâ facie right to evict he must start his case and show how such right accrued There is no presumption that every tenant in a zemindari is a tenant-at-will nor that a tenancy is not a saleable interest. So where a ryot mortgaged the land in his holding and the mortgagee purchased the land in execution of a decree obtained upon his mortgage and the zemindar sued to eject the decree-holder and judgment-debtor, it was held, neither party [illegible] of proof lay upon the plaintiff and had not b [illegible]
When a tenant has been in long ar [illegible] admitted tenure, it lies upon the landlord in a suit for ejectment to prove in the first instance that the land is his khas property and not the tenant's (3) Where the lands granted were the lands of the zemindar and the grant was on the condition that services should be rendered and that a certain sum should be payable to the zemindar in recognition of his ownership, primâ facie the ownership should remain with the zemindar, and the burden of proving the plea that the plaintiff was not entitled to eject would lie on the person resisting ejectment.(4) Where a tenant, having a right of occupancy, not transferable by custom, had given up to the purchaser possession of all the culturable lands of the holding, but remained in possession of homestead lands only by permission of the purchaser, it was held that this was sufficient to indicate that the raiyat had [illegible] the landlord was entitled to eject [illegible] ossession.(5) And where a tenure [illegible] ree for rent obtained against one of the tenants after the shares of the other tenants had passed by auction-sale to a stranger, on the allegation that the tenant against whom it had been obtained was the sole recorded tenant of the landlord, it was held that whether this was so or not was a matter of speciality within the knowledge of the landlord and the onus was on him to prove it.(6) In a suit in ejectment, the plaintiff must prove good title: there being no onus on the defendant to prove title relatively good or bad at all. Where the plaintiff fails to do so the fact that he was once in possession within twelve years of suit does not throw the onus of proving good title on the defendant.(7)

Landlord and tenant Intermediate tenure. A zemindar has, as such, a primâ facie title to the gross collections of all the mouzahs or villages within his zemindari, and the burden of proof is on the person who seeks to defeat that right by proving that he is entitled to an intermediate tenure (8) The same principle will apply where the zemindar, or assignee or lessee of his rights, demands possession of the land from a person who is unable to prove a tenancy or other right of continuing to occupy.(9) As to strict proof required on the part of the plaintiff seeking to disturb a possession of very long duration, see the case cited infra.(10) Where the plaintiffs sued for declaration of their rights to possession of lands which they claimed

(1) Gopanund Jha v. Lalla Govind, 12 W. R., 109 (1869); Surendra Narain Roy Chowdhuri v. Dina Nath Bose, 43 C., 554 (1915)

(2) Appa Rau v Sabbanna, 13 M., 60 (1889).

(3) Nanda Lal v Jagneswar Haldar, 5 C. W. N, cccii (1901). As to onus on grantor to show right to resume, see 20 Bom. L. R., 779.

(4) Sri Rajah v Rajah Venkatanarasimha, 26 M, 403 (1903).

(5) Sailabala Debi v. Sriram Bhuttacharji, 11 C. W. N., 873 (1907).

(6) Baikunta Nath Roy v. Debendra Nath Sahi, 11 C. W. N, 676 (1906).

(7) Bapuji Narayan Chitnis v. Bhagwant Balwant Chitnis, 42 B, 357; s. c. 45 I. C, 550. And see as to onus to prove right to eject, 46 I. C., 238.

(8) Sahib Perhlad v. Doorgapershad Tewaree, 12 Moo. I. A., 331 (1869); s. c. 2 B. L. R. (P. C.), 134.

(9) Ram Monee v. Aleemoodeen, 20 W. R., 374 (1873); Batai Ahir v. Bhuggobutty Koer, 11 C. L. R., 476 (1882).

(10) Forbes v. Meer Mahomed, 12 B L. R., 216 (1873).

as khudkasht and the Record of Rights showed that the lands were so: held that the onus was on the defendant to show that the entry was erroneous (1)

Landlord and tenant: Fractional portion of rent. Where in a suit by a shareholder to recover a fractional portion of the rent, the defendant contends that he is only bound to pay to the person entitled to the whole rent, the onus is on the plaintiff to show that he is entitled to sue for a fractional portion.(2)

Landlord and tenant: Plea of part-possession. In a suit to recover arrears of rent under a kabulyat, the defendant, who had paid rent for upwards of four or five years, pleaded that he had obtained possession of portion only of the lands demised, and it was held that the onus was on the defendant.(3) Where the tenant executed a kabulyat in favour of the landlord by which he agreed to pay additional rent at a certain rate if any land in excess of what was mentioned in the kabulyat were found in his possession, and the plaintiff landlord sued to recover additional rent for excess land which he alleged was in the defendant's possession: held that the onus was not on the plaintiff to prove the inception of tenancy.(4) See section 114, "Presumption relating to holding of land," post.

Legitimacy. There is a presumption in favour of legitimacy and marriage, and therefore on any person who is interested in making out the illegitimacy of another is thrown the whole burden of proving it. [Sections 112, 114, post, to the notes of which sections reference should be made (5)]

Life and death The burden of proof upon the question whether a man is alive or dead is regulated by sections 107, 108, post, to the notes of which sections reference should be made.

Limitation and adverse possession. It is a settled rule of law that it is for the plaintiff to show primâ facie that his suit is not barred by Limitation (6) But when the plaintiff's suit or proceeding is primâ facie within time, if the defendant alleges that the case is governed by a special clause allowing a shorter period of Limitation it is for him to satisfy the Court that the case comes under that special clause (7) Where a person sets up his rights to a property by reason of adverse possession the onus is on him.(8) Where fraud is alleged, it is for the defendant to allege and prove that the plaintiff was aware of the fraud on a date earlier than that assigned in the plaint (9) And where it is uncertain when a fraud affecting Limitation was discovered, onus is on the defendant to show that the suit is out of time (10) And if the defendant wishes the Court to believe in the existence of a particular fact operating as a bar to the suit, it is for him generally to prove those facts under the provisions of section 103, ante. In a suit to recover immovable property it is for the plaintiff to prove that he has been in possession at some time within the period of Limitation and not for the

---

(1) Gajadhar Prasad Singh v Sheo Nandan Prasad Singh, 23 C W N, 304.

(2) Mt Lalun v Hemraj Singh, 20 W R 76 (1873) see as to fractional co-shares, Punchanun Banerjee v Raj Kumar, 19 C, 610 (1892), Ram Chunder v Giridhur Dutt, 19 C, 755 (1891), Jogendra Narain v Banki Singh, 22 C, 658 (1895), Bindu Bashini v Peari Mohun, 20 C, 107 (1891), Gopal Chunder v Umesh Narain, 17 C, 695 (1890)

(3) Bam Madhub v Sridhar Deb, 10 C L R, 555 (1881)

(4) Whyte v Bhairab Maji, 30 C L J 121

(5) See also Rajendra Nath v Jogendra Nath, 14 Moo I A, 67 (1871), Bhima v Dhulappa, 7 Bom L R, 95, Sakina Khanum v Laddan Sahiba, 2 C. L. J., 218 and Kalian Singh v Maharajah, A. W N, 214 (1905), and 44 I C, 57.

(6) Mahomed Ibrahim v Morrison, 5 C, 36, 37 (1878), Mahomed Ali v Khaja Abdul 9 C, 744 (1883), Mitra's Law of Limitation and Prescription, 5th Ed., p 105

(7) Mitra op cit, see Mohansing Chawan v Henry Conder, 7 B, 478 (1883); Danmull v B I Steam Navigation Co, 12 C 477, 484 (1886)

(8) Jai Chand Bahadur v Girdar Singh, 17 All L J, 814, s c., 52 I. C., 366

(9) Raja Ratan Singh v Thakur Man Singh, 1 N L. R., 20, and see Tants v. Gajadhar, 2 N L R., 98.

(10) Ambialah Kuttun v Raman Nair, 31 M 230 (1907).

defendant to prove adverse possession for twelve years (1) And it has been held by the Madras High Court that while a party who bases his title on possession adverse to the Crown must primâ facie show possession for sixty years, the proof of such an adverse possession by him for a shorter period will shift the burden of proof on the Crown.(2) Such possession may be proved by oral evidence alone.(3) But the acts implying possession in one case may be wholly inadequate to prove it in another The character and value of the property, the suitable and natural mode of using it, the course of conduct which the proprietor might reasonably be expected to follow with a due regard to his own interests—all these things greatly varying, as they must under various conditions, are to be taken into account in determining the sufficiency of a possession.(4) Where land has been shown to have been in a condition unfitting it for actual enjoyment in the usual modes at such a time and under such circumstances that that state naturally would and probably did continue until twelve years before suit, it may properly be presumed that it did so continue and that the plaintiff's possession continued also until the contrary is shown.(5) Where the plaintiff claimed certain land belonging to a mouzah, part of a taluk, stating that it was originally a large bheel but had in recent years become dry and cultivable during a part of the year, and proved his title, but the defendant relying on adverse possession for more than twelve years before the institution of the suit, denied the plaintiff's title to the soil of the bheel; it was held that, as the plaintiff had proved his title, the onus lay on the defendant to prove that the plaintiff had lost his title by reason of the adverse possession (6) Adverse possession by one person of a site belonging to another adjacent to the former's house as a convenient adjunct cannot be regarded as an indication of an assertion that the land so used belongs to the person so using it. Such user for any length of time does not amount to adverse possession and cannot confer title by prescription.(7) Where a suit was brought by the plaintiff, the mortgagee, to recover the principal

---

(1) Perhlad Sein v Rajendra Kishore, 12 Moo I A, 337 (1869); Dinobundoo Suhaye v Furlong, 9 W R 155 (1868), Nitrasur Singh v Nund Lall, 8 Moo I A, 199 (1860), Koomar Ranjit v. Schœne, 4 C L R, 390 (1879), Bhootnath Chatterjee v Kedar Nath, 9 C, 125 (1882); Nazir Sidhee v Woomesh Chunder, 2 W. R, 75 (1865) Boolee Singh v Hurbuns Narain, 7 W R, 212 (1867), Bromanund Gossain v Government, 5 W R., 136 (1866), Jugodumba Chowdhrain v. Ram Chunder, 6 W R, 327, Gossain Dass v. Seroo Koomaree (Suit for share in joint family property) 19 W R, 192 (1873); Collector of Rungpore v Tagore, 5 W. R, 115 (1866), Beer Chunder v Deputy Collector of Bhullooah, 13 W R, P. C., 23 (1870), Moro Desai v Ramchandra Desai, 6 B, 508 (1882) Ramchandra Narayan v Narayan Mahadev, 11 B, 216 (1886); Tulsi Pershad v Raja Misser, 14 C., 610 (1887): Mohima Chunder v. Mohesh Chunder, 16 C, 473 (1888), Ram Lochun v. Joy Doorga, 11 W R, 283 (1869); Parmanund Misser v Sahib Ali, 11 A., 438 (1889); Gooroodass Roy v Huronath Roy, 2 W. R, 246 (1855), Jafar Hussain v. Mashuq Ali, 14 A, 193 (1894); Mudun Mohun v Bhuggoomunto Poddar, 8 C., 923 (1882); Mirza Mohomed v. Surahutoonissa Khanum, 2 W R, 89 (1864); Hemanta Kumari Debi v Jogendra Nath Roy, P C, 10 C. W N, 630 (1906) Bishambhar Satbhaya v. Nadiar Chand, 18 C. L. J., 601 (1913).

(2) Sri Raja Chalikani Rama Rau v Secretary of State for India (1908), 31 M, 1. Explaining Secretary of State for India v. Vira Rayan (1886), 9 M, 175

(3) v. ante, s. 59, and post, s 110

(4) Lord Advocate v. Lord Lovat. L R, 5 App Cas, 288 (1880)

(5) Mahomed Ali v. Khaja Abdul, 9 C, 744 (1883); Mohiney Mohun v. Krishno Kishore, 9 C, 802 (1883); Mano Mohun v. Mothura Mohun, 7 C., 225; (1881) (Diluvion); from this case distinguish Gokool Kristo v. David, 23 W. R, 43 (1875). See also Mahomed Ibrahim v. Morrison, 5 C., 36 (1878): Kalley Churn v. Secretary of State, 6 C., 725, 735 (1881).

(6) Radha Gobind v Inglis, 7 C L R, 364 (1880) (Diluvion); and as to the elements of adverse possession, see Sundarasastrial v. Govinda Manderayan, 31 M., 528 (1908); and Jogendra Nath Rai v Baladeo Das, 35 C., 961 (1907).

(7) Mussamat Gulab Debi v Monji Ram, 38 P. L. R, 1919; s. c, 51 I. C., 575.

and interest due upon two mortgage-bonds and to enforce that claim by a sale of the mortgaged property, he never having been in possession at any time, and the defendant contended that the mortgagee could not enforce his right against him, because he had been in possession adversely to the plaintiff and those under whom he claimed for a period of twelve years before suit, it was held that the suit was not brought to recover possession as upon a dispossession, and the onus lay on the defendant to prove an adverse possession (1) But the general rule is that, when a plaintiff claims land from which he has been dispossessed, the burden is on him to prove possession and dispossession within twelve years or that the cause of action arose within twelve years (2) In the case of Radha Gobind Roy v Inglis(3), the defendant had set up a title by twelve years' adverse possession, and neither suit was brought to recover possession as upon a dispossession The fact that rent was not paid or that the payment was discontinued is not enough to show that a possession was adverse (4) Where a mortgagor by conditional sale afterwards surrendered his equity of redemption to the mortgagee by an unregistered agreement and the mortgagee remained in possession for many years, it was held that his possession was adverse and that the mortgagor was barred by limitation (5)

When a suit for possession is instituted between the vendee and his vendor, the onus is on the vendor to show that he has held adversely to the vendee for twelve years.(6) And it has been held that to enable the defendant to add to the period of his own adverse possession (which was admittedly less than twelve years), the period of his vendor's possession, it must be shown that the latter's possession was also adverse, it was held also that the question of adverse possession as between tenants-in-common depends not on severance of the tenancy in-common by partition, but on exclusive occupation by one co-tenant amounting to ouster of the other (7) And in another case it has been held that entry and possession of land under the common title of a co-owner will not be presumed to be adverse to the others; but will ordinarily be held to be for the benefit of all.(8) Where in a suit to recover possession of certain property from the plaintiff's vendor, who did not substantially resist the claim, a third party came in and claimed the property and was made a defendant, it was held that the burden of proof against the plaintiff lay on such intervenor (9) In a case in the Calcutta High Court it was held that adverse possession affects the interest which the person entitled to immediate possession has at that time (10)

If, in execution of a decree obtained by A against B, formal (though it may not be actual) possession has been given to A, B cannot afterwards, in support of a plea of limitation, rely as against A, upon the possession which he had before the transfer of possession by execution (11) But such possession

(1) Rao Karan v Baker Ali, 9 I A, 99 (1882), 5 A, 1

(2) Moro Desai v Ramchandra Desai, 6 B, 508, 511 (1882), Kally Churn v. Secretary of State, 6 C, 725, 733 (1881); Gokul Chunder v Nilmoney Mitter, 10 C, 374 (1884), Bhaddar v Khair-ud-din Husain (1906), 29 A, 13

(3) 7 C L R 364 (1880) For definition of terms "discontinue," "discontinuance," in Art. 142 of Act XV of 1877, see Gobind Lall v Debendronath Mullick, 7 C L. R, 181 (1880).

(4) Prasanna Kumer Mookerjee v Srikantha Rout, 40 C, 173 (1913)

(5) Khedu Rai v Sheo Parson Rai, 39 A, 423 (1917)

(6) Sayad Megamiula v Nana Valad Faridcha, 13 B, 424 (1888), Ram Prosad v Lakhi Narain, 12 C, 197 (1885)

(7) Imrita Ravji v Shridhar Narayan, 33 B, 317 (1908)

(8) Jogindra Nath Rai v Baladeo Das, 35 C, 951 (1907)

(9) Jugodanund Missir v Hamid Russool, 10 W R, 52 (1868)

(10) Priya Sakhi Dasi v Manbodh Bibi, 44 C, 425 (1917), per Sanderson, C J, and Mookerjee J, see dissenting from Nellamatha v Betha Naickan 23 M 37 (1899) and see Nandan Singh v Jumman, 34 A, 640 (1912), Raj Nath v Narain, 36 A, 567 (1914) Vijapuri v. Sonamma, F B, 39 M, 811 (1915).

(11) Juggobundu Mukerjee v. Ram Chunder, 5 C, 584 (1880), followed in Juggobundhu Mitter v Purnanund Gossami, 16 C, 530 (1889); Lokessur is of no avail as against a third party.(1) The principle, however, as laid down in Juggobundhu Mukerjee v Ram Chunder Bysack(2), was extended by the Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court to the case of a purchaser at auction in execution of decree, who had obtained only symbolical possession, and it was held that such possession gave him a good cause of action against a person who had taken an ijara from the son of the [illegible] the original case.(3) Where, in a suit for possess [illegible] mitted the title of the landlord, but claimed to [illegible] the onus was held to be on the defendants to prove, either that they had a valid miras-tenure or that, by reason of their having held adversely to the plaintiff as mirasdars for more than twelve years, the plaintiffs were debarred from questioning their right.(4) In a suit for redemption the burden of proving that the suit is within limitation lies on the plaintiffs.(5) See as to possession section 110. In the undermentioned case(6) a majority of the Bench held that it was on the plaintiff relying on an acknowledgment to show that it was made before the period of limitation had expired.

Malicious prosecutions.

In a suit for damages for malicious prosecution, it lies on the plaintiff to prove the existence of malice and of want of reasonable and probable cause, before the defendant can be called upon to show that he acted bonâ fide and upon reasonable grounds, believing that the charge which he instituted was a valid one.(7) The rule as to the burden of proof in suits for malicious prosecution has been extended to the case of alleged false information given to the police. If the plaintiff is convicted in the first Court and acquitted only on appeal, the onus cast on him is specially heavy. He must show that the

---

v Purgun Roy, 7 C, 418 (1881) See also Harjivan v Shivram, 19 B, 620 (1894). Umbica Churn v. Madhub Ghosal, 4 C, 870 (1879) Gunga Gobind v Bhopal Chunder, 19 W R, 101 (1873); Mozuffer Wahid v. Abdus Samad, 6 C. L R, 539 (1880). Shama Charan v. Madhab Chandra, 11 C, 93 (1884), Venkataramanna v Viramma, 10 M., 17 (1886)

(1) Runjit Singh v. Bunwari Lal, 10 C, 993 (1884), Mohinudin v. Manchershah 6 B, 650 (1882). Doyanidhi Panda v Kelai Panda, 11 C L. R., 395 (1882).

(2) 5 C 584 (1880).

(3) Juggobundhu Mitter v. Purnanund Gossami, 16 C, 530 (1889); overruling Krishna Lal v Radha Krishna, 10 C, 402 (1884).

(4) Ogra Kant v Mohesh Chunder, 4 C. L R., 40 (1879)

(5) Khandu Lal v Fazal, 51 I C, 956

(6) Anup Singh v Fateh Chand, 42 A 573.

(7) Mohunt Gour v. Hayagrib Das, 6 B. L. R., 371 (1870); s c., 14 W. R., 425; Nowcouree Chunder v. Birmomoyee, 3 W. R., 169 (1865). Moonee Ummah v. Municipal Commissioners, Madras, 8 Mad H. C., 151 (1875); Doongrussee Byde v. Gridharee Mull, 10 W. R., 439 (1868); Sheikh Roshun v. Nobin Chundra, 6 B L R 377 note (1869), s c., 12 W. R, 402; Khazi Koibutoollah v. Motee Peshakur, 13 W. R, 276 (1870); Aghorenath Roy v Radhika Pershad, 14 W. R, 332 (1870); Kishoree Lall v. Enaeth Hossein, 1 All H. C, A. C, 11 (1869); Baboo Ram Budden v. Sirdar Dyal, 17 W. R, 101 (1872); Baboo Ganesh v. Mugneeram Chowdry, 17 W. R, P. C., 283 (1872); s. c, 11 B. L R, P. C, 321; Dunne v. Legge, 1 Agra H C, 38 (1866); Weatherall v. Dillon, 6 N.-W. P. Rep, 200 (1874); Swami Nayudu v. Subramania Mudali, 2 Mad. H C., 158 (1864); Vengama Naikar v Raghava Chary, 2 Mad H. C., 291 (1864), Girdharla Dayaldas v Jaganath Girdharbai, 10 Bom. H. C., 182 (1873); Hall v. Venkatakrishna, 13 M., 394 (1889); Watson v Smith, 4 C. W. N, xviii (1899); Nolliappa Goundan v. Kaliappa Goundan, 24 M., 59 (1900); Ramayya v. Sitayya, 24 M., 549 (1900); Harish Chander v. Nishikanta Banerjee, 28 C., 591 (1901). As to reasonable grounds, see Brojanath Roy v. Kishen Lall, 5 W. R, 282 (1866); Mohendranath Dutt v. Koylash Chunder, 6 W R, 245 (1866); and prosecution dismissed for want of proof; Mujnee Ram v Gonesh Dutt, 5 W. R., 134 (1866); and untrue charge before police: Mohendro Chunder v Surbo Kokhya, 11 W. R., 534 (1869) The mere absence of reasonable and probable cause does not itself justify the conclusion as a matter of law that an act is malicious. It is not identical with malice, but malice may, having regard to the circumstances of the case, be inferred from it: Bhim Sen v. Sita Ram, 24 A., 363 (1902).

original conviction proceeded on evidence known to the complainant to be false or due to the wilful suppression by him of material information.(1)

Where a plaintiff alleges and adduces evidence to show that the standard of measurement prevalent at the time the claim is made was in use when the tenancy was created; and the defendant asserts that the standard prevalent at the creation of the tenancy was a different one, but gives no evidence of it, the Court may presume that the state of things in existence at the time of the suit existed also at the inception of the tenancy (2)

Minority. It is for the party who comes into Court and pleads minority to make out his case before the adverse party can be required to rebut it (3) Where a person alleges his minority in order to escape liability under a mortgage executed by him the burden lies upon him to prove that he was a minor at the time the [illegible] when the minority of a testator is pleaded [illegible] e onus to prove that he was of full age is [illegible] It has been held in England that in an action against an infant for necessaries the onus is on the plaintiff to prove not only that the goods supplied were suitable to the condition in life of the infant, but also that the latter was not sufficiently supplied with goods of that class at the time of the sale and delivery.(6)

Misappropriation. [illegible] ction 409 of the Penal [illegible] the money in question [illegible] en proved that he has not accounted for money entrusted to him, the burden is on him to prove his innocence.(7)

Mortgage. When a plaintiff sues to redeem and the defendant denies the mortgage, the plaintiff must in the first instance prove his title (8) In a suit to enforce a mortgage-bond which was registered in the Sealdah Registry, on the ground that one of the properties mortgaged was in the Sealdah District, the defendant [illegible] there was no such property in existence [illegible] ion of the mortgage was bad and the deed [illegible]

[illegible] of an unregistered bond of the year 1879 for Rs 99 sued to enforce the bond and claimed Rs. 637-12-1 in respect of it, or in default foreclosure of an occupancy land The time fixed for payment expired in 1882 Held that under

(1) Raghabendra v Kashinath Bhat, 19 B, 717 (1894), per Jardine, J According to the judgment of Ranade, J, this case was governed by principles regulating suits for defamation

(2) Thimma Reddi v Chenna Reddi, 16 M L. J, 18, and see Thakdi Haji v Budrudin Saib, 29 M, 208

(3) Ishan Chandra Mitter v. Ramranjan Chuckerbutty, 2 C L J, 125.

(4) Niamatulla Khan v. Gajraj Singh, 6 O L. J, 376, s c., 53 I C, 136.

(5) Virupakshappa v Shidappa 26 B., 109, 116 (1901)

(6) Krishnamachariar v Krishnamachariar, 38 M, 166 (1915), see Bhagirathi Bai v. Vishwanath, 7 Bom L. R., 92 (1905)

(7) Nash v Inman (1908), 2 K B, p 1

(8) R v Kadir Baksh (1910), 33 A., 249

(9) Bala v Shiva, 27 B 271 (1902), and other cases there cited

(10) Jogini Mohan v Bhoot Nath, 31 C 146 (1903)

(11) Musafir Rai v Musst Lagan, 2 All L J, 62 (1904) for essentials of simple mortgage see Mohan Lal v Indomati, F B., 39 A 244 (1917) and Dalip Singh v Bahadur Ram, 34 A, 446 (1912), and for onus to prove debt is c[illegible] see Hasan Khan v Mandir Das, W N, 49 (1912)

the circumstances a heavy onus lay on the plaintiff to prove not only the execution and consideration of the bond but also that on the date of the suit it was still unpaid, and that the conclusion that the debt must have been forgiven by, or paid to the original creditor was almost irrebuttable (1) Where both plaintiff and defendant relied only on one mortgage and the only question was whether it was subsisting or not, the burden of proof was held to be upon the defendant as he must be deemed to be aware of the date of the transaction (2) Predecessors of the defendant respondents executed a mortgage in favour of the plaintiff appellants on the 15th April 1902. The mortgaged properties included a plot of rent-free land in the Burdwan district as described in the mortgage bond. The deed of mortgage was registered at Burdwan. One of the defendants denied the existence of such a plot of land and contended that it was a fictitious plot mentioned in the deed of mortgage in fraud of the law of registration, and that registration was thus invalid and so the plaintiffs could not get any relief in respect of the same in a suit on the mortgage. Held that the onus lay on the defendants to disprove the existence of the plot of land in 1902. Held further that the defendants failed to discharge the onus and the suit was therefore decreed with costs.(3) The onus of proving priority is upon the person relying upon such a plea in a mortgage suit.(4) Ordinarily in a suit for sale based on a mortgage it is for the defendant mortgagor to prove that nothing remains due on the mortgage if that be his defence but the circumstances may be such that the onus might be on the plaintiffs to prove that the mortgage had not been satisfied.(5) Where in a suit for redemption the plaintiffs relied, to bring their suit within limitation, upon acknowledgments made by the mortgagees in 1863, as indicating that the mortgage must have been an existing mortgage at that date: held (per Piggott and Walsh, JJ.), that no substantial inference could be drawn from the acknowledgment in question that the mortgage was in 1863 a subsisting mortgage not barred by limitation, and that it was on the plaintiff relying on the acknowledgment to show that it was made before the period of limitation had expired: (per Bannerjee, J contra). The acknowledgment of 1863 might be taken; until rebutted, as primâ facie evidence that the mortgage was a subsisting mortgage at its date (6)

Under a possessory mortgage of 1876 it was found that possession was not transferred to the mortgagee and no steps had been taken by the latter or his heirs to recover the amount. Held, that under the circumstances it was reasonable to presume that the mortgage of 1876 had been satisfied, and that the onus was on the plaintiff to prove that it was still in force in 1909.(7) The circumstances of a case may be such that the ordinary presumption that a deed evidenced a genuine transaction for consideration and that the debt it purported to secure was a real existing debt does not apply and that the onus to prove these facts is on the plaintiff.(8)

:es. Where under an Act certain things are required to be done, before any liability attaches to any person in respect of any obligation, it is for the person who alleges that that liability has been incurred to prove that the things prescribed in the Act have been actually done. In a suit for arrears of road-cess

(1) Ramprosad v Kishore Lal, 46 I C., 657.

(2) Madhavan Vydiar v Lakshmana Pattar, 44 I. C., 447.

(3) Sudhir Chandra Sett v Syed Abdulla-ul-Musavi, 22 C. W. N., 894; s. c., 48 I C., 520 Query, whether the plaintiffs were invoking an estoppel to defeat the provisions of the Registration Act

(4) Debi Dayal v. Ganesh Prasad, 50 I. C., 933.

(5) Rai v. Bhaiyalal, 22 C. W. N., 769

(6) Anup Singh v. Fateh Chand, 42 A., 575

(7) Amrita Bai v. Jubbanbai, 46 I. C., 676

(8) Meghraj v. Mukundram, 46 I C., 806.

it is for the plaintiff to prove the publication of the notices and extracts from [illegible] section 52 of Act IX (B.C.) of 1880, had not been duly complied with, it lies upon the defendant to show that the sale was preceded by the notices required by that sub-section, the service of which notices is an essential preliminary to the validity of the sale (2) Under Act XI of 1859 the onus is on the person who seeks to have a sale set aside, to establish that the requirements of the Statutes have not been complied with by the Collector(3), and in a suit for ejectment by a purchaser the onus is on the raiyat to show that he held the land as such.(4)

The purchaser of an estate at a sale for arrears of Government Revenue is, however, in a different position In the latter case the notices are served in the ordinary way through the officers of the Revenue Court, and the presumption under section 114, clause (e), would arise in respect to the service of such notices until the contrary was proved The onus of proving irregularity in the preparation, service or posting of the notice rests on the person who asks to have the sale set aside (5) In the case of services of notice under the Bengal Public Demands Act of 1895 the onus is on the party relying on the notice to show that there was proper service as required by law (6)

The law gives the holder of a registered mortgage priority over an unregistered mortgage, though the latter may be of earlier date In order, however, to check fraud under cover of this provision of the law, such priority cannot be claimed if the subsequent mortgagee, at the time of obtaining his mortgage, had notice of the earlier mortgage The onus is upon the party alleging such knowledge or notice to aver the same in his pleadings and to prove it (7) And the onus is on the defendant to show that the plaintiff as holder of a bill-of-lading had notice of the contents of the charter-party (8)

Possession of property is presumptive proof of ownership Therefore when the question is whether any person is owner of anything of which he is shown to be in possession, the burden of proving that he is not the owner is on the person who affirms that he is not the owner (Sections 110, 114, post, to the notes of which sections reference should be made) Ownership.

The burden of proof as to relationship in the cases of partners, landlord and tenant, principal and agent, is dealt with by section 109, post (to the notes of which section reference should be made) In a partnership-suit where one party does, but the other party does not, allege a specific agreement that the shares in the said partnership were unequal, the existing presumptions as to the quality of partners' shares casts the burden of proof on those alleging the agreement, who must therefore begin (9) The onus of proving that a partnership has been dissolved by consent and the account has been settled rests on the Partnership

---

(1) Ashanullah v Trilochan Bagchi, 13 C, 197 (1886), Rash Behari v Pitambori Choudhrani, 15 C, 237 (1888)

(2) Hurro Dayal v Mahomed Gazi, 19 C, 699 (1888), followed Prem Chand v Suroj Ranjan, 1 C L. J, 102 n (1905) See also Doorga Churn v Syud Najunooddeen, 21 W R, 397 (1874), Ashunulla Khan v Hurri Churn 17 C, 478 (1890), and as to notices under Rent Recovery Act VII of 1865 (Madras), see Dorasamy v Muthusamy, 27 M, 94 (1903) [landlord proceeding by way of distress must show that the requirements of the Act have been complied with]

(3) Sheikh Mahomed Aga v Jadunandan Jha, 10 C. W N, 137

(4) Ambica Churn Chakravarti v. Dya Gazi, 10 C W N, 497

(5) Sheoruttun Singh v Net Lall, 30 C. 11 (1902), Sheikh Mohammed v. Jadunandan Jha, 10 C W N, 137 (1905).

(6) Nemai Charan De v Secretary of State, 45 C., 496.

(7) Chinnappa Reddi v Manicka Vasagam, 25 M., 1 (1901).

(8) The Draupner (1909), P 219.

(9) Jadobram Dey v Bulóram Dey 26 C 281 (1899); s c, 3 C. W. N., xciv.

person alleging it.(1) For observations on the procedure to be adopted in a suit for an account of a dissolved partnership and the burden of proof on the taking of the account, see the undermentioned case.(2)

Passing off" case

In a "passing off" case the burden of proving that particular words have acquired a secondary signification lies on the person alleging it.(3)

Payment.

If in a suit for rent the defendant does not deny tenancy, but pleads payment, the onus probandi is on him.(4) When a defendant in a suit for arrears of rent alleges remission, the onus lies on him in regard to the remission (5) When a defendant admits the cause of action and pleads payment, he must prove that the claim which is admitted has been discharged by payment.(6) When a debtor pleads tender of payment as a ground for not being saddled with interest, the onus is on him to prove that he made such tender.(7)

See Notes to section 110, post.

Possession. Pre-emption

In a suit to enforce the right of pre-emption, in which the plaintiff impugns the price stated in the conveyance, very slight evidence is sufficient to establish a primâ facie case in favour of the pre-emptors, and when such case is established the onus is on the vendor and vendee to prove by cogent evidence that the amount of the price actually paid was larger than that stated by the pre-emptor (8) If a right of pre-emption is based on custom, the onus is on the defendants to show that a custom proved to have once existed had come to an end.(9) If a wajib-ul-arz clearly shows that a clause as to pre-emption embodies a new contract entered into by the co-sharer, at the time the wajib-ul-arz was prepared, it would be necessary for the plaintiff claiming pre-emption to prove that he, or some one through whom he claims, was an assenting party to the contract (10) The Allahabad High Court has held that an entry in a wajib-ul-arz is primâ facie a record of a custom rather than of a contract(11); and that a pre-emptive clause is not (in the absence of other evidence) enough to prove a customary right to pre-empt(12) but in a later case that High Court has held that where there is such an entry without contrary evidence the Court ought to hold, in view of the prevailing practice, that the custom exists (13) In the case cited the Privy Council has held that a wajib-ul-arz which merely purported to narrate traditions and give the history of devolutions in families not the narrator's was insufficient to rebut the presumption of a pre-existing custom (14) And in another case the Calcutta High Court has held that a person who seeks the help of the Court to enforce a right of pre-emption must prove that it existed at the date of the sale and of the institution

(1) Sundar Singh v. Dalip Singh, 46 I. C., 467

(2) Thirukumaresan Chetti v. Subbaraya Chetti, 20 M., 313 (1895), and see also as to rendering account; Mayen v Alston, 16 M, 245 (1892); and as to presumption of dissolution from final account see Joopoody Sarayya v Lakshmanaswamy, P. C., 36 M, 185 (1913); s. c., 17 C. W. N., 1006.

(3) Smidt v. Reddaway, 32 C, 401

(4) Pureeaq Lall v. Ram Jeewan, 1 W R., 264 (1864); Koonjo Beharee v. Roy Mothooranauth, 1 W. R, 155 (1864).

(5) Bunwary Lall v Furlong, 9 W. R, 239 (1868).

(6) Bibee Meheroonnissa v. Abdul Gunee, 17 W. R., 509 (1872).

(7) Ranee Shurat v. Collector of Mymensingh, 5 W. R, Act X. 69 (1866).

(8) Bhagwan Singh v. Mahabir Singh, 5 A, 184 (1882); Sheopargash Dube v. Dhanraj Dube, 9 A., 225 (1887); Tawakkul Rai v Lachman Rai, 6 A, 344 (1884). For account of pre-emption under Mahomedan Law see Budhai Sardar v. Sonaulla Mirdha, 19 C. L. J, 601 (1914)

(9) Birajnandan Lal v. Mussumat Kunwari, 3 All L. J., 561

(10) Savak Singh v. Girja Pande, 2 A. L. J., 6 (1905), A. W. N., 16

(11) Returaji Dunbain v. Pahlwan Bhagat, F. B, 33 A., 196 (1911)

(12) Mawasi v. Mulchand, 34 A., 434 (1912).

(13) Fazal Hussain v. Muhammed Sharif, 36 A, 471 (1914); distinguishing Dhian Kunwar v. Diwan Singh, 8 A. L. J, 789 (1911).

(14) Murtaza Husain Khan v. Muhammad Yasin Ali, P. C., 38 A, 552 (1916).

of the suit and of the decree of the primary Court.(1) While each instance of a sale to a stranger is material evidence each must be strictly proved.(2) If a plaintiff pre-emptor alleges that the price in a sale-deed is fictitious, it is for him to give some primâ facie evidence that this is the case. Comparatively slight evidence will suffice to shift the onus (3)

Presumptions of fact. Presumptions of fact of various kinds other than those mentioned in the notes to these sections may affect the question of the burden of proof. So, there being a presumption that judicial and official acts have been regularly performed, the burden of proving the irregularity of such acts will ordinarily be upon the person who asserts it (See section 114, post, to the notes of which section reference should be made). Similarly the onus is on the plaintiff to show that the price recited in a sale deed is excessive.(4)

Recitals. A recital in a deed or other instrument is in some cases conclusive, and in all cases evidence, as against the parties who make it, and those who claim under them(5) and it is of more or less weight or more or less conclusive against them according to circumstances It is a statement deliberately made by those parties, which, like any other statement, is always evidence against the persons who make it. But it is no more evidence as against other persons than any other statement would be (6) The onus of proving that a document which a person has signed does not contain a correct statement of the facts and of the intentions of the parties is on the person who makes the allegation.(7) In ordinary circumstances and apart from statutes recitals in deeds cannot by themselves be relied on for the purpose of proving the assertion of fact which they contain, but they may suffice to prove a representation of a legal necessity for alienation by a Hindu widow after the death of all the witnesses(8) or her intention to dispose of an absolute interest.(9) When a plaintiff sues on a receipt admitting a payment and the defendant admits execution of the receipt, it is on the defendant to prove that the statement of payment on the receipt is incorrect.(10) Where an instrument recites that the defendant has received consideration, such a recital is evidence against, but not conclusive upon, the defendant: the onus, however, is on the defendant to show that the recitals are not correct.(11) The last-mentioned rulings do not, however, govern

(1) Nuri Mian v Ambica Singh, 44 C, 47 (1917).

(2) Janki Misir v Ranno Singh, 35 A, 472 (1913).

(3) Abdul Majid v Amolak (1907), 29 A., 618.

(4) See 16 All L J., 533.

(5) Bihari Lal v. Makhdum Bakhsh, 35 A, 194 (1913).

(6) Brajeswari Peshakar v. Budhanuddi, 6 C., 268 (1880); s c, 7 C. L. R., 6; Manahar Singh v Sumirta Kuar, 17 A, 428 (1895); see Imrit Chamar v. Sibdhari Panday, 17 C W. N, 108 (1911) (recital of boundaries in lease admissible against person not a party)

(7) Mussamat Ramdeo v. Chandrabali, 4 Pat. L. W., 237; s. c, 44 I. C., 399.

(8) Banga Chandra Dhur Biswas v Jagat Kishore Acharjya, P C, 44 C., 186 (1917); see Brij Lal v. Inda Kunwar, P. C., 36 A, 187 (1914).

(9) Vasonji Morarji v Chanda Bibi, P. C., 37 A., 369 (1915).

(10) Davalata v. Ganesh Shastri, 4 B, 295 (1880).

(11) Fulli Bibi v. Banisudi Medha, 4 B L. R, 54 (1869); s. c, 12 W. R., F. B, 25 citing Chowdhry Deby v. Chowdhry Doulat, 3 Moo I. A, 347 (1884), [explained in Brajeshwari Peshakar v. Budhanuddi, 6 C., 268 (1880)]; Saheb Perlad v. Baboo Budhoo, 2 B L R, P C, 111 (1869); Rajah Saheb v. Baboo Budhoo, 12 Moo. I. A, 275 (1869); Nawab Syud v Mt. Amane, 19 W. R, 149 (1873); Maniklal Baboo v Ramdas Mazumdar, 1 B. L. R., A C., 92 (1868); s c., 10 W. R., 132; Juggut Chunder v. Bhugwan Chunder, 1 Marsh Rep, 27 (1862); Radhanath Banerjee v. Jodoonath Singh, 7 W. R., 441 (1867); Raghoonath Dass v Luchmee Narain, 10 W. R, 407 (1868); Mt. Kurutool v. Mt. Rajkalee, 17 W. R, 439 (1872). [Actual sight of the passing of the money is not the only mode of proving payment of consideration]. The following cases Mussamat Jhaloo v. Shaikh F[illegible], 5 W. R., 203 (1866); Tekeat Roop [illegible] Roy, 3 W. R., 111 (1865). law.

person alleging it.(1) For observations on the procedure to be adopted in a suit for an account of a dissolved partnership and the burden of proof on the taking of the account, see the undermentioned case (2)

"Passing off" case

In a "passing off" case the burden of proving that particular words have acquired a secondary signification lies on the person alleging it.(3)

Payment.

If in a suit for rent the defendant does not deny tenancy, but pleads payment, the onus probandi is on him.(4) When a defendant in a suit for arrears of rent alleges remission, the onus lies on him in regard to the remission (5) When a defendant admits the cause of action and pleads payment, he must prove that the claim which is admitted has been discharged by payment (6) When a debtor pleads tender of payment as a ground for not being saddled with interest, the onus is on him to prove that he made such tender.(7)

See Notes to section 110, post.

Possession. Pre-emption

In a suit to enforce the right of pre-emption, in which the plaintiff impugns the price stated in the conveyance, very slight evidence is sufficient to establish a primâ facie case in favour of the pre-emptors, and when such case is established the onus is on the vendor and vendee to prove by cogent evidence that the amount of the price actually paid was larger than that stated by the pre-emptor (8) If a right of pre-emption is based on custom, the onus is on the defendants to show that a custom proved to have once existed had come to an end.(9) If a wajib-ul-arz clearly shows that a clause as to pre-emption embodies a new contract entered into by the co-sharer, at the time the wajib-ul-arz was prepared, it would be necessary for the plaintiff claiming pre-emption to prove that he, or some one through whom he claims, was an assenting party to the contract.(10) The Allahabad High Court has held that an entry in a wajib-ul-arz is primâ facie a record of a custom rather than of a contract(11); and that a pre-emptive clause is not (in the absence of other evidence) enough to prove a customary right to pre-empt(12) but in a later case that High Court has held that where there is such an entry without contrary evidence the Court ought to hold, in view of the prevailing practice, that the custom exists (13) In the case cited the Privy Council has held that a wajib-ul-arz which merely purported to narrate traditions and give the history of devolutions in families not the narrator's was insufficient to rebut the presumption of a pre-existing custom.(14) And in another case the Calcutta High Court has held that a person who seeks the help of the Court to enforce a right of pre-emption must prove that it existed at the date of the sale and of the institution

---

(1) Sundar Singh v Dalip Singh, 46 I. C., 467.

(2) Thirukumaresan Chetti v Subbaraya Chetti, 20 M, 313 (1895), and see also as to rendering account; Mayen v Alston, 16 M, 245 (1892), and as to presumption of dissolution from final account see Joopoody Sarayya v Lakshmanaswamy, P. C, 36 M, 185 (1913), s. c, 17 C. W. N, 1006

(3) Smidt v Reddaway, 32 C., 401.

(4) Pureeaq Lall v Ram Jeewan, 1 W. R, 264 (1864), Koonjo Beharee v. Roy Mothooranauth, 1 W. R, 155 (1864)

(5) Bunwary Lall v Furlong, 9 W. R, 239 (1868).

(6) Bibee Meheroonnissa v Abdul Gunee, 17 W. R., 509 (1872).

(7) Ranee Shurat v. Collector of Mymensingh, 5 W. R., Act X, 69 (1866).

(8) Bhagwan Singh v Mahabir Singh, 5 A, 184 (1882); Sheopargash Dube v Dhanraj Dube, 9 A, 225 (1887); Tawakkul Rai v Luchman Rai, 6 A, 344 (1884) For account of pre-emption under Mahomedan Law see Budhai Sardar v. Sanaulla Mirdha, 19 C. L. J., 601 (1914)

(9) Birajnandan Lal v. Mussumat Kunwari, 3 All. L J, 561

(10) Savak Singh v Girja Pande, 2 A. L. J., 6 (1905), A. W. N., 16

(11) Returaji Dunbain v Pahlwan Bhagat, F. B, 33 A, 196 (1911).

(12) Mawasi v. Mulchand, 34 A, 434 (1912).

(13) Fazal Hussain v. Muhammed Sharif, 36 A, 471 (1914); distinguishing Dhian Kunwar v. Diwan Singh, 8 A. L. J, 789 (1911).

(14) Murtaza Husain Khan v Muhammad Yasin Ali, P. C., 38 A, 552 (1916).

of the suit and of the decree of the primary Court.(1) While each instance of a sale to a stranger is material evidence each must be strictly proved.(2) If a plaintiff pre-emptor alleges that the price in a sale-deed is fictitious, it is for him to give some primâ facie evidence that this is the case. Comparatively slight evidence will suffice to shift the onus.(3)

Presumptions of fact. Presumptions of fact of various kinds other than those mentioned in the notes to these sections may affect the question of the burden of proof. So, there being a presumption that judicial and official acts have been regularly performed, the burden of proving the irregularity of such acts will ordinarily be upon the person who asserts it. (See section 114, post, to the notes of which section reference should be made). Similarly the onus is on the plaintiff to show that the price recited in a sale deed is excessive.(4)

Recitals. conclusive, and in all c d those who claim unde s conclusive against then iberately made by thos vidence against the persons who make it. But it is no more evidence as against other persons than any other statement would be.(6) The onus of proving that a document which a person has signed does not contain a correct statement of the facts and of the intentions of the parties is on the person who makes the allegation (7) In ordinary circumstances and apart from statutes recitals in deeds cannot by themselves be relied on for the purpose of proving the assertion of fact which they contain, but they may suffice to prove a representation of a legal necessity for alienation by a Hindu widow after the death of all the witnesses(8) or her intention to dispose of an absolute interest.(9) When a plaintiff sues on a defendant: the onus, however, is on the defendant to show that the recitals are not correct.(11) The last-mentioned rulings do not, however, govern

---

(1) Nuri Mian v Ambica Singh, 44 C, 47 (1917).

(2) Janki Misir v. Ranno Singh, 35 A., 472 (1913).

(3) Abdul Majid v Amolak (1907), 29 A., 618.

(4) See 16 All. L J, 533

(5) Bihari Lal v. Makhdum Bakhsh, 35 A, 194 (1913).

(6) Brajeswari Peshakar v. Budhanuddi, 6 C., 268 (1880); s c, 7 C. L. R., 6; Manahar Singh v Sumirta Kuar, 17 A, 428 (1895); see Imrit Chamar v. Sibdhari Panday, 17 C. W. N, 108 (1911) (recital of boundaries in lease admissible against person not a party).

(7) Mussomat Ramdeo v. Chandrabali, 4 Pat. L. W., 237; s c, 44 I. C., 399.

(8) Banga Chandra Dhur Biswas v Jagat Kishore Acharjja, P. C, 44 C., 186 (1917); see Brij Lal v. Inda Kunwar, P. C., 36 A., 187 (1914)

(9) Vasonji Morarji v Chanda Bibi, P. C., 37 A., 369 (1915).

(10) Dawalata v Ganesh Shastri, 4 B, 295 (1880).

(11) Fulli Bibi v. Banisudi Medha, 4 B L R, 54 (1869); s c, 12 W. R., F. B, 25 citing Chowdhry Deby v. Chowdhry Doulat, 3 Moo I A, 347 (1884), [explained in Brajeshwari Peshakar v Budhanuddi, 6 C., 268 (1880)]; Saheb Perlad v. Baboo Budhoo, 2 B. L R, P C., 111 (1869); Rajah Saheb v. Baboo Budhoo, 12 Moo. I A., 275 (1869), Nawab Syud v. Mt. Amane, 19 W. R, 149 (1873); Maniklal Baboo v. Ramdas Masumdar, 1 B. L. R., A C., 92 (1868), s. c, 10 W. R., 132; Juggut Chunder v. Bhugwan Chunder, 1 Marsh Rep, 27 (1862); Radhanath Banerjee v. Jodoonath Singh, 7 W. R., 441 (1867); Raghoonath Dass v. Luchmee Narain, 10 W. R., 407 (1868); Mt. Kurutool v Mt Rajkalee, 17 W. R, 439 (1872). [Actual sight of the passing of the money is not the only mode of proving payment of consideration]. The following cases Mussamat Jhaloo v. Shaikh Fursund, 5 W. R, 203 (1866); Tekeat Roop v. Anund Roy, 3 W. R., 111 (1865), are no longer law.

cases to which the Dekkhan Agriculturists Relief Act (XVII of 1879) applies (1) And it has been held that the fact that possession was withheld without protest is enough to shift the burden of proof by raising a counter-presumption that the consideration was not paid.(2) The defendants in a suit on a bond admitted the execution of the bond, but denied that they had received, as the bond recited they had, at the time of its execution, the consideration for it; the Court of first instance instead of calling on the defendants to establish the fact that they had not received the consideration for the bond, as it ought to have done under the circumstances, irregularly allowed the plaintiff to produce witnesses to prove that the consideration for the bond had been paid at the time of its execution. The evidence of these witnesses proved that the consideration of the bond had not been paid at the time of execution, and, that, if it had been paid at all, it had been paid at some subsequent time. The plaintiff did not give any further evidence to establish such payment, and the Court of first instance, without calling on the defendants to establish their defence, dismissed the suit. The lower Appellate Court held that the defendants should have been required to begin under the circumstances, and reversed the decree of the Court of first instance and gave the plaintiff a decree. It was held in appeal that, although the plaintiff ought not to have begun, yet as he had done so, and his witnesses had proved that the consideration for the bond had not been paid as admitted in the bond, a new case was opened up, in which the onus was shifted back to the plaintiff to establish that he had, not at the time alleged in the bond, but at some subsequent time, paid to the defendants the consideration for the bond.(3) There is nothing in section 92 to exclude evidence contradicting not the terms of the contract but some recitals in the contract itself.(4)

Rent-free land

Where the land is held by a person who is not a tenant of other land belonging to the plaintiff, or when such land is occupied as a separate parcel or holding, or in any other manner so as to be distinct from any other land held by the same person as a tenant under the plaintiff, the burden of proof is on the landlord to show that they are not lakhiraj, but mal lands. Where, however, the land is occupied by a tenant of the zemindar, who holds other lands within the zemindari which are rent-paying and are not distinguishable in the manner indicated above the burden of proof is on the tenant (5) But in another case this ruling was not followed to its full extent and it was held that the burden of prc [illegible] other [illegible] darı, [illegible]
to prc [illegible]
do so either by proof of receipt of rent or that its proceeds were taken into account at the permanent settlement or by any other sufficient means (6) He must, however, make out a primâ facie case sufficient to entitle him to a decree, if the defendant failed to produce rebutting evidence (7) But in a suit for rent where the ryot gives primâ facie evidence that part of the land is lakhiraj, the

(1) Maloji Santaji v Vithu Hari, 9 B., 520 (1885).

(2) Bihari v Ram Chandra, A. C. (1911), 33 A., 483.

(3) Makund v. Bahori Lal, 3 A., 824 (1881).

(4) Mukhi Singh v. Kishun Singh, 51 I. C., 320

(5) Akbur Ali v. Bhyea Lal, 6 C., 666 (1880); s c., 7 C. L. R., 497.

(6) Bucharam Gundul v. Peary Mohun, 9 C., 813 (1883); s c., 12 C. L. R., 475 See Dhun Monee v Suttoorghun, 6 W. R. (Act X), 100 (1866); Gungadhur Singh v. Bimola Dassee, 5 W. R (Act X), 37 (1866); Sirdhar Nundi v. Braja Nath, 2 B. L. R. (A. C.), 211 (1868); Raj Kishore v. Hurechur Mookerjee, 10 W. R., 117 (1868); Mun Mohun v. Sriram Ray, 14 W. R., 285 (1870)

(7) Narendra Narain v. Bishen Chandra, 12 C., 182 (1885); Ram Coomar v. Debee Pershad, 6 W. R. (Act X), 87 (1866).

lished by long and uninterrupted possession without payment of rent, raising the presumption that the land had been held rent-free from the decennial settlement, or of twelve years' adverse possession.(2) The lakhiraj tenure must be shown to have a real existence before it can be held that any question of lakhiraj arises (3) In a suit for enhancement, however, where the defendant admits that the main portion of the lands are mal but does not separate the rent-free lands, the plaintiff is not bound to prove that the lands are mal until the defendants point out their precise situation.(4) Long possession of lands as chowkeedaree chakeran affords ground for the presumption that the lands were set apart as such at the decennial settlement, and the onus of proof that the lands were the private land of the zemindar not set apart at the decennial [illegible] indar (5) The position of [illegible] and the presumption that [illegible] manent settlement become occupancy tenants does not apply to persons who become tenants under Inamdars (6)

Title. When a plaintiff institutes a suit for a declaration of title, the onus is on him to prove the title which he seeks to have confirmed It is not sufficient for him to show that he is in possession, and that the defendant has proved no better title.(7) But, if the plaintiff fail to prove title against a defendant, who has himself no title and is a mere wrong-doer, the former may be declared to be entitled to be retained in possession as against the latter.(8) Where the plaintiffs who are in possession of a property before the institution of the suit ask for a declaration of their title and confirmation of their possession as against a defendant who seeks to disturb the possession, it is for the latter to show that he has a

(1) See Motee Lall v. Judooputtee, 2 W. R (Act X), 44 (1865); Bissessur Chuckerbutty v. Wooma Churn, 7 W R, 44 (1867); Sheeb Narain v Chidan Doss, 6 W. R (Act X), 45 (1866); Jugessuree Debia v Gudadhur Banerjee, 6 W. R (Act X), 21 (1866); Nehal Chunder v Huree Pershad, 8 W. R, 183. See also Gooroo Pershad v. Juggobundoo Mozoomdar, W. R, Sp No. 15 (1862) This was a suit for a kabuliat, and a Full Bench held that, the tenant having admitted that plaintiff was his landlord for a portion of the land this was sufficient primâ facie evidence of his being plaintiff's ryot to throw on him the burden of proving his special plea of lakhiraj as to the remainder. Bacharam Mundul v. Peary Mohun, 9 C. 813 (1883), see contra, Nemai Bundopadhya v. Kali Prosonno, 6 C. 543 (1880); Akbar Ali v. Bhyea Lal, 6 C, 667 (1880)

(2) Dhunpat Singh v. Russomoyee Chowdhrain, 10 W. R, 461 (1868). See also Heera Lall v Peetumber Mundul, Sev. Rep Aug—Dec. (1863), 171; Hurryhur Mookerjee v. Abbas Ally, Sev. Rep Aug—Dec. (1863), 1875.

(3) Syud Ahmed v. Enaet Hossein, 1 W. R, 330 (1865). See also Gumanee Kazee v Hurryhur Mookerjee (F. B.), W. R, Sp. No 115 (1862); [Suit for enhancement [illegible]

[illegible] 1864 (Act X), 119

(4) Sutto Churn v Taruncc Churn, 3 W. R. 178 (1865).

(5) Mooktakeshee Debia v. Collector of Moorshedabad, 4 W R, 30 (1865); Forbes v. Meer Mahomed, 13 Moo I A, 438 (1870).

(6) Marapu Tharalu v Telukula Neelakanta Behara (1907), 30 M, 502.

(7) Joloke Singh v Gurnor Singh, 2 W. R, 167 (1865); Rassonada Rayar v. Sitharama Pillai, 2 Mad H C. 171 (1864); Royes Moolah v. Mudhoo Soodun 9 W. R, 154 (1868); Purseedh Narain v. Bissessor Dyal, 7 W R., 148 (1867). Gangaram v Secretary of State, 20 B. 798, 800 (1895). Sheikh Torab v Sheikh Mahomed, 19 W. R, 1 (1872) See Abdul Sovan v Lachmi Prasad, 50 I. C., 870.

(8) Gangaram v. Secretary of State, 20 B. 798 (1895); Ismail Ariff v. Mahomed Gouse, 20 I A., 99 (1893); s. c., 20 C. 834 Both cases discussed in Vasta Baltant v Secretary of State, 45 B., 729 (1921).

better title than the plaintiffs (1) If the defendant is in possession and the plaintiff produces title-deeds in his own favour, the onus is on the defendant to disprove the title of the plaintiff.(2) Where plaintiff purchased ostensibly on his own account and for the sum of Rs. 16 property of a judgment-debtor put up for [illegible]

his own money.(3) In a suit by a temple committee appointed under Act XX of 1863, against a hereditary trustee of a Hindu temple for possession and other reliefs, it was held that the onus lay on the plaintiffs to prove that the temple was of the class mentioned in the Act.(4) Where the defendants were in possession of disputed land under an award of the Magistrate under Act X of 1872, section 530, it was held in a suit for possession and establishment of title that the onus probandi lay on the plaintiff.(5) A person who derives his title through a purchase must prove that his vendor had a title in the property sold.(6)

Tort

A party setting up a tort has the burden on him to prove such tort. If the cause of action be negligence, deceit or fraud or the like, the plaintiff must prove the negligence, deceit or fraud. If to a tort justification is set up by the defendant, the burden is on him to prove such justification. The general rule therefore is that the burden lies on the party seeking either to make good his claim for damages arising from the tort of another, or to establish a release from such claim, supposing it to be made out against himself, by imputing tort to the plaintiff.(7) In a suit for a tort, the onus is on the plaintiff to prove that the malfeasance, misfeasance, nonfeasance, or other event from which Limitation commences to run, took place within the prescribed period, upon the general principles which regulate the burden of proof on the point of Limitation.(8) In cases of collision at sea, the masters and owners of the colliding vessel, even though compelled by law to take a pilot on board, are primâ facie liable for damage caused by their ship; and the burden of proof is on them to show that the negligence which caused such damage was that of the pilot and solely his.(9) Where, on a question of negligence, the plaintiffs have adduced evidence sufficient to call upon the defendant to reply and the defendant thereupon, being under the burden of laying the material facts before the Court has refrained from doing so, the onus of proving negligence is discharged by the plaintiffs.(10) See "Defamation" "Fraud," "Good and bad Faith," "Malicious Prosecution," ante, and post, s. 114, "Presumption of Innocence."

Waiver.

A waiver is an intentional relinquishment of a known right, or such conduct as warrants an inference of such relinquishment; and there can be no waiver

(1) Mahomed Hasan Mia v Abdul Hamid, 50 I. C., 431.

(2) Swarnamayee Rayur v. Srinibash Keyal, 6 B. L R., 144 (1870).

(3) Muddan Mohun v. Bhurut Chunder, 11 W. R., 249 (1869).

(4) Ponduranga v. Nagappa, 12 M., 366 (1889)

(5) Huri Ram v. Bhikaree Roy, 25 W. R., 20 (1876)

(6) Mussamat Gulab Devi v. Monji Ram, 38 P. L. R., 1919; s c, 51 I. C, 575.

(7) Wharton, Ev, §§ 358—364; and cases there cited And see Dekhari Tea Co. v. Assam Bengal Ry, 23 C. W. N., 998 (as to proof of negligence see 22 C. W. N, 622), Madhorao v. Abdul Gafur, 44 I C, 241; Bombay Baroda Co v Ranchodlal Chhotalal, 43 B, 769 (proof of neglect or theft of Railway servants).

(8) Mitra's Law of Limitation and Prescription, v ante, "Limitation"

(9) The Ship Glencoe, 1 Boul Rep, 105 (1865); Muhammad Yusuf v. P. & O S Nav Co, 6 Bom H. C R. (O C.), 98 (1869). As to the burden of justifying duty of ship at anchor in the case of collison, see Mary Tug Co. v B I. Steam Navigation Co, 24 C, 627 (1897)

(10) Dekhari Tea Co. v. Assam Bengal Ry, 23 C. W. N., 998.

unless the person against whom the waiver is claimed had full knowledge both of his rights and of the facts which would enable him to take effectual action for their enforcement The burden of proof of such knowledge is on the person who relies on the waiver A presumption of waiver cannot be rested on a presumption that the right alleged to have been waived was known (1) A contract can only be rescinded by another contract when the latter is valid and inconsistent with it and evidence of waiver or rescission must be as cogent as the proof of the original contract (2)

Wills. The onus probandi lies in every case upon the party propounding a will; and he must satisfy the conscience of the Court that the instrument so propounded is the last will of a free and capable testator. The onus is in general discharged by proof of capacity and the fact of execution.(3) The canons of proof vary according as the will is in itself a reasonable and natural one or the reverse (4) A Hindu minor cannot make a will(5) and if the plea of a testator's minority is advanced in a Probate action, the onus of proving his majority is on those who propound the will.(6) The quantum of evidence sufficient to establish a testamentary paper must always depend upon the circumstances of each case. Three things must be proved: capacity, testamentary intention, and execution. The circumstances of the case may be such as to necessarily awake the vigilance of the Court and to require that the proof shall be full and satisfactory. When such circumstances occur, the evidence to prove the affirmation must be stronger than in ordinary cases.(7) But in this country the normal standard of proof in this matter is merely such as would be enough in ordinary circumstances to satisfy a prudent man,—the proof need not be absolute (8) The fact that the testator did know and approve of the contents of an alleged will is part of the burden of proof assumed by everyone who propounds a will. This burden is satisfied primâ facie in the case of the will of a competent testator; but if those who oppose it succeed by cross-examination or otherwise in meeting this primâ facie case, the party propounding must satisfy the tribunal affirmatively that the testator did really know and approve of the contents of the will, that is to say, the burden of proving knowledge and approval is always on the person propounding the will, though formal proof may suffice when no dispute is raised.(9) If a party writes or prepares a will under which he takes a benefit, or if any other circumstances exist which excite the suspicion of the Court, and whatever their nature

(1) Danukadhari Singh v Nathima Sahu (1907), 11 C W N., 848

(2) Mathura Mohan Saha v Ram Kumar, Saha and Chittagong District Board, 43 C, 790 (1916).

(3) Barry v. Butlin, 2 Moo. P. C, 482; Cleare v. Cleare, L. R, 1 P. & D, 657; cited in Woomesh Chunder v. Rashmohini Dassi, 21 C., 279, 290, 291 (1893); Lacho Bibi v. Gopi Narain, 23 A., 472, 475 (1901); and see In re Dintarini Debi, 8 C, 880, 882 (1882) Bindeshvari Persad v. Baishakha Bibi, 24 C. W. N, 674, Surendra Krishna Mandal v Ranee Dassee, 33 C. L. J, 34 (1921); s. c, 24 C. W. N, 860, where a large number of previous decisions are cited; as to presumption of due execution, see Woolmer v. Daly, 1 Lahore, 173.

(4) Sarojini Dasi v Hari Das Ghose, 49 C., 235.

(5) Krishnamachariar v. Krishnamachariar, 38 M, 166 (1915)

(6) Ib., per Tyabji, J. (obiter). See Bhagirathi Bai v. Viswanath, 7 Bom L. R, 92 (1905).

(7) Jones v Godrich, 5 Moo P. C., 16, 19—21 (1844). So fraud cannot be presumed, but the circumstances may render fraud so probable that the Court will require stronger proof than in cases where all natural presumptions are in favour of the disposition and the free will of the testator. ib, 21 As to proof in the case of inofficious wills; see Saroda Soonduree v. Muddun Mohun, 24 W. R, 162 (1875). As to wills by Purdanashins see s 111 post; Khas Mehal v. Administrator-General of Bengal, 5 C. W. N., 505 (1901).

(8) Jarat Kumari Dassi v Bissessur Dutt (1911), 39 C., 245.

(9) Balkrishna v. Gopikabai, 7 Bom. L. R 175 (1905). The onus may be increased by circumstances such as an unbounded confidence in drawer of the will, extreme debility of the testator, clandestinity and other circumstances which may increase the presumption, so as to be conclusive against the instrument, id may be, it is for those who propound the will to remove such suspicion, and to prove affirmatively that the testator knew and approved the contents of the will, and it is only where this is done that the onus is thrown on those who oppose the will to prove fraud or undue influence or whatever they rely on to displace the case for proving the will.(1) But there is no rule of law as to the particular kind or description of evidence by which the Court must be satisfied. The degree of suspicion excited and the weight of the burden of removing it must depend largely on the nature and amount of the benefit taken and all the circumstances of the case.(2)

The dictum of Lindley, L. J., in Tyrell v. Pointon(3) "that whenever circumstances exist which excite the suspicion of the Court, and whatever their nature may be, it is for those who propound the will to remove such suspicion and to prove affirmatively that the testator knew and approved of the contents of the document," does not apply to a case where the question is simply which set of witnesses should be believed.(4) "Due execution" of a will implies not only that the testator was in such a state of mind as to be able to authorize, and to know he was authorising, the execution of a document as his will, but also that he knew and approved of the contents of the instrument; and in cases of disputed execution the Judge should consider and express an opinion upon both these questions In ordinary cases execution of a will by a competent testator raises the presumption (sufficient, if nothing appears to the contrary, to establish) that he knew and approved of the contents of the will Also under ordinary circumstances the competency of a testator will be presumed if nothing appears to rebut the ordinary presumption: ordinarily, therefore, proof of execution of the will is enough. But where the mental capacity of the [illegible] which shows that it is (to say the least) very [illegible] was such that he could have "duly execute[illegible]ive done, the Court ought to find whether upon the evidence the testator was of sound disposing mind and did know and approve of the contents of the will. Where this had not been done, the Appellate Court, after considering the whole evidence, held, contrary to the decision of the Lower Court, that the will was not approved, and refused probate (5) It is incumbent on persons propounding a will for the purpose of obtaining probate or letters of administration to produce all the evidence which the circumstances of the case indicate as proper and necessary to prove the execution of the will. It lies upon such a person to prove it by evidence as good as that which would be produced to prove any other instrument transferring the title to real property.(6) Primâ facie proof, however, of execution is sufficient to warrant the grant of probate, when the application for such probate is unopposed.(7) When the will is contested, the proceedings should take, as nearly as may be, the form of a regular suit brought by the party propounding the will.(8) The fact that a contested will bears an endorsement, stating that it was acknowledged by the testator before the Registrar, does not warrant a Judge in granting probate without any other evidence in support of the will, even though the caveator does not produce

(1) Lacho Bibi v Gopi Narain, 23 A, 472 (1901).

(2) Bai Gungabai v Bhugwandas Valji (P. C), 9 C. W. N., 769 (1905); 29 B, 530.

(3) L. R (1894), P. D, 151.

(4) Shama Churn v Khetromoni Dasi, 4 C. W. N., 501 (1899); s c, 27 C, 521.

(5) Woomesh Chunder v. Rashmohini Dassi, 21 C., 279 (1893).

(6) Tara Chand v. Debnath Roy, 10 C. L R, 550 (1882).

(7) In re Nobodoorga, 7 C L R, 387, 391, 392 (1880); see In re Shustee Churn, 23 W R, 103 (1874).

(8) Saroda Sooonduree v. Muddun Mohun, 24 W R, 162 (1875); Annoda Sundari v. Jugutmoni Debi, 6 C. L. R, 176 (1880); s. 83, Probate and Administration Act.

any evidence to impeach the will.(1) If a will shown to have been in the custody of the testator is not forthcoming at the time of his death, it is presumed to have been destroyed by him unless there is sufficient evidence to rebut the presumption But it has been held by the Allahabad High Court that this presumption of English Law is not as strong in India as in other countries where greater care is taken of wills, and that it did not arise when it was shown that persons interested in the disappearance of the will had access to the testator's house.(2) Such presumption of revocation does not arise unless there is evidence to satisfy the Court that the will was not in existence at the time of the testator's death (3) A will, duly executed, is not to be treated as revoked, either wholly or in part, by a will which is not forthcoming, unles its is proved, by clear and satisfactory evidence, that the will contained either words of revocation or dispositions so inconsistent with those of the earlier will that the two cannot stand together It is not enough to show that the will, which is not forthcoming, differed from the earlier one, if it cannot be shown in what the difference consisted. The burden of proof lies upon him who challenges the existing will.(4) The burden of proof lies upon the person who sets up a will, not upon the person who is prepared to impeach it. The defendants (widow and sister-in-law of a deceased taluqdar) set up a will under which they alleged they took all the property of the testator absolutely, whereupon the plaintiffs the next reversioners, sued for a declaration that the will was not genuine and that the alleged testator died intestate. Held that the onus was on the defendants, who set it up, to prove that the will was genuine [illegible] it, to show that it was a forgery. The [illegible] any evidence that the will was forged, [illegible] prove it to be spurious if necessary" [illegible] of the will. Nor did the omission of the plaintiffs to cross-examine some witnesses called by the Court previously to hearing, to explain the alleged loss and consequent non-production of the will give rise to any presumption in favour of its validity. They were not bound to cross-examine the witnesses, which they could not have done without permission of the Court, but were perfectly justified in waiting until evidence in support of the will was produced at the trial (5) Nor can the Court assume [illegible] to cross-examine [illegible] the weight of the [illegible]

Where a testatrix executed a will, written on two sheets of paper and tied by a string at the top of the left hand corner, four or five years before her death, and only one sheet of the will was found after her death, which disposed by means of legacies of the bulk, though not the whole, of her property, and an application made for the grant of probate of that portion of the will, was opposed by the testatrix's heir; held (per Maclean, C. J.), that the presumption that the testator destroyed the second sheet of the will animo revocandi was a rebuttable one and that it had been rebutted in the case; that probate could be granted of a portion of a will, and that where the contents of a lost will are not completely proved, probate can be granted to the extent to which they are proved. Held (per Banerjee, J.) that judging from the nature of the

(1) Obhoy Churn v Uma Churn, 1 C. L. R., 362 (1877).

(2) Shib Sabitri Prosad v Collector of Meerut (1906), 29 A., 82.

(3) Anwar Hossein v Secretary of State, 31 C., 885 (1904); s c., 8 C. W. N., 821.

(4) Sahib Mirza v Umda Khanum, 19 C., 444 (1892); s c., 19 I A., 33; Cutts v. Gilbert, 9 Moo., P. C., 131 (1854); Hitchins v. Basset, 3 Mod., 203 Show. Par. Cas., 146; Goodright v. Harwood. Wm. Black, 937.

(5) Sukh Dei v. Kedar Nath, 23 A., 405 (1901); s. c., 3 C. W. N., 895.

(6) Jarat Kumari Dassi v Bissessur Dutt (1911), 39 C., 245.

document as it stood when complete, as deposed to by the witnesses examined in the case, and judging from the nature and appearance of the part that had been preserved, the fact of a part being wanting raised no presumption of the destruction or mutilation of the will with intent to revoke it.(1) In an English case it was held that the Court will not order the insertion in the probate of words actually missing from a torn will, but the practice to be followed in such a case, where satisfactory oral proof of the missing words is given, is to annex to the probate a document showing what the words were.(2)

Where a will was challenged on the ground that it was made by the deceased after the taking of poison and was therefore bad for being the act of a suicide, it was held that the onus of proving whether the will was written after the swallowing of poison rested on the party impugning the will.(3) Upon a petition, under section 231 of the Succession Act, for revocation of probate on the ground that citation had not been [illegible] a minor under the care of the person [illegible] of understanding his malâ fides and [illegible] forgery, it was held that the petitioner should be allowed an opportunity of proving that she had no knowledge of the previous proceedings; and if she succeeded, there should be a new trial as to the factum of the will, which the person propounding would have to prove in the ordinary way.(4) The fact that the attesting witnesses of a will were the servants or dependants of a Hindu testator raised no presumption against its execution.(5) The mere fact of an attesting witness to a will repudiating his signature does not invalidate a will, if it can be proved by the evidence of other witnesses of a reliable character that he has given false evidence.(6) And it has been held in England that when a party is compelled to call the attesting witness to a will or codicil he may cross-examine him, as the latter is not the witness of either party but of the Court.(7) When a will has been proved summarily, proof in solemn form per testes will not as a rule be required on the application of a person who had had notice, or had been aware of the previous proceedings before the grant of probate issued, and had then abstained from coming forward.(8) Mere omission to serve a special citation would not by itself be sufficient ground for revoking the grant, if it is shown that the person on whom the citation ought to have been served had knowledge of the application for probate. The onus of proving that he had such knowledge rests on the party who alleges it.(9) [illegible] named person because he [illegible] is entitled to recover the [illegible] uch character. The onus [illegible] the reason of the gift lies upon those who dispute his claim.(10) The Hindu Transfers and Bequests Act (Madras Act I of 1914) is retrospective in its operation.(11)

---

(1) Kedarnath Mitter v. Sreemutty Sorojini, 3 C. W. N., 617 (1899)

(2) Gill v. Gill (1909), P, 157.

(3) Mazhar Husen v. Bodha Bibi, 21 A, 91.

(4) Dintarini Debi v Doibo Chunder, 8 C, 880 (1882).

(5) Jagrani Kunwar v Durga Prasad, P. C, 36 A, 93 (1914); 41 I. A, 76. See Chotey Narain Singh v Ratan Koer, P. C, 22, C, 519 (1894), 22 I. A., 12.

(6) Nobo Kishore v Joy Doorga, 22 W. R., 189 (1874). See as to attestation, ss 68—72, post.

(7) Jones v Jones (1908), Times L R., v 24, p. 839.

(8) Brinda Chowdhrain v Radhica Chowdhrain, 11 C, 492 (1885). As to the onus of proof, see Kali Das v Ishan Chandra, 31 C., 914 (1904). The Privy Council did not, however, decide the point as it decided the case on the evidence

(9) Prem Chand v. Surendra Nath, 9 C. W. N., 290 (1904).

(10) Rango Balaji v. Mudiyeppa, 23 B., 296, 304 (1898), per Farran, C. J.

(11) Muthuswamy Ayyar v Kalyani Ammal, 40 M, 818 (1917).

105. When a person is accused of any offence, the burden of proving the existence of circumstances bringing the case within any of the General Exceptions in the Indian Penal Code, or within any special exception or proviso contained in any other part of the same Code, or in any law defining the offence, is upon him, and the Court shall presume the absence of such circumstances.

Burden of proving that case of accused comes within exceptions.

Illustrations.

(a) A, accused of murder, alleges that, by reason of unsoundness of mind, he did not know the nature of the act

The burden of proof is on A (b) A, accused of murder, alleges that by grave and sudden provocation, he was deprived of the power of self-control.

The burden of proof is on A.

(c) Section 325 of the Indian Penal Code provides that whoever, except in the case provided for by section 335, voluntarily causes grievous hurt, shall be subject to certain punishments.

A is charged with voluntarily causing grievous hurt under section 325

The burden of proving the circumstances bringing the case under section 335 lies on A.

Principle.—See Notes, post.

s. 101 (Burden of proof.) s. 3 ("Court.") s. 4 ("Shall presume.")

Field, Ev., 6th Ed, 337—338.

COMMENTARY.

[illegible] Exceptions trials [illegible]

charg[illegible]

state [illegible]

presumption. The result is the same in both cases (2) This section is an application, and perhaps, in some cases, an extension, of the principle contained in section 103, ante. This section effected an alteration in the law which required the prosecution, previous to its enactment, to prove the absence of [illegible]

(1) v ante, ss 101—104, sub. voc., Criminal Law. See Yusuf Husain v. Emperor, 40 A., 284; s c., 19 Cr. L. J., 371 According to English law the prosecution must negative any exception favourable to the defendant which is engrafted in the statutory definition of the offence. R. v Audley, 1907, 1 K B, 383, Roberts v. Humphreys, L. R., 8 K. B, 483; R. v. James (1902), 1 K. B., 540.

(2) Markby, Ev., 81.

(3) Field, Ev., 6th Ed, 337, 338, see Act XXV of 1861, ss 235, 236, 237.

The Evidence Act expressly repealed (see Schedule) s. 237, and the whole of the Act was subsequently repealed by Act X of 1872. (See s 439 of Act X of 1872 and s. 221, the corresponding section of the present Code Act V of 1898).

(4) Before passing of Act X of 1882 it was doubted whether Act XVIII of 1862, ss 26 and 27, were overridden by the present section [In re Shiba Prosad, 4 C, 124, 127 (1878)]. The latter Act applied only to the High Court in its Original Criminal Jurisdiction; Sealy v. Ramnarain Bose, 4 W. R., Cr, 22 (1865). The doubt is, however, now solved, as Act X of 1882 repealed so much of Act XVIII of 1862 as had not been previously repealed.

(5) In re Shiba Prosad 4 C., 124 (1878); s. c., 3 C. L. R., 122.

reference to the words "shall presume," see fourth section. So it is for those who raise the plea of private defence to prove it. The act charged moreover cannot be denied and the plea of private defence raised as an alternative. If raised, a full account of the occurrence must be given in evidence.(1) So also the burden of proving the loss of self-control(2): exemption from criminal responsibility by reason of unsoundness of mind(3); good faith(4); the acceptance of risk by the person injured(5); and the like; lies upon the accused. But it is not necessary for the accused to plead the existence of circumstances bringing his case within an exception; and the burden of proof which is upon him can be discharged by the evidence of witnesses for the prosecution as well as by evidence for the defence An accused is clearly entitled to claim an acquittal if on the evidence for the prosecution it is shown he has committed no offence.(6) When evidence has been given in support an exception, the burden of proof is discharged if the evidence is believed and the jury have only to decide the question of fact on the evidence. The section is not applicable to such a case.(7)

Burden of proving fact especially within knowledge.

106. When any fact is especially within the knoweldge of any person, the burden of proving that fact is upon him.

Illustrations.

(a) When a person does an act with some intention other than that which the character and circumstances of the act suggest, the burden of proving that intention is upon him (8)

(b) A is charged with travelling on a Railway without a ticket.

The burden of proving that he had a ticket is on him.

Principle.—The capacity of parties to give evidence may affect the burden of proof. A person will not be forced to show a thing which lies not within his knowledge.(9)

s 3 ("Fact.") s. 101 (Burden of proof")

Taylor, Ev., §§ 376 & 377; Wharton, Ev., § 367; Powell, Ev., 9th Ed, 157; Best, Ev., §§ 274—276.

COMMENTARY.

Facts especially within the knowledge of a party

As already observed(10), the first exception to the general rule that the burden of proof rests with the party who asserts the substantial affirmative is that it does not apply where there is a primâ facie presumption one way or other. This exception is the subject-matter of sections 107—114, post.

(1) In re Jamsher Sirdar, 1 C. L. R, 62, 65 (1877). In re Kali Churn, 11 C. L R., 232 (1882), Asiruddin Ahmed v. R., 8 C. W. N., 714 (1904).

(2) R. v. Devji Govindji, 20 B, 215, 223 (1895); R. v. Sheikh Choollye, 4 W. R., Cr, 35 (1865).

(3) R. v. Kader Nasyer, 23 C, 604, 607 (1896); R. v Niaz Ali, A. W. N. (1905), p. 2.

(4) R. v. Balkrishna Vithal, 17 B, 573, 577, 579 (1893); R v. Dhun Singh, 6 A, 220, 222 (1884); Ramasami v. Lokananda, 9 M, 387 (1885); Sukaroo Kobiraj v R., 14 C, 566 (1887). In re Shiba Prosad, 4 C, 124 (1878); R. v. Girjashankar Kashiram, 15 B, 286 (1890); R. v. Slater, 15 B, 351 (1890); and as to what constitutes "absence in good faith" within the meaning of Act XXV of 1867, section 7; see R. v. Phanendra Nath Mitter (1908), 35 C., 945.

(5) Sukaroo Kobiraj v. R, 14 C., 566, 568, 569 (1887).

(6) In re Kali Churn, 11 C. L R., 232 (1882). Where, however, the plea is taken for the first time on appeal, cf R. v. Tiramal, 21 A., 122 (1898).

(7) Muhammad Yunus v. Emperor, 50 C, 318.

(8) See Deputy Legal Remembrancer v Karuna Boistobi, 22 C., 164, 174 (1894).

(9) Best, Ev., § 274

(10) v. ante, Introd. to Ch VII

The second exception to the above-named general rule is stated by the present section, viz., that where the subject-matter of the allegation lies pecu- ... party must prove it, whether ... and even though there be a ...

So in England, under the old law, in an action for penalties against a person for practising as an apothecary without a certificate(2) as the defendant was peculiarly cognizant of the fact whether or not he had obtained a certificate, and, if he had done s... pelled him to do so ... plaintiff would have ... essential to his case ... and in accordance w... and not for the plaintiff to prove its non-existence (3) In a suit against a zemindar to reverse the sale of a patni tenure held under Regulation VIII of 1819, on the ground of non-service of notice, the onus of proving service lies on the defendant according to the terms of this section.(4) Where a horse was delivered to a defendant in a sound state, but when returned was found to be foundered, it was held that it was for the defendant to show how the horse, which was perfectly sound when taken out, was foundered when returned (5) Sales of consignments entrusted to commission-agents, and particulars of those sales, are matters which lie specially within their knowledge, and every contract ...

... it was for the defendant to prove a matter which was peculiarly within his knowledge (8) Where pre-settlement inams which had been granted on condition of personal service to the zemindar and payment of a quit-rent were resumed, it was held that the onus of proving that they were not part of the assets of

---

(1) Taylor, Ev., § 367 A.; Dickson v. Evans, 6 T. R., 80; 3 R. R., 119; R. v. Turner, 2 C. & K., 732; but see the observations of Alderson, B, in Elkin v. Janson, 13 M. & W., 655; 14 L J., Ex. 201, 9 Jur., 353, 262, 266; suggesting that the rule only refers to the weight of the evidence; but that there should be some evidence to start the presumption and cast the onus on the other side These observations are referred to in Poolin Beharee v. Watson & Co, 9 W. R, 192 (1868). Though there might, prior to this Act, have been said to have been some doubt upon the subject; see Poolin Beharee v. Watson & Co, supra; Girdhar Hari v. Kali Kant, 13 B L. R, 161, 165 (1869); the rule, however, in India is now that stated in the text and in Taylor, Ev., § 376 A; Wharton, Ev, § 367; Powell, Ev., 9th Ed, 167. As to extent of this section, see observations in Muhammed Inayat v. Muhammed Karamatullah, 12 A, 312 (1889) The applicability of the rule and the extent to which it should be carried is a question of considerable difficulty; see Best, Ev., §§ 274—276.

(2) Under 55 Geo. 3, C 194 (The Apothecaries Act, 1815), see now 21 & 22 Vic, C. 90, § 40

(3) Taylor, Ev, § 376 A ; Apoth. Co. v. Bentley, Ry. & M, 159; 1 C. & P., 538.

(4) Doorga Churn v. Synd Najunooddeen, 21 W. R, 397 (1874); see also Hurro Doyal v Mahomed Gazi, 19 C., 699 (1891).

(5) Collins v. Bennett, 46 N. Y. Rep. (Amer.). "That is a case which probably would come under s 106 of the Evidence Act," per Edge, C. J., in Shields v. Wilkinson, 9 A, 406 (1887).

(6) Mayen v. Alston, 16 M, 238, 245 (1892), as to account-sales being primâ facie evidence see Barlow v Chuni Lall, 28 C, 209 (1900).

(7) David M Bruce v. Mg Kyaw Zin, 45 I. C, 822

(8) Ram Coomar v. Beejoy Govind, 7 W. R., 53 (1867); distinguished in Gridhar Hari v Kali Kant, 13 B. L. R., A. C., 161 (1869).

the zemindari [illegible] Where the plaintiff, who was form [illegible] possession of certain land which he [illegible] ted that he had been ousted by the defendant, who had become putnidar by purchase at a sale held under Bengal Regulation VIII of 1819, it was held that though, according to the general rule, it would have lain upon the defendant to show that the land was rent-paying after 1790, yet as the plaintiff by reason of his having been formerly putnidar of the village had special means of knowledge and was in a position to prove the area of the rent-paying lands, the burden of proof lay upon him in the first place to show that the disputed land was not within this area.(2) When the sons of a living father [illegible] of a charge on the ancestral estate create[illegible] misconduct in extravagant waste of the e[illegible] career being more likely to be in the kn[illegible] same family, than of a stranger, the onus of disproving the charge may properly be placed upon them.(3) Under this section the onus of proving the value of "circumstances and property within the municipality," under the Bengal Municipality Act section 85, is on the municipality as a fact especially within its knowledge.(4) Where goods are booked by a Railway Company by through ticket, proof that the damage occurred off the defendants' line is upon them (5)

In a suit under section 93(h) of the N.-W. P. Rent Act (XII of 1881) by a recorded co-sharer against a lambardar for his recorded share of the profits of a mahal, in which the plaintiff seeks to make the defendants liable under section [illegible] but for those [illegible] the [illegible] on [illegible] nce [illegible] oof [illegible] on to the defendant. The mere production by the plaintiff of the jamabandi or rent-roll is not sufficient to cast upon the defendant the necessity of proving that there was no negligence or misconduct in him. Section 106 of the Evidence Act does not apply to such a case.(6)

This second exception also prevails in all civil or criminal proceedings instituted against parties for doing acts which they are not permitted to do unless duly qualified. It holds good, and compels the defendant to produce the necessary license or authority (as the case may be) in proceedings for selling liquors, improperly exercising a trade or profession, and the like; in actions for penalties against the proprietor of a theatre for performing dramatic pieces without the written consent of the author, in proceedings for misprision of treason, where if the treason be pr[illegible] be traced to the prisoner, he is in strictness boun[illegible] by offering proof of a discovery on [illegible] of purchase of t[illegible] the accused was something other [illegible] by the character and circumstance [illegible] it. And it being further argued that though the facts might go to show that the intention was

(1) Sri Raja Parthasarathy Appa Row Bahadur v Secretary of State, 38, M., 620 (1915), see Secretary of State v. Kirtibas Bhupati Harichandra Mahapatra, 42 C., 710 (1915) (onus, right to resume).

(2) Nubo Kissen v. Promothonath Ghose, 5 W. R., 148 (1866); distinguished in Girdhar Hari v. Kali Kant, 13 B. L. R., A. C, 161 (1869).

(3) Hunoomanpershad Panday v. Mussumat Koonweree, 6 M. I. A., 418, 419 (1856).

(4) Deb Narain Dutt v. Chairman Baruipore Municipality, 41 C., 168 (1914).

(5) Mahony v. Waterford Ry (1900), 2 I. R, 273; Kent v. Midland Ry, L. R. 10 Q. B, 1.

(6) Muhammed Inyat v. Muhammed Karamutullah, 12 A., 301 (1889). See now N.-W. P. Act II of 1901.

(7) Taylor, Ev., § 377, and cases there cited.

that the girls should be employed for the purpose of prostitution still they did not sufficiently show that the employment intended was to be before the completion of the sixteenth year by the girls, it was held that under this section it lay upon the accused to prove that she intended to put off the employment until the completion of the sixteenth year.(1) Where several persons were found at 11 o'clock at night on a road just outside the city of Agra, all carrying arms (guns and swords) concealed under their clothes, and none of them could give any explanation of his presence at the spot under the particular circumstances and at that period the District of Agra was notorious as the scene of frequent and recent dacoities, it was held that the circumstances justified the inference of an intent to commit dacoity, and the burden of proving the contrary rested on the accused under this section.(2) In a case where the question is whether a particular act was n[illegible] the burden of proving the limit [illegible] inasmuch as the character of the [illegible] nowledge of the latter (3) An accused is always entitled to be silent but where the only alternative theory as to his guilt is a remote possibility, which if correct he is in a position to explain, the absence of any explanation must be considered in determining whether the possibility should be disregarded or taken into account.(4)

When an instrument on its production appears to have been altered, it is a general rule that the party offering it in evidence must explain this appearance, if he be called upon to do so by the issue raised, and if the instrument be not admitted by his opponent under notice, because as every alteration on the face of a written instrument renders it suspicious, it is only reasonable that the party claiming under it should remove the suspicion.(5) It is not, however, on every occasion of a party tendering an instrument in evidence that he is bound to explain any material alteration that appears upon its face; but only

(1) Deputy Legal Remembrancer v. Karuna Boistobi, 22 C, 164, 175 (1894); see R. v Papar Sani, 23 M, 159 (1899). See as to the application of this section in criminal cases: Balmakund Ram v. Ghansam Ram, 22 C, 400, arguendo

(2) R v. Bholu, 23 A, 124 (1900) Cf. Sellamuthu Servaigaram v. Pallamuthu Karuppan, 35 M, 186 (1912): R v Mulla, 37 A, 395 (1912) R. v Ghaya Bhar, 38 A, 517 (1916)

(3) David Bruce v. Mg Kyaw Zin, 45 I. C, 822

(4) Smith v Emperor, 19 Cr L J, 189; s c, 43 I C, 605

(5) Taylor, Ev., § 1819; Petambar Manikjee v Mooleechand Manikjee, 1 M. I A, 420, 429 (1837); S W R, P. C, 53; Muddon Mohun v Sofuna Bewa, Sutherland's Mofussil Small Cause Court References, 69 (1864); Mussamat Khoob v Moodnarain Singh, 9 M I. A, 1, 17 (1861); 1 W. R, P. C, 36. There may, however, be corroborative proof strong enough to rebut the presumption which arises against an apparent and presumable falsifier of evidence: ib., 17. As to material alterations in instruments being fatal to their validity, see Taylor, Ev., §§ 1819—1840 The rule of English law that a material alteration of a document by a party to it after its execution without the consent of the other party renders it void, is in force in India. Atmaram v. Umedram, 25 B, 616 (1901) [distinguished in Gulamali v. Miyabhai, 3 Bom L R., 574 (1901) in which it was held that where a written acknowledgment has its date altered, oral evidence to prove that date is inadmissible under para 2 of s 19 of the Limitation Act] See also Gogun Chunder v. Dhuronidhur Mundul, 7 C, 616 (1881). s c, 9 C L. R, 257; Ganga Ram v. Chandan Singh, 4 A, 62 (1881); Sitaram Krishna v Daji Devaji, 7 B, 418 (1883) [dissented from in Mohesh Chunder v. Kamini Kumari, 12 C, 313 (1885)]; Oodey Chund v. Bhaskar Jogonnath, 6 B., 371 (1881); Christacharlu v. Kasibasayya, 9 M, 399 (1885), F B; Gobindasami v. Kuppusami, 12 M, 239 (1889) Paramma v. Ramachandra, 7 M, 302 (1893). The rule does not apply to documents which are not the foundation of a plaintiff's claim, but are merely evidence of a defendant's pre-existing liability A written acknowledgment of his liability by a debtor, which is intended merely to save the bar of limitation and not to give a right of action is not within the rule Atmaram v. Umedram, 25 B, 616 (1901); referred to and distinguished in Sayad Gulamali v. Miyabhai, 26 B., 128 (1901). An immaterial alteration does not avoid the

on those occasions when he is seeking to enforce it, or claiming an interest under such instrument.(1) The instrument may be void for the purpose of taking an interest under it, but nevertheless admissible to prove a collateral fact (2) It follows that a deed is not rendered inadmissible by alteration, if it be produced merely as proof of some right or title created by or resulting from its having been executed.(3) Nor does the rule of law which requires the party tendering in evidence an altered ins[illegible] documents coming from th[illegible] lated or imperfect state. [illegible] same state in which it was actually found. The weight, however, due to such a document may be affected.(4) The addition in a mortgage of a claim for payment of compound interest is a material alteration, and the burden lies on the purchaser of the equity of redemption to prove that it was made after execution and without the consent of the executrix.(5) Where unattested alterations occur in a will, the presumption of law is that such alterations were made after the execution of the will and in the absence of evidence rebutting the pesumption, probate will be granted of the will in the original state omitting the alterations.(6)

Where a written acknowledgment bears a date which has been altered, oral evidence to prove the date is inadmissible under the nineteenth section, second paragraph, of the Indian Limitation Act, 1877.(7)

Burden of proving death of person known to have been alive within thirty years.

107. When the question is whether a man is alive or dead, and it is shown that he was alive within thirty years, the burden of proving that he is dead is on the person who affirms it.

Burden of proving that person is alive who has not been heard of for seven years.

108. Provided that when the question is whether a man is alive or dead, and it is proved that he has not been heard of for seven years by those who would naturally have heard of him if he had been alive, the burden of proving that he is alive is shifted to the person who affirms it.

Principle—The presumption in favour of continuance. See Notes, post.

s. 101 (Burden of proof.)

Taylor, Ev., §§ 196, 198—201; Best, Ev., §§ 408, 409; Wharton, Ev, §§ 1275—1277; Lawson on Presumptive Evidence, p. 192, et seq.

---

instrument, Tikamdas Javahirdas v. Gungakom Mathuradas, 11 Bom H. C. R, 203 (1873); Ede v. Kanto Nath, 3 C., 220 (1877), unless made fraudulently; Kalee Koomar v Gunga Narain, 10 W. R, 250 (1868) And a material alteration made after execution does not vitiate a deed, if it be made with the consent of all the parties; Isac Mohammed v. Bai Fatma, 10 B, 487 (1886). Or in good faith to carry out the original intention of the parties: Ananda Mohan Saha v Ananda Chandra Naha, 44 C., 154 (1917) See Gour Chandra Das v. Prasanna Kumar Chandra, 33 C., 812 (1906)

(1) Taylor, Ev., § 1824, and cases there cited

(2) Hutchins v. Scott, 2 M. & W, 816

(3) Taylor, Ev, § 1826; as to alterations by a stranger and without the privity of either party; see ib, §§ 1827—1829.

(4) Ib., § 1838.

(5) Achhutanand v. Ram Nath, 18 C. L. J, 354 (1913)

(6) Surendra Krishna Mandal v. Ranee Dassee, 33 C. L. J., 34 (1921)

(7) Sayad Gulamali v. Miyabhai, 26 B. 128 (1901).

(8) The words in brackets in s. 108 were substituted for the original word "when" by Act XVIII of 1872, s 9.

(9) The words in brackets were substituted for "on" by s. 9 of Act XVIII of 1872.

COMMENTARY.

There is a presumption in favour of continuance of life (1) This section, according to its terms, does not require that the Court should hold the person dead at the expiration of the seven years therein indicated; but merely provides that the burden of proving that he is alive at the time of the suit is shifted to the person who affirms it (2)

Continuance of life.

"Various primâ facie legal presumptions are founded on the continuance or immutability, for a longer or shorter period, of human affair, which experience tells us usually occurs. So when the existence of a person or personal relation, or a state of things, is once proved, the law presumes that the person, relation, or state of things continues to exist till the contrary is [illegible]

such things or state of things usually cease to exist, is still in existence.(4)

These sections and the following section deal with certain instances of the presumption which exists in favour of continuance of immutability. It is on the principle of this presumption that a person shown to have been once living is, in the absence of proof that he has not been heard of within the last seven years, presumed to be still alive.(5) These sections establish a uniform rule upon their subject-matter, both for Hindus and Mahomedans as well as all others. According to Hindu law twelve years must have elapsed before an absent person, of whom nothing has been heard during this period, can be presumed to be dead.(6) In the case of Mahomedan law the old Hanafi doctrine required that ninety years should have elapsed from the date of the birth of missing person before his death could be presumed. The Maliki principle is now, however, in force among the Hanafis, namely, that if a person be unheard of for four years he is to be presumed to be dead. Among the Shiahs the period is ten years, and among the Shafees seven (7) Now, however, the rule contained in these sections, being a rule of evidence only, governs both Hindus(8) and Mahomedans (9) Although, however, a person who has not been heard of for seven years is presumed to be dead, there is no presumption as to the time of his death; and if any one seeks to establish the precise period at which such person died, he must do so by actual evidence. The question for which provision is made is whether a man is alive or dead at the time the question is raised.(10) The rule is the same whether

---

(1) Tanti v. Rikhram, 1 Lahore, 554.

(2) Narayan Bhagwant v. Srinivas Trimbak, 8 Bom L. R, 226

(3) Taylor, Ev, § 196, Best, Pres Ev, 186

(4) S 114, Ill (d), post

(5) Taylor, Ev, § 198; see s 114, Ill (d), post

(6) Janmajoy Mazumdar v Keshab Lal, 2 B. L. R., A. C, 134 (1868), 6 B L R, App, 16.

(7) Hedaya, Bk xiii, N.-W. P. Rep, 191, Ameer Ali's Mahommedan Law, ii, 129

(8) Dharup Nath v. Gobind Saran, 8 A, 614 (1886); Dhondo Bhikaji v. Ganesh Bikaji, 11 B, 433 (1886), Balayya v. Kistnappa, 11 M, 448 (1888); see also Hari Chintaman v. Moro Lakshman 11 B, 89 (1886).

(9) Mazhar Ali v Budh Singh, 7 A., 297 (1884), Moolla Cassim v. Moolla Abdul 15 Mad. L. J, 317 (1905), P. C.; s c, 2 All L J., 798, 10 C W N, 35, Mairaj Fatima v Abul Wahid, 43 A, 673 (1921) But see observations in notes to s 112 post, "Evidence of Parents."

(10) Fani Bhusan Banerji v. Surjya Kanta Row Chowdry (1907), 35 C, 25; 11 C W. N, 833; Dharup Nath v Gobind Saran, 8 A, 614 (1884); Rango Balaji v. Mudiyeppa, 23 B., 296 (1898); Taylor, Ev., § 200 In re Perton, 53 L. T. R., 707, 710 In re Phene's Trusts, L. R., 5 Ch App, 139; Narki v. Lal Sahu (1909), 37 C, 103; Mairaj Fatima v. Abdul Wahid, 43 A, 673 (1921); s c, 19 All. L. J, 713; Basharat v Najib Khan, 38 P. R, 1918; s c., 45 I C., 70; Faqir Baksh v Dan Bahadur Singh, 21 O C, 143; S

on those occasions when he is seeking to enforce it, or claiming an interest under such instrument.(1) The instrument may be void for the purpose of taking an interest under it, but nevertheless admissible to prove a collateral fact (2) It follows that a deed is not rendered inadmissible by alteration, if it be produced merely as proof of some right or title created by or resulting from its having been executed.(3) Nor does the rule of law which requires the party tendering in evidence an altered instrument to explain its appearance, apply to ancient documents coming from the right custody merely because they are in a mutilated or imperfect state. It is sufficient that the instrument is produced in the same state in which it was actually found. The weight, however, due to such a document may be affected.(4) The addition in a mortgage of a claim for payment of compound interest is a material alteration, and the burden lies on the purchaser of the equity of redemption to prove that it was made after execution and without the consent of the executrix.(5) Where unattested alterations occur in a will, the presumption of law is that such alterations were made after the execution of the will and in the absence of evidence rebutting the pesumption, probate will be granted of the will in the original state omitting the alterations.(6)

Where a written acknowledgment bears a date which has been altered, oral evidence to prove the date is inadmissible under the nineteenth section, second paragraph, of the Indian Limitation Act, 1877.(7)

Burden of proving death of person known to have been alive within thirty years.

107. When the question is whether a man is alive or dead, and it is shown that he was alive within thirty years, the burden of proving that he is dead is on the person who affirms it.

Burden of proving that person is alive who has not been heard of for seven years.

108. Provided that when the question is whether a man is alive or dead, and it is proved that he has not been heard of for seven years by those who would naturally have heard of him if he had been alive, the burden of proving that he is alive is shifted to the person who affirms it.

Principle—The presumption in favour of continuance. See Notes, post.

s. 101 (Burden of proof.)

Taylor, Ev., §§ 196, 198—201; Best, Ev., §§ 408, 409; Wharton, Ev, §§ 1275—1277; Lawson on Presumptive Evidence, p. 192, et seq.

instrument; Tikamdas Javahirdas v. Gungakom Mathuradas, 11 Bom. H. C. R., 203 (1873); Ede v. Kanto Nath, 3 C, 220 (1877), unless made fraudulently; Kalee Koomar v Gunga Narain, 10 W. R, 250 (1868). And a material alteration made after execution does not vitiate a deed, if it be made with the consent of all the parties; Isac Mohammed v. Bai Fatma, 10 B., 487 (1886). Or in good faith to carry out the original intention of the parties: Ananda Mohan Saha v. Ananda Chandra Naha, 44 C., 154 (1917) See Gour Chandra Das. v. Prasanna Kumar Chandra, 33 C., 812 (1906).

(1) Taylor, Ev., § 1824, and cases there cited.

(2) Hutchins v. Scott, 2 M. & W., 816.

(3) Taylor, Ev, § 1826; as to alterations by a stranger and without the privity of either party; see ib, §§ 1827—1829

(4) Ib, § 1838.

(5) Achhutanand v. Ram Nath, 18 C. L. J., 354 (1913)

(6) Surendra Krishna Mandal v. Ranee Dassee, 33 C. L. J., 34 (1921)

(7) Sayad Gulamali v. Miyabhai, 26 B., 128 (1901).

(8) The words in brackets in s. 108 were substituted for the original word "when" by Act XVIII of 1872, s. 9.

(9) The words in brackets were substituted for "on" by s. 9 of Act XVIII of 1872.

COMMENTARY.

Continuance of life.

There is a presumption in favour of continuance of life.(1) This section, according to its terms, does not require that the Court should hold the person dead at the expiration of the seven years therein indicated; but merely provides that the burden of proving that he is alive at the time of the suit is shifted to the person who affirms it (2)

"Various primâ facie legal presumptions are founded on the continuance or immutability, for a longer or shorter period, of human affair, which experience tells us usually occurs So when the existence of a person or personal relation, or a state of things, is once proved, the law presumes that the person, relation, or state of things continues to exist till the contrary is [illegible]

such things or state of things usually cease to exist, is still in existence (4)

These sections and the following section deal with certain instances of the presumption which exists in favour of continuance of immutability. It is on the principle of this presumption that a person shown to have been once living is, in the absence of proof that he has not been heard of within the last seven years, presumed to be still alive.(5) These sections establish a uniform rule upon their subject-matter, both for Hindus and Mahomedans as well as all others. According to Hindu law twelve years must have elapsed before an absent person, of whom nothing has been heard during this period, can be presumed to be dead.(6) In the case of Mahomedan law the old Hanafi doctrine required that ninety years should have elapsed from the date of the birth of missing person before his death could be presumed. The Maliki principle is now, however, in force among the Hanafis, namely, that if a person be unheard of for four years he is to be presumed to be dead. Among the Shiahs the period is ten years, and among the Shafees seven.(7) Now, however, the rule contained in these sections, being a rule of evidence only, governs both Hindus(8) and Mahomedans (9) Although, however, a person who has not been heard of for seven years is presumed to be dead, there is no presumption as to the time of his death; and if any one seeks to establish the precise period at which such person died, he must do so by actual evidence. The question for which provision is made is whether a man is alive or dead at the time the question is raised.(10) The rule is the same whether

---

(1) Tanti v Rikhram, 1 Lahore, 554

(2) Narayan Bhagwant v. Srinivas Trimbak, 8 Bom. L R, 226

(3) Taylor, Ev, § 196, Best, Pres Ev, 186

(4) S 114, Ill. (d), post

(5) Taylor, Ev, § 198; see s 114, Ill (d), post

(6) Janmajoy Mazumdar v. Keshab Lal, 2 B. L R., A. C, 134 (1868); 6 B L. R, App, 16.

(7) Hedaya, Bk xiii, N-W. P. Rep, 191; Ameer Ali's Mahommedan Law, ii, 129.

(8) Dharup Nath v. Gobind Saran, 8 A, 614 (1886); Dhondo Bhikaji v. Ganesh Bikaji, 11 B, 433 (1886); Balayya v. Kistnappa, 11 M., 448 (1888); see also Hari Chintaman v. Moro Lakshman 11 B, 89 (1886).

(9) Mazhar Ali v Budh Singh, 7 A., 297 [illegible]
15
2 A Fat But post

(10) Fani Bhusan Banerji v Surjya Kanta Row Chowdry (1907), 35 C, 25; 11 C. W N, 833; Dharup Nath v. Gobind Saran, 8 A, 614 (1884); Rango Balaji v. Mudiyeppa, 23 B, 296 (1898); Taylor, Ev, § 200. In re Perton, 53 L. T. R., 707, 710 In re Phene's Trusts, L. R., 5 Ch App, 139; Narki v. Lal Sahu (1909), 37 C, 103; Mairaj Fatima v. Abdul Wahid, 43 A, 673 (1921); s c., 19 All. L. J, 713; Basharat v. Najib Khan, 38 P. R, 1918; s. c., 45 I C., 70; Faqir Baksh v. Dan Bahadur [illegible] O. C, 143; S.

only seven years, or more than seven years, have elapsed.(1) And if a person has not been heard of for more than seven years, there is in this country no presumption that he was dead at the end of the first seven years of the period.(2) There is no presumption of law relative to the continuance of life in the abstract. The death of any party once shown to have been alive is a matter of fact to be determined by the Court. But as the presumption is in favour of the continuance of life, the onus of proving the death lies on the party who asserts it.(3) The fact of death may, however, be proved by presumptive as well as by direct evidence. So the presumption of the continuance of life ceases at the expiration of seven years from the period when the person in question was last heard of. And the burden of proving that the person was alive at any time within the seven years is upon the person asserting it.(4) But a Court may find the fact of death from the lapse of a shorter period than seven years, if other circumstances concur.(5) In England it has been held that the Court will in particular circumstances modify the usual form of oath, and that in Chancery there is no presumption of death without issue, for the latter point must be proved.(6) In a recent case where the onus was on the plaintiff to show affirmatively that he had brought the suit within twelve years of a death, it was held that the onus was not affected by this section.(7)

Burden of proof as to relationship in the cases of partners, landlord and tenant, principal and agent

109. When the question is whether persons are partners, landlord and tenant, or principal and agent, and it has been shown that they have been acting as such, the burden of proving that they do not stand, or have ceased to stand, to each other in those relationships respectively, is on the person who affirms it.

Principle.—The presumption relating to continuance: see Notes, post. When a juridical relation is once established, it is enough generally for a party relying on such relation to show its establishment, and the burden is then on he opposite party to show that the relation has ceased to exist.(8)

s. 101 (Burden of proof.)

Taylor, Ev., § 196; Best, Ev, § 405; Wharton, Ev., §§ 1284—1296; Lawson on Presumptive Evidence, 172, 175, et seq.

COMMENTARY.

Continuance of partnership, tenancy and agency.

This section, which confirms the previous law upon the subject(9), merely applies to three common and important relationships,—partnership, landlord and tenant, and principal and agent—the general presumption, already adverted to in the notes to the preceding sections, based on the continuance of

C. 46 I. C, 808; Rekhab v Sheobai, 21 A. L. J., 393.

(1) Nepean v. Doe, 2 Sm. L. C.; Green's Settlements (in re), L. R., 1 Eq, 288.

(2) Muhammed Sharif v. Bande Ali (1911), 34 A., 36 (followed in Rekhab v Sheobai, 21 A. L. J., 393) following Sri nath Das v. Probodh Chandra Das (1910), 11 C. L. J., 580; dissenting from Musst. Akbar-un-nissa v. Syed Bashir Ali, S. A No. 486 of 1909, and see Veeramma v. Chenna Reddi, 37 M., 440 (1914).

(3) Re Benjamin (1902), 1 Ch, 723.

(4) Best, Ev, §§ 408, 409; as to the presumption of survivorship v. ib, § 410; and p. 160, note (11), ante. See Wharton, Ev, §§ 1275—1277. In Lawson on Presumptive Evidence, p. 192, the rule with regard to the presumption of life is thus summarised:—"Love of life is presumed (therefore suicide will not be presumed), and a person proved to have been alive at a former time is presumed to be alive at the present time until his death is proved or a presumption of death arises"

(5) Re Walker (1909), p 115.

(6) In re Jackson; Jackson v. Ward (1907), 2 Ch., 354.

(7) Jayawant Jivanrao v. Ram Chandra Narayan, 40 B., 239 (1916)

(8) Wharton, Ev., § 1284; Lawson on Presumptive Evidence, 172.

(9) Rungo Lall v. Abdool Guffoor, 4 C., 314, 317 (1878).

human affairs in the state in which they are once shown to be When, therefore, the existence of a relationship or state of things is once proved, the law presumes that it continues till the contrary is shown or some other presumption arises A partnership(1), agency(2), tenancy(3), or other similar relation, once shown to exist is presumed to continue, till it is proved to have been dissolved (4) So when a partnership was admitted to exist in 1816, it was presumed to continue in 1838.(5) From the same presumption of a continuance of things once shown to exist, it follows that, after the expiration of the term limited by the articles, it is primâ facie presumed that such of the provisions of the articles as are not inconsistent with a partnership at will continue to apply.(6) This presumption has been made the subject of positive enactment by section 256 of the Contract Act (7) This presumption will be rebutted and a contrary one raised if it is shown that annual accounts between partners ceased on a certain date and a final one was thus struck, after which some of the partners carried on the business without interference from the others (8) As to agency, see sections 182—238 of the same Act, and in particular section 206, which deals with notice of revocation or renunciation, and section 208, which deals with the taking effect, as to the agent and third persons, of the termination of an agent's authority (9) From the same presumption when a tenant holds over after the expiration of the term, he impliedly holds subject to all the covenants in the le tion.(10) In a case in the Calcutta that a tenant shall hold over from lease from year to year and should be by a registered instrument, and that "an agreement to the contrary" in section 10 of the Transfer of Property Act over and may be implied.(11) enancy of the same piece of dmitted the previous tenancy of the other, who, he pleaded, had relinquished the land, which was upon that lease, to himself, it was held that it lay upon him to prove the relinquishment which he thus alleged (12) When the relationship of landlord and tenant has once been proved to exist, the mere non-payment of rent, though for many years, is not sufficient to show that the relationship has ceased; and a tenant who is sued for rent and contends that such relationship has ceased, is bound to prove that fact by some affirmative proof, and more especially is he so bound when he does not expressly deny that he still continues to hold the land in question in the suit (13) The principle upon which this section is based

(1) See Clark v. Alexander, 8 Scott, N. R, 161.

(2) See Smout v Ilbery, 10 M & W, 1 [continuance of authority of agent.]

(3) See Picket v. Packham, L. R, 4 Ch App, 190.

(4) Taylor, Ev, § 196

(5) Clark v. Alexander, 8 Scott, N R., 161, and see Anderson v Clay, 1 Stark., 405; and Cooper v. Dedrick, 22 Barb, 516 (Amer.), cited in Lawson's Presumtive Evidence, p 175. In the last case a partner brought an action on a note. It was contended that the plaintiffs were not partners It was proved that three years previous they were partners It was held that the presumption was they continued to be so

(6) Taylor, Ev, § 196, and cases there cited.

(7) See also §§ 339—366; s 264, deals with notice of dissolution

(8) Joopoody Sarayya v. Lakshmanaswamy, P C, 36 M, 185 (1913).

(9) For burden of proof in revocation of agency, see Dasarath Patel v. Brojo Mohon, 18 C. L J, 621 (1913)

(10) Taylor, Ev, § 196: see Act IV of 1882 (Transfer of Property), s 116.

(11) Mati Lal Karnani v Darjeeling Municipality, 17 C. L J., 167 (1913).

(12) Kissen Chunder v. Hookoom Chand, W R, 1864, p 47.

(13) Rungo Lall v. Abdool Guffoor, 4 C, 314 (1878); see also Parbatti Dassi v. Ram Chand, 3 C. L R., 576 (1879). But when there is no proof there is no presumption of tenancy see Mati Lal v. Darjeeling Municipality, 17 167 (1913).

is one of general application, and the presumption upon which it proceeds has been applied to other cases than those particularly mentioned in the section.(1)

Burden of proof as to ownership

110. When the question is whether any person is owner of anything of which he is shown to be in possession, the burden of proving that he is not the owner is on the person who affirms that he is not the owner.

Principle.—Possession affords primâ facie presumption of ownership, for men generally own what they possess.(2) Therefore when nothing else is known the person in possession of property is presumed to be the owner.(3) See Notes, post.

s. 101 (Burden of Proof.)

Taylor, Ev., §§ 123—127; Markby, Ev., 84, 85; Wharton, Ev., §§ 1331—1359, Lawson on Presumptive Evidence, 440; Best on Presumptive Evidence, 87—169; Pollock and Wright, Possession in the Common Law.

COMMENTARY.

Possession.

A person in possession of land without title has an interest in the property which is heritable and good against all the world except the true owner, [illegible] nterferes, is capable of being [illegible] in the same way as it could [illegible] But if a person claiming to be the true owner does interfere, the possession of his opponent casts upon the former the burden of proof. Possession of movable or immovable property is presumptive proof of ownership, because men generally own the property which they possess. When, therefore, a person is in possession of anything, the presumption of ownership being in his favour, the burden of showing that that person is not the owner of that of which he has possession is on the person who affirms it. So a plaintiff seeking to eject a defendant from property of which the latter has possession, and to obtain possession thereof for himself, must recover by the strength of his own legal title, and cannot in the first instance call upon the defendant to show the title under which he holds. He must succeed by the strength of his own title and not by reason of the weakness of his opponents. It is immaterial therefore to consider in such a case whether the [illegible] not, because whether it does so [illegible] rty belongs to the plaintiff, the [illegible] of possession. This presumption in favour of the person in possession is of the greatest practical importance in this country, especially in relation to disputes as to the ownership of land, the commonest of all disputes. It is an imperative presumption; that is to say, the Court is bound to regard the ownership of the possessor as proved, unless and until it is disproved. But the plaintiff, by the very form of his suit, in a suit to recover possession, assumes that the defendant is in possession, and therefore provides his antagonist with a strong weapon of defence. This it is which lends importance to those disputes regarding possession, very often leading to bloodshed, which the provisions of the Code of

(1) See Obhoy Churn v. Hurı Nath, 8 C., 72, 79 (1881). So, according to Hindu law, a joint family is presumed to remain so, until evidence of division has been given See s 114, post.

(2) Webb v Fox, 4 R. R., 472, per Lord Kenyon. The presumption arising from possession has also been elsewhere recognised by the Indian Legislature, both in criminal and civil proceedings See Cr. Pr. Code, s 145, Act I of 1877 (Specific Relief), s 9

(3) Raghoba v. Palhoba, 45 I C, 217.

(4) Gobind Prasad v. Mohan Lal, 24 A., 157 (1901).

Criminal Procedure (Chapter XII) and the Penal Code (sections 154, 158), and the 9th section of Act I of 1877 were specially intended to suppress Not a few of these disputes are preliminary skirmishes, the object of which is to secure the advantageous position of defendant in the civil suit which must ultimately determine the question of ownership.(1) Where a person is shown to be in possession of property, he is under this section to be presumed to be the owner of it (2) According to this section, possession is primâ facie evidence of a complete title because it is the sum of the acts of ownership. This applies both to prior and to present possession Thus possession has a two-fold value; it is evidence of ownership and is itself the foundation of a right to possession (3) Any one who would oust the possessor must establish a right to do so The law leans in favour of possession and an apparent right exercised for many years. It requires the claimant to make out a clear case and to succeed by the strength of the title he sets up (4)

Possession is evidence of title, and gives a good title as against a wrong-doer, but a person who has not had possession, cannot, without proof of title turn another out of possession, even though that other may have no title, for possession is a good title against every one who cannot prove a better (5) In a suit for ejectment, a plaintiff must prove that he has been dispossessed or has discontinued possession within twelve years in addition to proving his title as against the defendants.(6)

A Magistrate, trying a case under section 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code, in determining the question of possession, took into consideration the question of title. Held, that he had a right to discuss the question of title, if in his opinion it was material upon the question of possession, and that the mere fact that he had considered and discussed the question of title, could not

(1) Markby, Ev, Act, 84, 85. Seviaji Vijaya v Chinna Nayana, 10 M I A, 151 (1864), Jowala Buksh v Dhar Singh, 10 M I A, 511, 528, 529 (1866); Ram Rutton v Furrookoonnissa Begum, 4 M I A, 233 (1847), Rajah Burdacant v Chunder Coomar, 12 M I A, 145 (1868), 2 B L R, P C, 1 [In a case of disputed boundaries when one of the claimants is in possession by virtue of a Magistrate's order (see ss 145—148, Cr Pr Code), it lies on the party seeking to oust him to show a better title to the land claimed than that of the party in possession see also Hari Ram v Bhikaree Roy, 25 W R, 20 (1876)], Kalee Narain v Annund Moyee, 21 W R, 79 (1874), Mudun Mohun v Bhoggomanto Poddar, 8 C, 923 (1882) [when a person who, by an order of the Collector passed under the provisions of the Land Registration Act (VII of 1876, B C), has been declared to be out of possession of land, brings a suit for its recovery it lies upon him in the first instance to make out a primâ facie case But see also Omrunnissa Bibee v Dilwar Ally, 10 C, 350 (1884), and as to whether registration is any evidence of title, see p 373, note (5) ante], Ratan Kuar v Jiwan Singh, 1 A, 194 (1876); Ramchandra Apaji v Balaji, 9 B, 137 (1884), Walkar v. Atmaram, 14 W. R, 478 (1870), Huri Ram v. Raj Coomar, 8 C, 759 (1882); Soonatun Saha v. Ramjoy Saha, Marshall's Rep, 549 (1863), Rajah Mahesh v Keshanund Misr, M I A, 324, 339 (1862), 5 W R, P C 7 [sale under Beng Reg XX of 1795] Tiery v Kristo-dhun Bose, 1 I A, 76, 83 (1873); [expediency of insisting on strict proof on part of plaintiff in ejectment] Ranee Shornomoyee v Watson & Co, 20 W. R, 211 (1873), [it is immaterial to consider whether or not the land is the property of of the defendant] Sham Narain v Court of Wards, 20 W R, 197 (1873), Shah Gulam v Mohammed Akbar, 8 Mad. H C R, 63 (1875), Ashrooffoonissa Begum v Rughoonath Sohoy, 2 W R, 267 (1865); Chunder Monee v Raj Kishore, 5 W. R, 246 (1866), Mussamut Hurrosoondery v Ameena Begum, 1 Jur N S, 188 (1866); and cases cited post passim

(2) Hari Chintaman v Moro Lakshman, 11 B, 99 (1886)

(3) Hari Khardu v Dhondhi Natha, 8 B L R, 96

(4) Haider Khan v Secretary of State for India in Council, P. C (1908), 36 C, p 1, Ram Chandra Apaji v. Balaji Bhaurav, 9 B, 137, 140 (1884) The policy of the Law is favourable to presumptions arising from lapse of time, Wharton, Ev, § 1338

(5) George Clarke v Bindabun Chunder, W R, F B., 20 (1862)

(6) Dharani Kanta Lahiri Choudhuri v Gabar Ali Khan, 17 C. W. N, 389 (1913)

is one of general application, and the presumption upon which it proceeds has been applied to other cases than those particularly mentioned in the section (1)

Burden of proof as to ownership

110. When the question is whether any person is owner of anything of which he is shown to be in possession, the burden of proving that he is not the owner is on the person who affirms that he is not the owner.

Principle—Possession affords primâ facie presumption of ownership, for men generally own what they possess (2) Therefore when nothing else is known the person in possession of property is presumed to be the owner.(3) See Notes, post.

s. 101 (Burden of Proof.)

Taylor, Ev., §§ 123—127; Markby, Ev., 84, 85; Wharton, Ev., §§ 1331—1359; Lawson on Presumptive Evidence, 440; Best on Presumptive Evidence, 87—169; Pollock and Wright, Possession in the Common Law.

COMMENTARY.

Possession

A person in possession of land without title has an interest in the property which is h[illegible] except the true owner, res, is capable of being e same way as it could t if a person claiming opponent casts upon the former the burden of proof. Possession of movable or immovable property is presumptive proof of ownership, because men generally own the property which they possess. When, therefore, a person is in possession of anything, the presumption of ownership being in his favour, the burden of showing that that person is not the owner of that of which he has possession is on the person who affirms it. So a plaintiff seeking to eject a defendant from property of which the latter has possession, and to obtain possession thereof for himself, must recover by the strength of his own legal title, and cannot in the first instance call upon the defendant to show the title under which he holds He must succeed by the strength of his own title and not by reason of the weakness of his opponents. It is immaterial therefore to consider in such a case whether the property in question belongs to the defendant or not, because whether it does so belong or not, unless it be proved that the property belongs to the plaintiff, the latter is not entitled to turn the defendant out of possession. This presumption in favour of the person in possession is of the greatest practical importance in this country, especially in relation to disputes as to the ownership of land, the commonest of all disputes. It is an imperative presumption; that is to say, the Court is bound to regard the ownership of the possessor as proved, unless and until it is disproved. But the plaintiff, by the very form of his suit, in a suit to recover possession, assumes that the defendant is in possession, and therefore provides his antagonist with a strong weapon of defence. This it is which lends importance to those disputes regarding possession, very often leading to bloodshed, which the provisions of the Code of

(1) See Obhoy Churn v. Huri Nath, 8 C., 72, 79 (1881). So, according to Hindu law, a joint family is presumed to remain so, until evidence of division has been given. See s 114, post.

(2) Webb v. Fox, 4 R. R., 472, per Lord Kenyon. The presumption arising from possession has also been elsewhere recognised by the Indian Legislature, both in criminal and civil proceedings See Cr. Pr. Code, s 145, Act I of 1877 (Specific Relief), s 9.

(3) Raghoba v. Palhoba, 45 I C., 217.

(4) Gobind Prasad v. Mohan Lal, 24 A., 157 (1901).

Criminal Procedure (Chapter XII) and the Penal Code (sections 154, 158), and the 9th section of Act I of 1877 were specially intended to suppress Not a few of these disputes are preliminary skirmishes, the object of which is to secure the advantageous position of defendant in the civil suit which must ultimately determine the question of ownership.(1) Where a person is shown to be in possession of property, he is under this section to be presumed to be the owner of it (2) According to this section, possession is primâ facie evidence of a complete title because it is the sum of the acts of ownership. This applies both to prior and to present possession Thus possession has a two-fold value ; it is evidence of ownership and is itself the foundation of a right to possession (3) Any one who would oust the possessor must establish a right to do so. The law leans in favour of possession and an apparent right exercised for many years It requires the claimant to make out a clear case and to succeed by the strength of the title he sets up.(4)

Possession is evidence of title, and gives a good title as against a wrong-doer ; but a person who has not had possession, cannot, without proof of title turn another out of possession, even though that other may have no title , for possession is a good title against every one who cannot prove a better.(5) In a suit for ejectment, a plaintiff must prove that he has been dispossessed or has discontinued possession within twelve years in addition to proving his title as against the defendants.(6)

A Magistrate, trying a case under section 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code, in determining the question of possession, took into consideration the question of title. Held, that he had a right to discuss the question of title, if in his opinion it was material upon the question of possession , and that the mere fact that he had considered and discussed the question of title, could not

---

(1) Markby, Ev. Act, 84, 85, Seviaji Vijaya v Chinna Nayana, 10 M I A, 151 (1864), Jowala Buksh v Dhar Singh, 10 M I A, 511, 528, 529 (1866); Ram Rutton v Furrookoonnissa Begum, 4 M I A, 233 (1847), Rajah Burdacant v Chunder Coomar, 12 M I A, 145 (1868), 2 B L R, P C, 1 [In a case of disputed boundaries when one of the claimants is in possession by virtue of a Magistrate's order (see ss 145—148, Cr Pr Code), it lies on the party seeking to oust him to show a better title to the land claimed than that of the party in possession see also Hari Ram v Bhikaree Roy, 25 W R, 20 (1876)], Kalee Narain v. Annund Moyee, 21 W R, 79 (1874), Mudun Mohun v Bhoggomanto Poddar, 8 C, 923 (1882) [when a person who, by an order of the Collector passed under the provisions of the Land Registration Act (VII of 1876, B C), has been declared to be out of possession of land, brings a suit for its recovery, it lies upon him in the first instance to make out a primâ facie case But see also Omrunnissa Bibee v Dilwar Ally, 10 C, 350 (1884), and as to whether registration is any evidence of title, see p 373, note (5) ante], Ratan Kuar v Jiwan Singh, 1 A, 194 (1876), Ramchandra Apaji v Balaji, 9 B, 137 (1884), Walkar v Atmaram, 14 W R, 478 (1870), Huri Ram v Raj Coomar, 8 C, 759 (1882), Soonatun Saha v Ramjoy Saha, Marshall's Rep, 549 (1863), Rajah Mahesh v Keshanund Misr, M I A, 324, 339 (1862), 5 W R, P C, 7 [sale under Beng Reg XX of 1795], Tiery v Kristodhun Bose, 1 I A, 76, 83 (1873), [expediency of insisting on strict proof on part of plaintiff in ejectment] Ranee Shornomoyee v Watson & Co, 20 W R, 211 (1873), [it is immaterial to consider whether or not the land is the property of of the defendant] Sham Narain v Court of Wards, 20 W R, 197 (1873), Shah Gulam v Mohammed Akbar, 8 Mad H C R, 63 (1875); Ashrooffoonissa Begum v Rughoonath Sohoy, 2 W R, 267 (1865), Chunder Monee v Raj Kishore, 5 W R, 246 (1866), Mussamut Hurrosoondery v Ameena Begum, 1 Jur N S, 188 (1866), and cases cited post passim

(2) Hari Chintaman v Moro Lakshman, 11 B, 99 (1886)

(3) Hari Khardu v Dhondhi Natha, 8 B L R, 96

(4) Haider Khan v Secretary of State for India in Council, P. C. (1908), 36 C, p 1, Ram Chandra Apaji v Balaji Bhaurav, 9 B, 137, 140 (1884) The policy of the Law is favourable to presumptions arising from lapse of time, Wharton, Ev, § 1338

(5) George Clarke v Bindabun Chunder, W R, F B, 20 (1862)

(6) Dharani Kanta Lahiri Chowdhuri v Gabar Ali Khan, 17 C. W N., 389 (1913)

is one of general application, and the presumption upon which it proceeds has been applied to other cases than those particularly mentioned in the section.(1)

Burden of proof as to ownership

110. When the question is whether any person is owner of anything of which he is shown to be in possession, the burden of proving that he is not the owner is on the person who affirms that he is not the owner.

Principle.—Possession affords primâ facie presumption of ownership, for men generally own what they possess.(2) Therefore when nothing else is known the person in possession of property is presumed to be the owner.(3) See Notes, post.

s. 101 (Burden of Proof)

Taylor, Ev., §§ 123—127. Markby, Ev., 84, 85; Wharton, Ev., §§ 1331—1359, Lawson on Presumptive Evidence, 440; Best on Presumptive Evidence, 87—160; Pollock and Wright, Possession in the Common Law.

COMMENTARY.

Possession

A person in possession of land without title has an interest in the property which is heritable and good against all the world except the true owner, an interest which, unless and until the true owner interferes, is capable of being disposed of by deed or will or by execution-sale, just in the same way as it could be dealt with if the title were unimpeachable.(4) But if a person claiming to be the true owner does interfere, the possession of his opponent casts upon the former the burden of proof. Possession of movable or immovable property is presumptive proof of ownership, because men generally own the property which they possess. When, therefore, a person is in possession of anything, the presumption of ownership being in his favour, the burden of showing that that person is not the owner of that of which he has possession is on the person who affirms it. So a plaintiff seeking to eject a defendant from property of which the latter has possession, and to obtain possession thereof for himself, must recover by the strength of his own legal title, and cannot in the first instance call upon the defendant to show the title under which he holds. He must succeed by the strength of his own title and not by reason of the weakness of his opponents. It is immaterial therefore to consider in such a case whether the property in question belongs to the defendant or not, because whether it does so belong or not, unless it be proved that the property belongs to the plaintiff, the latter is not entitled to turn the defendant out of possession. This presumption in favour of the person in possession is of the greatest practical importance in this country, especially in relation to disputes as to the ownership of land, the commonest of all disputes. It is an imperative presumption; that is to say, the Court is bound to regard the ownership of the possessor as proved, unless and until it is disproved. But the plaintiff, by the very form of his suit, in a suit to recover possession, assumes that the defendant is in possession, and therefore provides his antagonist with a strong weapon of defence. This it is which lends importance to those disputes regarding possession, very often leading to bloodshed, which the provisions of the Code of

(1) See Obhoy Churn v. Huri Nath, 8 C., 72, 79 (1881). So, according to Hindu law, a joint family is presumed to remain so, until evidence of division has been given. See s. 114, post.

(2) Webb v. Fox, 4 R. R., 472, per Lord Kenyon. The presumption arising from possession has also been elsewhere recognised by the Indian Legislature, both in criminal and civil proceedings. See Cr. Pr. Code, s. 145, Act I of 1877 (Specific Relief), s. 9.

(3) Raghoba v. Palhoba, 45 I. C., 217.

(4) Gobind Prasad v. Mohan Lal, 24 A., 157 (1901).

Criminal Procedure (Chapter XII) and the Penal Code (sections 154, 158), and the 9th section of Act I of 1877 were specially intended to suppress Not a few of these disputes are preliminary skirmishes, the object of which is to secure the advantageous position of defendant in the civil suit which must ultimately determine the question of ownership.(1) Where a person is shown to be in possession of property, he is under this section to be presumed to be the owner of it (2) According to this section, possession is primâ facie evidence of a complete title because it is the sum of the acts of ownership. This applies both to prior and to present possession Thus possession has a two-fold value ; it is evidence of ownership and is itself the foundation of a right to possession (3) Any one who would oust the possessor must establish a right to do so. The law leans in favour of possession and an apparent right exercised for many years. It requires the claimant to make out a clear case and to succeed by the strength of the title he sets up.(4)

Possession is evidence of title, and gives a good title as against a wrong-doer ; but a person who has not had possession, cannot, without proof of title turn another out of possession, even though that other may have no title , for possession is a good title against every one who cannot prove a better.(5) In a suit for ejectment, a plaintiff must prove that he has been dispossessed or has discontinued possession within twelve years in addition to proving his title as against the defendants (6)

A Magistrate, trying a case under section 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code, in determining the question of possession, took into consideration the question of title. Held, that he had a right to discuss the question of title, if in his opinion it was material upon the question of possession , and that the mere fact that he had considered and discussed the question of title, could not

(1) Markby, Ev , Act, 84, 85, Seviaji Vijaya v Chinna Nayana, 10 M I A, 151 (1864), Jowala Buksh v Dhar Singh, 10 M I A, 511, 528, 529 (1866) ; Ram Rutton v Furrookoonnissa Begum, 4 M I A, 233 (1847), Rajah Burdacant v Chunder Coomar, 12 M I A, 145 (1868), 2 B L R, P C, 1 [In a case of disputed boundaries when one of the claimants is in possession by virtue of a Magistrate's order (see ss 145—148, Cr Pr Code), it lies on the party seeking to oust him to show a better title to the land claimed than that of the party in possession see also Hari Ram v Bhikaree Roy, 25 W R, 20 (1876)], Kalee Narain v Annund Moyee, 21 W R, 79 (1874), Mudun Mohun v Bhoggomanto Poddar, 8 C, 923 (1882) [when a person who, by an order of the Collector passed under the provisions of the Land Registration Act (VII of 1876, B C), has been declared to be out of possession of land, brings a suit for its recovery, it lies upon him in the first instance to make out a primâ facie case But see also Omrunnissa Bibee v Dilwar Ally, 10 C, 350 (1884), and as to whether registration is any evidence of title, see p 373, note (5) ante], Ratan Kuar v Jiwan Singh, 1 A, 194 (1876), Ramchandra Apaji v Balaji, 9 B, 137 (1884), Walkar v Atmaram, 14 W R, 478 (1870), Hari Ram v. Raj Coomar, 8 C, 759 (1882), Soonatun Saha v Ramjoy Saha, Marshall's Rep, 549 (1863), Rajah Mahesh v Keshanund Misr, M I A, 324, 339 (1862), 5 W R, P C, 7 [sale under Beng Reg XX of 1795], Tiery v Kristo-dhun Bose, 1 I A, 76, 83 (1873); [expediency of insisting on strict proof on part of plaintiff in ejectment] Ranee Shornomoyee v Watson & Co, 20 W R, 211 (1873), [it is immaterial to consider whether or not the land is the property of of the defendant] Sham Narain v Court of Wards, 20 W R, 197 (1873), Shah Gulam v Mohammed Akbar, 8 Mad H C R, 63 (1875), Ashrooffoonissa Begum v Rughoonath Sohoy, 2 W R, 267 (1865), Chunder Monee v Raj Kishore, 5 W R, 246 (1866), Mussamut Hurrosoondery v Ameena Begum, 1 Jur N S, 188 (1866), and cases cited post passim

(2) Hari Chintaman v Moro Lakshman, 11 B, 99 (1886)

(3) Hari Khardu v Dhondhi Natha, 8 B L R, 96

(4) Haider Khan v Secretary of State for India in Council, P C (1908), 36 C, p 1, Ram Chandra Apaji v Balaji Bhaurav, 9 B, 137, 140 (1884) The policy of the Law is favourable to presumptions arising from lapse of time, Wharton, Ev, § 1338

(5) George Clarke v Bindabun Chunder, W R, F B, 20 (1862)

(6) Dharani Kanta Lahiri Chowdhuri v Gabar Ali Khan, 17 C W N, 389 (1913)

is one of general application, and the presumption upon which it proceeds has been applied to other cases than those particularly mentioned in the section (1)

Burden of proof as to ownership

110. When the question is whether any person is owner of anything of which he is shown to be in possession, the burden of proving that he is not the owner is on the person who affirms that he is not the owner.

Principle —Possession affords primâ facie presumption of ownership, for men generally own what they possess (2) Therefore when nothing else is known the person in possession of property is presumed to be the owner.(3) See Notes, post.

s. 101 (Burden of Proof)

Taylor, Ev., §§ 123—127 . Markby, Ev., 84, 85; Wharton, Ev., §§ 1331—1359, Lawson on Presumptive Evidence, 440; Best on Presumptive Evidence, 87—169; Pollock and Wright, Possession in the Common Law.

COMMENTARY.

Possession.

A person in possession of land without title has an interest in the property which is heritable and good against all the world except the true owner, an interest which, unless and until the true owner interferes, is capable of being disposed of by deed or will or by execution-sale, just in the same way as it could be dealt with if the title were unimpeachable.(4) But if a person claiming to be the true owner does interfere, the possession of his opponent casts upon the former the burden of proof. Possession of movable or immovable property is presumptive proof of ownership, because men generally own the property which they possess. When, therefore, a person is in possession of anything, the presumption of ownership being in his favour, the burden of showing that that person is not the owner of that of which he has possession is on the person who affirms it. So a plaintiff seeking to eject a defendant from property of which the latter has possession, and to obtain possession thereof for himself, must recover by the strength of his own legal title, and cannot in the first instance call upon the defendant to show the title under which he holds. He must succeed by the strength of his own title and not by reason of the weakness of his opponents. It is immaterial therefore to consider in such a case whether the property in question belongs to the defendant or not, because whether it does so belong or not, unless it be proved that the property belongs to the plaintiff, the latter is not entitled to turn the defendant out of possession. This presumption in favour of the person in possession is of the greatest practical importance in this country, especially in relation to disputes as to the ownership of land, the commonest of all disputes. It is an imperative presumption; that is to say, the Court is bound to regard the ownership of the possessor as proved, unless and until it is disproved. But the plaintiff, by the very form of his suit, in a suit to recover possession, assumes that the defendant is in possession, and therefore provides his antagonist with a strong weapon of defence. This it is which lends importance to those disputes regarding possession, very often leading to bloodshed, which the provisions of the Code of

(1) See Obhoy Churn v. Hurt Nath, 8 C., 72, 79 (1881). So, according to Hindu law, a joint family is presumed to remain so, until evidence of division has been given. See s. 114, post.

(2) Webb v. Fox, 4 R R., 472, per Lord Kenyon. The presumption arising from possession has also been elsewhere recognised by the Indian Legislature, both in criminal and civil proceedings See Cr. Pr. Code, s 145, Act I of 1877 (Specific Relief), s 9.

(3) Raghoba v. Palhoba, 45 I. C, 217.

(4) Gobind Prasad v Mohan Lal, 24 A. 157 (1901).

Criminal Procedure (Chapter XII) and the Penal Code (sections 154, 158), and the 9th section of Act I of 1877 were specially intended to suppress Not a few of these disputes are preliminary skirmishes, the object of which is to secure the advantageous position of defendant in the civil suit which must ultimately determine the question of ownership.(1) Where a person is shown to be in possession of property, he is under this section to be presumed to be the owner of it (2) According to this section, possession is primâ facie evidence of a complete title because it is the sum of the acts of ownership. This applies both to prior and to present possession Thus possession has a two-fold value ; it is evidence of ownership and is itself the foundation of a right to possession (3) Any one who would oust the possessor must establish a right to do so The law leans in favour of possession and an apparent right exercised for many years. It requires the claimant to make out a clear case and to succeed by the strength of the title he sets up (4)

Possession is evidence of title, and gives a good title as against a wrong-doer; but a person who has not had possession, cannot, without proof of title turn another out of possession, even though that other may have no title , for possession is a good title against every one who cannot prove a better.(5) In a suit for ejectment, a plaintiff must prove that he has been dispossessed or has discontinued possession within twelve years in addition to proving his title as against the defendants (6)

A Magistrate, trying a case under section 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code, in determining the question of possession, took into consideration the question of title. Held, that he had a right to discuss the question of title, if in his opinion it was material upon the question of possession , and that the mere fact that he had considered and discussed the question of title, could not

(1) Markby, Ev , Act, 84, 85. Seviaji Vijaya v Chinna Nayana, 10 M I A, 151 (1864), Jowala Buksh v Dhar Singh, 10 M I A, 511, 528, 529 (1866), Ram Rutton v. Furrookoonnissa Begum, 4 M I A, 233 (1847), Rajah Burdacant v Chunder Coomar, 12 M I A, 145 (1868), 2 B L R, P C, 1 [In a case of disputed boundaries when one of the claimants is in possession by virtue of a Magistrate's order (see ss 145—148, Cr Pr Code), it lies on the party seeking to oust him to show a better title to the land claimed than that of the party in possession: see also Hari Ram v Bhikaree Roy, 25 W. R, 20 (1876)], Kalee Narain v. Annund Moyee, 21 W R, 79 (1874), Mudun Mohun v. Bhoggomanto Poddar, 8 C, 923 (1882) [when a person who, by an order of the Collector passed under the provisions of the Land Registration Act (VII of 1876, B C), has been declared to be out of possession of land, brings a suit for its recovery, it lies upon him in the first instance to make out a primâ facie case But see also Omrunnissa Bibee v. Dilwar Ally, 10 C, 350 (1884), and as to whether registration is any evidence of title, see p 373, note (5) ante], Ratan Kuar v. Jiwan Singh, 1 A, 194 (1876), Ramchandra Apaji v Balaji, 9 B, 137 (1884); Walkar v. Atmaram, 14 W. R, 478 (1870); Huri Ram v. Raj Coomar, 8 C, 759 (1882); Soonatun Saha v. Ramjoy Saha, Marshall's Rep, 549 (1863), Rajah Mahesh v Keshanund Misr, M I A, 324, 339 (1862), 5 W R, P C 7 [sale under Beng Reg XX of 1795], Tiery v Kristo-dhun Bose, 1 I A, 76, 83 (1873), [expediency of insisting on strict proof on part of plaintiff in ejectment] Ranee Shornomoyee v Watson & Co, 20 W R, 211 (1873), [it is immaterial to consider whether or not the land is the property of of the defendant] Sham Narain v Court of Wards, 20 W R, 197 (1873), Shah Gulam v Mohammed Akbar, 8 Mad H C R, 63 (1875), Ashrooffoonissa Begum v Rughoonath Sohoy, 2 W R, 267 (1865), Chunder Monee v Raj Kishore, 5 W R, 246 (1866), Mussamut Hurrosoondery v Ameena Begum, 1 Jur N S, 188 (1866), and cases cited post passim

(2) Hari Chintaman v Moro Lakshman, 11 B, 99 (1886)

(3) Hari Khardu v Dhondhi Natha, 8 B L R, 96

(4) Haider Khan v Secretary of State for India in Council, P C (1908), 36 C, p 1, Ram Chandra Apaji v Balaji Bhaurav, 9 B, 137, 140 (1884) The policy of the Law is favourable to presumptions arising from lapse of time, Wharton, Ev, § 1338

(5) George Clarke v Bindabun Chunder, W R, F B, 20 (1862)

(6) Dharani Kanta Lahiri Chowdhuri v Gabar Ali Khan, 17 C W N, 389 (1913)

is one of general application, and the presumption upon which it proceeds has been applied to other cases than those particularly mentioned in the section.(1)

Burden of proof as to ownership

110. When the question is whether any person is owner of anything of which he is shown to be in possession, the burden of proving that he is not the owner is on the person who affirms that he is not the owner.

Principle —Possession affords primâ facie presumption of ownership, for men generally own what they possess.(2) Therefore when nothing else is known the person in possession of property is presumed to be the owner.(3) See Notes, post.

s. 101 (Burden of Proof.)

Taylor, Ev., §§ 123—127 : Markby, Ev., 84, 85 ; Wharton, Ev, §§ 1331—1359 ; Lawson on Presumptive Evidence, 440 ; Best on Presumptive Evidence, 87—169 ; Pollock and Wright, Possession in the Common Law.

COMMENTARY.

Possession.

A person in possession of land without title has an interest in the property which is heritable and good against all the world except the true owner, an interest which, unless and until [illegible] of being disposed of by deed or will or by e[illegible] be dealt with if the title were [illegible] to be the true owner does interfe[illegible] the former the burden of proof. Possession of movable or immovable property is presumptive proof of ownership, because men generally own the property which they possess. When, therefore, a person is in possession of anything, the presumption [illegible] the burden of showing that that person is not [illegible] has possession is on the person who affirms it. [illegible] a defendant from property of which the latter has possession, and to obtain possession thereof for himself, must recover by the strength of his own legal title, and cannot in the first instance call upon the defendant to show the title under which he holds He must succeed by the strength of his own title and not by reason of the weakness of his opponents. It is immaterial therefore to consider in such a case whether the property in question belongs to the defendant or not, because whether it does so belong or not, unless it be proved that the property belongs to the plaintiff, the latter is not entitled to turn the defendant out of possession. This presumption in favour of the person in possession is of the greatest practical importance in this country, especially in relation to disputes as to the ownership of land, the commonest of all disputes. It is an imperative presumption; that is to say, the Court is bound to regard the ownership of the possessor as proved, unless and until it is disproved. But the plaintiff, by the very form of his suit, in a suit to recover possession, assumes that the defendant is in possession, and therefore provides his antagonist with a strong weapon of defence. This it is which lends importance to those disputes regarding possession, very often leading to bloodshed, which the provisions of the Code of

(1) See Obhoy Churn v. Huri Nath, 8 C. 72, 79 (1881). So, according to Hindu law, a joint family is presumed to remain so, until evidence of division has been given See s 114, post.

(2) Webb v. Fox, 4 R. R., 472, per Lord Kenyon. The presumption arising from possession has also been elsewhere recognised by the Indian Legislature, both in criminal and civil proceedings See Cr Pr. Code, s 145, Act I of 1877 (Specific Relief), s. 9

(3) Raghoba v. Palhoba, 45 I C. 217.

(4) Gobind Prasad v. Mohan Lal, 24 A. 157 (1901).

to a village site was vested in the government it was held that the plaintiff in order to oust the government had to prove either that his title was better than that of the Secretary of State or that he had obtained a title by adverse possession of sixty years (1) A rebuttable presumption of law being contested by proof of facts showing otherwise, which are denied, the presumption loses its value, unless the evidence is equal on both sides, in which case it should turn the scale (2) It is, therefore, only when there is no evidence of possession either way, or when the evidence of possession is strong on both sides and apparently equally balanced, that the presumption that possession goes with title should prevail. The principle does not apply where the evidence of possession is equally unworthy of reliance on both sides (3) When it is not shown that defendant's possession began as a tenant, and it is not proved that the plaintiff received any rent from the defendant during twelve years prior to the filing of the suit, the plaintiff's suit for possession must be dismissed; for the defendant's possession must be presumed to be that of an owner and adverse to the plaintiff (4)

Ordinarily in the case of property held in common the possession of a co-sharer is the possession of all. In a case in which co-sharers set up a title adverse to a co-sharer, it lies upon them to show at what time their possession became adverse or that there was clear and definite abandonment with intention.(5) Possession by one co-sharer will not be adverse to others till they have notice of the hostile claim.(6) When one co-sharer has been in possession of land for a long time and has erected buildings on it the presumption is that he is in possession with the consent of the others (7) When the defendant to a suit for possession of land pleads adverse possession, it lies in the first instance upon the plaintiff to prove that he was in possession at some time within twelve years of the suit (8) But the onus is then on the defendant to show at what time his adverse possession began (9)

In the case of the owner of land seeking to recover possession on the allegation that the party in possession has no right to continue in it, and showing a primâ facie title to possession, he can claim a decree, unless the party in possession has a tenure entitling him to retain possession.(10) Thus in a suit to recover possession, the plaintiff, who was admittedly the zemindar, alleged, but failed to prove, that the land was her zeerat. The defendants, who claimed to have acquired rights of occupancy, failed to prove that they had acquired such rights or that they were tenants of the plaintiff It was under such circumstances held that the plaintiff being admittedly the zemindar was entitled to a decree, the defendants having failed to establish their defence (11) Upon a similar principle a [illegible] collections of all the mauza [illegible] of proof is upon a person [illegible]

---

(1) Vasta Balwant v Secretary of State 45 B, 789 (1921)

(2) Lawson, op cit, 756.

(3) Thakur Singh v Bhogeraj Singh, 27 C 25 (1899), the last sentence (which is taken from the head-note) is not expressly stated in, but appears to be implied by the judgment Apparently the evidence given negatived the presumption, otherwise the case put is similar to that where there is no evidence.

(4) Ram Monee v Aleemoodeen, 20 W. R, 374 (1873); see also Raj Kishen v Pearce Mohun, 20 W. R, 421 (1873).

(5) Behari v. Sadho Mal, 73 P. L R (1856), as to adverse possession by co-heirs, see Mangal Singh v Mussamat Shankari, 50 I C, 746

(6) Velayuthan Pillai v. Subbaroya Pillai, A C., 39 M, 879 (1916)

(7) Lahaso Kuar v. Mahabir Tiwari, 37 A, 412 (1915).

(8) Haji v Gohna, 39 P. L. R (1906)

(9) Mashar Hasan v. Behari Singh (1905), A. W. N, 234

(10) Gunpat Rao v. Gunpat Rao, 2 N. L. R, 32.

(11) Batai Ahir v. Bhuggobutty Koer, 11 C. L. R, 476 (1882); and see Narsing Narain v Dharam Thakur, 9 C. W. N., 144 (1904).

invalidate his decision on the point of possession, provided that there was evidence before him as to who was in possession. Semble—In the absence of any other evidence of possession, a Magistrate would be justified in finding possession to be with a person to whom symbolical possession has been shown to have been given in execution of a decree, although possibly slight evidence would be sufficient to rebut such evidence of possession.(1) It has been held that section 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code deals only with rights to absolute continuous possession and thus does not give jurisdiction when a party only claims the right to worship on one day of the year and prepare for the puja.(2) In this case it was said that constructive conditional possession is a right in the nature of an easement and not of possession and it was also [illegible] that section when "the public" is a party [illegible] parties and the possession is joint. Under [illegible] Magistrate should on the day fixed take all the evidence produced and (unless he considers further evidence necessary) give his decision.(3) A declaration made by a Magistrate on insufficient evidence when other evidence was available is without jurisdiction.(4)

When a plaintiff sues for declaration of title to property, of which the defendant is in possession, but of which the plaintiff produces the title-deeds in his favour and the defendant admits them, the onus is on the latter to disprove the plaintiff's title.(5)

When a plaintiff sued to recover possession of certain lands, alleging that they had been granted by his ancestor to one PR, to be held in jagheer tenure by PR, and his lineal descendants, that PR's lineal descendants had failed, and therefore plaintiff was entitled to resume possession, it was held that it lay upon the plaintiff to prove the grant to PR in the first instance; and that, until he had done this, he had no standing in Court at all.(6)

The ordinary presumption is that possession goes with the title: that presumption cannot, of course, be of any avail in the presence of clear evidence to the contrary; but where there is strong evidence of possession on the part of one side, opposed by evidence apparently strong also on the part of the other, in such cases in estimating the weight due to the evidence on both sides, the presumption may, when the circumstances of the particular case require it, be regarded.(7) A presumption, however, cannot contradict facts or overcome facts proved.(8) Thus as it is a recognized fact that permission to occupy land in Cantonments is often given, such occupation or possession raises no presumption of ownership and the burden of proof of it would be on the claimant (9) In the absence of evidence to the contrary the presumption is that the Government and not the mirashiders are owners of house-sites in a mirasi village.(10) Where under old customary law and section 37 of the Bombay Land Revenue Code the presumption arose that the title,

(1) Raja Babu v Mudun Mohan, 14 C., 169 (1886) See Woodroffe's Criminal Procedure in India, commentary to S. 145 of that Code

(2) Manick Chandra Chakrabutty v. Preonath Kuar, 17 C L. J., 397 (1913).

(3) Haripada Mundle v Sanyasi Charan Biswas 17 C L. J., 610 (1913)

(4) Juthan Singh v Ramnarayan Singh, 18 C W N., 700 (1914.)

(5) Swarnamayi Raur v. Srinibash Koyal, 6 B L R, 149 (1870).

(6) Maharajah Juggernath v. Ahlad Kowar, 19 W. R., 140 (1873).

(7) Runjeet Ram v. Goburdhon Ram, 20 W R, 25, 30 (1873). Dharm Singh v. Hur Pershad, 12 C., 35 (1885); Mahomed Bassir v. Kureem Baksh, 11 W. R, 268 (1869); Rajkumar Ray v. Gobind Chunder, 19 C., 660, 673 (1891).

(8) Lawson, Presumptive Evidence, 576. Presumptions stand only till they are overcome by facts. Whitaker v. Morrison, 44 Am Dec, 627 (Amer.) They have no place for consideration when the evidence is disclosed or the averment is made, Galpin v Page, 18 Wall, 364 (Amer.), cited in Lawson, loc. cit

(9) Kaikhusru Aderji v. Secretary of State P. C., 36 B, 1 (1912).

(10) Sehaschala Chetty v. Chinnasami, F. B, 40 M., 410 (1917).

to a village site was vested in the government it was held that the plaintiff in order to oust the government had to prove either that his title was better than that of the Secretary of State or that he had obtained a title by adverse possession of sixty years (1) A rebuttable presumption of law being contested by proof of facts showing otherwise, which are denied, the presumption loses its value, unless the evidence is equal on both sides, in which case it should turn the scale.(2) It is, therefore, only when there is no evidence of possession either way, or when the evidence of possession is strong on both sides and apparently equally balanced, that the presumption that possession goes with title should prevail. The principle does not apply where the evidence of possession is equally unworthy of reliance on both sides (3) When it is not shown that defendant's possession began as a tenant, and it is not proved that the plaintiff received any rent from the defendant during twelve years prior to the filing of the suit, the plaintiff's suit for possession must be dismissed; for the defendant's possession must be presumed to be that of an owner and adverse to the plaintiff (4)

Ordinarily in the case of property held in common the possession of a co-sharer is the possession of all. In a case in which co-sharers set up a title adverse to a co-sharer, it lies upon them to show at what time their possession became adverse or that there was clear and definite abandonment with intention (5) Possession by one co-sharer will not be adverse to others till they have notice of the hostile claim (6) When one co sharer has been in possession of land for a long time and has erected buildings on it the presumption is that he is in possession with the consent of the others (7) When the defendant to a suit for possession of land pleads adverse possession, it lies in the first instance upon the plaintiff to prove that he was in possession at some time within twelve years of the suit.(8) But the onus is then on the defendant to show at what time his adverse possession began (9)

In the case of the owner of land seeking to recover possession on the allegation that the party in possession has no right to continue in it, and showing a primâ facie title to possession, he can claim a decree, unless the party in possession has a tenu in a suit to recover possession, alleged, but failed to prove, that claimed to have acquired rights of occupancy, failed to prove that they had acquired such rights or that they were tenants of the plaintiff. It was under such circumstances held that the plaintiff being admittedly the zemindar was entitled to a decree, the defendants having failed to establish their defence (11) Upon a similar principle a zemindar has as such a primâ facie title to the gross collections of all the mauzahs or villages within his zemindary, and the burden of proof is upon a person who seeks to defeat that right by proving that he is

---

(1) Vasta Balwant v Secretary of State 45 B, 789 (1921)

(2) Lawson, op cit, 756

(3) Thakur Singh v Bhogeraj Singh, 27 C, 25 (1899), the last sentence (which is taken from the head note) is not expressly stated in, but appears to be implied by the judgment Apparently the evidence given negatived the presumption, otherwise the case put is similar to that where there is no evidence

(4) Ram Monee v Aleemoodeen, 20 W R, 374 (1873), see also Raj Kishen v Pearee Mohun, 20 W R, 421 (1873)

(5) Behari v Sadho Mal, 73 P L R (1856), as to adverse possession by co-heirs, see Mangal Singh v Mussamat Shankari, 50 I C, 746

(6) Velayuthan Pillai v Subbaroya Pillai, A C, 39 M, 879 (1916)

(7) Lahaso Kuar v Mahabir Tiwari, 37 A, 412 (1915)

(8) Haji v Gohna, 39 P L R (1906)

(9) Mashar Hasan v Behari Singh (1906), A W N, 234

(10) Gunpat Rao v Gunpat Rao, 2 N L R, 32

(11) Batai Ahir v Bhuggobutty Koer, 11 C L R, 476 (1882), and see Narsing Narain v Dharam Thakur, 9 C W N, 144 (1904)

entitled to an intermediate tenure.(1) And in the undermentioned case it was held by the Privy Council that while it is for the plaintiff in ejectment to prove possession prior to alleged dispossession, at the same time on this question of evidence the material fact of his title comes to his aid with greater or less force according to the circumstances established in evidence.(2) In a suit for a declaration that the bed of a navigable river formed part of a permanently settled estate, the onus was laid on the plaintiffs to show that lands, the bed of the river, receding from the bed, were included in their permanently settled estate and that at the date of the Permanent Settlement they were narrow channles.(3)

Orders for possession under Act XXV of 1861, section 318, Act X of 1872 section 530, and X of 1882, section 145, relating to "disputes as to immovable property" are merely police-orders made to prevent breaches of the peace and decide no question of title. Such orders are admissible in evidence on general principles as well as under the Evidence Act (I of 1872) section 13, to show the fact that such orders were made. This necessarily makes them evidence of the following facts appearing on the orders themselves, viz., who the parties to the dispute were; what the land in dispute was; and who was declared entitled to retain possession For this purpose and to this extent such orders are admissible in evidence for and against any one, when the fact of possession at the date of the order has to be ascertained. If the lands referred to in such an order are described by metes and bounds, or by reference to objects or marks physically existing, these must necessarily be ascertained by extrinsic evidence, i.e., the testimony of persons who know the locality. If the order refers to a map, that map is admissible in evidence to render the order intelligible and the actual situation of the objects drawn or otherwise indicated on the map must, as in all cases of the sort, be ascertained by extrinsic evidence. Reports accompanying the orders or maps and not referred to in the orders may be admissible as hearsay evidence of reputed possession; but they are not otherwise admissible, unless they are made so by the thirteenth section of the Evidence Act. Though an order for possession under the Criminal Procedure Code confers no title, yet the person in possession can only be evicted by a person who can prove a better right to the possession himself. Where, therefore, the plaintiff sued for possession of disputed land, of which the defendant had been, by an order under section 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1882) made in 1888, declared to be in possession. Held, that the onus was on the plaintiff to prove her title to the land Where, however, she had done so, and had obtained a decree in her favour, the onus is on the defendant (who is the appellant) to show that the decision of the High Court was [illegible] the Judicial Committee to reverse t[illegible] ust do something more than show t[illegible] bt, and must at least give some acceptable explanation of the circumstances which have led the Court below to its conclusion. The principle laid down in Raj Kumar Roy v. Gobind Chunder Roy(4) followed. When the plaintiff alleges his prior possession and subsequent dispossession by the defendant the burden is primarily upon him to establish that he was in possession within the statutory period But, in the determination of this question of possession the nature of the land must first be considered. If the land was wholly or partially subject to inundation by the water of a river, the plaintiff must be deemed to have been in possession of the submerged portion during the period that such tract was covered by water no matter who was in possession at the date of the

(1) Rajah Sahib v Doorgapershad Tewaree, 12 M I A, 331 (1869); s. c., 2 B L R (P C.), 134

(2) Rani Himanta Kumari v. Jagadindra Nath Roy (P C), 10 C. W. N, 630; 3 All L. J, 363; 8 Bom. L. R, 400

(3) Prafulla Nath Tagore v. Secretary of State, 24 C. W. N., 639 and 813

(4) (1892) 19 C., 660; L. R, 19 I A., 140

submergence.(1) In the case cited the plaintiffs sued for declaration of title and possession of certain lands lying on the boundary between their mouza and that of the defendants. It appeared that the defendants were in possession for some years previous to the suit by virtue of an order of the Criminal Court. [illegible] division runs between waste lands which have not been the subject of definite possession, must yield to the circumstances of the present case and the onus was on the plaintiff to show that the persons in possession under the order of the Magistrate had no right to possession.(2) In the next case the plaintiffs purchased a putni in execution of a decree for arrears of rent, and duly annulled a darputni which was in existence by notice under section 167 Bengal Tenancy Act Within twelve years of this purchase they sued for khas possession of the lands of two jamas, originally held by one R, and subsequently purchased by the defendant seven years after the creation of the darputni: held that it was for the plaintiffs to show that the zemindar was in possession of these lands before the creation of the putni and that the possession of the defendants commenced after the putni came into existence, or that such possession was not adverse (3)

In a case of disputed boundaries, to prove a map, a witness was called who had assisted as an Amin in preparing it with another Amin, who was dead; the witness had little or no knowledge of surveying but the Amin with whom it was prepared was a skilled surveyor, and the Collector (who was also dead) had tested the accuracy of the measurements. Held, that the map was sufficiently proved to be admissible in evidence (4)

Possession is a question which from its nature would seem to be very easily determinable; but in practice it is found to be one of the most difficult issues to decide in this country (5) The fact of possession, as every other fact (excluding the contents of documents), may be proved by oral evidence (6) A statement by a witness that a party is in possession, is, in point of law, admissible evidence of the fact that such party was in possession (7) General and vague statements are, however, of but little value The Court in the undermentioned case(8), observed upon this point as follows :—" Then, coming to the oral evidence, the testimony of all the witnesses is general in the extreme. They speak of the 'disputed land' They say that they saw plaintiffs 'in possession' They say they saw them 'collecting rents.' All these statements are general. And to persons who have had any experience in the Mofussil, and who know how easy it is to bring any number of witnesses into Court who will readily give general testimony of this nature, the absolute worthlessness of such evidence requires no demonstration." When the question relates to the occupation of comparatively waste or waste land, the smallest indication of occupation must be taken hold of and used as evidence in the determination of any matter of dispute with regard to it between the contending parties.(9) In Evidence and nature of possession

(1) Khedon Lal v Rajendra Narain Singh, 29 C L J, 259, s c, 51 I C, 70

(2) Manindra Chandra Nandi v Saradindu Ray, 23 C W N, 593

(3) Monmathanath Mitter v Anatha Bandhu Pal, 25 C W N., 106

(4) Dinomoni Choudrani v Brojomohini, 29 C, 187 (1902)

(5) See remarks of White, J, in Jibunti Nath v Shib Nath, 8 C, 819 (1882), at p 824

(6) See p 484, ante, and cases cited in note (6) ib

(7) Maniram Deb v Debi Charan, 4 B L R (F B), 97 (1869), Vithu Govinda v Ramji Yessuji, 8 Bom L R, 19, contra, Ishan Chander v Ram Lochun, 9 W. R, 79 (1868)

(8) Joytara Dasse v Mahomed Mobarack, 8 C, 975, 983, 984 (1882), per Field, J see also Allyat Chinaman v Juggut Chunder, 5 W R, 242, 243 (1866).

(9) Mussamut Nathukhee v Chowdhri Chinaman, 20 W. R., 247, 249 (1875), per Pheer, J, Mohima Chunder v Hurro Lall, 3 C, 768 (1878); s c., 2 C. L. R, 364.

a suit for possession of jungle lands, where there is no proof of acts of ownership having been exercised on either side, possession must be presumed to have continued with the person to whom they rightfully belong (1) Lands which have never been occupied for cultivation and which are of such a nature and description as that no one can be said to be in possession, may be presumed rightfully to belong to the parties with whom the title rests (2) "If there are two persons in a field each asserting that the field is his, and each doing some act in the assertion of the right of possession, and if the question is, which of these two is in actual possession, I answer the person who has the title is in actual possession, and the other person is a trespasser."(3) Possession is not necessarily the same thing as actual user. The nature of the possession to be looked for and the evidence of its continuance must depend upon the character and condition of the land in dispute. Where land is permanently or temporarily incapable of actual enjoyment in any of the customa [illegible] that the plaintiff should show such acts of [illegible] existing condition of the land, and in suc [illegible] possession is presumed to continue so long as the state of the land remains unchanged, unless he is shown to have been dispossessed.(4) Where the District Judge held that the land in dispute was not enclosed and that the "plaintiff had not been in actual occupation of any definite portion" of the land; it was held to be not necessary that a person should use any definite portion of an unenclosed land in assertion of his ownership. Evidence may be given of acts done in other parts, provided that there is a common character of locality as would raise an inference that the place in dispute belonged to the plaintiff if the other part did (5) Where it was pleaded that the plaintiffs had not actually occupied the land in suit, it was held that the Courts should be very careful before holding that title has been lost merely by non-possession (6) Evidence of possession of certain specific property has been treated as evidence of possession as regards an appendage to such property though no definite acts of possession were proved as regards the appendage.(7) The possession [illegible] those on whose behalf [illegible] possession as between [illegible] ad to the conditions of [illegible] it in such families the management of the property of the family is, by reason of the seclusion of the female members, ordinarily left in the hands of the male members. In the case of such families, slight evidence of enjoyment of income arising from the property is sufficient primâ facie proof of possession (9) Where the plaintiffs alleged forcible dispossession, from which, if made out, it would have been probably [illegible] forcible act had been consister [illegible] ispossession alleged, [illegible] sion on the part of the defendants which was not shown to have commenced in wrong and that the plaintiffs could only disturb that by proving distinctly a superior

(1) Leelanund v. Mussamat Basheeroonissa, 16 W. R., 102 (1871).

(2) Moochee Ram v Bissambhur Roy, 24 W R., 410 (1875)

(3) Per Lord Selbourne in Lows v Telford (1876), 1 A C., 423, cited in Vithaldas v Secretary of State for India, 26 B., 416 (1901)

(4) Mohomed Ali v Abdul Gunny, 9 C., 744 (1883), s c., 12 C. L. R., 257, referred to in Thakur Singh v Bhojeraj Singh 27 C., 25, 28 (1899)

(5) Vithaldas v Secretary of State, 26 B., 410, 416, 417 (1901).

(6) Prosonno Chunder v. Land Mortgage Bank, 5 W. R., 453 (1876).

(7) Iqbal Husen v. Nand Kishore, 24 A., 294 (1902).

(8) Chunder Kant v. Bungshee Deb, 6 W. R., 61 (1866); Bigelow on Estoppel, 545. See cases cited in Mitra on Limitation, 4th Ed., p 169, and his notes to s. 10 of the Limitation Act

(9) Inayat Husen v. Ali Husen, 20 A., 182 (1897).

title.(1) Dispossession within the meaning of the Bengal Tenancy Act (Schedule III, article 3) must be by the landlord and not merely favoured by him.(2) Under the Mahomedan Law, according to both the Shia and Sunni doctrine, possession taken under a gift of musha, transfers the property even when such gift is invalid, and such gift is valid if there is a clear intention to make it and yield the property although the donor has not actually vacated possession.(3) With regard to possession obtained by force, see next paragraph

The ordinary rule is that force does not interrupt possession. He whose possession has been interrupted by an act of violence without any form of law or justice, is nevertheless considered as a possessor, because he has the right to enter into possession again (4) When a party is dispossessed by vis major (e.g, a flood) the constructive possession of the land (e g, while it is submerged) remains in its true owner (5) It has been held in a case by the Privy Council that his possession of the diluviated land constructively continues till he is dispossessed, and constructively revives if the dispossession ceases before the statutory period has elapsed.(6) A man cannot be allowed to take advantage of his own wrong as where possession has been obtained by illegal means such as force or fraud, in order to shift the burden of proof to his opponent. It was therefore formerly held that where the plaintiff proved that he was in possession and was ousted by the defendant, otherwise than by due course of law, the burden of proving a title in the first instance was shifted upon the defendant, and in the event only of the latter establishing his title would the plaintiff be required to prove his.(7)

The Specific Relief Act, however, gives a special remedy to the party illegally dispossessed of property, in the nature of a possessory suit to be brought within six months from the date of dispossession, in which suit the question of title is immaterial and will not be enquired into (8) The result of a possessory suit under this Act is to restore to possession the party ousted by force and to leave the question of title wholly untouched and open to litigation in a regular suit.(9) And when a regular suit has been brought to establish title and to recover the land from the party so restored to possession, the whole burden of proof is upon the plaintiff in such regular suit, and until he can show title to the property the Court will not look into the defendant's title or disturb his possession.(10) Evidence of the plaintiff's possession prior to the summary order under which he was dispossessed may be good evidence of his title and must be considered (11) If the defendant pleads Limitation, the plaintiff in the regular suit cannot by way of answer set up the possession which, having Specific Relief Act.

(1) Arumugan Chetty v Perriyannan Servai, 25 W R, 81 (1876)

(2) Basanto Kumari v Nanda Ram Kaibarto Das, 18 C L J. 86 (1913), Rudra Narain Maiti v Natobar Jana, 18 C L J, 89 (1913) per Jenkins, C J

(3) Danoo Darjee v Momatajoddi Bhuiya, 17 C L J, 85 (1913)

(4) Domat's Civil Law, 1889, cited in Khaja Enaetoollah v Kissen Soonder, 8 W R, 386, 389 (1867)

(5) Munshi Mazahar Hasan v Behari Singh (1906), A W N, 234, 3 A L J, 567

(6) Basanta Kumar Roy v Secretary of State, 44 C, 858 (1917)

(7) See Jadubnath v Ram Soondur, 7 W R 174 (1867), Radha Bullub v Kishen Gobind, 9 W R, 71 (1868), Gour Paroy v. Wooma Soonduree, 12 W R, 472 (1869) [It is however, for the plaintiff to prove the alleged ouster, Mahesh Chunder v Srimati Baroda, 2 B L R, 274 (1869), Muhammad Bux v Abdul Kureem, 20 W R, 458 (1873), Dattari Mohanti v Jugo Bundhoo, 23, W R, 293 (1875) and see Munshi Mazhar Hasan v Behari Singh, 1906, A W N 234, and Ganpat Rao v Ganpat Rao, 2 N L R 32, supra, p 748

(8) Act I of 1877, s 9, which takes the place of the repealed s 15 of Act XIV of 1859

(9) Field Ev, 6th Ed, 348

(10) Moulvi Maennoodden v Greesh Chunder, 7 W R 230 (1867)

(11) Bullubee Kant v Doorjodhun Shikdar, 7 W R 89 (1867), Ram Chandra v Brajanath Sarma, 3 B L R, App. 109 (1869) obtained it otherwise than in due course of law, he held before the possessory suit.(1)

The question of the effect of this provision in the Specific Relief Act upon the general power of the Courts to give relief against unlawful interference has been the subject of conflicting decisions. It has been questioned whether, when a person ousted otherwise than by due course of law fails to avail himself within six months of the summary remedy provided by the Specific Relief Act, but afterwards brings a regular suit to recover possession, the burden of proof ought to be laid upon him or upon the defendant; whether in fact the plaintiff's previous possession in such cases is not primâ facie evidence of title and, whether the Specific Relief Act, while providing a special and summary remedy in a particular case, has in others interfered with the general rule above adverted to, that a man cannot be permitted to take advantage of his own [illegible] Most of the earlier [illegible] ew that possession [illegible] right to succeed in such a suit on proof merely of previous peaceable possession and illegal dispossession, unless the defendant could show a better title (2) But the later decisions of that Court are to a contrary effect, and it has been held that mere previous possession for any period short of the statutory period of twelve years will not entitle a plaintiff to a decree for the recovery of possession, even though the defendant cannot establish title, except in a suit under the ninth section of the Specific Relief Act, which must be brought within six months from the date of dispossession.(3) Where, however, the plaintiff had received possession

(1) Golam Nubee v. Bissonath Kur, 12 W. R, 9 (1869), Prem Chand v. Huree Dass, 22 W R, 259 (1874); Tara Banu v Abdul Guffur, 12 C L R, 486 (1882)

(2) Cases cited in note (2), p 630 ante, and see Khajah Enaetoollah v Kishen Soonder, 8 W R, 386 (1867) [The Civil Courts are competent, s 15, Act XIV of 1859 notwithstanding, to give a decree for immoveable property on the bare ground of illegal dispossession in a suit brought after six months from the date of such dispossession, in which suit the defendant has failed to prove his own title to the land, Dabjee Sahoo v Shaikh Tumeezooddeen, 10 W R, 102 (1868), Ayesha Beebee v Kanhye Mollah, 12 W R, 146 (1869), Shama Soonduree v Collector of Maldah, 12 W R, 164 (1869), Trilochun Ghose v Koylash Nath, 12 W R, 175 (1869) Nagore Monee v Smith, 23 W R, 291 (1875), Kattan Manji v. Khowa Nussiot, 5 C L R, 278 (1879) [per Prinsep, J, dissent "Proof of prior possession and of illegal dispossession are in themselves no evidence of title except in a possessory suit under Act I of 1877. S 110 of the Evidence Act applies only to actual and present possession and does not declare generally that possession shall always be primâ facie evidence of title." Mohabeer Pershad v Mohabeer Singh, 7 C., 591 (1881), s c, 9 C L. R, 164; Brojo Sundar v Koylas Chunder, 11 C L. R., 133 (1882) Contra, Ameer Bibee v. Tukroonissa Begum, 7 W. R, 332 (1867), and, on review, 8 W R, 370 (1867). (See also Luckee Koer v. Ram Dutt, 11 W. R, 447 (1869), Nund Kishore v Sheo Dyal, 11 W. R, 168 (1869); Ram Mohun v. Jhupproo Doss, 14 W. R, 41 (1870)

(3) Debi Churn v Issur Chunder, 9 C., 3 (1882), s. c, 11 C. L R., 342; Ertass Hossain v Baney Mistry, 9 C, 130 (1882); s c, 11 C L R, 393; citing, Wise v Amirunissa Khatun, 7 I. A., 73; Purmeshur Chowdry v. Bijoy Lall, 17 C, 256 (1889); Shama Churn v. Abdool Kabeer, 3 C. W N, 158 (1898); Nisa Chand v Kanchiram Bagani, 3 C. W. N., 568 (1899), s c, 26 C, 579; Fazlar Rahman v. Raj Chunder, 5 C. W. N, 234 (1900). For a discussion of these and other cases, see 6 C. W. N. ix "Possessory title and its summary and substantive remedies" and 3 C. W N. cclxxiii, ccxcii, ccxciii It has been, however, also held that though in a suit for possession on proof of title it will not be sufficient for the plaintiff merely to prove possession at the date of the disturbance, the previous possession of the plaintiff may be proved to have been so long and continuous that a good title may be reasonably presumed from it. Kattan Manji v Khowaz Nussio, 5 C. L. R, 282 (1879), and see Lacho v Har Sahai, 12 A. 46 (1887), cited post "Possession is evidence of title, more or less strong according to its duration, and a Court may well be justified in allowing a plaintiff to recover, on such evidence only. But if he be allowed so to recover, it is on the ground that he has produced sufficient proof of

of property by purchase and had such possession when the suit was brought, and the defendant, who disturbed such possession, had no title whatever, but alleged a defect in the plaintiff's title, it was held that lawful possession of land is sufficient evidence of right as owner as against a person who has no title whatever and who is a mere trespasser, that it was not necessary that the plaintiff should negative defendant's case as to the former's defect in title, and that he was by virtue of such possession entitled to a declaratory decree and to an injun [illegible] of the later decisions of the [illegible] suits under the Specific Reli[illegible] possession at the date of illegal dispossession In other cases the plaintiff must show title or such adverse possession as under the Limitation Act confers title. In this view the possession referred to by this section is actual de facto possession or rather physical occupation at date of suit, and not juridical possession, the requisites of which are freedom from force, clandestinity and permission Force therefore does interrupt possession if the party aggrieved does not avail himself of the provisions of the Specific Relief Act, and a tortfeasor may, in such case by his own wrongful act and though destitute of title, shift the burden of proof upon his opponent For if more than six months have passed since the date of illegal dispossession, the burden of proof of ownership will be upon the plaintiff as being the party out of actual present possession. Where, however, the plaintiff is in, and therefore does not seek to recover, possession but desires to obtain merely a declaratory decree , then that possession is valid and sufficient against another who is a mere trespasser

The course of opinion in the Bombay High Court has been the opposite to that in Calcutta The Bombay High Court at first held views similar to those now held by the Calcutta High Court.(2) Subsequently, however, the views of that Court changed, and it was held that a plaintiff, although suing more than six months after the date of dispossession and without resorting to a possessory suit, is entitled to rely on the possession previous to his dispossession as against a person who has no title (3) That Court has dissented from the view that because in this country a party is given a special remedy which the law of England does not provide, if he does not avail himself of the same he has no claim to the advantages which it would have secured him and has held that the mere omission of the party dispossessed to avail himself of the specific remedy by possessory suit does not deprive him of his right to rely upon his previous possession in an action of ejectment against a trespasser.(4) In this view of the case the possession which attracts the presumption of ownership [illegible] sario, and [illegible] entitled. [illegible] held by Ranade, J., that(5) though a party may rely upon his previous possession it must be of such a character as leads to a presumption of title Mere previous title, and not on the ground that he has a right to recover without proof of title, because possession is good against all the world except the real owner," per Melville, J, in Dadabhai Narsidas v Sub-Collector of Broach, 7 Bom H C. R 82, 87 (1870)

---

(1) Ismail Ariff v Mahomed Ghous, 20 C, 834 (1893); distinguished in Nisa Chand v Kanchiram Bagani, 26 C., 57[illegible] (1899), ref to in Vasta Balwant v Secretary of State, 23 Bom L R, 238 (1921)

(2) Field Ev, 6th Ed, 349-351, Dadabhai Narsidas v Sub-Collector of Broach, 7 Bom H. C. R, A C J. 82 (1870), Lakshmibai v. Vithal Ramchandra, 9 Bom. H C R, A C J, 53, 55 (1872)

(3) Krishnarav Yashvant v. Vasudev Apaji, 8 B, 371 (1884), Pemraj Bhavaniram v. Narayan Shivaram, 6 B 21, 215 (1882)

(4) Krishnarav Yashvant v. Vasudev Apaji, 8 B, 375, 376

(5) Hanmantrao v. Secretary of State, 25 B, 287, 303 (1900) Discussed in Vasta Balwant v. Secretary of State, 45 B, 789 (1921), s c., 23 Bom. L. R, 238.

possession less than the Limitation Law requires is insufficient except in a possessory suit, and mere wrongful possession is insufficient to shift the burden of proof. The position here adopted is not clear. As already observed, the case was not one of dispossession. The plaintiff was in possession and sought confirmation thereof. Jenkins, C J., (with whose judgment Ranade, J., appeared to desire to concur) held that the section obviously does not require possession according to title, otherwise it is meaningless.(1) It was therefore sufficient for the plaintiff to show possession to recover against the defendant unless the latter could show title. The question was whether he had shown it. If, however, the plaintiff had been forcibly dispossessed more than six months before suit, the question would then have arisen whether proof of previous possession was sufficient. The Calcutta High Court answers the question in the negative because it holds that there has been an interruption of possession, and the substantive right of possession has been lost by failure to seek the special remed[illegible] possession. Accor[illegible] Bombay High Court, [illegible] l owner, and failure t[illegible] does not deprive a party of his right to rely upon his mere previous possession, which force does not interrupt. In this view in no case should it be necessary to show title in the absence of any title shown by the defendant. And so it has been held by the Madras High Court(2) that possession in law is a substantive right or interest which exists and has legal incidents and advantages apart from the true owner's title, that the Specific Relief Act cannot possibly be held to take away any remedy available with reference to this well-recognised doctrine on possession; that it is an undoubted rule of law that a person who has been ousted by another who has no better right is, with reference to the person so ousting, entitled to recover by virtue of the possession he had held before the ouster, even though that possession was without any title Where, however, a plaintiff in possession without any title seeks to recover possession of which he has been forcibly deprived by a defendant having a good title, he can only do so under the provisions of the ninth section of the Specific Relief Act and not otherwise.

The question has been raised in the Allahabad High Court, it being held that usually it is for the plaintiff who seeks ejectment to prove his title, but that, when possession for 30 or 40 years is proved to have been peaceably enjoyed, the person who has recently dispossessed such plaintiff has to meet the presumption of law that the plaintiff's long possession indicates his ownership of the property.(3)

Limitation

In a suit for possession of immovable property, it is for the plaintiff to show by some primâ facie evidence that he has a subsisting title not extinguished by the operation of Limitation, before the defendant can be called upon to substantiate a plea of adverse possession (4) Where the plaintiff has established his title to land, the burden of proving that the plaintiff has lost that title by reason of the adverse possession of the defendant is upon the latter.(5) If the property sued for was originally joint, the burden of proving

---

(1) Hanumantrao v. Secretary of State, 25 B, 290, ref. to in Vasta Balwant v. Secretary of State, 45 B., 789 which follows Secretary of State v. Chellikani, 39 M. 617.

(2) Mustapha Saheb v. Santha Pillai, 23 M. 179 (1899). But see Rassonada Ravar v. Sitharama Pillai, 2 Mad H. C. R., A. C J. 171 (1864); Tirumalasami Reddi v. Ramasami Reddi, 6 Mad. H. C. R., A. C. J. 420 (1871).

(3) Lachoo v. Har Sahai, 12 A. 46 (1897).

(4) Inayat Hussen v. Ali Hussen, 20 A. 182 (1897); the possession of an usufructuary mortgagee is the possession of all persons having the right of redemption. ib.

(5) Padha Gobind v. Inglis, 7 C. L. R. 364 (1880).

exclusive adverse possession by one of the original joint holders is on him.(1) To prove title to land by twelve years' adverse possession it is not sufficient to show that some acts of possession have been done. Where adverse possession is relied on, it must be adequate in continuity, in publicity and in extent, to show that it is possession adverse to the competitor.(2) It must be a complete possession exclusive of the possession of any other person, and is displaced by evidence of partial possession by the party against whom the title by adverse possession is claimed (3) When Limitation is set up in answer to a suit for possession, it does not lie upon the defendant to disprove plaintiff's possession but it is the duty of the plaintiff to show that he has been in possession within twelve years before the commencement of the suit.(4) The circumstance that the defendant has in his answer set up a defence merely of Limitation in a suit for the possession of land does not constitute an admission of the title of the plaintiff, so as to dispense with the obligation upon the plaintiff to prove title (5) Where the defendant, who was alleged to be the tenant of the plaintiff admitted the plaintiff's ownership up to a particular date, it was held that the onus was on him to show when the alleged adverse possession under article 144 commenced or under article 139 when the tenancy terminated (6) Mere non-payment of rent is not in itself enough to prove that possession is adverse.(7) In a case in the Allahabad High Court where, after a mortgage by conditional sale in 1869, the mortgagor surrendered his equity of redemption in the following year and, though the agreement was not registered, both parties acted on it for forty years, it was held in a suit for redemption that the mortgagee's possession had been adverse and that the suit was barred by limitation (8) Acts at different times by a fluctuating body of persons do not amount to adverse possession, to constitute which the possession must be adequate in continuity, publicity and extent Occupation by a wrong-doer of a portion only of land cannot be held to constitute constructive possession of the whole so as to enable him to obtain a title by Limitation (9) It is of the essence of the title by adverse possession that it must relate to some property which is recognised by law.(10) It affects the interest which the person entitled to possession had at that time, and thus possession adverse to a simple mortgagor is not per se adverse to a simple mortgagee.(11) There is no constructive possession in favour of a wrong-doer.(12) And see cases cited ante, in the Notes to ss. 101—104.

Proof of good faith in transactions where one party is in relation of active confidence.

111. Where there is a question as to the good faith of a transaction between parties, one of whom stands to the other in a position of active confidence, the burden of proving the good

---

(1) Jagjivandas v Bai Amba, 25 B, 362 (1900); s c, 3 Bom L R, 47, and see Haji v Gohna, 39 P. L R. (1906)

(2) Radhamoni Debi v. Collector of Khulna, 27 C, 943 (1900); s c, 4 C. W. N, 597; Jagjivandas v. Bai Amba, 25 B, 362 (1900); Wali Ahmed v. Tota Meah, 31 C, 397 (1903).

(3) Vithaldas v Secretary of State, 26 B, 416 (1901).

(4) Kalee Narain v. Anund Moye, 21 W. R, 79 (1874) See Innasimuthu v Upakarthudayan, 3 C. W. N, ccexxiii (1899); Munshi Mazhar Hasan v Behari Singh, 3 A L J., 567; A W. N. (1906), 234; Dharani Kanta Lahiri v Gabar Ali Khan, 17 C L J, 277 (1913).

(5) Soonatun Saha v. Ramjoy Saha, Marshall's Rep, 549 (1863)

(6) Talshibhai v Ranchod, 26 B, 442 (1902), Ganput Rao v. Ganput Rao, 2 N. L R, 32

(7) Prasanna Kumar Mookerjee v. Srikantha Rout, 40 C., 173 (1913).

(8) Khedu Rai v. Sheo Parson Rai, 39 A, 423 (1917).

(9) Wali Ahmed v. Tota Meah, 31 C., 397 (1903).

(10) Jethabhai v. Nathabhai, 28 B, 399 (1904).

(11) Priya Saki Debi v. Manbodh Bibi, 44 C, 425 (1917), per Sanderson, C J; see Vyapuri v Sonamma, F. B, 39 M, 811 (1915); 29 M L. J, 645; Raj Nath v. Narain, 36 A, 567 (1914).

(12) Secretary of State v. Krishnamoni Gupta, 29 C, 518 (1902), at p 535; s c, 29 I A, 104.

possession less than the Limitation Law requires is insufficient except in a possessory suit, and mere wrongful possession is insufficient to shift the burden of proof. The position here adopted is not clear. As already observed, the case was not one of dispossession. The plaintiff was in possession and sought confirmation thereof. Jenkins, C. J., (with whose judgment Ranade, J., appeared to desire to concur) held that the section obviously does not require possession according to title, otherwise it is meaningless (1) It was therefore sufficient for the plaintiff to show possession to recover against the defendant unless the latter could show title. The question was whether he had shown it. If, however, the plaintiff had been forcibly dispossessed more than six months before suit, the question would then have arisen whether proof of previous possession was sufficient. The Calcutta High Court answers the question in the negative because it holds that there has been an interruption of possession, and the substantive right of possession has been lost by failure to seek the special remed[illegible] protection of mere possession. Accor[illegible] view of the Bombay High Court, [illegible] but the rightful owner, and failure t[illegible] ific Relief Act does not deprive a party of his right to rely upon his mere previous possession, which force does not interrupt. In this view in no case should it be necessary to show title in the absence of any title shown by the defendant. And so it has been held by the Madras High Court(2) th[illegible] or interest which exists and has lega[illegible] true owner's title ; that the Specific [illegible] away any remedy available with reference to this well-recognised [illegible] possession ; that it is an undoubted rule of law that a person who has been ousted by another who has no better right is, with reference to the person so ousting, entitled to recover by virtue of the possession he had held before the ouster, even though that possession was without any title. Where, however, a plaintiff in possession without any title seeks to recover possession of which he has been forcibly deprived by a defendant having a good title, he can only do so under the provisions of the ninth section of the Specific Relief Act and not otherwise.

The question has been raised in the Allahabad High Court, it being held that usually it is for the plaintiff who seeks ejectment to prove his title, but that, when possession for 30 or 40 years is proved to have been peaceably enjoyed, the person who has recently dispossessed such plaintiff has to meet the presumption of law that the plaintiff's long possession indicates his ownership of the property.(3)

Limitation In a suit for possession of immovable property, it is for the plaintiff to show by some primâ facie evidence that he has a subsisting title not extinguished by the operation of Limitation, before the defendant can be called upon to substantiate a plea of adverse possession.(4) Where the plaintiff has established his title to land, the burden of proving that the plaintiff has lost that title by reason of the adverse possession of the defendant is upon the latter.(5) If the property sued for was originally joint, the burden of proving

(1) Hanumantrao v. Secretary of State, 25 B. 290; ref. to in Vasta Balwant v. Secretary of State, 45 B. 789 which follows Secretary of State v. Chellikani, 39 M. 617.

(2) Mustapha Saheb v. Santha Pillai, 23 M. 179 (1899). But see Rassonada Rayar v. Sitharama Pillai, 2 Mad. H. C. R., A. C. J. 171 (1864); Tirumalasami Reddi v. Ramasami Reddi, 6 Mad. H. C. R., A. C. J. 420 (1871).

(3) Lachoo v. Har Sahai, 12 A. 46 (1887).

(4) Inayat Hussen v. Ali Hussen, 20 A. 182 (1897); the possession of an usufructuary mortgagee is the possession of all persons having the right of redemption. ib.

(5) Radha Gobind v. Inglis, 7 C. L. R. 364 (1880).

exclusive adverse possession by one of the original joint holders is on him (1) To prove title to land by twelve years' adverse possession it is not sufficient to show that some acts of possession have been done. Where adverse possession is relied on, it must be adequate in continuity, in publicity and in extent, to show that it is possession adverse to the competitor.(2) It must be a complete possession exclusive of the possession of any other person, and is displaced by evidence of partial possession by the party against whom the title by adverse possession is claimed (3) When Limitation is set up in answer to a suit for possession, it does not lie upon the defendant to disprove plaintiff's possession but it is the duty of the plaintiff to show that he has been in possession within twelve years before the commencement of the suit (4) The circumstance that the defendant has in his answer set up a defence merely of Limitation in a suit for the possession of land does not constitute an admission of the title of the plaintiff, so as to dispense with the obligation upon the plaintiff to prove title.(5) Where the defendant, who was alleged to be the tenant of the plaintiff admitted the plaintiff's ownership up to a particular date, it was held that the onus was on him to show when the alleged adverse possession under article 144 commenced or under article 139 when the tenancy terminated.(6) Mere non-payment of rent is not in itself enough to prove that possession is adverse.(7) In a case in the Allahabad High Court where, after a mortgage by conditional sale in 1869, the mortgagor surrendered his equity of redemption in the following year and, though the agreement was not registered, both parties acted on it for forty years, it was held in a suit for redemption that the mortgagee's possession had been adverse and that the suit was barred by limitation (8) Acts at different times by a fluctuating body of persons do not amount to adverse possession, to constitute which the possession must be adequate in continuity, publicity and extent. Occupation by a wrong-doer of a portion only of land cannot be held to constitute constructive possession of the whole so as to enable him to obtain a title by Limitation.(9) It is of the essence of the title by adverse possession that it must relate to some property which is recognised by law.(10) It affects the interest which the person entitled to possession had at that time, and thus possession adverse to a simple mortgagor is not per se adverse to a simple mortgagee (11) There is no constructive possession in favour of a wrong-doer.(12) And see cases cited ante, in the Notes to ss. 101—104.

Proof of good faith in transactions where one party is in relation of active confidence.

111. Where there is a question as to the good faith of a transaction between parties, one of whom stands to the other in a position of active confidence, the burden of proving the good

(1) Jagjivandas v Bai Amba, 25 B, 362 (1900); s c, 3 Bom. L. R, 47, and see Haji v. Gohna, 39 P. L R (1906)

(2) Radhamoni Debi v Collector of Khulna, 27 C, 943 (1900); s c, 4 C W. N, 597, Jagjivandas v Bai Amba, 25 B, 362 (1900); Wali Ahmed v. Tota Meah, 31 C, 397 (1903)

(3) Vithaldas v. Secretary of State, 26 B, 416 (1901).

(4) Kalee Narain v. Anund Moye, 21 W. R, 79 (1874) See Innasimuthu v. Upakarthudayan, 3 C. W. N, cccxxiii (1899): Munshi Mazhar Hasan v. Behari Singh, 3 A. L J, 567, A W. N (1906), 234, Dharani Kanta Lahiri v. Gabar Ali Khan, 17 C. L. J, 277 (1913).

(5) Soonatun Saha v Ramjoy Saha, Marshall's Rep, 549 (1863).

(6) Talshibhai v. Ranchod, 26 B, 442 (1902); Ganput Rao v Ganput Rao, 2 N. L. R, 32

(7) Prasanna Kumar Mookerjee v. Srikantha Rout, 40 C, 173 (1913)

(8) Khedu Rai v Sheo Parson Rai, 39 A, 423 (1917).

(9) Wali Ahmed v. Tota Meah, 31 C, 397 (1903).

(10) Jethabhai v Nathabhai, 28 B, 399 (1904).

(11) Priya Saki Debi v. Manbodh Bibi, 44 C, 425 (1917), per Sanderson, C J; see Vyapuri v Sonamma, F. B, 39 M, 811 (1915); 29 M L J, 645; Raj Nath v. Narain, 36 A, 567 (1914)

(12) Secretary of State v. Krishnamoni Gupta, 29 C, [illegible] (1902), at p. [illegible] 29 I. A, 104 faith of the transaction is on the party who is in a position of active confidence.

Illustrations.

(a) The good faith of a sale by a client to an attorney is in question in a suit brought by the client.

The burden of proving the good faith of the transaction is on the attorney.

(b) The good faith of a sale by a son just come of age to a father is in question in a suit brought by the son.

The burden of proving the good faith of the transaction is on the father.

Principle—The reason why the burden of proving good faith is, by way of an exception to the general rule, cast upon the defendant is that if it were not so the transaction could rarely be satisfactorily enquired into. The plaintiff having been entirely in the hands of the defendant, would be destitute of the means of proving affirmatively the malâ fides of the transaction; whilst the defendant in such a transaction may fairly be subjected to the duty not only of dealing honestly but of preserving clear evidence that he has done so (1)

s 101 (Burden of proof.)

Steph. Dig, Art. 97A, Taylor, Ev., §§ 151—153; Wharton, Ev., §§ 1248, 358, 357, 366; Story, Eq. Jur., §§ 309—372A; Powell, Ev., 9th Ed, 162; Pollock's Law of Fraud in British India, 63—80, Leading cases in Equity, Notes to Huguenin v. Basely.

COMMENTARY.

Good faith

Good faith in a contracting party has been frequently declared to be a rebuttable presumption of law, being regarded, in the same way as the presumption of innocence, as an assumption of the law made for the determination of the burden of proof and not for the adjudication of the merits. A person who is sued is charged with bad faith, and the burden is upon the plaintiff to prove the charge; or the defendant sets up bad faith in the plaintiff, and the burden is on the defendant to make this defence good (2) So it is an elementary principle that a party setting up a tort has the burden on him to prove such tort.(3) But w ... establishes a primâ facie c ... her side, then the ... as good faith and legality are assumed as belonging to ordinary business-transactions, it may be generally held that the burden of proof is on the party assailing good faith or legality (5) It has been held that where a pleader is charged with defam ... as a ... liable ...

(1) Markby, Ev, 86 In such cases it is seldom, if ever, possible to prove specific acts of bad faith Yet the risk of abuse is obviously great The law, therefore, reverses its usual rule of evidence in dealing between man and man. Commonly nothing is presumed contrary to good faith But this is the rule between equals When one party habitually looks up to the other and is guided by him, he can no longer be supposed capable, without special precaution, of exercising that independent judgment which is requisite for his consent to be free Pollock's Law of Fraud in British India 63, 64 See Contract Act, s 16

(2) Wharton, Ev, § 1248, as to proof of good and bad faith, see Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed, 134 So upon the principle that the law will not impute bad faith, ambiguous instruments are to be construed in a sense consistent with good faith Best, Ev, § 347; Muir v Glasgow Bank, 4 L R, H L, 337; Wharton, Ev., § 1249 v. ante ss 101, 104.

(3) Ib, §§ 357, 358.

(4) Ib, § 1248

(5) Ib, § 366; Lewis v. Levy, E. B & E, 557.

cogent proof that unfair advantage was taken of his position as a pleader for an indirect purpose.(1) And in the case cited it has also been held that mere evidence of the fiduciary relation between client and attorney will not suffice to enable the client to have a settled account between them re-opened, but that the burden is on him to make out a primâ facie case that the attorney's bill of costs was incorrect (2)

So while in all cases where it has been proved that a mere stranger, connected with the other party by no peculiar or fiduciary relation, from which undue influence can be inferred, has either by fraud, surprise, or undue influence obtained from him a benefit, a Court of Equity will at once set it aside. In such cases however, the proof of fraud, surprise, or undue influence is completely upon the other party or person deriving title from him, for primâ facie the transaction is valid (3) The present section, however, enacts an important exception to the general rule reversing the burden of proof, where one of the parties stands in a relation of active confidence towards the other The rule laid down by it is in accordance with a principle of equity long acknowledged and administered, both in England and in this country(4), namely, that he who bargains in a matter of advantage with a person who places confidence in him is bound to show that a proper and reasonable use has been made of that confidence The transaction is not necessarily void ipso facto, nor is it necessary for those who impeach it to establish that there has been fraud or imposition, but the burden of establishing its perfect fairness, adequacy and equity is cast upon the person in whom the confidence has been reposed, and the party seeking restitution is not called upon to prove that the transaction was unrighteous and his consent not free.

The rule further applies equally to all persons standing in confidential relations with each other (5) So if a deed conferring a benefit on a father is executed by a child who is not emancipated from the father's control, and the deed is subsequently impeached by the child, the onus is on the father to show that the child had competent and independent advice, and that he executed the [illegible] ; the [illegible] will [illegible] ther, [illegible] the equity, but not further (6) The Illustrations to the section afford two instances [illegible] s, viz., those of legal adviser and [illegible] are many others, such as those [illegible] lirector and penitent(9), trustee

(1) Upendra Nath Bagchi v R (1909). 36 C 375; following In re Nagarji Trikanji (1894), 19 B, 340, and R v Purshottamdas Ranchoddas (1907), 9 Bom. L R, 128

(2) Shamaldone Dutt v Lakshimani Debi (1908), 36 C., 493, following Rahimbhoy Habibhoy v. Turner, 18 I A, 6; and dissenting from Coverji Luddha v. Morarji, 9 B, 183.

(3) Field, Ev, (6th Ed, 351-353) citing Huguenin v Basely, 2 Leading Cases in Equity; and see Boo Jinatboo v. Sha Nagar, 11 B, 78 (1886) [It is only in cases where one person stands in a fiduciary relation to another that the law requires the former to exercise extreme good faith in all his dealings with the latter and scrutinizes those dealings with more than ordinary care and caution In the absence of any special confidence reposed by one person in another it lies on him who alleges fraud to prove it.]

(4) See Moonshee Buzloor v Shamsoonissa Begum, 11 Moo. I. A, 551 (1867); and cases cited post, passim

(5) See Story, Eq Jur, §§ 309-327A. Huguenin v Basely, 2 L. C. in Equity, Pollock's Law of Fraud in British India, 64, 65.

(6) Bainbridge v. Browne, L R, 18 Ch. D, 188

(7) See also Pushong v. Munia Haluani, 1 B L. R, A. C, 95 (1868); Ram Pershad v Rauee Phulputtee, 7 W. R, 99 (1867); Kamini Sundari v. Kali Prosunno, 12 C., 225 (1885).

(8) Bainbridge v. Browne, supra.

(9) Mannu Singh v Umadat Pande, 12 A, 523 (1889) and cestui que trust(1), husband and wife(2), guardian and ward, agent and principal(3), and the like.(4) In fact, the relief granted stands upon a general principle applying to all the variety of relations in which dominion may be exercised by one person over another.(5) Bnt the mere relation of daughter to mother in itself suggests nothing in the way of special influence or control (6)

The words "active confidence" in the section indicates that the relationship between the parties must be such that one is bound to protect the interests of the other.(7) The section has been spoken of as an exception to the general rule relating to the burden of proof because the allegation of bad faith is one which the plaintiff, according to section 101, ante, is bound to prove, and to require the defendant to prove good faith is in contradiction to the terms of that section. The reason why the exception is made and this duty is imposed on the defendant has been adverted to above in the Note giving the principle upon which the section is founded(8), in contradistinction to the case of a transaction with a mere stranger, where a relation of active confidence between the parties is proved, then the burden of proof is on the party receiving the benefit or on those claiming through him.(9) The Courts so far presume against the validity of the instrument as to require proof (varying in amount according to circumstances) of the absence of anything approaching to imposition, over-reaching undue influence or unconscionable advantage, and the person

(1) Gray v Warnar, L R, 16 Eq, 577, Raghunathji Mulchand v Varjiwandas Madanjee, 8 Bom L R, 525

(2) Moonshee Buzloor v Shumsoonissa Begum, 11 Moo I A, 551 (1867), see as to recovery of property held by the husband Abdool Ali v Kurrumnissa, 9 W R, 153 (1868) And see Hakim Muhammad v Najeban, 20 A, 447 (1898)

(3) Taccordeen Tewary v Nawab Syed, 1 Ind App, 192 (1874), s c, 13 B L R, 427, 21 W R, 340, Kanai Lal v Kamini Debi, 1 B L R, O C, 31 (1867), Wajid Khan v Ewaz Ali, 18 C, 545 (1891), s c., 18 Ind App, 144; as to agent not standing in fiduciary relation, see Boo Jinatboo v Sha Nagar, 11 B, 78 (1886), as to confidential manager, see Mahadevi v Neelamani, 20 M, 273 (1896)

(4) Taylor, Ev, §§ 151, 152, Story, Eq. Jur, §§ 309—327A, and cases there cited The courts also regard with suspicion all dealings with heirs as regards their expectancies, and relieve against unconscionable bargains with poor and ignorant persons See Chuni Kuar v Rup Singh, 11 A, 57 (1888); Taylor, Ev, § 153 But these cases do not, as a rule, come within the scope of the section. Pollock's Law of Fraud in British India, 75—80

(5) Sital Prasad v Parbhu Lal, 10 A, 535 (1888); see remarks upon the facts of this case, in Pollock's Law of Fraud, 68, 69

(6) Ismail Mussajee v Hafiz Boo, P. C. (1906), 33 Cal, 773, 10 C. W N, 570, and for tests of undue influence, see Ganesh v. Vishnu (1907), 32 B, 37, and Chatring Moolchand v Whitchurch (1907), 32 B, 208

(7) Markby, Ev, 86. "So far as they go (i e, the words of the section) they give effect to the general law of all Courts in which the principles of English Equity prevail But I venture to think that they do not go quite far enough to be an adequate expression of the law, unless the words 'active confidence' are to receive a larger meaning than they would naturally convey to any reader, whether a layman or a lawyer, not familiar with this class of cases" Pollock's Law of Fraud in British India, p 65. In Thakur Das v. Jairaj Singh, 26 A., 130 (1903); the Privy Council held that the plaintiff was not in a position of "active confidence" towards the defendants within the meaning of this section.

(8) v. ante, p 635, note (2)

(9) It has further been said (L C in Equity 635) that, where a person gains a great advantage over another by a voluntary instrument, burden of proof is thrown upon the person receiving the benefit, and he is under the necessity of showing that the transaction is fair and honest, for, although the Courts never prevent one person from being the voluntary object of the bounty of another, yet it must be shown that the bounty was purely voluntary and not produced by any undue influence or misrepresentation. The Evidence Act does not provide specially for this last case though it may possibly fall within the purview of s 114, post. Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 352 But see also Pollock's Law of Fraud, 67.

benefited will have thrown upon him the burthen of establishing beyond all reasonable doubt the perfect fairness and honesty of the entire transaction.(1)

In judging of the validity of transactions between persons standing in a confidential relation to each other, it is very material to see whether the person conferring a benefit on the other had competent and independent advice(2); and the age or capacity of the person conferring the benefit and the nature of the benefit are also of very great importance in such cases (3)

Purdanashin.

In this country where the position of purdanashin or secluded women is to a large extent one of isolation and subserviency, it has been held that they are entitled to receive that protection which the Court of Chancery always extends to the weak, ignorant and infirm, and to those who for any other reasons are specially likely to be imposed upon by the exertion of undue influence over them. This influence is presumed to have been exerted, unless the contrary be shown It is, therefore, in all dealings with those persons who are so situated, always incumbent on the person who is interested in upholding the transaction to show that its terms are fair and equitable (4) Protection is given in these instances apart from the provisions of this section, which strictly apply only to the case of those purdanashin women who have dealings with others in confidential relations with them It has in numerous cases been laid down that strict proof of good faith is required where purdanashin women are concerned, and that it is incumbent on the Court when dealing with the disposition of her property by a purdanashin woman, whether Mahomedan(5) or Hindu to be satisfied that the transaction was explained to her and that she knew what she was doing (6) Thus in the case cited in the Privy Council a

(1) Taylor, Ev, § 151 In fact in such cases undue influence is presumed to have been exerted until the contrary is proved Pushong v Munia Halwani, 1 B L R, A C 95 (1868)

(2) The advice need not necessarily and in all cases be "legal," though in a large number of cases the only competent advice must be of that character Allcard v Skinner, 36 Ch D, 145, 153, 158, 159

(3) Field, Ev, 6th Ed 352, see for a consideration of some circumstances constituting undue influence, Chedambara Chetty v Renja Krishna, 13 B L R, 509, 528 (1874), and other cases cited in Pollock's Law of Fraud, pp 77—79

(4) Kanai Lal v Kamini Debi, 1 B L R, O C J, 31 (1867), per Phear, J [referred to in Nistarini Dassi v Nundo Lal, 26 C, 918 (1899) Roop Narain v Gangadhar Pershad 9 W R, 297 (1868), Bibee Rukhun v Shaikh Ahmed, 22 W R, 443 (1874) and see cases cited, post Badiatannessa Bibee v Ambika Charan Ghose, 18 C W N, 1133 (1914)

(5) See remarks in Moonshee Buzloor v Shumsoonissa Begum, 11 Moo I A, 551 (1867) ["In India the Mussalman woman of rank, like the Hindu, is shut up in the zenana, and has no communication except from behind the purdah or screen, with any male, save a few privileged relatives or dependants The culture of the one is not, generally speaking, higher than that of the other and they may be taken to be equally liable to pressure and influence'] Khas Mehal v Administrator General of Bengal, 5 C W N, 505 (1901)

(6) Ashgar Ali v Delros Banoo, 3 C, 324 (1877), s c, before the High Court, 15 B L R, 167, 23 W R, 453, Sudhist Lal v Sheobarat Koer, 7 C, 245, followed in Shambat Koeri v Jago Bibee, 29 C 749 (1902), Moonshee Buzloor v Shumsoonissa Begum, 11 Moo I A, 551 (1867) Roop Narain v Gungadhur Pershad, 9 W R, 297 (1868), Tacoordeen Tewary v Nawab Syed, 1 I A, 192, s c, 13 B L R, 427, 21 W R, 340, Panna Lal v Srimati Bamasundari, 6 B L R, 732, 174 (1871), Ram Pershad v Ranee Phoolputee, 7 W R, 99 (1867), Mussumat Azeezoonisha v Baqur Khan, 10 B L R, 205 (1872) [A plaintiff who seeks to make a purdanashin liable on a document alleged to have been executed by her agent must give strict proof of such agency], Asmutoonissa Bibee v Alla Hafiz [admission by Purdanashin], 8 W R, 468 (1867) Bibee Rukhun v Shaikh Ahmed, 22 W R 443 (1874), Syed Fazzul v Amjud Ali [Registration mutation of names], 17 W R, 523 (1872) Dolee Chand v Musst Oomda Khanum [Registration] 18 W R, 238 (1872), Greesh Chunder v Bhuggobutty Debia, 13 Moo I A, 419 (1870), 14 W R P C 7, Behari Lal v Habiba Bibi, 8 A, 267 (1886), Deo Kuar v Man Kuar, 17 A, 1 (1894), s c, 21 Ind App 148; Bad Bibi v Sami Pillai, 18 M, 257 (1892), distinguishing Ashgar Ali v Delros Banoo, purdanashin, unable to read or write and separated from her husband, had executed an endowment of nearly all her property. It was held that the onus was on the trustees to show that the nature and effect of the transaction had been fully explained to her and understood by her at the time.(1) And thus where admissions of an adoption were contained in recitals in documents signed by an illiterate purdanashin woman, it was held that these recitals could not be relied upon in the absence of proof that they had been specifically brought to her knowledge and explained to her.(2) But the burden of proof will be discharged by evidence given of circumstances inconsistent with, or contrary to, those upon which the presumption is raised.(3)

The presumptions as to the knowledge of the executant of the contents of the document she is executing do not equally apply in the case of a purdanashin as in the case of other persons (4)

In Kali Baksh Singh v. Ram Gopal Singh the Privy Council considered the question whether proof must be given that a purdanashin had independent advice, and it was held that while the Law protects a purdanashin by placing the burden of proof on those who rely on a deed executed by her, this legal protection should not be transformed to a legal disability; and that where it was proved that a purdanashin had business capacity and strength of will and that in the circumstances the conveyance was a natural disposition of her property and it could be assumed that independent advice would have made no difference, there was no need to prove that it had been given. In this case it was said that the possession of independent advice or the absence of it is a fact to be taken into consideration and well weighed in a review of the whole circumstances relevant to the issue whether the grantor thoroughly comprehended and deliberately and of her own free will carried out the transaction.(5)

In a case in the Privy Council(6) a person was described as a quasi-purdanashin. Their Lordships taking the term to mean a woman who, not being of supra Achhan Kuar v Thakurdas, 17 A, 125 (1895), Mohadevi v Neelamani, 20 M, 273 (1896), Hakim Muhammad v Nanban, 20 A, 447 (1898), Annoda Mohan v Bhuban Mohini, 5 C. W N, 489 (1901), s c, 28 C, 546; Khas Mehal v Administrator-General of Bengal, 5 C W N, 505 (1901) Annada Mohun v Bhuban Mohini 28 C, 546 (1901) ["Their Lordships cannot act on the speculation that she must have known that of which it is not shown that any direct information was conveyed to her"] Sumsuddin v Abdul Husein (1906) 31 B, 165.

---

(1) Sajjad Hussain v. Wazir Ali Khan, P C 34 A, 455 (1912).

(2) Kishori Lal v Chuni Lal (1908) 36 I A 9

(3) See Tamarasheri Sivithri v Maranat Vasudevan, 3 M 215 (1881); Mahomed Buksh v Hosseini, 15 C., 684 (1888); s c, 15 Ind App., 81, in which the Privy Council point out the facts which a Court should consider in an issue of undue influence rightly raised

(4) Khas Mehal v Administrator-General of Bengal, 5 C. W. N, 505 (1901).

(5) Kali Baksh Singh v Ram Gopal Singh P C, 36 A, 81 (1914); 41 I A., 25, see Sajjad Husain v Wazir Ali Khan, P. C, 34 A, 455 (1912)—39 I A., 156; Mahomed Buksh Khan v Hosseini Bibi, P. C. 15 C, 684 (1886); 15 I A, 81; Mohabir Prosad v Taj Begam, 19 C. W N., 162 (1914); Bhuban Mohini Dasi v Gajalakshmi Debi, 19 C W. N., 1330 (1915); Azima Bibi v. Shamalanand, P C., 40 C, 378 (1914)

(6) Hodges v London & Delhi Bank, 5 C. W. N, 1 (1900); s c., 23 A., 137. [Where a surety alleged that he signed a bond without reading it, and that he was not given to understand that he was contracting himself out of the ordinary rule exonerating him from liability if time be given to the principal debtor; held that people who induce others to advance money on the faith of their undertakings cannot escape from their plain effect on such plea and that it requires a clear case of misleading to succeed on such a plea]. See as to the plea that a party signing a document did not know what it was: Kirby v. Great Western Ry Co, 18 L. T., 658; Great Western Ry Co v. McCarty, L. R., 12 App. Cas., 218, 227, 234; Richardson v. Rowntree, L. R, App Cas. (1894), 217; Parker v South Eastern Railway Co, 2 C. P. D, 416, 422; Harris v. Great Western Ry Co, 1 Q. B D, 515, 530, Watkins

the purdanashin class, is yet so close to them in kinship and habits and so secluded from ordinary social intercourse that a like amount of incapacity must be ascribed to her, and the same amount of protection which the law gives to purdanashins must be extended to her; held the contention to be a novel one and that outside the class of regular purdanashin it must depend in each case on the character and position of the individual woman whether those who deal with her are, or are not, bound to take special precautions that her action shall be intelligent and voluntary, and to prove that it was so in case of dispute. And in a later case the Privy Council did not treat as a purdanashin a lady who had no objection to communicate, when necessary, in matters of business with men other than members of her own family, who was able to go to Court to give evidence and to attend at the Registrar's Office in person (1)

It has been held in England that the rules of Courts of Equity in relation to gifts inter vivos are not applicable to the making of wills; and that though natural influence exerted by one who possesses it to obtain a benefit for himself is undue inter vivos, so that gifts and contracts inter vivos between certain parties will be set aside, unless the party benefited can show affirmatively that [illegible] Wills.

[illegible]

the testator (3) For though as observed in the case cited below, while it may be reasonable to presume that a person has availed himself of the natural influence his position gave him, it is a very different thing to presume, without any evidence, that a person has abused his position by the exercise of dominion or the assertion of adverse control(4); yet, on the other hand, it has been said that there is no sound reason why the presumption of undue influence should not be applicable to wills in the same manner as to deeds (5)

112. The fact that any person was born during the continuance of a valid marriage between his mother and any man, or within two hundred and eighty days after its dissolution, the mother remaining unmarried, shall be conclusive proof that he is the legitimate son of that man, unless it can be shown that the parties to the marriage had no access to each other at any time when he could have been begotten Birth du[ring] marriage conclusi[ve] proof of legitimac[y].

Principle.—See Notes, post.

s 3 ("Fact") s 4 ("Conclusive proof.")

Steph Dig, Art 98, Best, Presumptive Evidence, 70, 71, Wharton, Ev, §§ 1298, 1299, 608, Lawson's Presumptive Evidence, 104—119, Taylor, Ev, §§ 16, 106, 950, 931, Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 184, 185, 186, Best, Ev, § 586, Roscoe, N P Ev, 18th Ed, 1047; Phillips and Arnold, 471—473; Wills, Ev., 2nd Ed, 36 202, 207, 215, 216, 286, Powell Ev, 9th Ed, 139, 160, 161, 200, 201, 244, 245, Stewart Rapalje's Treatise on the Law of Witnesses, § 158

v Rymill 10 Q B D 178, 188 Smith v Hughes, L R, 6 Q B, 597, 607, cited in Ram Lall v River Steam Navigation Co Suit 752 of 1894, Cal H Ct, 28th July 1896, Cor Sale, J

(1) Ismail Mussajee v Hafiz Boo P C 33 C, 733 (1906), 10 C W N, 570

(2) Parfitt v Lawless, L R 2 P & D, 462

(3) Act X of 1865 (Succession Act), s 48, Act XXI of 1870 (Hindu Wills) See Sayed Muhammad v Fatteh Muhammad 22 Ind App, 4, 10 (1894), in which the distinction between undue influence and incapacity is pointed out

(4) Parfitt v Lawless supra 470

(5) 2 Leading Cases Notes to Huguenin v Basely See Burr Jones, Ev, 1, § 189

COMMENTARY.

Legitimacy. The section assumes the existence of a valid marriage. The legal presumption of paternity raised by it is applicable only to the offspring of a married couple. A person claiming as an illegitimate child must establish his alleged paternity like any other disputed question of relationship So where a person alleged that he was the illegitimate son of one C C., the onus of establishing that fact was held to be clearly upon him, and he could not, by simply proving that his mother was C.C 's concubine, shift the onus on to the other side to disprove his paternity.(1) When a party admits the paternity of the other party but pleads that he is of illegitimate descent the legal presumption being in favour of legitimacy the onus lies on the party alleging illegitimacy to prove it (2) Where the father and mother were or are married, it is a presumption of law, which is binding until rebutted(3), that a person born in a civilized nation is legitimate. But this presumption may be rebutted, as where a married woman had admittedly lived for years with a man other than her husband and they both had admitted that he was the father of her children born during that time.(4) In the Roman law according to the well-known maxim pater est quem nuptiæ demonstrant (he is the father whom the marriage [illegible] is this, that a child born of a married [illegible] rows on any person who is interested [illegible] le burden of proving it. The law presumes both that a marriage-ceremony is valid(6) and that every person is legitimate. Marriage or filiation (parentage) may be presumed, the law in general presuming against vice and immorality.(7)

As has been said, " this legal presumption that he is the father whom the nuptials show to be so is the foundation of every man's birth and status It is a plain and sensible maxim which is the corner-stone, the very foundation, on which rests the whole fabric of society ; and if you allow it once to be shaken there is no saying what consequences may follow."(8) So strict upon this head was the ancient Common Law that if the husband was within the four seas, at any time during the pregnancy of the wife the presumption was conclusive that her children were legitimate (9) But this rule at length was in the language of Grose, J., " on account of its absolute nonsense," exploded(10), and the rule of modern English law has been summed up concisely by Leach, V. C., to be as follows(11) :—

" The ancient policy of the law of England remains unaltered A child born of a married woman is to be presumed to be the child of the husband, unless there is evidence which excludes all doubt that the husband could not

---

(1) Gopalasami Chetti v Arunachellan Chetty, 27 M, 32 (1903).

(2) Dularey Singh v Suraj Dari Singh 43 I. C, 478.

(3) Wharton, Ev, § 1298; Best, Pres Ev., 70, 71, Morris v Davies, 5 Cl & F, 163, Banbury Peerage Case, 1 Sim & St, 153; Head v Head, 1 Sim & St, 150; Cope v Cope, 1 M & Rob, 269, 276 As to failure to prove parentage, see Rao Narsingh v Beti Maha, 44 A 470 (1922).

(4) Bahadur Singh v Viru, 28 P. R, (1906)

(5) See the maxim applied in the case of Muhammadans in Jaswant Singjee v Jet Singhjee, 3 Moo I A, 245 (1844); Nicholas v Aspher, 24 C, 222 (1896)

(6) Harrod v Harrod, 1 K. & J, 4; Fleming v. Fleming, 4 Bing, 266, Cichel v Lambert, 15 C B, N. S, 782; Harrison v Mayor, DeG M & G, 153; Lawson's Presumptive Evidence, 106, 107; see s 114, post

(7) Lawson's Presumptive Ev, 104—106

(8) Routledge v. Carruthers, Nicholas Adult Bast, 161. " The basis of the rule seems to be a notion that it is undesirable to inquire into the paternity of a child, whose parents have access to each other." Mathby, Ev, 87.

(9) R. v. Murray, 1 Salk, 122, R v Alerton 1 Ld Raym, 122; see Lawson's Presumptive Ev., 109.

(10) R v Luffe, 8 East, 208

(11) Head v. Head, 1 Sim & St, 150 (1823)

be the father. But in modern times the rule of evidence has varied. Formerly it was considered that all doubt could not be excluded, unless the husband were extra quatuor maria. But as it is obvious that all doubt may be excluded from other circumstances, although the husband be within the four seas, the modern practice permits the introduction of every species of legal evidence tending to the same conclusion. But still the evidence must be of a character to exclude all doubt; and when the Judges in the Banbury Case spoke of satisfactory evidence upon this subject, they must be understood to have meant such evidence as would be satisfactory having regard to the special nature of the subject."

The rule here referred to, and declared by the House of Lords in the Banbury Peerage Case(1), was—"In every case where a child is born in lawful wedlock, the husband not being separated from his wife by sentence of divorce, sexual intercourse is presumed to have taken place between the husband and wife, until that presumption is encountered by such evidence as proves, to the satisfaction of those who are to decide the question, that such sexual intercourse did not take place at any time, when, by such intercourse, the husband could, according to the laws of nature, be the father of such child" This is the law both in this country(2) and in England and America at the present time.

The section says that birth during marriage is conclusive proof(3) of legitimacy, unless it can be shown that there was non-access This section differs from those which direct that the Court "shall presume" in the circumstance that in the latter case the presumption may be rebutted by any fact or facts, but the presumption enacted by the present section can be rebutted only by proof of the particular fact indicated as that by which it may be rebutted In order to displace the conclusive presumption, it must be shown that no 'access', or opportunity of sexual intercourse, occurred down to a point of time so near to the birth (as for instance six months) as to render paternity impossible.

In this rule "access" and "non-access" mean the existence or non- Access.
[illegible] exual intercourse (4) If sexual intercourse is [illegible] wife at the time of the child being conceived, [illegible] ury whether the husband or some other man [illegible] access may be proved by [illegible] other case in which it is
[illegible]

As a child born of a married woman is in the first instance presumed to be legitimate, such presumption is not to be rebutted by circumstances which only create doubt and suspicion, but it may be wholly removed by proper and sufficient evidence showing that the husband was (a) incompetent(7), (b) entirely absent so as to have no intercourse or communication of any kind with the mother; (c) entirely absent at the period during which the child must, in the

(1) 1 Sim & St, 153

(2) As to Muhammadan Law, v post, and s 114, post

(3) See s 4, ante

(4) Banbury Peerage Case, 1 Sim & St, 159; 5 Cl & F, 250; Cope v. Cope, 1 M & Rob, 275; Bury v Philpot, 2 My & K, 349, in Hargrave v Hargrave, 9 Beav, 552, 556, Lord Langdale calls it "generating access"

(5) Morris v Davies, 5 Cl & F, 243, Cope v Cope, 1 M & Rob, 275.

(6) Rozario v Ingles, 18 Bom., 468, 472 (1893).

(7) In Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 355 356 it is suggested that the section scarcely makes provision for this case, but "access" does not in this connection simply mean being in the same place or house (Banbury Peerage Case, 1 Sim & St, 159), but access viewed with reference to the result, viz, the procreaction of children There can therefore be as little "access" when the husband is impotent though present, as when he is capable though absent It is clear that there was no intention to depart from the English rule on the point, which is also a rule of obvious good sense.

course of nature, have been begotten; or (d) only present under such circumstances as afford clear and satisfactory proof that there was no sexual intercourse.

Such evidence as this puts an end to the question and establishes the illegitimacy of the child of a married woman.(1) All these similar facts are receivable in evidence in proof of non-access. So also Lord Ellenborough in R v. Luffe(2) laid it down that the illegitimacy of the child might be shown when the legitimacy was impossible and the impossibility arose from (a) the husband being under the age of puberty; (b) the husband labouring under a disability occasioned by natural infirmity; (c) the length of time elapsed since the death of the husband; (d) the absence of the husband; or (e) where the impossibility was based on the laws of nature.

In this last connection it will be unnecessary to prove facts which may certainly be known from the invariable course of nature; such as that a man is not the father of a child, where non-access is already proved until within six months of the woman's delivery (3)

So far as concerns descent from particular parents, a child born during wedlock is presumed according to English law, to be the legitimate issue of such parents, no matter how soon the birth be after the marriage (4) When a man marries a woman whom he knows to be with child, he may be considered as acknowledging by a most solemn act that the child is his.(5) And it has been held that nothing except evidence that the husband did not have intercourse at the period of conception can prove to be illegitimate a child born in wedlock, and that if the husband could from the circumstances of time, place and health, have had nuptial intercourse with his wife, and there be no evidence that he did not have such intercourse, he must be considered the father of her child.(6) The present section, following the English law, adopts the period of birth, as distinguished from conception, as the turning point of legitimacy. It is a peculiarity of that law that it does not concern itself with the concep [illegible] rn of parents married before the [illegible] when he was begotten (7) But [illegible] matter how soon born after the [illegible] by proof that the alleged father [illegible]

(1) Hargrave v Hargrave, 9 Beav, 552, 555, per Lord Langdale

(2) 8 East, 207

(3) Taylor, Ev, § 16, and cases there cited, and cf Whisterlo's case cited in Lawson, Pres Ev, 110, where it was attempted to charge a black man as the father of a white child born of a Mulatto woman So also expert evidence has been admitted to show that by the "laws of nature," a white man and woman could not be the parents of a Mulatto child Wharton, Ev, § 1298

(4) Wharton, Ev § 1298 As to the Mahomedan Law, see Syed Ameer Ali's Mahomedan Law, Vol II pp 199—201.

(5) R v Luffe, 8 East, 210 per Lawrence, J, and see ib, 207, "with respect to the case where the parents have married so recently before the birth of the child that it could not have been begotten in wedlock, it stands upon its own peculiar ground The marriage of the parties is the criterion adopted by the law in the cases of antinuptial generation for ascertaining the actual parentage of the child For this purpose, it will not examine when the gestation began, looking only to the recognition of it by the husband in the subsequent act of marriage" Per Lord Ellenborough

(6) Gordon v Gordon and Granville Gordon (1903), P 141.

(7) Muhammad Allahadad v Muhammad Ismail, 10 A, 289, 336 (118), per Mahmood, J Under Muhammedan law questions of legitimacy are referred to the date of the conception of the child and not to the period of the birth ib, v. post Under Hindu Law it is not necessary in order to render a child legitimate that the procreation as well as the birth should take place after marriage. Oolagappa Chetty v. Collector of Trichinopoly, 14 B L R, 115 (1873); see s 114, post As to the position of bastards in Hindu Law, see Pandaiya Telaver v. Puli Telaver, 1 Mad H C. R, 478 (1863).

was incapable on grounds either of impotence, or absence, of being the father of the child.(1)

Where evidence of access is given, it requires the strongest evidence of non-intercourse or other proof beyond reasonable doubt, to justify a judgment of illegitimacy.(2) Adultery on the wife's part, however clearly proved, will not have this effect, if the husband had access to the wife at the beginning of the period of the gestation, unless there is positive proof of non-intercourse (3) From evidence of "access"—as this word is used in this connection—the presumption of sexual intercourse is very strong.(4) But evidence of access is not conclusive It being only proved that the opportunity for sexual intercourse had existed—as that the parties lived in the same house—and the fact itself not being proved, evidence is admissible to disprove the presumption that it did take place The parties may be followed within these four walls, and the fact of sexual intercourse not only disproved by direct testimony but by circumstantial evidence raising a strong presumption against the fact In other words, the proof of sexual intercourse being conclusive the presumption, cannot be attacked, but the evidence by which such fact is to be established may be contradicted (5) To rebut the presumption under this section it is for those who dispute the paternity of the child to prove non-access Where a wife came to her husband's house a few days before he died and remained there up to the time of his death, and it was shown that a child, alleged to be that of her husband, was the child of the wife and that it was born within the time necessary to give rise to the presumption under this section, the Privy child must have been begotten suffering from a serious illness which terminated fatally shortly afterwards was held, under the circumstances, not sufficient to rebut the presumption (6) This presumption still exists where the parties are living apart from each other by mutual consent though the presumption is rebuttable by proof of non-access. But it is otherwise where they are separated by a decree of Court. for in such cases the presumption is that they obey the decree (7) Moreover by the terms of the section there must be a "continuance of a valid marriage." But a child born within 280 days from the dissolution of a valid marriage will be presumed legitimate So in the case of widowhood, though cohabitation is possible, the law will presume in favour

(1) Morris v Davies, 5 Cl & F 163 R. v Mansfield, 1 Q B, 444, Atchley v Sprigg, 33 L J Ch 345, Wharton Ev § 1298

(2) Wharton, Ev § 1298 Taylor, Ev § 106; Head v Head supra, Cope v Cope supra; Morris v Davis, supra, Wright v Holdgate, 3 C & Kir, 158, Legge v Edmonds, 25 L J Ch 125, Banbury Peerage Case, supra, R v Luffe, supra as to the competency of the parents to prove non-access, v post

(3) Bury v Philpot, 2 Myl & K 349 Head v Head, supra, Lawson's Pres Ev 113, 114, Wharton, Ev, § 1298 The Barony of Sale, 1 H L Cas 507, Gurney v Gurney, 32 L J, Ch, 456

(4) Lawson, 114 see Plower v Berry 3 L J, Ch, 680, R v Inhabitants of Mansfeld, 1 Q B, 144, Cope v Cope supra, that husband and wife slept together affords strong and irresistible inference of sexual intercourse, Legge v Edmonds, supra

(5) Lawson, 115, 116, R v Inhabitants of Mansfield, supra, Cope v Cope supra on this point the conduct of the parties is relevant, as that the wife concealed the birth of the child from the husband Morris v Davies, 5 Cl & F, 163, Cope v Cope, supra, Banbury Peerage Case, supra, Pandaiya Telaver v Puli Telaver, 1 Mad H C R, 478, 485 (1863)

(6) Narendra Nath v Ram Gobind 29 C, 11 (1901) s c 4 Bom L R 243 Dist in Rao Narsingh v Beti Maha, 44 A, 470 (1922), where it was held that the failure of the defendants to prove their case affirmatively did not entitle the plaintiff to the benefit of the presumptions under this section of chastity and of the legitimacy of a child born within 280 days after the death of the husband (1) Where a child born some 365 days after the last period at which he could have been begotten by the husband of his mother, was set up as legitimate, it was held that although such a period of gestation was perhaps not absolutely beyond the bounds of possibility, yet there being evidence that the mother had been married to her husband for ten years without having had any children by him, and also evidence which pointed strongly to the conclusion of immorality on the part of the mother, the only reasonable finding was against the legitimacy of the child.(2) In a later case where non-access for eleven months was proved the child was found illegitimate.(3) Where the question in issue was whether the plaintiff was the legitimate son of a man to whom his mother had admittedly been at one time married, but by whom (according to the defendant) she had been abandoned or divorced, it was held that mere abandonment would not dissolve the tie of marriage, and that in such a case the presumption of legitimacy would prevail, unless it could be shown that the parties to the marriage had no access to each other at a time when the plaintiff could have been begotten; and it was held also that the burden of proof as to this and as to the alleged divorce having taken place at a time which would debar him from relying on this section lay on the defendant.(4) In Buddhist law there is no such thing as judicial separation but an order under section 488 of the Criminal Procedure Code until it is rescinded is for all practical purposes the same thing as an order for judicial separation; and if while the order is in force a child is born to the wife the onus is shifted on to her of proving access The rule laid down in this section is inapplicable to such a case inasmuch as the order under the Criminal Procedure Code practically puts an end to the continuance of a valid marriage (5)

(7) Taylor Ev, § 106, and cases there cited

It may be a question of difficulty to determine how far the provisions of this section are to be taken as trenching upon the Muhammedan law of marriage, parentage, legitimacy and inheritance, which departments of law under other statutory provisions are to be adopted as the rule of decision by the Courts in British India.(6)

Evidence of parents. According to English(7) and American(8) law, the parents are incompetent to prove non-access when the legitimacy of a child is in question, which

(1) See Trilok Nath v Lachhmin Kunwari, 7 C W N, 617 (1903), when the child was born 223 days after the husband's death, s. c, 25 A, 403

(2) Tikam Singh v Dhan Kunwar, 24 A, 445 (1902).

(3) John Howe v Charlotte Howe, 38 M, 466 (1915)

(4) Bhima v Dhulappa, 7 Bom L R 15

(5) Ma Mya v Ma Shwe Ban, 46 I C, 620

(6) Muhammad Allahdad v Muhammad Ismail, 10 A, 289—339 (1888), per Mahmood, J, in Field, Ev, 514, it is stated that "It may be supposed that the provisions of this section will supersede certain rather absurd rules of Muhammedan Law, by which a child born six months after marriage or within two years after divorce or the death of the husband, is presumed to be his legitimate offspring See the Hedaya, Ch XIII and Macnaghten's Hindu Law Ch VIII, § 31. "It is to be noted that, according to the modern view, the period is ten months after divorce or the death of the husband. Further the determination of this point is not touched by considerations as to the rational character of the rules to be adopted, but is simply dependent on an accurate distinction between the substantive rules of Muhammedan Law and the rules of evidence (10 A, 325, supra) If the point for decision be one of evidence only the case will be governed by this Act (ib; Mazhar Ali v Budh Singh, 7 A, 297; see ss 107, 108, ante).

(7) Taylor, Ev, §§ 950, 951, Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed, 184—186, Best, Ev., § 586; Roscoe, N. P. Ev, 1038; ib 18th Ed. 1047; Steph Dig, Art. 98, Powell, Ev., 9th Ed, 139, 200, 201 The rule has recently been affirmed in the Russell Case, the official report of the Court of final appeal not being to hand as this note was being printed latter fact must be established by circumstantial evidence only. The rule in England has been stated(1) to be that—(a) Neither the mother nor the husband is a competent witness as to the fact of their having or not having had sexual intercouse with each other (2), nor are any declarations by them upon that subject deemed to be relevant facts when the legitimacy of the woman's child is in question, whether the mother or her husband can be called as a witness or not; (b) provided that in applications for affiliation-orders when proof has been given (by independent evidence) of the non-access of the husband at any time when his wife's child could have been begotten, the wife may give evidence as to the person by whom it was begotten.(3)

(8) Stewart Rapalje's Treatise on the Law of Witnesses, § 158; Lawson's Presumptive Evidence, 118; Wharton, Ev. § 608.

It has further been held by the House of Lords that a husband may be asked whether he had intercourse before marriage with the woman who afterwards became his wife (4)

The grounds of the rule have been stated to be "decency, morality and policy." The proviso relating to affiliation-orders is founded on necessity, since the fact to which the woman is permitted to testify is probably within her own knowledge and that of the adulterer alone (5) It has been held in America that the rule thus established is not affected by the Statutes removing disability from interest.(6) The rule excludes not only all direct questions respecting access but all questions which have a tendency to prove or disprove that fact, unless they are put with a view to some different point in the cause (7) No such rule is, however, to be found in, or implied from, this Act and it has accordingly been held that in this country a wife can be examined as to evidence d in the followed compe-on-access and the consequent illegitimacy of a child (9)

113. A notification in the Gazette of India that any portion of British territory has been ceded to any Native State, Prince or Ruler(10), shall be conclusive proof that a valid cession of such territory took place at the date mentioned in such notification.

Proof of cession of territory

Principle.—See Note, post.

s. 37 (Relevancy of Notifications in Official Gazettes.)

s 57, Cl. (10) (Judicial notice of British territories)

s 4 ("Conclusive proof.")

Markby, Ev. Act, 87; Field, Ev., 6th Ed, 356, 357, Cunningham, Ev, 298, 299, Whitley Stokes, Anglo-Indian Codes, 835

(1) Steph Dig., Art 98

(2) Unless the proceedings in the course of which the question arises are proceedings instituted in consequence of adultery, 32 & 33 Vic., c. 68, s. 3.

(3) Steph. Dig. Art 98, citing, R v Luffe, supra; Cope v Cope, supra, 272, 274; Legge v. Edmonds, 25 L. J, Eq, 125, 135; R. v Mansfield, 1 Q B, 444; Morris v. Davies, 3 C. & P, 215; Hawes v. Draeger, L. R., 23 Ch D, 173; Aylesford Peerage case, 11 Q B. D., 1 Letters written by the mother may, as part of the res gestæ, be admissible evidence to show illegitimacy though the mother could not be called as a witness to prove the statements contained in such letters, Aylesford Peerage Case, supra; Burnaby v Baillie, 42 Ch D, 282, 290, 291; Wills Ev, 2nd Ed, 202, 287.

(4) Poulett Peerage Case, L R, A C, 395 (1903).

(5) Taylor, Ev, §§ 950, 951, see the grounds given in the judgment cited in Wharton, Ev, 608, note (2)

(6) Lawson, Pres Ev, 118, Wharton, Ev, § 608.

(7) Taylor, Ev, § 950, and case there cited.

(8) Rozario v Inglis, 18 B 468 (1893) In England independent evidence of non-access would be required in the first instance; v supra.

(9) John Howe v Charlotte Howe, 38 M., 466 (1915).

(10) See for example, Gazette of India, 1873, Part I, p. 2

COMMENTARY.

Cession of territory.

This section was an attempt for political reasons to exclude inquiry by Courts of Justice into the validity of the Acts of the Government. But it has been decided by the Privy Council(1) that the Indian legislature had no power to do this; and the section is therefore a dead-letter.(2) The British Crown has the power without the intervention of the Imperial Parliament to make a cession of territory within British India to a foreign prince or feudatory.(3) But the Governor-General in Council being precluded by the Acts 24 and 25 Vic., Cap. 67, section 22, from legislating directly as to the sovereignty or dominion of the Crown over any part of its territories in India, or as to the allegiance of British subjects,—could not, by any legislative Act purporting to make a notification in a Government Gazette conclusive evidence of a cession of territory, exclude inquiry as to the nature and lawfulness of that cession.(4) The Court must take judicial notice of the territories under the dominion of the British Crown.(5) See also in connection with this section(6), the seventh clause of the third section, Bengal Regulation XIV of 1825, which enacts that, for the purposes of that Regulation (viz., the inquiry into the validity sever

Briti

the 1

by the Nawab Vizier, the 1st January 1801; for the provinces ceded by Daulat Rao Scindia and the Peshwah, the 1st January 1803; for the provinces of Cuttack, Puttaspore and its dependencies, the 14th October 1803; for the pergunnah of Khandah and the other territory ceded by Nana Govind Rao, the 1st November 1817.

Court may presume existence of certain facts.

114. The Court may presume the existence of any fact which it thinks likely to have happened, regard being had to the common course of natural events, human conduct and public and private business(7), in their relation to the facts of the particular case.

Illustrations.

The Court may presume—

(a) that a man who is in possession of stolen goods soon after the theft is either the thief or has received the goods knowing them to be stolen, unless he can account for his possession;

X (b) that an accomplice is unworthy of credit unless he is corroborated in material particulars,

(c) that a bill-of-exchange, accepted or endorsed, was accepted or endorsed for good consideration,

(d) that a thing or state of things which has been shown to be in existence within a period shorter than that within which such things or states of things usually cease to exist, is still in existence,

(1) Damodar Gordhan v Deoram Kanji, 1 B, 367 (1876), s c, L R, 3 I. A, 102; same case in Bombay High Court reported in 10 Bom. H C. R., 37 (1873), in which cases the effect of this section and the power of the Indian Legislature to enact it were discussed. As to the power of legislation of the Governor-General in Council, see Alter Caufman v. Government of Bombay, 18 B., 636 (1894), and cases there cited

(2) Markby, Ev. Act, 87.

(3) Lachmi Narain v. Raja Partap, 2 A., 1 (1878), following opinion expressed by the Privy Council in Damodar Gordhan v. Deoram Kanji, 1 B., 367 (1876), supra.

(4) Damodar Gordhan v Deoram Kanji, 1 B., 367 (1876), supra.

(5) S. 57, Cl 10.

(6) Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 357.

(7) As to the meaning of "common course of public and private business," see Ningaua v Bharmappa, 23 B, 66 (1898).

(e) that judicial and official acts have been regularly performed,

(f) that the common course of business has been followed in particular cases(1),

(g) that evidence which could be, and is not, produced would, if produced, be unfavourable to the person who withholds it;

(h) that if a man refuses to answer a question which he is not compelled to answer by law, the answer, if given, would be unfavourable to him,

(i) that, when a document creating an obligation is in the hands of the obligor the obligation has been discharged.

But the Court shall also have regard to such facts as the following, in considering whether such maxims do or do not apply to the particular case before it:—

as to illustration (a)—a shopkeeper has in his till a marked rupee soon after it was stolen, and cannot account for its possession specifically, but is continually receiving rupees in the course of his business:

as to illustration (b)—A, a person of the highest character, is tried for causing a man's death by an act of negligence in arranging certain machinery B, a person of equally good character, who also took part in the arrangement, describes precisely what was done, and admits and explains the common carelessness of A and himself.

as to illustration (b)—a crime is committed by several persons A, B and C, three of the criminals, are captured on the spot and kept apart from each other Each gives an account of the crime implicating D, and the accounts corroborate each other in such a manner as to render previous concert highly improbable.

as to illustration (c)—A, the drawer of a bill of exchange, was a man of business (2) B, the acceptor, was a young and ignorant person, completely under A's influence as to illustration (d)—it is proved that a river ran in a certain course five years ago, but it is known that there have been floods since that time which might change its course as to illustration (e)—a judicial act, the regularity of which is in question, was performed under exceptional circumstances.

as to illustration (f)—the question is, whether a letter was received It is shown to have been posted, but the usual course of post was interrupted by disturbances:

as to illustration (g)—a man refuses to produce a document which would bear on a contract of small importance on which he is sued, but which might also injure the feelings and reputation of his family:

as to illustration (h)—a man refuses to answer a question which he is not compelled by law to answer, but the answer to it might cause loss to him in matters unconnected with the matter in relation to which it is asked· as to illustration (i)—a bond is in possession of the obligor, but the circumstances of the case are such that he may have stolen it.

Principle.—See Notes, post: Introduction, ante.

s 3 ("Court") s 4 ("May presume")

s 3 ("Fact") ss. 79—99, 107—118 (Other presumptions)

Steph. Dig, Arts 85—89, 98—101, Taylor, Ev, §§ 70—216, Greenleaf, Ev, §§ 14—48 and Index; Wharton, Ev, §§ 1226—1365, Burr. Jones, Ev, §§ 8—103; Wood's Practice, Ev., §§ 53—82, Wharton, Cr. Ev, §§ 707—851, Lawson on Presumptive Evidence, passim; Best on Presumptive Evidence, passim, Wills, Circumstantial Evidence, passim; Phillips and Arnold, Ev, 467—493; Best, Ev, 275—401

---

(2) See Ningava v Bharmappa, 23 B, 66 (1898).

(3) "Man of business in its well-known popular sense must mean a man habitually engaged in mercantile transactions or trade," ib.

COMMENTARY.

Scope of the section

The subject of presumptions, considered generally, will be found to have been shortly discussed in the notes to s. 4 ante. Certain particular presumptions were by the Evidence Act Bill, and have been by the Act itself, made the subject of special enactment. Objection having, however, been taken to the Evidence Act Bill on the score of its insufficient treatment of the subject of presumptions, the present general clause was inserted with a view of providing for all instances not covered by the provisions of the preceding sections. The present section coupled with the general repealing clause at the beginning of the Act makes it clear "that Courts of Justice are to use their own common sense and experience in judging of the effect of particular facts, and that they are to be subject to no technical rules whatever on the subject.(1) The illustrations given are for the most part cases of what in English law are called presumptions of law; artificial rules as to the effect of evidence by which the Court is bound to guide its decision, subject, however, to certain limitations which it is difficult either to understand or to apply, but which will be swept away by the section in question."(2) A presumption of law is an inference which derives from the law some arbitrary or artificial effect and is obligatory upon Judges and juries. The inference in such case is independent of any belief based upon what is more or less probable because the law declares the uniform effect of a certain state and condition of circumstances. The history of jurisprudence illustrates the fact that among Judges as among Legislators, there is a constant struggle, however ineffectual it may be, to approach uniformity in the law. Although every Judge understands that each case should be determined according to its own facts, he often finds different cases so nearly analogous in the facts presented that similar instructions to the jury or directions to himself are appropriate in each. Judges thus find themselves not only applying to different cases the same substantive rules of law, but they derive aid from precedents even in reaching conclusions as to the facts of a given case This is well illustrated by the growth of presumptions of law. Out of the attempts of many Judges to deduce rules for determining the probative effect of certain facts or groups of facts often recurring, have developed in England many rules called presumptions, but which widely differ in importance and intensity. English and American Courts are, however, now inclined to abandon the arbitrary rules of evidence which formerly forbade inquiry into the real facts, and but few of the numerous presumptions formerly called conclusive can now be so classified (3) This Act is a strongly marked instance of this tendency. "The terms of this section are such as to reduce to their proper position of mere maxims, which are to be applied to facts by the Courts in their discretic [illegible] which English law gives, to a greater [illegible] the most important of them are give [illegible] artificial and technical rules find no place in this Act, the Courts being free to use their own common sense [illegible] facts, it will be of assistance [illegible] ice of those principles in the [illegible] the English Courts in dealing with certain questions common both to England and to this or indeed any other country, as also to record those decisions of the Indian Courts which touch questions peculiar to this country. These presumptions will be found dealt

(1) When events occur in the far past it often becomes absolutely necessary for the purposes of justice and equity that presumptions should be made. Ram Chunder v Jugesh Chunder, 19 W. R, 353, 354 (1873)

(2) Proceedings of the Legislative Council, Gazette of India, Supplement, 30th March, 1872, pp 234, 235, per Sir J. F. Stephen.

(3) Burr. Jones, Ev. I., §§ 8, 10

(4) Steph. Introd, p. 175; see Field Ev., 6th Ed, 363—367.

with in alphabetical order following the notes which are given to the Illustrations of this section. Some of those which have been laid down by Indian Courts as applicable to certain circumstances peculiar to this country, indicate the fact that the process abovementioned, which evolved the ancient law of presumptions, is still, and will always perhaps to some extent remain, in operation.

The Illustrations to this section are examples taken from the important presumptions relating to innocence(1), regularity(2) and continuity which are commented upon in the following notes.(3)

If possession is proved(4) the Court may presume that the man who is in possession of stolen goods soon after the theft is either the thief, or has received the goods knowing them to be stolen, unless he can account for his possession.(5) The presumption under this section will not alone justify fixing a person with more than knowledge that the goods were obtained by dacoity (6) Possession is presumptive evidence of property(7), but when it is proved or may be reasonably presumed that the property in question is stolen property, the burden of proof is shifted, and the possessor it bound to show that he came by it honestly ; and if he fail to do so, the presumption is that he is the thief or the receiver according to the circumstances.(8) The mere fact of recent possession of stolen property is, in general, evidence of theft, not of receipt of stolen goods with guilty knowledge. The effect to be given to such possession is, however, a question not of law but of fact (9) The property must be shown to have been stolen by the true owner swearing to its identity and loss, or the circumstances must be such as to lead in themselves to the conclusion that the property was not honestly come by. So persons employed in carrying sugar and other articles from ships and wharves, have been convicted of theft upon evidence that they were detected with property of the same kind upon them, recently upon coming from such places, although the identity of the property as belonging to such and such persons could not otherwise be proved (10) If the property be proved to have been stolen(11), or may fairly be presumed to have been so, then the question arises, whether or not the prisoner is to be called

Illustr (a

---

(1) See Illustrations (a), (b), (g), (h)

(2) See Illustrations (c), (e), (f), (i)

(3) See Illustration (d)

(4) R v Hari Maniram, 6 Bom. L R, 887, 893 (1904)

(5) S 114, Ill (a) see Taylor, Ev, §§ 127A—127C, Ina Sheikh v R, 11 C, 160 (1885), R v Shuruffooddeen, 13 W R., Cr., 26 (1870), Ishen Chandra v. R, 21 C., 328, 336 (1893), R v Poromeshur Aheer, 23 W R, Cr, 16 (1875), R v Motee Jolaha, 5 W R, Cr, 66 (1866), In re Ramjoy Kurmokar, 25 W R., C, 10 (1876) In R v Ali Husain, 23 A, 306 (1901), the Court appears to have been of opinion that the evidence was not sufficient to connect the prisoners with the possession of the stolen articles

(6) Asimuddin Sardar v. King Emp, 32 C L J, 89.

(7) v ante, s 110 and notes thereto

(8) Roscoe, Cr Ev, 13th Ed, 18, 736, for a case in which the circumstances led to the second of these presumptions, see R v Langmead, L. & C, 427 (When the prisoner was found in the recent possession of some stolen sheep, of which he could give no satisfactory account, and it might reasonably be inferred from the circumstances that he did not steal them himself, it was held that there was evidence for the jury that he received them knowing them to have been stolen) In Ishan Muchi v R, 15 C, 511 (1888), it was held that in a case of receiving there must be some proof that some person other than the accused had possession of the property before the accused got possession of it. See R v Poromeshur Aheer, 23 W R, Cr, 16 (1875), R v. T Burke, 6 A, 224 (1884) It has been thought that there should be some evidence of some other person having committed the theft, see R v Densley, 6 C & P, 399, R. v. Woolford, 1 M & Rob, 384.

(9) Mayne's Criminal Law of India, §§ 528, 499, Taylor, Ev, § 127 B See Amrita Lal Hazra v Emperor, 42 C, 957 (1915) (possession, to be punishable must be with assent)

(10) Roscoe Cr Ev 18 citing 2 East, P. C, 656, see R v. Burton, Dears, C. C, 282

(11) See R v Burke, 6 A, 224 (1884), R v Bajo Hari, 19 W R, Cr., 37 (1873).

upon to account for the possession of it. If he fails to do so, a presumption will arise if, taking into consideration the nature of the goods in question, they can be said to have been recently stolen. It has been said that to raise the presumption legitimately the possession should be exclusive as well as recent.(1) But where stolen property was found in the house of a joint Hindu family, and the circumstances were such that it was very improbable that such property could have been placed there without the connivance of some or all of the members of the family, it was held that the managing member was rightly convicted because knowledge of its presence having been established against him, he was as house-master presumed to have been in possession of such stolen property.(2) If actual possession is proved, it is not incumbent upon the prosecution to prove that the accused knew that the articles were in his actual possession before he can be put upon his defence to account for such possession.(3) The test of a correct presumption of guilt in a prisoner not being able to account for property in his premises is dependent on the fact whether the surrounding circumstances of the case really and properly raise such a presumption.(4) In what instances goods are to be considered recently stolen cannot be defined in any precise manner, but the undermentioned cases will show what has been held upon the subject.(5) The Evidence Act is merely illustrative of the manner in which inferences can be drawn from the common course of events, human conduct and the like In a prosecution for receipt of stolen goods lapse of time after the theft is usually an important factor in determining the guilt of the accused, but the importance to be attached to it must vary with the circumstances of the individual case and depends on the frequency with which the property is likely to have changed hands. No maximum period is suggested as that beyond which no inference of guilt can be drawn.(6) And in another more recent case it was held that no presumption was raised under this section where goods alleged to be stolen (but not identified, being jewellery of an ordinary type) were found six months after a dacoity.(7) The presumption is not confined to charges of theft, but extends to all charges, however penal. Thus in an indictment of arson, proof that property which was in a house at the time it was burnt, was soon after found in the possession of the prisoner, raises a probable presumption that he was present and concerned in burning the house; and, under similar circumstances, a like inference arises in the case of murder accompanied by robbery or house-breaking and of the possession of a quantity of counterfeit money.(8) So in cases in which murder and robbery have been shown to form parts of one transaction, the recent and unexplained possession of the stolen property, while it would be presumptive

(1) R v Malhari, 6 B, 733 (1882), citing Best, Ev The finding of stolen property in the house of the accused, provided there were other inmates capable of committing the larceny, is of itself insufficient to prove his possession; though if coupled with proof of other suspicious circumstances, it may fully warrant the conviction of the accused. Taylor, Ev., § 127 A, and cases there cited, and observations in R v. Hari, 6 Bom L. R, 887, 892 (1904).

(2) R v. Budh Lal (1907), 29 A, 598

(3) R v. Hari, 6 Bom L. R, 887, per Aston, J., contra per Batty, J.

(4) In re Meer Yar, 13 W. R., Cr, 70, 71 (1870).

(5) Roscoe, Cr. Ev., 19· Ina Sheikh v. R., 11 C, 160 (1885); citing and following R. v. Adam, 3 C. & P., 600; R v. Cooper, 3 C. & R., 318; R. v. Parridge, 7 C. & P, 551. See Roscoe, Cr Ev, loc cit, where these and other cases are cited R v. Poromeshur Aheer, 23 W. R, Cr, 1, 6 (1875); R. v. Burke, 6 A, 224, 227 (1884). The question what amounts to recent possession sufficient to justify the presumption in any particular case, varies according as the stolen article is or is not calculated to pass readily from hand to hand Taylor, Ev, § 127A In Re Jainullahdeen, 53 I C., 81, held that thirteen months was not "soon after" and in 22 C W. N., 597, three months was held to raise no presumption.

(6) Smith v Emperor, 19 Cr L J, 189; s. c., 43 I. C., 605.

(7) R. v. Sughar Singh (1907), 29 A., 138, following Ina Sheikh v R. and R. v. Burke, supra.

(8) Taylor, Ev., § 127 C., and cases there cited.

...harge of robbery, would similarly be evidence ...r.(1) The Court must in all cases consider ... the maxim does or does not apply to the particular case before it (2) Illustration (b).

The Court may presume that an accomplice is unworthy of credit unless he is corroborated in material particulars.(3) The grounds upon which this presumption is based, and the rules which relate to the admission of accomplice evidence, will be found discussed in the notes to section 133, post

The Court may presum... accepted or endorsed for go... ation for a contract should ... change and promissory n... primâ facie presumed to ... their negotiability, and ... may reasonably be inferred from the solemnity of the instruments themselves and the deliberate mode in which they are executed.(4) This and other presumptions relating to negotiable instruments have been made the subject of special enactments in the Negotiable Instruments Act (5) Professional money-... of age to recover certain loans of mon... ...m to him on promissory notes. The de... was entitled to a large property but had not yet come into possession of it, was of an extravagant and reckless character He pleaded, as to part of the consideration for the notes, that he did not receive it, and as to a further part, that the consideration was immoral In dealing with the case, the Court laid down the following propositions, not as rules of law, but as guides in considering the evidence in such a case :— Illustration (c).

1. That upon the above facts the ordinary presumption that a negotiable instrument has been executed for value received was so much weakened that the defendant's allegation that he had not received full consideration was sufficient to shift the burden of proof and to throw upon the money-lenders (the plaintiffs) the obligation of satisfying the Court that they had paid the consideration in full That is the practical effect of Illustration (c) to section 114 of this Act.

2. Where the plaintiff, in answer to such a defence, affirmed that he had paid the consideration in full, and was corroborated by his books and witnesses the onus of proof again shifted over upon the defendant

3 The burden of proof thus thrown upon the defendant could only be met by a perfectly truthful and harmonious statement which the Court felt able to rely upon with confidence. In the absence of this, the ordinary presumption laid down in the Negotiable Instruments Act must prevail, viz, until the contrary is proved, the presumption should be made that every negotiable instrument was made for consideration.(6) The mere fact that the drawer

---

(1) R v Jami, 13 M, 426, 432 (1890).

(2) See s 114, observations in text of this section relating to this Illustration on p 770.

(3) S 114, ill (b); but see also observations in the text of this section relating to this Illustration on p 770 See Emperor v Gangappa Kardeppa, 38 B, 156 (1914); R v Khandia bin Pandu, 15 B., 66 (1890) Emperor v Anant Kumar Banerji, 32 C. L. J, 204

(4) Taylor, Ev, § 148, Story on Bills, §§ 16, 178, Jones v Gordon, 2 App Cas, 627, H L Lawson, Pres Ev, 77—81

(5) See the Act (XXVI of 1881 Amended V of 1914, rep in part VI of 1901) edited by M. D Chalmers (1882), pp 110—114, and see Gaya Din v Sri Ram, 39 A, 364 (1917) (onus of proving that no damage ensued from failure to present) and Madho Prasad v. Durga Prasad, 2 Bom L R 891 (1900).

(6) Moti Golabchand v Mahomed Medhi, 20 B, 367 (1895) See note (5) ante.

and acceptor of a bill are partners, does not give rise to the presumption that they are partners in respect of the drawing of the bill or that the bill was drawn by one of them on behalf of both.(1)

Illustration (d)

The Court may presume that a thing or state of things which has been shown to be in existence within a period shorter than that within which such thing or state of things usually cease to exist, is still in existence. The ordinary legal presumption is that [illegible] (2) When the existence of a personal relat is once established by proof, tl as before until the contrary is from the nature of the subject in question. But the presumption is not retrospective. It cannot be permitted to operate retrospectively so as to infer the prior existence of marriage or other like relationship from proof of its present existence. It may well be that in the example given the parties contracted the relationship within a few days before the trial.(3) And though a present continuance may be, a future continuance is never presumed The law presumes that a fact continuous in its nature still continues to exist until a change is shown, and so a state of things proved to exist three years ago is presumed in law to be still existing unless the contrary be shown, but the law indulges no presumption that it will continue three years longer. It is not unreasonable to presume the continuance of an existing fact at the time of the trial, for the other party can overthrow it by proof if it be not so ; but when a future continuance is presumed, the party has no ability to unfold the future and give an answer by his proof.(4) In case of conflicting presumptions, the presumption of the continuance of things is weaker than the presumption of innocence. Thus a bankrupt in 1837 makes a scheduled return of his property. It is afterwards discovered that in 1835 he owned certain property which was not included in the schedule. There is no presumption that he owned this property in 1837, for the presumption is that he did not commit a fraud.(5) In the case cited it was held that a previous ex-parte rent-decree between the same parties is conclusive as to the relation between them at that time, and that its value

---

(1) Jambu Ramaswamy v Sundararaja Chetti, 26 M., 239 (1902), which case also deals with the question of onus in the case of damage suffered by drawer by omission to give notice of dishonour

(2) Mussamat Jairut-ool Batool v Hoseinee Begum, 11 Moo I A, 194, 209 (1867) ; Obhoy Churn v. Huri Nath, 8 C, 72, 79 (1881) See Phipson, Ev, 3rd Ed, 86 [States of person's mind or things, at a given time, may in some cases be proved by showing their previous existence in the same state, there being a probability weakened with remoteness of time that certain conditions and relationships continue, e g, human life, marriage, sanity, opinions, title, partnership, official character, domicile Taylor, Ev, §§ 196—205; Best, Pres. Ev, 186—202; Burr. Jones, sec 152, et seq; Best, Ev, §§ 405—410; Wharton, Ev, §§ 1284—1289 This rule must, of course, be clearly distinguished from that which declares that specific acts done in other cases do not raise the inference that a similar act was done in another case· Hollingham v. Head, 4 C. B N. S., 388, v. post.

(3) Lawson, Pres Ev 190, 191, citing Murdock v. State, 68 Ala. 567 (Amer); Bareli v. Lytle, 4 La. Ann, 557 (Amer) It cannot be presumed from the fact that a person was qualified to act as a Justice at a particular date, that he was qualified so to act at a period anterior to that date Taylor v. Creswell, 45 Ind, 423 (Amer) [A made a contract in 1860. In 1864 he was insane There is no presumption that he was insane in 1860].

(4) Covert v. Gray, 34 How Pr, 450 (Amer.), cited in Lawson, Pres Ev., 187, 188

(5) Lawson, Pres Ev., 191, citing Powell v. Knox, 1 Ala., 634 (Amer). But see Best, Ev, 186, citing R. v. Budd, 5 Esp, 230; Turton v. Turton, 3 Hagg N C, 350; in which it is said that there are several instances to be found in the books where this presumption has been held stronger than that of innocence or those derived from the course of nature is the more apparent since this Illustration allows the Court to make a presumption as to the continuance of the state of things shown by it.(1)

Sections 107—109, ante, deal with particular applications of the principle of which the present illustration is the general expression. Other common instances are here shortly adverted to Possession or ownership of property once proved to exist is presumed to continue until the contrary is shown. Thus if it be proved that at a given time B was possessed of certain land, the presumption is that such possession continues, and the burden is on him who alleges a dispossession.(2) There is a presumption of the continuance of possession with the person in whom there is title. So in a suit for the possession of jungle lands where there is no proof of facts of ownership having been exercised on either side, possession must be presumed to have continued with the person to whom they rightfully belong (3) Possession is not necessarily the same thing as actual user. When land has been shown to have been in a condition unfitting it for actual enjoyment in the usual modes, at such a time and under such circumstances that that state naturally would and probably did continue till within twelve years before suit, it may properly be presumed that it did so continue, and that the previous possession continued also, until the contrary is proved Such a presumption is in no sense a conclusive one. Its bearing upon each particular case must depend upon the circumstances of that case (4) Constructive possession will not, however, be presumed in favour of a wrongdoer.(5) Similarly non-possession or loss(6), debt(7), and other conditions of property or things(8), once proved to exist are presumed to continue until the contrary is shown (9) So when a private arrangement by way of partition was admitted to have existed and to have been acted upon for forty years, it was held that that fact raised a presumption that it was of a permanent character; throwing upon the plaintiffs who sought to disturb the existing state of things, the onus of showing that it had been legally determined (10) So also domicile,

(1) Hiranmoy Kumar Saha v Ramjan Ali Dewan, 43 C, 170 (1916)

(2) Best, Pres Ev, 186; Lawson, Pres Ev, 163 & 164, and cases there cited, Best, Ev, 405

(3) Leelanund v Mussumat Basheeroonissa, 16 W R, 102 (1871), Mitterjeet Singh v Radha Pershad, 21 W. R., 368 (1875), Ram Bandhu v Kusu Bhattu, 5 C L. R, 481 (1879), Watson & Co. v The Government, 3 W R 73 (1865), Mohiny Mohun v Krishna Kishore, 9 C, 802 (1883), s c, 12 C L R, 337, Probhakar Tiwari v Raja Baidya, 1 C W N, cxix (1897), and see cases cited in notes to s 100, ante.

(4) Mahomed Ali v Khaja Abdul, 9 C, 744 (1883), F B, s c, 12 C L R, 257, cf Rajcoomar Roy v. Gobind Chunder, 19 Ind App, 140 (1891), as to the possession of land formed by the gradual drying up of lakes or water channels, see Radha Gobind v Inglis, 7 C L R, 364 (1880), Sunnud Ali v Mussamut Karimoonissa, 9 W. R, 124 (1868), Mohiny Mohun v Krishna Kishore, 9 C, 802 (1883); s c, 12 C L R, 337 As to possession in the case of chur land and land diluviated and then reformed by the gradual action of a river, see Gokool Kristo v David, 23 W R, 443 (1875), Kally Churn v Secretary of State, 6 C, 725 (1881), s c, 8 C L R, 90, Manomohun v Mathura Mohun, 7 C, 225, s c, 8 C L R, 126

(5) Secretary of State v Krishnamoni Gupta, 29 C 518 (1902) at pp 534 535

(6) Thus where the question was as to the admissibility of secondary evidence of a document, and it was proved that two years ago diligent search was made, but it could not be found, the presumption was held to be that it was still lost, and secondary evidence was admissible. Poe v. Darrah, 20 Ala, 289 (Amer)

(7) Jackson v Irvin, 2 Camp, 48 [To prove debt against a bankrupt an entry in his books some months before the bankruptcy showing that he was indebted to the claimant in a certain sum is proved The presumption is that the debt still continues], Best, Pres Ev, 187—189, Best, Ev, § 406, Taylor, Ev, § 197.

(8) Scales v Key 11 A & E, 819 [The question is whether a certain custom existed in the year 1840 The jury finds that the custom existed in 1869 without more The presumption is that the custom existed in 1840, and see Obhoy Churn v. Hari Nath, 8 C, 72 (1881), cited post.

(9) Lawson, Pres Ev, 163—172

(10) Obhoy Churn v Hari Nath, 8 C., 72, 79 (1881).

residence or non-residence(1), solvency or insolvency(2), infancy, the holding of an office-authority to do an act(3) and other relations or conditions of persons or things(4) once shown to exist are presumed to continue until the contrary is proved (5) Sanity or insanity once proved to exist is presumed to continue But aliter as to temporary insanity produced by drunkenness, violent disease or otherwise.(6) The character and habits of a person are presumed to continue as proved to be at a time past. So in an American case(7) it was attempted to impeach the character of P, a witness. A and B, who knew P four years before, when he resided at another place, testify that his character was then bad. It was held that the presumption was that P's character remained the same. And though specific acts done in other cases do not raise the inference that a similar act was done in another case, and evidence of them is inadmissible(8) ; yet the habit of an individual being proved, he is presumed to act in a particular case in accordance with that habit.(9) Thus a subscribing witness to a will or other document, if unable to recollect whether he saw the testator or obligor sign the instrument or heard it acknowledged, may testify to his own habit never to sign as a witness without seeing the party sign whose signature he attests or hearing that signature acknowledged (10)

The main use of this presumption is to designate the party on whom lies the burden of proof. If a state of facts is established by one party, those facts in themselves not being so limited as to time as to have expired at the period of litigation, it is not necessary for that party to prove the continuance of the relation. The burden is on the opposite party to prove that that state has ceased to exist. But there is no presumption of law against the latter which when the evidence is all in, can outweigh any preponderance in such evidence in his favour (11) And in the undermentioned case it was held that where there is evidence on both sides as to the factum of attestation, the maxim "omnia rite esse acta" can only be resorted to (if at all) when the evidence on both sides is evenly balanced, and that the maxim operates when there is no evidence on either side and may possibly be used to eke out unconvincing testimony on one side only.(12)

Illustration (e)

. . . official act,

tion

the presumption without any evidence that the act has been performed (14)
The Court may presume that judicial and official acts have been regularly

---

(1) See Wharton, Ev, § 1285; as to residence, Bell v Kennedy, L R, 3 H. L, 307, Whicker v Hume, 7 H L., 124, Wharton, Conflict of Laws, § 56; domicile; The Lauderdale Peerage, 10 App. Cas, 692 But of course in this and every other instance the inference varies with the facts of the case So no presumption but that of mobility of residence attaches to the tramp, Wharton, Ev, loc cit.

(2) Wharton, Ev, § 1289.

(3) See Smout v Ilbery, 10 M & W, 1; Ryan v. Sams, 12 Q. B, 460 (agents' authority, continuance of).

(4) e g It is proved that F was an unmarried woman at a certain date The presumption is that she continues so until proved to have married Page v. Findly 5 Tex., 391 (Amer.).

(5) Lawson, Pres Ev., 172—178

(6) Lawson, Pres Ev, 179, 180; Best, Pres. Ev., 187; Gresley, Ev, 474—479

(7) Sleeper v Van Middlesworth, Denio, 431 (Amer).

(8) v. ante, pp 137—138, 776 note (2)

(9) Wharton, Ev., § 2187, Lawson, Pres. Ev., 184—187.

(10) Wharton, Ev, § 2187 and cases there cited See also s 16, ante, and cases there collected

(11) Ib, Ev., § 1284.

(12) Jhama v. Deobux, 2 N L R, 10

(13) Sheodarshan Lal v. Assesar Singh, 5 O L J., 179; s c, 46 I. C, 52: it is not for the Court to assist in the work of rebuttal; Mussumat Sohagbati v. Babu Surendra Mohan, 4 Pat. L. W., 296: 44 I. C, 661.

(14) Deputy Legal Remembrancer v Mir Sarwar, 6 C. W. N, 845 (1902); Narendra Lal v. Jogi Hari, 32 C, 1107 (1905).

performed. This Illustration is a particular application to acts of a judicial or official character of the general and important presumption usually embodied in the maxim, Omnia præsumuntur rite esse acta.(1) If it be the duty of a Court to do a particular thing it must be assumed that the Judges of that Court did their duty.(2) And the same rule is made by the Illustration applicable to the official acts of all other persons who are not judicial officers (3) The meaning of this rule is that if an official act is proved to have been done, it will be presumed to have been regularly done. Thus in the undermentioned case it was held by the Privy Council that all things done before a Registrar done duly and in order; and it was further held that evidence of the general reputation of character of the identifiers in his office was inadmissible to refute the bonâ fides of the transaction (4) And thus it has been held that, in the absence of evidence to the contrary it must be presumed that a Karinda presenting a document was duly authorized to do so (5) And it has also been held that while in the absence of evidence to the contrary, registration must be presumed to be valid, this presumption will be rebutted by proof of presentation by an unauthorized person.(6) In the case cited, the plaintiff in a suit for redemption of an usufructuary mortgage tendered to establish the mortgage a certified copy of a petition of compromise filed in April 1857 which had recited the terms on which the mortgage had been arranged, and he alleged that the original had been lost in the Mutiny. The defendant contended that the stamp on the certified copy (one rupee) was insufficient; but the Privy Council held that this was sufficient for a copy, and that the suit was not based on the agreement in the petition of compromise but on a mortgage recited in it which was valid according to the law then in force, and that even if the petition of compromise was regarded as creating the mortgage, the Court would presume that the officer before whom it was presented had satisfied himself that it was properly stamped (7) After a guardian appointed by Court has filed his accounts and they have been accepted by the Court as correct a presumption as to their accuracy arises and it is open to parties to rely on them in subsequent proceedings between the guardian and ward.(8) The rule does not raise any presumption that an act was done of which there is no evidence and the proof of which is essential to the plaintiff's case (9) The assumption on which all rules of law are founded is that the constituted tribunals are fairly competent to carry them out.(10) In a Court of superior jurisdiction the want of jurisdiction is not to be presumed The rule as to jurisdiction is that nothing shall be intended to be out of the jurisdiction of a superior Court, but that which specially appears

---

(1) Taylor, Ev, §§ 143—150, Broome's Legal Maxims, 6th Ed, 896—908, v. post

(2) Bourne v Gatliff, 11 C & F, 80, see Banvari Das v. Mahammad Mashiat, 9 A, 690, 702 (1867), Mafeezooddeen Kazee v Maher Ali, 1 W. R, 212 (1864), [oral evidence of contents of decree], Ashanullah Khan v Trilochun Bagchi, 13 C, 197, 199 (1886), Gasper v Mytton, Taylor, R, 291, 310 (1848), Arman Khan v Bama Soonduree, 25 W R, 62 (1876), Hem Lotta v Sreedhone Borooa, 3 C, 771 (1877), Saroda Prosaud v. Luchmeput Sing, 10 B L R, 214, 230 (1872).

(3) See cases cited in Taylor, Ev, §§ 143—150

(4) Gangamoyi Debi v Troiluckya Nath Chowdri, 10 C W N, 522, P C. (1906), 33 C, 537

(5) Jambu Prasad v Muhammad Aftab Ali Khan (1912), 34 A, 331.

(6) Ram Chandra Das v Farzand Ali Khan (1912), 34 A, 253, referring to Muhammad Ewas v Brij Lal (1877), 4 I A, 166; and distinguishing Mujib-un-nissa v Abdur Rahim (1901), 23 A., 233; and Ishri Prasad v Baij Nath (1906), 28 A, 707 See Jambu Prasad v Muhammad Aftab Ali Khan, P. C., 37 A, 49 (1915); 42 I. A., 22.

(7) Ahmad Raza v Abid Husain, P C 38 A, 494 (1916)

(8) Gopal v Sarju 21 O C 74 44 I C, 599

(9) Narendra Lal v Jogi Hari, 32 C., 1107 (1905), Deputy Legal Remembrancer v Mir Sarwar, 6 C W N, 845 (1902)

(10) Gopeenath Singh v Anundmoyee Debia, 8 W R, 167, 169

to be so; and on the contrary, nothing shall be intended to be within the jurisdiction of an inferior Court, but that which is so expressly alleged.(1) When under an Act certain things are required to be done before any liability attaches to any person in respect of any right or obligation, it is for the person who alleges that that liability has been incurred to prove that the things prescribed in the Act have been actually done. No presumption should be made under this Illustration in favour of the condition precedent having been observed.(2) But where a defendant in answer to a claim for arrears of taxes by Bombay District Municipality alleged that the taxes were illegal (a) because no notice had been given him under section 57 (Bombay Act II of 1884); (b) because no notice had been issued by the Municipality to the Commissioners under the 11th section of Bombay Act VI of 1873, it was held that he must prove the defence and in the absence of such proof the Court would presume that the Municipality had used the regular procedure, and that the common course of business had been followed in the particular cases.(3) Before the deposition of a medical witness taken by a Committing Magistrate can, under section 509 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, be given in evidence at the trial before the Court of Session, it must either appear from the Magistrate's record or be proved by the evidence of witnesses, to have been taken and attested by the Magistrate in the presence of the accused. The Court ought not, if it do not so appear, or if it be not so proved, presume either under section 80 or section 114, Illustration (e) of this Act, that the deposition was so taken and attested.(4) But it is a reasonable presumption that an oath was administered to a witness who appeared before a Court, even if there is no record of the fact.(5) Irregularity is not to be presumed, but a party alleging such irregularity is at liberty to prove it. The date borne by a decision is not conclusive evidence of the date on which it was pronounced according to law.(6) But in the under-mentioned case it was held that the presumption of regularity under this section supplied any omissions either as to the communicating of the order to the prosecuting officer or in the order-sheet of the Magistrate.(7) In the case noted it was held that when a mortgagee has purchased the equity of redemption in contravention of the provisions of section 99 of the Transfer of Property Act, it should not be presumed under this section in the absence of evidence that the Court granted leave to bid.(8)

Illustration (f). The Court may presume that the common course of business has been followed in particular cases. When there is a question whether a particular act was done the existence of any course of business according to which it naturally would have been done, is a relevant fact.(9) When the common course of

(1) R v Nabadwip Goswami, 1 B. L. R., O. C., 15, 29, 30, 35 (1868), s. c., 15 W. R., Cr., 71, 77.

(2) Ashanullah Khan v Trilochun Bagchi, 13 C., 197, 199 (1886), referred to in Sheoruttun Singh v Net Lall, 30 C., 1, 11 (1902) but see also Municipality of Sholapur v The Sholapur Spinning Co., 20 B., 732 (1895); cited post. As to notices under the Road Cess Act (IX of 1888, B. C.), see Rash Behary v. Pitambori Chowdhrani, 15 C., 237 (1888) and before sale of a patni taluk, see Hurro Doyal v Mahomed Gazi, 19 C., 699 (1892); referred to in Sheoruttun Singh v. Net Lall, 30 C., 1, 11 (1902), followed in Sheik Mohamed v Jadunandan Jha, 10 C. W. N., 137 (1905) at p. 147, which distinguishes the case of a sale for arrears of Government Revenue.

(3) Municipality of Sholapur v The Sholapur Spinning Co., 20 B., 732 (1895); followed in R. v. Ram Chandra, 19 A., 493 (1897); but see Ashanullah Khan v Trilochun Bagchi, 13 C., 197, 199 (1886), cited ante.

(4) Kachali Hari v R., 18 C., 129 (1890); R v. Riding, 9 A., 720 (1887); R v. Poph Singh, 10 A., 174, 177, 178 (1887).

(5) R. v. Sayed Ahmad, 35 A., 575 (1913).

(6) Gopal v. Krishna, 3 Bom. L. R., 420 (1901); Mahipat v. Lakshman, 24 B., 406; s. c., 2 Bom. L. R., 228.

(7) Apurba Krishna Bose v. R. (1907), 35 C., 141.

(8) Uttam Chandra Daw v Raj Krishna Dalal, 21 C. W. N., 229; s. c., 31 C. L. J., 98.

(9) S. 16, ante; v. pp. 211—214, ante.

business has been proved, the Court may under this Illustration presume that it has been followed in the particular case. There are various primâ facie presumptions which are founded upon the experience of human conduct in the ordinary course of business.(1) Several presumptions are made from the regular course of business in public offices, of which the Post office affords a large number of examples.(2) Similar presumptions are drawn from the usual course of men's private offices and business, where the primary evidence of the fact is wanting.(3) But though this section and Illustration leave it to the Court's discretion to presume that the course of business has been followed, it is not bound to presume it (4) It will consider all the circumstances of the case, especially if they be in any manner unusual. So, if the question is whether a letter was received, and it is shown to have been posted, the Court will, in dealing with the presumption consider such a fact as that the usual course of the post was interrupted by disturbances.(5) The effect to be given to the word "refused" on a registered cover as proof of tender of the packet to the addressee is one of fact. Each case must be decided under this section according to its circumstances (6) In the case cited a notice to quit was given by registered post but the letter containing the notice was returned by the post office, the addressee having refused to accept it. Held that under this section the Court was entitled to presume that the letter containing the notice reached the defendant, and that the fact that the letter was returned by the post office as not accepted by the addressee, did not affect the presumption.(7) Where upon the evidence a presumption of fact under this section, illustration (f), is drawn by an Appellate Court such presumption is binding upon a Court of second Appeal.(8)

The Court may presume that evidence which could be, and is not, produced would, if produced, be unfavourable to the person who withholds it. This Illustration deals with the presumptions which arise from withholding evidence and from the spoliation or fabrication or suppression of evidence. The subject of spoliation is dealt with further on and, as will be there seen, the fact, if established, raises most powerful presumptions. But the mere withholding or failing to produce evidence, which under the circumstances would be expected to be produced and which is available, gives rise to a presumption against the party though it is less violent than that which attends spoliation. Such a presumption would, for instance, arise if the owner of a vessel were to omit, without reasonable explanation, to call the seaman who had charge of the light at the time of a collision. The conduct of the person withholding the evidence may be attributed to a supposed consciousness that the evidence, if produced, would operate against him. So where three important documents of the defendants were said to have been burnt, but this fact was not proved, it was held that the non-production of the documents subjected the defendants to have raised against them the presumption recognised by this Illustration.(9) And in a Illustration (g)

(1) See Taylor, Ev, §§ 176—178, and cases there cited

(2) See Taylor, Ev, §§ 179—180A and cases there cited, v ante, pp 212—214, and Municipality of Sholapur v The Sholapur Spinning Co, 20 B, 732 (1895), cited supra

(3) Taylor, Ev §§ 181, 182, and cases there cited, and see ante, pp. 211—214

(4) Ram Das v Official Liquidator, 9 A, 366, 376 (1887)

(5) See s 114

(6) Gopal v Krishna, 3 Bom L R, 420 (1901)

(7) Grish Chandra Ghose v Kishore Mohan Das, 23 C W. N, 319, s c, 54 I C, 5

(8) Ram Chandra Kaniram Marwari v Laxman, 53 I. C, 62

(9) Ram Prosad v Raghunandan Prasad, 7 A, 738 (1885), and see Wutzler v Sharpe, 15 A, 270 289, 290 (1893); Hem Chandra v Kali Prosanna, 30 C, 1033 (1903), 8 C W N, 1 [non-production of collection papers by tenants] See Burr Jones, Ev § 17 and cases there cited The evidence, of course, must be available there is no presumption if it is not within the control of the party failing to produce it, nor from the failure to call as a witness one whom the other party had the same opportunity of calling, nor

to be so; and on the contrary, nothing shall be intended to be within the jurisdiction of an inferior Court, but that which is so expressly alleged.(1) When under an Act certain things are required to be done before any liability attaches to any person in respect of any right or obligation, it is for the person who alleges that that liability has been incurred to prove that the things prescribed in the Act have been actually done. No presumption should be made under this Illustration in favour of the condition precedent having been observed.(2) But where a defendant in answer to a claim for arrears of taxes by Bombay District Municipality alleged that the taxes were illegal (a) because no notice had been given him under section 57 (Bombay Act II of 1884); (b) because no notice had been issued by the Municipality to the Commissioners under the 11th section of Bombay Act VI of 1873, it was held that he must prove the defence and in the absence of such proof the Court would presume that the Municipality had used the regular procedure, and that the common course of business had been followed in the particular cases (3) Before the deposition of a medical witness taken by a Committing Magistrate can, under section 509 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, be given in evidence at the trial before the Court of Session, it must either appear from the Magistrate's record or be proved by the evidence of witnesses, to have been taken and attested by the Magistrate in the presence of the accused. The Court ought not, if it do not so appear, or if it be not so proved, presume either under section 80 or section 114, Illustration (e) of this Act, that the deposition was so taken and attested.(4) But it is a reasonable presumption that an oath was administered to a witness who appeared before a Court, even if there is no record of the fact (5) Irregularity is not to be presumed, but a party alleging such irregularity is at liberty to prove it. The date borne by a decision is not conclusive evidence of the date on which it was pronounced according to law.(6) But in the undermentioned case it was held that the presumption of regularity under this section supplied any omissions either as to the communicating of the order to the prosecuting officer or in the order-sheet of the Magistrate (7) In the case noted it was held that when a mortgagee has purchased the equity of redemption in contravention of the provisions of section 99 of the Transfer of Property Act, it should not be presumed under this section in the absence [illegible] ibid.(8)

Illustration (f). [illegible] ommon course of business has been [illegible] is a question whether a particular act was done the existence of any course of business according to which it naturally would have been done, is a relevant fact.(9) When the common course of

---

(1) R v. Nabadwip Goswami, 1 B L R., O. C., 15, 29, 30, 35 (1868), s c, 15 W R, Cr, 71, 77.

(2) Ashanullah Khan v. Trilochun Bagchi, 13 C, 197, 199 (1886), referred to in Sheoruttun Singh v Net Lall, 30 C, 1, 11 (1902) but see also Municipality of Sholapur v The Sholapur Spinning Co, 20 B, 732 (1895), cited post As to notices under the Road Cess Act (IX of 1888, B C), see Rash Behary v. Pitambori Chowdhrani, 15 C, 237 (1888) and before sale of a patni taluk, see Hurro Doyal v Mahomed Gazi, 19 C, 699 (1892); referred to in Sheoruttun Singh v Net Lall, 30 C, 1, 11 (1902), followed in Sheik Mohamed v. Jadunandan Jha, 10 C. W. N, 137 (1905) at p. 147, which distinguishes the case of a sale for arrears of Government Revenue

(3) Municipality of Sholapur v. The Sholapur Spinning Co, 20 B, 732 (1895); followed in R v. Ram Chandra, 19 A., 493 (1897), but see Ashanullah Khan v. Trilochun Bagchi, 13 C, 197, 199 (1886), cited ante

(4) Kachali Hari v. R, 18 C., 129 (1890); R. v. Riding, 9 A, 720 (1887); R. v Poph Singh, 10 A, 174, 177, 178 (1887).

(5) R. v. Sayed Ahmad, 35 A. 575 (1913).

(6) Gopal v. Krishna, 3 Bom L. R., 420 (1901); Mahipat v. Lakshman, 24 B, 406; s c., 2 Bom. L R, 228

(7) Apurba Krishna Bose v R (1907), 35 C., 141.

(8) Uttam Chandra Daw v Raj Krishna Dalal, 21 C. W. N, 229, s c., 31 C. L. J., 98.

(9) S 16, ante, v. pp. 211—214, ante.

business has been proved, the Court may under this Illustration presume that it has been followed in the particular case. There are various primâ facie presumptions which are founded upon the experience of human conduct in the ordinary course of business (1) Several presumptions are made from the regular course of business in public offices, of which the Post office affords a large number of examples (2) Similar presumptions are drawn from the usual course of men's private offices and business, where the primary evidence of the fact is wanting (3) But though this section and Illustration leave it to the Court's discretion to presume that the course of business has been followed, it is not bound to presume it.(4) It will consider all the circumstances of the case, especially if they be in any manner unusual. So, if the question is whether a letter was received, and it is shown to have been posted, the Court will, in dealing with the presumption consider such a fact as that the usual course of the post was interrupted by disturbances (5) The effect to be given to the word "refused" on a registered cover as proof of tender of the packet to the addressee is one of fact Each case must be decided under this section according to its circumstances.(6) In the case cited a notice to quit was given by registered post but the letter containing the notice was returned by the post office, the addressee having refused to accept it. Held that under this section the Court was entitled to presume that the letter containing the notice reached the defendant, and that the fact that the letter was returned by the post office as not accepted by the addressee, did not affect the presumption (7) Where upon the evidence a presumption of fact under this section, illustration (f), is drawn by an Appellate Court such presumption is binding upon a Court of second Appeal.(8)

The Court may presume that evidence which could be, and is not, produced would, if produced, be unfavourable to the person who withholds it This Illustration deals with the presumptions which arise from withholding evidence and from the spoliation or fabrication or suppression of evidence. The subject of spoliation is dealt with further on and, as will be there seen, the fact, if established, raises most powerful presumptions. But the mere withholding or failing to produce evidence, which under the circumstances would be expected to be produced and which is available, gives rise to a presumption against the party though it is less violent than that which attends spoliation Such a presumption would, for instance, arise if the owner of a vessel were to omit, without reasonable explanation, to call the seaman who had charge of the light at the time of a collision. The conduct of the person withholding the evidence may be attributed to a supposed consciousness that the evidence, if produced, would operate against him. So where three important documents of the defendants were said to have been burnt, but this fact was not proved, it was held that the non-production of the documents subjected the defendants to have raised against them the presumption recognised by this Illustration.(9) And in a Illustration (g).

(1) See Taylor, Ev, §§ 176—178, and cases there cited

(2) See Taylor, Ev, §§ 179—180A and cases there cited, v ante, pp 212—214, and Municipality of Sholapur v The Sholapur Spinning Co, 20 B, 732 (1895); cited supra

(3) Taylor, Ev §§ 181, 182, and cases there cited, and see ante, pp 211—214

(4) Ram Das v Official Liquidator, 9 A., 366, 376 (1887)

(5) See s 114

(6) Gopal v Krishna, 3 Bom L R, 420 (1901)

(7) Grish Chandra Ghose v Kishore Mohan Das, 23 C W. N, 319, s c., 54 I C, 5

(8) Ram Chandra Kaniram Marwari v Laxman, 53 I. C., 62.

(9) Ram Prosad v Raghunandan Prasad, 7 A, 738 (1885), and see Wutzler v Sharpe, 15 A, 270 289, 290 (1893); Hem Chandra v Kali Prosanna, 30 C, 1033 (1903), 8 C W N, 1 [non-production of collection-papers by tenants] See Burr Jones, Ev, § 17, and cases there cited The evidence, of course, must be available there is no presumption if it is not within the control of the party failing to produce it, nor from the failure to call as a witness one whom the other party had the same opportunity of calling, nor case where a cypher-list shown outside the Court by the Police to a witness called to prove the handwriting on certain postcards, was not shown to him while he was giving evidence, it was held that counsel for the defence was entitled to make the comment that this was because the witness had failed to recognize the writing of the cypher-list.(1) In a suit for accounts the non-production of the account books by the party who has custody of them justifies the presumption under section 114G that they have been withheld, because if produced they would have been unfavourable to his case.(2) Where certain material witnesses named in the first information and also in the evidence were available but not examined at the trial and the judge did not tell the jury that they could draw an inference unfavourable to the prosecution; and in summing up the evidence the judge omitted to draw the attention of the jury to discrepancies in the evidence for the prosecution, held that such omission constituted a material misdirection to the jury.(3) The non-production of deeds or papers after notice, has, in general, only the effect of admitting the other party to prove their contents by parol, and as against the party refusing to produce them, to raise a primâ facie presumption that they have been properly stamped.(4) Nevertheless such conduct is, in the absence of excuse, calculated to produce a very prejudicial effect in the minds of the jury against the person having recourse to it; and if the production of his papers would establish the guilt or innocence of a person charged with fraud or misconduct, the jury will be amply justified in presuming him guilty from the unexplained fact of their non-production. Indeed, jurors will always do well to regard with suspicion the conduct of a party, who, having it in his power to produce cogent evidence in support of his case, offers testimony of a weaker and less satisfactory character."(5) But it is not necessary that a Judge should direct a jury in so many words that the omission of the prosecution to call certain witnesses raised a presumption under this illustration that their evidence would have been unfavourable to the Crown; if he has pointed out that the jury might properly draw any inference they pleased from such omission.(6) It has been held that the rule under the Illustration applies when a person who should have been called as a witness is employed as an advocate and offers no testimony.(7)

Presumptions are necessarily made against persons who will not subject themselves to examination when a primâ facie case is made against them, and when by their own evidence they might have answered it.(8) Everything is one whose testimony would be simply cumulative, ib., § 18 See 30 C L J, 417 (non-production of accounts) and non-citation Venkamma v Venkataramma, 24 C W N., 961.

---

(1) Amrita Lal Hazra v Emperor, 42 C., 957 (1915).

(2) Debendra Narain Sinha v Narendra Narain Sinha, 24 C. W. N., 110.

(3) Tenaram Mandul v King Emp., 25 C W. N., 142.

(4) S 89 ante Crisp v Anderson 1 Stark. 35, and attested s 89, ante Further a party refusing to produce a document cannot generally afterwards use the document as evidence s. 164, post.

(5) Taylor, Ev, § 117.

(6) Fanindra Nath Banerjee v R (1908) 36 C., 281, and see Dasarath Mandal v. R (1907), 34 C., 325; and Nibaran Chandra Roy v. R (1907), 11 C. W. N., 1085.

(7) Weston v. Peary Mohun Das, 40 C, 898 (1913).

(8) Nawab Syed v Amanee Begum, 19 W. R, 149, 151 (1873). In this case the Privy Council observed:—"It is not unimportant to observe that the Nawab, who is a gentleman of rank went into the witness-box on this occasion and of course offered himself for cross-examination Their Lordships have often said that it would be very desirable if native gentlemen would do that more frequently because presumptions are necessarily made against them, if when parties in a Court of Justice and facts are in dispute, the knowledge of which must rest with them, they will not present themselves to the Court to state their own evidence and knowledge of those facts" See also Circular of Bombay High Court cited in Sabbaji v. Shidappa, 26 B., 392 (1901), which case also refers to the question as to how far adverse inference can supply the place of positive proof.

to be presumed against a party keeping his adversary out of possession of evidence and taking means to retain that evidence in his own custody.(1) Where a plaintiff cited witnesses, and when they appeared, declined to have them examined, it was held that the inference to be drawn from this conduct was that those witnesses on examination and cross-examination would have deposed to a ... 'ant's answer.(2) Where a party ... the Court may presume that its ... Privy Council have held that a litigant can refrain from producing documents which he considers irrelevant, and that if in that case his opponent does not seek to obtain production and inspection, neither the opponent nor the Court at his suggestion is entitled to draw any inference as to the character of the documents (4) In another case in the Privy Council it was said that in Indian procedure a practice has grown up by which parties in possession of important documents lie by, trusting to the doctrine of the onus of proof, and accordingly fail to furnish to the Court the best material for its decision, and that while this may be right in the case of third parties, it is on the suing parties to the suit an inversion of sound practice, and that the Privy Council feels free to conclude that if such documents had been confirmatory of the view of the party holding them they would have been produced.(5) Recently the Judicial Committee have held that no inference should be drawn against a party for not producing a material witness where the question of the absence of such witness was not raised at the trial (6)

It has been held that in a Criminal trial there is no misdirection in a Judge pointing out to the jury the contrast between the evidence for the prosecution, and the course followed by the prisoner (namely, a simple denial of the charge coupled with a refusal to examine the witnesses in attendance), so long as the Judge leaves it to the jury to decide between the opposing statements, and to credit whichever they think most worthy of belief (7) It has also been held that while it is the duty of the prosecutor to produce all evidence directly bearing upon the charge, and that if, without sufficient reason, such evidence is not produced, the Court may draw an adverse inference to the prosecution, yet that there is no corresponding duty on an accused person, who is at liberty to offer ...

abandoned by the prosecution and that two of them gave evidence for the defence(9), and it has been held that the withholding of important witnesses

(1) Sooriah Row v Cotaghery Boochiah, 2 Moo I A, 113, 123 (1838), in which case observations were also made on the appellant not calling witnesses within his reach who were acquainted with the subject matter of the suit

(2) Rajah Nilmoney v Ramanoograh Roy, 7 W R, 29 30 (1867)

(3) Raghunath v Hoti Lal, 1 All L J, 121 (1904), Moharani Beni v Goberdhon Koeri, 6 C W N, 823 824 (1902)

(4) Bilas Kunwar v Desraj Ranjit Singh, P C, 37 A, 557 (1915), 42 I A, 202

(5) Murugasam Pillai v Manickavaseka Desika, P C, 40 M, 402 (1917), Ram Singh v Must Tursa Kunwar, 17 C W N, 1086 (1912) Lal Kunwar v Chiranji Lal, 14 C W N, 285 (1909), 37 I. A., 1.

(6) Banwari Lal v Mohesh, 45 I. C., 284 s c, 21 O C, 228

(7) R v Seetanath Ghosal, 2 W. R., 60 (1865) and see R v Madhub Chunder, 21 W R, Cr, 13, 16 (1874), where upon another point Markby J, also remarked: 'It seems to me a most extraordinary doctrine that because an infamous charge is made against a man it is useless to call him to deny it"

(8) In re Dhunno Kazi, 8 C., 121 (1881), Hurry Churn v. R, 10 C., 140 (1883) s. c., 13 C. L R, 358.

(9) Dasarath Mandal v R, 34 C, 325; and see Fanindra Nath Banerjee v. R. (1908), 36 C., 335 intimately connected with the transaction gives rise to the irresistible inference that they would not have corroborated the prosecution.(1)

It must be borne in mind that the rule mentioned in this Illustration (like most of the other rules of evidence contained in this Act) applies equally to criminal and civil cases, nor does the case-law in reality tend to any other conclusion. The effect of this section and of the preceding cases (cited in the last note) which must be considered with reference to their own particular circumstances, may be summarised and ex cution affirmatively and with reasor of the duties of the prosecution in t may, without further action on his part, acquittal.(2) If the prosecution does not discharge its duty of producing all its available evidence, it is no answer to say that the accused, who has no such duty cast upon him, might have produced that evidence (3) No inference unfavourable to the accused can be drawn in such a case against him. When, however, the prosecution has called all its available evidence, and has made out a that case discloses that there is evidence for the purpose of negativing the charge of this section, if such evidence be not produced, the Court may presume that it would, if produced, be unfavourable to the accused who withholds it It is in fact only under these circumstances that the presumption properly commences to operate. The law upon this point has been well expressed by Shaw, C. J. in the Commonwealth v. Webster(4), in which case he said :—"Where probably proof is brought of a state of facts tending to criminate the accused, the absence of evidence tending to a contrary conclusion is to be considered, though not alone entitled to much weight, because the burden of proof lies on the accuser to make out the whole case by substantive evidence. But when pretty stringent proof of circumstances is produced, tending to support the charge, and it is apparent that the accused is so situated that he could offer evidence of all the facts and circumstances as they existed, and show, if such was the truth, that the suspicious circumstances can be accounted for consistently with his innocence and he fails to offer such proof, the natural conclusion is that the proof, if produced, instead of rebutting, would tend to sustain the charge. But this is to be cautiously applied, and only in cases where it is manifest that proofs are in the power of the accused, not accessible to the prosecution."(5)

If, moreover, an accused or other person, not merely abstains from giving evidence but commits spoliation, that is, suppresses or destroys evidence which he ought to produce, or to which the other party is entitled, the strongest presumption will be drawn against him. So strong is the presumption in such a case that the ordinary presumption of innocence may be overthrown and a presumption of guilt raised, the general rule being "Omnia præsumuntur contra

(1) Nibaran Chandra Roy v. R. (1907), 11 C W. N , 1085

(2) Hurry Churn v R, 10 C., 140, where it was held that it was entirely open to the defence to adduce no evidence at all, but to rely upon the evidence of the witnesses for the prosecution as to which there was certainly room for forming two opinions

(3) See In re Dhunno Kazi 8 C . supra, at p. 125, where it was pointed out that the mere fact of witnesses being summoned for the defence was not a sufficient reason for relieving the prosecution of the duty of calling them.

(4) 5 Cush, 316 (Amer.), cited in and observed upon in Lawson, Pres. Ev, 120. 121.

(5) See to the same effect, Wills' Circumstantial Ev., s. 5, 6th Ed, 97 [Unexplained appearances of suspicion] where it is said "the force of suspicious circumstances is augmented, whenever the party attempts no explanation of facts which he may reasonably be presumed to be able and interested to explain." and see Best. Ev, § 346.

spoliatorem," whose conduct is attributed to a supposed consciousness that the truth would operate against him (1) Where a person is proved to have suppressed any species of evidence, or to have defaced or destroyed any written instrument, a presumption will arise that, if the truth had appeared, it would have been against his interest, and that his conduct is attributable to his knowledge of this circumstance (2) So applying the maxim "Omnia præsumuntur contra spoliatorem," the High Court held that, where a vessel was seized on suspicion of having a greater quantity of salt on board than was allowed by its permit, and immediately afterwards a number of men boarded the boat, and, with the assistance of the agent of the owner, threw a considerable quantity of salt overboard, a presumption arose that there was an excess of salt on board at the time of the seizure beyond the amount allowed by the permit.(3) And in [illegible] preventing the [illegible] e being whether [illegible] or Government service-land, the plaintiff alleged that the land had been granted in free inam by a sanad, which he petitioned the Mam[illegible] send to the Collector; and, on a reference [illegible] found that "the Collector did destroy [illegible] copy of a sanad such as the plaintiff petitioned the Mamlatdar to search for" — It was held that it was not competent under such circumstances for the defendant to say that the document was not such a one as could legally be admitted in evidence; and that the case came within the rule omnia præsumuntur contra spoliatorem (4) Where the Government failed to produce records which would have shown whether certain lands were found in the limits of a zemindari, it was held that the presumption under this Illustration was raised (5) In a suit to recover the value of plundered property, where a question arose as to the amount of the property misappropriated, it was ruled that, unless the defendant produced the property and showed it not to be of the value stated by plaintiff, the strongest presumption should be made against him and the highest value assumed.(6) The maxim, however, only applies where a man by his own tortuous act withholds the evidence by which the nature of his case would be manifested (7) But in an action for goods sold against a defendant who has been guilty of no fraud or improper conduct, in the absence of evidence of the quality of the goods which were delivered, the presumption is that such goods were of the cheapest description (8)

Where a party objected to the admissibility of a document which was afterwards withdrawn, and the Judge in summing up to the jury, said that the

(1) Wills' Circumstantial Ev, s 7, 6th Ed., 128, Lawson, Pres Ev, 140, Taylor, Ev, § 116, the rule is evidently based on the principle that no one shall be allowed to take advantage of his own wrong, see note at p 122, 3 Bom H C R., A C. J (1886) "If," says Lord Holt, "a man destroys a thing that is designed to be evidence against himself, a small matter will supply it" Anon, 1 Ld Raym, 731, but see Williamson v Rover Cycle Co, C A, Ir (1901), 2 Ir R, 615

(2) Framji Hormasji v Commissioner of Customs, 7 Bom. H C R, A C J, 89, 92, 93 (1870) per Westropp, C J, citing Russell on Crimes iii, 217, 4th Ed, and many of the English decisions on the subject of this presumption And see Ardeshir Dhanjibhai v. Collector of Surat, 3 Bom. H. C. R., A. C J, 116, 120 (1866), Roscoe, Cr Ev, 90 Of course the destruction or mutilation of a document is not spoliation within the meaning of the rule, if caused by mere inadvertence or mistake Lawson, Pres Ev, 15.

(3) Framji Hormasji v Commissioner of Customs, 7 Bom H C R., A C. J, 89 (1870)

(4) Ardeshir Dhanjibhai v Collector of Surat, 3 Bom H. C R, A C J, 116 (1866).

(5) Sri Raja Purthasarathy Appa Row Bahadur v Secretary of State, 38 M., 620 (1915).

(6) Soondur Monee v Bhoobun Mohun, 11 W. R, 536 (1869); see Armory v. Delamirie, 1 Smith L. C., 385.

(7) Vinayak v. Collector of Bombay, 26 B, 339, 351 (1901).

(8) Clunes v Pezzey, 1 Camp, 8.

document was in Court, and might have been produced but for the party's objection, and that the jury were at liberty to draw an inference from such objection and non-production, it was held that there was no misdirection (1) But where a document is privileged, no adverse inference can be drawn from its non-production.(2)

The presumption arising from the non-production of evidence within the power of the party does not relieve the opposite party altogether from the burden of proving his case(3); and though the fact of spoliation standing alone may defeat, it cannot of itself sustain, a claim.(4) Lastly, the presumption is to be made after regard has been had to the common course of natural events, human conduct, and public and private business, in their relation to the facts of the particular case (5)

Illustration (h).

The Court may presume that if a man refuses to answer a question which he is not compelled to answer by law(6), the answer if given, would be unfavourable to him. So while the Criminal Procedure Code gives power to the Court to examine the accused, and the latter doe ment by refusing to answer or by giving fa draw such inference from such refusal or in the case of the subject-matter of section 148, post, the Court may, if it sees fit, draw from the witness's refusal to answer, the inference that the answer if given would be unfavourable.

Illustration (i).

The Court may presume that when a document creating an obligation is in the hands of the obligor, the obligation has been discharged (8) As men are usually vigilant in guarding their property, prompt in asserting their rights, is a primâ facie presumpayment of money, or the or a promissory note is found in the possession of the maker(9), that such note has been duly paid, or

(1) Sutton v. Devonport, 27 L. J. C P, 54 "The case is like the ordinary one where there is a witness in Court who could give an account of something which would affect the case of one party and who is not called, and in such case the jury may assume that his evidence would not have been favourable to that party," ib., per Crowder, J (see Taylor, Ev, § 117). Sed qu, as to the correctness of this decision, for a person should not suffer by taking objection on which he has a right to succeed Though it is to be observed that in this case there appears to have been no adjudication upon the question of the admissibility of the document, which on objection was withdrawn, still this makes no difference. For there is as much, or as little, reason for drawing an inference against the party objecting to the admissibility of the document as against the party withdrawing the document on such objection

(2) Weston v Peary Mohun Das, 40 C., 898 (1913).

(3) Lawson, Ev., 137.

(4) Ib, 152; Cowper v Cowper, 2 P. Wms, 748, Saltern v Melhursh, Amb, 248

(5) Vinayak v Collector of Bombay, 26 B, 339 (1901) where it was held that the facts of the case called for no such presumption

(6) See ss 121—129, post A witness is not excused from answering on the ground that the answer will criminate, s. 132, post, as to criminating documents see s. 130, post. Persons are not compelled to answer interrogations regarding certain matters under the provisions of s 19, Reg VII of 1822 See Field, Ev, 607. But see Lawson, Pres. Ev, 120, 137, where the rule is stated to be that "the omission of a party to an action to testify to facts or to produce evidence in explanation of or to contradict adverse testimony raises a presumption against his claims, unless the evidence is not peculiarly within his power, or is privileged" Wentworth v Lloyd, 10 H. L Cas, 589.

(7) Cr. Pr. Code, s 342, v also ib, ss 161, 175.

(8) See for an application of this rule. Abdul Karim v. Manji Hansraj, 1 B, 295 (1876); Shearman v. Fleming, 5 B L. R, 619 (1870), and case cited, post.

(9) See Bhog Hongkong v. Ramanathen Chetty, 29 C., 334 (1902). Aung Myat v Hla May, 12 Bur. L. T., 116; s c., 52 I. C, 650 If the drawee alleges that the maker came into possession of the note unlawfully, the onus is on him to prove it, ib that the goods ordered have been delivered. Similarly a receipt for the last year's or quarter's rent is evidence of all the rent previously accrued having been paid (1) The plaintiff in a suit on a bond for money, with a view to anticipate the possible production of the bond by the defendant and the presumption of payment that might otherwise be drawn from its being in the possession of the obligor, accounted for not producing it by alleging that the defendant had stolen it. The defendant admitted the execution of the bond, but alleged that he had paid it. Held that the defendant was bound to begin and prove payment either by the production of the bond or other evidence or by both (2) In the case cited in the Privy Council where in a suit for a sum due on a mortgage-bond the plaintiff had alleged that the original was lost and had tendered a copy and the defendant had admitted the execution but had pleaded that the bond had been discharged and had produced the original which purported to bear an endorsement by the mortgagee's agent, it was held that under this of the deed was an absolute sale; but an ekrar was executed at the same time as the mortgage, which reserved the equity of redemption to the mortgagor, This ekrar was made over to the defendant, the mortgagor Plaintiff's allegation was that the ekrarnamah was returned to him by the mortgagor who thus surrendered the equity of redemption. Defendant alleged that the ekrar had been lost, and had somehow found its way to the plaintiff Held that the presumption of law was in favour of the plaintiff who had possession of the ekrar and that the onus of proving its loss lay upon the defendant (4) On the other hand, ... force from the fact that the ori... in the hands of the grantees.(5) ... t may of course be that the circumstances of the case rebut it (6) Consent raises a presumption in favour of the validity of a transaction But the presumption is rebuttable (7)

Consent

Continuance

It is a very general presumption that things once proved to have existed in a particular state are to be understood as continuing in that state until the contrary is established by evidence either direct or circumstantial.(8) Thus where possession, the authority of an agent, the holding of an office, adultery, insanity, a debt or obligation, or the like, have been shown, their continuance will be presumed.(9) The subject has been already dealt with in the notes to Illustration (d) to which the reader is referred. Common applications of this presumption are the rules touching the continuance of life enacted in sections 107 and 108, ante, and of certain judicial relations such as partnership, tenancy and agency enacted in section 109, ante Connected with the subject of continuance of life is the question of the presumption of survivorship in common disaster Allusion is here made to those cases where several persons, generally of the same family, have perished by a common calamity, such as shipwreck

(1) Taylor, Ev, § 78, and cases there cited

(2) Chuni Kuar v Udai Ram, 6 A, 73 (1883).

(3) Muhammad Mehdi Hasan Khan v Mandir Das, P C, 34 A, 511 (1912) per Ameer Ali, J

(4) Ram Coomar v Ram Sahaye, 11 W R, 151 (1868).

(5) Chockalingam Pillai v Mayand Chettiar, 19 M, 485, 496 (1896)

(6) Bhog Hongkong v Ramanathen Chetty, 29 C, 334 (1902), s c, L R, 29 I. A, 43, 4 Bom L R, 378

(7) Ramesh Chandra Chakrabati v Sasi Bhusan Upadhay, 23 C W. N., 1025, s c, 30 C L J., 56.

(8) Best, Ev, § 405, Taylor, Ev, §§ 196—203 That is, continuing forward. If possession in one year be found there is no presumption as to possession in previous year, see 50 I C, 196.

(9) Ib, see Dip Singh v Girand Singh, 1 All L J (1903), where a mortgage having been admitted by the defendants the onus was held to lie on them to show that it had ceased to exist.

earthquake, conflagration, railway accident, or battle, and where the priority in point of time of the death of one over the rest exercises an influence on the rights of third parties. The civil law recognised certain arbitrary rules or presumptions for determining the relative times of death of two or more persons who perished in the same catastrophe. These rules were based on the age, sex, or state of health of the parties. So a child under the age of puberty was presumed to have died before its parent, but if above that age the rule was reversed. These fixed presumptions, however, never prevailed in the Common Law, and the Courts rejecting this conjectural mode of ascertaining the truth, have laid down the rule that the case must be determined upon its own peculiar facts and circumstances whenever the evidence is sufficient to support a finding [illegible] question of such [illegible], the question is [illegible] In other words, the fact of survivorship, like every other fact, must be proved by the party ascertaining it.(1) Thus in a recent English case where the bodies of a husband and wife were found tied together, the Court gave leave to swear the death of the wife on or since the day when she was last seen alive and declared that there was no reason to believe that her husband had survived her.(2)

Although this rule as to the presumption of continuance of the existing state of things has been long sanctioned, it is stated in very general terms and must have a reasonable interpretation. It is always disputable, and while sometimes entitled to considerable weight, it is frequently liable to be rebutted by very slight circumstances. The rule has been held to apply to some cases where obviously after a limited time the presumption could have little weight. [illegible] Perhaps the chief value of the [illegible] it applies, on whom shall rest th[illegible] tion of the presumption has be[illegible] 107—109, ante.

Hindu Law.

If Hindu families migrate from one part of the country to another, the presumption is that they carry with them the laws and customs as to succession prevailing in the province from which they came.(4)

Hindu Law: Acquisitions by widow.

The acquirer of property presumably intends to retain dominion over it, and in the case of a Hindu widow the presumption is none the less so when the fund with which the property is acquired is one which, though derived from [illegible] te disposal. Inasmuch as the widow's [illegible] come derived from the widow's estate [illegible] med, in the absence of an indication [illegible] the same control over the investment [illegible] of such income.(5)

And where a Hindu widow spends the income which is her absolute property in the erection of buildings on lands belonging to the estate, it will be presumed that she intended such buildings to be an accretion to the estate.(6)

(1) v. ante, pp 160—161; Best, Ev., 410; Taylor, Ev., §§ 202, 203, Underwood v. Wing, 19 Beav., 459; 4 DeG. M. & G., 633; Wing v. Angrave, 8 H. L. Cas, 183. The strength and health, etc, of a party may be properly considered as a circumstance, but standing alone it is sufficient to shift the burden of proof, Wharton, Ev, §§ 1280—1282.

(2) In the goods of Good (1908): Times L. R, v. 24, p 492, following In the goods of Bemjon (1901), P, 141, in which case a husband and wife perished in a massacre in China.

(3) Burr. Jones, Ev., § 52; see Wharton, Ev., §§ 1284—1296 (on presumptions of constancy and uniformity) and [illegible], §§ 1274—1283.

(4) Parbati Kumari v. Jagadis Chunder, 29 C., 433 (1902).

(5) Akkanna v. Venkaya, 25 M., 351 (1901).

(6) Rajah Venkata Narasimha Appa Rao v. Rajah Surenani Venkata Gopala Row, 31 M., 321.

Hindu Law Adoption

In addition to the following notes reference should be made to those cited in Commentary to ss. 101—104, ante. It is a doctrine of Hindu law in the case of adoption that "permission is to be presumed in the absence of prohibition." This maxim, however, relates to the person who gives and not to the person who receives a child in adoption (1) Adoption being a proper act, it will be presumed that when the majority give their consent such assent was given on bonâ fide grounds. (2) After a long lapse of time and when there is satisfactory evidence of the recognition of an adoption for a series of years, the presumption is that everything necessary to render the adoption valid has been performed So in a case to set aside an adoption on the ground that the ceremonies had not been performed where there was satisfactory evidence showing that the adoption had been continuously recognised for a series of years and that the party adopted had been in possession, either in person or through his guardian, of the property in dispute, held that the Court might well dispense with formal proof of the performance of the ceremonies, unless it were distinctly proved, on the part of the plaintiff, that the ceremonies had not been performed.(3) A Hindu testator by of his mother, to adopt ne other provisions of the

when a suit was brought by one of the testator's heirs, claiming the estate then in possession of the adopted son, on the ground that the adoption was invalid. Held that, although the defendant was bound to prove his title as adopted son as a fact, yet from the long period during which he had been received as adopted son, every allowance for the absence of evidence to prove such fact was to be favourably entertained and that the case was analogous to that in which the legitimacy of a person in possession had been acquiesced in for a considerable time, and afterwards impeached by a party, who had a right to question the legitimacy, where the defendant in order to ant every presumption

members of his family adopted son, raised even a stronger presumption in favour of the validity of his adoption, arising from the possibility of the loss of his rights in his own family by being adopted in another family.(4) It was held by the Privy Council that in the absence of proof of a valid adoption (which proof the lapse of time had made impossible) it was incumbent on the appellant, before any presumption of the fulfilment of the conditions of such adoption was justified, to establish an initial probability that the adoption was likely to have been made and that the conduct of the parties cognizant of the facts had at least been consistent with such a hypothesis (5) And in a case where there was no direct evidence of much value, but it was found that the alleged adopted son had succeeded to the inheritance and enjoyed it without opposition, and that documents had been framed on the basis of his adoption, it was held by the Privy Council that the adoption could be presumed to be valid.(6) Where an adoption has been acquiesced in for many years, the consent of some person competent to give away the adopted son should be presumed (7) In a suit for a declaration that an adoption long acted upon is fraudulent, the onus is on the plaintiff to establish

(1) Tarini Charan v Saroda Sundari, 3 B. L. R., A C. J, 145 (1869)

(2) Venkata Krishnamma v Annapurnamma, 23 M, 486 (1899)

(3) Saboo Beua v Nahagun Maiti, 2 B L R, App, 51 (1869), and see Nittanand Ghose v Krishna Dyal, 7 B L. R., 1, 5 (1871).

(4) Rajendro Nath v Jogendro Nath, 14 Moo I A, 67 (1871); See Mayne's Hindu Law, § 148, West & Buhler, 3rd Ed, 1907.

(5) Harshankar Patrtab Singh v. Lal Raghuraj Singh, P. C (1907); 29 A., 519; 34 I A, 125.

(6) Rup Narain v. Musst Gopal Devi, P C (1909), 36 C., 780 For cases of adoption see Diwakar Rao v Chandanlal Rao, P. C, 44 C, 201 (1917); Somsundaram v. Vaithilinga, 40 M., 846 (1917).

(7) Anandrav Sivaji v Ganesh Eshvant, 7 Bom H. C. R. (App.), 33 (1863).

the fraud which he alleges.(1) It is incumbent upon one seeking to dispute an adoption on the ground that the person making it was a "disqualified proprietor," to show that all the procedure necessary to make such person a disqualified proprietor was carried out according to law.(2) Where the general intention of a Hindu to be represented by an adopted son is clear, effect should be given to it, if this is possible without contravening the law.(3) It is a rudimentary principle of Hindu Law that no one can adopt a son to a dead man except his widow; but her choice may be restricted in various ways, as when the husband named persons whose consent would be necessary.(4) In a case in the Madras High Court where a widow authorised by her husband to adopt a son if and when she chose, adopted her own brother by the interested advice of her father, when she was eleven years old, it was held that adoption when a minor made without independent advice was void ab initio and could not be validated by later ratification (5) No estoppel arises from an invalid adoption unless through it the position of the party setting up the estoppel has been changed to [illegible] adoption in the absence of [illegible] he construction of an a[illegible] to the last male owner applies to a Hindu family governed by the Mitakshara Law.(8) As to estoppel by adoption, see notes to section 115, post; and generally section 101—104, ante As to Marriage, v. post, "Marriage:" notes to section 112, ante: and Index, sub voc., "Marriage."

The principle of joint tenancy appears to be unknown to Hindu law, except in the case of coparcenary between the members of an undivided family. Among Hindus when property is given to two persons jointly, there is no presumption that the donor intended to annex the condition of ownership.(9)

Hindu Law Gift.

As to the presumption of English law that a gift made under certain circumstances i[illegible] Hindus see the case undermentio[illegible] treated as a gift in [illegible] a Hindu is ordinarily aware that a woman normally takes only a limited interest, and since he ordinarily wishes that his estate should not pass away from his family, there is [illegible] daughter and that a grant [illegible] But this presumption as t[illegible] And when a grant vests property in the grantee and his descendants by terms sufficient to create an hereditary estate, such estate is not made inalienable merely by a direction that certain persons are to be maintained.(13)

Hindu Law: Endowment.

In the case of endowments made by Hindus for the worship of idols, it is presumed that the intention of the donor is to preserve the sheba in the family rather than to confer a benefit on an individual, but in the absence of words in the deed of gift denoting an intention that the gift should belong to the family, that presumption will not arise.(14) Where certain Hindu texts were referred to,

(1) Gooroo Prosunno v Nilmadhub Singh, 21 W R 84 (1873).
(2) Ishri Prasad v Lalji Jas, 22 A, 294 (1900).
(3) Sarada Prosad Pal v Rama Pati, 17 C. W. N, 319 (1912).
(4) Amrito Lal Dutt v. Surnomoyi Dasi, P. C, 27 C, 996 (1900).
(5) Sattiraju v. Venkataswami, 40 M., 925 (1917).
(6) Vaithilinga Mudali v. Natesa Mudali, 37 M, 529 (1914).
(7) Ib
(8) Madana Mohana v. Purushatama, 38 M, 1105 (1915).
(9) Bai Diwali v Patel Bechardas, 26 B., 445, 448 (1902)
(10) Kumara Upendra v. Nobin Krishna, 3 B L R. (O C.), 113 (1869).
(11) Nanda Gopal Sinha v. Poresh Moni Debi, 17 C. L. J, 464 (1913).
(12) Secretary of State v. Rashidul Huq, 18 C. L. J., 31 (1912).
(13) Secretary of State v Rashidul Huq. 18 C. L. J, 31 (1912).
(14) Chundernath Roy v. Kooar Gobindnath, 11 B. L. R, 86, 114 (1872).

[illegible]petual poverty, and is in- enefit; it was held that than counsels of perfec- the absence of clear and satisfactory proof that, as a matter of fact, the mohunt in question had no private funds at his disposal.(1)

Hindu Law: Family Custom

Hindu law is in the nature of personal usage or custom, and where an ancient family [illegible] is in favour of [illegible] migrated (2) I[illegible] a part of the co[illegible] they are governed by the Mitakshara law until proof is given of their having adopted the law of their new domicile (3) This presumption may be rebutted by showing that, except as regards marriage, all ceremonies in the family are performed according to the law of the Bengal school and by Bengal priests or by other facts (4)

Hindu Law: Joint property.

When a Hindu family is joint in food and worship, and is shewn to be possessed of some joint property(5), the presumption is that all the property they are possessed of is joint property, and that all acquisitions have been made from joint funds. and the onus of proving that any portion of that property is separate or self-acquired is on the person who alleges it.(6)

This presumption of joint property arising out of a nucleus of joint property cannot be sufficiently rebutted by evidence that the name of one member of the family only appeared as that of sole owner in revenue-records or in other documents relating to the property (7) But in a case in the Privy Council it was held that while separate entries in revenue-records may be in themselves

---

(1) Shree Mohan Kishora v Coimbatore Spinning Co, 26 M, 79, 82 (1902)

(2) Surendra Nath v Hiramani Burmain, 1 B. L. R. (P. C), 26 (1868) Pitambar Chandra Saha v. Nishikanta Saha, 32 C L J, 52; Sarada Prasanna v Uma Kanta, 37 C. L J, 233

(3) Pirthee Singh v Sheo Soondurce, 8 W R 261 (1867)

(4) Ram Bromo v Kaminee Soondurce, 6 W. R, 295 (1866) Pitambar Chandra Saha v Nishikanta Saha, 32 C. L J, 52

(5) Denonath Shaw v Hurrynarain Shaw, 12 B L. R, 349 (1873), Taruck Chunder v. Jogeshur Chunder, 11 B L R, 193 (1873), per Couch C J, overruling Shiu Golam v Baran Sing, 1 B L R. (A. C), 164; and dissenting from Khilut Chunder v. Koonj Lall, 11 B L R, 194 (1868); s c, 10 W R, 333, Soobheddur Dassee v. Bolaram Dewan, W R, Sp No 57 (1862), and approving Koonj Beharee v Khetturnath Dutt, 8 W R, 270 (1867), Dhunoodharee Lall v. Gunput Lall, 11 B L R, 201 (1868); Radhica Prosad v Dharma Dasi, 3 B L. R. (A C), 124 (1869); Neelkristo Deb v Beer Chunder, 12 Moo I A, 540 (1869), s c, 3 B L R (P C.), 13 (1869); 12 Suth P C discussed also in Bholanath v Ajoodhia, 12 B L R, 336 (1873); s c, 20 W R, 65, Denonath v Hurrynarain, 12 B L R, 349 (1873); Gobind Chunder v Doorgapersaud, 14 B L R, 337 (1874).

(6) Dhurm Das v Shama Soondari, 3 Moo I A, 229 (1843), Gopeekristo Gosain v Gunga Persaud, 6 Moo I A, 53 (1854), Naragunty v Vengama, 9 Moo I A, 66 (1861), Prankishen Paul v Mothooramohun Paul, 10 Moo I A, 53 (1865), Abed Ali v Moheshur Buksh, Sev Aug Dec, 1863, p 801 (1862), Tara Churn v Joy Narain, 8 W R, 226 (1867), Lalla Sreedhur v. Lala Madho, 8 W R, 294 (1867) (character of strict proofs required to rebut presumption in favour of joint estate in joint Hindu family), Prankristo v Bhageerutte, 20 W. R., 158 (1872), Gajendar Singh v Sardar Singh, 18 A, 176 (1895) Where the plaintiffs set up a case which was inconsistent with the presumption of the family remaining joint, it was held that it was for them to prove that separation took place as they alleged, Ram Ghulam v Ram Behari, 18 A, 90 (1895). Anandrao Gunpatrao v Vasantrao Madhanrao (1907), 11 C W N, 478, Lal Bahadur v Kanhaiya Lal, P. C (1907), 29 A, 244, Ganpat Marwari v Balmakund Behara, 18 C L J, 548 (1913)

(7) Cheetha v Miheen Lall, 11 Moo I A, 369 (1867) Hyder Hosain v Mahomed Hossain, 14 Moo I. A, 401 (1872), Jussoondah v Ajodhia, 2 Ind Jur, N S, 261 (1867), Janokee Dassee v Kisto Komul Marsh 1 (1862).

inconclusive in rebuttal of the presumption of jointness, yet when they are supported by other transactions pointing to separation, and no evidence to reconcile such entries and such transactions with jointness is given by the members of the family, separation may be taken as proved.(1) Nor is evidence only of separation in mess sufficient to rebut the presumption(2), although separation in both dwelling and food if not conclusive evidence of separation in estate, will give rise in Hindu law to a presumption of separation in estate.(3) Where the members of a Mahommedan family live in commensality they do not form a joint family in the sense that Hindus do, and there is therefore no presumption at all in Mahommedan law that the acquisitions of the several members are made for the benefit of the family jointly.(4) The Bombay High Court dissented from the High Courts of Calcutta, Madras and Allahabad on this point till recently; but now a Full Bench of that High Court has held that Art 127 of the Second Schedule of Act XV of 1877 does not apply to the property of a Mahommedan or any other person not a Hindu, in the absence of proof that he had adopted as a custom the Hindu law of the joint-family.(5) In the case of further acquirements, it would not be sufficient to show that the consideration-money passed out of the hands of the member claiming the purchased property as self-acquired without its being shown that the funds were exclusively his own.(6) The fact that certain parcels are held in severalty does not do away with the presumption that the rest of the estate is joint(7); but evidence by a purchaser at an execution-sale under a decree passed against one member of a joint family to the effect that there had been separate trading beyond separate funds and property belonging to the several members of the family was held to disclose a state of things sufficient to weaken, if not altogether to rebut, the ordinary presumption of Hindu law as to property in the name of one member of a joint family and throw on those alleging it the onus of estab- [illegible] dermentioned case [illegible] ons (of whom one

[illegible] had any ancestral property, but it had acquired property by trade in which the father and the two sons were jointly engaged. There being no indication of an intention to the contrary, it was held that it must be presumed that the property thus acquired was held by the members of the family as joint property with the incident of the right of survivorship.(9) Lastly, the presumption of union has been held to be stronger as between brothers than as between cousins, and the presumption is weaker the farther from the common ancestor the descent has proceeded.(10) There is no presumption when one coparcener separates from the others that the latter remain united.(11) The presumption that all property

(1) Ram Singh v. Must Tursa Kunwar, P. C., 17 C. W. N., 1085 (1913), per Ameer Ali, J

(2) Banee Madhub v. Baggobutty Churn, 8 W. R., 270 (1867)

(3) Mussumat Anundee v. Khedoo Lal, 14 Moo. I. A, 412 (1872); Jogun Koer v. Rughoonundun Lal, 10 W. R, 148 (1868).

(4) Hakim Khan v Gool Khan, 8 C, 826 (1882); 10 C L. R., 603. See Muhammad Wali Khan v. Muhamad Mohi-ud-din, 24 C. W. N., 321.

(5) Isap Ahmed v Abhramji Ahmadji, F. B., 41 B, 588 (1917) (Shah, J., dissenting). In this case it was said that the Bombay High Court in a series of wrong decisions had followed Sayad Gulam Hussain v. Bibi Anvaranissa, P. J., 170 (1885) but now disregarded them in accordance with the rule in Tricomdas Coverji Bhoja v Sri Sri Gopinath Jiu Thakur, P. C, 19 Bom L R, 450 (1916)

(6) Koonj Beharee v. Kheturnath Dutt, 8 W. R., 270 (1867).

(7) Sreeram Ghose v Sreenath Dutt, 7 W. R., 451 (1867).

(8) Bodh Singh v. Gunesh Chunder, 12 B. L. R. (P. C.), 317, 326, 327 (1873).

(9) Gopalasami Chetti v. Arunachelam, 27 M., 32 (1903). See Muthu Ramakrishna Naicken v. Marimuthu Goundan, 38 M, 1036 (1915); Kishen Pershad v. Har Narain Singh, 38 I A., 45 (1911).

(10) Moro Vishwanath v. Ganesh Vithal, 10 Bom. H. C. R, 444, 453 (1873)

(11) Balabux v. Rukhmabai, 30 C., 725 (1903).

held by any member of a joint family so long as the family remains joint is joint-property applies to families governed by the Dayabhaga.(1) As to the presumption that a father dealing with self-acquired property intended that it should be taken as ancestral estate, see below.(2) See Notes to ss 101—104 sub voc., "Hindu Law."

There is no presumption that a loan contracted by the manager of a joint Hindu family has been contracted for a family purpose.(3) Hindu Law: Manager.

Where immovable property is devised to the testator's wife as "malik" of the property, unless there is something in the context to the contrary, the widow takes an absolute and not merely a life-interest in the property The mere fact that the donee is the testator's wife is not sufficient to rebut the presumption of that meaning (4)

It is incumbent on a plaintiff suing as the reversionary heir of a Hindu proprietor who has died leaving a widow, to show that the property claimed in the suit and found in her possession, has vested in the husband. There is no presumption of law arising where the late husband possessed considerable property, that property found to be in the possession of the widow after his death, must have been included in that which belonged to him unless he shows that she obtained the property from another source (5) Hindu Law: Suit by reversioner.

[illegible] all kinds, no presumption [illegible] than that of innocence. [illegible] eater is the force of the evidence required to overcome this presumption (6) Although some of the reasons which led to the adoption of this presumption have disappeared with severity of the old criminal law, yet the sacredness of reputation and liberty [illegible] presumes in favour of innocence. [illegible] nt until the contrary be proved, [illegible] In the inferior Courts of this country, the right principle is occasionally reversed, and a person is presumed to be guilty the moment he is accused, and every attempt on his part to prove his innocence is regarded as vexatious (8) When the facts found proved in a case are perfectly consistent either with the innocence or guilt of the accused the presumption of innocence should prevail.(9) The inference of guilt can only be made if the inculpating facts are shown to be incompatible with the innocence of [illegible] Innocence asserting the affirmative of the issue, yet if proof of a negative is necessary to

[illegible]

(1) Rama Nath Chatterjee v Kusum Kamini, 4 C. L. J, 56.

(2) Nagalingam Pillai v Ramachandra Tevar, 24 M., 429 (1901)

(3) Sotru Padmanabh v Narayanrao, 18 B, 520 (1893). See Krishna v Vasudev, 21 B, 808 (1889)

(4) Mussumat Surajmani v Rabi Nath Ogha, P C (1907), Times L R., v 24, 218, approving Padam Lal v Tek Singh, 29 A, 217

(5) Diwan Ran v Indarpal Singh, 26 C., 871 (1889).

(6) Weston v Peary Mohan Das, 40 C 898 (1913)

(7) Burr Jones, Ev, § 111, Taylor, Ev, §§ 112—118; Best, Ev, §§ 334, 346; 1 Greenleaf, § 35; Lawson, Pres Ev, 433 et seq, Wharton, Ev, § 1244, Starkie, Ev, 755.

(8) Sheoprakash Singh v Rawlins, 28 C, 594 (1901)

(9) R v Ramchandra Dhondoo, 6 Bom L R, 551 (1904)

(10) Emperor v Kangal Mali, 41 C, 601 (1914), per Woodroffe, J.

(11) Taylor, Ev § 114, Burr Jones, Ev, §§ 11, 100, 102, Best, Ev, §§ 329, 334, 346 The presumption of innocence is stronger than the presumption of payment, continuance of life or of things generally, and of marriage, but is less strong than the presumption of knowledge of the law or of sanity, Lawson, Pres. Ev, 582 establish guilt, such proof must be given.(1) The presumption of innocence in Criminal cases signifies no more than that if the commission of a crime is directly in issue. it must be proved beyond reasonable doubt (2) The proof of guilt must depend on positive affirmation, and cannot be inferred from mere absence of explanation; but if there is evidence which involves an accused person in considerable suspicion, he is called in (for his own sake) to reconcile it with his innocence (3)

This presumption has its most frequent applications in the criminal law; but though it has sometimes been said to have no place in civil issues except so far as it regulates the burden of proof(4), yet the weight of authority in England when misconduct or crime is alleged, whether in a criminal or in a civil proceeding, whether in a direct proceeding to punish the offender or in some collateral matter, presumes the accused to be innocent until strictly proved to be guilty beyond a reasonable doubt.(5) The presumption of innocence in civil cases has been stated to be that "a person who is shown to have done any act is presumed to have done it innocently and honestly and not fraudulently, illegally, or wickedly."(6) In accordance with this principle, it has been held in America that in a civil action on a policy of insurance a death must be presumed to have been a natural one and not a suicide, when there is no evidence as to its cause, since suicide is felony.(7) The presumption of innocence may be overthrown and a presumption of guilt be raised by the misconduct of the party in suppressing or destroying evidence.(8)

The presumption is of constant application in civil actions when fraud is in issue. [illegible] in the sense that fraud will not be assumed [illegible] transactions being presumed In the ord[illegible] honesty are presumed. and conveyances, sales and contracts generally are presumed to have been made in good faith until the contrary appears Odiosa et inhonesta non sunt in lege præsumenda.(9) So also the law presumes against vice and immorality, and on this ground presumes strongly in favour of marriage, so that cohabitation and reputation are generally held to be presumptive evidence of marriage (10) One of the strongest illustrations of this principle (although resting also in some

(1) Williams v East India Co, 3 East, 192; Taylor, Ev, § 113.

(2) Amrita Lal Hazra v Emperor, 42 C, 957 (1915).

(3) Ib

(4) Wharton, Ev, § 1245 It has been said that this presumption has no evidentiary force, being founded on no presumption of fact, being in most instances a paraphrase of the rules regulating the burden of proof; and that what is meant is this if a man be accused of crime he must be proved guilty beyond reasonable doubt Best, Ev, Amer. Notes, pp. 309, 310, 386 The weight of American authority appears to support the proposition that in civil actions, although the charge of a crime is to be established, a preponderance of testimony is sufficient: Burr. Jones, Ev, §§ 15, 193.

(5) Steph Dig, Art 94; Taylor, Ev, § 112, Best, Ev, 346; Mayen v. Alston, 16 M., 245 ["He is clearly well founded in saying that so far as appellants impute to respondents misconduct or dereliction of duty, it is for the former to establish their case The presumption is against such misconduct or violation of duty until it is proved by the party who makes the imputation"] Per Muttusami Ayyar, J, Gaur Mohun v Tarachand, 3 B L R., App. 17 at p 20 (1869). "It must be always borne in mind that want of bona fides should not be presumed against anybody," per Mitter, J.

(6) Lawson, Pres Ev, Rule 19, p 93

(7) Walcott v. American Life, etc, Society (1891), 33 Am. St. R., 923

(8) v ante, p. 785.

(9) Best, Ev, § 349; see ante notes to ss 101—104, p 670 and note to s 111, ante; Kerr, Frauds 2nd Ed, 448; Lawson, Pres, Ev., 93; Savlappa v Devchand, 26 B, 132 (1901). ["There is no more reason to presume fraud than to presume negligence"]

(10) Best Ev, § 349; Lawson Pres Ev, 104; exceptional cases are criminal and divorce proceedings; v. ante, s. 50, pp. 447, 448 and see "Marriage" p 799, post; for the presumption as to dissolution see Bur. Jones Ev, § 13.

degree on grounds of public policy) is the presumption in favour of the legitimacy of children.(1)

It is a branch of this rule that ambiguous instruments or acts shall, if possible, be construed so as to have a lawful meaning. Thus where a deed or other instrument is susceptible of two constructions, one of which the law would carry into effect, while the other would be in contravention of some legal principle or statutory provision, the parties will always be presumed to have intended the former.(2) There is a legal presumption in favour of a deed that it is honest and is what it purports to be.(3) Wrongful or tortuous conduct will not be presumed.(4) All persons are presumed to have duly discharged any obligation imposed on them by law. Thus the judgments of Courts of competent jurisdiction are presumed to be well founded, and their records to be correctly made; judges and jurors are presumed to do nothing causelessly or maliciously; public officers are presumed to do their duty, and the like.(5) Further, all testimony given in a Court of Justice is presumed to be true until the contrary appears, perjury not being presumed(6) When a person is required to do an act, the omission to do which would be criminal, his performance of that act will be intended until the contrary is shown.(7)

On the same principle rests the rule that negligence is not to be presumed, it is rather to be presumed that ordinary care has been used And the person charging negligence must show that the other party by his act or omission has violated some duty incumbent upon him and thereby caused the injury complained of.(8) The rule does not apply in the case of common carriers, who, on grounds of public policy, are presumed to have been negligent, if goods entrusted to their care have been lost or damaged (9) Railway Companies are not common carriers of passengers. Where such a company is sued for not carrying safely, negligence alleged against them must be proved affirmatively when denied (10)

Where a thing is shown to be under the management of the defendant or his agent, and where an accident in the ordinary course of events does not happen when the business is properly conducted, the accident itself, if it happens, raises a presumption of negligence in the absence of any explanation In such cases the facts are said to speak for themselves Res ipsa loquitur.(11) When goods which have been entrusted to bailees for hire are lost, it lies on the bailees to show that they have taken as much care of the goods as a man of ordinary prudence would, under similar circumstances, have taken of his own goods of a

---

(1) Best, Ev, 349, see s 112, ante, and cases there cited, Lawson, Pres Ev, 106, 108 Dularey Singh v Suraj Dhan Singh, 43 I. C, 478

(2) Best, Ev § 347

(3) Srimati Lakhimani v Mohendranath Dutt, 4 B L R, P C, 16, 27 (1869)

(4) Best Ev, § 350

(5) Best, Ev, § 350 until the contrary appears every person will be presumed to have conformed to the laws R v Hawkins, 10 East, 211.

(6) Ib, § 352

(7) Starkie, Ev, 756

(8) Lawson, Pres Ev, 102, 103 Burr Jones Ev, § 14 As to whether carriers' "negligence clause" is good in India, see Sheikh Mahamad Ravuthar v British India Steam Navigation Co, 32 M., 95

(9) Ross v Hill, 2 C B, 890, Coggs v. Bernard, 2 Ld Raym, 818; Choutmull Doogur v Rivers Steam Nagivation Co, 24 C, 786 (1897), 26 C, 398 (1898), s c, 3 C W N, 145

(10) East Indian Railway Co v Kalidas Mukherji, 28 C, 401 (1901) reversing decision of Lower Court reported in 26 C, 465 (1898), 3 C W N, 781, 2 C W N, 609 A passenger may lawfully attempt to get rid of inconvenience or danger caused by negligence, provided that in so doing he runs no obvious disproportionate risk and is not himself guilty of negligence Bromley v G I P Railway Co, 24 B, 1 (1899)

(11) Byrne v Broadle, 2 H & C 722, Scott v London Dock Co 24 L J, Ex, 220, Kearney v London & Brighton Railway Co, L R, 5 Q B, 411, Choutmull Doogur v Rivers Steam Navigation Co, 24 C 786 (1897) 26 C, 398 (1898) East Indian Railway Co v Kalidas Mukerji, 28 C 404 (1901) 26 C, 465 (1898).

similar kind and that the loss occurred notwithstanding such care. If they fail to satisfy the Court on that point, they are liable for the loss.(1) Where goods are delivered to a Railway Company for carriage not "at owner's risk," and such goods are lost or destroyed while in the custody of the Company, it is not for the o [illegible] to prove negligence on [illegible] proved delivery to the C[illegible] exercised the care required by the Contract Act of bailees for hire.(2) In a recent case where packages of sugar were carried by a Railway Company on the owner's risk-note and he, in consideration of lower freightage, had agreed that the Company should only be liable for loss of one or more complete packages through its wilful neglect or through theft or wilful neglect by its servants, and some of the packages were stolen, it was held that the onus was on him to prove the Company's liability, for under section 72 of the Indian Railways Act it had power to contract itself out of sections 157 and 161 of the Contract Act.(3) Where goods consigned under a through-booking are injured in transit, the delivering Railway Company will not be liable under section 80 of the Indian Railways Act in the absence of proof that the injury occurred on their line.(4) A Steamship Company is not a bailee, but a common carrier subject to the Carrier's Act and even in the case of a consignment on an owner's risk-note the onus is on it to disprove negligence in case of loss.(5)

A primâ facie case does not take away from a defendant the presumption of innocence, though [illegible] control it; but that [illegible] the defendant, to reb[illegible] presumption may [illegible] Where there are c[illegible] the presumption of innocence will prevail against that of the con[illegible] life(9), the presumption of the continuance of things generally(10); and the

(1) Trustees of the Harbour, Madras v Best & Co, 22 M, 524 (1899).

(2) Nanku Ram v Indian Midland Railway Co, 22 A, 361 (1900)

(3) East Indian Railway Co v Nathmal Behari Lal, 39 A., 418 (1917).

(4) East Indian Railway Co v. Nope Chand Magniram, 19 C L J, 434 (1914) and see as to liability of Railway Companies East India Railway Co. v. Nilkanta Roy, 19 C L J, 142 (1914) following Sheobarut Ram v Bengal N. W. Railway, 16 C W N, 766 (1912) but see Lal Chand Sew Karan v. East Indian Railway Co, 17 C. W. N., 635 (1913), foot note.

(5) India General Steam Navigation Co. v Bhagwan Chandra Pal, 40 C, 716 (1913) following Choutmul Dougur v. River Steam Navigation Co, 24 C, 786 (1897) and see as to liability of steamship companies, India General Steam Navigation Co v. Gopal Chandra Guin, 41 C., 80 (1914) and Narang Rai Agarwalla v. River Steam Navigation Co., 34 C., 419 (1907).

(6) Commonwealth v. Kimball, 24 Pick. (Mass), 373 (Amer.) Nibaran Chandra Roy v. R (1907), 11 C. W. N., 1085.

(7) Jayne v Price, 5 Taunt, 326.

(8) L[illegible], Pres Ev, 447.

(9) R. v In[illegible]ts of Gloucestershire, 2 Barn. & Ald, 386; [it was there held that the law presumes the continuance of life, but it also presumes against the commission of crimes; that the cases cited were distinguishable as they decided only that seven years after a person has been last heard of, his death was to be presumed, but that they did not show that where conflicting presumptions exist, death may not be presumed at an earlier period]. See, however, R. v. Inhabitants of Harborne, 2 Ad & Ellis, 540; Lapsley v. Grierson, 1 H L Cas, 500; Starkie, Ev, 755

(10) Klein v. Landman, 29 Moo, 259 (Amer.). [A and B, as husband and wife, sued C for slander; they proved their marriage, but C proved declarations of the wife that she had been married in Germany to another man. It was presumed that the previous marriage had been dissolved by death or divorce] It was here said:—"The presumption of law is that the conduct of parties is in conformity to law until the contrary is shown That a fact continuous in its nature will be presumed to continue after its existence is once shown is a presumption which ought not to be allowed to overthrow another presumption, of equal, if not greater, force in favour of innocence."

presumption of marriage.(1) But it is otherwise as to the presumption of knowledge of the law(2) and the presumption of sanity.(3)

Possession, knowledge or motive, may overthrow the presumption of innocence and raise in its place a presumption of guilt(4), as also may conduct of spoliation (5) As to criminal intention, v. post, "Intention." A person on trial for one crime cannot be presumed guilty because he has, at another time, committed a similar or different crime, and the latter fact is not admissible in evidence against him.(6)

But to prove knowledge or intent or motive, a collateral crime may be shown(7) and a separate crime from that charged may be shown where it is necessary to prove that the crime charged was not accidental (8) And so in the case of embezzlement effected by means of false entries; a single false entry might be accidentally made, but the probability of accident would diminish at least as fast as the instances increased (9)

[illegible] part of th[illegible] rcum- stan[illegible] of the [illegible] nces involves the proof [illegible] such cases it is proper [illegible] or more links of that chain consist of circumstances which tend to prove that the prisoner has been guilty of other crimes than that charged, this is no reason why the Court should exclude those circumstances They are so intimately connected and blended with the main facts adduced in evidence that they cannot be departed from with propriety, and there is no reason why the criminality of such intimate and connected circumstances should exclude them more than other facts apparently innocent (11)

---

(1) Clayton v Wardell, 4 N Y, 230 (Amer.), Case v Case, 17 C, 598 (Amer): A presumption of marriage arises from cohabitation M and Y were proved to have lived together and cohabited. Y afterwards married S The presumption that Y did not commit bigamy prevails over the presumption that M and Y were married

(2) Ignorance of the law, according to the well known maxim, excuses no one and cannot be pleaded as an excuse for the commission of a crime. See cases cited in Lawson, Pres Ev, 453—457.

(3) Thus if A is charged with a crime, the presumption is that A was sane when he committed it, and if he wishes to be excused on the ground of non-responsibility, he must prove insanity; Lawson, Pres Ev, 457—459 See s. 105, ante.

(4) Lawson, Pres Ev, 478 as to possession of stolen goods, see s 114, Ill (a), and as to motive, Starkie, Ev, 50, 51, and notes to ss 8, 14, ante

(5) v ante, p 786

(6) v ante, p 137, and notes to ss 14 and 15, ante; R. v. Cole, 1 Phil, Ev, 508; Lawson, Pres. Ev, 481—486; Steph. Dig, 162—164, where this rule is stated to be one of the most characteristic and distinctive features of the English criminal law Up to, however, the beginning of the 18th Century there are to be found numerous instances of the admission of evidence of this kind, see 6 How St Tr, 935

(7) S 14, ante, and cases there cited; Dun's case, 1 Moody, 146, Lawson, Pres Ev, 487—489, R v Francis, L R 2 C C R, 128, R v Cooper, 1 Q B D, 19, R v Cleeves, 4 C & P, 221

(8) S 15, ante, and cases there cited; R. v Gray, 4 F & F, 1102, Lawson, Pres Ev, 489, 490, R v. Richardson, 2 F. & F, 313, R v. Geerring, 18 L J. M. C, 215, R v Cotton, 12 Cox, C C., 400; R v Garner, 3 F & F, 681; R v. Voke, Russ & Ry, 531, R v. Roden, 12 Cox, C C, 630; R v Dossett, 2 C. & K, 306.

(9) State v. Lapage, 57 N. H., 245 (Amer)

(10) S 65, ante, and cases there cited; Lawson, Pres Ev, 490—492; and see R. v Taylor, 5 Cox, C. C., 138 [A is indicted for arson in setting fire to a rick, the property of B Evidence of A's presence and conduct at fires of other ricks on the same night, the property of C and B, is admissible.]

(11) Walker's case, 1 Leigh. (Va), 557 (Amer)

As there is a general presumption in favour of innocence, so where certai facts are proved there may arise presumptions in disfavour of innocence (1)

Mahommedan Law.

The rule as laid down in section 112, which is a rule of substantive la rather than of evidence, has no application to Mahommedans so far as it con flicts with the Mahommedan rule that a child born within less than six month

But Mahommedan la a case where a child wa
a period of seven year in his female apartments anterior to the birth of the child taking place, and while so residing was recognised to a certain extent as his wife, and the child was born under his roof and continued to be maintained in his house without any steps being taken on the father's part to repudiate his title to legitimacy as his offspring: it was held that that was presumptive evidence of marriage and legitimacy according to Mahommedan law.(3) Cohabitation and birth with treatment tantamount to acknowledgment is sufficient to prove legitimacy although mere cohabitation alone will not suffice to raise such a legal presumption of marriage as to legitimatize the offspring An ante-nuptial child is legitimate, a child born out of wedlock is illegitimate; if acknowledged, he acquires the status of legitimacy. When therefore a child really illegitimate by birth becomes legitimated it is by force of an acknowledgment, express or implied, directly proved or presumed These presumptions are inferences of fact The child of a concubine may become legitimate by treatment as legitimate. Such presumption in favour permitted to override

Where a son, although not recognised by his father on any particular occasion, was always treated on the same footing as the other legitimate sons, the Privy Council held that this raised some presumption that his mother was the father's wife.(5) In another ıder the circumstances of the not justified. In arriving at t ed that they wished it to be distinctly understood that they did not deny or question the position that, according to Mahommedan law, the legitimacy of a child may be presumed from circumstances without any direct proof either of marriage or of any formal act of legitimation (6) The acknowledgment of the child as the offspring of the acknowledger where the circumstances render it within the bounds of possibility(7) is, however, not merely primâ facie evidence which may be rebutted but establishes the fact acknowledged (8) The acknowledgment of paternity

(1) See Ch XX of Lawson on Pres Evidence where these presumptions will be found collected, arranged in rules, and commented upon

(2) Wilson's Digest of Mahommedan Law, p 83, Field's Evidence Act, 6th Ed, 373,

(3) Hidayat Oollah v. Jan Khanum, 3 Moo I A, 295 See also Jeswant Singjee v Jet Singjee, 3 Moo. I A., 245 (1844); Oomda Bibee v. Shah Jonab, 5 W R, 132 (1866); (the acknowledgment of a father renders a son or daughter a legitimate child and heir, unless it is impossible for him or her to be so); Nawabunissa v. Fuzloonissa, Marsh Rep, 428; Ashruffunnissa v. Azeeman, 1 W. R, 17 (1864) For case of admissibility of evidence of family custom varying strict Mahommedan Law see Muhammad Ismail Khan v Lala Sheomukh Rai, P C, 17 C W. N, 97 (1912).

(4) Ashrufooddowlah v. Hyder Hossein, 11 Moo I A, 94, p 113 (1866). Ismail Khan v Fidayat-un-nissa, 3 A, 723 (1881), Wilson's Digest of Mahommedan Law, p 84.

(5) Khajooroonissa v Rowshan Jehan, 2 C, 184, 199 (1876).

(6) Mahomed Bauker v Shurfoon Nissa, 8 Moo. I. A, 136 (1860); s. c. 3 W. R. (P. C.), 37. See also Mussumat Jariut-ul-Batool v. Hoseinee Begum, 11 Moo I A, 194 (1864). See also Azeemnissa Khatoon v. Karimunissa Khatoon 23 C., 130 (1896)

(7) Meer Arshruf v. Meer Arshed, 16 W. R, 260 (1871)

(8) See also on acknowledgment of child by father under Mahommedan Law; Oomda Bibee v. Shah Jonab, 5 W. R., 132 (1866); In re Bibee Nujeebunnissa, 4 B.

legitimating the child ought to be clear and distinct(1), but need not be of such a character as to be evidence of marriage (2)It was held in the case cited that the succession of a Mahommedan being an individual succession there is no presumption such as exists in the case of a Hindu joint family that property purchased in the name of a member of the family was purchased out of joint undivided property; that primâ facie therefore the property bought in the name of the deceased brother was bought with his money.(3)

The mere cohabitation of a man and woman, or their behaviour in other respects as husband and wife, always affords an inference of greater or less strength that a marriage has been solemnized between them Their conduct being susceptible of two opposite explanations, the Court, giving effect to the presumption of innocence (v ante) is bound to assume it to be moral rather than immoral.(4) The law presumes the validity of a marriage-ceremony (5) Where a man and a woman intend to become husband and wife and a ceremony of marriage is performed between them by a clergyman competent to perform a Marriage.

was performed between them by a clergyman competent to perform a valid marriage: Held that the Court was bound to presume that a dispensation necessary [illegible] ound of affinity had been obta [illegible] proved, there arises a presum [illegible] that there has also the undermentioned case(9) the dispute was between certain claimants under

---

L R (A C), 55 (1869), Fuzeelun Bibee v Omdah Bibee, 10 W R, 469 (1868); Mussamut Jailun v. Mussamut Bibee, 12 W R, 497 (1870), Nujmooddeen Ahmed v Beebee Zuhoorun, 10 W R, 45 (1868); Bibee Wuheedun v. Wusee Hossein, 15 W. R, 403 (1871): Numbo Cant v. Mahatab Bibee, 20 W R, 164 (1873), Khajooroonissa v. Rowshan Jehan, 2 C, 184 (1877); s c, 26 W. R, 36; L. R., 3 I. A, 291; Asmat Ali v Lali Begum, 9 I A, 8, s c, 8 C, 422, Mahatala Bibee v Haleem-uz-zaman, 10 C L. R., 293 (1881); Sadakat Hossein v. Muhomed Yusub, 10 C., 663 (1883); s c, L R, 11 I A, 31; as to the offspring of an adulterous intercourse, fornication or incest, see Muhammad Aleahdad v. Ismail Khan, 8 A., 234 (1886); s c., 10 A., 289; Dhan Bibee v. Lalon Bibee, 27 C, 801 (1901), Baillie's Mahommedan Law, 2nd Ed, p. 406

(1) Kedarnath Chuckerbutty v. Donzelle, 20 W. R., 352 (1873).

(2) Wuheedun v Wusee Hossein, 15 W R, 404 (1871); see further Rowshan Jehan v. Enact Hossein, 5 W. R, 5 (1866). As to acknowledgment as a brother, see Mirza Himmut v Sahebzadee, 13 B. L R, 182 (1873), s c, 1 I A, 23; 21 W R, 113, Field's Evidence Act, 6th Ed, pp 117, 373. See for case of a son born to a Mahommedan by a Burmese woman, 21 C, 666 (1893).

(3) Muhammad Wali Khan v Muhamad Mohi-ud-din, 24 C W. N., 321

(4) Lawson, Pres Ev, 93, 95, 104, et seq. The law in general presumes against vice and immorality, Cargile v. Wood, 613 Moo, 56 (Amer).

(5) Ib, 106, 107, Harrison v Mayor, 4 DeG M. & G, 153; Harrod v Harrod, 1 K. & J., 4; Fleming v Fleming, 4 Bing, 266; Sichel v. Lambert, 15 C. B. (N. S.), 782

(6) Lopez v. Lopez, 12 C, 706 (1885); discussed in In re Millard, 10 M., 218, 221 (1887).

(7) Lopez v. Lopez, supra.

(8) In re Millard, 10 M. 218, 221 (1887) explaining Lopez v Lopez, 12 C., 706, supra.

(9) Sheppard, In re, George v Thyer (1904), 1 Ch, 456 a will, and the question was whether certain of them were legitimate children of one G. A. There was no direct evidence of the marriage of the parents, which was alleged to have taken place recently in France. But there was evidence that G. A. and the mother of the claimants whose legitimacy was in question had lived together in England as man and wife There was also some evidence of recognition of the children by the family. Upon this evidence the Court dispensed with strict [illegible] legitimacy of the claimants i[illegible]

Sastry Velaider Aronegary v [illegible] it was not essential to pro[illegible] of children by the family and that the presumption of marriage must prevail when the evidence shows that the parties were living together as man and wife for a sufficiently long period of time An attempt was made to establish that the French law did not permit such marriage as was alleged in this case, but the Court assumed this and found in favour of legitimacy.(2) In cases of inheritance, when once you get to this that there was a marriage in fact there is a presumption in favour of there being a marriage in law. But however much such a presumption may be taken as rightly arising in cases involving questions of [illegible] legality of the [illegible] or the restitution [illegible] uted), it is not [illegible] esumed that the necessary rites and ceremonies were performed ; but the Court must find specifically what these rites and ceremonies are and whether they were performed.(3) The presumption which ought to be made in favour of marriage where there has been a lengthened cohabitation, is rebutted by showing that the conduct of the parties is inconsistent with the relation of husband and wife.(4) Under the Mahommedan law the mere continuance of cohabitation under circumstances in which no obstacle to marriage exists is not alone sufficient to raise a presumption of marriage, but to raise such presumption it is necessary that there should not only be a continued cohabitation, but continued cohabitation under circumstances from which it could naturally be inferred that the cohabitation was a cohabitation as man and wife, and there must be a treatment tantamount to an acknowledgment of the fact of the marriage and the legitimacy of the children.(5) And it has been held by the Privy Council that before applying the general presumption of marriage arising from cohabitation with habit and repute, it is necessary to make sure that the conditions necessary to it exist, for instance that there was some body of neighbours, many or few, or some sort of public, large or small. It was held also that the habit and repute must be habit of the particular status which in the country in question is lawful marriage.(6)

In criminal cases where marriage is an ingredient in an offence, as in bigamy, adultery, and the enticing of married women, the fact of the marriage

---

(1) 6 App. Cas, 364, 371.

(2) See Campbell v. Campbell (The Breadalbane case), L. R., 1, H. L., Sc, 182

(3) Surjyamoni Dasi v. Kali Kanta, 28 C., 37, 50 (1900), s. c, 5 C. W. N., 195, referring to Inderan Valungypuly v. Ramaswamy Pandia, 13 Moo I. A, 141 (1869); Brindobun Chandra v Chundra Kurmokar, 12 C., 140 (1885); Administrator-General of Madras v. Anandachari, 9 M., 466 (1886).

(4) Abdool Razack v. Aga Mahomed, 21 Ind. App, 56 (1896); In which case will be found a discussion as to whether Buddhists come under the same category as Jews and Christians with whom Mahomedans may intermarry. In Luchmi Koer v. Roghu Nath, 27 C., 971 (1900), the ordinary criteria afforded by conduct contributed but little aid to remove doubt; but it was held that the oral testimony should prevail against the improbability presented by the case that a marriage should have taken place.

(5) Masit-un-nissa v. Pathani, 26 A., 295 (1904).

(6) Ma Wun Di v. Ma Kin (1907), 35 C., 232.

must be strictly proved. The onus of proving that certain members of certain Brahmin families cannot enter into a legal marriage-contract is on the person who advances such a proposition, opposed as it is to the law and custom prevailing among members of the caste all over India.(1)

Physical presumptions

The constancy of natural laws is to be assumed until the contrary be proved. The ordinary physical sequences of nature are to be contemplated as probable and to be presumed to be existing among the contingencies to be accepted by reasonable men; such as the falling of water from a higher to a lower level the spreading of fire in inflammable material, and that the shock on meeting an obstacle is in proportion to momentum.(2) It may also be assumed that untended

ry noises

the con-

tinctively

and convulsively.(4) The physical presumptions relating to life and death are the subject of sections 107 and 108, ante, and have been also adverted to under the heading of the presumption of continuity. Mention has also been made thereunder of the presumptions which formerly prevailed with reference to survivorship. When simply the fact is known of the death of a person capable of having had issue, death without issue cannot be presumed. But such presumption may be drawn from any circumstances indicating non-marriage or childlessness.(5) In cases where it is proved, either directly or inferentially, that there are several persons in the same circle of society, bearing the same name, mere identity of name, by itself, is not sufficient to establish identity of per with circumstances indicating of the same name at the same with other circumstances are facts from which identity may be presumed.(7) But ordinarily similarity of names will sustain a verdict when no dispute of identity was raised on trial(8) So a primâ facie case of identification of the person executing a document is necessary, but such identification need not be by the attesting witness, but may be aliunde The proof of identity, however, need only be inferential; unless there be grounds of sus- it is now held that unless the s there be evidence of a name ome other circumstance calcu- ntity of name is sufficient for a " ante.

Psychological presumptions.

As to the distinction between physical and psychological facts, see Best, Ev., § 12. Among psychological presumptions may be enumerated the following:—In the absence of any evidence on the subject every person is presumed

(1) Pappi Anterjenam v Teyyan Nayer, 14 Mad L. J., 214 (1903).

(2) Wharton, Ev, §§ 1293, 1294.

(3) Ib, § 1295

(4) Wharton, Ev, § 1296.

(5) Ib, § 1279; Richards v. Richards, 15 East. 293 (see however, Doe v. Deakin, 3 C. & P, 402); Doe v. Griffin, 15 East, 293, Greaves v. Greenwood, 24 W. R (Eng), 296; In re Phene's Trust, L. R, 5 Ch, 150; Mason v Mason, 1 Mer., 318; Barnett v. Tugwell, 31 Beav., 232; In re Selwyn, 3 Hag. N. S, 748; Dowley v. Winfield, 14 Sim. 277. In re Nichols, L. R, 2 P. & D, 361.

(6) Wharton, Ev., §§ 1273, 701; Jones v. Jones, 9 M & W., 75.

(7) Greenshields v. Henderson, 9 M. & W, 75; Sewall v. Evans, 4 Q B, 626; Murietta v. Wolfhagen, 2 C. & K, 744

(8) Wharton, Ev, § 1273; see Nelson v Whittal, 1 B. & A, 21.

(9) Wharton, Ev, § 739 A; Taylor, Ev, §§ 1857, 1858; there must be some kind of identification of the signer; Jones v. Jones, 9 M. & W., 75; see cases, supra, and Smith v. Henderson, 9 M. & W., 801; Russell v. Smyth, 9 M & W., 818.

(10) Whitelocke v. Musgrove, 1 C. & M., 511.

(11) Wharton, Ev., § 1273; see Sewell v. Evans, 4 Q B, 626; Murietta v. Wolfhagen, 2 C. & K., 744.

to be of sound mind. Sanity is presumed. This is but an application of the rule that the ordinary mental condition is presumed to exist. Hence it follows that if a state of insanity is shown, the presumption of sanity is not only removed but there arises, in the case at any rate of insanity of a permanent type, a presumption that insanity continues.(1) Thus an adjudication under the Lunatics Act raises a presumption of the continuance of insanity till sanity is proved.(2)

ntention: nowledge

A sane man, it has been said, is conclusively presumed to contemplate the natural and probable consequences of his own acts.(3) It must, however, be remembered that probable consequences may result from acts as to which the limitations are observed the rule is less open to the criticism which it has received.(4) Though it must be presumed that when a man voluntarily does an act, knowing at the time that in the natural course of events a certain result will follow, he intends to bring about that result; there is no presumption that a person intends what is merely a possible result of his action, or a result which, though reasonably certain, is not known by him to be so.(5) Where a woman of twenty years of age was found to have administered datura to three members of her family, it was held that she must be presumed to have known that the administration of datura was likely to cause death, though she might not have administered it with that intention.(6) In a case in the Madras High Court it was said that a man must in law be held to intend the natural and ordinary consequences of his acts, irrespective of his object at the time of doing such acts, if at such time he knows what the natural and ordinary consequences would be.(7)

The presumption that a party intends the natural consequences of his acts extends to civil as well as criminal responsibilities.(8) So one who knowingly utters a forged bill is presumed to intend to defraud(9), and one who wilfully sets fire to the property of another is presumed to intend to injure the owner.(10) It has been held that if a debtor, knowing himself to be insolvent, executes a bill of sale and an assignment of his book-accounts to one of his creditors, the presumption is that this was done with the intention of giving a preference to such creditor.(11) It has, however, been held in the case cited that fraudulent preference depends on the state of mind and that it would be necessary to prove that the debtor's intention was fraudulent.(12) A married man is proven to have entered a house of prostitution in the evening and to have remained all night. The presumption is that he committed adultery while

(1) Taylor, Ev., §§ 197, 370, Wharton, Ev., §§ 1252—1254; Burr. Jones, Ev, § 55, and cases there cited.

(2) Seshamma v. Padmanabha Rao, 40 M, 660 (1917).

(3) Greenleaf, Ev., § 18, criticised in Wharton, Ev., § 1258 See Lawson, Pres Ev, Rule 96—"A person is presumed to intend the natural and legal consequences of his acts" Taylor, Ev, §§ 80—83, and see R. v. Ram Newaz, 35 A., 506 (1913). R v. Hanuman, 35 A., 560 (1913); R. v. Subbayya Chunnappa, 15 Bom. L. R, 303 (1912); R. v Kanhai, 35 A., 329 (1913).

(4) Burr Jones, Ev, § 23; Wharton, Ev., 1258.

(5) R. v. Lakshman, 26 B., 588 (1902).

(6) R v. Tulsha, 20 A. 143 (1897). R. v. Gulali (1909), 31 A., 148

(7) Sellamuthu Servagaran v Pallamuthu Karuppan, 35 M., 1186 (1912)

(8) See Taylor, Ev, § 83; and cases there cited criticised in Wharton, Ev., § 1262

(9) R. v. Sheppard, R & R, Cr. 9; R v R. v. Hill, 2 Moody, Cr. C., 30, R v Nash, 2 Den. C. C., 498

(10) R v. Farrington, R & R, Cr. C. 207.

(11) Ecker v. McAllister, 45 Ind., 290 (Amer.), see English cases cited in Taylor, Ev, § 83.

(12) Nripendra Nath Sahu v. Ashutosh Ghose, 43 C., 640 (1916); Sharp v. Jackson, A. C., 419 (1899).

there (1) A baker is charged with delivering adulterated bread for the use of a public asylum It is proved that A delivered the bread. The presumption is that he intended it to be eaten (2) He who publishes a libel is presumed to do so intentionally, though the presumption may be rebutted by proof of coercion or fraud on the part of the plaintiff (3) And where an act is criminal per se the general rule is to presume a criminal intent from the commission of the act. So if A is proved to have been stabbed by a deadly weapon by B from which wound he instantly died: B is presumed to have intended to kill A.(4) And if a man forges a document, the intent to defraud is presumed.(5)

It is safer, however, and more accurate to remand all presumptions of malice and intent (as has indeed been done by this Act) to their proper place among presumptions of fact; the office of the Court in all such cases being one of induction and not deduction. The reasoning should be not:—"All acts of a certain class have a specific intent, and this act being of that class, consequently has such intent," but "the circumstances of the case make it probable that the act was done intentionally or maliciously." The process is one of inference from fact, not of pre-determination by law. And the same rule as to intention should be applied to civil as to criminal issues (6)

Acc[illegible] erson is resu[illegible] consequence [illegible] based upon the fact that there could be no successful administration of justice if the rule were not to prevail. If prisoners accused of crime could successfully plead [illegible] ield for crime [illegible] raised or so [illegible] party to urge his ignorance of the law as a defence to a criminal charge also forbid that he should plead his ignorance of the law as an excuse for the failure to comply with contractual obligations or as a defence in actions of tort. So where the drawer of a bill of exchange, knowing that time had been given by the holder to the acceptor, but not knowing that this discharged him and thinking himself still liable, promised to pay it if the acceptor did not, he was held bound by this promise, though made under a mistake of law.(9) But the maxim is limited

(1) Evans v. Evans, 41 Cal, 103 Astley v. Astley, 1 Hagg Ecc, 720 (Amer.).

(2) R. v Dixon, 3 M. & S., 12

(3) See Pontifex v Bignold, 3 M & Gr., 63 Taylor, Ev., § 83 So also in suits for damages for malicious prosecution malice may be inferred from the absence of reasonable and probable cause. Bishonath Rukhit v. Ram Dhone, 11 W R., 42 (1869); Goday Narain v. Sri Ankitam, 6 Mad H C R, 85 (1871); Gunga Pershad v. Ramphul Sahoo, 20 W. R, 177 (1873).

(4) Lawson, Pres Ev, 469, Rule 97, to which that learned author appends the sub-rule: "But when a specific intent is required to make an act an offence, the doing of the act does not raise a presumption that it was done with the specific intent." See Taylor, Ev., § 80; Best, Ev, § 433; Starkie, Ev, 757.

(5) R. v Porteous (1907); C. C. C. Sess Pa, V. 147, p. 450

(6) Wharton, Ev, §§ 1258, 1261, 1262; Wharton, Cr. Ev, § 738

(7) Wharton, Ev, § 1240 [the rule is rather an axiom of law than a presumption] Lawson, Pres Ev, 5; Taylor, Ev, § 80 But there is no presumption of knowledge of foreign laws; Lawson, Ev., 14; Wharton, Ev, § 1240; see Pollock on Contract, 474; Best, Ev., § 336 As to exceptional cases, see R. v. Fisher, 14 M, 342, 352 (1891).

(8) Burr Jones, Ev, § 20, Wharton, Ev, § 1240, Pascal argued that society would be destroyed, if such an excuse were held good (4th Prov Letter).

(9) Stevens v. Lynch, 12 East, 38 See Goodman v Sayres, 2 J. & W, 263; Brisbane v. Dacres, 5 Taunt, 143; East India Co. v. Tritton, 3 B. & C., 280; Stockley v. Stockley, V. & B, 23, nor can a mistake as to the legal effect of a document be set up as a defence: Powell v Smith, L. R., 14 Eq, 85. Parties are presumed to know the legal effect of their contracts Burr. Jones, Ev., 22, and cases there cited to the determination of the civil or criminal liability of the person whose knowledge is in question, and cannot be legitimately made use of in a case where the parties are entirely different and distinct from him.(1) Persons engaged in a particular trade are presumed to be acquainted with the general customs obtaining and followed there. (2) ... to charge interest on accounts a... presumed to be cognisant of this ... man is, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, presumed to know the contents of any deed which he executes and to be bound by it. (4) So in the case of a will on proof of the signature of the deceased, he will be presumed to have known and approved of the contents and effect of the instrument he has signed (5) But mere attestation of a document does not imply knowledge of its contents Therefore it cannot be taken as importing concurrence with the transaction attested (6) But in a case in the Madras High Court it was held that attestation with knowledge of a recital in the document may estop from denying its purport; and it was said that, having regard to the ordinary course of business among Indians in the Madras Presidency, attestation by a person with claims on the property affected must be taken as primâ facie a representation affirming the title set out in the document (7) The burden of proof is on the party to show a material fact of which he is best cognisant.(8) A person is presumed to know what he does in the sense that a person who is capax negotii, will not be permitted to set up ignorance of facts as ground of exculpation or defence; the law treating him in the absence of fraud or coercion as if he were cognisant of what he did (9) It is on this principle that (as observed) a person dealing in a particular market, is taken to be acquainted with its customs, and a person executing a document is assumed to know its contents.

According to the English Equity doctrine(10) "Debitor non præsumitur donare" if a testator who is already in debt to another, leaves to that creditor by his will a legacy sufficient to cover the amount of the debt or to exceed it, without in any way mentioning the debt or providing for its payment, such bequest is held to be in satisfaction of the debt, and the creditor cannot have both the debt and the legacy. This presumption has sometimes been applied by the Courts, in India In a case where a Mahommedan husband who had executed in favour of his wife a deed of dower for five lakhs of rupees, and had begun in his lifetime, but had not completed, a transfer of a sum of four and a half lakhs of sicca rupees, which was alleged to be an equivalent, and was ... is will, it was held that this sum was to be ... and was not a gift to the wife of that sum (11) ... however, does not follow the English Equity doctrine. There is a presumption that a person intends to keep alive a security when it is for his benefit to do so.(13)

(1) East Indian Railway Co v Kali Dass, 26 C, 465, 489, 490 (1898); 2 C W. N, 609.

(2) Sutton v Thatham, 10 A. & E, 7; Bayliffe v. Butterworth, and numerous cases cited in Wharton, Ev, § 1243

(3) Mc Illister v. Reab, 4 Wend., 483, 8 ib, 109 (Amer.); cited in Lawson, Ev, 16

(4) Taylor, Ev, § 150 (see Lawson, Pres. Ev., 18 and s 111, ante).

(5) Ib, § 160.

(6) Lakhpati v. Rambodh Singh, 37 A, 350 (1915) and see Banga Chandra Dhur Biswas v. Jagat Kishore Acharjya, P. C, 44 C, 186 (1917); Deno Nath Das v. Kotiswar Bhattacharya, 21 I. C., 367 (1913); Raj Lukhee Debia v Gokool Chunder, 13 Moo I A, 209

(7) Kandasami Pillai v. Nagalinga Pillai, 36 M, 564 (1913), per Sadasiva Ayyar, J.

(8) S 106, ante, Lawson Pres Ev. 20

(9) Wharton, Ev, § 1243

(10) See Leading Cases in Equity, Ex Parte Pye.

(11) Iftikarunnissa Begum v Amjad Ali, 7 B L. R, 643 (P. C.) (1871) Field's Evidence Act, 6th Ed

(12) See Succession Act (X of 1865), ss. 164, 165, 166.

(13) Ali Mahomed v. Sheikh Mahaser, 36 C. L. J, 186 (1923).

Generally speaking it is often said that a man is presumed to know the truth in regard to facts within his own special means of knowledge. More definitely the rule has been thus stated; what a person is bound to know has regard to his particular means of knowledge and to the nature of the representation, and is then subject to the test of the knowledge which a man paying that attention which every man owes to his neighbour in making a representation would have acquired in the particular case by the use of such means.(1)

The ordinary rule is that a man having a right to act in either of two ways shall be assumed to have acted according to his interest. In the familiar instance of a tenant for life paying off a charge upon the inheritance, he is assumed, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, to have intended to keep the charge alive.(2)

The presumptions which arise when evidence is withheld, where there is spoliation, and where there is a refusal to answer questions, have been dealt with in the notes to Illustrations (g) and (h), ante. Many presumptions arise from conduct, and are of frequent application in both civil and criminal cases, such as the presumption which arises when a party accused of crime flies from trial.(3) The presumption of innocence being of a very important and extensive character has been dealt with under a separate heading (v. ante, pp 793-797) Love of life may be assumed when necessary to determine the burden of proof. So, if the evidence is in equilibrium on an issue of suicide, it will be inferred that suicide is not established (4) Good faith in a contracting party will be presumed, except in those cases which come within the purview of section 111 ante A conspicuous instance of this presumption exists in the rule that when an instrument is susceptible of two conflicting probable constructions, the Court will adopt that construction which is most consistent with good faith and will hold that such construction was intended by the parties.(5) A contract will be presumed to have been made in view of a law under which it is valid (6) It has been sometimes said that when a document is shown to be genuine, the law presumes that it is true. But truth and genuineness are not convertible or equivalent, though genuineness or spuriousness afford inferences of truth or falsehood.(7)

The presumption as to regularity is embodied in the familiar maxim—Omnia præsumuntur rite et solemniter esse acta (8) This maxim " is an expression, in a short form, of a reasonable probability and of the propriety in point

(1) Bigelow on Estoppel, p 611, citing Jarre v. Kennedy, 6 C. B, 319, 322, Doyle v Hartt, 4 L R, Ir., Ex D, 661, 670: and dealing with the subject of representations made by a person under circumstances in which, from his peculiar relation to the facts, he was bound to know the true state of things

(2) Gokaldas Gopaldas v. Puranmal Premsukhdas, 10 C, 1035, 1046 (1884) See also Ali Mahomed v. Sheikh Maharaj, 36 C L J, 186 (1923)

(3) Wharton, Ev., § 1269, v. ante, "Innocence" And as to inference of misappropriation, see Sona v Emp, 2 R., 476 (1924)

(4) Ib, § 1247.

(5) See Taylor, Ev, §§ 143—150A, ante, notes to Ill (e), and Best, Ev, §§ 353—365, where the acts or things presumed are divided into three classes; (1) when prior acts are inferred from the existence of posterior acts; as when a prescriptive right or grant is inferred from modern enjoyment, (2) when posterior acts are inferred from prior acts, as when the sealing and delivery of a deed are inferred on proof of signing only, (3) when intermediate proceedings are presumed as when a jury is directed to presume mesne assignments. The subject will also be found discussed by the same author in his Treatise on Presumptions of law and fact, 74—86. The maxim may also be considered with reference to (1) official appointments [see post], (2) official acts [see Ill. (e)]; (3) judicial acts (v. ib); (4) extra-judicial acts [see Ill. (f) and post]; Best, Ev, § 355.

(6) Atkyns v. Hode, 1 Burr, 106; Lewis v Davison, 4 M & W., 654; Haigh v. Brooks, 10 A & E, 309; Richards v Black, 6 C B, 441; Ireland v Livingstone, L R, E. & I. Ap, 395; Muir v. Glasgow Bank, 4 L R, H. L., 337.

(7) Wharton, Ev, § 1250.

(8) Ib., § 1251

of law of acting on such probability. The maxim expresses an inference which may reasonably be drawn when an intention to do some formal act is established, when the evidence is consistent with that intention having been carried into effect in a proper way, but when the actual observance of all due formalities can only be inferred as a matter of probability. The maxim is not wanted where such observance is proved, nor has it any place where such observance is disproved. The maxim only comes into operation where there is no proof one way or the other; but where it is more probable that what was intended to be done was done as it ought to have been done to render it valid, rather than that it was done in some other manner which would defeat the intention proved to exist and would render what is proved to have been done of no effect."(1) Thus it will be presumed that a guardian ad litem has been validly appointed if there is no evidence to the contrary.(2) The maxim has been applied by this section in Illustration (e) to one class of acts, namely, judicial (3) and official (4) acts which may be presumed to have been regularly performed.(5)

Regularity

Valuable property-rights often depend upon the presumption that judicial proceedings have been regularly and properly conducted, more especially when the lapse of time has rendered it practically impossible to furnish extraneous evidence that the requirements of the law have been in all respects complied with. So unless the want of jurisdiction is distinctly shown it will be presumed to have existed both as to parties and subject-matter.(6) So in the undermentioned case it was held that having regard to the due performance of official acts it ought to be presumed in the absence of any evidence to the contrary, that the istahar in question which was directed by the Commissioner to the collector was duly published.(7) It will also be presumed that the procedure was regular. So if the papers are lost or destroyed, it will be presumed that proper service was made. But no presumption will be allowed to contradict the express statements of the record; thus if the return or proof of service shows service at a particular place or upon a person not defendant, and there is no averment of other service, there is no room for presumption that service was also made at another and different place or t also.(8) And if the record shows certain st are insufficient to sustain the judgment, no if it appears that service was made in a p service can be presumed, since this would

(1) Harris v Knight, L R, 15 P. D, 179, 180, per Lindley, L J.

(2) Munshi Munnu Lal v. Ghulam Abbas (1910), 37 I A, 77, following Musst Bibi Walian v Banke Behari Pershad Singh (1903), 30 I. A., 182.

(3) See Best, Ev., §§ 360, 361, Taylor, Ev, § 143, et seq

(4) See Best, Ev, § 359; Taylor, Ev, § 143, et seq.

(5) v. ante, notes to Ill (e), and cases there cited; Steph Dig, Art. 101; Broom's Legal Maxims; Co Litt., 6*b*, 332; Burr Jones, Ev, §§ 25—41 and the following recent cases· Girdhar v. Emp, 27 C. W. N., 1042 (1923); s c, 24 Cr. L. J., 584, Kallu v Emp, 23 Cr. L J., 449 (1921); Giridhar Sarkar v. Harish Chandra, 37 C. L. J., 331; Mahomed Suleiman v Birendra Chandra 50 C, 243 (1923).

(6) v. ante, notes to Ill. (e), where the distinction given in Peacock v Bell, 1 Saund, 73, between presumptions as to jurisdiction in the case of superior and inferior Courts is cited. The rule however that no presumptions are indulged in favour of the proceedings of inferior Courts applies only to the question of jurisdiction Such Courts, like others, are presumed to have acted correctly as to matters within their jurisdiction. McGrews v. McGrews, 1 Stew & P. (Ala) 30 (Amer); Lawson, Pres Ev., 34—44; Best, Ev, § 861; Lawson, Pres Ev, 27—34.

(7) Prosunno Kumar v. Secretary of State, 3 C. W. N, 695 (1899).

(8) Galpin v Page, 18 Wall, 350, 364 (Amer.); Lawson, Pres Ev, Rule 12, p 46, "a presumption cannot contradict facts averred or proved"

(9) Burr Jones, Ev., § 27.

jurisdiction, but to the regula- jurisdiction. When the juris- act is presumed to have been rightly done until the contrary appears. This applies not only to the final decree but to every judgment or order rendered in the various stages of the proceeding So it will be presumed that oaths were administered to witnesses(1) that the evidence was sufficient to support the judgment; that improper evidence was not admitted, unless the record shows otherwise; that if admitted, it was disregarded, that every fact susceptible of proof was proved; that the charge of the Court was correct, unless the record shows to the contrary; that the dence for making the same. (2) So if an attachment is alleged to be without authority on the ground that no copy of the decree was transmitted, the maxim omnia rite will prevail unless it be affirmatively shown that the copy was not transmitted.(3) The reasons on account of which the Courts indulge such presumptions are thus stated in an American case(4): "we are not to expect too much from the records of judicial proceedings. They are memorials of the judgments and decrees of the Judges and contain general, but not particular, detail of all that occur before them. Much must be left to intendment and presumption, for it is often less difficult to do things correctly than to describe them correctly." When the extant parts of an incomplete writing exhibit to presume that ree from error (5) hased the equity of redemption in contravention of the provisions of section 99 of the Transfer of Property Act it should not be presumed that the Court granted leave to bid (6)

ial acts not only embraces judicial the presumption in this case has the principle is the same, namely, en substantially regular, it is pre- formed Thus it will be presumed been rightly appointed(8); that by the proper officer; that every until the contrary is proved.(9)

(1) Emperor v. Sayced Ahmed, 35 A., 575 (1913).

(2) Ib, § 29; Lawson. Pres Ev, 34—44, and numerous American authorities in these text-books cited, the presumption of regularity extends to the proceedings of arbitrators; ib, 34; Best, Ev., § 360; Russell, Arbitr, 11th Ed, 207, 218; Taylor, Ev, § 86.

(3) Saroda Prosaud v. Luchmeeput Sing, 10 B. L R., 214 (1872), P. C, at p 230.

(4) Beale v. Com, 25 Pa St, 11 (Amer.).

(5) Mahomed Abdul v. Gujraj Sahai, 20 I. A, p. 75 (1893)

(6) Uttam Chandra Daw v. Raj Krishna Dalal, 24 C. W. N, 229; s. c., 31 C. L. J, 98.

(7) Ill (e), s 114

(8) Ram Chandra Das v. Farzand Ali Khan (1912), 34 A., 253.

(9) Per Story, J, in Bank of United States v. Dandridge, 12 Wharton 64, 69 (Amer) The presumption is that one who is proved to have acted in an official capacity possessed the necessary and proper authority; Lawson, Pres. Ev, 47. Due appointment may be presumed from the fact of acting in an official capacity v. ante, s 79, 91. Exception (1); Marshall v. Lamb, 5 Q B, 115; R. v. Verelst, 3 Camp.,

The Court may that a Notary's and attested a of regularity is extended to the acts of the officers of Municipal Corporations.(2) Gradually the presumption that officials obey the mandates of the law and perform their duties has been extended to include to some extent the acts of private persons as well in the transaction of affairs of business. Men are presumed to have acted legally and properly rather than otherwise: and it is reasonable to assume that the usual and customary modes of business have been adopted in given cases, until some departure from the regular mode has been shown. But it is evident from the very statement of the considerations which have influenced the Courts to adopt presumptions of this class that such that they must be received with caution; nfinite variety of cases, sometimes being thers to very little; generally their chief importance is to determine the burden or order of proof.(3) Presumptions of character are frequently raised in respect of negotiable paper.(4) Payment of a note will be presumed from its possession by the maker(5); and consideration will be presumed.(6) Documents regular on their face are presumed to have been properly executed and to have undergone all formalities essential to their validity.(7) A document it bears date, and if more are presumed to have been for which they were executed (8) Every document called for and not produced

---

432, Bunbury v Mathews, 1 C & K, 380, Plumer v Brisco, 19 Q B, 46; Berryman v. Wise, 4 T. R, 366, Cannell v Curtis, 2 Bing N C, 228 See cases cited in Best, Ev, §§ 356—360, Taylor, Ev, § 171. The presumption is not restricted to appointments of a strictly public nature, Butler v Ford, 1 Cr & M, 662; Best, Ev, § 357 The presumption is that public officers do as the law and their duty require them, Lawson, Pres Ev, 53, Van Omeron v Dowick, 2 Camp, 44; Taylor v Cook, 8 Price, 653; Bruce v. Nicolupulo, 11 Ex, 129.

(1) In the goods of Mylne, 9 C W. N., 986 (1905), at p. 988.

(2) Municipality of Sholapur v Sholapur Spinning Co, 20 B., 732 (1895)

(3) Burr Jones, Ev., § 42, v ante, notes to Ill (f), Taylor, Ev, §§ 148—150A, 176—182, and cases there cited; Best, Ev, §§ 400—404 (presumptions from the ordinary conduct of mankind, the habits of society and the usages of trade); Lawson, Pres Ev, 67—92 The presumption stated in § 177 of Taylor, Ev, of an indefinite hiring being a hiring for a year certain does not apply in India; nor is the mere payment of wages monthly sufficient to raise the presumption that a hiring is a monthly hiring Hughes v. Secretary of State, 7 B. L. R, 689.

(4) See Ill (c), s 114; Act XXVI of 1881 (Negotiable Instruments, as amended by Acts V of 1914 and VIII of 1919), ss. 118-122 ante, and notes to Ill. (c), ante. This Illustration is an application of the maxim under consideration, Taylor, Ev, § 148. So also Ill (i) is a presumption of regularity, see Taylor, Ev, § 178.

(5) See Ill (i), s. 114, ante

(6) See Ill (c), s 114, ante, and notes to that Illustration

(7) v ante, p 689; Lawson, Pres Ev., 82; Ball v. Taylor, 1 C. & P., 417, Re British, etc, Assurance Co, 1 DeG J. & S, 488; Crisp v Anderson, 1 Stark, 35; Closmadene v. Carrel, 18 C. B, 36; Pooley v Goodwin, 4 A & E, 94; Hart v Hart, 1 Hare, 1; Bradlaugh v. DeRen, L. R, 3 C P, 286, Marine Investment Co v. Haviside, L. R, 5 H L Cas, 624; Griffin v. Mason, 3 Camp, 7; Re Sandilands, L R, 6 C. P, 411; Hall v Bainbridge, 12 Q. B, 699; Burling v. Platerson, 9 C. & P, 570 In Appathura v Gopala Panikar, 25 M., 674 (1901); the Court appears to have been of opinion that the law as to presumption which may be made in the case of documentary evidence is laid down in the sections which deal with documentary evidence, and it held that this section had no application to a case of the sort then before it, in which it was argued that this section enabled the Court to presume the genuineness of the original of a document of which secondary evidence had been given after notice to produce, is presumed to have been attested, stamped, and executed in the manner prescribed by law.(1) The rule is the same where secondary evidence is given of a lost instrument (2) Where a deed is duly signed, attested and witnessed, there arises a presumption of sealing and delivery.(3) If a will purports to have been duly signed, attested and witnessed on proof of execution the Court will presume, in the case of the death of the witnesses or in case they do not remember the facts connected with its execution, that the law was complied with.(4) Other presumptions arise as to the mailing and receipt of letters.(5) "The presumption is based on the proposition that the post office is a public agency charged with duty of transmitting letters; and on the assumption that what ordinarily results from the transmission of a letter through the post office probably resulted in the given case. It is pro-

(8) Steph. Dig, Art. 85; Atkyns v. Horde, 1 Burr, 106; Taylor, Ev, § 169; Best, Ev, § 402; Lawson, Ev., 89 As to letters, see Anderson v. Weston, 6 Bing. N. C., 296; when there is danger of collusion as in divorce, see Houlston

that the officers

sumption arises town to which orting to be an answer to one which has been duly mailed to a person at his place of residence this fact creates a presumption that the answer is genuine.(7) On proper preliminary proof, similar presumptions may arise as to the sending and delivery of a telegram.(8) In the case of communication by telephone, the American Courts, widening the scope of the rules of evidence with the expansion of business by the aid of new inventions, have in several instances received as evidence the statements made at the telephone or to telephone-operators and intended to be communicated to another party. In such case the operator may 30 years old, see section 90, ante, which is one of the applications of the maxim to extra-judicial acts (10) Illustration (e) to section 114 is an example of the presumption of regularity applied to public business by public officers. Illustration (f) declares that the Court may presume from the general regularity and v Smyth, 2 C & P, 24; or insolvency proceedings, see Hoare v Coryton, 4 Taunt, 560, Wright v Lainson, 2 M & W, 739, Sinclair v Baggally, 4 M & W, 312; Taylor v Kinloch, 1 Stark, 175.

(1) S. 89, ante, Steph Dig, Art 86.

(2) Marine Investment Co v. Haviside, 5 L R., H. L Cas, 624

(3) Steph. Dig, Art 87; Ball v Taylor, I C. & P., 417; Grellir v. Neale, 1 Peake, 199; Talbut v. Hodson, 7 Taun, 251; Vermicombe v. Butler, 3 S. & T, 580; Re Huckvale, L R., 1 P. & D., 375; Adam v Kur, 1 B. & P, 360, Andrews v. Motley, 12 C B. N S, 526

(4) Burgoyne v. Shouler, 1 Rob Ecc, 5 [referred to in Jogendra Nath v. Nitai Churn, 7 C W N, 384, 386 (1903), in which the Court presumed that the attesting witnesses to a document signed after the execution of the document, ref. to in Arjun Chandra Bhadra v. Kailas Chandra Das, 36 C. L. J, 373 (1922)]; Brenchley v Still, 2 Roberts, 162; Thomson v. Hall, ib, 426; Reeves v. Lindsay, L. R., 3 Eq, 509. But see Croft v Croft, 4 S & T, 10. See generally as to presumptions in case of wills, Taylor, Ev, §§ 100—168.

(5) v. ante, pp 212—214, and cases there cited, Best, Ev., § 403.

(6) Henderson v. Carbondale Coal Co, 140 U S, 25, 27 (Amer), per Brewer, J.

(7) Walter v Haynes, R. & M., 149.

(8) v. ante, pp 575, 576 and cases there cited; see also Gray on communication by telegraph

(9) Burr. Jones, Ev., § 210, citing with American cases the following articles: 24 Weekly Law Bul, 245, "Are telephonic communications admissible as evidence;" C Leg News, 24 "Conversations by Telephone;" 2 Un. Law Rev, 31, "Presence by Telephone"

(10) As to alterations in documents, ancient or otherwise, see s. 106, ante · other instances of the application of the maxim to extra-judicial acts are the presumptions as to the sealing, signing and delivery of documents in favour of formality in the case of fair wills, due stamping priority of execution of deeds and the like, Best, Ev, §§ 362—365.

uniformity of men's dealings that the common course of business has been followed in particular cases (1) "Where," it was once said by an English Judge, "the maxim of omnia rite acta præsumuntur applies then indeed if the event ought probably to have taken place on Tuesday, evidence that it did take place on Tuesday or Wednesday is strong evidence that it took place on Tuesday."(2) The presumption is that any act done was done of right and not of wrong.(3) The performance, however, of a mere moral duty is not presumed.(4)

An important application of the maxim is to be found in the support given to possession and user, especially where there has been long and peaceable enjoyment.(5) So the presumption of right in a party who is in possession of property gives rise to the rule that possession is primâ facie evidence of title (6) And so, where the facts show the long continued exercise of a right, the Court is bound to presume a legal origin, if such be possible, in favour of the right, and will not only presume that the right had a legal origin but also many collateral facts, so as to render the title of the possessor complete.(7)

Miscellaneous presumptions: Benami transactions.

Where under Hindu law, a father purchases property in the name of his son, a presumption arises, contrary to the presumption under English law, that it is a benami purchase merely and that the property belongs to the father. In a recent case in the Privy Council it was said that the benami system has a curious resemblance to the English Equity rule that the trust of a legal estate results to the man who pays the purchase-money and that this resembles the rule that when a foeffment is made without consideration the use results to the foeffor; but that the English exception in favour of advancement to a wife or a child has no application to benami transactions.(8) The habit of holding land benami is inveterate in India, and, in such cases the person in whose name the property is purchased alleges that he is solely entitled to the legal and beneficial interest in such property, the burden of proving this will lie upon him (9) But this doctrine does not justify the Courts in making every presumption against apparent ownership (10) A wife, a member of a joint-family is, as regards property held in her name, in the same position as her husband with respect to property acquired in his name and subject to the same presumption in favour of the joint-family (11) The same presumption as stated above

---

(1) v ante, notes to Illustration

(2) Avery v. Bowden, E & B, 973; see Lawson, Pres. Ev, 67; Rist v. Hobson, 1 Singh, & St, 543; Farrar v. Beswick, 1 M & R, 527; Clarke v. Magruder, 2 E & J., 77.

(3) Gibson v Doeg, 2 H. & N., 615

(4) Fitzgerald v. Dressler, 7 C. B. (N. S.), 375.

(5) Best, Ev, §§ 355, 366, et seq

(6) Haidu Khan v. Secretary of State for India in Council (1908), 36 C, p 1, see s. 110, ante, and cases there cited.

(7) Best, Ev., § 366; v. ib., §§ 367—399, which deal with prescriptive and customary rights; the Prescription Act, 2 & 3 Will, 4, Ch 71; the presumptions made from user in the case of incorporeal rights; the presumption of the surrender or extinguishment of incorporeal rights by non-user, easements; licenses; presumptions of fact in support of beneficial enjoyment; the presumption of conveyance by trustees; and of the surrender of terms.

(8) Bilas Kunwar v Desraj Ranjit Singh, P C., 37 A, 557 (1915).

(9) Gopeekrist Gosain v Gungaprasad Gosain, 6 Moo. I A, 53 (1854); Bhagbat Chunder v Huro Gobind, 20 W. R, 269 (1873); Naginbhai v. Abdulla, 6 B, 717 (1882); Field's Evidence Act, 6th Ed, 368

(10) Buzloor Rahim v. Shamsoonissa Begum, 11 Moo I. A, 602 (1867); Sreemanchunder v. Gopaulchunder, 11 Moo I. A, 28 (1866) see also Mahesh Chunder v Barada Debi, 2 B. L. R. (A. C), 275 (1869).

(11) Nobin Chunder v. Dokhobala Dasi, 10 C, 686 (1884); following Chunder Nath v. Kristo Kamal 15 W R., 357 (1879); and distinguishing Chowdrani v Tariny Kanth, 8 C., 545 (1882); s c, 11 C. L. R, 41, where the question considered was whether as between a husband or a purchaser at a sale in execution against the husband and the wife there was any presumption that property standing in the name of the wife was held by her benami for her husband was applied in the case of a person who purchased property in the name of an ... se to be a ... was made ... ner of the ... n the case ... ame of his wife.(4) This presumption that a purchase was an ordinary benami one may however, be rebutted by evidence showing that the father's object was to affect the ordinary rule of succession as from him to the property purchased; and it was also laid down in this case that when bonâ fide creditors seek to render liable property of which their debtor is the ostensible owner, it is the duty of the Court of Justice to put those who object on the ground that he only held benami to strict proof of such objection (5) As regards suits instituted by a benamidar, as long as the benami system is to be recognised in this country, it has been held that, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, it is to be presumed that the benamidar has instituted the suit with the full authority of the beneficial owner, and any decision come to in his presence would be as much binding upon the real owner, as if the suit had been brought by the real owner himself.(6) See further cases cited ante, ss. 101—104, sub voc. "Benami Transactions."

Miscellaneous presumptions

As regards encroachments made by a tenant against his landlord the true presumption is that the lands so encroached upon are added to the tenure and ... ich-own benefit. The principle on which this doctrine is founded is one of general ap... himself (8)

Miscellaneous pre-

Witnesses are presumed to have testified truthfully.(9) Presumptions arise from the withholding,(10) or from the spoliation(11) of evidence. [Illustration ...

correctly made(13); and when a document is produced as a record of evidence there is a presumption of its genuineness and due taking(14) and oaths are presumed to have been administered to witnesses (15)

---

(1) Brojosoondery Debea v. Luchmee Koonwaree, 20 W. R, 95 (1873).

(2) Usher Ali v. Ultaf Fatima, 13 Moo. I. A, 232 (1869); Gopeskrist Gosain v. Gungaprasad Gosain, 6 Moo I A, 53 (1854); Bilas Kunwar v. Desraj Ranjit Singh, P. C, 37 A, 557 (1915); Dhurm Das Pandey v Shama Soondry Debiah, 3 Moo. I A, 239 (1883).

(3) Sayyud Uzhur v. Beebee Ultaf, 13 Moo I A, 232 (1869).

(4) Surnomayee v. Luchmeeput Doogru, 9 W. R, 338 (1868).

(5) Azimut Ali v. Hurdwaree Mull, 13 Moo. I. A, 401; s c, 5 B L R, 578 (1870); see also Nagmbhai v Abdulla, 6 B. 717 (1882); see also ante, ss 101—104, sub. voc. "Benami Transactions" Mata Prasad v Ram Charan Sahu, 36 A, 446 (1914).

(6) Gopi Nath v Bhagawat Pershad, 10 C, 697 (1884).

(7) Gooroodoss v. Issur Chunder, 22 W R, 246 (1874).

(8) Nudarchand Shaha v Meajun, 10 C, 820 (1884).

(9) v ante, "Innocence"

(10) v. ante, Ill (g), and comentary thereon

(11) v ante, Ill. (g), Ibid.

(12) v ante, Ill. (h), Ibid.

(13) Best, Ev, § 348

(14) S. 80, ante, pp 556—561, as to certified copies, see s. 79, ante.

(15) Emperor v. Sayeed Ahmed, 35 A., 575 (1913).

Husband and wife. The presumption of implied authority on the part of the wife to pledge her husband's credit for necessaries may be rebutted by proof of circumstances inconsistent with its existence. Such authority cannot be presumed where the husband has expressly forbidden his wife to pledge his credit.(1)

Interest. The exaction of usurious interest raises a strong presumption of undue influence.(2) And an attempt to conceal the rate of interest indicates an intention to get the better of the borrower.(3)

Land—Presumptions relating to the holding of The hereditary nature of a tenure or taluk may be presumed from evidence of long and uninterrupted enjoyment, and of the descent of the tenure from father to son, notwithstanding the absence of words of inheritance in the instrument by which the tenure was originally created.(4) In another case it was held that successive enjoyment for three generations, without interference, of land granted by a zemindar to a member of his family in lieu of maintenance, justified the presumption that the original grant was intended to be absolute (5) In England proof of the possession of land or of the receipt of rent from the person in possession is primâ facie evidence of a seisin in fee. In India the proof of possession or receipt of rent by a person who pays the land revenue immediately to Government is primâ facie evidence of an estate of inheritance in the case of an ordinary zemindari The evidence is still stronger, if it be proved that the estate has passed, on one or more occasions, from ancestor to heir.(6) In a recent case it was held that the onus was on the Secretary of State for India to show that when a zemindari was confirmed the right to resume or assess the land was reserved(7); and in another it was held that the onus was on him to show that certain resumed land was not part of the assets of the zemindari.(8) As regards lakhiraj lands, as the general presumption is in favour of the liability to assessment of land, the onus probandi lies on a claimant to lakhiraj to establish his title to exemption, not by inference but by positive proof required by the Regulations.(9) Registration by a Collector of land as lakhiraj in 1795 affords

---

(1) Mahomed Sultan Sahib v Robinson (1907), 30 M, 543; following Jolly v. Rees, 15 C B, N S, 628

(2) Abdul Majeed v Khirode Chandra Pal, 42 C 690 (1915) (ten per cent is usurious if the security is ample).

(3) Ib

(4) Gopal Lall v Tiluk Chunder, 10 Moo I A, 191 (1865), s c, 3 W. R, P. C, 1, Dhunput Singh v Gooman Singh, 11 Moo I. A, 433 (1867), (evidence of long uninterrupted enjoyment will supply the want of words of limitation in a pottah). See also on absence of words of "inheritance," and use of word "mokurrari," 5 C, 543 (1879), 9 I. A, 33 (1881); 8 C, 664 (1881); 12 I. A, 205 (1885); Suttosarrun Ghosal v. Moheschunder, 12 Moo. I A, 263, s c, 2 B L R. (P. C), 23; 11 W. R. (P. C), 10, 258 (1868); Kooldeep Narain v. Government, 14 Moo. I. A, 247 (1871); s c, 11 B. L R, 71; Munrunjun Singh v Telanund Singh, 3 W. R., 84 (1865); Nobo Doorga v. Dwarka Nath, 24 W. R, 301 (1875); Karunakar Mahanti v. Niladhro Chowdhry, 5 B. L R, 655 (1870), s c, 14 W. R, 107; Lakhee Koowar v. Hari Krishna, 3 B L. R, 226 (A C.), (1869); s c, 12 W. R, 3 (the words "mokurrari istemrari" create an hereditary right in perpetuity)," Brajanath Kundu v. Lakhi Narain, 7 B L. R, 211 (1871); Ismail Khan v. Aghore Nath, 7 C. W N, 734 (1903); Winterscale v Sarat Chandra, 8 C. W. N., 155 (1903); Ismail Khan v. Mrinmoyi Dasi, 8 C. W. N, 301 (1903). A maurasi title was presumed from continuous payment of rent for more than a hundred years Any presumption arising from long possession is, of course, negatived where the origin of the tenancy is known Ismail Khan v. Brougton, 5 C W. N, 846 (1901) See Upendra Krishna v Ismail Khan, 8 C. W. N, 889 (1904); Nilratan Mandal v. Ismail Khan, 8 C W. N, 895 (1904). See an article on "Presumption as to permanent tenancy in homestead land," 5 C. W. N, cccxxii

(5) Jagannadah Narayana v Pedda Pakir, 4 M., 371 (1881).

(6) Collector of Trichinopoly v. Tekkamani, 14 B. L. R, 139; L R, 1 I A, 283 (1874).

(7) Secretary of State v. Kirtibas Bhupati Harichandas, 42 C, 710 (1915)

(8) Sri Raja Parthasarathy Appa Rao v. Secretary of State, 38 M., 620 (1915) (pre-settlement).

(9) Mahtab Chand v. Bengal Government, 4 Moo. I. A., 497. See as to lakhiraj tenures, ante, ss 100—104. "Lakhiraj." Field's Evidence Act, 6th Ed, 323, 342, 370.

presumption of the lakhiraj having commenced before 1790 (1) In a question of boundary between a lakhiraj tenure and a zemindar's mal land, there is no presumption in favour of one or the other, but the onus is on the plaintiff to prove his case.(2) If a person sets up as against the Government a permanent or perpetual settlement, it is incumbent on him to make out that case. Unsettled and unoccupied waste land, not being the property of any private owner, must be held to belong to the State (3) The Madras High Court has held that where waste land, jungle or forest is in a zemindari, the presumption is that the zemindar is the owner of the kudivaram and malvaram right and that the onus is on the ryots to show that the kudivaram right is vested in them.(4) A purchaser at a sale for arrears of Government revenue " is remitted to all the rights which the original settlor at the date of the perpetual settlement had; and may in consequence of that, sweep away or get rid of all the intermediate tenures and incumbrances created by preceding zemindars since that date. In the assertion of this right the auction-purchaser is, no doubt, in many cases allowed to have the benefit of a certain presumption, and by virtue thereof to throw the burthen of proof on his opponent. That presumption is, however, founded not so much upon the principle just mentioned as upon the principle that every bigha of land is bound to pay and contribute to the public revenue, unless it can be brought within certain known and specified exceptions, and that the right of the zemindar to enhance rent is also presumable, until the contrary is shown. Accordingly in many cases which may be found in the books, a very heavy burden of proof has been placed upon the defendants whose tenures have been questioned by auction-purchasers; and they have had to prove in circumstances of great difficulty that their tenure did really exist at the date of the perpetual settlement, or even twelve years before, in order to escape the consequences of the claim. It is, however, to be observed that the

however, necessary for the purchaser to take some clear step for avoiding or cancelling the tenure; otherwise the presumption will be that the tenure is unaffected.(6) In every case the question what lands are included in the Permanent Settlement of 1793 is a question of fact and not of law.(7) But the question whether a tenancy is by nature at will or permanent is a mixed question of fact and law.(8) Where lands were let out more than sixty years before the suit, for building purposes, the ancestors of the defendants having erected thereon a house more than sixty years before the suit, and having with the defendants resided there from first to last, it was held that the Court was at liberty to presume that the land was granted for building purposes, and that the grant was of a permanent character. (9) A tenancy having been created by kabulyat which did not contain any words of inheritance, nor even the usual

(1) Omesh Chunder v. Dukhina Soondry, W. R., Sp. No., 95 (1863).

(2) Beer Chunder v. Ram Gutty, 8 W. R., 209 (1867).

(3) Prosunno Kumar v. Secretary of State, 3 C. W. N., 695 (1899).

(4) Arunachalla Ambalam v. Orr, 40 M., 722 (1917) For inamdar and kudivaram right see Srimathi Jagannatha v. Kutambarayudu, 39 M., 21 (1916).

(5) Forbes v. Meer Mahomed, 12 B. L. R., 215; 20 W. R., 44

(6) Surnomoyee v. Satteshchunder Roy, 10 Moo. I. A., 123 (1864); Assanoollah v. Obhoy Chunder, 13 Moo. I. A., 317, 318 (1870)

(7) Jagadindra Nath v. Secretary of State, 30 C., 291 (1901), see notes to s. 36

(8) Surendra Nath Roy v. Dwarkanath Chakravarti, 44 C., 119 (1917); Raja Mukund Deb v. Gopi Nath Sahu, 21 C. L. J., 45 (1914).

(9) Gungadhur Shikhdar v. Ajimuddin Shah, S. C., 960 (1882); Referred to in Rakhal Das v. Dinomoyi Debi, 16 C., 652 (1889), Onkarapa v. Subaji Pandurang, 15 B., 72 (1890), Yeshwadabai v. Ramchandra, 18 B., 81 (1893); Nobin Mondul v. Cholim Mullick, 25 C., 897 (1898).

words mourasi-mokurari, and there not being anything in the kabulyat to show that the lease was taken for building or residential purposes, and there having been no recognition of successive transferees of the land by the landlord except by receipt of rent from them, and there being nothing to show that the pucca buildings standing on the land were erected with the knowledge of the landlord, and the land having always been let out in ijara, held that these facts were not sufficient to warrant the inference that the tenancy was, when first created, intended to be permanent or was subsequently by implied agreement converted into a permanent one.(1) In a subsequent case(2) the facts of long possession of a tenancy by the tenants and their ancestors, and of the landlord having permitted them to build a pucca house, which had existed for a very considerable time and which was added to by successive tenants, and of the tenure having been from time to time transferred by succession and purchase in which the landlord acquiesced, or of which he could not have been ignorant, were held sufficient to warrant the Court in presuming that the tenancy was of a permanent nature In a recent case in the Calcutta High Court it was held that while the words istemrari mokurari do not in themselves convey an estate of inherit- [illegible] of words indicative [illegible] cums- [illegible] with sufficient certainty.(3) In this case it was said that a substantial premium for a lease is one of the best indications of a permanent grant while the fact that a lease is in favour of two perso[illegible] restrain- ing the cutting of income-[illegible] the absolute owner of an estate [illegible] gage, there being no intermediat[illegible] ption must be that his intentio[illegible] age, and not to keep it alive(4); but in the case [illegible] and in the absence of evidence to the contrary, [illegible] intended to keep the prior charge alive for his own benefit (5) Where a road has been for many years the boundary between two properties, and there is no evidence that either proprietor gave up the whole of the land, the presumption is that the land belongs to both adjoining proprietors, half to one, half to the other, up to the middle of the road.(6) In India the title of possession must prevail, until a good title is shown to the contrary.(7) A registered purchaser under section 50 of Act VIII of 1871 will have priority over an unregistered one, even though he has obtained possession; but this doctrine will not apply where the subsequent purchaser, who registers, has actual notice of a prior unregistered purchase, possession itself having been under certain circumstances treated as sufficient notice.(8) Where a tenant under a lease holds over after the expiration of the

(1) Ismail Khan v. Joygoon Bibee, 4 C W. N, 210 (1900); see also Ismail Khan v. Broughton, 5 C W. N., 846 (1901)

(2) Caspersz v. Kedar Nath, 5 C. W. N., 858 (1901); and see Nanda Lal Goswami v. Atarmani Dasee (1908), 35 M, 763; and Grant v. Robinson (1906), 11 C W. N., 242

(3) Ram Narain Singh v Chota Nagpur Banking Association, 43 C, 332 (1916); Raghojirao Saheb v. Lakshmanrao Saheb, P. C, 36 B, 639 (1912).

(4) Mohesh Lal v. Mohun Bawan, L. R., 10 A., 62, 71 (1833); s. c., 9 C., 961.

(5) Gokuldas v. Puranmal, 10 C., 1035 (1884); 11 I. A, 126; see also Gopal Chunder v. Herumbo Chunder, 16 C, 523.

(6) Mobaruck Shah v. Toofany, 4 C., 206 (1878).

(7) Haimun Chull v Coomar Gunsheam, P C, App, 84 (1834), Pedda Vencatapa v Aroovala Roodrappa, P. C., App., 112 (1834); Burdacant Roy v. Chunder Koomar, 12 Moo. I. A, 145 (1868); Trilochun Ghose v. Kailas Nath, 3 B L. R, 292 (1869); 12 W. R, 175; Selam Sheikh v Baidonath Ghatak, 3 B L R., (A. C.), 312 (1869); Kalee Chunder v. Adoo Sheikh, 9 W. R, 608 (1868); Wali Ahmad v. Ajudhia Kundu, 13 A, 537 (1891); see also Field's Evidence Act, 6th Ed. 346.

(8) Fuzloodeen Khan v. Fakir Mahomed 5 C., 336 (1879); see 7 C., 550 (1881). and cases there reviewed; and Narain Chunder v. Dataram Roy 8 C., 597 (1882)

lease it is presumed that there is an implied agreement and that he does so on the same terms and conditions as were mentioned in the lease, until the parties come to a fresh settlement (1) Proof of possession for a number of years and of payment of rent during that time to the landlord raises a presumption that such possession was by virtue of a title from the landlord, though there may be no proof of the specific title claimed.(2) Where a ryot shows payment of rent for any particular year, the presumption is that the rent for previous years has been paid and satisfied, unless the contrary is shown by the landlord.(3) There is no presumption in South Canara that a tenancy is either chalgeni or mulgeni. Immemorial possession on a uniform rent will raise a presumption in favour of mulgeni tenure, and the burden will be on the other party to prove that the tenant was holding on chalgeni tenure.(4) The presumption raised by an entry in a record of rights that certain land is brahmottar prevails till it is rebutted.(5) There is no presumption in India that a grant of land includes the minerals under it ; for the word " grant " has not the special and technical meaning assigned to it in English Law (6) The nature of the presumption raised by section 201 of the Agra Tenancy Act, 1901, has been considered (after several conflicting decisions) by a Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court in a case in which it was held that where under that Act a plaintiff is recorded as having a proprietary right, the Revenue Court is bound to presume in his favour and so is not competent to receive evidence on the question of proprietary title.(7) The rebuttable presumption as to tenure under the Bengal Tenancy Act, section 5, clause 5, may be applied to a tenancy created before the date of that Act ; for it merely confirmed a recognized rule (8) In a case in the Privy Council it was held that the presumption under section 44 of the Punjab Land Revenue Act was fatal to a claim to deal as private property with land of showing that the tenure is wanting in the characteristic of fixity of rent is thrown upon the landlord.(10) See further as to presumptions in the case of possession, the Notes to section 110, ante, and see Notes to sections 101—104, " Landlord and Tenant."

Delay in suing to enforce rights raises a presumption unfavourable to the person who makes such delay. If some presumption usually arises against those who slumber on their rights, it is the stronger when applied to rights the subject-matter of which is in a constant state of change, and the proof of which is rendered more than usually difficult by lapse of time.(11) Delay on the part Litigation: Procedure.

(1) Enayutollah v Elaheebuksh, W. R. (1864), Act X, 42; Jumant Ali v. Chutterdharee Sahee, 16 W. R, 185 (1871); Tara Chunder v Ameer Mundul, 22 W. R, 394 (1874); Altab Bibee v Joogul, 25 W. R, 234 (1876), see also Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885); Mati Lal Karnani v. Darjeeling Municipality, 17 C L. J, 167 (1913).

(2) Adhar Chandra Pal v Dibakar Bhuyan, 41 C, 394 (1914)

(3) Sooruth Soondaree v Brodie, 1 W R.,274 (1864); Mirtherjeet Singh v. Choker Narain, 2 W R., 58 (1865); Enayet Hoosein v. Deedar Bux, W. R. (1864), Act X, 97.

(4) Kittu Hegadthi v Channamma Shettaih (1907); 30 M, 1908

(5) Nandlal Pathak v Mohanth Chanurpat Das, 17 C. L J, 462 (1913).

(6) Shashi Bhusan Misra v. Jyoti Prasad Singh Das, P C, 44 C, 585 (1917), Hari Narain Singh Deo v Sriram Chakravarti, P. C, 37 C, 723 (1910), 37 I. A, 136; Durga Prasad v Braja Nath Bose, P. C, 39 C, 696 (1912); 39 I. A., 133

(7) Durga Prasad v. Hazari Singh, F. B (1911), 33 A, 799; following Bechan Singh v Karan Singh (1908); 30 A., 447; and over-ruling, Dhanka v. Umrao Singh, 30 A., 58; Dil Kunwar v Udai Ram, 29 A, 148; Waris Ali Khan v Pursotam Narain (1910); 32 A, 427.

(8) Jagabandhu Saha v. Magnamoyi Dassee 44 C., 555 (1917).

(9) Court of Wards v. Ilahi Baksh, 40 I A, 18 (1912)

(10) Port Canning Co. v. Kalyani Devi, 32 C. L. J, 1; (P. C), 24 C. W. N., 369; 47 C, 280

(11) Sham Chand v. Kishen Prosad, 14 Moo I A., 595, 600 (1872).

of a suitor may under particular circumstances be indicative of a consciousness on his part that what

No presumption can draw his case from t to submit it to private arbitration. Nothing which passes between the parties to a suit in any attempt at arbitration or compromise should be allowed to effect the slightest prejudice to the merits of their case, as it eventually comes to be tried before the Court.(2) The return to a writ of habeas corpus is not necessarily conclusive, and does not preclude enquiry into the truth of the matters alleged therein.(3) A witness sent by the police is presumably under restraint, and a statement made by such witness and so recorded raises suspicion that it was not voluntarily made.(4)

Partnership

In a partnership suit where one party docs, but the other party does not, partners ceased and a final account showing divisions of capital and revenue was made out and some of the partners afterwards carried on the business for ten years without interference from the others, there was a presumption of dissolution of partnership at the date of the final account.(6)

Mortgage.

The presumption, generally speaking, in the absence of any evidence to the contrary, is that a person whose money goes to satisfy a prior mortgage intends to keep alive for his benefit that prior mortgage.(7)

Religion.

A child born in India must under ordinary circumstances be presumed to ... ial status.(8) With consequence of the

the question arises

is to be determined person prior to the class to which such person attached himself after conversion and by which he preferred that his succession should be governed.(9) Where it was found that the Catholic form of worship had been followed for more than sixty years in a certain church, it was held that the onus was on those who wished to establish that the church had originally been Syro-Chaldean.(10)

---

(1) Mussamut Bibee v. Sheikh Hamid, 10 B L R., 45, 54 (1871).

(2) Mohabeer Singh v. Dhujjoo Singh, 20 W. R, 172 (1873)

(3) In the matter of Khatija Bibi, 5 B. L. R, 557 (1870); contra, R. v. Vaughan, 5 B. L R, 48 (1870), the writ does not now issue, the High Court has, however, conferred upon it certain powers of issuing directions in the nature of a writ of habeas corpus; Cr. Pr. Code, s. 491.

(4) R v. Jadab Das, 4 C. W. N, 129, 141, 142 (1899)

(5) Jadabram Dey v Bulloram Dey, 26 C, 281 (1899), ref. Collector of Jaunpur v. Jamna Prasad 44 A, 360 (1922).

(6) Joopoody Sarayya v Lachmanswamy, P. C, 36 M, 185 (1913).

(7) Amar Chandra v. Roy Golok, 4 C. W. N, 769 (1900).

(8) Skinner v Orde, 14 Moo I A., 309 (1871)

(9) Lastings v Gonsalves, 23 B 539 (1899) in which (p 541), it was held that the lower Court had not drawn a correct presumption

(10) Ambalam Pakkiya v. Bartle, 36 M, 418 (1913).

a two-fold estoppel arising by record, that is, from the proceedings of the Courts; first, in the record, considered as a memorial or entry of the judgment; and secondly, in the record considered as a judgment. In the first case mentioned the record has conclusive effect upon all the world. It imports absolute verity, not only against the parties to it and those in privity with them but against strangers also; no one may produce evidence to impeach it. Thus no one, whether party, privy or stranger, is permitted to deny the fact that the proceedings narrated in the record took place, or the time when they purport to have taken place, or that the parties there named as litigants participated in the cause, or that judgment was given as therein stated; unless in a direct proceeding instituted for the purpose of correcting or annulling the record.(1)

T ... importance. The force and e ... of the proceedings in which ... was an action in rem or in ... h it was pronounced, i e. u ... domestic or foreign Court.(3) The record of a judgment in rem is generally conclusive upon all persons. In other cases, so far as the record purports to declare rights and duties, its material recitals import absolute verity between the parties to it and those who claim under them. The estoppel arising from or fixed by the fact enrolled constitutes the estoppel of a judgment. And to the question whether the judgment necessarily creates an estoppel, the general answer is, yes, if it results in res judicata: no, if it does not.(4)

Estoppel must be distinguished from res judicata. Estoppel is part of the Law of Evidence and proceeds upon the Equitable principle of altered situation, while the doctrine of res judicata belongs to procedure and is based on the principle that there must be an end to litigation.(5) The plea of res judicata prohibits the Court from enquiring into a matter already adjudicated; while estoppel prohibits a party from proving anything which contradicts his previous declarations or acts, to the prejudice of a party who, relying upon them, altered his position.(6) Res judicata ousts the jurisdiction of the Court, while estoppel only shuts the mouth of a party.(7)

Estoppel by Deed

The strict technical doctrine of estoppel by deed cannot be said to exist in India (8) Section 115 of this Act is exhaustive, and the Law of Estoppel in this country ... by virtue of that which ... to the fact that the seal ... han to the fact that it was a seal, or that (as is commonly said) its use was a solemn act that is to be traced the origin of the effect of the instrument as matter of evidence. Later, the idea gained force that the seal itself, besides affording

(1) Bigelow, op cit, 6th Ed., 8, 36.
(2) Bigelow op cit, 6th Ed 8 36, 38 v ante, pp 388–392.
(3) v ante, pp. 388—392
(4) v. ib
(5) Woodroffe and Ameer Ali, Civil (Procedure, Second Edition, p 101. See 141, Umally Jairajbhai ... Currimbhoy (5) Jm, 36 B., 2 ... Baishanker v. Mora ... 36 B, 283 ... am v. ... 1886), S. ... lly ... bhai ... E ... 25

(8) See Gokuldas Gopaldas v Puranmal Premsukdas, 10 C., 1035 (1884); Zemindar Serumatu v. Virappa Chetti, 2 Mad. H. C. R., 174 (1864); ["The strict technical doctrine of the English law as to estoppel in the case of solemn deeds under seal rests upon peculiar grounds that have no application to the present bonds or the other written instruments ordinarily in use amongst natives"] Ram Gopal v. Elsquire, 1 B. L R., O C, 37 (1867) Paran Singh v. Lalji Mal, 1 A., 403 (1877); Donzelle v. Kedarnath Chuckerbutty, 7 B. L. R, 720 (1871); Kedarnath Chuckerbutty v. Donzelle, 20 W. R., 362 (1873)
(9) Asmatunnessa Khatum v. Harendra Biswas (1908); 35 C., 904 bring to bear upon their transactions. What is ordinarily known in these provinces as a deed, is an attested agreement prepared without any competent legal advice, and executed and delivered by parties who are unaware of any distinction between deeds and agreements. Under these circumstances, it appears to us that justice, equity, and good conscience required no more than that a par

the prejud
the other instrument; but where the question arises between parties, or the representatives in interests of parties, who at the time of the execution of the instrument were aware of its intention and object, and who have not been induced to alter their position by its execution, we consider that justice in this country will be more surely obtained by allowing any party, whether he be plaintiff or defendant to show the truth. As to the cases in which, in order to prevent fraud it may be shown that an apparent deed of sale is really a mortgage, see ante, s. 92, sub voc 'Evidence of Conduct' and authorities there cited.(1) As to estoppel by pleading v. ante, pp. 482–483.(2)

Estoppel in pais

"Estoppel in pais under the ancient doctrine of the Common Law sprang from (i) livery of seisin; (ii) entry; (iii) acceptance of rent; (iv) partition; (v) acceptance of an estate. Aside from the c mentioned instances mentioned by Coke,— at the present day, and even the charact from what it was in his time. Estoppel by the acceptance of rent as known to Coke occurred where the landlord accepted rent from a tenant who held over after the expiration of a lease by deed. Such an estoppel depended upon the prior existence of a deed; while at the present day it is immaterial how the tenure arose (3) The estoppel by partition was a case of implied warranty. In the case of a partition of lands by writ of partition between co-tenants the law imported a warranty of the common title, and held it to be incompatible with their duty to each other for either to become demandant in a suit to recover any portion of the land by a paramount title and thus to place himself in antagonism to his co-tenants. No tenant after partition could set up an adverse title to the portion of another for the purpose of ousting him from the part which had been partitic there is an estoppel by by decree, upon the qu judicata(5); and in the case of partition by act of parties whether there is ...er

(1) See also Bapuji v. Senaravji, 2 B, 231 (1877); Mahadaji Gopal v. Vithal Ballal, 7 B, 78 (1881)

(2) And see Bhugwandeen Doobey v. Myna Baee, 11 Moo I. A., 487, 497 (1867), Ram Surun v. Musst. Pran, 13 M. I. A, 551, 559 (1870); Kristo Prea v Puddo Lochan, 6 W. R., 288 (1866); Rangasrami v Kristna, 1 Mad. H. C, 72 (1862), Dayal Jairaj v. Khatav Ladha, 12 Bom H C J, 97.

(3) Bigelow, op cit, 6th Ed., 490, see Act IV of 1882 (Transfer of Property), s. 116.

(4) Bigelow, op cit, 6th Ed, 445—447. In the case of partition in pais by conveyance between the parties there appears to be no estoppel apart from recitals, unless there is an express warranty. And the rule itself has been subjected to some qualification · 6th Ed, 446.

(5) As to the conclusiveness of partition-proceedings see Mussamut Oodia v Bhopal, 3 Agra, Rep, 137 (1868). Ghassee Khan v Kulloo, 1 Agra Rep. 152 (1866); Shivram v. Narayan, 5 B, 27 (1880); Laksman Dada v. Ramchandra Dada, 5 B, 48 (1880); Konnerav v. Gurrav, 5 B, 589 (1880): Nilo Ramchandra v Gobind Balla, 10 B 24 (1885), Sadashiv v Baiza, 4 B, 37 (1879); Ananta Bala charya v. Damodhar Makund, 13 B, 25 31 (1888); Krishna Behari v. Brojeswari Chowdhrani, 1 C, 144, 2 I. A, 283 (1875); Rajah of Pitapur v. Sitya Garu, 12 I A, 16 (1884); Venkatadri v Pedda Venkayamma, 10 M, 15 (1888); Sheik Hossein v. Sheik Musund, 18 W. R., 263 (1872); Hari Narayan v. Ganpatrao Dajt, 7 B, 272 (1883); Kirty Chunder v. Anath Nath, 10 C., 97 (1883); and Caspersz, op. cit, 4th Ed, §§ 860—865.

the estoppel may vary according to the nature of the particular transaction in each case (1) Another instance of such an estoppel (which however has not been provided for in the Act) is the estoppel of a person taking possession under an instrument whether a will or deed inter vivos. Where such taking is in accordance with a right which would not have been granted except upon the understanding that the possessor should not dispute the title of him under whom the possession was derived, there is an estoppel. This occurs where several persons take limited interests under the same instrument. In that case a party cannot say that the instrument is valid so as to enable him to take under it, b[illegible] under the s[illegible] which, how[illegible]
by such possession for more than twelve years acquire an interest in the property different from that which he would have taken if the deed or will had been valid and operative.(3) Whether all the cases here referred to under this head ought to be called estoppels is a matter of doubt.

Secondly : The next head, which constitutes an important addition in recent times to the law of estoppel, embraces the class of cases known and described as estoppel by conduct of misrepresentation; the estoppel arising without regard to contract rather, or the fact to be taken as true not being necessarily or ordinarily the subject or the effect of contract. This estoppel is dealt with in section 115, post.

Besides these two classes, the name of estoppel has been extended to a variety of cases which are not estoppels at all; in some of these cases there may perhaps be said to be a quasi-estoppel; in others, the word is merely used as equivalent to "bar," in others, it is an entire misnomer; the free use of the term "estoppel" in such cases giving rise to confusion and misapprehension of the real legal character of the act or declaration which is to be considered.(4)

This Act deals with the subject of estoppel in pais in sections 115—117, but does not in terms preserve the above-mentioned distinction between estoppel by contract and estoppel by conduct. The rules contained in sections 116 and 117 have been described as [illegible] Other cases [illegible] all within [illegible] to what [illegible] and fast [illegible] *Estop-*pels in the sense in which that term is used in English legal ph[illegible]ology are matters of infinite variety, and are by no means confined to the subjects dealt with in this Chapter of the Act.(5)

In the case of the Ganges M[illegible] C. J said:—"It has been further co[illegible] 115 to 117 contained in Chap VIII [illegible]les of estoppel which are now intended to be in force in British India[illegible] those rules are treated by the Act as rules of evidence; and that, by the second section of the Act, all rules of evidence are repealed, except those which the Act contains. But if this argument were well founded, the consequences would indeed be serious. The Courts here would then be debarred from entertaining any

(1) Rup Chand v Sarbeswar Chandra, [illegible]

[illegible] Id. Dalton v. Fitzgerald, 1 Ch D 440; 2 Ch. D. (1897), 86; Board [illegible] L. R., 9 Q B, 48; Durga Das [illegible] Chandra Dey, 44 C., 145

[illegible] Narasimha Appa [illegible] Surenant Gopala Row (1908), 31 M., 321, and Dalton v Fitzgerald (1897), 2 Ch. D, 86.

(4) See Bigelow, op. cit, 6th Ed, 487, 494.

(5) 5 C, 669, 678, 679 (1880)

(6) Ganges Manufacturing Co v Sourujmull, 5 C., 669 (1880); and see Janaki Ammal v. Kamalathammal, 7 Mad. H C. R., 263 (1873)

questions in the nature of estoppel which did not come within the scope of sections 115 to 117, however important those questions might be to the due administration of the law. The fallacy of the argument is in supposing that all rules of estoppel are also rules of evidence. The enactment in section 115 is, no doubt, in one sense, a rule of evidence. It is founded upon the well-known doctrine laid down in Pickard v. Sears(1) and other cases that where a man has made a representation to another of a particular fact or state of circumstances, and has thereby wilfully induced that other to act upon that representation and to alter his own previous position, he is estopped as against that person from proving that the fact or state of circumstances was not true. In such a case the rule of estoppel becomes so far a rule of evidence, that evidence is not admissible to disprove the fact or state of circumstances which was represented to exist. But estoppels in the sense in which the term is used in English legal phraseology are matters of infinite variety, and are by no means confined to the subjects which are dealt with in Chap. VIII of the Evidence Act. A man may be estopped, not only from giving particular evidence, but from doing acts, or relying upon any particular argument or contention, which the rules of equity and good conscience prevent his using as against his opponent. A large number of cases of this kind will be found collected in the notes to Doe v. Oliver(2) and whatever the true meaning of the second section of the Evidence Act may be as regards estoppels which prevent persons from giving evidence, we are clearly of opinion that it does not debar the plaintiffs in this case from availing themselves of their present contention as against the defendants."

So parties will not be allowed to vary their cases on appeal by receding from admissions made in the Court of first instance(3) and may be estopped from appealing by reason of an undertaking that they would not do so.(4) Where a judgment-debtor asked for time and bound himself not to contest the validity of a sale provided he got time, it was held that as he had obtained time and the advantage of a postponement he was estopped from saying that he was not bound by his agreement.(5) And in another case though it was held that there was strictly no estoppel where in an application to execute a decree which provided for no interest the decree-holders put in a prayer as to the award of interest, and the judgment-debtor, accepting his liability to pay this decretal debt as well as interest, obtained from time to time adjournments from the Courts to enable him to pay the amount : it was held that the judgment-debtor could not at a later stage of the proceedings dispute the item of interest, and was bound to pay interest from the date on which he admitted his liability to pay interest.(6) Estoppels may also arise out of the compromise

---

(1) 6 A. & E., 469.

(2) 2 Smith, L. C., 8th Ed., pp. 775 et seq. See Caspersz, op. cit., 4th Ed. (1915), s. 69, pp. 78, 79.

(3) Mohima Chunder v. Ram Kishore, 15 B. L. R., 142; 23 W. R., 174 (1875); Devaji Goyaji v. Gadadhar Godebhai, 2 Bom. H. C. R., 28 (1865); Stracy v. Blake, 1 M. & W., 168; Nidha Chowdhry v. Bunda Lall, 6 W. R., 289 (1886); Doe d. Child v. Roe, 1 E. & B., 279; Motichand v. Dadabhai, 11 Bom. H. C. R., 186 (1874); Hureehur Mookerjee v. Rajkishen Mookerjee, 23 W. R., 251 (1875); Kanailal Khan v. Shoshi Bhoosun, 8 C. L. R., 117 (1881); see Gopal Sahu v. Joyram Tewary, 9 C. L. R., 402 (1851).

(4) Moonshee Ameer v. Maharanee Inderjeet, 14 Moo. I. A., 203; 9 B. L. R., 460 (1871); Anant Das v. Ashburner & Co., 1 A., 67 (1876); Protap Chunder v. Arathoon, 8 C., 455, 10 C. L. R., 443 (1882); Bahir Das v. Nobin Chunder, 29 C., 306 (1901). See also Pisani v. Attorney-General, L. R., 5 P. C., 516; and Rajmohun Gossain v. Gour Mohun, 8 Moo. I. A., 91; 4 W. R., P. C., 47 (1859); where it was said that a decree of an Appellate Court obtained after a compromise and an agreement not to prosecute an appeal was an adjudication obtained with fraud.

(5) Uttam Chandra v. Khetra Nath, 29 C., 577 (1901).

(6) Narayan v. Rasji, 6 Bom. L. R., 417 (1904).

of legal claims pendente lite.(1) Where a Court has in fact no jurisdiction to entertain a suit or application, the consent of the parties thereto cannot give it jurisdiction. Where a person filed a claim in execution-proceedings in the Small Cause Court and thereafter when such claim was disallowed brought a regular suit in which it was held that that Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the claim, it was also held that the plaintiff was not estopped from saying that the Small Cause Court had no jurisdiction to deal with the matter because under wrong advice he originally filed a claim in that Court.(2) In however an earlier case, where a plaintiff put the Subordinate Judge's Court in motion to execute a decree and thus submitted himself to the jurisdiction of that Court, it was held that the plaintiff was by his own act estopped from saying that the same Court had no jurisdiction to retrace its steps by directing a refund of the sum realized under the order for execution, and to replace the parties in the position which they occupied before the irregular execution was had (3) And where in a recent case the cause had been made over to the Joint Subordinate Judge without objection by either party, it was held that they had waived enquiry as to jurisdiction and were bound by this tacit admission of it.(4) The mere fact of a plaintiff in a suit for ejectment in a Civil Court having on a previous occasion applied to the Revenue Court for the ejectment of the defendant would not estop him from asserting that the defendant was unlawfully in possession, that is, as a trespasser (5) In the case cited, pending a suit by the mother of the last Hindu male owner for a declaration of the invalidity of an alleged adoption made to him, the mother died, and on her death an application was made by the present plaintiffs who were remote reversioners to be brought

(1) Woodroffe & Ali's Civ Pr Code, O XXIII, r 3, 2nd Ed, 1073–74; Ruttansey Lalji v Pooribai, 7 B, 304 (1883), Karupan v. Ramasami, 8 M, 482 (1885); Appasami v. Manikam, 9 M, 103, Hara Sundari v. Kumar Dukhinessur, 11 C, 250 (1885); Goculdas Bulabdas Co v. Scott, 16 B, 202 (1891); Kally Nauth v. Rajeeblochun Mozoomdar, 2 Ind. Jur, N. S, 343, 122 (1867), Juggobundhoo Chatterjee v Watson & Co, 2 Bourke, 162 (1865); Scully v. Lord Dundonald, L R, 8 Ch D, 658; Pryer v. Gribble, L. R, 10 Ch D, 534; Holt v Jesse, L R, 3 Ch D, 177; Rajendra Narain v. Bijai Gobind, 2 M I A, 181 (1839), Sri Gajapathi v Sri Gajapathi, 13 Moo I A, 497 (1870); Gholaub Koonwaree v. Eshur Chandey, 8 Moo. I. A, 447; 2 W. R, P. C., 47 (1861); Cherakunneth v. Vengunat, 18 M, 1, 7 (1894); as to waiver, see Dwarkanath Sarma v. Unnoda Soondurree, 5 W. R., Misc., 30 (1866); Shivalingaya v. Nagalingaya, 4 B, 247 (1878); Janki Ammal v. Kamalathammal, 7 Mad. H. C. R, 203 (1873), abandonment; Man Gobind v. Jankee Ram, W. R., 211, 1864; as to agreements contra cursus curiæ, see Sadasiva Pillai v. Ramalinga Pillai, 15 B L. R, 383; Pisani v Attorney-General, L. R., 4 P. C. 516; Sheo Golam v. Beni Prosad, 5 C., 27 (1879), Dinnonath Sen v. Guruchurn Pal, 14 B. L. R., 287 (1874); 21 W. R., 310; Stowell v. Billings, 1 A, 350 (1877); Debi Rai v. Gokul Prasad, 3 A, 585 (1881); Ramlakhan Rai v Bakhtaur Rai, 6 A, 623 (1884); it has been held that a compromise which does not supersede the decree is no bar to the enforcement of the original decree, Darbha Venkamma v Ram Subbarayudu, 1 M., 387 (1878); Ganga v. Murli Dhur, 4 A, 240 (1882); Latafat Husain v. Badshah Husain (P. C), 8 O. C., 143; Malla Reddi v. Asura Natha Reddi, 15 M. L. J, 494 See Caspersz, op cit, 4th Ed (1915), ss 454—459, pp 402—407 where these cases are discussed

(2) Deno Nath v Adhor Chunder, 4 C. W. N, 470 (1900); 3 C. W N, 591

(3) Govind Vanam v. Sakharam Ramchandra, 3 B, 42 (1878); dissenting from Ganesh Daji v Sakharam Ramchandra P. J., 1877, p 227 See also Gyan Chunder v. Durga Churn, 7 C, 318 (1881) in which it was objected that partition proceedings could not be taken in execution of a decree and that the Court was in error in appointing the Amin as commissioner to effect partition, s 396 of the Code referring to "Commissioners" in the plural. Pontifex, J., however, held that the order of the Judge was within the meaning of the section 396 of the Code It may also well be that apart from questions of jurisdiction a person who has acquiesced in proceedings may be estopped from calling them in question.

(4) Barello v Rodrigues (1910); 35 B, 24

(5) Zabeda Bibee v Sheo Charan, 22 A, 38 (1899).

on record as her legal representatives and to continue the suit, which application was dismissed on the objection raised by the present defendant in that suit and that suit was also eventually dismissed by the High Court in Second Appeal under Order 22, Rule 3 of the Civil Procedure Code. The present plaintiffs thereupon brought this fresh suit. Held that the defendant was estopped from contending in the second suit, that the decision in the previous suit was erroneous, that the plaintiff's proper remedy was to continue the first suit, and that the second suit was barred under the Order mentioned inasmuch as the first suit had abated.(1)

Persons will not be permitted to take up inconsistent positions.(2) So in the case first cited, which was a suit upon a mortgage, the defendant contended that the suit was premature and the Court accepted that view. The plaintiff again sued and the defendant pleaded Limitation, but it was held that it was not open to him to raise the defence. Where a plaintiff having obtained a decree against one of two defendants, acquiesced in that decree, but the defendant judgment-debtor appealed, making the other defendant also a party to his appeal, with the result that the plaintiff's suit was dismissed, it was held that it was not open to the plaintiff in second appeal to contend that the Court below should have made a decree against that defendant with regard to whom he had acquiesced in the dismissal of his suit (3)

Nor will a party be permitted to approbate and reprobate in respect of the same matter.(4) Where the property of a judgment-debtor is sold in execution of the decree and the proceeds go in satisfaction of the decree and the judgment-debtor accepts the payment of the decree he cannot impeach a part of the sale (5) Where a person against whom execution is taken out admits his liability he cannot subsequently repudiate it (6) If a person purchases an estate subject to a mortgage whether under a voluntary conveyance or under a sale in invitum and undertakes to discharge it, he cannot be heard to deny the validity of the mortgage subject to which he made his purchase.(7) Where a person allowed execution to proceed for nearly a year without objection, having twice obtained a stay of

(1) Arunachalam Pillai v. Vellaya Pillai 25 M L. T, 360; s c., 52 I. C. 465

(2) Musst Efatoonissa v. Khandkar Khoda, 21 W R., 374 (1874); Brij Bhookun v. Mahadeo Dobey, 17 W. R., 422 (1872); Dabee Misser v Mungur Meha, 2 C I. R., 208 (1878); Sonaollah v. Imamooddeen, 24 W. R., 273 (1875); Sutyobhama Dasse v. Krishna Chunder, 6 C, 55 (1880) Where a defendant allowed without objection a purchaser of a plaintiff's interest in the suit to substitute his name on the record he was estopped from contending that the suit had abated: Bir Chandra v. Bhansi Dhar, 3 B. L R, A C, 214 (1869); Manfal v. Sahib Ram (1905), A. W N, 94; 27 All, 544 (F. B), Kanshi Ram v. Badda (1906), 23 P. L. R; Muhammad Wali Khan v Muhammad Mohi-ud-din, 24 C. W. N, 813

(3) Lohore v. Deo Dans (1907), 30 A, 48; Farzand Ali Khan v. Bismillah Begam (1904), 27 A, 23.

(4) See Kristo Indro v. Huromonee Dassee, L. R, 1 I. A., 84, 88 (1873); Rup Chand v. Sarbeswar Chandra, 10, C W. N 747 (1906); s c, 3 C. L. J., 629 "It is a sound principle of law that as between the same litigants a defendant cannot defeat the claim of the plaintiff by a plea negativing a contention successfully advanced by him in a former suit, if he thereby approbates and reprobates" Varajlal Salot v. Bhaiji Nagardas, 6 Bom L. R, 1103 (1904) See Coventry v. Tulshi Pershad, 31 C, 822 (1904) See Balbir Prasad v. Jugal Kishore, 3 Pat. L. J., 454; s c, 46 I. C. 473; Lala Kanahi Lal v. Lala Brij Lal 22 C. W. N, 914 (P. C.), Shib Chandra Kar v. Dulcken, 28 C. L J, 123; s. c, 48 I. C, 78; Jogendra Nath Banja v. Mohendra Chora, 47 I. C, 978; Basti Begam v Sajjad Mirza, 21 O C, 188; 47 I. C, 558; Gauri Shankar v. Ganga Ram 77 P. R, 1919; s c, 52 I. C, 859 cited sub voc. "Representation" post

(5) Annapurna Bai v. Rama Chandra, 43 I. C., 178

(6) Balbir Prosad v. Jugal Kishore, 3 Pat L. J, 454; 46 I C, 473.

(7) Kalidas Chowdhury v. Prosanna Kumar Das, 47 C, 446; 24 C. W. N, 269; 30 C. L. J., 496

sale on the plea that he would satisfy the decree if time were allowed and having ayment of part of the debt, induced the balance, he was held estopped of execution against him.(1) But lly exist those conditions which are the essentials of an estoppel. So to petition for the postponement of a sale in execution of a decree is not an intentional causing or permitting the decree-holder to believe that the judgment-debtor admits that the decree can be legally executed.(2) And where a son, against whom a suit ought to have been instituted, conducted on behalf of his mother a suit wrongly brought against her, knowing all the time that he and not the mother should have been sued, but there was nothing to show that it was by reason of representation or any conduct of the son that the plaintiff was led to think that the mother was the right person to be sued, it was held that the decree in that suit was not binding on the son, and did not estop him, in a subsequent suit against him, from contesting the validity of that decree.(3) It has been held that the test for determining whether there is an estoppel from a decree based on a compromise is whether the particular matter in doubt was decided by the parties in such compromise and embodied in the decree.(4) If a landlord withdraws the amount deposited by the transferee of a non-transferable holding to set aside its sale under section 310A of the Civil Procedure Code of 1882 without raising any objection he is not thereafter permitted to plead that the transferee did not by his purchase acquire a valid title to the holding.(5)

Parties may by conduct of waiver in the course of a suit preclude themselves from asserting the rights which they have waived.(6) The plaintiff in a suit brought in forma pauperis died, but in ignorance of her death the Court passed a decree in her favour. The defendant appealed, making respondent to his appeal a lady whom he alleged to be the legal representative of the deceased plaintiff. On this appeal an order was passed by consent of parties sending back the suit to be re-tried on the merits as between the defendant and the person nominated by him as plaintiff, and it was so re-tried and a decree was again ... not thereafter open to the

...

the sale of the mortgaged property in execution of the decree ... suit was invalid by reason of the decree nisi not having been made absolute if such objection was not raised at an early stage of the proceedings.(8) In the undermentioned case a judgment-debtor obtained the postponement of an ... any objection on the ... lace on the postponed ... lity or irregularity of ... aking. Held that he

---

... Pershad, 31 C.,
... gul Setani, 10
... 10 I A, 119;
... usst. Oodey v.
... o. I. A., 585
..., 12 Q. B, 925.
... postponement:
... Narain, 3 I A.,
... l in Thakoor
..., 7 C., 613; 9
... omul, 4 C. W. N., 283 (1899).

(4) Raja Kumara Venkata Perumal Raja Bahadur v. Thatha Ramasamy Chetty, 35 M., 75 (1912).

(5) Gadadhar Ghose v. Midnapur Zemindary Co, 27 C. L. J., 385; s. c., 43 I C., 742.

(6) Janaki Ammal v. Kamalathammal, 7 Mad H. C R, 263 (1873).

(7) Akbar Husain v. Alia Bibi, 25 A., 137 (1902).

(8) Gunindra Persad v. Baijnath Singh, 31 C., 370 (1903).

could not be allowed to impeach the sale.(1) There can be no estoppel arising out of legal proceedings when the truth of the matter appears on the face of the proceedings.(2) In the case cited the plaintiff was held estopped by his own proceeding in an arbitration wherein he received his share of the property belonging to his father upon the footing of the exclusion of the mother, from claiming a share therein through his mother.(3) No estoppel can arise from ignorance of law, which both parties must be presumed to know.(4) A person can be precluded by his conduct from objecting to an irregularity in procedure which he himself invites.(5)

Where a judgment-debtor who had appealed for reversal of an ex-parte money decree against him had consented to the attachment of his occupancy holding pending the re-hearing proceeding and subsequently, on the decree being confirmed, objected to the sale on the ground of non-transferability of the holding without the landlord's consent; held that the attachment by consent did not estop the judgment-debtor from objecting to the sale. The primary object of an attachment is that pending the sale the right of the judgment-debtor in the property attached shall be maintained intact for the benefit of any possible purchaser. On the judgment-debtor objecting to the sale on the ground that the holding was not transferable by custom without the landlord's consent, the first Court held that the judgment-debtor was estopped from resisting the objection as he had consented to the attachment and his decision was affirmed on appeal by the District Judge and the sale was held [illegible]

Cause Side of the Munsif's Court the defendant pleaded want of jurisdiction and on his objection the Court returned the plaint for presentation on the ordinary Side. Against the decree of the District Munsif there was an appeal to the Subordinate Judge and against the appellate order of the latter a revision petition was filed in the High Court. The defendant raised the objection in the High Court that the suit was of a Small Cause Court nature and that no appeal lay to the Subordinate Judge. Held that the defendant was estopped from raising the objection (7) Generally as to admissions made in the course of judicial proceedings, see note below. (8)

The law of estoppel in pais by misrepresentation "received in England its distinctive enunciation and form with the leading case of Pickard v. Sears (9), a case which bears much the same relation to this part of the law of estoppel, as

---

(1) Lakshmi Prasanna Mojumdar v. Rajendar Poddar, 47 I C., 831.

(2) Taru Lal v. Sarobar Singh, 4 C W. N, 533 (1899). There is no estoppel when the facts are known, Sarada Prosad Roy v Ananda Moy Dutta, 46 I. C., 228.

(3) Muhammad Wali Khan v Muhammad Mohi ud-din, 24 C. W. N, 321

(4) Gurulingaswami v. Kamalakshamamma, 18 M, 58 (1894)

(5) Timmana v Putobhata, 2 Bom. L. R, 90 (1899)

(6) Bochai Mahton v Isri Jaji, 5 Pat L. W, 185; s c, 47 I C, 29

(7) Ayathur Ali v Jnanaprakasha Odayar, 52 I. C., 825.

(8) Tweedie v. Poorno Churder, 8 W. R., 125 (1867); Cura Ran v Jerana Ran, 2 Mad H. C. R., 31 (1864); Vallabh Bhulee v. Rama 9 Bom H C. R, 65 (1872). See Caspersz, op cit, 4th Ed (1915) Ch. X where the subject is discussed the conclusiveness or otherwise of such admissions being treated as by conduct, referable to the general rule of estoppel which is explained in the notes herein to s. 115, post As to estoppel by pleading see Diromoney Dabea v. Doorga Pershad, 12 B L. R 274, 276 (1873); Luchmun Chunder v Kali Churn, 19 W. R 292, 297 (1873)

(9) 6 A & E., 469 (1837) ["But the rule of law is clear that where one by his words or conduct wilfully causes another to believe the existence of a certain state of things and induces him to act on that belief so as to alter his own previous position, the former is concluded from that of the Duchess of Kingston (1) does to estoppel by record. The doctrine had indeed been foreshadowed and applied in a few of the earlier cases (2); but Pickard v. Sears was the case in which the doctrine of the Court of Chancery was finally adopted." (3) "Prior to the passing of this Act in 1872, the doctrine of estoppel by representation was enunciated in various forms by the Indian Courts, and generally in a manner hostile to its technicality." (4) Since that date, the following sections have been interpreted by many Indian decisions which will be found collected in the notes thereto. The Privy Council have moreover given a full exposition of the law as enacted by section 115, in the case of Sarat Chunder Dey v. Gopal Chunder Laha(5), which is to be regarded as the leading authority in this country on the subject of estoppel by misrepresentation.

The boundary line between estoppel and breach of contract is often apt to be obscured, but must not be confounded For one and the same false statement may well be a deceit and a breach of contract and capable of operating by estoppel. These possible qualities of a false representation are not mutually exclusive. (6) A false representation must operate in one of four ways if it is to produce any legal consequences: (a) It may be a term in a contract in which case its falsity will, according to circumstances, either render the contract voidable or render the person making the representation liable either to damages or to a decree that he or his representatives shall give effect to the representation. The common case of a warranty is an instance of a representation forming part of a contract. (b) It may operate as an estoppel preventing the person making the representation from denying its truth, as against persons whose conduct has been influenced by it. (c) It may afford a cause of action in tort for deceit. (d) It may amount to a criminal offence. A false pretence by which money is ... amounting to a crime. (7) In t ... o a cause of action; ... nal proceedings. An estoppel, however, is only a rule of evidence which ... des a person from denying the truth of some statement previously made by himself or the conventional statement of facts upon the basis of which an agreement has been entered into An action cannot be founded upon an estoppel which is only important as being one step in the progress towards relief on the hypothesis that the defendant is estopped from denying the truth of something which he has said. One party is assisted to relief owing to his opponent being estopped from denying the truth of something which he has said or done In ... by preventing either ... d, becomes effective ... annihilating and des- ... ucceed or fail if the averring against the latter a different state of things as existing at the same time" per Lord Denman, C J.] It will be observed from the remarks in the text that the cases anterior to 1837 will be of little practical assistance on this branch of the law The principle was stated more broadly by Lord Denman in Gregg v. Wells, 10 A. & E., 90, 97 (1839); both cases were followed by Freeman v. Cooke, 2 Ex. R., 654 (1848).

(1) v. ante, s 40.

(2) Heane v. Rogers, 9 B & C., 577, 586 (1829); Grave v. Key, 3 B. & Ad., 318 n (1832). See remarks of Erle, C J., in White v. Greenish, 11 C B N. S., 229 (1861).

(3) Bigelow, op cit, 6th Ed, 604, 605

(4) Caspersz, op. cit, 41, 42

(5) L R, 19 I. A, 403 (1892)

(6) Pollock on Contract, 6th Ed, 505—506.

(7) See Alderson v. Maddison, L. R. 5 Exch. D, 293, 296: a representation which influences the conduct of a person to whom it is made is not legally enforceable against the person who makes it unless it operates either as a contract or as an estoppel defendant or plaintiff is prevented from disputing a particular fact alleged; [illegible] nd assigned, [illegible] Or, in the [illegible] mpany were [illegible] ing that the shares were paid up, their action would fail. (1)

Referring again to the classification of estoppels under English and American law it will be observed that the only classes to which the Act expressly or impliedly refers, are the estoppel by record or judgment (sections 40—44), and the estoppel in pais in its modern forms of es[illegible] or contract (sections 115—117) These latte[illegible] different from the law of England on their [illegible] are not, as already observed, exhaustive of the law of estoppel (3) It is not here possible to enumerate all the cases in which effect has been given to estoppels in English Courts, nor to minutely classify a branch of the law which is not only of recent but of actual present growth. As cases of difficulty from time to time arise for determination, recourse must be had to the large body of decisions which exists on this subject in England and America, as also in this country, some of which will be found collected in the notes to the following sections.

115. When one person has, by his declaration, act or omission, intentionally caused or permitted another person to believe a thing to be true and to act upon such belief, neither he nor his representative shall be allowed, in any suit, or proceeding between himself and such person or his representative, to deny the truth of that thing. Estoppel

Illustration

A intentionally and falsely leads B to believe that certain land belongs to A, and thereby induces B to buy and pay for it

The land afterwards becomes the property of A, and A seeks to set aside the sale on the ground that, at the time of the sale, he had no title. He must not be allowed to prove his want of title (4)

Principle—The principle upon which the rule of estoppel rests is that it would be most inequitable and unjust that if one person, by a representation made, or by conduct amounting to a representation, has induced another to act as he would not otherwise have done, the person who made the representation should be allowed to deny or repudiate the effect of his former statement, to the loss and injury of the person who acted on it.(5) ss. 116, 117 (Estoppel of tenant, licensee, acceptor, bailee).

---

(1) Low v. Bouverie, L. R., 3 Ch., 82 (1891); see Caspersz, op cit, 4, 28—30.

(2) See Sarat Chunder v. Gopal Chunder, 19 I A, 203; 20 C., 296 (1902); the Indian leading case on the subject of Estoppel

(3) Ganges Manufacturing Co. v. Sourujmull, 5 C., 669 (1880); Rup Chand v Sarbeswar Chandra, 10 C. W. N., 747 (1906), s c, 3 C. L. J., 629, but see Asmatunessa Khatun v. Harendra Lall Biswas (1908), 35 C., 904

(4) See Radhey Lal v Mahesh Prasad, 7 A., 84 (1885); Act IV of 1882, s. 43, and cases cited post in notes to paragraph "Declaration, Act, Omission." When a person having a limited interest, namely, a sub-lease, granted a perpetual lease and afterwards acquired the proprietary right, he was held estopped from disputing the perpetual lease: Kuru Chaubi v Janki Persad, 1 N.-W. P. Rep., 165. See Syed Ameer v. Heera Singh, 20 W. R., 291 (1873)

(5) Sarat Chunder v. Gopal Chunder, 19 I. A., 203, 215, 216 (1892); see Citizen Bank v. First National Bank, L. R., 6 E. & I. A., 352, 360

Bigelow's Treatise on the Law of Estoppel, 6th Ed. (1913), Everest and Strode's Law of Estoppel, 2nd Ed., (1907); Cababe, Principles of Estoppel (1888); Estoppel by representation and Res judicata in British India, by A Caspersz, 4th Ed (1915). See also general text-books on Evidence sub voc. "Estoppel."

COMMENTARY.

Scope of the Section.

A general classification of estoppels and a short account of their position in the law of evidence has been given in the Introduction to this Chapter, to which reference should, if necessary, be made. In dealing with this and the following [illegible] y are not exhaustive of the law [illegible] rules of evidence(1), secondly, [illegible] llowing sections enact as law in India anything different from the law of England on the subject of estoppel. Cases of estoppel may therefore arise which are not within the purview of these sections at all, and those which are within such purview will (in the absence of an authoritative ruling of the Courts of this country) be determinable upon the principles which regulate English Courts, and which are to be found embodied in English decisions (3)

This section deals with estoppels by "representation," or "misrepresentation," that term including both express and implied statements. It may be described as estoppel by "misrepresentation," for though in strict legal theory the proposition that the representation must be untrue is probably not essential and the person is none the less bound to admit a fact because it is true: still in practice the doctrine only obtains legal significance when there has been a misleading, or in other words when the admission exacted from A, by reason of his conduct, is of facts which are not capable of actual proof.(4) It is not necessary that there should be an express statement; whatever word, action, or conduct conveys a clear impression as of a fact is embraced in the term. Indeed the term practically includes silence in certain cases, for silence where one is bound to speak is ordinarily equivalent to an admission of the fact (5) And so the section speaks not only of declarations but also of acts and omissions. As it is immaterial in what form the representation is made, so it be a representation, so also is it immaterial to know what the motive or the state of knowledge is of the party making the representation. The main determining element in every case is not the motive or the state of knowledge of the party estopped, but the effect of his representation or conduct as having induced another to act on the faith of such representation or conduct.(6) The principle upon which the rule rests is that the situation of the one party having been changed by the representation, the person who made the latter shall not be permitted to disaffirm the statement which has induced such change (7) Three

---

(1) Ganges Manufacturing Co v. Sourujmull, 5 C., 669 (1880); v. ante, p 822

(2) Sarat Chunder v. Gopal Chunder, 19 I. A., 203, 215 (1892); s. c, 20 C, 296 ["The learned Counsel who argued the present case on either side were agreed that the terms of the Indian Evidence Act did not enact as law in India any thing different from the law in England on the subject of estoppel, and their Lordship entirely adopts that view."]

(3) American decisions, though not of course of authority, may, in so far as American law is founded upon English law, also be referred to as aids to determination upon this or other question of evidence. See Preface.

(4) Cababe's Estoppel, 60

(5) Bigelow, op. cit., 6th Ed, 648, Carr v. London Ry Co, L R, 10 C. P, 307, 316, 317.

(6) Sarat Chunder v. Gopal Chunder, 19 I. A, 203, 215 (1892) As to mistake of law, see Kuverji v. Babai, 19 B, 374 (1891), and mistake of fact, Nathubhai v Mulchand, 3 Bom L. R., 535 (1901); Helan Dasi v Durga Das Mundal, 4 C. L J., 323.

(7) Sarat Chunder v Gopal Chunder, supra: Bigelow, op cit, 453; Citizen Bank v. First National Bank, L R, 6 E. & I. A, 352, 360 things only are necessary in order to bring a case within the scope of this section —(a) there must have been a "representation"(1) which amounts to an intentional causing or permitting belief in another; (b) there must have been belief on the part of that other; and (c) there must have been action arising out of that belief. When these facts are shown, an estoppel arises which consists in holding for truth the representation acted upon, when the person who made it or his privies seek to deny its truth and to deprive the party who has acted upon it of the benefit obtained (2) Assuming that all the conditions necessary to effect an estoppel are not fulfilled, a representation may still operate as an admission—that is, a statement which suggests any inference as to any fact in issue or relevant fact, and may be evidence, though not conclusive, against [illegible] to an estop[illegible] clear legislative enactment like the fourth section of the Indian Companies Act, the

[illegible]

cedure Code enacts a special law for a special purpose and so over-rides the general law of estoppel, and where after an adjustment of decree which had not been certified or recorded, the decree-holder acted on the adjustment and incur legal obligations and particularly upon their contractual capacity. It invalidates and renders null and void certain transactions, on the ground that [illegible] perty as, for instance, by [illegible] This general law is in no[illegible] owed to enlarge the status [illegible] nor to alter the incidents of property. The admission exacted must always be of something which can legally be done by the party from whom it is exacted.(7) Estoppel cannot be pleaded where statutory requirements are disobeyed with full knowledge by the officers entrusted with the discharge of public duties (8) Estoppel, like acquiescence, is not a question of fact but of legal inference from the facts found (9) Though section 80 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), is

[illegible]

(1) In Ananta Nalavde v. Ganu Surulkar, 45 B, 80 (1921), it was held that the plaintiff had by his conduct permitted the defendants to believe that they would have a right of easement upon repair of a well. In Bahadur Singh v. Mohur Singh, 24 A., 94, 107 (1901), the Privy Council held that there was no evidence of any representation on which to found an estoppel So also in Kuverji Shet v. Municipality of Lonavala, 45 B, 164 (1921)

(2) Bigelow, op cit, 6th Ed, 604

(3) v ante, ss 17—23, 31. See Yashwant Puttu v. Radhabhai, 14 B, 312 (1889); Pandit Hanuman v. Mufti Assadullah, 7 N.-W. P., 145 (1875).

(4) Madras Hindu Mutual Fund v. Kagava Chetti, 19 M, 200, 207, 208 (1895); see Jogini Mohan v. Bhoot Nath, 31 C., 146 (1903). Estoppel cannot be invoked to defeat the plain provisions of a statute See 22 C. W. N., 89; 23 C. W. N., 437, and parties to a consent decree are not estopped from objecting to it if the decree is contrary to statute, 50 I. C., 577.

(5) Shridhar Balkrishna v Babaji Mula, 38 B., 709 (1914); Chidambara Chettiar v. Vaidilinga Padayachi, 38 M, 519 (1915).

(6) Trimbak Ramkrishna Ranade v. Hari Laxman Ranade (1910), 34 B, 575.

(7) Cababe's Estoppel, 123, 124

(8) Shyam Chand Basak v. Chairman Dacca Municipality, 47 C., 524.

(9) Narsing Das v. Rahimanbhai, 6 Bom L. R, 440 (1904); s. c., 28 B., 440 "The question of estoppel is a mixed question of law and fact." Nagindas Harjivandas v. Kara Jesang, 6 Bom. L. R., 603 (1904).

imperative (1) the Secretary of State for India in Council can waive the notice ordered by it, and in that case he will be estopped by conduct from pleading the want of notice in a later stage of the proceedings.(2)

And in an English case it has been held that a man may be estopped from alleging a legal incapacity; for a foreigner or British subject domiciled abroad who, being in England, contracts in due form according to the laws of England a marriage with a person domiciled in England, is not permitted to assert that he was under the burden of an incapacity imposed by the law of the foreign domicile to do that which he, in fact did voluntarily and in due form according to the laws of England, and he cannot repudiate the marriage on the ground of such personal incapacity.(3)

[illegible] person

A party may himself make the representation, or it may be made by him through the agency of some other person by whose acts he is bound In the first case there is no difficulty except when the representation is made by persons under a disability to contract.(4)

It has been held by the Bombay High Court(5) that an infant is not excepted by the terms of this section, and by the Calcutta High Court (Maclean C. J., and Prinsep, J.)(6) that the term "person" in this section is amply satisfied by holding it to apply to one who is of full age and competent to contract, and that this section has no application to the case of a minor. The judgment of Ameer Ali, J., in the same case proceeded on the ground not that the section was inapplicable because it did not refer to the case of a minor at all, but that when the law of contract declared that an infant should not be liable upon a contract or in respect of a fraud in connection with a contract, he cannot be made liable upon the same contract by means of an estoppel under this section; in other words, that, as already stated, the general law cannot be altered by estoppel.(7) Upon an appeal in the latter case to the Privy Council their Lordships said: "The Courts below seem to have decided that this section does not apply to infants; but their lordships do not think it necessary to deal with that question now."(8) It may be that the judgments of the majority of the High Court should be read as applicable simply to cases such as that which was before it, but if not, it is respectfully submitted in this, as it was in the earlier editions of this work, that the broad assertion that the doctrine of estoppel in pais has no application whatever to infants, is incorrect.(9) The

---

(1) Woodroffe and Ameer Ali on Civil Procedure Code, second edition, p. 345.

(2) Bhola Nath Roy v. Secretary of State for India, 40 C., 503 (1913); Manindra Chandra Nandi v. Secretary of State, 5 C. L. J., 148 (1907).

(3) Chetti v. Chetti, 1909, P. 67; Law Quarterly Review, April 1909, p. 202.

(4) See Bigelow, op cit, 6th Ed, 620—629, where the question of the estoppel of parties under disability is discussed A man cannot set up the incapacity of the party with whom he has contracted in bar of an action by that party for breach of the contract Legal disability as e.g., in the case of an infant is a defence personal to him who is under it and cannot be made use of by another: Bigelow, op. cit., 6th Ed, 501, 502.

(5) Ganesh Lala v. Bapu, 21 B., 198 (1895). Followed in Dadasaheb Dasrathrao v. Bai Nahani, 41 B., 480 (1917), and the latter by Jasraj Bastimal v. Sadashiv Walekar, 23 Bom. L. R., 975; s. c., 46 B., 137.

(6) Brohmo Dutt v. Dhurmodass Ghosh, 26 C., 388 (1898); [dissenting from Ganesh Lala v. Bapu, 21 B., 198 (1895)]

(7) 26 C., at p 394.

(8) Mohori Bibee v. Dhurmodass Ghose 30 C., 539, 545 (1903); 7 C. W. N., 441, 5 Bom L. R., 421 [referred to with reference to s. 41 of the Specific Relief Act in Dattaram v. Vinayak, 28 B., 181 (1913)]. Cf. Mohori Bibee v. Dhurmodass Ghose, 30 I. A., 114 (1903). This case was distinguished in a later Full Bench of the Madras High Court. Raghava Chariar v. Srinivasa Raghava Chariar, F. B., 40 M., 308 (1917), overruling, Narakotti Narayana v. Logalinga, 33 M., 312 (1910).

(9) See Bigelow, op cit., 6th Ed., 620—629, where the question of the estoppel of parties under disability is discussed. 9 position would appear together with and sub tract and transfer of

be free of liability in respect of a particular transaction, he cannot be made liable by virtue of an estoppel, for an estoppel cannot alter the law, but that in other cases an infant may be estopped. An infant is not liable upon a contract his contract, such ntract, that he is of n pais what he can-gal capacity to con-act by means of an estoppel under this section, if it be elsewhere declared that he shall not be liable upon a contract. To say that by acts in pais that could be done in effect which could not be done by deed would be practically to dispense with all the limitations the law has imposed on the capacity to contract.(3) So if a person sues entered into on the faith of ill age, the infant will not r to a claim to fix him thstanding his fraudulent representation.(4)

In a case where a minor, not clearly a minor in appearance, bought a n to believe

'a person'
the vendor truth of his based on a ntation l 122 of persons where

a minor obtained shares in a Company and received dividends and continued to do so after coming of age, it was held that his conduct while sui juris estopped him from denying as between himself and the Company that he was a shareholder.(7)

But though this section may not apply, the Court may, in other cases, acting on well-recognised principles of equity, relieve against an infant's fraud. An infant will not be permitted to take advantage of his own fraud, and he will

---

C. W N, clxxi, ccxx, viii So under section 116 a minor may be estopped, Kaniz Mehdi v. Rasul Beg, 5 O. L. J, 551; s c, 48 I C, 39

(1) Pollock on Contract, 6th Ed, 52, 72 and cases there cited. It is clear that an action cannot be maintained on a contract made with an infant for falsely representing himself to be of age at the time, the representation in such case not operating as an estoppel; Bigelow, op. cit, 6th Ed, 625—627; Johnson v Pye, Sid, 258, Bartlett v. Wells, 1 B. & S., 836; The Liverpool Adelphi Loan Association v. Fairhurst, 9 Ex, 422 (1854). See as to infants, statement of account, Hedgley v Holt, 4 C & P., 104; and disproof of allegation that goods supplied were necessaries; Barnes & Co v. Toye, 1 Q. B. D, 410; Johnstone v. Marks, 19 Q. B. D, 509; Ryder v Wombwell, L. R, 3 Ex, 90, dissented from.

(2) Brahmo Dutt v Dhurmodass Ghosh, 26 C, 838, 394 (1898)

(3) Bigelow, op cit, 6th Ed., 621

(4) Dhanmul v Ramchunder Ghose, 1 C. W. N., 270 (1890), and cases there cited; s c, 24 C, 265 Explained in Sreemutty Mohun Bibee v Sarat Chunder 2 C. W. N, 18 (1897)

(5) Dadasaheb Dasrathrao v Bai Nahani, 41 B., 480 (1917) following Ganesh Lal v Bapu, 21 B, 198 (1895) Foll in Jasraj Bastimal v Sadashiv Mahadev Walekar, 46 B., 137 (1922)

(6) See Golam Abdin Sarkar v Hem Chandra Majumdar, 20 C. W N 418 (1915) (to hold a minor liable on estoppel is indirectly to make him liable on contract).

(7) Fazulbhoy Jaffer v Credit Bank of India, 39 B., 331 (1915)

be estopped in answer to such equity from pleading his minority.(1) Though a decree for personal payment on the contract, express or implied in a mortgage, cannot be made against an infant, however fraudulent he might be, the liability of a fraudulent infant to a decree for sale or foreclosure is, it has been held, a different thing So where an infant by fraudulent misrepresentation as to his age, induced the plaintiff to advance him money on the security of a mortgage, it was held that the plaintiff was entitled to a mortgage-decree for the amount to be realised only from the mortgaged property.(2) And in a case, where an infant by misrepresenting his age obtained a loan on the security of a promissory note, it was held that he was liable in equity on the note since there was an equitable liability resulting from the misrepresentation.(3) But proof of fraud and deceit is essential. Though it is unquestionably within the power of the [illegible] 'es to deprive a fraudulent minor of the [illegible]; one who invokes the aid of that power [illegible] inds, and must further establish that a fraud was practised on him by the minor and that he was deceived into action by that fraud.(4) In a recent case the plaintiff sued to recover the principal and interest due on a bond executed by the defendant on the 4th February 1912. Defendant pleaded inter alia that he was not liable as he was a minor on that date. Defendant was born on 10th December 1891 and he was therefore about twenty years and two months old when the bond was executed A guardian had been appointed for him, but the guardian resigned and on the 18th May 1910, the District Judge passed an order that though the minor was eighteen or nineteen years of age and minority would continue till the age of twenty-one, that as the appointment of a fresh guardian was discretionary and as the minor did not want a fresh guardian to be appointed and was old enough by appearance to act for himself, no fresh guardian need be appointed After that the defendant managed his own affairs and acted as a man who had attained majority would do. The plaint alleged that the dealings were entered into on defendant's assurance that he had become an adult. This was disputed by the defendant but the High Court found on evidence that the defendant did represent himself to be of full age and that the plaintiff was misled by the false representation. Held that this section was applicable to the case and that the defendant's plea of minority could not be heard.(5) Though in a case of contract or transfer of property a minor cannot be held to be esto [illegible] meaning of this section, yet when he enters into [illegible] half by his guardian, he canr [illegible] as a bar to a suit in ejectmen [illegible] not apply to a case where the statement relied upon is made to a person who knows the real facts and is not misled by the untrue statement. There can be no estoppel where the truth of the matter is known to both parties. A false representation made to a person who knows it to be false is not such a fraud as to take away the privilege of infancy.(7) But the party must be deceived.

(1) Cory v. Gercken, 2 Mad, 50. See Sreemutty Mohun v Sarat Chunder, 2 C. W. N., 18, 26, 27 (1897), and cases there cited

(2) Sreemutty Mohun v Sarat Chunder, 2 C. W. N., 18 (1897); in appeal, 25 C., 371. In Thurston v. Nottingham Permanent Benefit Building Society, 1 Ch. (1902), at p 12, it was pointed out [illegible] no question of fraud arose in that c[illegible] see appeal to House of Lords [illegible] A. C., 6.

(3) Levene v. Brougham (1908), Ti[illegible] L. R., v. 24, p 46.

(4) Dhurmodass Ghosh v. Brahmo Dutt, 2 C W. N., 330 (1898); [illegible] c., 25 C., 381; and by Privy Council, 30 C., 539 (1902)

(5) Wasi[illegible] v. Sita Ram, 1 Lahore, 389. [illegible] v. Pal[illegible], 1 Lahore, [illegible] v. Subramania [illegible]

So in the case cited the plaintiff sued to obtain a declaration that the sale by her to her deceased hı during her minority and contended that the plai being a major when she must have known that she was a minor. The question arose whether the plaintiff was estopped on account of the representations made by her as also whether under section 41 of the Specific Relief Act the Court should have directed the plaintiff to restore the consideration money. Held that the plaintiff was not estopped, there being evidence that the defendant was not deceived by what she told him inasmuch as he had made enquiries about plaintiff's age from the plaintiff's father and from other sources, and beyond that being himself the brother of her deceased husband. A fair presumption arose that he must have known what the plaintiff's age was, and secondly that there was no equity in favour of the defendant to direct the plaintiff to restore the consideration money.(1)

An infant is liable for a tort committed by him And when an infant has induced persons to deal with him by falsely representing himself as of full age, he incurs an obligation in equity to restore any advantage he has obtained by such representations to a person from whom he has obtained it (2) In cases of fraud separate from contract, a person under disability may estop himself to deny the truth of his representation.(3) So if an infant having a a purchaser to buy it of another without r will be entitled to hold against the or under age.(4) As regards suits by a minor, it was held in the undermentioned case(5) that a minor who, represent-

Code, as to limit of time for execution (7)

(1) Gurusidhaswami v Parawa, 44 B, 175

(2) See Pollock on Contract, 6th Ed, 73, 76, and cases there cited; in particular Stikeman v. Dawson, 1 DeG. & Sm, 90; Jagarnath Singh v Lalta Prasad (1908), 31 A, 21 C., see also Dhanmul v. Ramchunder Ghose, supra, Wharton, Ev, § 1151

(3) Bigelow, op. cit, 6th Ed, 628

(4) See Savage v. Foster, L. C. in Equity Wattes v. Cresswell, 9 Vin, 415; ["if an infant is old and cunning enough to contrive and carry on a fraud, he ought to make satisfaction for it," per Lord Cowper]; and case cited in Cory v. Gertcken, 2 Mad, 46, 48—51; Sugden, Vendors, 743, 14th Ed, Bigelow, op cit, 6th Ed, 627—629, the existence of an estoppel by conduct does not always depend upon the existence of a right of action for deceit; for while there may be an estoppel without this right of action in some cases, the estoppel always arises where the action of deceit would be maintainable, ib, 6th Ed., 628

(5) Ram Ratun v Shew Nandan, 29 C., 126 (1901).

(6) Deo Nandan Prashad v. Janki Singh, P. C., 44 C, 573 (1917), overruling Doorga Singh v Sheo Pershad, 16 C., 194 (1884); approving Faizar Rahman v Maimuna Khatun, 17 C. W. N., 1233 (1913).

(7) Prem Nath Tiwari v Chatarpal Man Tiwari, 37 A, 638 (1915); dissenting from Maro Sadashiv v. Visaji Raghunath, 16 B, 536 following Jhandu v Mohan Lal, 2 P. R., 1894, C. J., 489; Ramana Reddi v. Babu Reddi, 37 M., 186 (1912).

In the case cited the trustee of a temple who for his own private purposes mortgaged land which was afterwards sold in Court Auction at the instance of the mortgagee was, it was held, entitled to sue on behalf of the temple to recover the landlord's interest which was dedicated to the temple and was not estopped from setting up a claim against a bonâ fide purchaser for value that it was trust property.(1)

The principle of estoppel by conduct applies to corporations(2) as well as to individuals, with this qualification, that if the act undertaken was in and of itself ultra vires(3) of the corporation, no act of the body can have the effect of [illegible] do what was undertaken Just [illegible] cannot by his act in pais create [illegible] a contractual liability, so the powers of the ordinary corporation being dependent upon the Statute which created the body, those powers cannot be enlarged by the body itself; and the act in question being in itself ultra vires, the corporation cannot make it otherwise, whether directly or indirectly.

In the case of corporations, particularly joint-stock companies, the application of the rule sometimes gives rise to difficulty, but such difficulty is met by bearing in mind the distinction between those things which the company can do, if it goes the proper way to work to do them, and those things which by virtue of its constitution the company can under no circumstances do at all.(4) There may be an estoppel against the Crown.(5) Apart from agency, the representation of one person may be binding on another, if both are to be regarded in the light of one person. So it has been held in America that the acts and admissions of one of several administrators which amount to an estoppel against him will work an estoppel against all, it being said that where there are several administrators or executors they must be regarded in the light of an individual person (6)

Secondly, a party may be estopped by reason of the representation of some person by whose acts he is bound.(7) The rule of estoppel between parties covers,

(1) Yasin Sahib v Ekambara Aiyar, 37 M L J, 698, s c, 54 I C., 497.

(2) See on this subject, Bigelow, op. cit, 6th Ed, 497—508, and cases there cited (and see Index, ib), Caspersz, op. cit, 4th Ed., s 141, p 149 and cases there cited, where the subject will be found dealt with (a) as to membership and retirement, (b) as to the register; (c) as to the issuing of certificates of share; (d) as to debentures irregularly issued; (e) estoppel by issue of paid-up shares, (f) negligence on the part of members of a company, (g) effect of the company's seal [see Goodrich v Venkanna, 2 M., 195 (1878)]. Estoppels against corporations being of infrequent occurrence in this country, it has not been here thought necessary to deal with this important subject at length. The Indian cases are scanty But as the Indian Companies Act (Act VII of 1913), reproduces the English Act, 25 and 26 Vic, c. 88; 30 and 31 Vic., c. 131; 40 and 41 Vic, c 261, reference may and should be made to the English case-law and the text-books on the subject of the law relating to corporations In the two following cases, it was held that the estoppel was not established; Rivett-Carnac v New Mofussil Co, 26 B, 54 (1901) [Sale of shares—voucher by company of title of vendor—pucca receipt issued by Company] See Mahant v Coimbatore Spinning Co., 26 M, 79 (1902) [application for rectification of register]

(3) Fairtitle v Gilbert, 2 T. R. 169; Ex parte Watson, L. R., 21 Q B. D., 331; Barrow's Case, L R, 14 Ch D. 441; [" there can be no estoppel in the face of an Act of Parliament," per Bacon, V. C.]; Bigelow, op cit., 6th Ed, 504

(4) Cababe's Estoppel, 125, 126 For estoppel by signature of managing members of joint family firm, see Kunj Kishore v Official Liquidator, 36 A, 416 (1914)

(5) Toolsemony Dossee v Maria Mongery, 11 B L R. 144 (1873). In re Purmanandas Jeewandas 7 B, 109, 117 (1882); see this question of Estoppel against the State discussed, Bigelow, op cit, 6th Ed, 371, 619n (i)

(6) Bigelow op cit, 6th Ed, 621, but see also p 231, ante, note 11

(7) As to persons claiming through and under others, see Kali Dayal v. Umesh Prasad, 1 Pat., 174 (1922)

of course, the misrepresentations of agents, even agents of corporations, when made in the scope of their employ. When an agency really exists, the principal is estopped to deny the truth of the agent's statements, express or tacit, just as much as if he himself had made them, subject to the same limitations that would prevail in that case But an agent or a servant is not himself estopped when acting by direction of his principal, unless his own conduct was such as to estop him.(1) Where an agent or servant commits a wrong within the scope of his employment, and in the interests or the supposed interests of the principal or master, and not for his own private and fraudulent purposes, the principal or master is liable; but only then.(2) But it has been held that the commission of a crime by a servant severed the connection.(3)

An estoppel against a principal is dealt with by section 237 of the Contract Act, which enacts that when an agent has without authority, done acts or incurred obligations to third persons on behalf of his principal, the latter is [illegible] or conduct induced such [illegible] were within the scope of [illegible]

mentioned ca[illegible] of his agent, [illegible] theless enfor[illegible] led into an h[illegible] to him (5) [illegible]
principals or [illegible]
(a branch of [illegible]
245, 246 of [illegible]
allows others to use his name, he is estopped from denying his assumed character, upon the faith of which creditors may be presumed to have acted, and becomes a partner by estoppel (8) The misrepresentation of a trustee in respect of the trust-estate to one having notice that it is such, will not work as estoppel upon an innocent cestui-que-trust (9) And while a trustee committing a breach of

(1) Bigelow, op cit, 6th Ed, 619–620 as to agents of corporation, see Houldsworth v. City of Glasgow Bank, L. R, 5 App Ca, 331. As to the authority of agents, see Contract Act, ss 186, 187, 188, 189; a wife's representations will not affect the husband either as admissions or estoppels, unless he has constituted her his agent The mere relation creates no agency v. ante, p 236; Bigelow, op. cit, 6th Ed, 619n (1). There must be a real agency Thus a widow is not estopped by presentations made in her absence by an administrator in selling land of the intestate, that it is free from claims of dower (ib) As to sub-agents, see Contract Act ss 190—195; ratification ib, ss 196—200; revocation of authority, ib., ss 201—210; effect of agency on contracts with third person; scope of authority, ib, 226—238, effect of misrepresentation or fraud of agent, ib, s. 238

(2) Malcolm Brunker & Co. v. Waterhouse and Sons, 1908, Times L R, V. 24, p. 855

(3) Cheshire v. Baley (1905), 1 K. B., 237.

(4) See Ramsden v. Dyson 1 E. & I A, 129, 158, and other cases cited in Caspersz, op cit, 150—156; and Bigelow, op cit, 457, 458, 565, 566, where the distinction between agency proper and estoppel is pointed out A person assuming to act in a contract as principal will afterwards be estopped from saying that he was in fact acting only as agent, ib., 687; Reigard v. McNeill, 38 Ill, 400 (Amer). As to the effect of misrepresentations made by agents in the course of business as also in matters without their authority, see Contract Act, s. 238

(5) Ram Pertab v Marshall, 26 C, 701 (1898)

(6) See cases cited in Caspersz, op cit, 4th Ed (1915), ss. 100—106, pp 107—112

(7) Chundee Churn v Eduljee Cowasjee, 8 C., 678, 684 (1882)

(8) Mollwo March v. Court of Wards, L. R, 4 P. C., 419, 435; see Lindley's Partnership, 5th Ed., 40—47; Pollock's Partnership, 26—29; Caspersz, op cit, 162—166; Bigelow, op. cit, 6th Ed., 611, 612, as to evidence necessary to establish liability as partner by estoppel see Porter v. Incel, 10 C. W. N, 313.

(9) Bigelow, op cit, 6th Ed., 619–621; Keate v. Phillips, 18 Ch. D, 560 577; as to the estoppel against a trustee, see Newsome v. Flowers, 30 Beav, 461, 470 trust is estopped against a bonâ fide purchaser for value without notice of the breach, an innocent cestui-que-trust is not affected (1)

If a trustee takes upon himself to answer the inquiries of a stranger about to deal with the ... ition to do more than ... and belief; he is no ... rs honestly, he incurs no liability to the enquirer, unless he binds himself by a statement amounting to a warranty or so expresses himself as to be estopped from afterwards denying the truth of what he has said.(2) The estoppel against a trustee in favour of a cestui-que-trust has been likened to that between landlord and tenant. Trustees cannot set up as against their cestuis que trustent, the adverse title of third parties. "It is a common principle of law that a tenant who has paid rent to his landlord cannot say 'you are not the owner of the property'; the fact of having paid rent prevents his doing it. The same thing occurs where persons are made trustees for the owner of property; if they acknowledge the trust for a considerable time, they cannot say that any other persons are their cestuis que trustent, or 'we will turn you out of the property'. This is an analogous case."(3) A creditor does not lose his right to sue the executors, and to recover from them, by mere laches. But if the creditor misleads the executors so that they are thereby induced to part with the assets in a manner which would be a devastavit, then the creditor cannot complain of the devastavit (4) So if a cestui-que-trust concur in a breach of trust, he is estopped from proceeding against the trustee for the consequences of the act, and à fortiori a cestui-que-trust who is also a trustee cannot hold his co-trustee responsible for any act in which they both joined.(5) A trustee, alleging that the trust-property, consisting of land, was his own property, mortgaged it. The mortgagee took the mortgage in good faith, for valuable consideration, and without notice of the trust. The mortgagee obtained a decree against the trustee for the sale of the land, and the land was sold in execution of that decree. The trustee subsequently brought a suit to recover the land from the purchaser on the ground that it was trust-property, and that he had no power to transfer it To this suit none of the beneficiaries under the trust were parties.(6) Held that the plaintiff was estopped by his conduct from recovering possession of the land.(7) But in a later case it was held that though the representation of a mortgagee cannot as such question the validity of a mortgage, it may be open to those as mutawallis to plead that the property was wakf and the mortgage void.(8) It may well be, that a succeeding trustee should not be allowed to impeach a former trustee's act when it is one of that character, without its following, as a logical consequence, that where the trustee avowedly acts in breach for repudiation of the trust such acts should be binding by estoppel upon his successors in the trust.(9) In the undermentioned case the plaintiff was held

(1) Sidhu Sahu v. Gopi Charan Dass, 17 C. L J., 233 (1913).

(2) Low v Bouverie, L. R, 3 Ch. (1891), 82; Burrowes v. Lock, 10 Ves., 470

(3) Newsome v. Flowers, 30 Beav., 461, 470, per Sir John Romilly, M. R., nor can he assert against the trust any title (paramount and adverse to the trust) which he may himself have; Attorney-General v. Munro, 2 DeG & Sm, 122, 163. A trustee may not set up any title adverse to that of the cestui-que-trust, Bigelow, Estoppel, 6th Ed, 589, 590, Act II of 1882, s. 14.

(4) In re Birch, L. R., 27 Ch. D, 622, 627.

(5) Lewin, Trusts, 8th Ed., 918, 2., 12th Ed, 1195; see Griffiths v Hughes, L. R, 3 Ch (1892), 105; Act II of 1882, ss. 23, 62, 68.

(6) The Court observed: "We make no remark with regard to the beneficiaries under the trust, as they, having made no effort to figure in the suit, do not appear to be interesting themselves in the matter."

(7) Gulzar Ali v. Feda Ali, 6 A., 24 (1883).

(8) Nandan Singh v. Jumman, 34 A., 640 (1912), distinguishing Gulzar Ali v Fida Ali, 6 A., 24 (1884)

(9) Shri Ganesh v. Keshavrao Govind, 15 B., 625, 636, 637 (1890).

bound by the conduct of his father, even though technically he succeeded as reversioner in his own right.(1) As to the estoppels of tenants, licensees, bailees and acceptors of bills of exchange, see sections 116 and 117, post, and notes thereto

Declara act or omissio

As already observed, the form of the representation is immaterial. The representation may be express or implied: for whatever word, action or conduct conveys a clear impression as of a fact is embraced in that term. There is no necessity for an express verbal statement or indeed any verbal statement whatsoever. An act may involve and amount to a distinct declaration which will found an estoppel. So if a man takes an active part in carrying out a mortgage on behalf of another, as by signing the deed and receiving the considera. declaration of the validity of the mort-and his acting as the attorney of that ay amount to a declaration that that other is the owner in possession of the property covered thereby.(2) In the case cited in the Allahabad High Court it was held that where a person attests a sale-deed with the knowledge that it contains a recital that the lands which it purports to convey are in the executant's possession as owner, he is thereby estopped from afterwards setting up a title to them (3) In this case it was said that, having regard to the usual course of business in the Madras Presidency, attestation by a person who may have claims to the property affected must be regarded primâ facie as a representation that the recitals of title are true and will not be disputed by the attesting witness against the transferee. But as a general rule attestation does not affect the witness with knowledge or notice of the contents of a deed, and whether it imports concurrence is a question of fact(4) as a mere omission may involve a representation. Thus silence where one is bound to speak is ordinarily equivalent to an admission of the fact.(5) So if a person stands by and allows another to advance or expend money on property be estopped by his conduct of ignorant of his rights or resentation creates or induces in the mind of his tenant a mistaken belief that he has a permanent interest in the land and may build thereon and the tenant relying upon the act or representation so made, treats his interest as permanent and incurs expense in building which he would not otherwise have done, the owner is estopped

(1) Vinayak v. Govind, 2 Bom. L. R., 820 (1900).

(2) Sarat Chunder v. Gopal Chunder, 19 I A, 203, 212, 213 See also for similar cases Kebul Kristo v Ram Coomar, 9 W R, 571 (1868); Sia Dasi v. Gur Sahai, 3 A., 362 (1880); Ram Chunder v. Hari Das, 9 C, 463 (1882); Rai Seeta v Kishun Dass, H. C. R, N-W. P., 1868, p. 402; Salamat Ali v. Budh Singh, I. A, 303 (1876), and see Kanshi Ram v Badda (1906), 23 P. L. R.

(3) Kandasami Pillai v Nagalinga Pillai, 36 M., 564 (1913) (obiter per Sundara Ayyar, J., no actual or verbal representation is necessary for an estoppel).

(4) Lakhpati v Rambodh Singh, 37 A., 350 (1915); Raj Lukhee Debia v Gokul Chandra Chowdry, 13 M. I A, 209 (1869); Deno Nath Das v Koliscar Bhattacharya, 21 I. C., 367 (1913); Mena Singh v Bhagwant Singh, 5 I C., 252 (1909); Banga Chandra Dhur Biswas v. Jagat Kishore, P. C., 44 C, 186 (1917): Hari Kishen Bhagat v. Kashi Pershad, 42 I. A, 64 (1914); Pandurang Krishanji v Markandeya Tukaram, 49 C., 334 P. C. (1922).

(5) Bigelow, op. cit, 6th Ed, 648—662. In 43 I C, 903, silence was held not to be a misrepresentation.

(6) Ramsden v Dyson, L R, 1 E. & I, App, 129, 140; Ex parte Ford, L. R., 1 Ch. D, 521, 528; Nundo Kumar v Bonomali Gayan, 29 C, 871 (1902). [Assuming that quiescence amounts to a representation, it must be found that it was intended that a party should believe or act upon it or that in point of fact they did act upon it]. Ralli v. Forbes, 1 Pat, 717 (1922); Ananta Nalavde v. Ganu Surulkar, 45 B., 80 (1921): in Kuverji Shet v. Municipality of Lonavala, 45 B, 164 (1921), it was held that there was no estoppel; here expenditure was before act relied on as Estoppel.

from denying the truth of that which he represented.(1) A duty to speak, which is the ground of liability, arises only where silence can be considered as having an active property, that of misleading.(2) And conduct by negligence or omission where there is a duty to disclose the truth may often have the same effect.(3) But whatever the form in which the representation be made, it must, in order to justify a prudent man in acting upon it, be not doubtful or matter of questionable inference, certainty being an essential of all estoppels, which must be clear and unambiguous.(4) This does not mean that either the language or the conduct must be such that it cannot possibly be open to different constructions, but only that it must be such as will be reasonably understood in a particular sense by the person to whom it is addressed.(5) On the other hand, a plain representation cannot be cut down from its natural and proper import in the particular situation or transaction. This import may be technical and peculiar or popular according to the business concerned, modified, of course, by any actual understanding of both parties. A person who has made a representation cannot escape the consequences by showing that in a literal sense it is true, if in its natural sense it is untrue. A half-truth too, is generally a whole lie in effect; if the part suppressed would make the part stated false, there is a false represe taken to consist of the part stated and a
This assumes, of course, that the stated fact. Thus a representation that shares o be understood, and so must be held to
In like manner, however definite the representation, it cannot be enlarged or acted upon otherwise than according to terms or natural import and clear meaning; and the whole representation (as is indeed the rule with regard to all admissions(8), must be taken together. One part, though sufficient alone to create an estoppel, cannot be separated from another part connected with

(1) Ralli v Forbes, 1 Part, 717 (1922)

(2) Freeman v. Cooke, 2 Ex., 654; v. post Besides fraud there may be an estoppel by negligence and by circumstances; Vinayek v. Gobind, 2 Bom. L. R, 820, 829, 830 (1900), And see as to negligence Longman v Bath Electric Tramways, 1 Ch (1905), 646, 663.

(3) Joy Chandra Bandopadhya v Srinath Chattapadhya, 32 Cal, 357; 1 C. L J, 23.

(4) Rani Mena v Rani Hulas, 13 B L. R., 312 (1874); 1 I A, 161; [the nature of an estoppel being to exclude an inquiry by evidence into the truth, those who rely upon a statement as an estoppel must clearly establish that it does amount to that which they assert]; Rivett-Carnac v. New Mofussil Co., 26 B., 75 (1901); s. c, 3 Bom. L. R, 846 [certainty is essential to all estoppels] Co. Litt., 352, b. [Every estoppel because it concludeth the man to acknowledge the truth must be certain to every intent, and not to be taken by argument or inference]; Low v. Bouverie, L. R., 1891, 3 Ch., 106, 113; Freeman v. Cooke, supra: Heath v. Crealock, L. R, 10 Ch, 22; Bigelow, op. cit, 578 An estoppel to have any judicial value must be clear and non-ambiguous, it must also be free, voluntary and without any artifice; Mowji v. National Bank, 2 Bom. L R, 1041 (1900). When an estoppel is pleaded against a party, the facts relied upon as leading to it should be precise and unambiguous: Aba v Sonabai, 3 Bom. L. R, 832 (1901); Gajanan v. Nilo, 6 Bom L R, 864, 867 (1904).

(5) Low v Bouverie, supra, at p. 106 "If a party uses language which, in the ordinary course of business and the general sense in which words are understood, conveys a certain meaning he cannot afterwards say he is not bound, if another so understanding it has acted upon it." Cornish v. Abington, 4 H & N, 549, 555, per Pollock, C. B

(6) Bigelow, op cit, 6th Ed, 642, 643, citing Peek v. Gurney, 6 H L, 377, 403; Central Ry. Co. v. Kisch, 2 H L, 99, 113; Corbett v. Brown, 8 Binge 33. though none of the cases cited are cases of estoppel, that learned author submits that there can be no doubt that they are applicable to the present subject

(7) Burkinshaw v. Nicholls, 3 App Cases, 1004, 1021.

(8) v. ante, pp 224—226, and cases there cited.

the other part uncertain (1) otherwise caused has been on the part of the person against whom the estoppel is sought to be raised (2) The representation must be of a nature to lead naturally, that is, to lead a man of prudence to the action taken, hence it must be of fact and material, having reference to a present or past state of things. Representations of law, opinion, or intention are generally insufficient.(3) The reason of the doctrine of estoppel wholly fails when the representation relates only to a present intention or purpose of a party, because being in its nature uncertain and liable to change, it could not properly form a basis or inducement upon which a party could reasonably adopt any fixed and permanent course of action.(4) A promise de futuro cannot be an estoppel (5)

But if a man, under a verbal agreement with a landlord for a certain interest in land, or under an expectation created and encouraged by the landlord that he shall have a certain interest, takes possession of such land with the consent of the landlord, and upon the faith of such promise or expectation, with the knowledge of the landlord and without objection by him, lays out money upon the land, a Court of Equity will compel the landlord to give effect to such promise or expectation The Crown too comes within the range of this equity. This equity [illegible] is not a rule in Courts of assumed by [illegible] fraud.(6) In the case cited a lease was granted by a ryot who represented himself to be a tenure-holder or ryot at fixed rate. Held that the grantee in such a case when his title as permanent lessee is challenged by his grantor may invoke the aid of the doctrine of estoppel and plead that the grantor cannot be permitted to prove the falsity of the recitals in the document on the faith of which he took the lease so as to enable him to derogate from his grant.(7)

Assuming that there has been a representation in the sense mentioned and that that representation is clear and unambiguous, and the other party has been induced to act thereby, it is immaterial what the intention, motive or state of knowledge of the party making the representation was (8) But though the intention is immaterial so far as the creation of the estoppel is concerned, representations may be, and have been, classified with reference to the intention with which they may be made. A person may be estopped, if he has made either a fraudulent misrepresentation, or made a false statement [illegible] s made a false representation without fraud [illegible] v. London and N.-W. Railway Company(10), [illegible] subject, the following four recognised

(1) Bigelow, op cit, 6th Ed 645, 646, as to enlargement of the representation, see Syed Nurmal v. Sheo Sahai, 19 I A., 221, 226, 227 (1892)

(2) Jor Chandra v. Sreenath Chatterjee, 32 C, 357 (1904).

(3) Ib, 572, 574, 582; v post

(4) Langdon v. Dend, 10 Allen, 433 (Amer.), per Bigelow, C. J., v. post

(5) George Whitechurch, Ld v. Cavanagh, C. W. N., cccxvii (1901), 1902, A. C., 117, at p 130; Jethabhai v. Nathabhai, 28 B, 399, at p. 407 See also with regard to representation as to the future Rivett-Carnac v. New Mofussil Co, 26 B., at p 69 (1901); and Dhondo v. Keshava, 7 Bom L. R., 179.

(6) Municipal Corporation of Bombay v. Secretary of State, 29 B, 580; 7 Bom. L. R., 27

(7) Chandra Kanta Nath v. Amjad Ali Hazi 28 C. W. N., 4

(8) v. ante, p 830

(9) Seton Laing & Co v. Lafone, L. R., 19 Q B D, 70

(10) L. R., 10 C. P., 307 (1875)

propositions of an estoppel in pais or modes in which it may arise were laid down(1):—

(a) "One such proposition is, if a man by his words or conduct wilfully endeavours to cause another to believe in a certain state of things, which the first knows to be false, and if the second believes in such a state of things and acts upon his belief, he who knowingly made the false statement is estopped from averring afterwards that such a state of things did not in fact exist."(2)

This proposition deals with fraudulent representations (3)

(b) "Another recognised proposition seems to be that, if a man, either in express terms or by conduct, makes a representation to another of the existence of a certain state of facts which he intends to be acted upon in a certain way, and it be acted upon in that way in the belief of the existence of such a state of facts, to the damage of him who so believes and acts, the first is estopped from denying the existence of such a state of facts."

This proposition deals with representations made without fraud.(4)

(c) "And another proposition is, that, if a man, whatever his real meaning may be, so conducts himself that a reasonable man would take his conduct to mean a certain representation of facts and that it was a true representation, and, that the latter was induced to act upon it in a particular way, and he with such belief does act in that way to his damage, the first is estopped from denying that the facts were represented."(5)

The first two propositions deal with both "declaration" and "act"; this deals with "act" only and the inferences which may be drawn from conduct.(6)

(d) "There is yet another proposition as to estoppel. If, in the transaction itself which is in dispute, one has led another into belief of a certain state of facts by conduct of culpable negligence calculated to have that result, and such

(1) These propositions were approved in Coventry v Great Eastern Railway Co., 11 Q B D., 776, and in Seton Laing & Co v Lafone, L R, 19 Q B D, 68 "Estoppels may arise in various grounds, all of which the judgment in Carr v The London & N.-W. Ry Co., endeavours to state, and each of the grounds on which an estoppel may arise, there stated, is intended to be independent and exclusive of the others," per Brett, M. R., in Seton Laing & Co v. Lafone, L R, 19 Q B. D., 68, 70 (1881) Both these cases were cited and approved by the Privy Council in Sarat Chunder v Gopal Chunder, 19 I. A., 203, 217 (1892).

(2) See for examples of representations of this character giving rise to estoppels:—McCance v London and N.-W. Railway Co., 7 H & M., 477. [A person having wilfully made a false statement as to the value of certain horses in order to induce a railway company to carry them at a lower rate of freight: held to be thereby estopped from proving their real and greater value in an action against the Company for their loss]; Cherry v Colonial Bank of Australasia, L R., 3 P C., 24; Munoo Lall v Lalla Choonee, 1 I A., 144 (1873); s c., 21 W. R., 21; Be[illegible] Radhakissen v. Mussummat Shureefunnissa, W. R., 11 (1864).

(3) See as to fraudulent misrepresentations, Peek v Derry, L. R., 37 Ch D., 541.

(4) See Howard v Hudson, 2 E. & B. 1; where Crompton, J., says:—"The rule, as explained in Freeman v. Cook, takes in all the important commercial cases, in which a representation is made not wilfully in any bad sense of the word, not malo animo, or with intent to defraud or deceive, but so far wilfully that the party making the representation on which the other acts means it to be acted upon in that way." See Madhub Chunder v Law, 13 B L. R., 394 (1874)

(5) The case of Sarat Chunder v Gopal Chunder, 19 I. A., 201; 20 C. 296 (1892), is an example of this proposition. In a case in the same volume somewhat resembling the former in its facts there was held to be no estoppel; Syed Nurul v. Sheo Sahai, 19 I A., 211 (1892)

(6) See Cornish v. Abington, 4 H. & N., 549, 555. [Where a person has conducted himself so as to mislead another, he cannot gainsay the reasonable inference to be drawn from his conduct.] See Khadar v. Subramanya, 11 M., 12 (1887).

culpable negligence has been the proximate cause(1) of leading, and has led the other to act by mistake upon such belief, to his prejudice, the second(2) cannot be heard afterwards as against the first(3) to show that the state of facts referred to did not exist."(4)

This proposition deals primarily with what the section refers to as "omission." Not only must the neglect be in the transaction itself and be the proximate cause of leading the party into mistake: but it also must be the [illegible]

[illegible] party.(6)

With reference to these propositions, the Privy Council, in the case of Sarat Chunder Dey v. Gopal Chunder Laha(7) point out that there may be a statement made which have induced another party to do that from which otherwise he would have abstained, and which cannot properly be characterised as "misrepresentations," as for example, what occurred in that case in which the inference to be drawn from the conduct of the party estopped was either that the conveyance in favour of his mother was valid in itself, or at all events that he, as the party having an interest to challenge it, had elected to consent to its being treated as valid. It has been held that no representations can be relied on as estoppels if they have been induced by the concealment of any material fact on the part of those who seek to use them as such: and if the person, to whom they are made, knows something which, if revealed, would have been calculated to influence the other to hesitate or seek for further information before speaking positively, and that something has been withheld, the representation ought not to be treated as an estoppel.(8)

Not much difficulty is usually experienced in the application of the first and second of the abovementioned propositions; questions, however, of difficulty may, and frequently do, arise as to whether or not a person has by his conduct brought himself within the scope of the third and fourth propositions. The determination of this question will largely depend upon the facts, which will

---

(1) In the subsequent case of Seton Laing & Co. v. Lafone, L. R., 19 Q. B. D., 68, Brett, M. R. (with him Lopes, L. J., concurring) stated that he would prefer to insert in the proposition the word "real" instead of the word "proximate" (ib, 70, 71). Fry, L. J., however, said "I will not attempt to give any paraphrase of the word 'proximate,' the doctrine of causation involves as much difficulty in philosophy as in law; and I do not feel sure that the term 'real' is any more free from difficulty than the term "proximate" (ib, 74). See Swan v. North British Australasian Co, 2 H. & C, 75; "Proximate cause" means "direct and immediate cause" Coventry v Great Eastern Ry Co., 11 Q. B. D, 776, 780. In the case of Longman v. Bath Electric Tramways Co (1905), 1 Ch., 646, at p. 663, it was held that mere negligence will not raise an estoppel. There must be negligence which is the real and immediate cause of the damage done.

(2) Quære "first"; the person referred to is the party guilty of negligence.

(3) Quære "second"; see last note.

(4) For illustration of the estoppel by culpable negligence, see Carr v London & N.-W. Ry Co., L. R., 10 C. P., 307; Coventry v The Great Eastern Railway Co, L. R., 11 Q. B. D., 766; Seton Laing & Co. v. Lafone, L. R., 19 Q. B. D., 68; Swan v N. B. Australasian Co, 2 H. & C., 175 and cases referred to in these reports and in McLaren Morrison v. Verschoyle, 6 C. W. N., 229 (1901).

(5) "There can be no negligence unless there be a duty," per Brett, M. R., in Coventry v. Great Eastern Railway Co, 11 Q. B. D., 776, 780.

(6) Swan v. N. B. Australasian Co, 2 H. & C., 175, per Blackburn J. A party on whom there is no duty to disclose a fact, may of course by his misrepresentation estop himself under the preceding propositions; Munnoo Lall v. Lalla Choonee, 1 Ind App., 144, 156 (1873).

(7) 19 I. A., 203, 217 (1892).

(8) Porter v. Moore (1904), 2 Cavanagh (1902), A. C., 117, 1 Lord Brampton.

vary with each particular case. Some, however, of the more obvious and frequently recurring estoppels may be here shortly alluded to.

A representation may arise not only (as already observed), by way of concealment of part of the truth in regard to a whole fact; but also from total but misleading silence (that is, silence where there is a duty to speak)(1): with [illegible]

[illegible]

have left something like a representation upon the mind (2) According [illegible] succinct expression which has been often quoted, "where a man has been silent when in conscience he ought to have spoken, he shall be debarred from speaking when conscience requires him to be silent."(3) Further an admission by silence, of a representation made by the party claiming the estoppel may sometimes raise an estoppel.(4) And, when in answer to an enquiry a person gives an evasive misleading answer, it will estop even though it may not have been intended to deceive, if its effect was in fact to deceive the inquirer.(5) Mere standing by in silence will not bar a man from asserting a title of record in the public registry or other like office, so long as no act is done to mislead the other party, for there is no duty to speak in such a case. Thus a patentee is not bound to warn others whom he may see buying an article which is an infringement of his patent.(6) But if there be any misleading either by express declarations(7), or by conduct(8), there will arise an estoppel notwithstanding registration of the title. There is no duty generated to speak by the mere fact that a man is aware that some one may act to his prejudice, if the true state of things is not disclosed So long as he is not brought into contact with the person about to act, and does not know who that person may be, he is under no obligation to seek him out, or to stop a transaction which is not due to his own conduct as the natural and obvious result of it.(9)

The commonest instance of inference from conduct arises in the case of conduct of acquiescence; for acquiescence under such circumstances as that

---

(1) Of course there can be no duty to speak without a knowledge of the existence of one's own rights or of the action about to be taken Bigelow, op cit, 595; Chintaman Ramchandra v Dareppa, 14 B, 506 (1890), silence when there is a duty to speak is as expressive as speech; Story, Eq Jur., i, § 385, cited in Gheran v. Kunj Behari, 9 A., 419 (1887); as to mere quiescence distinguished from a breach of duty to speak, see Basavantapa v. Banu, 9 B, 86 (1884), Shiddeshwar v Ramchandrarav, 6 B, 463 (1882) See 43 I. C, 908 Pandurang v. Narayan Rao, 44 I C, 547, is an instance of legal duty to speak

(2) Bigelow op. cit, 6th Ed, 646, 647. The subject of silence is illustrated by the case of Pickard v. Sears, 6 A. & E., 469 and Gregg v. Wells, 10 A & E, 90, in the latter of which cases Lord Denman said:—'A party who negligently (see Coventry v. Great Eastern R . Co, 11 Q B D, 776; Carr v. London [illegible] Co, L R., 10 C. P., 307), or [illegible] stands by and allows another to [illegible] on the faith and understanding [illegible] he can contradict, cannot after[illegible] that fact in an action against the person whom he has himself assisted in deceiving"

(3) Per Thompson, J, in Niven v Belknap, 2 Johns, 573 (Amer)

(4) Bigelow, op cit., 6th Ed, 653

(5) McConnel v. Mayer, 2 N.-W P. H. C. R, 315 (1870); where it was said that when inquiry was expressly made of the person, he was bound, under the circumstances, to have given definite and full information

(6) Bigelow, op cit, 6th Ed, 650, 651, Proctor v Bennis, 36 Ch D., 740 And see as to registration being notice of title, Chintaman Ramchandra v. Dareppa 14 B. 506 (1890); Agarchand Gumanchand v Rakhma Hanmant, 12 B, 678 (1888) Act IV of 1882, s 3 (Transfer of Property), edited by Shepherd and Brown 3rd Ed., pp 12—23

(7) Hurnoo Lall v Lal'a Chowdry, [illegible] Ind App, 153, 156 (1873).

([illegible] Ib: Dullah Sircar v Krishna Ko[illegible] 407, 409 (18[illegible]): [illegible] 3 B L R, 407, 409 [illegible] and kindred cases there was [illegible] speak.

[illegible], op cit, 6th Ed, 651, 652 property of the former (1) A mortgagee who causes the mortgaged property to [illegible] gag[illegible]

lier[illegible]

purchasers.(2) Where some of the mortgagees led a subsequent purchaser of a portion of the mortgage property and a puisne mortgagee of the remainder to believe that the whole property was unencumbered; held that they were precluded by the doctrine of estoppel from setting up their rights under the prior mortgage as against the subsequent transferees and the effect of the estoppel was to postpone them in respect of their share of the original debt to the puisne mortgagee. Held also that it was open to the Court to sever their interest from those of the mortgagees who were under no disability or disqualification and to make a decree in favour of the latter in proportion to their interest in the debt.(3) If a person stands by and allows a Court to sell his property he cannot afterwards come forward and ask for possession.(4) Where a plea of acquiescence or of standing by has been raised by a tenant in order to resist the claim of the landlord to eject him and it is proved that the tenant has been encouraged to spend money he can claim the protection given by a Court of equity. In the absence of such a plea of standing by or acquiescence a Court of fact may, if the circumstances of the case justify, come to the conclusion that the landlord had expressly or impliedly contracted to lease the land to a tenant whose reclamation of waste land has not been objected to for some years. This however is not a presumption of law but a presumption of fact which may or may not arise in a case.(5) If a person is allowed to expend money on that which is not his own, as where a stranger begins to build on land supposing it to be his own, and the rea[illegible] his mistake abstains from setting him right, and leaves him [illegible] Court will not afterwards allow the rea[illegible] In the case cited a plaintiff and the [illegible] land each worth more than a hundred rupees by means of an unregistered deed on the 4th March 1903, both believing that they had effected a valid transfer. Possession was taken by each party and the defendant began to erect a very costly building placing a wall thereof [illegible] land he had acquired in exchange. While the building was in progr[illegible] demanded and obtained Rs. 525 from the merchant on the [illegible] the plot he parted with [illegible] A[illegible] the completion of th[illegible] for recovery of his plot [illegible] defendant pleaded inter alia that he had acquired a valid titl[illegible] the plaintiff was estopped by [illegible]ct from recovering t[illegible] if the plaintiff

(1) Banee [illegible] oo Maun, 8 W. R., 67 ([illegible] C[illegible] K[illegible]

(2) Mahon[illegible] n v. Shib Sahai, 21 A., [illegible] 21 A., 496; [illegible] 4 C. W. [illegible]

(3) Sakhu[illegible] a Sarkar, 27 C. L. J. [illegible] W. N. 641. [illegible] (1901): 29

(4) Baldeo [illegible] din, 1 All. L. J., 402 [illegible] v. Nabin Chandra [illegible] 720 (1917); Deyamoy [illegible] Choudhuri, F. B., [illegible] transferable occup[illegible]

(5) Sowai Singh [illegible] in 44 I. C., 517. [illegible] F

(6) Ramsden v. [illegible] 1, Ap. 129, 140. Ca[illegible] mented in Lala Beni [illegible] to get a decree he must pay compensation as a condition of recovery. Held that the plaintiff was not estopped and that he was entitled to recover his plot owing to the absence of a registered deed of exchange and that the plaintiff must pay sufficient compensation before recovery under section 51 of the Transfer of Property Act.(1) A person seeking to create title to real property by estoppel must satisfy the Court that he had neither actual nor constructive notice of the title of the real owner, and had not before him any circumstances which could have put him on reasonable eqnuiry to find out the truth. The Evidence Act affords no definition of estoppel to dispense with the necessity of the purchaser making a reasonable enquiry apart from section 41 of the Transfer of Property Act.(2) But there is no estoppel when the party was not acting under any mistaken belief.(3) An instance of an estoppel by omission occurs when a mortgagee, bringing the property to sale in execution of a money-decree without giving the purchaser notice of his incumbrance, will be estopped from subsequently enforcing the lien of which he has given no notice Having by his conduct led the purchaser to believe that the property was offered for sale free of encumbrances and to pay full value for it, he cannot as against the latter be heard to deny that the sale took place free of encumbrances.(4) In a case in the Madras High Court it was held that while a person who does not raise an objection to an erroneous statement in a proclamation of sale which he ought to have raised is estopped from pleading an irregularity due to such statement, the rule of estoppel does not apply to a judgment-debtor who is unaware of the error in it, and that where a judgment-debtor's omission to object was due to a mistake of fact as to the property intended to

---

(1) Ramanathan Chetty v Ranganathan Chetty, 40 M., 1134.

(2) Venkatarama Aiyyar v. Venkatarama Aiyar, 50 I C, 969

(3) Paddu v. Mahabir Prasad, 53 I. C, 683

(4) Dullab Sircar v Krishna Kumar, 3 B. L R., A. C, 407; 12 W. R., 303 (1869); McConnell v. Mayer, 2 N-W. P. H. C. R, 315 (1870); Doolee Chund v. Oomda Begum, 24 W. R., 263 (1875), Tukaram Atmaram v. Ramchandra Budharam, 1 B, 314 (1876), Tinnappa v Murugappa, 7 M, 107 (1883); Nursing Narain v. Raghoobur Singh, 10 C, 609 (1884); Agarchand Gumanchand v. Rakhma Hanmant, 12 B, 678 (1888); Jaganatha v. Ganga Reddi, 15 M, 303 (1892); Kasturi v. Venkatachalpathi, 15 M, 412 (1892); the last case distinguishes Banwari Das v. Muhamad Mashiat, 9 A, 690 (1887); in which (at p. 702), and in Gheran v. Kunj Behari, 9 A, 413 (1887), it was pointed out that it cannot be said that one person solely by bidding at an auction-sale encourages another person (see Civ. Pro. Code, O. XXI, r. 66, 2nd Ed, p 978) to buy. As to legal representatives being bound by an execution-sale, see Natha Hari v. Jamne, 8 Bom H C. R, A. C., 37 (1871). It must always be shown that the circumstances of the case are such as bring it within the purview of the section: Solano v. Lalla Ram, 7 C. L. R., 481 (1880). An estoppel may also arise where the mortgagee permits the property to be sold by private sale; Munnoo Lall v. Lalla Choonee, 11 A, 144 (1873). In the case of Dhondo Balkrishna v. Raoji, 20 B, 290 (1895); in which Dullab v. Krishna, supra, was cited, it was held that there was no estoppel, registration (except in a case of fraudulent concealment) being notice according to the settled course of the previous Bombay decisions For a case of a somewhat converse character to that in text, see Byjonath Sahoy v. Doohun Biswanath, 24 W. R., 83 (1875). Where mortgaged property is sold in execution of a decree in a suit brought upon the mortgage, the interest of the mortgagee at whose instance the sale is made is held to pass to the purchaser, and the mortgagee is estopped from disputing that such is the effect of the sale: Kheoraj Jusrup v Lingaya, 5 B, 82 (1873), Seshgin Shankbhoy v. Salvador Vas, 5 B, 5 (1873); Shaik Abdulla v Haji Abdulla, 5 B, 8 (1883); see Narsidas Jitram v Joglekar, 4 B, 57; and cases there cited: Ramanath Doss v. Bolaram Phookun, 7 C., 677; Hari v. Lakshman, 5 B, 614 (1881). Where a person claimed as his own, property attached in execution of a decree against another person and his claim being rejected without enquiry, purchased the property at the sale, it was held that his so purchasing did not estop him from asserting as against a mortgagee prior to the sale that the property was his independently of the sale: Hanuman Dat v. Assadalu, 7 N-W P. Rep., 145

be sold he was not estopped. (1) And where a person had purchased bonâ fide and for value on the faith of a preceding transfer which a Bank, being deceived by personation, had permitted, it was held, that the Bank was estopped from treating the transfer to him as a nullity. (2) The estoppel against a mortgagee in favour of subsequent encumbrancers is dealt with by section 78 of the Transfer of Property Act. Where two persons embark, upon a joint adventure for the purpose of extinguishing a prior mortgage and taking a first charge on the property, it is the legal duty of each to inform his co-mortgagee within a reasonable time that he had still an outstanding claim under the prior mortgage, and the omission to give the information amounts to such an omission as is contemplated by this section, that is an omission operating as an estoppel. (3)

A person who purports to deal [illegible] in favour of a stranger, is estopped, if the p[illegible] that he had no previous title to con[illegible] to property grants it by conveyance which in fact would carry the legal estate and he subsequently acquires an interest sufficient to satisfy the grant the estate instantly passes. (5) If a person having right to a property takes no steps towards asserting his right against the person in possession, but leaves that person so in possession with all the indicia of ownership, the former cannot afterwards assert his right against the vendee of the person in possession who takes without notice of his claim. (6) Section 41 of the Transfer of Property Act applying the general principle of estoppel deals with such transfers of property by ostensible owners. (7)

Connected with this subject are estoppels arising from benami transactions, which have long been recognised and given effect to by Courts in India. Assuming that the transaction is of a benami character, as to which strict proof is required, the general rule, in the absence of any statutory limitation (8), is to give effect to the real title and to allow the truth to be shown. The law of benami is merely a deduction from the Equitable doctrine of resulting trusts and therefore the real owner may establish the trust against the benamidar or set it up as a defence to a suit by the benamidar, if the latter attempts to enforce his apparent title against the beneficial owner. Similarly creditors of the real owner may have recourse to the benami property; but if creditors of the benamidar seize the property, the real owner is entitled to have the property released. (9) But a third party will not be allowed to suffer by the voluntary

---

(1) Raja of Kalahasti v Maharaja of Venkatagiri, 38 M., 387 (1915), see Basanta Kumari Guha v Ramkanai Sen, 13 C L J., 192 (1912)

(2) Bank of England v. Cutler (1907), 1 K. B., 889; and as to effect of acquiescence under a mistaken belief see Goura Chandra v. Secretary of State, 9 C W. N., 553 and supra, note 1

(3) Pandurang v. Narayan Rao, 44 I C., 547.

(4) Moonshee Amir v. Syed Ali, 5 W. R., 289 (1866); see s 43 of the Transfer of Property Act, explained in Syed Nurul v Sheo Sahai, 19 I. A., 227 (1892) See next note

(5) Tilakdhari Lal v. Khedan Lal, 25 C. W. N., 49, 57 P. C.

(6) Mohesh Chunder v Issur Chunder, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 266 (1886); citing Boyson v Coles, 6 M. & S., 23; Dyer v. Pearson, 3 B & C., 42; Howard v. Hudson, 1 E. & B., 1; Pickard v Sears, supra: Freeman v. Cooke, supra: Swan v. N B Australasian Co, supra.

(7) See the Act edited by Shephard and Brown and cases there cited. In Jaram v. Narayan, 5 Bom L R., 652 (19[illegible]), a mortgagor was held to be estopped from questioning his own right to mortgage. See also Narayan Kandu v Kaigunda 14 B., 407.

(8) See Civ. Pro Code, Part II, s. 66 2nd Ed., p 322; s. 36 of Act XI of 1859, s. 184 of Act XIX of 1873. See now N.-W. P. Act III of 1901 [where immovable property has been sold in execution of a decree or for arrears of Government revenue, a stranger will not be allowed to claim the property on the ground that the certified purchaser merely purchased benami on his account, and any suit brought on such an allegation will be dismissed with costs]

(9) See Mayne's Hindu Law, §§ 4[illegible]—407, ib, 8th Ed. ss 449—4[illegible] and cases there cited.

acts of owners of property. And it is not to be supposed that, because the existence of benami transactions has been judicially recognized, parties are at liberty to use the system to the injury of others, whether by direct fraud, or by case the real nature of the transaction cannot be shown, and the real owner will be estopped from setting up the secret trust in his own favour against a title acquired without notice from the person who holds benami for him. (3) The ground of the rule is obvious: it would be monstrous if it were allowed that a man should invest another with the apparent ownership of his property, and then after that other has raised money upon the property, resume it in certain immovable in favour of some vendees in favour of a third party who purchases the property for consideration upon representathe manager of an unencumbered estate it was purchased benami on behalf of the zemindar of the estate, but no transfer to the benamidar was made. Thereafter the benamidar, on the instruction of the zemindar transferred the

(1) Rakhaldoss Moduck v Bindoo Bashinee, 1 Marsh, 293, 295 (1863).

(2) See Luchman Chunder v Kali Churn, 19 W. R, 292 (1873). distinguished in Sarat Chunder v. Gopal Chunder, 19 I A, 209—211 (1892) And see Chunder Koomar v Hurbuns Sahai, 19 C, 137 (1888); Sarat Chunder v. Gopal Chunder, 16 C, 148 (1888); but there is no estoppel against the purchaser at a sale held in execution of a decree obtained against a person who would by his conduct be precluded from denying the title of third parties who have dealt with his benamidar.

(3) Ramcoomar Koondoo v McQueen, 11 B L R, P. C., 46, 54 (1873); Rakhaldoss Moduck v Bindoo Bashinee, supra; Luchman Chunder v. Kali Churn, supra;

C, 173 (1888); Smith v Mokhum Mahtoom, 18 W. R, 526 (1872); Ram Mohinee v. Pran Koomaree, 3 W R., 87 (1865); Sarat Chunder v Gopal Chunder, 19 I. A., 203 (1892), cf. Sarat Chunder v. Gopal Chunder, 16 C, 148 (1888); where it was held that the mere fact of a benami transfer did not amount to a binding representation: the contest must moreover be between the true owner of the property and a person claiming under his benamidar: Bashi Chunder v. Enayet Ali, 20 C, 236 (1892); in Muhammad Khan v. Muhammad Ibrahim, 1 All. L. J., 214 (1904), the Court, referring to the principal case held that the party had no constructive notice of the real title See Radha Madhab Paikara v. Kalpataru Ray, 17 C. L. J., 209 (1913) (innocent purchase in sale on collusive mortgage by benamidar); Baburam v. Madhab, 40 C., 565 (1913); Nisakar Das v. Bairagi Samal, 19 C. L. J., 330 (1914); Magu Brahma v. Bholi Das, 19 C. L. J., 352 (1914)

(4) Rakhaldoss Moduck v Bindoo Bashinee, 1 Marsh. 293, 294 (1863).

(5) Tulshi Ram v Mutsaddi Lal, 2 All. L. J, 97 (1904).

thereby becoming liable for the revenue assessed upon the property.(1) Third parties, however, dealing with a benamidar will be affected by notice, actual or constructive, of the real title (2), for if they are cognisant of the real facts they can in no way have been misled. Constructive notice will be imputed to a person who, for the purpose of avoiding notice, designedly refrains from enquiry, which by the exercise of ordinary intelligence would lead to a knowledge of the facts.(3) And where a state of things exists which could not legally exist unless the property was subject to a burden, a purchaser has notice of that burden.(4) Thus if a third party is in possession, a purchaser is put on enquiry as to his interest. (5)

So far reference has been made to the rule that the Courts will not enforce the rights of a real owner where they would operate to defraud innocent persons. "A still stronger case is that in which property has been placed in a false name, for the express purpose of shielding it from creditors. As against them, of course, transaction is wholly invalid. But a very common form of proceeding is for the real owner to sue the benamidar, or to resist an action by the benamidar, alleging, or the evidence making out, that the sale was a merely colourable one, made for the express purpose of defrauding creditors. In other words, the party admits that he has apparently transferred his property to another to ... the object ... that ... efuse ... luct; dismissing the plaint when the suit was brought by the real owner to get back possession of his property (6), and refusing to listen to the defence, when he set it up in opposition to the persons whom he had invested with the legal title. (7) And persons who take under the real owner, whether as heirs or as purchasers, were treated in exactly the same manner as he was. (8) On the other hand, a contrary doctrine was laid down in more recent cases." (9)

---

(1) Raja of Deo v Abdullah, 45 C., 909; 45 I. A., 97 (P. C.)

(2) Ramcoomar Koondoo v McQueen, 11 B L. R., P. C., 46, 54 (1872); and cases cited in note 3 and in Mayne's Hindu Law, 8th Ed, s. 444

(3) Radha Madhab Paikara v. Kalpataru Ray, 17 C. L. J., 209 (1914).

(4) Magu Brahma v. Bholi Das, 19 C. L. J., 352 (1914); Allen v Seckham, 11 Ch. D, 790 (1879).

(5) Mancharji v. Kongseoo, 6 B. H. C. R, 59 (O. C J.) (1869).

(6) Ramindur Deo v. Roopnarain Ghose, 2 S. D. A, Select Cases, 149 (1814); Roushun Khatoon v. Collector of Mymensingh, S. D. A (1846), 120; Brimho Mye v. Ram Dulab, S D. A. (1849), 276; Rajah Rajnarain v. Juggunath Pershad, S. D A. (1851), 774; Koonjee Singh v. Jankee Singh, S. D. A. (1852), 838; ... actually defrauded or not is immaterial]; Roy Rashbeharee v. Roy Gouree, 4 W. R., 72 (1865); Rowshun Bibee v. Shaikh Kureem, 4 W. R, 12 (1865); Bhowanee Pershad v. Oheedun, 5 W. R., 177 (1866); Aloksoondry Goopto v. Horo Lal, 6 W. R. 287 (1866); Keshab Chunder v. Vyasmoni Dossia, 7 W. R., 118 (1867); Kaleenath Kur v. Doyal Kristo, 13 W. R, 87 (1870). [Plaintiff not permitted to plead fraud of his father from whom he derived title] On the other hand see Ram Surun v Pran Peary, 13 Moo. I. A, 551 (1870), s. c. in lower Court, 1 W. R, 156 (1864). In this case the distinction was taken which is to be found in the latter cases ... that no innocent party had been affected by the admission or representation. See also Brij Mohun v. Ram Nursingh, 4 S. D. A., Select Cases, 435 (1829). [cf. Nawab Azimut v Hurdwaree Mull, 13 Moo. I. A., 402 (1870); Srimati Lakhimoni v. Mohendranath Dutt, 4 B L. R., ... 29 (1869)].

(7) Obhoychurn Ghattuck v Treelochun Chatterjee, S. D. A. (1859), 1639; Ram Lall v. Kishen Chunder, S. D. A. (1859), 439; [cf. Ramanugra Narain v Mahasundar Kunwar, 12 B. L. R., 433, 435 (1873)].

(8) Lukhee Narain v Taramoney Dossee, 3 W. R., 92 (1865); Kaleenath Kur v. Doyalkristo Deb, 13 W. R. 87 (1870).

(9) Mayne's Hindu Law, 8th Ed, s. 445, citing most of the above cases and

It is in the first case clear that where two persons have combined to commit a fraud upon a third, the transaction is wholly void as between those persons and the party defrauded.(1) It has, however, been a question of some difficulty as to how far the parties may, as between themselves, show the truth of the transaction Whatever doubt there may be as to the plaintiff's right to avoid his own deed by setting up his own fraudulent act, it is open to the defendant to defend his possession by showing that the real transaction between himself and the plaintiff was to defraud, whether a third party or the defendant's creditors generally. (2) Whether a plaintiff shall be so allowed to plead his fraud will depend upon the question whether the fraud has been carried beyond the stage of mere intention If the fraudulent purpose has been wholly or partially carried into effect, the real owner will not be permitted to succeed in a suit instituted by him for recovery of the property. But, where the fraud has not been carried into execution he may succeed.(3) It has been held by the Privy Council that where a benami conveyance of land is made for the purpose of fraudulently defeating the claim of an equitable mortgagee, and the claim of the latter is not defeated, the grantor can recover back the land from the grantee, and that the benami conveyance being in such circumstances an inoperative instrument, it is unnecessary to bring an action to set it aside.(4) Where the ostensible transferee never had any exclusive possession of the property in question, which was for a great many years treated as part of the joint family property, and which was enjoyed by the joint family (of which the plaintiff was the sole surviving member) for more than twelve years before see the following cases· Sreemutty Debia v. Bimola Sonduree, 21 W R, 422 (1874), [overruling Kaleenath Kur v Doyal Kristo, 13 W R, 87 (1870), supra also overruled by Sham Lall v. Amarendro Nath, 22 C, 400 (1896)], followed in Gopeenath Naik v Jadoo Ghose, 23 W R, 42 (1874), Bykunt Nath v. Goboollah Sikdar, 24 W R, 391 (1875) See also Paran Singh v Lalji Mal, 1 A, 403 (1877), Sreenath Roy v Bindoo Bashinee, 20 W R, 112 (1873); Mussamut Phool v Gour Sarun, 18 W. R., 485 (1872); Mukim Mullick v. Ramjan Sirdar, 9 C L. R, 64 (1881) And see Mahadaji Gopal v Vithal Ballal, 7 B, 78 (1881)

---

[illegible]

Gopi Wasudev v. Markande Narayan, 3 B, 30, 33 (1878)

(2) Babaji v Krishna, 18 B, 372 (1893), followed in Preonath Koer v. Kazi Mahomed Shazad (1903), 8 C. W. N., 620

(3) Jadu Nath v Rup Lal, 10 C. W. N, 650 (1906), in which all the authorities are reviewed, Goberdhan Singh v. Ritu Roy, 23 C, 962 (1896); Kali Charan v Rasik Lall, 23 C., 26n (1894); Chenvirappa v. Putappa, 11 B, 708 (1887); Sham Lall v Amarendro Nath, 23 C., 460 (1895); Banku Behary v. Raj Kumar, 4 C. W. N., 289 (1899); 27 C., 231; Govinda Kuar v Lala Kishun, 28 C., 370 (1900), Mayne's Hindu Law, § 405, and cases there and in the preceding decisions cited The rule, however, appears to be stricter in the Madras High Court Yasamati Krishnayya v Chundra Pappayya, 20 M, 326, 330 (1897); Rangammal v Venkatachari, 20 M, 323 (1896); Varadajulu Naidu v Srinivasalu Naidu, 20 M., 333, 338 (1897) [it is very doubtful whether in a case in which the maxim in pari delicto would otherwise apply any exception arises by reason that the illegal purpose has not been carried out]. See, however, as to these cases: Jadu Nath v. Rup Lall, 10 C. W. N., 650, at p. 661 (1906) In Honapa v. Narsapa, 23 B., 406 (1898), Farran, C. J, at p 409, was of opinion that the law applicable was that laid down in Yasamati Krishnaya v. Chundra Pappayya, supra; but treats Calcutta decisions as being to same effect, and Fulton, J., stated, p. 413, that when the fraud was not completed it might well be contended that as the collusive transaction had not really frustrated justice, the original owner retained a good claim to the property. See also May on Fraudulent and Voluntary Dispositions of Property, 2nd Ed, 470—472; as to fictitious sales made to evade process for recovery of arrears of revenue, see Ram Persad v. Shiva Persad, 1 N.-W. P. Rep., 71, and see Petherpermal Chetty v. Muniandy Servai (infra).

(4) Petherpermal Chetty v. Muniandy Servai, P C. (1908); Times L. R., v. 24, p. 462.

suit ; it was held that the plaintiff was entitled to have a declaration of his right to the property and to confirmation of his possession. (1) And in a case in the Calcutta High Court where property had been placed benami with a view to defrauding a creditor and this purpose had been achieved, it was held that the execution-creditor was entitled to defeat a suit brought by the judgment-debtor [illegible] the purchase [illegible]

Estoppel by conduct may arise in the case of family arrangements; the decisions as to which extend not merely to cases in which arrangements are made between members of a family for the preservation of its peace but to cases in which arrangements are made between them for the preservation of its property.(4) So where infants had, since attaining their majority, by their conduct adopted the acts of their mother and guardian and agreed to treat the will of a testator as valid, it was held that by their acquiescence in the disposition of the property they were estopped from disputing the provisions of the will.(5) Not only may there be an estoppel giving effect to a family arrangement, but a party may by his conduct be estopped from insisting upon a family arrangement.(6) In, however, a case in the Calcutta High Court where a Hindu mother bequeathed to a daughter property to which a son was entitled adding a proviso that if male children were born to him they should inherit, and he had acquiesced in this disposition, it was held that the will was invalid, as the mother had no interest to bequeath, and also that the bequest to unborn grandsons was ineffectual, and that the son's acquiescence did not in the circumstances suffice to raise an estoppel and that a grandson and a purchaser from him were not estopped.(7)

An estoppel may, in certain cases, aris[illegible] has been acted upon, and the person adopted has, [illegible] change his original situation. So where [illegible] in the adoption of the plaintiff by the defendant's brother, and by many a[illegible] signified to the plaintiff and to his adopting father the defendant's complete acquiescence in the adoption, and thereby encouraged the plaintiff, who was an adult, to assent to such adoption, and allowed the adopting father to die in the belief that the adoption was valid, and finally concurred in the performance by the plaintiff, of the funeral ceremonies, it was held that the defendant was estopped from disputing the validity of the adoption.(8) Where the defendant who challenged the adoption was the grandson of a party to the compromise under which the adoption was made and under which he received a material benefit and who was present and consenting when the ceremonies were performed, the defendant was held to be estopped from disputing the adoption

(1) Govinda Kuar v. Lala Kishun, 28 C., 370 (1900).

(2) Nisakar Das v. Bairagi Samal, 19 C. L. J., 330 (1914) not following Hari v. Ramchandra, 31 B., 61 (1906).

(3) Obhoy Churn v. Nobin Chunder, 23 W. R., 95 (1874), Soroop Chunder v. Troylokhonath Roy, 9 W. R., 230 (1868).

(4) Williams v. Williams, L. R., 2 Ch. Ap., 294, 304; cited in Lakshmibai v. Ganput, 5 Bom. H. C. R., 128 (1868). See 50 I. C., 812.

(5) Lakshmibai v. Ganput, 5 Bom. H. C. R., 128 (1868). See also Sia Dasi v. Gur Sahai 3 A., 362 (1880); Rajender Narain v. Bijai Govind, 2 Moo. I. A., 233, 234 (1839); Damudar Dass v. Mahiram Pardah, 13 C. L. R., 96 (1883).

(6) Janaki Ammal v. Kamalathammal, 7 Mad. H. C. R., 263 (1873).

(7) Durga Das Khan v. Ishan Chandra Dey, 44 C., 145 (1917); see Board v. Board, 9 Q. B., 48 (1873) (acceptance under a will) Rup Chand Ghose v. Sarbessur Chandar, 3 C. L. J., 629 (1906); Amulya Ratan Sircar v. Tarini Nath Day 42 C., 254 (1915) (heir at law).

(8) Sadashiv Moreshvar v. Hari Moreshvar, 11 Bom. H. C. R., 190 (1874); Chintu v. Dhonda, ib., 192 note (1873); Ravji Vinayakrav v. Lakshmibai 11 B., 381 (1887); Chitko v. Janaki, 11 Bom. H. C. R., 199 (1874); Kannammal v. Virasami, 15 M., 486 (1892); see also Tayammaul v. Sashachalla 10 Moo. I. A., 429 (1865). See also next note.

and was bound by his grandfather's action (1) But in order that estoppel by conduct may raise an invalid adoption to the level of a valid adoption, there part of the adopting must then become

(2) In a case in the Madras High Court it was held that an invalid adoption does not per se change the adoptee's rights in his natural family, and that in such a case no estoppel arises unless as a consequence the position of the party setting up the estoppel

Madras case(4), n an adoption and thereby,

and by the subsequent conduct of the adopter, the person adopted is induced to abstain from claiming a share in the inheritance of his natural family, so as to prevent a person claiming through the adopter from impugning the validity of the adoption. But the construction which was placed by this decision on the word "intentionally" in section 115 was overruled by the Privy Council in Sarat Chunder Dey v. Gopal Chunder Laha, in which case their Lordships said of the Madras case cited that they would have "great difficulty in holding as the High Court did, that a series of acts by which an adoption is professedly made and subsequently recognised constitute a representation in law only, and not of fact." (5) In a case in the Punjab High Court, where a second son had been adopted in the lifetime of the first, and the first had permitted him to share the inheritance, it was held that the first adoped son and his representatives were not estopped from denying the validity of the second adoption though they would not have been allowed to deny the fact of such adoption. (6) In this case, the decision in Sarat Chunder Dey v. Gopal Counder Laha was an adoption, brought by the adoptive mother against her adopted son, it was found that the plaintiff had represented that she had authority to adopt, and this representation was acted on by the defendant, and that the ceremony of adoption was carried out on the faith of this representation; that the marriage of the defendant was likewise on the strength of it celebrated, and that the defendant performed the Sradh ceremony of his adoptive father, and had been obliged to defend a suit brought against him by an alleged reversioner to the estate of his adoptive father, it was held by the Allahabad High Court that a suit for a declaration that the

And this decision has been upheld estoppel was personal and would not bind anyone claiming by an independent title.(8) As to estoppel arising by reason of the recognition by one member of a joint Hindu family of

(1) Moman v. Mussamat Dhanni, 1 Lahore, 31.

(2) Parvatibayamma v. Ramakrishna, 18 M., 145 (1894), following Gopalayyan v. Raghupati Ayyan 7 Mad H. C. R., 250 (1873); Kuverji v. Babai, 19 Bom., 374 (1894). For cases in which it was held there was no estoppel, see Gurulingaswami v. Ramalakshmamma, 18 M., 53 (1894), Santappayya v. Rangappayya, 18 M., 397 (1894); Yashvant Puttu v. Radhabai, 14 B., 312 (1889); and see Tarini Charan v. Saroda Sundari, 3 B. L. R., 145 (1889); Gurulingaswami v. Ramalakshmamma 18 M., 53, 58 (1894).

(3) Vaithilingam Mudali v. Natesa Mudali, 37 M., 529 (1914).

(4) Eranjoli Vishnu v. Eranjoli Krishnan, 7 M., 3 (1883).

(5) L. R., 19 I. A., 203, 218 (1892); as to estoppel on a point of law see Gopee Lall v. Chandraollee Buhoojee, 11 B. L. R., 391, 395 (1872).

(6) Tek Chand v. Musst. Gopal Devi (1912); 47 P. R., No. 46, p. 171.

(7) Dharam Kunwar v. Balwant Singh (1908), 30 All., 549.

(8) Rani Dharam Kunwar v. Balwant Singh, P. C. (1912); 39 I. A., 143; 34 A., 399.

another as being also a member(1), or by reason of plaintiff treating defendant as being in certain relationship to a common ancestor (2), see the undermentioned cases.

In the last mentioned case it was pointed out that, though a course of conduct may not amount to an estoppel in point of law it may nevertheless be strong evidence and throw upon the party, whose conduct is in question, a heavy burden of proof.

Where it had been understood by the parties for some time that a certain mortgage had been converted into a sale, and that the property had passed to the defendant by purchase, it was held that mere admissions that it had been converted into a sale did not operate as an estoppel or prevent the mortgagor from redeeming the property. (3) Where two members of a joint Hindu family had held out another as the manager of the estate so as to induce outsiders dealing with him to believe that he had authority to mortgage the whole interest in the property, those members were estopped from contending that the mortgages effected by that other were not binding on their shares, if that other did as a matter of fact, borrow the money for the benefit of the family.(4) An estoppel may arise in the case of inconsistent positions. So where a Hindu reversioner compromised with the widow and benefited by such compromise, he was held estopped from claiming the estate when the succession opened (5) So also a reversioner who has voluntarily signed the deed executed by a widow cannot legally claim in opposition thereto.(6) So in the case last cited, where some of the sons of a Hindu widow who had only a daughter's ... and thus repre- ... al necessity; ... representations ... when dealing with a part ... the representations of fact, and were ... mortgage to which they were ... versioner relinquished his rights to a portion of the inheritance in favour of the widow in consideration of receiving a relinquishment from the widow of all her interest in the remaining portion of the inheritance. Held, that neither the reversioner nor any person claiming through him could set up that the relinquishment was not binding on him and did not operate on the portion of the inheritance relinquished in favour of the widow (7) Where a suit to enforce a security-bond filed in a Privy Council appeal was dismissed on the grounds (a) that the necessary parties had not been impleaded and (b) that the claim was barred by section 47 of the Civil Procedure Code and, an application for execution to enforce the said security being made, the decree-holder was met with the plea that the order passed before the institution of the above suit in a previous execution proceeding referring him to seek his remedy by suit operated as a bar to a fresh application for execution. Held that the order passed in the suit had the effect of nullifying the previous order passed in the execution proceeding, and that a party should not be allowed to take up a position inconsistent with that on which he had succeeded in

(1) Lala Muddun v. Khikhinda Koer, 18 C., 341 (1890).

(2) Agravial Singh v. Foujdar Singh, 8 C. L. R., 346 (1880).

(3) Abdul Rahim v. Madhavrao Apaji, 14 B., 78 (1889).

(4) Krishnaji v. Moro, 15 B., 32 (1890); as to standing by during alienation by father, see Surab Narain v. Sheo Gobind, 11 B. L. R., App., 29 (1873), as to acquiescence of Hindu minor after attaining majority, see Gopalsami v. Muddomutty, 14 B. L. R., 32 (1874)

(5) Lala Kanahi Lal v. Lala Pr... Lal, 2 C. W. N., 914 (P. C.) In Ayy... v. Karuppan Chetty, 41 M., 365 the person releasing was held not estopped.

(6) Shib Chandra Kar v. Debi..., 29 C. L. J., 123: s. c., 48 I. C., 78

(7) Jogendra Nath Banya v. Mahendra Chora, 47 I. C., 978.

defeating a claim in a previous proceeding brought to enforce it.(1) One out of two plaintiffs joined in an application with the defendant to the Court for the case to be referred to arbitration. On the next day G. R. the other plaintiff made an oral application before the Court to the effect that he accepted the arbitration. The arbitration lasted for over a year and G. R. conducted the proceedings throughout on behalf of the plaintiffs. An award was duly filed but G. R. objected to it on the ground that he had not signed the original possession, order, or disposition under such circumstances as to enable him by means of them to obtain false credit, the owner who has permitted him to obtain that false credit must suffer the penalty of losing his goods for the benefit of those who have given the credit.(3) Where an offer of sale was made to a pre-emptor, and he refused to avail himself of it, and consented to a sale to a stranger, it was held that, after a sale to a stranger, he could not set up his right of pre-emption.(4) See for the effect of an admission as to the rate of interest in an account stated by a banker, case below.(5) The service of notice of foreclosure on the occupant of mortgaged property (a party who claimed as purchaser from the mortgagor, but who had not established his title) does deem the mort-is heirs are not

ay be estopped

from objecting to the terms of a potta where he has accepted pottas containing similar terms for a series of years previously in respect of the same holding and has by his conduct led the landlord to suppose that the potta would not be objecte

of cert

to the act u

a party to a suit agreed to a decree in favour of his opponent on certain conditions which were not afterwards fulfilled and the compromise fell through, the admissions made by him for the purpose of compromising the litigation do not amount to a waiver of his right. Nor do they prevent the parties' representative from pleading the true state of facts in any other litigation (10) Where a mortgagee on enquiry by an intending vendee gives him the exact amount due on his mortgage and the latter acts on this information and retains that amount out of the purchase money for paying off the mortgage, the mortgagee is estopped from recovering any larger amount from the vendee (11) Where a mortgagee takes a mortgage from a person in possession and obtains possession from him he is not permitted to question the mortgagor's title (12) A mortgagee

---

(1) Basti Begum v Sajjad Mirza, 21 O C, 188; 47 I C, 558.

(2) Gauri Shanker v Ganga Ram, 77 P. R, 1919; 52 I C, 859.

(3) Borkan v. Miller, 10 C. L R, 591 (1882).

(4) Braja Kishor v Kirti Chandra, 7 B. L. R, 10 (1871).

(5) Makundi Kuar v. Balkishen Das, 3 A, 528 (1880).

(6) Prannath Roy v. Rookhea Begum, 7 Moo I. A, 323, 394 (1859).

(7) Mahomed Mudun v. Khodezunnissa, 2 W R, 181 (1865)

(8) Sree Sankarachari v Varada Pillai, 27 M, 332 (1903).

(9) Chauhan v Behari Lal, 52 I C, 513.

(10) Tikaya Ram v Wassu Miser, 50 I. C., 564

(11) Secretary Chief Khalsa Dewan v Punjab National Bank, 141 P R, 1919.

(12) Surendra Nath Mitra v Khitendra Mohan Mitra, 29 C L J, 434, s. c, 52 I C., 59.

brought a suit for possession of the mortgaged property against a person whom he treated as a successor of the original mortgagor and obtained a decree. Subsequently when the said representative of the mortgagor sued the mortgagee for redemption of the mortgage, the mortgagee disputed his right to represent the original mortgagor. Held that the mortgagee was estopped from raising the plea.(1)

As already observed, it makes no difference what the form is which the representation takes or w … and further that in India there is no technica … written matter being only … which provision is made b … to note some of the general principles touching estoppels in writing and the cases decided thereon.(3) The intention of the deed as appearing on the face of it must be regarded. A recital will be binding if it was a bargain on the faith of which the parties acted.(4) The deeds and contracts of the people of India ought (the Privy Council have said) to be liberally construed. The form of expression, the literal sense, is not to be so much regarded as the real meaning of the parties which the transaction discloses.(5) A party will be precluded from … only where that other … atement contained … this effect cannot … d is not conclusive … y evidence as far … or explained(7) … an ancient rule as to estoppel by statements in a deed.(8) Those who rely upon a document as an estoppel, the nature of an estoppel being to exclude an inquiry by evidence into the truth, must clearly establish that it does amount to that which they assert (9) If the document is ambiguous, the construction of it may be aided by looking at the surrounding circumstances.(10) Where a plaintiff sued the defendant to recover a sum of money by attachment and sale of certain

(1) Govind v. Chokhe, 49 I. C, 356.

(2) v. ante, p. 830. As to certain classes of documents which (amongst others) may raise an estoppel, see Caspersz, op cit, 4th Ed, s. 377—385; invoices Holding v. Elliot, 5 H. & N, 117, document, representing goods, such as warehouse receipts and delivery orders:—Ganges Manufacturing Co v. Sourujmul, 5 C., 689 (1880); Knight v. Wiffen, L R., 5 Q. B, 660; Coventry v. The Great Eastern Ry. Co, L R., 11 Q. B. D., 776; Seton v. Lafone, L. R., 19 Q. B D, 68; Farmloo v. Bain, L. R., 1 C. P. D, 445; railway receipts: G. I. P. Railway Co. v. Hanmandas Ramkison, 14 B., 57 (1899); bills of lading: Lishman v. Christie, 19 Q B. D, 333, 340; Grant v. Norway, 10 C. B, 665; Cox v. Bruce, 18 Q. B. D, 147; difference note: Sindh, etc, Bank v. Mudoosoodun Chowdhry, Bourke, O. C., 322 (1865). See as to accounts and awards, Caspersz, op. cit., 4th Ed, ss. 386—399.

(3) See Caspersz, op. cit, 4th Ed., Ch xiv, where the Indian cases will be found collected.

(4) South-Eastern Railway Co v. Wharton, 6 H. & N, 520, 526.

(5) Hanooman Persaud v. Musst. Babooee, Moo I. A., 411 (1856): per Knight Bruce, L J, and see Ramlall Set v. Kanai Lall, 12 C, 578 (1886); Sri ... Singh Dugar v. Prodyot Kumar, P C., 44 C., 527 (1917): 44 I. A., 1; Maharaj Pershad v. Moheshwar Nath Sahai, 17 I. A., 11 (1889); Kasturchand Lakhmaji v. Jakhia Padia, 40 B, 74 (1916)

(6) Param Singh v. Lalji Mall 1 A. 403, 410 See this case considered and on certain points dissented from in Cheerirappa v. Puttappa, 11 B, 708 (1887).

(7) See s. 92, Prov. (1), ante, and cases there cited; and Ram Surun v. Pran Peare, 13 Moo. I. A, 551, 559 (1870); Zamindar Serimatu v. Viraffa Chetti, 2 Mad H. C. R., 174 (1864).

(8) Tweedie v. Poorno Chunder, 8 W. R., 125 (1867). Mamsa v. Sallamme, 44 I. C., 609.

(9) Low v. Bouverie, L R, 1891, 3 Ch. 113, 106.

(10) Rani Mewa v. Rani Hulas, 11 B. L. R, 312 (1874). See Sita Ram v. Ali Baksh, 3 A., 805 (1881), where the estoppel was held to have been clearly made out.

property in the legal possession of the defendant; and both the plaintiff and the defendant professed to receive their title by virtue of a document which the Court found was invalid according to Mahommedan law; it was held that the defendant was not estopped from denying its validity, and the Court was not bound to hold that the document, as between the parties, was valid. The defendant being in possession, it was for the plaintiff to establish her right to attach and sell the property by showing superior title in herself, whatever might be the rights of the defendant (1) In a case in the Calcutta High Court it [illegible] bequeathed, [illegible] ase in a will [illegible] was said that the Court was not prepared to accept as an inviolable principle of law the rule that in every case of gift the doctrine of estoppel may be applied, and it was pointed out that in this instance the beginning of the heir-at-law's right and of the operation of the will were simultaneous (3)

A receipt signed by a party, like any other statement made by him and produced afterwards to affect him, is evidence but evidence only, and is not conclusive but capable of explanation.(4) It may, however, like any other statement, be conclusive evidence in favour of any person who may have been induced thereby to alter his condition.(5) Thus when in a registered deed of sale it was recited that the vendor had received payment in full and there was also an acknowledgment by the vendor to that effect, and the vendor parted with the title-deeds, it was held that she was estopped from claiming a lien for an unpaid balance of purchase-money against a mortgagee for value without notice (6) It has been an ancient practice among Hindus of indorsing payments on bonds (7) It is also very customary to stipulate that no payment will be recognised except " after causing the payment to be entered on the back of the bond, or after taking a receipt for the same." But such a stipulation is no estoppel, and the obligor of the bond may prove by other means that the debt, or a part of it, has been satisfied (8) The mere absence of an indorsement of payment on the back of a kistbundi cannot prevail against positive proof of payment, and evidence of such payment must be admitted(9); though, of course, in deciding whether the alleged payments were made, the omission of indorsements is a most important circumstance to be considered (10)

A recital in a deed or other instrument is in some cases conclusive, and in all cases evidence(11), as against the parties who make it and those who claim

---

(1) Ib and see s 92, Prov 6

(2) Kuzarbai v Mir Alam, 7 B, 170 (1883)

(3) Amulya Ratan Sircar v Tarini Nath Dey, 42 C, 254 (1915), see Durga Das Khan v Ishan Chandra Dey, 44 C, 145 (1917)

(4) Farrar v Hutchinson, 9 A & E, 641; a receipt is nothing more than a primâ facie acknowledgment that the money has been paid Skaife v Jackson, 3 B & C, 421; Graves v. Key, 3 B & Ad, 318; see s 91, ill (e), ante, and cases at pp 606, 607, ante On the other hand, while a receipt is only evidence of payment, a release annihilates the debt, Bowes v. Foster, 2 H & N, 779

(5) Graves v. Key, 3 B & A, 318, see Rice v. Rice, 2 Drewy, 73 (unpaid vendor); Shropshire Union, etc, Co v. R, L R, 7 E. & I., app, 496, 510 (the same); Bickerton v Walker, L. R, 31 Ch D 151, and Powell v Browne C. A (1907) Times L R, v 24, p 71, W N, 228 (mortgagor acknowledging receipt of mortgage-money estopped as against assignee of mortgage who has given full value)

(6) Tchilram Girdharidis v Kashibai (1908), 33 B, 53

(7) Narayan Undir v Motilal Ramdas 1 B 45 (1875)

(8) Kalee Das v Tara Chund, 8 W R 316 (1867) Narayan Undir v Motilal Ramdas 1 B, 45 (1875)

(9) Girdharee Singh v Lalloo Koonwur, 3 W R Misc, 23 (1865).

(10) Saskachellum Chetty v Gobindappa 5 Mad H C R, 451 (1870) Nager Mall v Azeemoollah, 1 N W P H C R, 146 (1869)

(11) See Sarkies v Prosonomoyee Dossee 6 C 794 (1881), Gour Monee v Krishna Chunder, 4 C, 397 (1878);

under them(1), and it is of more or less weight against them according to circumstances. It is a statement deliberately made by those parties, which, like any other statement, is always evidence against the persons who make it. But it is no more evidence against other persons than any other statement would be (2) A recital by one party of a state of facts on the faith of which the other party was induced to change his situation, as for instance by entering into a contract, is an estoppel in favour of the party whose position is thus altered.(3) Though the [illegible] authority to show that a party [illegible] the other party, not founded [illegible] dispute the facts admitted in the deed.(4) [illegible]

The question whether one of the parties to a fraud against third persons can show the truth as against the other has already been discussed in connection with the subject of benami transactions.(5) The rule of title by estoppel has been the subject of enactment in section 43 of Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882) and the 18th section of the Specific Relief Act (I of 1877) to which as also to the undermentioned cases reference should be made.(6) The mere fact of a person attesting a deed is no evidence in itself that he consented to it or knew its contents, that is, the mere attestation does not necessarily import concurrence, though it may be shown by other evidence that when he became an attesting witness he fully understood what the transaction was and that he was a concurrent party to it.(7) As to documents executed by pardanashin women, Hindus or Mahomedans, v. ante, section 111.(8) There is not necessarily any inconsistency in a party who has unsuccessfully tried to rescind an

---

Nimhoo Sahoo v Boodhoo Junmadar, 13 W R., 2 (1870) Tehilram v Kashibai (1908), 33 B, 53 [recitals in deeds of sale], Sikher Chand v Dulputty Singh, 5 C, 363, 375 (1879) [recitals of necessity for contracting debt], Sunkar Lall v Juddobuns Sahaye, 9 W. R, 285 (1868) [that money was borrowed for husband's shradh], Mahomed Hamidoolah v. Madhoo Soodun, 11 W. R., 298 (1869) [possession], Gopal v Narayan, 1 Bom H. C. R, 331 (1863) [separation]; Bheeknarain Singh v Necol Kooer, Marsh, 373 (1863) [Mooktearnamah]; Rao Kurun v. Mehtab Koonwar, 3 Agra, 150 (1868) [previous mortgage]; as to recitals in wills, see Nilmonee Chowdhry v. Zuheerunissa Khanum, 8 W. R., 371 (1867): Bomanjee Munchurjee v Rossain Abdoollah, 5 W. R., P C, 61, Lakshman Dada v Ram Chandra, 1 B, 511 (1877): Vasonji Morarji v Chanda Bibi, P. C, 37 A, 369 (1915).

(1) Banga Chandra Dhur Biswas v. Jagat Kishore, P. C., 44 C., 186 (1917): Brij Lal v Inda Kunwar, P. C, 36 A., 187 (1914) (recitals of legal necessity ordinarily inconclusive on mortgages or sales by Hindu widow) and see Khub Lal Singh v Ajodhya Misser, 43 C, 574 (1916) See notes on Burden of Proof and Presumptions.

(2) Brajeshwari Peshakar v. Budhanuddi, 6 C., 268 (1880); Monohar Singh v. Sumitra Kuar, 17 A, 428 (1895): and a recital does not estop in favour of third persons who did not contract on the faith of it Stronghill v. Buck, 14 Q B, 781, 784, 787.

(3) Stronghill v. Buck, supra: and see ib, as to circumstances in which an estoppel operates on all or is confined to a single party. South Eastern Railway Co v. Wharton, 6 H. L, 520, 527.

(4) Carpenter v. Buller, 8 M & W., 2[illegible], 212

(5) v. ante.

(6) Deoli Chand v. Nerban Singh, 5 C, 253 (1879), Pranjivan Govardhandas v Baju, 4 B, 34 (1879); Radhey Lal v Mahesh Prasad, 7 A., 864 (1885), Shea Prasad v. Udai Singh, 2 A, 718 (18[illegible]

(7) Ram Chunder v. Hari Das, 9 C., 463 466, (1882): Rajlakhee Debi v. Gocool Chunder, 3 B L R, (P. C), 57, 63 (1889), v. ante, p. 201, note (11): as to attestation by reversioners of estates held by Hindu females, see last case and Gopaul Chunder v Gour Monee, 6 W R., 52 (1866); Madhub Chunder v. Gobind Chunder, 9 W. R, 350 (1868). See also Mahadevi v. Neelamoney, 20 M., 269, 273 (1896); Collier v. Baron, 2 N L R., 34: see Kandasami Pillai v Nagalinga Pillai, 36 M, 564 (1913) (attestation in Madras); Lakhpati v Rambodh Singh, 37 A, 350 (1915); Dena Nath Das v Kehareswar Bhattacharya, 21 I C., 367 (1913), Banga Chandra Dhur Biswas v Jagat Kishore, P. C, 44 C., 186 (1917); Hari Kishun Bhagat v. Kashi Pershad 42 I A, 64 (1915).

(8) ante, s 111 and cases there cited.

agreement afterwards claiming performance of it (1) In the case cited the plaintiffs, occupancy tenants of a village, were held estopped from claiming to pre-empt a sale which the vendees succeeded in obtaining through the active instrumentality of two of the villagers as representatives of the whole village.(2)

To constitute an estoppel it is necessary that the statement or conduct charged should have been intentional, with the object of inducing the other party to change his situation in consequence. Mere loose talk does not usually estop A party informally, as a matter contractual relation witl the parties asking him f him, that they intended to act upon his answers At the same time a party by negligence in asserting a claim may be afterwards estopped from setting up such claim against strangers (3) The representation must have been made with the intention, either actual, or reasonably to be inferred(4) by the person to whom it was made, that it should be acted upon A third person to whom the representation was not made cannot claim the estoppel, unless it was intended or apparently intended that he should act upon it.(5) The term "wilfully" as used in the case of Pickard v. Sears(6) is in effect equivalent to "intentionally"(7) or "voluntary."(8) And by the term "wilfully" we must understand, "if not that the party represents that to be true which he knows to be untrue at least that he means his representation to be acted upon, and that it is acted upon accordingly; and if, whatever a man's real intention may be, he so conducts himself that a reasonable man would take the representation to be true, and believe that it was meant that he should act upon it, and did act upon it as true, the party making the representation would be equally precluded from contesting its truth"(9) Therefore intention to have the representation acted upon may be presumable as well as actual, so that a man would be bound as well when his conduct or the circumstances of the case justified the inference of intention as when he actually intended the result Negligence when naturally and directly tending to indicate intention, will therefore have the same effect in creating the estoppel as actual intention (10) But mere want of care towards preventing an unauthorized transfer of one's property, or the like act, creates no estoppel; otherwise a man might be precluded from alleging that his signature has been forged on the ground that he had negligently employed a dishonest clerk It is "Intentionally."

(1) Srish Chundra v Roy Bonomali 6 Bom L R, 501 (1904)

(2) Idris v Skinner, 82 P R, 1919, P C

(3) Wharton Ev, §§ 1079, 1155, as to fact stated as hearsay offered to prove an estoppel see Roe v Ferrars, 2 B & P, 548, Stephen v Vroman, 16 N Y, 381 (Amer) "In general where there is nothing reasonably indicating that the representation was intended to be acted upon as a statement of the truth, or that it was tantamount to a promise or agreement that the declaration made is true so as to amount to an undertaking to respond in case of its falsity, the party making it is not estopped from proving the truth' Bigelow, op cit, 6th Ed 685

(4) v post

(5) Mayenborg v Haynes, 50 N Y 675 (Amer), Bigelow, op cit, 6th Ed 686 Carr v London & N-W. Ry Co, 10 C P, 317

(6) 6 A & E., 469, v ante, p. 827, note (9)

(7) Sarat Chunder v Gopal Chunder, 19 I A 203 219 (1892)

(8) Cornish v Abington, 4 H & N, 549 (Sarat Chunder v Gopal Chunder supra) Park B perceiving that the word 'wilfully' might be read as opposed not merely to 'involuntarily but to 'unintentionally' showed that if the representation was made voluntarily though the effect on the mind of the hearer was produced unintentionally the same result would follow Bigelow op cit 6th Ed 690 n

(9) Freeman v Cooke 2 Ex R 654 per Baron Parke cited in Sarat Chunder v Gopal Chunder supra.

(10) Freeman v Cooke 2 Ex R 654, Gregg v Wells 10 A & E 90 97 Carr v London Ry Co L R, 10 C P, 307, Arnold v Cheque Bank, 1 C P D 578, Vagliano v Bank of England 33 Q B D. 243 Seton Laing & Co v Lafone L. R. 19 Q B D 68 Bigelow op cit 6th Ed. 686 687 only when the negligence is a breach of duty to the party claiming the estoppel, as for instance, where it has amounted to permitting another to clothe himself with

,ainst whom the estoppel is alleged, person who by his declaration, act, thing to be true and to act upon that belief must be held to have done so "intentionally" within the meaning of the Statute, if a reasonable man would take the representation to be true and believe it was meant that he should act upon it (2) It is not necessary, however, to prove an intention to deceive in (it necessary to an estoppel that the per another to act must have been under no mistake or misapprehension himself. Section 115 does not make it a conditi was ei esulting that such person a full that he was acting with sion.(3) It is not necessary that fraudulent intention should be established.(4) Where however it was found that the plaintiffs had successfully combined with another to defraud possible pre-emptors by having a sale transaction entered in the deed in the form of a mortgage they were of course held to be estopped from setting up their own fraud and pleading that the transaction which was ostensibly a mortgage was really a sale.(5) What the section mainly regards is the position of the person who was induced to act, and not the motive or state of knowledge of the party upon whose representation the action took place. If the person who made the statement did so without full knowledge, or under error, sibi imputet: it may, in the result be unfortunate for him, but it would be unjust, even though he acted under error, to throw the consequences on the person who believed his statement and acted on it as it was intended he should do.(6) It has been held in America that the representation must have been a free voluntary act; and if obtained by the party who has acted upon it, it must have been obtained without artifice. If it has been procured by duress or by fraud, there will be no estoppel upon the party making it, it would seem, though he made it with the full intention that it should be acted upon; indeed, it is said that where the conduct supposed to have created an estoppel, was brought about or directly encouraged by the party alleging the estoppel, no estoppel is created. But that must probably be understood of something in the way of artifice or other questionable endeavour.(7)

"Caused or permitted"

The representation and the action taken must be connected together as cause and effect. Not only must it be shown that there was belief in a particular fact, and action taken upon such belief, but also that the action and belief were induced by a representation of the plaintiff intended or calculated to

---

(1) Bigelow, op cit, 6th Ed, 687, 688 citing Swan v North British Australasian Co, 2 H & C., 175; as to silence as to the fact of a forged signature, see McKenzie v British Linen Co, 6 App. Cass, 82.

(2) Sarat Chunder v. Gopal Chunder, supra. The High Court of Madras had previously [Vishnu v. Krishnan, 7 M., 3. (1883)] expressed the view that by the substitution in this section of the word "intentionally" for "wilfully," in the rule stated in Pickard v Sears, 6 A & E, 469, it was possibly the design to exclude cases from the rule in India to which it might be applied under the terms in which it had been stated by the English Court. But the Privy Council disagreed with this view, and held that on the contrary, the substitution was made for the purpose of declaring the law in India to be precisely that of the law of England

(3) Sarat Chunder v. Gopal Chunder, 19 I. A, 203, 215, 218 (1892); overruling Ganga Sahai v. Hira Singh, 2 A., [illegible] (1880); Vishnu v. Krishnan, 7 M., 3 (1883)

(4) Balbir Prasad v. Jugal Kishore, 3 Pat L J. 454, 46 I. C., 473.

(5) Tikaja Ram v. Watsu Mian, 53 I C., 564

(6) Ib., citing Cairncross v Lorimer, 3 Macq., 829; Pickard v Sears, supra; Freeman v. Cooke, supra; Cornish v Abington, supra; Carr v. London & North Western Railway Co, L. R., 10 C. P., 316; Seton Laing & Co., v. Lafone, 19 Q B D. [illegible]

(7) Bigelow, op cit. 6th Ed, [illegible]; as to admissions under duress, see Wharton, Ev. § 1099.

have the result w been the inducer inducement if it the conduct of a enough, though other inducements operated with it. And the law will not undertake, in favour of a wrong-doer, to separate the various inducements presented and ascertain precisely how much weight was given to the representation in question (2) But though the representation need not be exclusively acted upon, there can be no estoppel where the party claiming one is obliged before changing his position, to enquire for the existence of other facts to make the inducement sufficient and to rely upon them also in acting.(3) In such a case it is clear that the inducement was not adequate to, and therefore not the cause of the result, viz, the action taken. If the party is absent at the time of the transaction, his silence or other conduct must at least be of a nature to have an obvious and direct tendency to cause the omission or the step taken.(4) The section uses the word "permitted" as the expression apt to cases of omission and negligence. Conduct of omission or negligence may be the cause of the action taken such conduct raising inferences which are often as casually effective as any positive declarations may be.

"To believe"

on is made ict is in no ed does not on does not who knows the real facts and is not misled by the untrue statement. A person cannot use as an estoppel a statement by which he has been in no way misled or induced to alter his position to his own detriment.(6) There can be no estoppel arising out of legal proceedings when the truth of the matter appears on the face of the proceedings.(7) The person who claims the benefit of an estoppel must show that he was ignorant of the truth in regard to the representation.(8) When both parties are equally conversant with the true state of the facts it is absurd to refer to the doctrine of estoppel (9) So where the plaintiff was as much

---

(1) Solano v. Lalla Ram, 7 C L R, 451 (1880), Mohunt Das v Nilkamal Dewan, 4 C W N 283 (1899), in Beni Prasad v Mukhtesar Rai, 21 A, 316, 322 (1899), it was held that that which really induced the party to abandon a portion of his claim was not the acts of the other party relied upon as an estoppel but an extraneous cause independent of such party; v. post "To Act," p 863, and ante p 821.

(2) Bigelow, op cit, 6th Ed, 646, 647 v. post

(3) Ib, 6th Ed, 696—698

(4) Ib, 6th Ed, 662

(5) Collier v. Baron, 2 N. L. R., 34 Cf. Kuterji Shet v. Municipality of Lonavala, 45 B, 164 (1921)

(6) Grish Chandra v. Iswar Chandra, 3 B L. R, A C., 337 (1869); s c, 12 W. R, 226, Karali Charan v. Mahtab Chandra, Sev. Rep, July—Dec 1864, p 29; Jhinguri Tewari v. Durga, 7 A., 878 (1885); Narayan v Raoji, 28 B, 393, 397 (1904). So in an action for deceit, if it is proved that the plaintiff did not rely upon the false statement complained of, he cannot maintain the action, Smith v. Chadwick, 20 Ch D, 27; Sarada Prosad Roy v. Ananda Moy Dutta, 46, I C 228

(7) Bigelow, op cit., 6th Ed, 681—683 and cases there cited; as to the presumption of knowledge, v. ib. pp 627, 611, and ante, s 114, "Intention;" "Knowledge;" as to circumstances which may necessitate enquiry, see Bisheshur v. Muirhead, 14 A, 362 (1892); Ramcoomar Koondoo v. Macqueen, 11 B L. R, 46 (1872).

(8) Tara Lal v. Sarobar Singh, 4 C. W. N, 533 (1899); s c, 27 C., 413; Narayan v. Raoji, 28 B, 393 (1904), at p 397.

(9) Ranchodlal Vandravandas Patwari v. Secretary of State for India, 35 B., 183; Beni Ram v. Kundun Lal, P. C. (1890); 22 A., 496; Honapa v Narsapa (1898), 23 B., 406; Ramsden v Dyson (1865); 1 E. & I., A C., 129.

(10) Mt. Oodey Koowar v. Mt. Ladoo, 13 Moo, 1870

the person making the representation to another does not "cause or permit" that other to believe the representation to be true. The representation in order to work an estoppel must be of a nature t[illegible] of prudence to the action taken.(1) To [illegible] it, it must be plain, not doubtful, or ma[illegible]tanity is essential to all estoppels. The Courts will not readily suffer a man to be deprived of his property when he had no intention to part with it.(2) Again to say that the representation must be such as would naturally lead a prudent man to act upon it is also to say that it must be material. That is equally essential to the estoppel.(3) This, however, does not mean that the representation in question must have been the sole inducement to the change of position; if it were adequate to the result,—that is, if it might have governed the conduct of a prudent man,—and if it did influence the result, that will be enough, though other inducement operated with it. And the law will not undertake in favour of a wrong-doer, to separate the various inducements presented, and ascertain precisely how much weight was given to the representation in question.(4)

"A thing"

A proposition of law is not "a thing" within the meaning of the section and this expression refers to a belief in a fact.(5) So also an admission on a point of law is not an admission of a thing within the meaning of the section.(6) The representation in order to work an estoppel must be a material statement of fact.(7) The rule excluding statements of opinion and statements of law has been said to be based upon the ground that the truth is uncertain, or that the person to whom the statement is made knows as much about the matter as the other.(8) In the undermentioned case the Court expressed an opinion that a grantor might possibly be estopped from questioning the permanent character of a lease by reason of misrepresentations even on a point of law which was not clear, and free from doubt.(9) The fact must be a fact alleged to be at the time actually in existence or past and executed. The representation must have references to a present or past state of things; for, if a party make a representation concerning something in the future it must generally be either a mere

---

(1) Bigelow, op cit, 6th Ed., 634

(2) Ib, 578, see Smith v Chadwick, 20 Ch D, 27 [If a statement, by which the plaintiff says he has been deceived, is ambiguous the plaintiff is bound to state the meaning which he attached to it, and cannot leave the Court to put a meaning upon it]

(3) Bigelow, op cit, 6th Ed, 645, 646; Smith v Chadwick, supra [If a statement, although untrue, is so trivial that it could not in the opinion of the Court have influenced the conduct of the plaintiff, it will not support an action for deceit] See Taylor, Ev, s 98.

(4) McAleer v Horsey, 35 Ind, 439 (Amer.); Bigelow, op cit., 6th Ed., 646; Narayan v. Raoji, 28 B, 393, 397 (1904).

(5) Rajnarain Bose v. Universal Life Assurance Co., 7 C., 594 (1881); see Gopee Lall v Chundraolee Buhoojee, 11 B. L. R, 395 (1872); s. c. 19 W. R., 12. Surendrakesov Roy v. Durgasundari Dasee, 19 I A., 115, 116 (1882); Tagore v. Tagore, I. A. Sup. Vol, 71 (1872): Morgan v. Couchman, 14 C. B., 180; as to admissions of law, see p. 224 ante; Tek Chand v. Musst. Gopal Devi (1912); 47 P. R., no 46, p. 171. See Mark D'Cruz v Jitendra Nath Chatterjee, 46 C. 1079, s. c. 30 C L. J., 94 as to the meaning of the word "thing"; see Ma Pyu v Maung Po Chet, 39, I. C. 385

(6) Dungariya v Nand Lal, 3 All. L. J. 534

(7) Bigelow, op cit, 6th Ed., 634—635 [illegible] states that to be the general rule, adding that it can seldom happen that a statement of opinion or of a proposition of law will conclude the party making it from denying its correctness except where it is understood to mean nothing but a simple statement of fact; that statements of opinion however, often approach to representations of fact, the whole suggestion in regard to real opinion treading on delicate ground; and that it seems probable that the rule against representations of law has been pressed too far. See cases cited [illegible]; Jethabhai v. Nathabhai, 28 B., 39[illegible] (19[illegible]), at p. 407.

(8) Bigelow, op cit., 6th Ed., 635

(9) Narsing Dyal v Ram Nar[illegible], 30 C., 883 (1903).

statement of intention or opinion uncertain to the knowledge of both parties(1), or it will come to a contract, with the peculiar consequences of a contract, or to a waiver of some term of a contract, or of the performance of some other kind of duty.(2)

It is essential to an es. ppel that one party has been induced by the conduct of the other to do or forbear(3) doing something which he would not, or would have done, as the case might be, but for such conduct of the other party. In order to hold a case to be within this section, the Court must come to the following findings:—(a) that the plaintiff believed a certain fact to be true; (b) that in consequence of, and as the effect of such belief, he acted in a particular manner; (c) that that belief and the plaintiff's so acting upon that belief were brought about by some representation (either declaration, act or omission), on the part of the defendant, which representation was intentionally made, in order to produce that result. (4) To establish an estoppel it is not sufficient to find that it may well be doubted that the plaintiff would have acted in the way he did, but for the way in which the defendant had acted. It must be proved as a fact that the plaintiff could not have acted in the way he did, and that the defendant by his declaration, act or omission, intentionally caused or permitted another person to believe a thing to be true and to act upon such belief.(5) "To act."

detriment(6) his previous position.(7) Upon this essential of an estoppel Mr.

(1) The intent of a party is necessarily uncertain as to its fulfilment No person has a right to rely on it A person cannot be bound not to change his intention, nor can he be precluded from showing such a change merely because he has previously represented that his intentions were once different from those which he eventually executed, Langdon v. Doud, 10 Allen, 433; s. c, 6 Allen, 423 (Amer), per Bigelow, C. J.

(2) Bigelow, op cit, 6th Ed, 637; Maddison v. Alderson, 8 App. Cas, 467, 473; 5 Ev. D, 293; Jordan v. Money, 5 H L Cas, 185, 213—215; Citizens Bank v. First National Bank, L. R, 6 E & I. A., 352, 360, Jethabai v Nathabhai, 28 B, 399, 407 (1904). Pollock on Contract, Appendix, note K, and cases there cited

(3) The damage need not be shown to be a positive step taken to one's prejudice; it is enough to show that the party claiming the estoppel was induced by the other party to refrain from obtaining a particular benefit which he would otherwise have been reasonably sure of acquiring, Bigelow, op. cit, 6th Ed, 703 citing Knights v. Wiffen, L. R, 5 Q B, 360

(4) Solano v. Lalla Ram, 7 C. L. R, 481 (1880), or which being intentionally made had the effect of producing that result v. supra, and see Jhinguri Tewari v. Durga, and change of position Gusaun Mal v. Ram Rakha Mal, 50 I C., 128; Har Lal v. Basanta Singh, 75 P. W R., 1918.

(5) Narsingdas v. Rahimanbhai, 28 B, 440 (1904)

(6) Prejudice to the party claiming the estoppel, should be shown, Schmaltz v. Avery, 16 Q. B, 155; Bigelow, op cit, 6th Ed, 701, 702; it is not enough that the representation has been barely acted upon; if still no substantial prejudice would result by admitting the party who made it to contradict it he will not, according to the American cases, be estopped, ib It does not prejudice one in law to do something one was bound to do, ib, 638, n. (1)

(7) Grish Chandra v Iswar Chandra, 3 B L R, A. C., 137, 341; s c, 12 W. R, 226 (1869), Sev. Rep, July—Dec (1864), p 29, In re Purmanandas Jeewandas, 7 B, 109 (1882); Mt Ooodey Koowar v Mt. Ladoo, 13 Moo. I. A, 585 (1870); Kuverji v. Babai, 19 B, 374, 389 (1894); Durga v Jhirguri, 7 A, 511, 515 (1885) (the altering of his position by the person pleading the estoppel is an essential part of the rule) Peddamuthulaty v Timma Reddy, 2 Mad H C. R., 271 (1864); In re Permanandas Jeewandas, 7 B, 109, 117 (1882); Mt Ooodey Koowar v Mt. Ladoo, 13 M. I. A, 585, 598 (1870); Muhammad Samiud-din v. Manu Lal, 4 A., 386 (1889). The rule that the representation must have been acted upon is further illustrated by Howard v. Hudson, 2 El. & B, 1; Simson v. Anglo-American Telegraph Co, 5 Q. B. D, 188; Stimson v. Farnham, L. R., 7 Q. B., 175; Schmaltz v. Avery, 16 Q. B., 655; Cropper

Bigelow observes as follows(1) :—" The rule is fundamental that unless the representation of the party to be estopped has also been really acted upon, the other party acting differently, that is to say, from the way he would otherwise have acted, so that to deny the representation would be to prejudice him, no estoppel arises. Neither a statement of any kind nor an admission in pais can amount of itself to conclusive evidence. But if, on the other hand, the representation has been acted upon promptly, under circumstances, such as those already detailed, the party making the statement or guilty of the conduct in question will be precluded from alleging the contrary of that which he has given the other party to understand to be true. And it matters not, if the party acting upon the representation was justified in so doing, how he has changed his position, whether by the purchase of property, the surrender of possession, the erection of improvements or other outlay upon land or goods about which the estoppel be claimed, or the expenditure of money in litigation, or it is held even by being induced to refrain from steps which would otherwise probably have been taken. But unless the representation is in some way acted upon, unequivocally, as tested by the first step taken, the estoppel cannot arise: nor will any estoppel arise when the party acting upon the representation has done only what he was legally bound to do. And though, as we have seen, it need l where the party claiming quire for the existence of to rely upon them also in acting. In other words, though the party may, no doubt, act upon any one of several representations or inducements from different sources, it will not answer for him to put together two severally insufficient inducements from different and independent sources." Where it is plain that the representation has been substantially acted upon, there is, of course, no question (supposing the existence of other elements) that an estoppel arises, but the general rule is that only the person to whom the representation was made, or for whom it was designed, can act upon and avail himself of it.(2) Where a person purchases property subject to a mortgage he is not by that sole fact estopped from disputing the validity of, nor consideration for, the mortgage. But if the mortgagee has been thereby induced to suffer some detriment or if he forgoes a portion of his money then the purchaser may be estopped from disputing the mortgage.(3)

" Representative "

Representatives and also persons claiming by gratuitous title are bound by estoppel.(4) It is necessary to an estoppel that there should be privity between the parties; that is to say, an estoppel is only available between the parties to the representation and those claiming under them. The section only says—" neither he (that is, the person making the representation) nor his representative shall be allowed." Therefore only parties and their privies are bound by the representation, and only those whom the representation is made to or intended to influence and their privies, may take advantage of the estoppel.(5) A stranger can neither take advantage of an estoppel nor be bound by it. It will be observed that whatever be the rule in the case of estoppel by

v. Smith, 28 Ch. D., 700; Carr v. London N.-W. Ry. Co., 10 C., p. 317; Mahadevi v. Neelamani, 20 M., 269, 273 (1896); Kristo Moni v. Secretary of State, 3 C. W. N., 99, 105 (1898); Tara Lal v. Sarobur Singh, 4 C. W. N., 513, 538 (1899); Fatimunissa Begum v. Soondar Das, 4 C. W. N., 565 (1900); Manohar Lal v. Nanak Chand, 52 I. C. 479; Nanak Chand v. Chameli Kunwar, 17 A. L. J., 228; s. c., 50 I. C., 721 where the defendant did not act on the belief.

(1) Op. cit., 6th Ed., 694—697.

(2) Bigelow, op. cit., 6th Ed., [illegible] where the question of statements at second hand is discussed. See Nallappa v. [illegible]chala, 37 M., 270 (1914) (equitable estoppel from contract to indemnify).

(3) Bala Parshad v. Sujan Singh [illegible] C., 997.

(4) Jagannath Prasad Singh v. Syed Abdullah, 22 C. W. N., 801 (P. C.); s. c., 28 C. L. J. 162.

(5) Bigelow, op. cit., 6th Ed., 612, 613; Taylor, Ev., § 99.

judgment(1), this estoppel is not mutual The party to whom the misrepresen- [illegible] though bound has nothing [illegible] inter alios there can be no [illegible] the person making it as an estoppel will equally bind those who claim through him (4) A man is estopped not only by his own representations, but also by those of all persons through whom he claims. Upon the principle qui sentit commodum sentire debet et onus if the predecessor in title is not at liberty to contradict what he has formerly said or done, his privy is subject to a like disability, for the latter stands in no better position than the party through whom he derives title.(5) As to the meaning of the term "representative," see s. 20 "Persons from whom interest is derived," s. 22 "Representative in interest," see ante. The purchaser of an estate sold for arrears of revenue is not privy in estate to the defaulting proprietor In the case of a private sale in satisfaction of a decree the purchaser derives title through the vendor. But a purchaser at an execution-sale is not as such the representative of the judgment-debtor within the meaning of this section (6) A privity exists between an execution-creditor and a purchaser at a Court-sale. So when a plea of estoppel is available to a decree-holder, it is likewise available to the purchaser at the execution-sale as his representative or as one claiming under him.(7) Where in any question with the person estopped or his representatives, another may be held to have obtained a valid conveyance to himself, then as the latter has himself through the estoppel a valid title, he can give good title to a purchaser from him whatever might be the state of knowledge of the person purchasing (8) Where in execution of a money-decree certain property was purchased, and this property was subject to a mortgage not executed by the judgment-debtor, although he would have been estopped from denying liability under it on account of his conduct in the mortgage-transaction, it was held that the purchaser was bound equally with him, inasmuch as the right, title and interest of the judgment-debtor had passed to the purchaser, and that the purchase was therefore subject to the mortgage (9) And in another case it was held that a purchaser claiming under a title which had been at least partly created by the mortgagor, was estopped from raising the plea of non-transferability of the holding (10) In a case in the Allahabad High Court it was held that where a mortgagee purchased the mortgaged property in execution of

(1) Spencer v. Williams, L R., 2 P. & D, 230, 237

(2) Bigelow, op cit, 6th Ed, 618, n (1).

(3) R v. Ambergate Ry Co, 1 E. & B., 372; Mowatt v. Castle Steel Co, 34 Ch. D, 58

(4) See Board v Board, L R., 9 Q B., 48; Middleton v. Pollock, L R, 4 Ch D, 49; Siva Ram v. Ali Baksh, 3 A., 805 (1881); [vendor—vendee] Moonshee Ameer v. Syef Ali, 5 W. R, 239 (1866) [heir]; Monmohinee Joginee v. Jugobundhoo Sadhookha, 19 W. R, 233 (1873) [guardian and minor] Luchman Chunder v. Kalli Churn, 19 W. R, 292 (1873); [heirs] Chunder Coomar v. Hurbuns Sahai, 16 C, 137 (1888)

(5) See Taylor Ev, § 90

(6) v. ante, notes to s 20 sub voc. "Persons from whom interest is derived" and cases there cited; Vasanji Haribhai v. Lalla Akhu, 9 B, 285, 288 (1885), but see Banee Pershad v Manu Singh, 8 W. R, 67 (1867)

(7) Krishnabhupati Devu v. Vikrama Devu, 18 M, 13 (1894).

(8) Sarat Chunder v. Gopal Chunder, 19 I A, 203, 220 (1892); strictly speaking, it is not the office of an estoppel to pass a title The title remains, but it cannot be asserted against the party who acted upon the false representation Bigelow, op cit, 6th Ed, 631.

(9) Prayag Rai v. Sidhu Prasad Tewari (1908), 35 C., 877, followed in Tota Ram v. Hargobind, 36 A, 141 (1914). See Deo Nandan Prasad v. Janki Singh, P. C, 44 C, 573 (1913) (sale for arrears caused by representation of minor mortgagee), and see Sarat Chundra Dey v. Gopal Chandra Laha (1892), 20 C., 296 and Carr v. London North-Western Railway (1875), 10 C P, 316

(10) Radha Kanta Chakravarti v. Ramananda Shaha, 39 C., 513, and v Krishna Lal Saha v. Bhairab Chandra (1905), 9 C W N, ccxlviii.

a decree in his favour and was afterwards defendant in a suit on a prior mortgage of the said property, he incompetent to execut
the validity of a Hund purchased at a sale in an estoppel that would have bound his mortgagor.(3) It has been held that where a landlord in execution of a money decree causes the sale of an occupancy holding and purchases it himself, ferability without his consent in of the occupancy-raiyat; for sinc of mortgage and a consequent estoppel is not applicable in such a case.(4) In the case cited it has been held that where a landlord decree-holder applies under section 162 of the Bengal Tenancy Act and obtains an order under section 163 of that Act, there is an assertion by him that the property is at least an occupation holding and he is bound by such representation (5) There is no acquired title temporarily and a title arose prior to suit, a cannot represent the mort-band's estate for party thereto who is the actual reversioner upon the death of the widow,(8) or, at least throw on him the onus of rebutting the inference of legal necessity (9)

When a person claims property as the representative of another, the doctrine of estoppel cannot apply to representations made by any one except that other person (10) An estoppel can be availed of by the parties and their privies. The privy cannot be deprived of such benefit by the fact that since the time the representation was made and the privity of estate commenced, the person to whom the representation was made and the person who made the representation have come to an arrangement contrary to the representation.(11)

Between himself and such person or his representative

Not only, as has been already seen, is the representative of the person estopped bound by the same estoppel as that which affects his predecessor in title, but the estoppel conversely also enures not only for the benefit of the person to whom the representation was actually made, but also for the benefit of his successors in title. Therefore not only may the heir be bound by an estoppel which affecting his ancestor, but he may also claim the benefit of an estoppel which his ancestor might have claimed.

To deny the truth of that thing.

The estoppel by conduct operates by nature, that is, wherever it can so operate, specifically; and gives to the party entitled the rights he would have against the person estopped supposing the representation true. So if the

(1) Tota Ram v Hargobind, 36 A., 141 (1914), Bakshi Ram v. Liladhar, 35 A., 353 (1913), Bishambher Dayal v. Parshadi Lal, 10 A. L. J. 112 (1910).

(2) Arunachellam Chettiar v. Narayan Chettiar, 36 M. L. J. 301.

(3) Kalidas Chandhuri v Prasanna Kumar Das, 24 C. W. N., 269; s. c., 30 C. L. J., 496; 47 C., 446.

(4) Asmatunessa Khatun v. Harendra Lal Biswas (1908), 35 C., 904.

(5) Abdul Sobhan Shaikh v. Natabar Mandal 17 C. L. J. 652 (1913).

(6) Prasanna Kumar Mookerjee v. Srikantha Rout, 40 C., 173 (1913).

(7) Ramchandra Dhondo v. Malhari, 41 B., 679 (1916).

(8) Bagranji Singh v. Manikrishna..., Baksh Singh, P. C. (1907). Times L. R. v. 24, p. 46. For representation of reversioners by Hindu widow in Res Judicata, see Rusal Singh v. Balwant Singh 37 A. 496 (1915).

(9) Debi Prasad Chowdry v Golap Bhagat F. B., 40 C., 721 (1913)

(10) Ranga Rao v. Bhavanamma, 17 M. 473 (1894).

(11) Badri Bishal v. Dayawati, 5 O. L. J. 459; s. c., 47 I. C., 931 representation is made on the sale of a security which the seller did not own, the buyer's rights are not limited to the recovery of the consideration paid, but the purchaser will be entitled to recover what he would have received had the representation been true.(1) If a person is entitled to avail himself of an ... of proof, that is, as a means ... tation were those which did ... ng a statement made by the other party, is evidence by way of admission of the fact to which it relates. It becomes conclusive evidence because the party claiming the estoppel affirms its truth, which the party estopped is not permitted to deny. The section only says that the party sought to be estopped is not to be allowed to deny the truth of the representation. It is, of course, open to him to deny that he made the representation itself. Lastly (3), this estoppel, arising as it does from misconduct, is not mutual, like other estoppels, and cannot be used against the party in whose favour it has arisen.(4)

116. No tenant of immovable property,(5) or person claiming through such tenant, shall, during the continuance of the tenancy, be permitted to deny that the landlord of such tenant had, at the beginning of the tenancy, a title to such immovable property; and no person who came upon any immovable property by the license of the person in possession thereof, shall be permitted to deny that such person had a title to such possession at the time when such license was given.

Estoppel of tenant; and of licensee of person in possession.

Pr... nt based on permissive e... the possession to B upon ... r without rent, at a specified time, or at the will of A, B cannot be allowed while still retaining possession to dispute A's title, because to allow him to do so would be to allow him to work a wrong against A by depriving him of the advantage which his possession afforded him and with which he would not have parted, but for the promise (or perhaps to speak more aptly the implied agreement) of B that he would hold it from him and in his place and stead.(6) The estoppel of a tenant is founded upon the contract between him and his landlord. The former took possession under a contract to pay rent as long as he held possession under the landlord, and to give it up at the end of the term to the landlord, and having taken it in that way he is not allowed to say that the man whose title he admits and under whose title he took possession has not a title.(7) There is no distinction between

---

(1) Bigelow, op cit, 6th Ed, 710

(2) Luchman Chunder v. Kali Churn, 19 W. R, 292, 297 (1873), v also ib, remarks as to the necessity of pleading an estoppel. In Shaikh Hanif v Jagabandhu Shaha, 8 C. W N., ccxxvii (1904); a plea of estoppel was disallowed which had not been pleaded and as to which no issue was raised in the Court of first instance and see Narsingdas v. Rahimanbai, 28 B, 440 (1904)

(3) Bigelow, op. cit, 6th Ed, 710.

(4) v ante, p. 865

(5) A fishery is an incorporeal hereditament and is real or immovable property for the purposes of this section, Lakshman Nakhwa v Ramji Nakhwa, 23, Bom. L. R 939 (1921).

(6) Franklin v. Merida, 35 Cal, 558 (Amer.), per Sanderson, J., cited in Bigelow, op. cit., 6th Ed, 569—571. The broad principle is that a person who has received property from another will not be permitted to dispute the title of that person or his right to do what he has done. Bigelow, op. cit, 6th Ed, 589, 590. As to setting up of a jus tertii, see Mathura Prasad v. Gokul Chand, 41 A, 654: s c., 17 A. L. J., 805.

(7) In re Stringer's Estate, L R, 6 Ch. D, 9, 10; see Duke v. Ashby, 7 H. & N., 602, Bigelow, op. cit, 506.

the relation of a tenant and that of a licensee in whose case the law itself implies a tenancy and to whom the same principles apply.(1)

Bigelow on Estoppel, 6th Ed., Ch. XVII; Estoppel by Representation and Res Judicata by A. Caspersz, 4th Ed, Ch. XII; Everest and Strode on Estoppel, 268; Taylor, Ev., §§ 101—103; Cababé, Principles of Estoppel.

COMMENTARY.

Estoppel of tenant

As already stated, this and the following section give instances of estoppel by agreement, as the last deals with estoppel by misrepresentation They are, however, not exhaustive of this form of estoppel.(2) A minor may be estopped. So where a minor has derived a benefit from a lease executed on his behalf by his de facto guardian, the minor is estopped under this section from denying the title of the man in whose favour the lease has been executed.(3) It has long been a well settled rule that neither a tenant nor any one claiming under him can dispute the landlord's title.(4) And a person who has been let into possession as tenant by a plaintiff is estopped from denying the latter's title without first surrendering possession.(5) This rule was acknowledged and acted upon in India prior to this Act(6), and is contained in this section. Enjoyment by permission is the foundation of the rule. Two conditions therefore are essential to the existence of the estoppel: (i) possession, (ii) permission. When these conditions are present, the estoppel arises.(7) It follows, therefore, that when there is no permissive enjoyment, where the occupant is not under an obligation, express or implied, that he will at some time or in some ... ntee in fee, there can be no ... Madras High Court that a ... the lessor ... tenant who has executed a lease, ... is estopped from denying the les... the lease in ignorance of some fla... tation, or fraud (9) By the terms of the section, the rule applies not only to tenant but to his representatives, and is operative throughout the continuance of the tenancy. The rule applies in favour of a landlord with an equitable title

(1) Doe d Johnson v. Baytup, 3 A. & E., 183

(2) Rup Chand v Sarbeswar Chandra, 10 C W. N, 747 (1906), s c, 3 C. L J. 629 As to co-sharer's estoppel, see Baldeo Sahai v Braj Nandan Sahai, 3 Pat. L W., 266; 43 I C., 359.

(3) Kaniz Mehdi v Rasul Beg, 5 O L J., 551; s c., 48 I. C., 39.

(4) Bigelow, op cit, 6th Ed, 549; Taylor, Ev., §§ 101—103; Doe d. Knight v. Smythe, 4 M. & S, 347; Alchorne v. Gomme, 2 Bing, 54, see cases cited in William's Saunders i, 575 ii, 826 (Ed. 1871); Bigelow, op. cit, Ch. XVII; Caspersz, op cit, 4th Ed., Ch. XII. Lokoram v. Bidya Ram Mahto, 53 I. C., 43 (but he may question landlord's status.). As to adverse possession, see Kristomoni v. Secretary of State, 3 C. W. N., 99 (1898).

(5) Muthurayan v. Sinna Samarayan (1905), 28 M, 526; 15 M. L. J., 525; Bilas Kunwar v. Ranjit Singh, P. C., 37 A, 557 (1915); 42 I A., 202; Ganpat Rai v Multan, 38 A, 226 (1916). Makham Singh v Baisakhi Ramshah, 50 I. C., 591.

(6) Jainarayan Bose v. Kadambini Dasi, 7 B. L. R., 723 n. (1869); Vasudev ... v Babaji Ranu, 8 Bom. H C., A. C. 175 (1871); Banee Madhub v. Thakoor Dass, B. L. R., Sup. Vol, 588 F. B (1865); Burn & Co. v. Busho Moyee, 14 W R., 85 (1870); Gouree Dass v. Jagunath Roy 7 W. R., 25, 26 (1867); Mohesh Chunder v. Gooroo Prosad, Marsh., 277 (1863) Trimbak Ramchandra Pandit v Sheik Gulam Zilani Walker, S C. (1909), 34 B. 329.

(7) Bigelow, op. cit, 6th Ed 553 Bhaiganta Bera v. Himmat Bijjaler, 24 C. L. J. 103 (1916). ... Bhattacharjee v. Nilmadhub Saha, 44 C. 771 (1917) But see Venkata Chetty v. Aiyanna Goundan, F. B., 40 M., 561 (1917) (estoppel from execution of lease before possession given).

(8) Rup Chand v Sarbeswar Chandra, supra

(9) Venkata Chetty v Aiyanna Goundan, F B., 40 M., 561 (1917) (Abdur Rahim J. dissenting). See also Makham Singh v. Baisakhi Ramshah, 50 I C., 591 only(1), an unnamed landlord letting by means of an agent (2); and one of several co-sharers. If a person take a lease from one of several co-sharers, he cannot dispute his lessor's exclusive title to receive the rent or sue in ejectment.(3) The estoppel will also enure for the benefit of a lessor who has no title whatever, and the person let into possession will not be permitted to set up this want of title (4) The question of the lessor's title is foreign to a suit for rent or in ejectment against a lessee. And this is so, though the ostensible lessor is merely a trustee and liable to account to the cestui-que-trust (5) But in another case, where a person acting as trustee of a temple assigned part of its lands on Kanam and it was afterwards found that he had never been such trustee, it was held that the assignee was not estopped from denying his right to assign though estopped from denying the temple's title.(6) In this country the principle that a tenant cannot dispute his landlord's title has been made to yield to the influence of the benami system. The tenant when sued for rent due to his lessor has been allowed to prove that the person from whom, nominally, he accepted a lease, was only a benamidar for a third person to whom the rent was really due (7) And conversely where a landlord had accepted rent continuously from persons in whose names a lease had been taken for the benefit of their husbands, when the benamidars were unable to pay, he was allowed to sue the persons really interested in the lease.(8) A plaintiff having sued to obtain possession of certain land which the defendant held as tenant and in respect of which he had for some [illegible] e time when he became ten[illegible] to him the premises lease[illegible] vas found to be a mere ben[illegible] topped from asserting the tenancy, and under the circumstances was entitled to recover.(9) And it was held by the Madras High Court that where a deed is executed by a tenant in favour of a person benami for another, the real owner and not the benamidar is the landlord whose title the tenant is estopped from denying under this section, and that in a suit by such benamidar for rent the tenant can deny

---

(1) Board v Board, L R, 9 Q. B, 53; see Bigelow, op. cit, 362, 363, 538, 539.

(2) Fleming v. Gooding, 10 Bing, 549

(3) Jamsedji Sorabji v. Lakshmiram Rajaram, 13 B., 323 (1888).

(4) Tadman v Henman, L. R., 2 Q. B (1893), 168, 170, and this is so, though the tenancy be created by a deed which shows that the landlord possessed no legal estate, Bigelow, op cit, 6th Ed, 582—585, 609, 610; Jolly v. Arbuthnot, 4 DeG. & J, 224; Morton v. Woods, L R, 4 Q B., 293; Duke v. Ashby, 7 H. & N, 600. As to objection to validity of lessor's title on the ground of want of registration, see Shums Ahmud v. Goolam Moheeooddeen, N-W. P. H. C., 153 (1871).

(5) Jainarain Bose v. Kadimbini Dasi, 7 B L R, 723, 724 note (1869); Mussamut Purnia v. Torab Ali, Wyman's Rep, 14.

(6) Thuppan Nambudripad v. Ittichiri Amma, 37 M, 373 (1914).

(7) Donselle v Kedarnath Chuckerbutty, 7 B L R, 720; 20 W. R, 352 (1871); but see contra Jainarain Bose v. Kadimbini Dasi, 7 B. L R, 723 note (1869). It is to be noted that the first mentioned case was decided prior to this Act and proceeded on the ground that the technical doctrine of estoppel was not applicable to this country But that doctrine has been sanctioned by the present section, and according to the principle upon which it rests the question of the lessor's title is wholly foreign to a suit instituted against the lessee for rent See Mohesh Chunder v Gooroopershad Ghose, Marsh, 377 (1863), Cuthbertson v Irving, 4 H & N, 758; Mussamat Purnia v Torab Ali, Wyman's Rep, 14 The principle, however, laid down in Donselle v. Kedarnath Chuckerbutty, supra, was re-affirmed in Mussamat Indurbuttee v Shaikh Mahboob, 24 W. R., 44 (1875). When there is a benami and real tenant, the latter may be sued for the rent As to suits by landlord when the ostensible tenant is a benamidar, see Heeralal Bukhshee v Rajkishore Moozoomdar, W R, Sp. No, 58 (1862); Judoonath Paul v. Prosunnonath Dutt, 9 W. R., 71 (1863); Prosunno Coomar v. Koylash Chunder, 8 W. R., 428, F. B (1867); Bepinbehari Choudhry v. Ramchandra Roy, 5 B. L. R., 234 (1870); Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 397.

(8) Debnath Roy v. Gudadhur Dey, 18 W. R, 532 (1872).

(9) Subuktulla v. Hari, 10 C L. R, 199 (1882).

the relation of a tenant and that of a licensee in whose case the law itself implies a tenancy and to whom the same principles apply.(1)

Bigelow on Estoppel, 6th Ed., Ch. XVII; Estoppel by Representation and Res Judicata by A. Caspersz, 4th Ed., Ch. XII; Everest and Strode on Estoppel, 268; Taylor, Ev., §§ 101—103; Cababé, Principles of Estoppel.

COMMENTARY.

Estoppel of tenant.

As already stated, this and the following section give instances of estoppel by agreement, as the last deals with estoppel by misrepresentation They are, however, not exhaustive of this form of estoppel.(2) A minor may be estopped. So where a minor has derived a benefit from a lease executed on his behalf by his de facto guardian, the minor is estopped under this section from denying the title of the man in whose favour the lease has been executed.(3) It has long been a well settled rule that neither a tenant nor any one claiming under him can dispute the landlord's title.(4) And a person who has been let into possession as tenant by a plaintiff is estopped from denying the latter's title without first surrendering possession.(5) This rule was acknowledged and acted upon in India prior to this Act(6), and is contained in this section. Enjoyment by permission is the foundation of the rule. Two conditions therefore are essential to the existence of the estoppel: (i) possession, (ii) permission. When these conditions are present, the estoppel arises.(7) It follows, therefore, that when there is no permissive enjoyment, where the occupant is not under an obligation, express or implied, that he will at some time or in some event surrender the possession, as in the case of the grantee in fee, there can be no estoppel.(8) It has been held by a Full Bench of the Madras High Court that a tenant [illegible] is estop[illegible]
the leas[illegible]
tation, [illegible]
tenant but to his representatives, and is operative throughout the continuance of the tenancy. The rule applies in favour of a landlord with an equitable title

---

(1) Doe d Johnson v. Baytup, 3 A. & E, 188.

(2) Rup Chand v Sarbeswar Chandra, 10 C W. N, 747 (1906); s. c, 3 C. L J., 629 As to co-sharer's estoppel, see Baldeo Sahai v Braj Nandan Sahai, 3 Pat. L. W., 266; 43 I C., 359.

(3) Kaniz Mehdi v. Rasul Beg, 5 O. L. J., 551; s. c., 48 I. C., 39.

(4) Bigelow, op cit, 6th Ed., 549; Taylor, Ev., §§ 101—103; Doe d. Knight v. Smythe, 4 M. & S., 347; Alchorne v. Gomme, 2 Bing, 54, see cases cited in William's Saunders i, 575 ii, 826 (Ed. 1871); Bigelow, op. cit, Ch. XVII; Caspersz, op cit, 4th Ed, Ch. XII. Lokoram v. Bidya Ram Mahto, 33 I. C., 43 (but he may question landlord's status). As to adverse possession, see Kristomoni v. Secretary of State, 3 C. W. N., 99 (1898).

(5) Muthuraiyan v. Sinna Samariayan (1905), 28 M., 526; 15 M. L. J., 525; Bilas Kunwar v. Ranjit Singh, P. C., 37 A, 557 (1915); 42 I. A, 202; Ganpat Rai v Multan, 38 A., 226 (1916). Makham Singh v Baisakhi Ramshah, 50 I. C., 591.

(6) Jainarayan Bose v Kadambini Dasi, 7 B. L. R, 723 n. (1869); Vasudev D[illegible] v. Babaji Ranu, 8 Bom. H. C., A C., 175 (1871); Banee Madhub v. Thakoor Dass, B. L. R, Sup. Vol, 588 F. B. (1865). 14 W. R. Burn & Co. v. Busho Moyee, 14 W. R. 85 (1870); Gouree Dass v. Jagunath Roy, 7 W. R, 25, 26 (1867); Mohesh Chunder v. Gooroo Prosad, Marsh., 277 (1863) Trimbak Ramchandra Pandit v. Sheth Gulam Zilani Walker, S C. (1909), 34 B. 329.

(7) Bigelow, op. cit, 6th Ed., 553. Bhaiganta Bewa v. Himmat Rulyatr, 24 C. L. J., 103 (1916); Fawan Das Bhattacharjee v. Nilmadhub Saha 44 C. 771 (1917). But see Venkata Chetty v Aiyanna Goundan, F. B, 40 M., 561 (1917) (estoppel from execution of lease before possession given).

(8) Rup Chand v. Sarbeswar Chandra, supra.

(9) Venkata Chetty v. Aiyanna Goundan, F. B, 40 M., 561 (1917) (Abdur Rahim J dissenting). See also Makham Singh v Baisakhi Ramshah, 50 I C., 571

only(1); an unnamed landlord letting by means of an agent (2); and one of several co-sharers. If a person take a lease from one of several co-sharers, he cannot dispute his lessor's exclusive title to receive the rent or sue in ejectment.(3) The estoppel will also enure for the benefit of a lessor who has no title whatever, and the person let into possession will not be permitted to set up this want of title (4) The question of the lessor's title is foreign to a suit for rent or in ejectment against a lessee. And this is so, though the ostensible lessor is merely a trustee and liable to account to the cestui-que-trust (5) But in another case, where a person acting as trustee of a temple assigned part of its lands on kanam and it was afterwards found that he had never been such trustee, it was held that the assignee was not estopped from denying his right to assign though estopped from denying the temple's title.(6) In this country the principle that a tenant cannot dispute his landlord's title has been made to yield to the influence of the benami system. The tenant when sued for rent due to his lessor has been allowed to prove that the person from whom, nominally, he accepted a lease, was only a benamidar for a third person to whom the rent was really due (7) And conversely where a landlord had accepted rent continuously from persons in whose names a lease had been taken for the benefit of their husbands, when the benamidars were unable to pay, he was allowed to sue the persons really interested in the lease.(8) A plaintiff having sued to obtain possession of certain land which the defendant held as tenant and in respect of which he had for some [illegible] e time when he became ten[illegible] to him the premises lease[illegible] was found to be a mere ben[illegible] topped from asserting the tenancy, and under the circumstances was entitled to recover.(9) And it was held by the Madras High Court that where a deed is executed by a tenant in favour of a person benami for another, the real owner and not the benamidar is the landlord whose title the tenant is estopped from denying under this section, and that in a suit by such benamidar for rent the tenant can deny

---

(1) Board v. Board, L R, 9 Q. B, 53, see Bigelow, op. cit, 362, 363, 538, 539

(2) Fleming v Gooding, 10 Bing, 549

(3) Jamsedji Sorabji v. Lakshmiram Rajaram, 13 B., 323 (1888).

(4) Tadman v Henman, L R., 2 Q B (1893), 168, 170, and this is so, though the tenancy be created by a deed which shows that the landlord possessed no legal estate, Bigelow, op cit, 6th Ed, 582—585, 609, 610; Jolly v. Arbuthnot, 4 DeG. & J, 224; Morton v. Woods, L R, 4 Q B, 293; Duke v Ashby, 7 H. & N, 600 As to objection to validity of lessor's title on the ground of want of registration, see Shums Ahmud v. Goolam Moheeood-deen, N-W. P. H. C, 153 (1871).

(5) Jainarain Bose v Kadimbini Dasi, 7 B L. R, 723, 724 note (1869), Mussamut Purnia v. Torab Ali, Wyman's Rep, 14.

(6) Thuppan Nambudripad v. Ittichiri Amma, 37 M., 373 (1914).

(7) Donzelle v. Kedarnath Chuckerbutty, 7 B. L. R, 720; 20 W. R, 352 (1871), but see contra Jainarain Bose v. Kadimbini Dasi, 7 B L R, 723 note (1869) It is to be noted that the first mentioned case was decided prior to this Act and proceeded on the ground that the technical doctrine of estoppel was not applicable to this country But that doctrine has been sanctioned by the present section, and according to the principle upon which it rests the question of the lessor's title is wholly foreign to a suit instituted against the lessee for rent. See Mohesh Chunder v Gooroopershad Ghose, Marsh, 377 (1863), Cuthbertson v Irving, 4 H & N, 758, Mussamat Purnia v Torab Ali, Wyman's Rep, 14 The principle, however, laid down in Donzelle v. Kedarnath Chuckerbutty, supra, was re-affirmed in Mussamat Indurbuttee v Shaikh Mahboob, 24 W. R, 44 (1875) When there is a benami and real tenant, the latter may be sued for the rent As to suits by landlord when the ostensible tenant is a benamidar, see Heeralal Bukhshee v. Rajkishore Moozoomdar, W. R, Sp No, 58 (1862); Judoonath Paul v. Prosunnonath Dutt, 9 W. R, 71 (1863); Prosunno Coomar v. Koylash Chunder, 8 W. R., 428, F. B (1867); Bepinbehari Choudhry v. Ramchandra Roy, 5 B. L. R, 234 (1870); Field, Ev., 6th Ed, 397.

(8) Debnath Roy v. Gudadhur Dey, 18 W. R, 532 (1872).

(9) Subuktulla v. Hari, 10 C L. R, 199 (1882).

his right to sue on the ground that he is not the person entitled, for a benamidar as such, has no right to sue unless he can show a legal right to sue under the general law.(1)

Where the plaintiff sued for possession of a house, alleging the expiry of the lease on which the defendants held as tenants, and the lower Court dismissed the suit, being of opinion the granted the lease, and that it lease ; it was held, reversing
(tenants) having executed the lease could not deny the plaintiff's title as a ground for refusing to give up possession, and the lower Court itself therefore could not go into the question (2)

A lease, like other contracts, is binding only on parties sui juris; and persons under disability, not being bound by the contract, are not estopped to deny its validity.(3) The estoppel of the tenant may rest upon the sole ground that he has received possession from the landlord. It is perforce an admission of some title in him ; and by reason of the landlord's change of position the act is deemed a binding admission that he had sufficient title to make a lease. Where, however, the tenant being already in possession, has made an attornment or acknowledgment of the tenancy, he may show that he did so through ignorance, mistake or the like.(4) The doctrine that the tenant cannot dispute his landlord's title is not confined to the action of ejectment.(5) The estoppel applies to all matters connected with, or arising out of, the contract by which the relation of landlord and tenant was created. Where in a suit for rent of land, the plaintiff alleged that he bought the land from the defendant and thereafter leased it to him year by year, and the defendant totally denied the sale and the lease no question of title was held to arise on the pleadings because if the lease were proved, the defendant would be estopped by this section from denying his landlord's title.(6) The estoppel cannot, however, extend further and affect matters quite outside that contract.(7)

The relation. In regard to the relation of mortgagor and mortgagee, without attempting to define it, it is sufficient to say that when the mortgagor retains possession, a relation is created similar to that of landlord and tenant, and the mortgagor is estopped to deny the title of the mortgagee(8), unless after a distinct disclaimer brought to the knowledge of the latter he has acquired a title by adverse possession(9), or unless the mortgage is void by Statute.(10) Thus, except where a mortgage is void by Statute, a mortgagor, is estopped from asserting that the property in question was trust-property which he had no right to mortgage.(11) And this applies to a trustee for a public purpose.(12) As between a mortgagor and a mortgagee neither can deny the title of the other for the purposes of the mortgage.(13) The same principle applies in the case of trust(14), and to certain relations between vendors and purchasers (15) And

(1) Kuppu Konan v Thirugnana Sanonandam Pillai (1908), 31 M., 461; following Kuthupommal Rajali v. Secretary of State for India (1906) 30 M., 245.
(2) Patel Kilabhai v. Hargovan Mansukh, 19 B., 133 (1894).
(3) Bigelow, op. cit, 6th Ed, 533, 534.
(4) Bigelow, op. cit, 6th Ed, 565.
(5) Delany v. Fox, 2 C. B. N. S., 768.
(6) Kaung Hla Pru v. San Paw, 3 L. B R., 90.
(7) Madras Hindu, &c, Fund v. Ragava Chetti, 19 M., 200, 207 (1895).
(8) Bigelow, op. cit, 6th Ed., 588.
(9) Doe d Higginbotham v. Barton, 11 A. & E., 307, 314; Partridge v. Bere, 5 B. & Ald, 604; Hichman v. Walman, 4 M. & W., 409; Moss v. Sallimon, 1 Doug. 279, 282; Birch v. Wright, 1 T. R. 378, 383.
(10) Bigelow, op. cit., 6th Ed, 583, 587
(11) Mahamaya Debi v. Haridas Haldar, 42 C., 455 (1915).
(12) Ib.
(13) Hillaya Subbaya v Narayanappa Timmaya, 36 B., 185 (1912).
(14) Bigelow, op. cit, 6th Ed., 591, 592
(15) Ib, 6th Ed. 590—597 Carpers Contract op. cit, 4th Ed, Ch XI Buddomoye Act, ss 98, 108, 234; (1879); Dabee v. Sitaram, 4 C., 497 Shankar Murlidhar v. Mohan Lal, 11 B.

it may be broadly asserted that the assignee or licensee of any right accepted and acted under may be estopped to deny the authority from which the right proceeds (1) A landlord is also estopped from asserting that he had no title to let his tenant in. It is an application of the maxim that no man shall derogate from his grant. It must be taken against him that he had power to do what he purported to do Hence the estoppel upon a vendor which precludes him from setting up his own want of title to defeat his own grant or sale, and hence the same estoppel upon the mortgagor of property.(2)

The existence of a tenancy may be established by proof of a written or verbal contract under the terms of which the tenant was let into possession(3), or it may be inferred from the circumstances of the case, such as the payment of rent(4), admission of the relation in a deposition in a former suit(5), [illegible] The terms [illegible] governed by [illegible] 'ear, a lease for any term exceeding a year and a lease reserving a yearly rent (8) The fact that a rent is reserved at a stated sum per year does not conclusively prove that the tenancy is from year to year (9) No difficulty arises where an actual demise is proved and it is shown that the tenant has taken possession thereunder. The permissive occupation raises an estoppel. But other acts of the tenant, such as payment of rent, stand on a different footing. Though such an act operates as an admission, it is like all other admissions rebuttable and not conclusive.(10)

---

704 [illegible] Sour- mul [illegible] Hol [illegible] Ha [illegible] G [illegible] 57 [illegible] Mu [illegible] Pra [illegible] nun [illegible] (1881)

(1) Bigelow, op cit, 6th 9d, 597, 598, Caspersz, op cit, 4th Ed, s 190 See Lavergne v Hooper, 8 M., 149 (1884).

(2) Cababé, Estoppel, 43, 44

(3) See the judgment of Field, J, in Lodai Mollah v Kally Das, 8 C, 238, 241 (1881), where the various ways in which the relation may exist are fully discussed; as also the defences to an action for rent.

(4) Rajkishore Surma v Girja Kant, 25 W. R., 66 (1875); Vasudev Daji v. Babaji Ranu, 8 Bom. H. C R., 175 (1871), Banee Madhub v Thakoor Dass, B L R., Sup. Vol, F. B, 588, 590 (1866); Durga v Jhinguri, 7 A, 511, 515 (1885); Vithaldas v Secretary of State, 26 B, 410 (1901); Gravenor v. Woodhouse, 1 Bing 38, 43 [payment of rent in all cases furnishes a strong presumption against the tenant, and it is always a good primâ facie case for the landlord]; Rogers v. Pilcher, 6 Taunt, 602; Cooper v. Blandy, 1 Bing N. C., 45; Harvey v. Francis, 2 Maclean & Robinson's Sc. App, 57; Lodai Mollah v. Kally Dass, 8 C, 238, 241 (1881). See as to the establishment of tenancy by acceptance of rent; Durga v. Jhinguri, 7 A, 51, 878 (1885); Mohesh Chunder v Ugra Kant, 24 W. R, 127 (1875), The Government v. Greedharee Lall, 4 W R, 13 (1865); the acceptance of rent must be with notice and knowledge to bind the landlord; Mirtunjaya Sircar v Gopal Chundra, 2 B L R, A C J, 131 (1868); Gour Lal v. Rameswar Bhumik, 6 B L. R, App, 92 (1870), but a landlord will be estopped by acceptance of rent with full knowledge of the facts. Gunga Bishen v Ram Gut, 2 Agra, 48 (1867). Contract to pay a certain rent may be implied from payment for a number of years; Venkatagopal v. Rangappa, 7 M., 365 (1883). The service of notice of ejectment under s. 36, Act XII of 1881, is a conclusive admission of the existence of a tenancy; Baldeo Singh v Imdad Ali, 15 A, 189 (1893). See now N.-W. P. Act III of 1901.

(5) Ohboy Gobind v. Beejoy Gobind, 9 W. R, 162 (1868).

(6) Lodai Mollah v. Kally Dass, 8 C., 238, 241 (1881); Cooper v. Blandy 1 Bing. N. C., 454

(7) Lodai Mollah v. Kally Dass, supra; Fenner v Duplock, 2 Bing., 10; Trimbak Ramchandra Pandit v. Sheikh Gulam Zilani Waiker, A. C. (1909), 34 B, 329.

(8) Sarat Chandra Dutt v. Jadab Chandra Goswami, 44 C., 214 (1917) per Sanderson, C J. and Mookerjee, J.

(9) Durga v Goberdhan, 20 C. L. J., 448 (1914); Gobinda v. Dwarkanath, 20 C. L J, 455 (1914).

(10) Banee Madhub v. Thakoor Dass, B. L R, F. B., Sup. Vol, 588 (1866).

And though the tenant is often required to make out a strong case, he may show that the payment of rent or other act on his part was done through ignorance, fraud, misrepresentation, mistake or coercion, and thus rebut the inferences arising from his acts which tend to prove the existence of the relation asserted. He may show on whose behalf the rent was received ; and when it has been paid under a mistake or misrepresentation, the tenant is not estopped from resisting further payment after discovery of the misrepresentation or mistake.(1)

In order to make the payment of rent operate as an estoppel, it is essential to show that the payments have been made as for rent due in respect of land held as a tenant ; and if upon the facts of the case it is plain that the payments have been made not for rent but on another account, the doctrine of estoppel arising from payment of rent has no place.(2) A tenant may always explain, and thereby render inconclusive, acts done through mistake or misapprehension (3) So a person is not estopped from showing that a person to whom he has paid rent is not the legal representative of the person from whom he took possession.(4) But a person will be concluded by the unexplained payment of rent from disputing the title of the person to whom rent has been so paid (5)

The relation of landlord and tenant once created between certain parties continues as b to have ceased of his tenancy as a case of adverse possession.(7) And the Privy Council has held that the estoppel applies to a tenant holding over after notice to quit.(8) The possession of a tenant not being adverse to the title of his landlord, limitation cannot be applied in a suit by the latter against the former.(9) Where a plaintiff suing to eject a defendant alleged that he had been a tenant but was holding over and failed to prove the tenancy, which the defendant denied, it was held that the possession was adverse and the suit barred by limitation.(10) But in

(1) See cases cited at pp 873–875, post; Harvey v Francis, 2 Maclean and Robinson's Sc App, 57; Doe d. Barlow v. Wiggins, 4 Q B, 367, Cooper v. Blandy, 1 Bing N C., 45; Banee Madhub v. Thakoor Dass, B L. R, Sup. Vol, 588, F. B. (1866), s. c, W. R., F. B, 71; Collector of Allahabad v Suraj Buksh, 6 N.-W. P. 333 (1874) [A person accepting a lease under coercion is not bound by such acceptance, nor do payments of rent by him to the person granting the lease stop him from questioning the title of the payee, unless the payee let him into possession. Even then the effect of the payment as estoppel would be confined to the title of the payee at the time possession was given] As to the somewhat analogous case of payment of taxes raising no estoppel, see Pitamberdas v. Jambusar Municipality, 17 B, 510 (1892)

(2) Attorney-General v Stephen, 6 DeG. M & G, 111, 136

(3) Banee Madhab v Thakoor Dass, B L. R., Sup Vol, 588, F. B (1866); Doe d Plevin v Brown, 7 A & E. 447, 450

(4) Banee Madhub v Thakoor Dass, supra.

(5) Vasudev Daji v Babaji Ranu, 8 Bom. H. C. R, A C, 175 (1871); [citing Cooper v. Blandy, 1 Bing N C., 45, Doe d Barlow v Wiggins, 4 Q B, 367]

(6) S 109, ante, Rungo Lall v Adbool Guffoor, 4 C., 314, 316, 317 (1878); Krishnaji Ramchandra v. Antaji Pandurang, 18 B, 256, 258 (1893). See Zamorin of Calicut v. Narayana Mussad, 22 M. 323 (1899). As to adverse action by third party, see Kunhunni Menon v Kannan Thaza, 45 I C, 656, cited post

(7) Krishnaji Ramchandra v. Antaji Pandurang, 18 B., 256, 258 (1893); Tatia v Sadashiv, 7 B, 40 (1882).

(8) Bilas Kunwar v Desraj Ranjit Singh, P C., 42 I. A, 202 (1915), 37 A. 557.

(9) Shristeedhar v. Kalikant, 1 W R. 171 (1864); Rajkishore Surma v Gora Kant, 25 W. R., 66 (1876); Watson & Co. v. Ranee Shurut, 7 W. R., 395 (1867); Lakaoo Khan v. Wise, 18 W. R., 455 (1872); Baboo Doolee v. Sham Behance, 24 W. R, 133 (1875); Haradhun Roy v Hulodhur Chunder, 25 W. R., 56 (1876) But the rule is applicable to those cases only in which the parties are really related to each other as landlord and tenant, Dinomoney Dabea v. Doorga Pershad, 12 B. L. R, 274 (1873); Madan Sa v Nagappa, 7 B, 96 (1882).

(10) Haji Khan v Baldeo Das 24 A. 90 (1901).

here the plaintiff sued to eject the defendant notice to quit, and the defendant alleged een in possession for fourteen years, it was held that on this plea his possession had never been adverse to the extent of the entire interest of the owner.(1) An alleged tenant who is in fact a trespasser may set up a case of tenancy and also raise the issue of limitation (2) The possession of a tenant is in the eye of the law the possession of his landlord(3). Where land is leased to a person for life, and upon the latter's death, his heirs continue in possession without obtaining a fresh lease or paying any rent to the landlord, the heirs, though not in possession as tenants, are not trespassers. Their possession is permissive and not adverse until they expressly set up a title of ownership in the property.(4) And in the undermentioned case it was held by the Allahabad High Court that possession acquired during the continuance of a lease will not ordinarily be adverse possession as against the lessor, until, at any rate, such time as the lessor becomes entitled to possession.(5) When the relationship of landlord and tenant has once been proved cient
, and some essly Mere
discontinuance of payment of rent does not constitute a dispossession within the meaning of the ninth section of the Specific Relief Act (7) The mere resumption of a lakhiraj tenure by Government does not dissolve the contract between the zemindar and tenant. The latter has the option to determine his tenancy, or he may consent that the amount of revenue which the landlord must pay to Government or a portion of it, shall be added to his original jummat(8) Where a tenant has, by the direction of his landlord, paid rent to a third person, the landlord is estopped from recovering so much of the rent as the tenant has paid or made himself liable to pay in consequence of that representation (9) A landlord may also be estopped from treating as his tenant him whom he has required to enter into that relation with another instead of himself.(10) In the undermentioned case it was held that the landlord, after having accepted rent from all the heirs, had no right to ignore some of them (11) According to English law a tenant by accepting a lease for a new term, even less than the existing one, is held impliedly to surrender the previous tenancy, and by the acceptance of

---

(1) Moti Lal v Kalu Mondur, 19 C L J, 321 (1913), per Mookerjee, J

(2) Dinomonce v Doorga Pershad, 12 B L R, 274 (1873)

(3) Grish Chunder v Bhagwan Chunder, 13 W R, 191 (1869)

(4) Krishnaji Ramchandra v Antaji Pandurang, 18 B, 256 (1893), Hellier v Sillcox, 16 L J, Q B, N S, 295 Disclaimer of a landlord's title after suit brought in the pleading does not of itself determine the tenancy and render notice to quit unnecessary, Ambabai v. Bhau Bin, 20 B, 759 (1895) See Venkaji Krishna v. Lukshman Devji, 20 B, 354 (1895)

(5) Thammam Pande v Maharaja of Vizianagram (1907), 29 A, 593, following Muhamad Husain v Mul Chand (1904) 27 A, 395 dissenting from Gobinda Nath Shaha Choudry v Surja Kantha Lahiri (1899) 26 C, 460

(6) Rungo Lall v Abdool Guffoor, 4 C, 317 (1878), 3 C L R, 119, Tiru-Churan Perumal v Sangudien, 3 M, 118 (1881), Tulia v Sadashiv, 7 B, 40 (1882), Troyluckho Tarinee v Mohima Chundra, 7 W R, 400 (1867) [the mere omission to pay rent does not constitute adverse possession] Poresh Narain v Kasi Chunder, 4 C, 661 (1878)

(7) Tarini Mohun v Gunga Prosad 14 C, 649 (1887), Dhunput Singh v Mahomed Kazim, 24 C, 296, 304 (1896).

(8) Mt Farzhore v Azizunnissa, B L R, Sup Vol, F B, 175 (1865).

(9) White v Greenish, 11 C B, N S, 209, as to conduct not sufficient to bar landlord's rights, see Rambhat v. Bababhat, 18 B, 260 (1893)

(10) Downs v Cooper, 2 Q B, 256

(11) Ananda Coomar v Hari Das, 4 C W. N, 608 (1900)

the new lease estops himself from setting up the old one.(1) It has been said(2) that such a rule has no application in this country out of the Presidency-towns, it being notoriously customary for tenants who hold protected tenures to accept fresh leases upon every change of proprietorship, whether by inheritance, private sale, or auction-purchase. The new lease is generally regarded as confirmatory of the tenure, and the fact ... ally, though not always, mentioned th... a ... y ... s ... hat what may amount to a surrender in any particular case will always in this country be a question of intention, and that if in fact the tenant by his acceptance of a fresh lease intended to, and did surrender his old lease, the ordinary rule of estoppel will apply; but there will be no estoppel if the fresh lease be, and was intended to be, confirmatory only of the preceding one.(3)

"Persons claiming through such tenant."

As in other cases the estoppel binds the tenant's privies as well as the tenant(4), so if the tenant sublet the premises the sub-lessee cannot dispute the title of the original lessor.(5) But although a tenant who has been let into possession of land by a lessor is estopped from disputing his lessor's title, as are also persons claiming through him whether as assignee of the lease(6) or as undertenant(7), or as licensee(8), ... tenant(9) yet third persons, not claiming p... so estopped. A person therefor... to a tenant, cannot distrain for arrears of rent due from the tenant the goods of a third person which happen to have been brought on to the premises by the tenant's license (10)

"Persons claiming through landlord."

The question whether the relation of landlord and tenant exists may have to be decided under one of two possible cases; (i) where the plaintiff has let the defendant into possession of the land; (ii) when the plaintiff is not himself the person who lets the defendant into possession, but claims under a title derived from the person who did. This section applies to the first case and estops the tenant from denying the landlord's title. In the second case of derivative title (that is, by assignment, including gift, sale, devise, lease or by inheritance, including adoption amongst Hindus), when the plaintiff claims by derivative title the defendant is not estopped from showing that the title is not really in the plaintiff, but in some other person.(11) As the estoppel is available against the representatives of the lessee, so it enures for the benefit of those claiming under the original lessor. Thus in the case cited below(12) the defendant hired apartments by the year from one W, who afterwards let the entire house to the plaintiff. In an action by the latter against the defendant for use and occupation, it was held that the defendant having used and occupied the premises under a lease from W was not competent to impeach his title or that of the plaintiff

(1) As to surrender, see Bigelow, op. cit, 6th Ed, 567, 568; Reed v. Lyon, 13 M. & W., 285.

(2) Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 398, referring to Ram Chunder v. Jugheschunder, 12 B. L. R., 22 (1873); Roy Odooyte v. Ubhurun Roy, 4 W. R., Act X, 1 (1865); Puddo Monee v. Jholla Polly, 7 W. R., 283 (1867).

(3) See Caspersz, op. cit, 4th Ed, p 253.

(4) Bigelow, op. cit, 6th Ed, 534, the doctrine of privity is illustrated by Doe d. Bullen v Mills, 2 A. & E, 17; Rennie v. Robinson, 1 Bing, 147; London & E.-W. Ry Co v. West, L. R., 2 C. P., 553 (1867)

(5) Barwick v. Thomson, 7 T. R., 488.

(6) Doe d. Bullen v. Mills, 2 A. & E., 17; Taylor v. Needham, 2 Taunt, 278.

(7) Doe d Spencer v. Beckett, 4 Q B., 601.

(8) Doe d Johnson v. Baytup, 3 A. & E, 188.

(9) Pasupati v. Narayana, 13 M., 335 (1889).

(10) Tadman v. Henman L. R. (1893), Q B., 168. See L. Q R., Vol IX, 309.

(11) Lodai Mollah v Kally Dass, 8 C., 238, 241, 243 (1881). See Mahara's Ja-pur v. Surjan, 44 A., 671 (1922).

(12) Rennie v. Robinson, 1 Bing., 147.

who claimed through him. Further an attornment to one claiming under the original lessor leaves the tenant ordinarily in precisely the same position (so far ...or is concerned) as he ... in the one case more ... ornment or not, the tenant may always show that the claimant has no derivative title from his original lessor or that the derivative title is defective, or that an attornment made by him to the person claiming under the original lessor was made under the influence of fraud, or mistake or the like (2) Thus though the lessee of A will be estopped to deny the title of A from whom he received possession, he will not be so estopped should A assign the premises to B, from disputing B's title by showing either that A's title was not such a one as would enable him to pass a legal estate to B, or that even if it was such, A's title had determined.(3) In such cases the title of the landlord who let the tenant into possession is not impeached, but only the title of him who claims to be the successor of the landlord. Without denying the landlord's title, the derivative title of his alleged successor may be impeached in several ways. It is clear, firstly, that if a man takes land from one person and afterwards pays rent to another, believing that other to be the representative of the person from whom he took the land, he is not estopped from proving that the person to whom he so paid rent was not the legal representative of the person from whom he took; for example if a man pays rent to another believing him to be the heir-at-law of his deceased landlord, and afterwards discovers that he is not the heir-at-law, or that the landlord left a will, the tenant in a suit for subsequent arrears of rent would not be estopped from showing that he paid the former arrears under a mistake, and that the person to whom he so paid had no title (4) It may be ...e original lessor (5) So ... showing that, however ...ere has been in fact no ... shown that the original ... pass the legal estate to the plaintiff(7), or that the original lessor's title had determined.(8) If again a tenant being already in possession of the premises executed a lease in favour of a ... from the last own... whom he has so ... e cases above men... at the person whose title is disputed is not the person who let the tenant into possession, and is not therefore a person in favour of whose own title the estoppel operates. The words "at the beginning of the tenancy" in this section, only apply to

---

(1) Trimbak Ramchandra Pandit v Shekh Gulam Zilani Waiker, A. C. (1909), 34 B, 329.

(2) Bigelow, op cit, 6th Ed, 577—579, 580, Gouree Dass v Jagunnath Roy, 7 W. R., 25, 26 (1867); Lall Mahomed v. Kallanus, 11 C, 519 (1884).

(3) Doe d Higginbotham v Barton, 11 A & E, 387, the tenant may always show that the assignment was ineffectual to pass the lessor's title, Hilbourn v. Fogg, 99 Mass, 1 (Amer), citing the last and other cases. Bigelow, op cit. 6th Ed, 580, 581 note

(4) Banee Madhub v Thakur Dass, B L. R., Sup Vol, F B, 588, 590 (1866), Gouree Das v. Jagunnath Roy, 7 W. R, 25, 26 (1867).

(5) Bigelow, op cit, 6th Ed, 578, 579, 580, cf. Cornish v Searell, 8 B & C, 471

(6) Accidental Death Ins Co v Mackenzie, 10 C B N S, 870, Ranee Tillessuree v. Ranee Asmedh, 24 W R, 101 (1875) [A tenant is not prevented from ...

... & E, 307

(8) Doe d Higginbotham v Barton, 11 A. & E, 307, Lall Mahomed v. Kallanus, 11 C, 519 (1884); in this last case it was alleged, that the title of the person under whom the Jote had originally been held had expired owing to the execution of a deed of mimangsapatra

(9) Lall Mahomed v Kallanus, supra cases in which tenants are put into possession of the tenancy by the person to whom they have attorned, and not to cases in which the tenants have previously been in possession.(1) A tenant further is not estopped to allege that he was let into possession under a title since acquired by him, under which subordinately the landlord claims.(2) When ; [illegible] in possession has attorned or paid rent, or [illegible] ncy, he may show that he did so throug [illegible] resentation(5) mistake(6), or coercion(7), and [illegible] ease by these means, he may dispute the title of the person claiming to be his lessor.(8) In a case in the Bombay High Court where the defendant had purported to resign his occupancy rights in a khotki to the plaintiff who was one of the khots, and had at the same time attorned to him, accepting a lease for five years, it was held that the resignation and lease we [illegible] tainted with illegality and that the parties [illegible] could not estop the defendant from show [illegible] there is no estoppel against an Act of Parliament or in this country against an Act of the Legislature.(9)

" Continuance of the tenancy."

Although a tenant may not, during the continuance of the tenancy, deny that his landlord had a title at the beginning of such tenancy, he may show that his landlord's title has expired or determined ;(10) for this section only refers to the title at the beginning of the tenancy and operates as an estoppel during the continuance of the tenancy.(11) In such a case he does not dispute the title, but confesses and avoids it by matter ex post facto.(12) Justice requires that the tenant should be permitted to raise his plea, for a tenant is liable to

(1) Ib, see Seetharama Raju v Bayannal Pantudlu, 17 M, 278 (1894); Bigelow, op cit, 6th Ed 569, 571 As to what constitutes a letting into possession, see Taylor, Ev., § 103

(2) Ford v Ager, 2 H & C, 279.

(3) Jew v Wood, Cr & P, 185; Fenner v Duplock, 2 Bing, 10; Gregory v. Dodge, 3 Bing, 474, followed in Ketu Dass v Surendra Nath, 7 C W N., 596 (1903), see Jesingbhai v Hataji 4 B, 79 (1879); Brijonath Chowdhry v. Lall Meah, 14 W R., 391 (1870)

(4) Bigelow, op. cit, 6th Ed, 569; Franklin v Merida, 35 Cal, 558 (Amer.); Doe d Barlow v Wiggins, 4 Q B, 367.

(5) Doe d Plevin v. Brown, 7 A. & E, 447; Gravenor v. Woodhouse, 1 Bing., 38, 43.

(6) Jew v Wood, supra; Rogers v. Pitcher, 6 Taunt, 202; followed in Ketu Das v. Surendra Nath, 7 C W. N, 596 (1903); followed Doe d Plevin v. Brown, 7 A & E, 447; Cornish v. Searell, 8 B. & C, 471; Gravenor v. Woodhouse 1 Bing., 38; Vithaldas v Secretary of State, 26 B, 410 (1901); [admission of payment of rent raises a primâ facie presumption of title and throws the onus on the other party of showing that it was made by mistake]. For a case under s 60 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, see Durga Das v. Samash Akon, 4 C. W. N., 606 (1895).

(7) Collector of Allahabad v. Suraj Buksh, 6 N.-W. P., 333 (1874); Lall Mahomed v Kallanus, 11 C, 519 (1885).

(8) Bigelow, op cit, 6th Ed, 565, 569. The tenant or his assignee, it may then be broadly stated, is not estopped, to explain the circumstances under which, being already in possession, he has made an attornment to the plaintiff, ib, 6th Ed., 565, 569, 570.

(9) Shridhar Balkrishna v Babaji Mura 38 B., 709 (1914).

(10) As by proving eviction by title paramount, Ram Chandra Chatterji v Pramathanath Chatterji, 35 C. L. J., 146 (1922).

(11) Ammu v Ramkrishna, 2 M., 22 (1879); Subbaraya v Krishnappa, 12 M., 426 (1888); the English authorities are numerous, see Mountjoy v Collier, 1 E. & B., 630, 640; Hopcraft v. Keys 9 Bing., 613; Gravenor v. Woodhouse, 1 Bing., 38; England d. Neave v. Moss, 1 Bing, 360; Claridge v. Mackenzie, 4 M. & Gr., 143; Doe d Syburn v. Slade, 4 T. R., 682; Marriott v. Edwards, 5 B. & Ald., 1055; and Baru Downs v. Cooper, 2 Q. B., 256; & Co. v. Bushomoyee Dossee, 14 W. R., 85 (1870); Mohan Mahtoo v. Meer Shamsool, 21 W. R, 5 (1873). The defendant may show that the plaintiff's title has expired or has been defeated by title paramount; as for example, that the plaintiff's tenure has been avoided by sale for arrears of revenue;; Lodai Mollah v Kally Dass Roy, 8 C., 238, 440, 241 (1881), or eviction by title paramount: Ram Chandra Chatterji v. Pramathanath Chatterji, 35 C. L. J., 146 (1922).

(12) Field, Ev. 6th Ed., 398

the person who has the real title and may be forced to make payment to him, and it would be unjust if, being so liable, he could not show the expiry or determination of his landlord's title as a defence.(1) In a case in the Madras High Court where a person purporting to be dharmakarta of a temple granted a lease of the temple property and, during the tenancy, was held, in a separate suit, not to be the rightful dharmakarta, but the tenant did not attorn to his successor and was not evicted by him, it was held in a suit by the lessor for rent that the tenancy had not been determined and this section estopped the tenant from denying his title.(2) Although a tenant may show that his landlord's title has expired, yet if he enters on a new tenancy he shall be bound; but before he can be so bound, it must appear that he was acquainted with all the circumstances of the landlord's title The landlord, before he enters into a new contract, must explain to the tenant that his former title is at an end.(3) It is well settled that a tenant in possession cannot even after the expiration of his lease, deny his landlord's title without actually and openly surrendering possession to him, or being evicted by title paramount, or attorning thereto, or at least giving notice to his landlord that he shall claim under another and a valid title.(4) A tenant in possession cannot, even after the expiration of the tenancy, deny his landlord's title without actually and openly surrendering possession to him. A tenant who has executed a lease but has not been let into possession by the lessor, is estopped from denying his lessor's title in the absence of proof that he executed the lease in ignorance of the defect in his lessor's title, or that his execution of the lease was procured by fraud, misrepresentation or coercion.(5) The tenant must give up possession to the landlord, and then if he has any title aliunde, that title may be tried in a suit of ejectment brought by him against his former landlord (6) A tenant who has been let into possession by a landlord under a lease for a term of years is bound to surrender it to such landlord at the expiration of such lease, even apart from any covenant by the tenant to surrender. He cannot set up a jus tertii in a third person having a title paramount, unless during the period of the tenancy there has been an ouster by the person having the title paramount, so as to determine the original lessor's right at the date of the lease.(7) Adverse action taken by a third party whether that party be the Government, or some other p of landlord

denying the y one person

cannot alter the character of his possession and make it adverse to the landlord by going over to another person and paying rent to him.(9) A very important qualification of the rule of the tenant's estoppel prevails in the case of an actual disclaimer. If the tenant disclaim to hold of his lessor, and notice of the fact is brought home to the lessor, the tenant's possession then becomes adverse; the lessor may at once eject him from the premises; and if he fails to do so before the period of Limitation has expired, the tenant may then set

(1) Mountjoy v. Collier, 1 E. & B., 630, 640; see Goponund Jha v. Lalla Gobind, 12 W. R., 109 (1869); [when a tenant is sued for rent he can set up eviction by title paramount to that of his lessor as an answer: and if evicted from part of the land an apportionment of the rent may take place] Lodai Mollah v Kally Dass, 8 C., 241, 242 (1881). As to what constitutes eviction, see, Dhunput Singh v. Mahomed Kasim, 24 C. at p 300 (1896).

(2) Devalraju v Mahomed Jaffer Saheb, 36 M., 53 (1913) But see Thuppan Nambudripad v. Iltichiri Amma, 37 M., 373 (1914) (tenant held not estopped).

(3) Fenner v. Duplock, 2 Bing., 10.

(4) Bigelow, op cit, 6th Ed, 562

(5) Makham Singh v Baisakhi Ramshah, 50 I. C., 591

(6) Vasudev v Daji Babaji, 8 Bom. H. C. R, 175 (1871); Bilas Kunwar v. Desraj Ranjit Singh, P. C., 37 A., 557 (1915).

(7) Bankalal Vittel v Chidriomokkausa, 15 Mad. L. J., 368 (1905).

(8) Kunhunni Menon v. Kannan Thava, 45 I. C., 656.

(9) Abdul Hakim v. Pana Mia Miah, 51 I. C., 494.

up his own title acquired by adverse possession or the title of any other person under whom he claims to hold. But he cannot set up such title in an action brought by the lessor before the expiration of the period of Limitation.(1)

"At the beginning of the tenancy"

These words only apply to cases in which tenants are put into possession of the tenancy by the person to whom they have attorned, and not to cases in which the tenants have previously been in possession.(2) Where, however in a suit for rent the tenant denied the execution of the kabuliyat propounded not been inducted into the land by the plaintiffs (3) It was pointed out in this case that in Lal Mahomed v. Kallanus no question was raised or decided as to what, if any, limitations there are of the tenant's privilege to deny the title of his lessor after attornment when he was not inducted by such lessor; and that it was not intended to lay down th select his rent receiver and execute a so rent, and pay him rent for a time with the land, and thereafter at any time dec title in him, and without attempting to show any other circumstances which would invalidate the contract of tenancy. Certain property was mortgaged in 1884. In 1889 the appellant took from the mortgagors and another person a lease of certain lands which included a portion of the mortgaged property. In a suit by the mortgagee on his mortgage to which the appellant was made a party defendant; it was held that though as between the lessors and lessee under that lease, it might well be that the lessee, who was represented by the appellant, was estopped from saying that, at the date of that lease, the share mentioned in it was not the share of the lessors; yet that the appellant was not, in 1889, estopped from showing that the mortvhole of the mortgaged property at the time the i e., five years before the lease was taken by of the Madras High Court has held that the tenancy and the estoppel under it begin at the execution of the lease before possession is given.(5)

Licensee

The rule of the tenant's estoppel prevails against one who is in possession of land under a mere license.(6) The rule as to claiming title applied to the case of a tenant, extends also to that of a person coming in by permission as a mere lodger or as a servant. There is no distinction between the case of a tenant and that of a common licensee. Both have been let into possession by the act of the landlord, and the licensee by asking permission admits that there is a title in the landlord, and the law under such circumstances implies a tenancy.(7) The case last cited was an ejectment in which it appeared that the defendant applied to the plaintiff then in possession of the premises for the privilege of getting vegetables from the garden, and that having obtained the keys he fraudulently took possession and set up a claim to the land The Court refused to hear it.(8)

(1) Bigelow, op cit., 6th Ed. 578.
(2) Lall Mahomed v. Kallanus, 11 C., 519; see Seetharama Raju v. Bayanna Pantulun, 17 M, 278 (1894).
(3) Ketu Dass v. Surendra Nath, 7 C. W N 596 (1903).
(4) Prosunno Kumar v. Mahabharat Saha, 7 C W. N., 75 (1903); as to adverse possession, see Fatteh Singji v. Bamanji, 5 Bom. L R, 274 (1903).
(5) Venkata Chetty v. Aiyanna Goundan, F. B 40 M, 561 (1917) (Abdur Rahim, J dissenting)
(6) Bigelow, op. cit, 6th Ed, 586, Doe d. Johnson v Baytup, 3 A. & E., 188; Sinna Samaiyan Mutthunaiyan v. (1905), 28 M, 526. See for position of licensee Moti Lal v. Kalu Mondar, 19 C. L. J. 321 (1913).
(7) Doe d Johnson v Baytup, 3 A & E, 188
(8) See also for another example of the licensee's estoppel: Gour Hari v Amirunnissa Khatoon, 11 C. L. R, 9 (1881); see.

117. No acceptor of a bill of exchange shall be permitted to deny that the drawer had authority to draw such bill or to endorse it; nor shall any bailee or licensee be permitted to deny that his bailor or licensor had, at the time when the bailment or license commenced, authority to make such bailment or grant such license.

Estoppel of acceptor of Bill of Exchange, bailee or licensee.

Explanation 1.—The acceptor of a bill of exchange may deny that the bill was really drawn by the person by whom it purports to have been drawn.

Explanation 2.—If a bailee delivers the goods bailed to a person other than the bailor, he may prove that such person had a right to them as against the bailor.

Principle.—These are further instances of the estoppel by agreement The acceptance of a bill amounts to an undertaking to pay to the order of the drawer, but the transaction would be idle if after having so undertaken, the acceptor were allowed to set up that the drawer had no authority to draw the bill. He is therefore precluded from doing so, for to allow him to do so would be to allow him to contradict that which his act of acceptance really imports (1) The estoppel of bailee and licensee is analogous to that of landlord and tenant and is based on similar principles.(2)

Bigelow on Estoppel, 6th Ed, (1913) 519—539, 592—597, Estoppel by Representation and Res Judicata, 4th Ed (1915) Ch. VII, X; Taylor, Ev. §§ 850—853; Everest and Strode's Law of Estoppel (1884), 2nd Ed, (1907) 308, 309, Story on Bills of Exchange, §§ 113, 114, 115, 252, 262, 412, Act XXVI of 1881 (Negotiable Instruments) Ed. by M. D. Chalmers (1913) Cababé, Principles of Estoppel (1888).

COMMENTARY.

Estoppels in the case of negotiable instruments are instances of estoppel by agreement or contract. Rules such as those contained in this section may be called ' estoppels,' but they are estoppels springing from the nature of the transaction founded upon mercantile custom, and may now be regarded as Statutory estoppels.(3) This section is in accordance with English Law(4), except as to the fi may show that the allowed to do so;
signature.(5) And in the undermentioned case it was held by the Calcutta High Court that no person can claim a title a forged endorsement, for such an endorse supplemented by sections 41 and 42 of the Estoppel of acceptor of bill of exchange.

as to licenses Act V of 1882 (Easements), ss 52—56.

(1) Cababé, Estoppel, 44; Rup Chand v Sarbeswar Chandra, 10 C. W. N, 747 (1906); s c, 3 C. L. J, 629

(2) Rup Chand v. Sarbeswar Chandra, supra

(3) Bigelow, op cit, 6th Ed 519—539 Caspersz, op. cit., 4th Ed, Ch. VII. Chalmers on Bills of Exchange, 8th Ed, 210—211.

(4) See Taylor, Ev., § 851.

(5) Sanderson v. Coleman, 4 M. & Gr, 209; as to estoppels arising out of adoption of forged signatures, see Brook v. Brook, L. R., 6 Ex, 89, 99, Ashpitel v. Bryan, 3 B. & S, 474, 492; Mackenzie v. British Linen Co, L. R, 6 App Case, 109.

(6) Banku Behari Sikdar v. Secretary of State for India in Council (1908), 36 C, 239, following Hunsraj Purmanand v. Ruttonji Walji, 24 B, 65, and dissenting from Chandra Kalee Dabee v. Chapman, 32 C, 799 of 1881), which provide for the liability of the acceptor in the case of a forged indorsement and of a bill drawn in a fictitious name (1) Other sections define the position of the maker of a note(2), or cheque(3), an acceptor before maturity(4), the drawer until acceptance(5), the acceptor(6) and indorser.(7)

Sections 118—122 of Act XXVI of 1881 (as amended by Acts V of 1914 and VIII of 1919) enact special rules of evidence with regard to negotiable instruments. There are certain presumptions as to consideration, date, time of acceptance, time of transfer, order of indorsement, stamp, and as to the holder being a holder in due course.(8) On proof of protest the Court will also presume the fact of dishonour.(9) The same Act then proceeds to enact three cases of estoppel against the maker of a note, the drawer of a bill or cheque, the acceptor of a bill, and the indorser, which are here reproduced

No maker of a promissory note, and no drawer of a bill of exchange or cheque, and no acceptor of a bill of exchange for the honour of the drawer, shall, in a suit thereon by a holder in due course, be permitted to deny the validity of the instrument as originally made or drawn.(10)

No maker of a promissory note and no acceptor of a bill of exchange payable to, or to the order of, a specified person shall, in a suit thereon by a holder in due course, be permitted to deny the payee's capacity, at the date of the note or bill, to indorse the same (11)

No indorser of a negotiable instrument shall, in a suit thereon by a subsequent holder, be permitted to deny the signature or capacity to contract of any prior party to the instrument.(12)

Section 20 deals with inchoate instruments.(13) As to estoppels arising out of negligence and agency in connection with negotiable instruments, see note below; they are but instances of the general estoppel by omission, to which reference has been made in section 115, ante.(14)

The bonâ fide holder for value of a forged hundi, to whom, after it had been dishonoured, it had been transferred by indorsement by the payees, who at the time of indorsement knew that the hundi was forged, sued the payees on the hundi to recover the amount he had paid them for it. Held that the payees were estopped from setting up the forgery of the hundi as a bar to the suit (15)

Estoppel of Bailee and Licensee

The relation between bailor and bailee is analogous to that of landlord and tenant. He will not be permitted to deny his bailor's title any more than the tenant may deny title of his landlord (see section 116, ante). But by the second explanation to this section, the same exception applies to his case as to that of

(1) See Chalmers' Neg. Inst. Act, p. 49.
(2) Act XXVI of 1881, ss. 32, 37.
(3) Ib., s. 37.
(4) Ib, s. 32.
(5) Ib, s 32.
(6) Ib, ss 37, 88
(7) Ib, s. 88.
(8) Ib, s 118.
(9) Act XXVI of 1881, s 119.
(10) Ib, s 120
(11) Ib, s 121.
(12) Act XXVI of 1881, s. 122, Thicknesse v Bromilow, 2 Cr. & J, 425; McGregor v Rhodes, 6 E & B, 266; the above sections appear generally to represent the English law upon the same subject, see Chalmers' Neg. Inst Act, 113, 114.
(13) See Foster v. Mackennon, D. R, 4 C P., 704, 712; Russell v. Langstaffe, 2 Doug, 496, Wahidunnissa v Durgadass, 5 C., 39; Bigelow, op. cit, 6th Ed., 493, 534, 612, 613.—It has been said to be doubtful whether the liability in these cases rests on estoppel or on the law-merchant· Ex-parte Swan, 7 C B, N S, 446; as to Instruments lost or stolen, see Act XXVI of 1881, s 58, Baxendale v Bennett, L R, 3 Q B. D, 525.
(14) Everest and Strode's Estoppel, 2nd Ed 315. Caspersz, op cit, 4th Ed, §§ 124—130, pp 133—140 Young v. Grote, 4 Bing, 53; Ingham v. Primrose, 7 C. B. N S, 82, Arnold v Cheque Bank, L R, 1 C. P. D., 578; Scholfield v Earl of Londesborough, L. R, 1894, 2 Q B, 660; Bank of England v Vagliano Bros, L R, App. Cas., 91; L R, 23 Q B. D, 243, L R, 23, Q. B D, 103; Bhupatram v Hari Pria, 5 C W N, 313 (1900)
(15) Bishen Chand v Rajendra Kishore, 5 A, 302 (1883).

the tenant, namely, that where something equivalent to title paramount has ... ischarged as against those who entrusted ... better title than the bailor, and conse- ... he bailor to the property claims it, the ... true ground on which a bailee may set ... eases when the bailment on which it is founded is determined by what is equivalent to an eviction by title paramount. It is not enough that the bailee has become aware of the title of a third person, nor is it enough that an adverse claim is made upon him so that he may be entitled to relief under an interpleader (1) A bailee can set up the title of another only if he defends upon the right and title and by the authority of that person (2)

As between a bailor and bailee, the latter in an action for non-delivery of goods upon the demand of his bailor must take one of the following courses (a) He may show that he has already delivered the goods upon a delivery order authorized by the bailor: or (b) he may institute a suit of interpleader: or (c) he may defend the action on behalf of the real owner, alleging and proving the title of the real owner, defending expressly upon that title.(3)

The same principle applies in the case of a wharfinger who agrees to hold goods for the plaintiff under a delivery order from a purchaser of the defendant wharfinger, he cannot resist trover for them on the ground, e.g., that they have never been separated from bulk and that, therefore, no property passed to the person delivering (4)

The rule ... ent must account to his princip ... except when the principal has ... as to the rights of some third ... rogation of those rights (5)

The position of a licensee who under a license is working a right for which another has not a patent is analogous to the position of tenant and landlord and the licensee is bound in the same way: he cannot question the validity of the patent during the continuance of the license, though he may show what the limits of the patent are.(6) A right to use a trademark may be created by ... be in the same position as ... the licensor's title or the ... repudiate the contract (7) ... e, and there is no statutory ... must be determined with Licensees. Trade-marks.

(1) As to the procedure in interpleader suits, see O XXXV, Woodroffe and Amir Ali, Civ. Pro. Code, 2nd Ed, pp 1172—1174 Rogers Sons & Co. v. Lambert, L R. (1891), 1 Q. B, 327.

(2) Biddle v. Bond, 6 B. & S., 231 followed in Rogers Sons & Co. v Lambert, supra: see Contract Act, s 166; and generally as to bailments ib., ss 148—173; Coggs v. Barnard, Sm. L. Cas; Bigelow, op. cit, 6th Ed, 592—598; Caspersz, op. cit, 4th Ed, Ch. X Everest and Strode, 2nd Ed, 293, 294.

(3) Rogers Sons & Co. v Lambert, L R. (1891), 1 Q. B, 325, per Lord Esher; as to estoppel by election to support title either of bailor or third party, see Ex-parte Davis, L R, 19 Ch D, 80 (1881).

(4) Woodley v. Coventry, 2 H & C, 164: Knights v. Wiffen, L. R, 5 Q B., 660. See remarks on this latter case in Simon v. Anglo-American Telegraph Co, L. R., 5 Q. B. D., 212 See Ganges Manufacturing Co. v. Sourujmul, 5 C., 669 (1880); Henderson & Co. v. Williams, L. R. (1895), 1 Q. B, 521.

(5) Everest and Strode, op cit, 2nd Ed. 292; Smith, Mercantile Law, 1122, 10th Ed.

(6) Clark v. Adie, 2 App. Ca, 423 In the matter of D. H. R Moses, 15 C., 244 (1887); as to estoppel against patentee, see Cropper v. Smith, 26 Ch. D., 700; Proctor v Bennis, 36 Ch. D., 749

(7) Jagarnath v. Cresswell, 40 C., 814 (1913) affirmed in Hannah v. Jagarnath, 42 C., 262 (1914).

reference to English law.(1) A trademark represents the origin of the goods to which it is attached or their trade association, and cannot be transferred apart from the good-will, which has been [illegible] good name, reputation and associati[illegible] tered as a trademark if it is a disti[illegible] name to pass off his goods as the goods of another who has the same name.(3) A distinctive mark may be used by an importer as indicating the fact that all goods bearing it have been imported by him.(4) Though in strictness the representation of a trademark may be only true of its original owner, the ordinary usage of commerce has extended it to his successors in business. This section casts on the licensee the onus of proving that the good-will did not pass to the licensor.(5)

(1) Ib. See British American Tobacco Co. v. Mahboob Buksh, 38 C., 110 (1910).

(2) Inland Revenue v Mullers Margerine, A. C, 217 (1901).

(3) Tefani's Trademark (in re) 2 Ch. D, 545 (1913).

(4) Emperor v. Latif, 39 A., 123 (1917).

(5) Hannah v. Jagarnath, supra.

CHAPTER IX

Of Witnesses.

The present Chapter deals mainly with the competency(1) and compellability(2) of witnesses. A witness is said to be incompetent to give evidence when the Judge is bound, as matter of law, to reject his testimony.(3) The motives to prevent the truth are so much more numerous in judicial investigations than in the ordinary affairs of life that the danger of injustice arising from this cause, has, till modern times, been thought to justify the observance of rules by virtue of which large and numerous classes of persons were rendered incompetent witnesses, and their testimony was uniformly excluded (4) A recognition of the artificial character of these rules of exclusion, which had no foundation or justification in actual experience, and which led to frequent injustice, and of the necessity of increasing, as much as possible, the media of investigation led gradually to the conversion of questions of competency into questions of credibility. The tendency of modern legislation has been rather to allow the witness to make his statement, leaving its truth to be estimated by the tribunal than to reject his testimony altogether.(5) Competency thus becomes the rule: incompetency the exception. and incompetency is reduced within a narrow compass. Proceeding on this principle (more thoroughly than the English law, which still retains traces of the older judicial system), the Evidence Act declares all persons to be competent witnesses except such as are wanting in intellectual capacity Granted this capacity, all persons become admissible as witnesses, it being left to the Court " to attach to their evidence that amount of credence which it appears to deserve, from their demeanour, deportment under cross-examination, motives to speak or hide the truth, means of knowledge, powers of memory, and other tests, by which the value of their statements can be ascertained, if not with absolute certainty, yet with such a reasonable amount of conviction as ought to justify a man of ordinary prudence in acting upon those statements "(6) Thus neither want of religion, nor physical defect, not involving intellectual incapacity(7); nor interest, arising from the fact that the witness is a party to the record, or wife or husband of such party(8), or otherwise; nor the fact that the witness is an accomplice in the commission of a crime(9), form any ground for the exclusion of testimony.

---

(1) Ss. 118—120, 133, post.

(2) Ss 121—132.

(3) Best, Ev, § 132

(4) See Taylor, Ev, § 1342, Sichel's Practice relating to witnesses, 1—16; Wharton, Ev, §§ 391—420; Burr. Jones, Ev, §§ 730—736, and generally §§ 730—736, Stewart Rapalje's Law of Witnesses, 1—307; Philip and Arn., Ev., 3—142. See the Statutes affecting qualifications in Wigmore, Ev., § 488.

(5) See Taylor, Ev., § 1343, et seq.; Best, Ev, §§ 622, 132 et seq.; Wigmore, Ev, § 501; see remarks in Blake v. Albion Life Assurance Society, 4 C. P. D, 109; R. v. Gopal Dass, 3 M., 271, 282 (1881). As to the credibility of and other general remarks as to witnesses, see Field's Ev., 6th Ed, 17 et seq., and Norton, Ev p 33 et seq ; Best, Ev., pp 11, 13, 15, 111. As to credibility, see Stewart Rapalje, op. cit, 305, 379.

(6) Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 399, 400.

(7) See ss. 118, 119, post.

(8) S. 120, post

(9) S. 133, post.

But the competency of a witness to give evidence is one thing, and the power to compel him to give evidence another.(1) And this compellability may be either (i) compellability to be sworn or affirmed; thus ordinarily in matrimonial proceedings the parties are competent but not compellable; they may if they choose, offer themselves as witnesses(2), and under the Bankers' Books Evidence Act(3) an officer of the Bank is not, in any proceeding to which the Bank is not a party, compellable to produce, or to appear as witness to prove, any bankers' books, without the order of a Judge made for special cause: or (ii) compellability when sworn to answer questions; thus a witness, who may be generally compellable to give evidence, may yet be protected or privileged in respect of particular matters concerning which he may be unwilling to speak.(4) Further, there are certain cases in which the law will not permit the witness to speak, even if he be willing.(5) Sections 121—132 declare exceptions to the general rules that a witness is bound to state the whole truth, or to produce any document in his possession or power relevant to the matter in issue.(6) These rules of privilege and prohibition rest on grounds of public policy which are shortly set forth in the notes to the sections which enact them (v. post). But [illegible] ...mpellable to do so. [illegible] ...dence is regulated [illegible] ...ion 134 declares that no particular number of witnesses are required for the proof of any fact.

The exclusionary rules in the present Chapter are based either directly on general considerations of public policy, such as the rules relating to affairs of State and official communications(8), information given for the detection of crime(9), and judicial disclosures(10); or on grounds of privilege, such as the rules relating to professional(11) and matrimonial(12) communications, and title-deeds and other documents.(13) In connection with these rules should be read the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code relating to discovery.(14) In fact, questions of privilege arise as frequently on applications for discovery or inspection before trial as with reference to testimony in the witness box, but the principles are substantially the same.(15) Whatever difference may exist between the case of evidence asked for or tendered at the trial, and that of an application for discovery or inspection, is altogether in favour of a refusal to order discovery in the earlier stages of the case.(16) A person interrogated under O. XI, r. 6, or ordered to produce under O. XI, r. 11 of the Civil Procedure Code, may plead his privilege in the terms of this Act. When it was contended for the defendant that even if a case submitted by the plaintiff to his counsel could not be used in evidence under section 129 of the Evidence Act, yet the defendant was entitled to have inspection of it under O. XI, r. 11 of the Civil Procedure Code, such contention was disallowed by West, J., who said: "The argument that albeit the document may not be such that the Court

---

(1) See De Bretton v. De Bretton and Holme, 4 A., 49, 52 (1881). As to the meaning of the word "compelled" in the following sections see R. v. Gopal Dass, 3 M., 271, 276 et seq (1881); Moher Sheikh v R, 21 C, 392, 400 (1893). Emp v Banarsi, 46 A, 254.

(2) See Act IV of 1869, ss. 51, 52 (Indian Divorce), and note to s 120, post.

(3) Act XVIII of 1891, s 5; Act I of 1893.

(4) See ss 122, 124, 125, 129, post

(5) See ss 122, 123, 126, 127, post.

(6) R v Gopal Dass, supra, 277.

(7) Civ Pr Code, O. XVI, pp. 825—836 passim, Cr Pr Code, ss. 171, 208, 216, 217, 219, 231, 244, 250, 252, 256, 257, 485, 540; see also Penal Code, ss 174, 175; and ss 172—180, id, passim; see Introduction to Chapter X, post

(8) Ss 123 and 124, post

(9) S. 125, post.

(10) S. 121, post.

(11) Ss. 126—129, post.

(12) S. 122, post.

(13) Ss. 130, 131, post.

(14) Civ. Pr. Code, O. XI, pp. 777—800

(15) See Greenough v. Gaskell, 1 M & K., 98, 116; Hennessy v Wright, 21 Q B D, 509, 521.

(16) Hennessy v. Wright, supra, per Wills, J., 521.

can properly order its production as evidence, yet the opposite party may demand a perusal of it, is, I think, opposed to all principle. If a communication is protected by its confidential character, it is protected in an especial degree as against an adversary in litigation."(1) A person cannot be indirectly compelled to disclose what he cannot be directly called upon to state.(2) Under the law of privilege it is necessary to set it up, because it is only an excuse [illegible] s good, and it is his decision that [illegible] t.(3) There is a great difference [illegible] incompetent witness cannot be [illegible] testimony is not legal evidence; [illegible] and his testimony is legal, if the [illegible]

118. All persons shall be competent to testify unless the Court considers that they are prevented from understanding the questions put to them, or from giving rational answers to those questions, by tender years, extreme old age, disease, whether of body or mind, or any other cause of the same kind. Who may testify

Explanation.—A lunatic is not incompetent to testify, unless he is prevented by his lunacy from understanding the questions put to him and giving rational answers to them.

Principle.—See Notes, post.

s. 3 ("Court") s. 120 (Parties Husbands and Wives)
s. 119 (Dumb Witnesses.) s. 133 (Accomplice)

Act X of 1873 (Indian Oaths); Cr Pr Code, ss. 337, 342, 343, ib, s 294, Act X of 1865, s 55 (Indian Succession); Act XXI of 1870, s 2 (Hindu Wills), Taylor, Ev, § 1342, et seq, Best, Ev, § 132, et seq Powell, Ev, 9th Ed, 196—219, Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 324, Steph, Dig., Ch. XV, Phillips and Arnolds, Ev, 3—112, Wharton Ev, §§ 391—420; Burr Jones, Ev., § 730, et seq Stewart Rapalje's Law of Witness, 1—301; Sichel's Practice Relating to Witnesses, p 16, Wigmore, Ev, 483, et seq

COMMENTARY.

The division of function between Judge and Jury allots without question [illegible] which the admissibility [illegible] capacity to testify (5) [illegible] to give evidence was [illegible] the amount of credit [illegible] the province of the [illegible] r years is questioned the Court should test his capacity to understand and to give rational answers, and to understand the difference between truth and falsehood. It was also held that the Judge must form his opinion as to the competency of a witness before the actual examination commences.(7) The Allahabad High Court has agreed with this ruling(8) but the Calcutta High Court has held that while this course may be sometimes advisable, it is not compulsory (9) Court.

(1) Munchershaw Bezonjee v The New Dharamsey S W. Co, 4 B, 576 (1880)
(2) Byrie v Shivshanker, 15 B, 7, 10 (1880)
(3) R v Gopal Dass, supra, 286, but see also ss 123, 124, post
(4) Roscoe, Cr. Ev, 13th Ed 124.
(5) Wigmore, Ev, § 487
(6) R v Hossinee, 8 W R, Cr, 60 (1867)
(7) Sheikh Fakir v R (1906), 11 C. W. N, 51
(8) R v Dhani Ram, 38 A, 49 (1916).
(9) Nafur Sheikh v Emperor, 41 C, 406 (1914)

Understanding

Understanding is the sole test of competency. The court has not to enter into enquiries as to the witness' religious belief, or as to his knowledge of the consequences of falsehood in this world or the next.(1) It has to ascertain, in the best way it can, whether, from the extent of his intellectual capacity and understanding, he is able to give a rational account of what he has seen or heard or done on a particular occasion. If a person of tender years, or of very advanced age, can satisfy these requirements, his competency as a witness is established.(2) The question whether a deliberate omission, to administer an oath or affirmation makes evidence inadmissible has been the subject of conflicting decisions.(3) Section 5 of the Indian Oaths Act is imperative; yet under section 13 of that Act no omission to make any oath or affidavit and no irregularity in the form in which an oath is administered invalidates a proceeding or renders evidence inadmissible.
as permitting the Court to disc administering any form of oath that 'omission' in section 13 plainly refers to one made by the witness, and that sinc section if a former irregularity on the part of the Court. In a case in the Calcutta High Court where two children, aged four and six years respectively, were witnesses and the Judge had intentionally refrained from administering an oath or affirmation to them (apparently on account of their age), and did not seem to have considered their competency during the examination, the conviction was set aside as partly based on this evidence, the admissibility of which was in doubt (5) In a similar case in the Allahabad High Court a child's evidence was held admissible.(6) The competency of a person to testify as a witness is a condition precedent to the administration to hir ... and is a question distinct from that of his credibility
If a witness, after being sworn, is shov
Judge should strike out all his evidence.(8) The modern practice is to ... rogate the witness before swearing him, or to elicit the facts upon the examination-in-chief, when, if his incompetency appears, he will be rejected.(9)

Disease of body.

"A witness may be in such extreme pain as to be unable to understand or, if to understand, to answer questions; or he may be unconscious, as if in a fainting fit, catalepsy, or the like.

Disease of mind

"This applies to idiocy and lunacy. An idiot is one who was born irrational; a lunatic is one who born rational has subsequently become irrational. The idiot can never become rational; but a lunatic may entirely recover, or have

(1) As to the necessity in English law in the case of a child-witness of belief in punishment for lying in a future state, see Steph. Dig, Note XL, and Whitley Stokes, 831.

(2) R v. Lal Sahai, 11 A., 183 (1889); R v. Ram Sewak, 23 A., 90 (1900); as to age and degree of intelligence, see Taylor, Ev, § 1377, and Roscoe, Cr. Ev., 115, 116, 10th Ed, cited in R. v. Maru, 10 A., 207, 210, 212 (1888), in which the history of legislation in India relating to oaths and affirmations is discussed R v. Shava, post

(3) R v Mussumat Itwarya, 14 B. L. R., 54 (1874); 22 W. R, Cr, 14; s. c, R. v Sewa Bhogta, 14 B L. R., 294 (F B.), 23 W. R., Cr., 12 [overruling R. v. Anunto Chuckerbutty, 22 W. R., Cr., 7 (1874)]; R. v Shava, 16 B, 259 (1891), and Quære; per contra, R. v. Maru, supra; R. v. Viraperumal, 16 M, 105 (1892); Nundo Lal v. Nistarini Dassee, 27 C., 428 (1900); see Act X of 1873, ss. 5, 13

(4) Rangacharya v. Desacharya, 37 B., 231 (1913) (later Statute).

(5) Nafur Sheikh v. R., 41 C., 506 (1914): 18 C. L. J., 590

(6) R. v. Dhani Ram, 38 A., 49 (1916).

(7) R. v. Lal Sahai, supra; R. v Shava, supra, at p. 364.

(8) R. v. Whitehead, L. R., 1. C. C. R., 33.

(9) Wharton, Ev., 492; Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed, 432; Taylor, Ev., §§ 1392, 1393; Wigmore, Ev, § 486. The preliminary examination is known as the voire dire lucid intervals. At the time when unscientific ideas prevailed, the deaf and dumb were so far treated as idiots that they were presumed to be incapable of testifying until the contrary was shown. This presumption has now disappeared, and ordinarily the only question will be as to the possibility of communicating with them by some certain system of signs.(1)

Or any other cau of the same kinc

"E.g., drunkenness (2) It must be ejusdem generis. The disability is only co-extensive with the cause, and, therefore, when the cause is removed, the disability also ceases. Thus, a lunatic during a lucid interval may be examined. The return of sobriety renders a drunkard competent.

Explanation.

"This applies to the case of a monomaniac, or person affected with partial insanity, who may be a very good witness as to the other points than that on which he is insane."(3) The leading case is R. v. Hill (4) There the witness believed that he had 20,000 spirits personally appertaining to him On all other points he was perfectly sane. His testimony as to all other matters was received.

An accuse person.

An accused person cannot, in a Criminal case, be examined as a witness. The effect of sections 342, 343 (no oath to be administered to the accused) of the Criminal Procedure Code, is to render it illegal for a Magistrate to convert an accused person into a witness, except when a pardon has been lawfully granted under section 337.(5) But an accused person to whom pardon has been tendered, and who has accepted such pardon, ought not to be put back into the dock without being examined as a witness when he shows an intention not to give the evidence which he has led the prosecution to expect. He should be examined as a witness, as directed by section 337(2), of the Criminal Procedure Code, and then dealt with under section 339. Such a person, if tried, should be [illegible] other accused.(6) If tried, he should [illegible] as a bar to his trial and if he does so [illegible] that the pardon has been forfeited by [illegible] this course is not adopted the con- [illegible] The Calcutta High Court, however, has [illegible] ardon at the preliminary enquiry the [illegible] n the dock, re-commence the enquiry [illegible] accused (8) Under section 339 of the Criminal Procedure Code the making of a full and true disclosure by the approver is not a condition precedent to the pardon ; but making an incomplete or false disclosure is a condition subsequent by which such pardon is forfeited (9) With regard to several persons jointly accused, the rule at one time in England and followed in India was that, when there is no community of interest, any one of a number of prisoners jointly indicted may be called as a witness either for or

(1) Wigmore, Ev, §§ 498, 811 (see s. 119, post)

(2) Ib, § 499 See Walker's Trial, 23 How St Tr, 1153

(3) Norton, Ev, 306, 307, Wharton, Ev, §§ 401, 418, Stewart Rapalje, op cit, §§ 1—10

(4) 2 Den & P C C, 254

(5) R v Hanmanta, 1 B, 618 (1877); and see cases cited post In a large number of modern English Statutes clauses have been incorporated enabling the party charged with a crime to give evidence on his own behalf, see Best, Ev, § 622 And under the Criminal Evidence Act, 1898 (61 & 62 Vict, C 36) an accused may elect to give evidence on his own behalf See Jelf's Law of Evidence in Criminal cases

(6) Arunachellam v R (1908), 31 M, 272, following R v Ramasami, 24 M., 321, R. v. Khiali, 39 A, 305 (1917).

(7) Kullan v R (1908); 32 M, 173, R v Bala (1901), 25 B., 675; R v Kothia (1906), 30 B, 611

(8) Shashi Rajbonshi v. Emperor, 42, C 856 (1915), distinguishing R. v Natu, 27 C 137 (1899) and dissenting from R v Manick Chandra Sirkar, 24 C 492 (1897) as now obsolete and R v Abani Bhushan Chuckerbutty, 37, C 845 (1910) Semble when he deviates from the conditions of pardon at the Sessions court, this cannot be done

(9) Kullan v R, supra, R v Natu (1900), 27 C, 137; R v Sudra (1892), 14 A 336 See as to forfeiture Woodroffe's "Criminal Procedure in India" where the cases are cited against his co-defendants.(1) But the rule is now otherwise in India, and a person jointly indicted and jointly tried with the accused (but not separately tried)(2), cannot be called as a witness either for or against the accused.(3) By the word "accused" Code is meant a persc jurisdiction.(4) A p issued, is a competent witness, even if a principal offender. So, where a complaint was made to a Magistrate against A and B, and process issued against A only, B was held to be a competent witness on his behalf.(6) When, during the course of a police-investigation, one of several persons, who were arrested by the police, was illegally discharged by them, such person was held to be a competent witness (7) In R. v. Liladhar(8) the reasoning in R. v. Hanmanta is extended to the case of an ... rate illegally allowed the charge to be ... witness was held inadmissible. "The ... its a person who has been suspected and charged with an offence, but discharged by the Magistrate for want of evidence, being afterwards admitted as a witness for the prosecution."(9) Where the public prosecutor, with the consent of the Court, withdrew from the prosecution of two out of several accused persons tried jointly for an offence, and the two accused were thereupon discharged under s. 494 of ... for the prosecution

Section
ence and does not relieve a Magistrate from his duty to hear all witnesses and consider their evidence.(11)

Jurors and assessors

The Criminal Procedure Code provides for the examination as witnesses of jurors and assessors.(12)

Executors and others

No person, by reason of interest in, or of his being an executor of, a will is disqualified, as a witness, to prove the execution of the will, or to prove the ... hands of hough ut, be both advocate and witness.(18)

(1) R v. Ashruff Shaikh, 6 W R, Cr, 91 (1866)

(2) R v Bradlaugh, 15 Cox., 217; Winsors v. R, L R., 1 Q B., 390; Steph. Dig, Art 108

(3) R. v. Hanmanta, supra; R. v. Remedios, 3 Bom H C R., Cr. C, 59 (1867); R v Ashgar Ali, 2 A, 260 (1879); R. v. Dala Jiva, 10 B, 190 (1885); R. v. Mona Puna, 16 B, 661, 665 (1892); R. v. Payne, L R., 1 C C., 349. In re A David, 5 C. L R, 574 (1880)

(4) R. v. Mona Puna, 668, supra.

(5) Tinckler's case, 1 East, P. C., 354, cited in R v Mona Puna, 665, supra.

(6) Mohesh Chunder v. Mohesh Chunder, 10 C L R, 553 (1882)

(7) R. v. Mona Puna, supra.

(8) Cited in R. v Mona Puna, 666, supra

(9) R v Behary Lall, 7 W. R., Cr, 44 (1867).

(10) R. v. Hussein Haji, 25 B., 422 (1900)

(11) Jabbar Shaik v. Tamiz Shaik, 39 C., 931 (1912), see R v. Surath, 42 C, 608 (1915) (all witnesses actually produced)

(12) Cr. Pr. Code, s. 294; see R v Ram Churn, 24 W. R., 28 Cr. (1875); a juryman is not disqualified by reason of his having given evidence from continuing to sit as juryman, or taking part in delivering the verdict; see R v. Mukta Sing, 4 B. L. R., 15, 17 (1870); Taylor, Ev, § 1379; Best, Ev., § 187, In re Hurro Chunder, 20 W R, Cr, 76 (1873); see also s. 121 note

(13) Act X of 1865, s. 55 (Indian Succession), Act XXI of 1870, s. 2 (Hindu Wills)

(14) S. 120.

(15) S. 119.

(16) S. 133

(17) See note to s. 121.

(18) Ramful Shaw v. Biswanath Mandal, 5 B. L R, App., 28 (1870); Cobbett v. Hudson, 1 E. & B, 11; see remarks in R v. Brice, 2 B. & Ald., 606, "it is very unfit that a person should be permitted to state, not upon oath, facts which he is afterwards to state on oath," and Best, Ev., §§ 184—187; Steph. Dig, note XLII

119. A witness who is unable to speak may give his evidence in any other manner in which he can make it intelligible, as by writing or by signs; but such writing must be written and the signs made in open Court. Evidence so given shall be deemed to be oral evidence. Dumb witness.

Principle.—See Introduction, ante.

s. 3 ("Evidence.") s. 118 (Competency)

s. 3 (Meaning of "Oral evidence")

Taylor, Ev., § 1376; Steph. Dig, Art. 107, Roscoe, N. P. Ev., 18th Ed, 162 and authorities cited in the last section; Wharton, Ev., §§ 406, 407; Stewart Rapalje's Law of Witnesses. § 6; Wigmore, Ev, § 811.

COMMENTARY.

A deaf-mute is taught to give ideas by signs which must be translated by an interpreter skilled and sworn.(1) Dumb witness

If the witness is able to communicate his ideas perfectly by writing, he will be required to adopt that as the more satisfactory method (2)

120. In all civil proceedings the parties to the suit, and the husband or wife of any party to the suit, shall be competent witnesses. In criminal proceedings against any person, the husband or wife of such person, respectively, shall be a competent witness. Parties to Civil suit and their wives or husbands. Husband or wife or person under criminal trial.

Principle.—See Introduction, ante.(3)

s. 118 (Competency) s. 122 (Communications during marriage)

Cr Pr. Code, s 488, Act IV of 1869, ss 51, 52 (Indian Divorce), Best, Ev, §§ 167—169; Taylor, Ev, §§ 1348—1372, Steph. Dig, Arts 106, 108, 108A Note XLI; Stewart Rapalje's Law of Witnesses, §§ 25—45, see also Index, Wharton, Ev, §§ 457—490, 421—433.

COMMENTARY.

The position of parties to a civil suit is (except when otherwise regulated by Statute) in no wise different from that of other witnesses (4) Proceedings under section 488 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, which provides for the passing of orders for the maintenance of wives and children, are in the nature Parties to suit: husband and wife.

ceedings is that, upon a petition by a wife for dissolution of marriage on account

Cases, however, might occur in which it might be absolutely necessary for the advocate to give evidence, see Best, Ev, § 184, Taylor, Ev, § 1391, Weston v Peary Mohan Das, 40 C, 898 (1913)

(1) Couley v People, 83 N Y, 478 (Amer)

(2) Morrison v Lennard, 3 C. & P, 127, but this is denied in certain American cases where it is said the witness should be permitted the most fluent and natural mode Wigmore, Ev, § 811, p 915, n 3 id See also Wharton, Ev, §§ 406, 407, Stewart Rapalje, op cit, § 6, as to evidence by an interpreter, see Ruston's case, 1 Leach, C C, 408.

(3) And Best, Ev., § 132, et seq, Taylor, Ev, § 1344, et seq

(4) See as to weight to be given to testimony of a party, Jogendra Krishna Roy v Kurpal Harshi, 35 C L. J, 175

(5) In re Tokee Bibee v. Abdool Khan, 5 C 536 (1879), Nur Mohomed v Bismulla Jan, 16 C, 781 (1889), followed in Rozario v. Ingles post, Hira Lall v Saheb Jan, 18 A, 107 (1895). As to examination of wife as to non-access of husband, see Rozario v. Ingles, 18 B, 468 (1894), and s. 112, ante, as to the corroboration of the mother's evidence, required by English of adultery coupled with cruelty or desertion, the parties are competent and compellable to give evidence of, or relating to, such cruelty or desertion, but they cannot in this case be examined or cross-examined as to facts relating to acts of adultery, and cannot, in other cases, be examined at all unless they offer themselves as witnesses or verify their cases by affidavit.(1) The co-respondent, in a suit by a husband for the dissolution of his marriage with his wife on the ground of adultery, was summoned by the petitioner in such suit as a witness. The Court did not explain to him before he was sworn, that it was not compulsory upon, but optional with him, to give evidence or not. He did not object to be sworn, and replied to the questions asked him by the petitioner's counsel without hesitation, until he was asked whether he had had sexual intercourse with the respondent. He then asked the Court whether he was bound to answer such question. The Court told him he was bound to do so, and he accordingly answered such question, answering it in the affirmative. Had the Court not told him that he was bound to answer such question, he would have declined to answer it. Held under such circumstances, that the co-respondent had not "offered" to give evidence, within the meaning of section 51 of the Divorce Act, and therefore his evidence was not admissible.(2) As to evidence of communications during marriage, see section 122, post. In criminal proceedings it has been seen (v. ante) that the party accused, or any person jointly indicted and tried with the accused, is not a competent witness. So much of the section as declares husbands and wives competent witnesses against each other in criminal proceedings differs from the English rule, according to which persons are, in general, incompetent(3) for the prosecution, though under the Criminal Evidence Act, 1898 (61 & 62 Vict., c. 36), every person charged with an offence and the husband or wife of such person are now competent witnesses for the defence at every stage of the proceedings(4); but is in accordance with the Full Bench decision in the case of R. v. Khyroollah.(5) In England, in addition to the husbands or wives of persons charged with criminal offences, who are in general [illegible] of the person charged, though in some few [illegible] tion, the only classes of persons now [illegible] cases of High Treason or misprision of Treason (other than such as consist in injuring or attempting to injure the person of the Sovereign) are not included or properly described in the list of witnesses delivered to the defendant, and, secondly, persons devoid of sufficient understanding to know what they are about.(6) It has been held that in India under this section both parties to a divorce are competent to prove non-access and the consequent illegitimacy of a child.(7) An incriminating statement made by wife to husband is inadmissible.(8)

Judges and magistrates.

121. No Judge or Magistrate shall, except upon the special order of some Court to which he is subordinate, be compelled to answer any questions as to his own conduct in Court as such Judge or Magistrate, or as to anything which came to his law, see Cloe v. Manning, L. R., 2 Q. B. D., 611; Lawrence v. Ingmire, 20 L. T. N. S., 391, and note to s. 134, post.

(1) Act IV of 1869, ss. 51, 52 (Indian Divorce), and see Kelly v. Kelly, 3 B. L. R., App. 6 (1869); DeBretton v. DeBretton, 4 A., 49 (1881), as to English rule, see Steph. Dig., Art. 109.

(2) DeBretton v. DeBretton, supra.

(3) Taylor, Ev., §§ 1371, 1372; Steph. Dig., Arts. 108, 108A; Whitley Stokes, 831.

(4) Taylor, § 1342—3, Stephen's Comm. (14th edition), v. II, p. 307.

(5) 6 W. R., Cr., 21 (1866); s. c., B. L. R., Sup. Vol., F. B., App. 11, and see for a case under the earlier law, R. v. Gour Chand, 1 W. R., Cr., 17 (1864).

(6) Taylor, § 1372 (g).

(7) John Howe v. Charlotte Howe, 38 M., 466 (1916).

(8) Ihsanan v. Emp., 25 Cr. L. J., 783 (1922).

knowledge in Court as such Judge or Magistrate; but he may be examined as to other matters which occurred in his presence whilst he was so acting.

Illustrations

(a) A, on his trial before the Court of Session, says that a deposition was improperly taken by B, the Magistrate B cannot be compelled to answer questions as to this except upon the special order of a Superior Court.

(b) A is accused before the Court of Session of having given false evidence before B, a Magistrate. B cannot be asked what A said except upon the special order of the Superior Court.

(c) A is accused before the Court of Session of attempting to murder a Police-officer whilst on his trial before B, a Session Judge B may be examined as to what occurred.

Principle.—The general grounds of convenience (e.g., the inconvenience ... this section ... add that, ... e, a Judge

s. 3 ("Court.")
s. 118 (Competency.)
ss. 35—166 (Examination)
s. 165, Prov. 2 (Judge's power to put questions.)

Steph. Dig, Art., 111, Taylor, Ev, § 938, Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 182, Best, Ev, § 184, 188; Stewart Rapalje's Law of Witnesses, §§ 45, 68n, 275; Wharton, Ev., § 600

COMMENTARY.

Judges and Magistrates

the q ... the q ... privilege.(3) No definition is given of "Judge" or "Magistrate" in the Act.(4) Arbitrators who are (but to a narrower extent) within the rule in England, appear from the terms of the section itself, not to be within it.(5) This Act ... to give evidence as to ... duties; but in the case ... d it has been held that

(1) See R v Gazard, 8 C. & P, 595, Buccleuch v Metropolitan Board of Works, L R, 5 H L, 418, Best, Ev § 188, p 176, note, Taylor, Ev, § 938 As to illust (c), see R v Lord Thanet, 27 St Tr, 836, and for the law before the Act. Ramasami v Ramu, 3 Mad H C R, 372 (1867) [evidence of subordinate Magistrate holding preliminary enquiry into a criminal charge]

(2) Steph Dig, Art 111 and Note XLII, Taylor, Ev, § 1379; Best, Ev, supra Stewart Rapalje, op cit., §§ 45, 68n, § 275, Wharton, Ev., § 600

(3) R. v Chaddi Khan, 3 A, 573 (1881) As to the meaning of the word "compelled" in the section, see R. v Gopal Dass, 3 M, 277 (1881), and in s 132, see Emp v Banarsi, 46 A, 254

(4) Cf. definition given in Penal Code, s 19, and Act 1 of 1868, s 4, sub-section (13) See now Act X of 1897

(5) Buccleuch v Metropolitan Board of Works, L R, 5 H L, 418, Amir Begam v Badr-ud din Husaini, P. C., 19 C. L J, 494 (1914) In re Whitely 1 Ch, 558 (1891), 64 L T, 81, O'Rourke v Commissioners for Railways, 15 App Cas, 371; Ellis v Saltau, 4 C & P., 327 (n) a; Whitley Stokes, 831 In England, it has been also held that a barrister cannot be compelled to testify as to what he said in Court in his character of a barrister, Curry v Walter, 1 Esp, 456, Steph Dig., Art 111 And a further rule exists against the competency of jurors to give evidence as to what passed between the jurymen, in the discharge of their duties Steph Dig, Art. 114; Best, Ev, §§ 579, 580; Taylor, Ev., §§ 942—945.

statements or evidence of admissions by Jurors as to their mode of reaching their verdict are inadmissible.(1) In this case it was alleged that Jurors had reached their verdict by casting lots and evidence of another witness was admitted in support of this statement.

A Judge cannot, without giving evidence as a witness in the usual way, import into a case his own knowledge of particular facts.(2) A judgment based on materials which are not in evidence, or on the personal knowledge of the Judge, is not in accordance with the Law.(3) But in a case in the Madras High Court it has been said that a Judge is entitled to use his general knowledge and experience.(4) When a Judge gives evidence, he should be sworn like other witnesses (5) In a case tried by a Sessions Judge with the aid of assessors, it was held that a Judge is a competent witness, and can give evidence in a case being tried before himself, even though he laid the complaint, acting as a public officer; provided that he has no personal or pecuniary interest(6) in the subject of the charge; and he is not precluded thereby from dealing judicially with the evidence, of which his own forms a part.(7) Although a Magistrate is not disqualified from dealing with a case judicially, merely, because in his character of Magistrate it may have been his duty to initiate the proceedings, yet a Magistrate ought not to act judicially in a case, when there is no necessity for his doing so, and where he himself discovered the offence and initiated the prosecution, and where he is one of the principal witnesses for the prosecution.(8) ... mself be a witness in a case in which he is the ... Judge who is a sole judge of law and fact cannot proceed to a decision of the case in which that

(1) Emperor v Harkumar Barman Roy, 40 C, 693 (1913). But the competency of Jurors in a case which they are trying is a different question for which see s. 118, ante

(2) Harpurshad v Sheo Dyal, 3 I. A., 259, 286 (1876); Rousseau v. Pinto, 7 W. R, 190 (1867); Meethun Bibee v. Busher Khan, 11 Moo, I A, 213, 221 (1867), Kallonass v Gunga Gobind, 25 W R., 121 (1876); Sooraj Kant v. Khodee Narain, 22 W. R., 9 (1874); R. v. Donnelly, 2 C, 405, 416 (1877); Grish Chunder v. R, 20 C., 857, 865 (1892); R. v. Fatik Biswas, 1 B. L. R. A, Cr., 13 (1868) As to the duty of the judge to state to the accused the facts he himself observed, and the right of the accused to cross-examine thereon, see In re Hurro Chunder, 20 W R., Cr., 76 (1873); Grish Chunder v. R, supra, 866. It is extremely improper for a Magistrate in disposing of a case, to rely in any way on statements made to him out of Court. R. v. Sahadev, 14 B, 572 (1890). In Sri Balusu v Sri Balusu, 22 M, 427 (1898), the Court says: "the District Judge of Godaveri says, 'the people have settled down under the law enunciated in 1862.' He can hardly recollect the state of things prior to 1862, but his statement of the present state of things is founded on personal knowledge."

(3) Durga Prasad Singh v. Ram Doyal Chaudhuri, 38 C., 152.

(4) Lakshmayya v Sri Raja Varadaraja Apparow, 36 M, 168 (1913), see ante, Commentary on s 3.

(5) Kishore Singh v Ganesh Mookerjee, 9 W. R, 252 (1868)

(6) See R. v. Bholanath Sen, 2 C, 23 27 (1876), R v. Hira Lall, 8 B L. R, 422, 430 (1871); In re Hurro Chunder, 20 W. R., Cr, 76 (1873); Grish Chunder v. R, supra; R. v. Donnelly, ante; Wood v. Corporation of Calcutta, 7 C., 322 (1881); Loburt Domini v Assam Railway Company, 10 C, 915 (1884), Swamirao v Collector of Dharwar, 17 B, 299 (1892); Kashinath Khasgiwala v. Collector of Poona, 8 B, 553 (1884), and R. v Meyer, 1 Q B. D, 173; R. v Pherozsha Pestonji, 18 B, 442 (1893); Aloo Nathu v Gagubha Dipsanji, 19 B, 608 (1894). The same person should not be both Judge and prosecutor. R. v. Nadi Chand, 24 W. R., Cr, 1 (1875); R v. Gungadhar Bhunjo, 3 C., 622 (1878); R. v. Deoki Nandan, 2 A, 806 (1880); In re Het Lal, 22 W. R., Cr., 75 (1874), [appeal]; Grish Chunder v. R, 20 C, 865; R. v. Sahadev, 14 B, 572 (1890). And a public prosecutor should be without personal interest, R v. Kashinath Dinkar, 8 Bom. H. C. R., Cr. Ca, 126 (1871).

(7) R. v. Mukta Sing 4 B L R., Cr. 15 (1870), s. c, 13 W. R., Cr, 60

(8) R v. Bholanath Sen, supra, 29; and see remarks of Phear, J., in re Hurro Chunder, 20 W. R, Cr, 76 (1873); and of Markby, J., in R. v Donnelly, 2 C. 405, 414 (1877); Taylor, Ev., § 1379.

evidence is given (1) Where in such a case he has given his evidence and convicted the accused, his having so acted makes the conviction bad (2) The conviction is not absolutely bad. It is open to the Court to uphold the conviction, if it is of opinion that, after rejecting the Magistrate's evidence, there is other evidence sufficient, if believed, to support the conviction (3) Quære, whether the presence of assessors takes the case from without the operation of the last-mentioned rule.(4)

Where a Magistrate in whose Court a complaint of rioting and mischief had been filed made a personal inspection of the locus in quo, which inspection was not made only for the purpose of better understanding the evidence which had already been given, held, that by so doing he had made himself a witness in the case and had thereby rendered himself incompetent to try it; held, further that where a Judge is the sole judge of law and fact in a case tried before himself, he cannot give evidence before himself or import matters into his judgment not stated on oath before the Court in the presence of the accused.(5) When a Magistrate was present at a search made by the police during investigation and in all probability he came to know of some facts in connection with the case, it was held to be expedient that the case should be tried by some other Magistrate.(6)

122. No person who is or has been married shall be compelled to disclose any communication made to him(7) during marriage by any person to whom he is or has been married; nor shall he be permitted to disclose any such communication, unless the person who made it, or his representative in interest, consents, except in suits between married persons(8), or proceedings in which one married person is prosecuted for any crime committed against the other.

Communication during marriage.

Principle.—The protection given by this section has been said to rest upon the ground that the admission of such testimony would have a powerful tendency to disturb the peace of families and to weaken, if not to destroy, the mutual confidence upon which the happiness of the married state depends.(9) The exception is made ex necessitate rei It has, however, been pointed out(10)

(1) R v Donnelly, supra, per curiam, Taylor Ev, § 1379, Grish Chunder v R, 20 C, 857, 865 (1892). Hari Kishore v Abdul Baki, 21 C, 920 (1894); Swamirao v. Collector of Dharwar, 17 B, 299 (1892). See also R v Fatteh Chand, 24 C, 499 (1897) The cases of Grish Chunder v. R., 20 C, 857 (1892), and Sadhana Upadhya v R, 23 C, 328 (1895), were distinguished in the matter of Anando Chunder v. Basu Mudh, 24 C, 167 (1896)

(2) R v Donnelly, supra, per Markby, J.

(3) Ib, per Prinsep, J.

(4) See R v Mukta Singh, supra, and R. v Donnelly, supra, 414, in which latter case the correctness of the former decision, in so far as it proceeded upon the ground that the presence of assessors brought the case within the general rule laid down by it is doubted

(5) R v Manikam, 19 M, 263 (1896); but a Magistrate who views a place merely to better understand the evidence does not make himself a witness In re Lallji, 19 A, 302 (1897)

(6) Gya Singh v Mohamed Soliman 5 C W N, 864 (1901)

(7) In this section 'he,' 'him' and 'his,' include 'she,' 'her' and 'her' Act X of 1897 As to the meaning of the words "permitted" and "compelled" in this section, see R v Gopal Dass, 3 M, 271 (1881)

(8) E g, such communications may be disclosed under s 52, Act IV of 1869 v s 120, ante

(9) Taylor, Ev, § 909, Best, Ev, § 586

(10) Wigmore, Ev p 3041, Bentham says 'Hard,' 'hardship,' 'policy,' 'peace of families,' 'absolute necessity'—"some such words as these are the vehicles by which the faint spark of reason that exhibits itself is conveyed These are the leading terms and these are all you are furnished with, and out of these you are to make applicable as distinct and intelligible a proposition as you can" Rationale Book IX, Part IV, c v.

that no argument advanced for the privilege has ever risen to a higher level than an appeal to considerations of sentiment; and the conclusion of the Commissioners of Common Law Procedure in their second report was that husband and wife should be competent and compellable to give evidence both for and against one another on matters of fact, as to which either could be examined as a party in the cause.

s. 120 (Competency of Husband and wife.) s. 165, Prov. 2 (Judge's power to question.)

Taylor, Ev, §§ 909—910A; Best, Ev., § 586; Roscoe, N. P. Ev., 18th Ed., 164, 169; Steph. Dig, Art. 110; Wharton, Ev., §§ 427—432; Rapalje's Law of Witnesses, § 274; Hageman's Privileged Communications, §§ 165—188; Wigmore, Ev., §§ 22, 27, et seq

COMMENTARY.

Communication during marriage

"The protection is not confined to cases where the communication sought to be g[illegible] [illegible]fidential character, but the seal of the law is [illegible] whatever nature which pass between husban[illegible] statement made by wife to husband is inadmissible (2) It extends also to cases in which the interests of strangers are solely involved, as well as those in which the husband or wife is a party on the record. It is, however, limited to such matters as have been communicated during the marriage, and, consequently, if a man were to make the most confidential statement to a woman before he married, and it was afterwards to become of importance in a civil suit to know what that statement was, the wife, on being called as a witness and interrogated with respect to the communication, would, as it seems, be bound to disclose what she knew of the matter."(3) The privilege extends only to persons who legally and technically are husband and wife, and therefore there is none where the marriage is void (4) A document, even though it contains a communication from a husband to a wife or vice versâ, in the hands of third persons, is admissible in evidence; for in producing it, there is no compulsion on, or permission to, the wife or husband to disclose any communication. The section protects the individuals and not the communication, if it can be proved without putting into the box for that purpose the husband or the wife to whom the communication was made So where on a trial for the offence of breach of trust by a public servant, a letter was tendered in evidence for the prosecution which had been sent by the accused to his wife at Pondicherry and had been found on a search of his house made there by the police; it was held that the letter was admissible in evidence against the accused.(5) The privilege continues even after the marriage has been dissolved by death or divorce.(6) So, where a woman, who had been divorced and had married another person, was offered as a witness against her former husband to prove a contract which he had made during the coverture, Lord Alvanley rejected the evidence, adding: "It can never be endured, that the confidence which the law has created while the parties remained in the most intimate of all relations, shall be broken, whenever by the misconduct of one party the relation has been dissolved."(7) The words "has been married" in the above section give effect to this dictum. The rule being "that nothing

(1) Ib, O'Connor v Marjoribanks, 4 M. & Gr, 435.

(2) Ihsanan v Emp., 25 Cr L. J. 783 (1922)

(3) Taylor, Ev, § 909; see Wharton, Ev, §§ 427—432; Rapalje, op. cit, § 274

(4) See Wigmore, Ev., p 3042: "Their domestic peace may be shattered at any litigant's discretion... ..Again its (the rule's) benefits are not lost by the ingenious wrong-doer who brings himself within its formal terms by marrying the witness after service of subpœna and thus creating ad hoc a domestic peace which is to be jealously safeguarded."

(5) R. v. Donoghue, 22 M, 1 (1898)

(6) Taylor, Ev, § 910; Roscoe, N P, Ev, 18th Ed, 169, Monroe v Twistleton, Pea. Add. Cas, 221; Averson v Lord Kinnaird, 6 East, 192, 193; O'Connor v Marjoribanks, supra, but see Wigmore, Ev., pp. 3054, 3055.

(7) Monroe v. Twistleton, supra.

shall be extracted from the bosom of the wife which was confided there by the husband; she may yet be admitted to testify to facts which came to her knowledge by means equally accessible to any person not standing in that relation."(1) In a case it was held that where there was no representative in interest who could consent to the disclosure of a communication made by a deceased husband to his wife during their marriage, the widow could not be regarded as being his representative in interest for the purpose of giving such consent and could not be permitted to disclose such communication.(2)

123. No one shall be permitted to give any evidence(3) derived from unpublished official records relating to any affairs of State, except with the permission of the officer at the head of the department concerned, who shall give or withhold such permission as he thinks fit.

Evidence as to affairs of State

124. No public officer shall be compelled to disclose communications made to him in official confidence, when he considers that the public interests would suffer by the disclosure.

Official communication

Principle.—Public policy; prejudice to the public interests by disclosure.(4) If it were not so it would be impossible to communicate freely.(5) If the giving of such evidence would be injurious to the public service, the general public interest must be considered paramount to the individual interest of a suitor in a Court of Justice. The public officer concerned, and not the Judge, is to decide whether the evidence referred to in these sections shall be given or withheld, because the Judge would be unable to determine this question without ascertaining what the document or communication was, and why the publication or disclosure of it would be injurious to the public service—an enquiry which cannot take place in private and which taking place, may do all the mischief which it is proposed to guard against (6) The Allahabad High Court has however recently held(7) that it is for the Court to decide whether or not a particular document for which privilege is claimed under this section, is a communication made to a public officer in official confidence If the Court decides that it was so made, then it cannot compel its disclosure, and the public officer himself is the sole Judge whether its disclosure would or would not be in the public interest But it has also been held(8) that an officer's refusal to disclose a document on grounds of public policy is final and that it is not competent for the Court to call for and examine the secret archives of the state in order to satisfy itself of their confidential nature

s. 3 ("Evidence.")
s 162 (Production of document referring to matters of State) s 165, Prov 2 (Judge's power to put questions or order production)

(1) 1 Greenleaf, Ev, § 254, 7th Ed, cited in Best, Ev, § 586

(2) Nawab Houladar v Emperor, 40 C., 391 (1913), 18 C L J, 65n

(3) Oral or documentary, v s 3, ante

(4) Wadeer v East India Company, 8 D. G. M & G, 191 [production does not depend on the question of the person called on to produce, being a party to the suit or not], Moodalay v Morton, 1 B. C C, 471.

(5) Smith v East India Company, 1 Ph, 55, The Bellerophon, 44 L J., Adm, 5; Hennessy v Wright, post

(6) Per Pollock, C. B., in Beatson v Skene, 5 H. & N, 838, 853; as to the meaning of the word "compelled" in this section, see R v Gopal Dass, 277, supra Nagaraja Pillai v Secretary of State, 39 M 304 (1916)

(7) Collector of Jaunpur v Jamna Prasad, 44 A, 360, s c, 20 All L J, 140 In Phipson Ev, 6th Ed, 195, the English rule is stated to be that when the head of the department by person or proxy objects, the judge will not compel the production nor decide upon the validity of the objection, unless it is a palpably futile one, see Lal Tribhowan v Deputy Commissioner, Fyzabad, 47 I C, 225

(8) Lal Tribhowan v Deputy Commissioner, Fyzabad, 47 I C, 225

Act V of 1889 (Disclosure of Official Secrets); 21 Geo. III, cap 70, s 5 [Prosecutions against Governor-General or Member of Council, Production of Order in Council].

Taylor, Ev., §§ 946—948A; Roscoe N. P. Ev., 172, 173; Best, Ev., § 578; Steph Dig, Art, 112; Bray on Discovery, 547, 549; Powell, Ev., 9th Ed., 242, 243, 273, 274 Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed. 180; Wharton, Ev., §§ 604A—605; Rapalje's op. cit. §276; Hageman's Privileged Communication, §§ 301—317.

COMMENTARY.

Under this head have been held to come the deliberations of Parliament, the proceedings of the Privy Coun [illegible] communications between public c [illegible] political communications and the [illegible] that where the head of a Department of Government states at the trial of an action that the production of a particular document by the Department would be injurious to the public interest, the Judge ought not to order its production.(2) It has been doubted whether a Government Resolution relating to the conduct of a Deputy Collector can properly be described as relating to an affair of State; but it was held that if it could be so regarded the Government had in relying on it in their list of documents practically conceded permission.(3) Communications, though made to official persons, are not privileged when they are not made in the discharge of any public duty; and so letters by a private individual to the Postmaster-General, complaining of the conduct of a postal official, were held not to be protected (4) It has been recently held that an entry in a Posting Register noting the time when particular Preventive officers were ordered to be at their stations was not privileged.(5) Objection may be taken by the public officer, or by the party interested in excluding the evidence, or by the Judge himself. "No sound distinction can be drawn between the duty of the Judge when objection is taken by the responsible officer of the Crown or by the party, or when no objection being taken by any one, it becomes apparent to him that a rule of public policy prevents the disclosure of the documents or information."(6) The exclusion when allowed is absolute, so that in the case of documents no secondary evidence is admissible.(7) The latter section is confined to public officers, though who are such is not defined. The former embraces every one. Section 123 leaves the discretion with the head of the department; section 124 makes the officer himself the judge of the propriety of waiving the privilege In no case has the Court any authority to compel disclosures, if the objection is raised by the proper authority.(8) In the undermentioned case the accused was convicted of criminal breach of trust in respect of three gold bangles. The evidence went to show that the accused insured a parcel in the post office as containing these gold bangles, but shortly after delivery to the addressee, the parcel was found to contain only a piece of steel. One of the witnesses deposed to having sold the steel to the accused. Accused's counsel asked the Superintendent of Post Offices the name of the person who had informed him about the sale of the steel to the accused; but the Sessions Judge refused to allow the question

(1) See Text-books cited above, et ibi casas

(2) Williams v Star Newspaper Co (1908), Times L. R, v 24, p 297.

(3) Jehangir v. Secretary of State, 6 Bom L. R, 131, 160 (1903).

(4) Blake v. Pilford, 1 M. & Rob, 198

(5) Rukumali v. Emperor, 22 C. W. N., 451, s. c., 19 Cr. L. J., 524.

(6) Per Wills, J., in Hennessy v. Wright, 21 Q B D 509, in which all the authorities are reviewed; and it was held that an affidavit of objection by the Secretary of State to production sufficed to justify a refusal to give discovery. See Jehangir v. Secretary of State, 6 Bom L. R. 160 (1903).

(7) Home v. Bentinck, 2 B & B, 130, Dawkins v. Rokeby, L. R, 8 Q B, 255; Hennessy v. Wright, supra to be put, as he was of opinion that the Superintendent was protected by this section and the next, but it was held that neither section had any application.(1) And it has been held that documents produced and statements made under process of law (e.g., under the Income Tax Act) cannot be said to be made in official confidence within the meaning of this section.(2) Recently a statement made to the Collector by a person applying to have his estate taken under the Court of Wards, setting forth his financial position, that is to say, the details of his property and liabilities, was held to be a communication made to a public officer in official confidence within the meaning of this section, and could not therefore be used as an acknowledgment of any liability mentioned therein.(3)

(8) Norton, Ev., 309; Jehangir v Secretary of State, 6 Bom L. R. 160 (1903); see note to s 162, post

Information as to commission of offences

125. No Magistrate or Police-officer shall be compelled to say whence he got any information as to the commission of any offence, and no Revenue-officer shall be compelled to say whence he got any information as to the commission of any offence against the public revenue.

Explanation.—'Revenue-officer' in this section means any officer employed in, or about, the business of any branch of the public revenue.(4)

Principle.—While it is perfectly right that all opportunities should be afforded to discuss the truth of the evidence given against a prisoner: on the other hand, it is absolutely essential to the public welfare, that the names of parties who give information should not be divulged, for otherwise,—be it from fear, or shame, or the dislike of being publicly mixed up in enquiries of this nature,—few men would choose to assume the disagreeable part of giving or receiving information respecting offences, and the consequences would be that many great crimes would pass unpunished (5) For the same reason, counsel for the defence is not entitled to elicit from a witness for the prosecution that he is a spy or informer (6) But a detective cannot refuse on grounds of public policy to say where he was hidden.(7)

s. 118 (Competency) s. 27 (Information received from Accused)
s 165, Prov 2 (Question by Judge)

Act XV of 1887, s 13 [see note (2), infra], Act V of 1892, s 12 (ib), Taylor, Ev, § 939, 941, Best, Ev, § 578, Steph Dig, Art. 113, Roscoe, Cr Ev, 13th Ed, 130, 132, Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed., 182, Rapalje's op cit, § 276, Wharton, Ev, § 604, Hageman's Privileged Communications, §§ 301—305

COMMENTARY.

Information as to commission of offence.

The section draws no distinction between public and private prosecution (8) Though the section does not, in express terms, prohibit the witness, if he be

(1) R v Ramadhan Maharam, 2 Bom. L R, 329 (1900)

(2) Venkatachella Chettiar v Sampatha Chettiar (1909), 32 M, 62, ref to Collector of Jaunpur v Jamna Prasad, 44 A, 360, s c, 20 All L J, 140, and see Jadobram Dey v Bulloram (1899), 26 C, 281

(3) Collector of Jaunpur v Jamna Prasad 44 A, 360 (1922).

(4) This section was substituted for the original s 125 by Act III of 1887, by s 13, Act XV of 1887, and Act V of 1892, s 12 Commandants and Seconds in command of Military Police, in Burma and Bengal, are entitled to all the privileges conferred by this section on Police-officers As to the meaning of the word "compelled" in this section, see R v Gopal Dass 277, supra

(5) Taylor, Ev, § 941 R v Hardy, 24 How St Tr, 808, 816, Home v Bentinck, 2 B & B, 162, Hennessy v Wright, supra, 512, 513

(6) Amrita Lal Hazra v Emperor, 42 C, 957 (1915)

(7) Ib

(8) A distinction which is made in the English rule, see R v Richardson, 3 F & F, 693, Marks v Beyfus, 25 Q B D.

willing, from saying whence he got his information, the English authorities and a consideration of the foundation of the rule show that the protection does not depend upon a claim being made, and that it is the duty of the Judge, apart from objection taken, to exclude the evidence.(1) A fortiori, if objection is taken it cannot be made the ground of adverse inference.(2) The rule applies not only upon the criminal trial, but upon any subsequent civil proceedings arising out of it.(3) The English rule protects not only the names of the persons by, or to, whom the disclosure was made, but the nature of the information given, and any other question as to the channel of communication, or what was done under it.(4) The Court has under this section apparently no discretion to compel an answer(5), even if it consider disclosure necessary to show the innocence of the accused.(6)

Professional communications.

126. No barrister, attorney, pleader or vakil shall at any time be permitted, unless with his client's express consent, to disclose any communication made to him in the course and for the purpose of his employment as such barrister, pleader, attorney or vakil, by or on behalf of his client, or to state the contents or condition of any document with which he has become acquainted in the course and for the purpose of his professional employment(7), or to disclose any advice given by him to his client in the course and for the purpose of such employment:

Provided that nothing in this section shall protect from disclosure—

(1) Any such communication made in furtherance of any [illegal] purpose (8);

(2) Any fact observed by any barrister, pleader, attorney or vakil, in the course of his employment as such, showing that any crime or fraud has been committed since the commencement of his employment.

It is immaterial whether the attention of such barrister, [pleader] (9), attorney or vakil was or was not directed to such facts by or on behalf of his client.(10)

494; Steph Dig, Art 113 In re Mohesh Chunder, 13 W R, Cr, 1, 10 (1870); see R v Richardson, supra, adversely reviewed in Worthington v. Scribner, 109 Mass, 487 (Amer), cited in Rapalje's op. cit., p 456.

(1) Marks v Beyfus, supra; Hennessy v. Wright, 21 Q B. D, 509, per Wills, J, Weston v Peary Mohan Das, 40 C, 898 (1913) per Woodroffe, J

(2) Weston and others v Peary Mohan Das (supra).

(3) Marks v Beyfus, supra.

(4) Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed., 182; R. v. Hardy, supra; Marks v Beyfus, supra

(5) S 165, Prov 2, post.

(6) According to the rule in Marks v. Beyfus, supra.

(7) In R v Bala Dharma, 4 Bom L. R, 460 (1902), the communication was held not to be "in the course," etc. See on this section Gopilal v. Lakhpat Rai, 41 A, 135, s. c., 48 I. C., 605

(8) The word within brackets was substituted for "criminal" by s 10 of the Amending Act XVIII of 1872 This substitution carries the rule perhaps somewhat further than has been established in England (see Steph. Dig, Art. 115), but is in conformity with the opinion expressed by Turner, V. C., in Russell v. Jackson, 9 Hare, 392, and Rolfe, V. C, in Follett v Jefferyes, 1 Sim N. S, 17. It seems just and reasonable to include cases of fraud as well as criminality. See also Kelly v. Jackson, 13 Ir. Eq, Rep., 129 and R. v Cox & Railton, L. R, 14 Q B. D., 153; Framji Bhicaji v. Mohansing Dhansing, 18 B, 276, 280, 281 (1893).

(9) Added by s 10, Act XVIII of 1872.

(10) See s 23, Explanation ante

Explanation.—The obligation stated in this section continues after the employment has ceased.

Illustrations.

(a) A, a client, says to B, an attorney :—' I have committed forgery and I wish you to defend me '

As the defence of a man known to be guilty is not a criminal purpose, this communication is protected from disclosure.

(b) A, a client, says to B, an attorney :—' I wish to obtain possession of property by the use of a forged deed on which I request you to sue '

This communication, being made in furtherance of a criminal purpose, is not protected from disclosure.

(c) A, being charged with embezzlement, retains B, an attorney, to defend him In the course of the proceedings, B observes that an entry has been made in A's account-book charging A with the sum said to have been embezzled, which entry was not in the book at the commencement of his employment.

This being a fact observed by B in the course of his employment, showing that a fraud has been committed since the commencement of the proceedings, it is not protected from disclosure (1)

Section 126 to apply to interpreters, etc

127. The provisions of section 126 shall apply to interpreters, and the clerks or servants of barristers, pleaders, attorney and vakils.(2)

Privilege not waived by volunteering evidence

128. If any party to a suit gives evidence therein at his own instance or otherwise, he shall not be deemed to have consented thereby to such disclosure as is mentioned in section 126; and, if any party to a suit or proceeding calls any such barrister, [pleader], (3) attorney or vakil, as a witness, he shall be deemed to have consented to such disclosure only if he questions such barrister, attorney or vakil on matters which, but for such question, he would not be at liberty to disclose.

Confidential communications with legal advisers.

129. No one shall be compelled to disclose to the Court any confidential communication which has taken place between him and his legal professional adviser, unless he offers himself as a witness, in which case he may be compelled to disclose any such communications as may appear to the Court necessary to be known in order to explain any evidence which he has given, but no others.

Principle.—The first two sections apply when the legal adviser or his
...l adviser of a third
...ll as the professional when the client him-
the case or not; and
...unications which have passed
... that are privileged (v post)

(1) See Brown v Foster, 1 H & N, 736

(2) See Kameshur Pershad v Sheik Amanutulla, 2 C W N, 649, 661 (1898), s c, 26 C., 53

(3) Added by s 10 of the Amending Act XVIII of 1872

willing, from saying whence he got his information, the English authorities and a consideration of the foundation of the rule show that the protection does not depend upon a claim being made, and that it is the duty of the Judge, apart from objection taken, to exclude the evidence.(1) A fortiori, if objection is taken it cannot be made the ground of adverse inference.(2) The rule applies not only upon the criminal trial, but upon any subsequent civil proceedings arising out of it.(3) The English rule protects not only the names of the persons by, or to, whom the disclosure was made, but the nature of the information given, and any other question as to the channel of communication, or what was done under it (4) The Court has under this section apparently no discretion to compel an answer(5), even if it consider disclosure necessary to show the innocence of the accused.(6)

Professional communications

126. No barrister, attorney, pleader or vakil shall at any time be permitted, unless with his client's express consent, to disclose any communication made to him in the course and for the purpose of his employment as such barrister, pleader, attorney or vakil, by or on behalf of his client, or to state the contents or condition of any document with which he has become acquainted in the course and for the purpose of his professional employment(7), or to disclose any advice given by him to his client in the course and for the purpose of such employment:

Provided that nothing in this section shall protect from disclosure—

(1) Any such communication made in furtherance of any [illegal] purpose (8);

(2) Any fact observed by any barrister, pleader, attorney or vakil, in the course of his employment as such, showing that any crime or fraud has been committed since the commencement of his employment.

It is immaterial whether the attention of such barrister, [pleader] (9), attorney or vakil was or was not directed to such facts by or on behalf of his client.(10)

494, Steph. Dig, Art 113. In re Mohesh Chunder, 13 W. R., Cr., 1, 10 (1870); see R v Richardson, supra, adversely reviewed in Worthington v Scribner, 109 Mass, 487 (Amer), cited in Rapalje's op. cit, p. 456

(1) Marks v Beyfus, supra; Hennessy v. Wright, 21 Q B. D, 509, per Wills, J. Weston v Peary Mohan Das, 40 C., 898 (1913) per Woodroffe, J

(2) Weston and others v Peary Mohan Das (supra).

(3) Marks v Beyfus, supra.

(4) Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 182; R. v. Hardy, supra. Marks v Beyfus, supra.

(5) S 165, Prov. 2, post

(6) According to the rule in Marks v. Beyfus, supra

(7) In R v Bala Dharma, 4 Bom L. R., 460 (1902), the communication was held not to be "in the course," etc. See on this section Gopilal v. Lakhpat Rai, 41 A, 135, s c, 48 I. C., 605.

(8) The word within brackets was substituted for "criminal" by s 10 of the Amending Act XVIII of 1872 This substitution carries the rule perhaps somewhat further than has been established in England (see Steph. Dig, Art 115), but is in conformity with the opinion expressed by Turner, V. C., in Russell v. Jackson, 9 Hare, 392, and Rolfe, V. C. in Follett v. Jefferyes, 1 Sim. N. S. 17. It seems just and reasonable to include cases of fraud as well as criminality. See also Kelly v Jackson, 13 Ir. Eq. Rep. 129 and R v Cox & Railton, L. R. 14 Q B D. 153; Framji Bhicaji v. Mohansing Dhansing, 18 B. 276, 280, 281 (1893).

(9) Added by s 10, Act XVIII of 1872.

(10) See s 23. Explanation, ante.

Explanation.—The obligation stated in this section continues after the employment has ceased.

Illustrations.

(a) A, a client, says to B, an attorney:—'I have committed forgery and I wish you to defend me.'

As the defence of a man known to be guilty is not a criminal purpose, this communication is protected from disclosure

(b) A, a client, says to B, an attorney:—'I wish to obtain possession of property by the use of a forged deed on which I request you to sue.'

This communication, being made in furtherance of a criminal purpose, is not protected from disclosure

(c) A, being charged with embezzlement, retains B, an attorney, to defend him In the course of the proceedings, B observes that an entry has been made in A's account-book charging A with the sum said to have been embezzled, which entry was not in the book at the commencement of his employment.

This being a fact observed by B in the course of his employment, showing that a fraud has been committed since the commencement of the proceedings, it is not protected from disclosure (1)

127. The provisions of section 126 shall apply to interpreters, and the clerks or servants of barristers, pleaders, attorney and vakils.(2) Section 126 to apply to interpreters, etc.

128. If any party to a suit gives evidence therein at his own instance or otherwise, he shall not be deemed to have consented thereby to such disclosure as is mentioned in section 126; and, if any party to a suit or proceeding calls any such barrister, [pleader], (3) attorney or vakil, as a witness, he shall be deemed to have consented to such disclosure only if he questions such barrister, attorney or vakil on matters which, but for such question, he would not be at liberty to disclose. Privilege not waived by volunteering evidence.

129. No one shall be compelled to disclose to the Court any confidential communication which has taken place between him and his legal professional adviser, unless he offers himself as a witness, in which case he may be compelled to disclose any such communications as may appear to the Court necessary to be known in order to explain any evidence which he has given, but no others. Confidential communications with legal advisers.

Principle.—The first two sections apply when the legal adviser or his clerk, &c, is interrogated as a witness. The professional adviser of a third party [illegible] advise [illegible]

---

(1) See Brown v Foster, 1 H & N, 736 s c, 26 C., 53.

(2) See Kameshur Pershad v Sheik Amanutulla, 2 C. W. N, 649, 661 (1898),

(3) Added by s 10 of the Amending Act XVIII of 1872

willing, from saying whence he got his information, the English authorities and a consideration of the foundation of the rule show that the protection does not depend upon a claim being made, and that it is the duty of the Judge, apart from objection taken, to exclude the evidence.(1) A fortiori, if objection is taken it cannot be made the ground of adverse inference.(2) The rule applies not only upon the criminal trial, but upon any subsequent civil proceedings arising out of it.(3) T
by, or to, whom the di and any other questic under it.(4) The Court has under this section apparently no discretion to compel an answer(5), even if it consider disclosure necessary to show the innocence of the accused (6)

Professional communications

126. No barrister, attorney, pleader or vakil shall at any time be permitted, unless with his client's express consent, to disclose any communication made to him in the course and for the purpose of his employment as such barrister, pleader, attorney or vakil, by or on behalf of his client, or to state the contents or condition of any document with which he has become acquainted in the course and for the purpose of his professional employment(7), or to disclose any advice given by him to his client in the course and for the purpose of such employment:

Provided that nothing in this section shall protect from disclosure—

(1) Any such communication made in furtherance of any [illegal] purpose (8);

(2) Any fact observed by any barrister, pleader, attorney or vakil, in the course of his employment as such, showing that any crime or fraud has been committed since the commencement of his employment.

It is immaterial whether the attention of such [pleader] (9), attorney or vakil was or was not facts by or on behalf of his client.(10)

494, Steph. Dig., Art. 113 In re ... Chunder, 13 W. R, Cr, 1, 10 ... R. v Richardson, supra, ... viewed in Worthington v. Scribner Mass, 487 (Amer), cited in Rapalje's op. cit, p. 456

(1) Marks v Beyfus, supra; Hennessy v. Wright, 21 Q B D., 509, per Wills, J, Weston v. Peary Mohan Das, 40 C., 898 (1913) per Woodroffe, J.

(2) Weston and others v. Peary Mohan Das (supra).

(3) Marks v Beyfus, supra.

(4) Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed., 182; R. v. Hardy, supra, Marks v. Beyfus, supra.

(5) S 165, Prov. 2, post.

(6) According to the rule in Marks v. Beyfus, supra

(7) In R v Bala Dharma, 4 Bom L R, 460 (1902), the communication was held not to be "in the course," etc See

It was decided under section 21, Act II of 1855, that mukhtars were not within the rule.(1) The protection does not extend to any matters communicated to other persons, e g, priests and clergymen(2), medical men(3), clerks(4), bankers(5), stewards, and confidential friends(6) and the like, though such communications were made under terms of the closest secrecy No privilege even attaches to communications made to an attorney friend, consulted merely as a friend and not as an attorney(7); nor to those passing before the relationship exists, or after it has ceased (8) The rule does not require any regular retainer, or any particular form of application or engagement, or the payment of any fees; it is enough if the legal adviser be in any way consulted in his professional character(9); and the protection exists notwithstanding a boná fide mistake in supposing that the solicitor had consented to act(10); or the latter's subsequent refusal of the retainer (11) So also under section 129, when the client is interrogated, a confidential communication, in order to be protected must be one which has taken place between the client and his legal professional adviser. The mere circumstance that communications are confidential does not render them privileged Thus confidential communications between principal and agent, relating to matters in a suit, are not privileged To be privileged, they must be "confidential communications with a professional adviser."(12) So also a letter written in answer to enquiries about the chart

a n

r

party (13) The communication is equally protected whether it is made by the client in person, or is made by an agent on behalf of the client, and whether it is made to the solicitor in person or to a clerk or subordinate of the solicitor who acts in his place and under his direction (14) It is immaterial (under section 129, as under section 126) whether the communication relate to a litigation commenced or anticipated or not (15) A communication with a solicitor for the purpose of obtaining legal advice is protected, though it

---

(1) R. v Chunderkant Chuckerbutty, 1 B L R, A Cr. 8 (1868); 9 W R, Cr. Let, 10: the reasons given for this decision seem equally to apply to the language of the present section

(2) R v Gilham, 1 Moo. C. C, 186, Wheeler v. LeMarchant, L R, 17 Ch D, 681, but see Taylor, Ev, p 789, note, and Steph. Dig, Note xliv, p 196 Some English Judges have considered that such evidence should not be given; see Broad v Pitt, 3 C. & P. 518; R v. Griffin, 6 Cox, C C, 219, Wharton, Ev, § 597, Mr. Baddely's work on the Privilege of Religious Confessions (1865); and Hageman, op cit, §§ 131—142.

3) R. v Gibbons, 1 C. & P, 97, Tay- Ev, § 916

) Lee v Birrell, Camp, 3, 37; Webb mith, 1 C. & P., 337.

Lloyd v. Freshfield and Kaye, 2 C. 325 [a banker of one of the parties nd to answer what such parties' was on a given day].

Wheeler v LeMarchant, supra; Ev, 916.

mith v. Daniell, 44 L. J, Ch, also R. v. Brewer, 6 C. & P., 363, Doe v Jauncey, 8 C & Ph, 99, where the relationship between attorney and client was held not to have been established

(8) Greenough v Gaskell, 1 M & K, 103

(9) Foster v Hall 12 Pick 89, Bean v Quimby, 5 New Hamps, 94, Taylor, Ev, § 923

(10) Smith v Fell, 2 Curtis 667

(11) Cromack v Heathcote 2 Br & B, 4

(12) Wallace v Jefferson, 2 B, 453 (1878), following Anderson v Bank of Columbia, L R, 2 Ch D, 644, and Bustros v White, L R, 1 Q B D, 423, see also Goodall v Little, 1 Sim N S 155

(13) Webb v East, L R, 5 Ex D, 108

(14) Wheeler v LeMarchant, L R, 17 Ch D, 675, 682, or vice versâ see Steele v Stewart, 1 Phil, 471, Lafone v Falkland Islands Co, 4 K & J, 34, Laurence v. Campbell, 4 Drew 485 Taylor, Ev, 1920

(15) Munchershaw Bezonji v The New Durrumsey Co, 4 B, 576 (1880), following Minet v Morgan, L R, 8 Ch App, 361 See Hageman, op cit, §§ 57—62

The rule is established for the protection not of the legal adviser but of the client, and the privilege, therefore, may only be waived by the latter; it is founded on the impossibility of conducting legal business without professional assistance, and on the necessity, in order to render that assistance effectual, of securing the fullest and most unreserved communication between the client and his legal adviser. Further, a compulsory disclosure of confidential communications is so opposed to the popular conscience that it would lead to frequent falsehoods as to what had really taken place. It is quite immaterial whether the communications relate to any litigation commenced or anticipated; it is sufficient if they pass as professional communications in a professional capacity; if the rule were so limited, no one could safely adopt such precautions as might eventually render any proceedings successful, or all proceedings superfluous.(1) The provisos in the first section prevent the privilege conferred from becoming the shield of crime or illegality. The rule does not apply to all which passes between a client and his legal adviser, but only to what passes between them in professional confidence; and the contriving of crime or illegality is no part of the professional occupation of a legal adviser; and it can as little be said that it is part of his duty to advise his client as to the means of evading the law.(2) The provisions of the first section are (in order that it may be the more effectual) made by the second to apply to the necessary organs of communications with the legal advisers, viz., interpreters, clerks and servants.

s 32 EXPLANATION (Admissions in Civil Cases.) s 165 (Questions by Judge.)
Civil Procedure Code, Chapter X (Of Discovery and of the admission, Inspection, Production, Impounding, and Return of documents.)

Taylor, Ev., §§ 911—937; Best, Ev., § 581; Roscoe, N. P. Ev, 18th Ed., 169–172, Roscoe, Cr. Ev., 13th Ed, 127—130, 133—135; Powell, Ev., 9th Ed., 231–241, Steph Dig Arts 115, 116; Bray on Discovery, 385—387; Wharton, Ev, §§ 567—598, Stewart Rapalje's op. cit, §§ 271—274: Hageman's Privileged Communications, §§ 16—164; Wigmore, Ev, § 2290 et seq.

COMMENT. ed sinc.

English and Indian Law.

The law relating to professional c... tions between a solicitor and client is the same in India as in Eng... e attention the single exception relating to the substitution of "illegal purp... or was no... riminal purpose" (v. ante), and, in interpreting section 126, the Cou... y refer to English cases (3)

Construction.

"The rule of protection seems to me ...) ...hich should be construed in a sense most favourable to bringing pro... s section Go... owledge to bear effectively on the facts out of which legal rights and o..., s. c., 48 ... arise."(4)

Rule limited to legal adviser.

Legal advisers alone are within the rule ... the word w... these (as it would seem from the wording of the section) only barristers, ... for "crimin...s, pleaders and vakils ... Act XVIII ... es the ru... as been

(1) Greenough v. Gaskell, 1 M & K., 103, Phipson, Ev., loc. cit, Wigmore, Ev., § 2291, Lyell v. Kennedy, 9 App Cas., 86, Bolton v Corporation of Liverpool, 1 M & K, 88, Coldey v Richards, 19 Beav., 404, Ex-parte Campbell, 5 Ch App, 705, cited in Framji Bhicaji v Mohansing Dhansing, supra, 272, Southwark Co. v. Quick, 3 Q B D, 317; Ross v. Gibbs, L R 8 Eq., 522, 524, Wheeler v. LeMarchant, 17 Ch D, 681, 682, Minet v. Morgan, L R, 8 Ch, 361, 368, Taylor, Ev., § 911, et seq See judgment of West, J., in Munchershaw Bezonji v. New Dhurumsey, etc., Compa... Dig ... B., 576 (1880) 392.

(2) Russel... the ... Jackson, 9 Hare ... Follett v. Jeff...eys, 1 Sim N. S. 17, see also Kelly v. ... Jackson, and R v Cox & Railton, supra; ... Wharton, Ev., § 590, as to testamentary ... communications ... v. ... and Russell v. Jack...son, supra the privilege does not attach to ... these. Taylor, Ev., § 928, Hageman, §§ 84, 85

(3) Framji Bhicaji ... Mohansing Dhansing, 18 B., 263, 271, ... 78, 279 (1871)

(4) Per West, J. in ... Munchershaw Bezonji v. The New Dhurumsey ... Co. 4 B., 576 (1880).

It was decided under section 24, Act II of 1855, that mukhtars were not within the rule.(1) The protection does not extend to any matters communicated to other persons, e.g., priests and clergymen(2), medical men(3), clerks(4), bankers(5), stewards, and confidential friends(6) and the like, though such communications were made under terms of the closest secrecy. No privilege even attaches to communications made to an attorney friend, consulted merely as a friend and not as an attorney(7); nor to those passing before the relationship exists, or after it has ceased.(8) The rule does not require any regular retainer, or any particular form of application or engagement, or the payment [illegible] way consulted in his pro- [illegible] twithstanding a bonâ fide [illegible] to act(10), or the latter's subsequent refusal of the retainer.(11) So also under section 129, when the client is interrogated, a confidential communication, in order to be protected must be one which has taken place between the client and his legal professional adviser. The mere circumstance that communications are confidential does not render them privileged Thus confidential communications between principal and agent, relating to matters in a suit, are not privileged. To be privileged, they must be "confidential communications with a professional adviser"(12) So also a letter written in answer to enquiries about the character of a servant is p [illegible] matory statements, it [illegible] but it is not privilege [illegible] privilege being confi [illegible] party (13) The communication is equally protected whether it is made by the client in person, or is made by an agent on behalf of the client, and whether it is made to the solicitor in person or to a clerk or subordinate of the solicitor who acts in his place and under his direction (14) It is immaterial (under section 129, as under section 126) whether the communication relate to a litigation commenced or anticipated or not (15) A communication with a solicitor for the purpose of obtaining legal advice is protected, though it

(1) R v Chunderkant Chuckerbutty, 1 B L. R, A Cr 8 (1868), 9 W R, Cr Let, 10; the reasons given for this decision seem equally to apply to the language of the present section

(2) R. v Gilham, 1 Moo C C 186 Wheeler v. LeMarchant, L R 17 Ch D, 681; but see Taylor, Ev, p 789, note and Steph Dig, Note xliv, p 196 Some English Judges have considered that such evidence should not be given, see Broad v. Pitt, 3 C & P, 518, R v Griffin, 6 Cox, C. C, 219, Wharton, Ev, § 597. Mr. Baddely's work on the Privilege of Religious Confessions (1865) and Hageman, op cit, §§ 131—142

(3) R v Gibbons, 1 C & P, 97, Taylor, Ev, § 916

(4) Lee v Birrell, Camp, 3, 37, Webb v. Smith, 1 C & P 337

(5) Lloyd v Freshfield and Kaye, 2 C & P, 325 [a banker of one of the parties is bound to answer what such parties' balance was on a given day]

(6) Wheeler v LeMarchant, supra, Taylor, Ev, 916

(7) Smith v Daniell, 44 L J, Ch, 189; see also R v Brewer, 6 C. & P, 363, Doe v Jauncey, 8 C & Ph, 99; where the relationship between attorney and client was held not to have been established

(8) Greenough v Gaskell, 1 M & K, 103

(9) Foster v Hall 12 Pick 89, Bean v Quimby 5 New Hamps, 94, Taylor, Ev, § 923

(10) Smith v Fell, 2 Curtis, 667

(11) Cromack v Heathcote, 2 Br. & B, 4

(12) Wallace v Jefferson, 2 B, 453 (1878), following Anderson v. Bank of Columbia, L R, 2 Ch D, 644, and Bustros v White, L R, 1 Q B D, 423, see also Goodall v Little, 1 Sim N S, 155

(13) Webb v East, L R, 5 Ex D, 108

(14) Wheeler v. LeMarchant, L. R, 17 Ch D, 675, 682, or vice versâ: see Steele v Stewart, 1 Phil, 471; Lafone v Falkland Islands Co, 4 K & J, 34, Laurence v Campbell, 4 Drew, 495, Taylor Ev, 1920

(15) Munchershaw Bezonji v The New Durrumsey Co, 4 B, 576 (1880) following Minet v Morgan, L R, 8 Ch App, 361 See Hageman, op cit, §§ 57—62

relates to a dealing which is not the subject of litigation, provided it be a communication made to the solicitor in that character and for that purpose (1)

Joint interest.

No privilege attaches to "communications between solicitor and client as against persons having a joint interest with the client in the subject-matter of the communication—e g., as between partners(2); directors and shareholders(3); trustee and cestui-que-trust(4) lessor and lessee as to production of the lease(5); reversioner and tenant for life as to common title(6); two persons stating a case for their joint benefit(7); or a husband and wife who are only collusively in contest.(8) Nor does any privilege attach as between joint claimants under the same client—e.g., between claimants under a testator as to communications between the latter and his solicitor.(9) But where the communications relate to matters outside the joint interest, they are privileged even against a person bearing the expense of the communication(10)—e g, communications between a plaintiff corporation and its solicitors, as against a defendant rate-payer as to matters not connected with the rates; or between a trus[illegible] where the communication is not [illegible] ut to enable him to resist litigat[illegible] character, as not trustee, but as mortgagee of the client."(12)

Employment by different parties of same attorney

Where two parties employ the same attorney, the rule is "that communications passing between either of them and the legal adviser in his joint capacity must be disclosed in favour of the other—e g., a proposition made by one to be communicated to the other, or instructions given to the solicitor in presence of the other."(13) In all these cases the question would seem to be, was the communication made by the party to the witness in the character of his own exclusive attorney? If it was, the bond of secrecy is imposed upon the witness; if it was not, the communication will not be privileged."(14)

"At any time."

A communication or document "once privileged is always privileged."(15) The obligation continues after the employment, in which the communication was made, has ceased(16); nor is it affected by the party ceasing to employ the solicitor, and retaining another, nor by any other change of relation between them, nor by the solicitor's being struck off the rolls(17), nor by his becoming personally interested in the property, to the title of which the communications related(18), nor even by the death of the client.

Waiver.

The privilege may, however, be waived by the client himself (though not by the adviser) expressly under section 126, or impliedly under the second

(1) Wheeler v. LeMarchant, supra, 682

(2) Re Pickering, 25 Ch D, 237; Gaurand v Edison Gower Bell Telephone Co, 59 L T, 813.

(3) Gaurand v Edison, supra; Bray on Discovery, 290—297.

(4) Talbot v. Marshfield, 2 Dr. & S, 549; Re Mason, 22 Ch. D., 609; Re Postlethwaite, 35 Ch. D., 722; even though the party resisting production has paid for the communication; Bacon v. Bacon, 34 L T, 349

(5) Doe v Thomas, 9 B & C., 228

(6) Doe v. Date, 3 Q B., 609; Bray 378—383.

(7) Attorney-General v. Berkeley, 2 J. & W, 291.

(8) Ford v DePontes, 5 Jur. N. S, 993

(9) Russell v Jackson, 9 Hare, 387.

(10) Mayor and Corporation of Bristol v Cox, L. R, 26 Ch D, 678, 683.

(11) Thomas v Secretary of State for India, 18 W. R., 312 (Eng)

(12) Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 190; Johnson v Tucker, 11 Jur., 382.

(13) Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 190; Taylor, Ev, § 296; Baug v. Cradocke, 1 M & R., 182; Perry v Smith, 9 M & W., 681; Shore v. Bedford, 5 M & G, 271; Ross v. Gibbs, L. R., 5 Eq, 524; Rennell v Sprye, 10 Beav, 51; all followed in Me mon Hajee v. Moultrie Abdul, 3 B., 91 (1878); supra

(14) Taylor, Ev. § 926; Perry v Smith; Rennell v. Sprye, supra; Wharton, Ev., § 587.

(15) Bullock v. Corrie, 3 Q B D, 355 Pearce v. Foster, 15 Q B. D., 114

(16) See Explanation to s 126

(17) Cholmondeley v. Clinton, 19 Ves., 268

(18) Chant v. Brown, 7 Hare 79

portion of section 128 (post); or perhaps, in the event of the client's death, by his personal representative.(1) The client does not waive his privilege by calling the legal adviser as a witness, unless he questions him on matters which but for such question, he would not be at liberty to disclose(2), and even in that case the cross-examination must be confined to the point upon which the witness has been examined-in-chief.(3) As to waiver in party, v. post.(4) Disclosures made under section 129 should not be enforced in any case except when they are plainly necessary.(5)

The communication which may be verbal or documentary(6) must be of a private or confidential nature (as is expressly stated in section 129 and shown by the use of the word "disclose" in section 126), to be privileged.(7) It must be made to the adviser sub sigillo confessionis (8) Section 126 has no application where the statement is made, not as confidential, but for the purpose of communication.(9) It is not every communication made by a client to an attorney that is privileged from disclosure The privilege only extends to communications made to him confidentially with a view to obtain professional advice (10) Letters containing mere statements of fact are not privileged: they must be of a professional and confidential character (11) Where defendants, at an interview at which the plaintiff was present, admitted their partnership to their attorney, who was then also acting as attorney for the plaintiff, it was held that the attorney was not precluded from giving evidence of this admission to him:—1*st*, because the defendant's statement, having been made in the presence and hearing of the plaintiff, could not be regarded as confidential or private; 2*ndly*, because those statements did not appear to have been made to the attorney exclusively in his character of attorney for the defendants, but to have been addressed to him also as attorney for the plaintiff.(12) The legal adviser must have learned the matter in question only as legal adviser and in no other way. If, therefore, he were a party, and especially to a fraud, that is if he were acting for himself though he might also be employed for another, he would not be protected from disclosing; for in such a case his knowledge would not be acquired solely by his being employed professionally (13) There is no privilege where, in any correctness of speech, there is no communication; as where, for instance, a fact [illegible] to him, from his having been brought [illegible] his being the attorney, but of which [illegible] been equally cognisant(14); or where the thing disclosed had no reference to the professional employment, though disclosed while the relation of attorney and client subsisted, or where the attorney makes himself a subscribing witness, and thereby assumes another Communication must be private confidential.

(1) Bray on Discovery, 386, as to waiver by successor in title, or personal representative v ib, 385—387, and Taylor, Ev, § 927

(2) S 128, the rule was otherwise under s 24, Act II of 1855

(3) Taylor Ev § 927, Valiant v Dodemead, 2 Atk, 524, R v Leverson, 11 Cox, 15

(4) Kay v Poorunchand Poonalal, 4 B, 631 (1880), s c, Ind Jur, 479

(5) Munchershaw Bezonji v New Dhurumsey Co, 4 B (1880)

(6) Gopilal v. Lakhpat Rai, 41 A, 135, s c, 48 I C, 605.

(7) Memon Hajee v Moulvie Abdul, 3 B, 91 (1878); Framji Bhicaji v Mohansingh Dhansingh, 18 Bom, 263, 271 (1893), Greenough v Gaskell, 1 M & K, 104

(8) Ex-parte Campbell In re Cathcart, L R, 5 Ch App, 703, cited in Framji Bhicaji v Mohansingh Dhansingh, supra, 272

(9) R v Rodrigues 5 Bom L R, 122 (1903)

(10) Framji v Dhansingh, supra, Foakes v Webb, 26 Ch D 287 Gardner v Irvin, 4 Ex D 49, O'Shea v Wood, L R P D (1891), 288, 290

(11) O'Shea v Wood, supra, 290

(12) Memon Hajee v Moulvi Abdul, supra

(13) Greenough v Gaskell, supra, 103, 104 Taylor, Ev, § 910

(14) Ib, 104 Framji Bhicaji v Mohansing Dhansing supra, 275 276

character for the occasion, and adopting the duties which it imposes, becomes bound to give evidence of all that a subscribing witness can be required to prove (v. post). But an attorney may not be called upon to disclose matters which he can be said to have learned by communication with his client, or on his client's behalf, matters which were so committed to him in his capacity of attorney, and matters which in that capacity alone he had come to know.(1) The mere circumstance, however, that a solicitor or client obtains, by means of confidential communication, information about a fact, does not protect him from disclosing what he already knew about that fact.(2) But knowledge whether of adviser or client, derived solely from privileged communications, is itself privileged.(3) The communication must be made by, or on behalf of, the client (section 126); when the adviser (or client) has his knowledge independently of any communication from the client (or adviser) or from collateral quarters, there is no privilege(4); nor in respect of knowledge derived by the adviser from the employment, but not from the client, as to mere facts patent to the senses.(5) Where a solicitor claims privilege under section 126, he is bound to disclose the name of his client on whose behalf he claims the privilege. The mere fact that the client's name had been communicated to him in the course, and for the purpose, of his employment as solicitor, by another client, affords no excuse, unless it was communicated to him confidentially, on the [illegible] lisclosed (6) He may also be [illegible] vn without confidence," e g, [illegible] mere matters of observation [illegible]

[illegible] hanged "(14), are not, but all necessary professional and confidential communications, legal opinions, drafts and the like, are privileged.(15) A solicitor is not at liberty, without his client's express consent, to disclose the nature of his professional employment. Section 126 protects from publicity, not merely the details

---

(1) Greenough v. Gaskell, supra, 104, 105 See Gopilal v. Lakhpat Rai, 41 A, 135; s. c, 48 I. C, 605.

(2) Lewis v Penington, 29 L J, Ch, 670

(3) Lyell v Kennedy, 9 App Cas., 81; Proctor v Smiles, 55 L J, Q B, 527

(4) Wheatley v. Williams, 1 M. & W., 533, Sawyer v. Birchmore, 3 M & K, 572; Manser v. Dix, 1 K & J., 451

(5) Brown v. Foster, 1 H. & N, 736, per Pollock, C B, Kennedy v Lyell, 23 Ch D., 406

(6) Framji Bhicaji v Mohansingh Dhansingh, supra, following Bursill v Tanner, 16 Q B D., 1

(7) Ex-parte Campbell, In re Cathcart, L R., 5 Ch & App, 703, cited in Framji Bhicaji v. Mohansingh Dhansingh, supra, 272, Re Arnott, 60 L T, 109; Ramsbottom v Senior, L. R, 8 E., 575

(8) Dwyer v Collins, 7 Ex., 646.

(9) Ib., Greenough v. Gaskell, 1 M. & K., 108, Studdy v. Sanders, 2 D. & R., 347

(10) Jones v Godrich, 5 Moo P. C 16, 25.

(11) Levy v. Pope, 1 M & M, 410, Gillard v. Bates, 6 M. & W, 547, Forshaw v. Lewis, 1 Jur., N S, 263

(12) Beckwith v Bonner, 6 C. & P., 682, appears to be disapproved of in Framji Bhicaji v Mohansingh Dhansingh, supra, 280.

(13) Poole v. Hayne, 1 C & P, 545

(14) Annesley v. Anglesea, 17 St Tr., 1223; see also Cobden v Kendrick, 4 T. R, 431.

(15) Munchershaw Bezonji v The New Dhurumsey Co, 3 B, 580 (1880), Pearudlock Reece v. Trye, 9 Beav, 316; Bunbury v Hammond, 11 Beav, 59; Bunbury v Bunbury, 2 Beav, 173 [case for opinion and opinions]; Reece v Trye, supra; Mostyn v. The West Mostyn Coal & Iron Co, 34 L. T., 532 [drafts of agreement, lease or conveyance]; Dowden v Flaley, 23 Q B. D, 332 [draft advertisement settled by counsel]; Ward v Marshall 3 T. L. R., 578; Woolley v. N. L. M Co., L R 4 C. P., 602; Ryrie v Shivshankar, 15 B, 7 (1890); [notes of interviews or communications by solicitor or client] of the business, but also its general purport, unless it be known, aliunde, that such business, or the communications made in respect of it, fall within the first or second proviso to the section.(1) If this be known, aliunde, and a foundation be thus laid for asking the question and admitting the evidence; e g., if in a particular case the facts proved make it probable that the visit to the adviser really was intended for a criminal or illegal purpose, the adviser may be rightly questioned as to the nature of his employment.(2) The legal adviser will not be permitted to state the contents or condition of any document with which he has become acquanited by virtue of professional confidence.(3) But he cannot withhold documents, unless his client is so entitled.(4) He may not state whether a document, while in his possession, was stamped, indorsed or bore erasures, for that is condition(5) nor the date when, or purpose for which, it was entrusted to him(6), but he may prove the fact that a particular document is in his possession, so as to let in secondary evidence, if it be not produced on notice(7), but not in whose possession or custody it is, or when or where he saw the same, if he came to the knowledge of the fact inquired after in the course of confidential communication with his client in his professional capacity.(8) He may prove that his client put in a pleading, or swore an affidavit, for these are matters of publicity.(9) A solicitor employed to obtain the execution of a deed, and who is one of the witnesses, is not precluded on the ground of a breach of professional confidence, from giving evidence as to what passed at the time of execution, by which the deed may be proved invalid (10) 'If an attorney puts his name to an instrument as a witness, he makes himself thereby a public man and no longer clothed with the character of an attorney his signature binds him to disclose all that passed at the time respecting the execution of the instrument; but not what took place in the concoction and preparation of the deed, or at any other time, and not connected with the execution of it'(11)

Documents which the client intends others to see as well as the solicitor, documents of a public nature, documents entrusted to the solicitor for purposes outside the ordinary scope of [illegible] ok describing tithe lands and given him for, [illegible] are not privileged.(12) Names of partie [illegible] of witnesses whether disclosure be sought before, or at the trial, are privileged(13), but not names of parties' witnesses when constituting material facts in the action—e g,

---

(1) Framji v Dhansingh, supra 276 280, 281

(2) R v Cox & Railton, L R, 14 Q B D, 153, and see Framji v Dhansingh supra, 279, 280, 281, cf Taylor, Ev, § 912

(3) S 126 see Dwyer v Collins supra Davies v Waters, 9 M & W 608 Cleave v Jones 7 Ex 421, Doe v James, 2 M & R 47 Moore v Tyrell, 4 B & Ald 870 Lyell v Kennedy, 9 App Cas 81

(4) Bursill v Tanner 16 Q B D 1

(5) Wheatley v Williams, 1 M & W 533, but see Brown v Foster 1 H & N, 736, supra

(6) Turquand v Knight 2 M & W 98, Framji Bhicaji v Mohansingh Dhansingh, supra

(7) Dwyer v Collins 7 Exch 646 Bevan v Waters, 1 M & M, 235

(8) Cotman v Orton, 9 L J Ch 268 see also Banner v Jackson, 1 D G & S, 472 Robson v Kemp, 5 Esp, 52

(9) Studdy v Sanders, 2 D & K, 347, Greenough v Gaskell, 1 M & K, 108

(10) Crawcour v Salter, 18 Ch D, 30

(11) Robson v Kemp, 5 Esp, 52, per Lord Ellenborough

(12) Phipson, Ev 5th Ed, 193, 194, R v Woodley, 1 M & R, 390, Doe v Hertford 19 L J Q B 526, but copies or extracts from public or non-privileged private documents are privileged if the collection is the result of the solicitor s (or his agent s) labour and skill and might disclose his view of the client's case, Ib, Lyell v Kennedy, 27 Ch D, 1, Walsham v Stainton, 2 H & M, 1

(13) Ib Marriott v Chamberlain, 17 Q B D, 154, London Gas Co v Chelsea, 6 C B N S, 411 Fenner v S E. R Co, L R, 7 Q B, 767, Eade v Jacobs, 3 Ex D, 337, mentioned in 20 Ch D, 529 See also Mackenzie v Yeo, 2 Curt, 866, Taylor, Ev, § 932

those of persons in whose presence a slander was uttered (1) Draft pleadings in the same or former action are privileged; but not pleadings when filed, for they then become publici juris. Similarly, indorsements on, or notes and observations in, counsel's brief as to private matters; and solicitor's instructions on or in, the brief are privileged. But instructions to counsel are only privileged in the sense that they are protected from disclosure to an opponent: they are not protected from enquiry by the Court. Thus a Judge can ask counsel whether he makes a charge on instructions and, if so, on whose.(2) And counsel is not protected by his instructions · for it is his duty to ... reasonable gr
tion of good f that he was actuated by an improper motive personal to himself.(4) Indorsements on counsel's brief of an order of Court, and any other matters publici juris contained therein—e g, copy pleadings in former action, are not privileged(5); communications between opposite parties merely as such, or between co-plaintiffs, or co-defendants simpliciter, are not,(6) but communications between co-plaintiffs or co-defendants when directed to be admitted to a joint solicitor, are privileged.(7) So also are letters written by the solicitor of two plaintiffs to the solicitor of a third plaintiff, as against the defendant claiming their production; and the fact that portions of them had been read to the defendant's solicitor is no waiver of the privilege as regards the parts which were not read (8) A person relying upon the privilege is undoubtedly bound to bring himself clearly and distinctly within it.(9)

In the course and for the purpose of his employment.

The communication need not, as has been seen, relate to any actual or prospective litigation, but the matter of the communication must be within the ordinary scope of ... ...ase and conveyance of ... ...nications to a solicitor ... patent agent(15) or trustee(16); nor communications in furtherance of a fraud or crime whether the solicitor is a party to, or ignorant of the illegal object(17), nor probably are forged documents, though entrusted to the solicitor in professional confidence, privileged.(18)

(1) Ib; Roselle v Buchanan, 16 Q. B D., 656; Marriott v. Chamberlain, supra

(2) Weston v Peary Mohan Das, 40 C, 898 (1913), per Woodroffe, J.

(3) Ib

(4) Nikunja Behari Sen v Harendra Chundra Sinha, 41 C, 514 (1914)

(5) Ib, Walsham v Stainton, 2 H. & M., 1; Lamb v. Orton, 22 L. J., Ch., 713; Nicholls v. Jones, 2 H. & M., 588. [In this case it was also said that counsel's indorsement is a note on which the Court always acts and on which great reliance is placed, ib., 595]. Haslam v Hall, 3 T. L R 776, as to notes of evidence and proceedings in open Court, see Rawstone v Corporation of Preston, 30 Ch. D, 116; Robson v. Warwick, 38 Ch D., 370.

(6) Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed., 195, and cases there cited and see note to s. 23, ante, as to communications "without prejudice" the rule however, applies where the attorney is a co-defendant; Hamilton v Nott, L. R, 16 Eq, 112.

(7) Jenkins v Bushby, L. R., 2 Eq, 548.

(8) Kay v Poorunchand Poonalal, 4 B, 631 (1880)

(9) Framji Bhicaji v Mohansingh Dhansingh, supra, 278.

(10) Carpmael v Powis, 1 Phill., 687, 692; a correlative test is whether the nature of the employment would give the Court summary jurisdiction over the solicitor Turquand v. Knight, 2 M & W., 101. As to knowledge acquired in course of employment. See Gopilal v Lakhpat Rai, 45 I C., 605.

(11) Ib.

(12) R. v. Farley, 2 C. & K, 313

(13) Wilson v. Rastall, 4 T. R, 753

(14) Stratford v Hogan, 2 Ball & B. 1, 6 (Irish); Doe v Hertford, 19 L. J. Q B, 526.

(15) Mosely v The Victoria Rubber Co. 55 L. T., 482.

(16) Tugwell v. Hooper, 10 Beav. 348

(17) S. 126, Proviso · R. v Cox & Railton, 14 Q B D, 153; R. v. Downer, 14 Cox, 486; Re Arnott, 60 L. T., 10: Postlethwaite v. Rickman, L. R., 35 Ch. D., 722.

(18) Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed., 189, R v. Avery, 8 ... Hayward, 2 C & K, 334; R v

"The exclusion of such evidence is for the general interest of the community; and, therefore, to say that, when a party refuses to permit professional confidence to be broken, everything must be taken most strongly against him, what is it but to deny him the protection, which for public purposes the law affords him, and utterly to take away a privilege which can thus only be asserted to his prejudice."(1) There is a distinction between such cases as these and those in which evidence is improperly kept out of the way.(2)

No hostile inference should be drawn from a refusal to let a legal adviser disclose confidential communications.

If the solicitor, in violation of his duty, should voluntarily communicate to a stranger the contents of an instrument with which he was confidentially intrusted, or should permit him to take a copy, the secondary evidence so obtained would, it seems, be admissible, provided that notice to produce the original were duly given, and the production were resisted on the grounds of privilege.(3) "Indeed it has been more than once laid down, that the mere lawfully or unlawfully, nor will it raise an issue to determine that question."(4)

[illegible]

Communication in violation of duty; secondary evidence.

Sections 126—129 refer to comunications between clients and their legal advisers alone. As regards documents governed by these sections, they are absolutely privileged, and the Court has no power whatever to order production.(5) There are certain cases, however (for which the Act does not make specific provision, and in which the question of privilege generally arises on [illegible] trial), in which communications [illegible] persons and the adviser, or third [illegible] ission to the adviser, are under the discretion given by s. 130 of the Civil Procedure Code, which discretion is exercised according to the practice of the Court(6), protected from disclosure Such communications are only protected when they have been made in contemplation of some litigation, or for the purpose of giving advice or obtaining [illegible] or [illegible] the inform- ati[illegible] privilege ma[illegible] existence or [illegible]

Information obtained from third parties for the purpose of litigation.

A—(a) Information (oral or documentary) from third persons called into existence by the client, and given in relation to an intended action (whether

C & P 596, 599, R v Jones 1 Den 166, R v Brown, 9 Cox, 281, R v Downer, supra, Taylor, Ev, § 929

(1) Per Lord Brougham in Bolton v The Corporation of Liverpool, 1 M & K, 88, 94

(2) Wentworth v Lloyd, 10 Jur N S 961

(3) Cleave v Jones, 21 L J, Ex 106, Lloyd v Mostyn, 10 M & W, 481, 482, Taylor, Ev, § 920, if the client sustains any injury from such improper disclosure being made an action will lie against the solicitors, Taylor v Blacklow 3 Bing N C, 235

(4) Taylor, Ev, § 920, and cases there cited

(5) Vishnu Yeshman v New York Life Insurance Co 7 Bom L R, 709 (1905), and see Umbica Churn Sen v. Bengal Spinning Co (1894), 22 C, 105

(6) Ib

(7) Wheeler v LeMarchant, supra, 684, 685 "You have no right to see your adversary's brief and no right to see the materials for his brief" Per James, L J, in Anderson v Bank of Columbia, L R, 2 Ch D, 644, and see remarks of Blackburn, J, in Fenner v S E Ry Co L R, 7 Q B, 767 and they are few, who do not register voluntarily, take the risk of loss, and their situation does not justify special protection. Those who do register have no need of protection, for their title in general stands or falls by what is publicly recorded, not by what they privately possess (1) As to section 131, see Commentary; and as to criminating documents, see Commentary and section 132, post.

s. 3 ("Document.")
s. 139 (Cross-examination of persons called to produce document) s 165 (Production of Documents)
s. 165, PROV. 2 (Power of Judge to compel production of document.)

Act XIX of 1853, s. 26; Act X of 1855, s 10; Act XVIII of 1891, s. 5 (Banker's Books); Steph Dig. Arts. 118, 119, Starkie, Ev., 111; Best, Ev., § 128; Roscoe, N.-P. Ev, 18th Ed. 156—159; Taylor, Ev., §§ 458, 918, 919, 1464; Bray's Discovery, 313, 203—206; Woodroffe and Ameer Ali, Civ Pr. Code, O. XI, r. 6, p. 757; 2nd Ed, p. 783; r. 14, p 767; 2nd Ed, p. 793, Hageman, op cit, §§ 117, 118; Wigmore, Ev., § 2211.

COMMENTARY.

Production of privileged documents.

The rule enacted by these sections, in so far as they relate to witnesses not parties, and the class of persons contemplated by section 131, is in general accordance with that of the English law on the same subject.(2) The first section applies only in the case of a witness who is not a party to the suit in which he is called. But where discovery is sought under the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code, a witness, if a party, cannot be compelled to produce documents which he swears relate solely to his own title or case, and do not in any way tend to prove or support the title or case of his adversary. But the production of other relevant and material documents will ordinarily be compelled (3) The privilege in the case of a party is not confined to title-deeds. "The word [illegible] on an application for discovery be compelled to answer interrogatories, or produce docu[illegible] In England (where, however the rule relati[illegible] that under this Act) he would not [illegible] by this Act against such answer or production, which (section 1) does not apply to affidavits, and [illegible] the protec- the party [illegible] 6 of tion given [illegible] may the Civil [illegible] it all be dealt [illegible] questions will be allowed which the party interrogated would be bound to answer if he were a witness.(7) If this be so, the defendant would be bound to answer. On the other hand, it is one of the inveterate principles of English

(1) Wigmore, Ev, § 2211 In the United States there is no such privilege.

(2) Taylor, Ev., §§ 458, 918, Pickering v Noyes, 1 B & C., 263; Adams v. Lloyd, 3 H & N, 351; Whitaker v Izod, 2 Taunt., 115; and text-books cited, ante.

(3) Morris v Edwards, D R., 15 App. Cas, 309, affirming Morris v. Edwards, 23 Q. B. D, 287; see Bolton v. Corporation of Liverpool, 1 M & K, 88.

(4) Per Kindersley, V C, in Jenkins v Bushby, 35 L J, Ch, 400; see Bewicke v Graham, 7 Q B D, 400; Morris v. Edwards, 23 Q B. D., 287.

(5) Morris v. Edwards, supra

(6) Cf. Woodroffe & Amir Ali's Civ Pr. Code, 2nd Ed, O. XI, r 6, p 783; r. 16, p 795; Hill v. Campbell, L. R. 10 C. P, 222; Atherley v Harvey, 2 Q B D, 524; Fisher v. Owen, 8 Ch. D. 645; Webb v. Eastle, 5 Ex D, 108; Bray on Discovery, 313. As to discovery in criminal cases, see Mohamed Jackariah v Ahmed Mahomed, 15 C, 109 (1887) [illegible]

(7) See remarks of Alderson B., in Osburn v. London Dock Co, 10 Ex. 698, 702; Lyell v. Kennedy, 8 App Cas, 231 law, that a party cannot be compelled to discover that which, if answered, would tend to subject him to punishment(1), and this is so though there is not the faintest prospect of any criminal proceedings being taken against him.(2) It is therefore an open question whether a party interrogated, who is apparently without the statutory protection given to a witness, should or should not be protected by the application of the general principles above-mentioned Where a witness is not compelled to produce a deed, he cannot be compelled to answer questions as to its contents, otherwise the protection would be perfectly illusory (v. post.)(3) In a case to which section 130 applies, it is entirely optional for the witness to produce his title-deeds and to raise any objection whatever.(4) Section 131 extends to the agent the same protection which section 130 or any other section of this or any other Act, provides for the principal; and so where a principal would be entitled to refuse production of a document it cannot be compelled from his solicitor, trustee, or mortgagee.(5) But in so far as the [illegible] held that, unless it appears that the title of the person possessing the document will in some way be affected by its production, the rule will not prevail.(7) It would appear from the terms of section 131 that, though the persons contemplated by that section cannot be compelled to produce documents in their possession, they will [illegible] for example, thougl [illegible] client, may justify l [illegible] (by section 126) to state the contents of any document with which he has become acquain' [illegible] he will [illegible]

possessi [illegible]
will expose the person producing it to a civil action affords no ground for protection.(9) A witness not a party need not produce a criminating document, but he must answer any criminating question, save, it is submitted, any question as to the contents of any such criminating document, as, by the provisions of section 130, he is not bound to produce.(10) As to a witness who is a party, v. ante In all cases, notwithstanding any objection there may be, the document itself must be brought to Court, when the Judge will decide as to the validity of the objection (11) As to the liability of a witness for damages in case of failure to give evidence, or to produce a document, see Acts XIX of 1853,(12) and X of 1855 (13) A witness called on his subpœna duces tecum, who objects to the production of documents, has no right to have the question of his liability

---

(1) Per Bowen, L J, in Redfern v Redfern, P D, 1891, p 14

(2) Odgers on Libel, 580

(3) Davies v Waters, 9 M W, 608, 612; Few v Gappy, 13 Beav, 457, and this notwithstanding s 132, post But see Baijnath Kedia v Raghunath Prasad, 41 C, 6 (1914) (a party can interrogate on facts directly in issue and thus on details of a hundi) distinguishing Ali Kader Syed Hossain Ali v Gobind Dass, 17 C, 840 (1890)

(4) R v Moss, 16 A, 88, 100 (1893)

(5) Bursill v Tanner, 16 Q B D, 1, Steph Dig, Art 119, Taylor, Ev, §§ 458, 918

(6) Phelps v Prew, 3 E & B, 430, see also Volant v Soyer, 13 C B, 231

(7) Taylor, Ev, § 459, Lee v Merest, 39 L J, Ecc, 53, Doe v Langdon, 12 Q B, 711

(8) Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 423, Taylor Ev, §§ 458, 919, Roscoe, N P. Ev, 156, Hebberd v Knight, 2 Ex R, 11, as to the giving of secondary evidence in the case of non-production, see note to s 65, ante

(9) Doe v Date, 3 Q B, 609, Taylor, Ev, §§ 460, 1464

(10) S 132, post, Davies v Waters, supra

(11) S. 162, post

(12) S 26 (in force in Bengal, N-W. P and Oudh).

(13) S 10 (in force in the Presidencies of Madras and Bombay) to produce argued by his counsel retained for that purpose.(1) A witness cannot withhold production of a document called for as evidence, on the ground of any lien he may have upon it(2); unless perhaps the party requiring the production be himself the person against whom the claim of lien is made(3), for in such case the right to use the document evidentially might, on the facts practically annul the value of the lien, and there seems no reason why this should be permitted him. So though a solicitor, having a lien on a deed, may not be bound to produce it at the instance of the client against whom the lien exists, yet if the client is bound to produce it for the benefit of a third person, as e g., under a subpœna duces tecum, so too is the solicitor (4) A banker is not compellable to produce his books in legal proceedings to which the bank is not a party.(5) But in England it has been recently held that the fact that a banker has received a document upon the terms that it shall not be delivered up except with the consent of the depositor is no answer to a subpœna duces tecum (6)

Witness not excused from answering on ground that answer will criminate.

132. A witness shall not be excused from answering any question as to any matter relevant to the matter in issue in any suit or in any civil or criminal proceeding, upon the ground that the answers to such question will criminate, or may tend directly or indirectly to criminate such witness, or that it will expose, or tend directly or indirectly to expose, such witness to a penalty or forfeiture of any kind:

Proviso.

Provided that no such answer, which a witness shall be compelled to give, shall subject him to any arrest or prosecution, or be proved against him in any criminal proceeding, except a prosecution for giving false evidence by such answer.(7)

Principle.—The general rule is otherwise in England, where (with certain exceptions) a witness need not answer any question the tendency of which is to expose the witness, or the wife or husband of the witness, to any criminal charge, penalty or forfeiture(8); the maxim being "Nemo tenetur seipsum

---

(1) Rowcliffe v Egremont, 2 M & Rob, 386, see also Lee v Merest, 39 L. J, Ecc, 53, 56.

(2) Hunter v. Leathley, 10 B & C, 885; Ley v. Barlow, 1 Ex., 801, Taylor, Ev., § 458, and cases there cited

(3) This is suggested in Brassington v. Brassington, 1 Sim & St, 455, and acted upon in Kemp v. King, 2 M. & Rob, 437: see also Hope v Liddell, 24 L J., Ch, 693; Re Cameron's, etc, Co, 25 Beav., 4; Taylor, Ev, § 458; Bray's Discovery, 203—206, Wigmore. Ev, p 3001

But it seems to be opposed to Hunter v Leathley, supra, in which a broker, who had a lien on a policy for premiums advanced, was compelled to produce it in an action against the underwriter by the assured who had created the lien [Steph Dig, Art 118; see also Fowler v. Fowler, 29 W R (Eng.), 80]. See Lockett v. Carey, 10 Jur. N. S, 144, where a solicitor was party to the action, and Indian Contract Act (IX of 1872), ss 171, 221. As to right of mortgagee to withhold production of mortgage-deeds or title-deeds, see Beattie v Jetha Dungarsi, 5 Bom. H. C R, O. C. J., 152.

(4) Cordery's Law relating to Solicitors, 3rd Ed, 365; Lush's Practice 3rd Ed, 335, 336; as to lien in insolvency. administration, and in winding up proceedings, see Bray's Discovery, 205

(5) Act XVIII of 1891, s 5.

(6) R v. Daye (1908), 2 K. B. 333 (Div. Ct.).

(7) See Hossain Baksh v. R., 6 C., 96, 107 (1880), as also see R. v Dasrat, 21 B, 213, 220 (1898), in which the accused called as witnesses persons charged with him and awaiting a separate trial for the same offence.

(8) See R v. Gopal Dass 3 M., 279—282 (1881); Best, Ev, §§ 126—127; Taylor, Ev., §§ 1450—1468, Bray on Discovery, 311—349; Roscoe, N P. Ev., 18th Ed., 198; Ed, 167—169; Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed, 221—225; 202; Powell, Ev., 9th Ed, Steph. Dig, Art 120; R v Boyes, 1 B. & S., 330; Ex parte Reynolds, L. R., 20 Ch D, 298 (oath of the witness not conclusive: claim must be bona fide).

proderc."(1) The privilege is based on the principle of encouraging all persons to come forward with evidence, by protecting them, as far as possible, from injury or needless annoyance in consequence of so doing.(2) This privilege was repealed in India by section 32, Act II of 1855, which is reproduced in the present section. The state of the law, while the privilege existed, tended in some cases to bring about a failure of justice, for the allowance of the excuse when the matter to which the question related was in the knowledge solely of the witness, deprived the Court of the information which was essential to its arriving at a right decision. In order to avoid this inconvenience, and to obtain evidence which a witness refused to give, the witness was deprived of the privilege of claiming excuse, but, while subjecting him to compulsion, the Legislature, in order to remove any inducement to falsehood declared that evidence so obtained should not be used against him, except for the purpose in the Act declared (3) The necessity under which the privileged witness formerly lay of explaining how the answer might criminate him amounted in some cases to a virtual denial of the privilege. This necessity for an enquiry as to how the answer to a particular question might criminate is now avoided. The rule enacted by this section thus secures the benefit of the witness's answer to the cause of justice, and the benefit of the rule, that no one shall be compelled to criminate himself, to the witness (claiming his privilege), when a criminal proceeding is instituted against him.(4)

s. 130 (Criminating Documents.) ss. 148—149 (Criminating Questions in cross-examination)

Steph Dig, Art 120, Taylor, Ev, §§ 1453—1468, Best, Ev, §§ 126—129, Bray on Discovery, 311—349; Roscoe, N. P Ev, 18th Ed, 167—169, Powell, Ev, 9th Ed, 221—228, Cr. Pr Code, ss 161—175, Stewart Rapalje's Law of Witnesses, §§ 261—269, Wharton, Ev, §§ 533—540, Hageman's Privileged Communications, §§ 256—271

COMMENTARY.

"Shall not be excused"

This section gives the Judge no option to disallow a question as to matter relevant to the matter in issue. Section 148 gives him an option to compel or excuse an answer to a question as to a matter which is material to the suit only so far as it affects the credit of the witness (5) As to interrogatories, see notes to s. 130, ante.

"Relevant to the matter in issue."

This section does not in terms deal with all criminatory questions which may be addressed to a witness, but only with questions as to matters, relevant to the matter in issue. Irrelevant questions should not be allowed, and it may be implied from the limitation in this section, that a witness should be excused from answering questions tending to criminate as to matters which are irrelevant.(6) On the very language of the section the witness can always claim to be excused on the ground of the irrelevancy of the question.(7)

Criminate penalty, forfeiture

Though the question does not so expressly provide, it follows, à fortiori that a person is not excused from answering any question only because the

(1) For a criticism of this rule, see Bentham Rationale, Bk IX, Part IV, Ch 3; Stephen's History of the Criminal Law, I, 342, 441, 535, 542, 565, Wigmore, Ev, § 2251, and at p 3101, where he deals with the subject of judicial cant towards crime and with what a wit has called "justice tampered with mercy"

(2) Best, Ev, § 126, a compromise has, however, been adopted in several modern statutes by compelling the disclosure, but indemnifying the witness from its results, see Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 198

(3) Per Turner, C J., in R v Gopal Dass, supra 279, 280

(4) Ib, per M Ayyar, J at pp 286, 287 So a co-accused in separate case can be called as defence witness under the protection of this section Rara Ram v Emp, 24 Cr L J, 633 (1923)

(5) R v Gopal Dass 3 M 271, 280.

(6) Ib, 278, per Turner C J

(7) Ib, 283, per Innes, J

answer may establish or tend to establish, that he owes a debt or is otherwise liable to a civil suit, either at the instance of the Crown or of another person (1)

"Shall be compelled to give."

The section makes a distinction between those cases, in which a witness voluntarily answers a question, and those in which he is compelled to answer: and gives him a protection in the latter of these cases only. Protection is afforded only to answers which a witness has objected to give, or which he has asked to be excused from giving, and which then he has been compelled to give, and not to answer given voluntarily. "As these words stand they presuppose an objection by the witness, which has been overruled by the Judge and a constraint put upon the witness to answer the particular question." If, therefore, the witness wishes to prevent his statement from being thereafter used against him, he must object to reply, and only answer on being compelled [illegible] false, cannot be ground for [illegible] ght be made use of in a [illegible] is come from the witness himself(3), or the Counsel or pleader representing him (4) Quære, however, whether the Judge ought not (though he is not bound) to advise the witness of his right.(5) Recently however, it has been held, that although a voluntary statement made by a witness may stand on a different footing, an answer given by a witness in a criminal case on oath to a question put to him, either by the Court or by counsel on either side, especially when the question is on a point which is relevant to the case, is within the protection afforded by this section, whether or not the witness has objected to the question asked him (6) More recently still it has been held that the question whether a witness is "compelled" to answer is in each case a question of fact (7) In the undermentioned case it was held by the Allahabad High Court that if a witness while giving evidence makes a statement which amounts to defamation he may be prosecuted under section 499 of the Penal Code, and it lies on him to show that the statement falls within one or other of the exceptions to that section or that he is protected by the proviso to this section.(8) It has been held that a prisoner's thumb-impression, which had been taken out of Court and without objection by him, was admissible against him in a later trial for giving false evidence.(9) This decision was based on the

(1) See 46 Geo. III, Cap 47, Steph. Dig, Art 120 and note, as to the meaning of "tendency to criminate," see Lamb v. Munster, 10 Q. B D, 111, 114

(2) R v Gopal Dass, supra (1881); per curiam, Kernan and Ayyar, JJ, dissent R v. Ganu Sobna, 12 B., 440 (1888), per curiam, Birdwood J, dissent, R v Samiappa, 15 M, 63 per curiam (1891); Moher Sheikh v. R, 21 C, 392 (1893), per curiam, R v. Moss, 16 A, 88, 100 (1893), Haider Ali v. Abru Mia, 2 C L J, 105 (1905), s c, 9 C. W N, 911, 32 C, 756, Sodaruddin Sarkar v. R., 31 C. 715 (1904), at pp. 720, 721. As to the law under section 32, Act II of 1855, see R v Jamiran, B. L R, Sup. Vol, 521, 524, 526, 530 (1866); Joseph Perry v Official Assignee, 47 C, 254; Kallu v Sital, 40 A., 271 (1918); Ganga Sahai v Emperor, 42 A., 257 (1920).

(3) Thomas v. Newton, 1 M. & M., 48*n*, R v Adey, 1 M & Rob, 94; Boyle v Wiseman, 10 Ex, R, 647

(4) R v Pramatha Nath Bose (1910), 37 C, 878

(5) See Fisher v Ronalds, 12 C. B., 762; Paxton v Douglas, 16 Ves, 242, A G v Radolff, 10 Ex, 88, R v Gopal Dass, supra, 286, s 148 post, especially refers to warning by Judge As to the power of the Judge to question the witness, see R. v. Hari Lakshman, 10 B, 185 (1885).

(6) Emp v Chatur Singh, 43 A, 92 (1921).

(7) Emp v Banarsi, 46 A, 254; s. c., 25 Cr. L. J, 477 (1923).

(8) R. v. Ganga Prasad (1907), 29 A., p. 686 (Knox and Aikman, JJ., but Richards, J., dissent) held that no prosecution for defamation could lie against a witness; for conflict of decision on this point, see Kari Singh v. R., 40 C. 433 (1913) Venkata Reddi, in re, F R. 36 M., 216 (1913) Satish Chandra Chakravartti v Ram Doyal De, 48 C. 388, Framshaw Edalji v Jehangir Cowasji, 47 B, 15 and post, Examination of Witnesses grounds that the taking of the thumb-impression was not equivalent to the asking and answering of a question and that it had been done without objection and not in the course of a trial. In another later case where a party to a suit had made questions objected tc was held that this s tion in a subsequent trial for giving false evidence (1) In this case it was stated that overruling an objection will not necessarily amount to compelling a witness to answer.

(9) Timoo Mia v. R. (1911), 37 C., 349.

Persons examined by Police-officers.

Persons examined by Police-officers investigating cases under the provisions of sections 161, 175, Criminal Procedure Code, are not bound to answer criminating questions put by such officers.(2) As to criminating documents, see section 130, ante. and as to the penalties for refusing to give evidence, and for perjury, and the protection afforded to witnesses in respect of what they may say whilst under examination, see Introduction to Chapter X.

Accomplices

133. An accomplice shall be a competent witness against an accused person; and a conviction is not illegal merely because it proceeds upon the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice.

Principle —The testimony of accomplices, who are usually interested, and nearly always infamous witnesses, is admitted from necessity, it being often impossible, without having recourse to such evidence, to bring the principal offenders to justice (3) But the practice is to regard the statements of such persons as tainted because, from the position occupied by them, their statements are not entitled to the same weight as the evidence of an independent witness (4) Accomplice evidence is held untrustworthy for three reasons: (a) because an accomplice is likely to swear falsely in order to shift the guilt from criminally: and this hope would lead him to favour the prosecution.(5) Therefore, as a general rule, confirmation (v. post), yet as it is allowed that is inevitable, that if credit is given from another witness (6)

ss. 114 ILLUST (b) (Presumption as to accomplice evidence.)

Taylor, Ev., §§ 967—971; Best, Ev, §§ 170, 171; Foster's Crown Law, 352; Roscoe, Cr. Ev, 13th Ed., 103—113; Criminal Procedure Code, ss 337—339 (Tender of Pardon to accomplice), s. 297 (Charge to Stewart Rapalje's Law of jury); Witnesses, §§ 226—228; Burr. Jones, Ev., §§786—788, Wharton's Criminal Ev. §§ 439—445; Wigmore, Ev, § 2056, et seq

---

(1) R. v Pramatha Nath Bose (1910), 37 C, 878; distinguishing Thomas v. Newton (supra), and R v. Adey, 1 Moo and Rob, 94

(2) Cr Pr. Code, ss. 161, 175

(3) Taylor, Ev, § 967

(4) R. v. Bepin Biswas, 10 C, 970, 975 (1884)

(5) Per Scott, J, in R. v. Magan Lall, 14 B, 115, 119 (1889); see remarks of Peacock, C J., in R. v. Elahi Bux, post, and Kamala Prasad v. Sital Prasad, 24 C., 339, 324, 343 (1901).

(6) R v Jones, 2 Camp, 131; R v. Elahi Bux, B L. R., Sup Vol, F. B, 459, 462 (1866). See Wigmore, Ev, § 2056. Emperor v. Anant Kumar Banerji, 32 C. L. J., 204 As to whether absence of corroboration is fatal, see Alla-ud-Din v. Emperor, 20 Cr L. J. 561; 52 I. C, 49 and see 49 I. C, 607, Pangang v. Emperor, 19 Cr. L. J, 47; s c, 42 I. C, 1002.

COMMENTARY.

Accomplices. An accomplice is one concerned with another or others in the commission of a crime.(1) The term "accomplices" may include all participes criminis(2) An accomplice is a person who is a guilty associate in crime or who sustains such a relation to the criminal act that he can be jointly indicted with the defendant (principal).(3) But it is not every participation in a crime which makes a party an accomplice in it, so as to require his testimony to be confirmed: much depends on the nature of the offence and the extent of the complicity of the witness in it.(4) It is generally unsafe to convict a person on the evidence of accomplices unless corroborated in material particulars. But in considering whether this general maxim does or does not apply to a particular case, it is to be remembered that all persons coming technically within the category of accomplices cannot be treated as on precisely the same footing; the nature of the offence and the circumstances under which the accomplices make their statements must always be consi [illegible] subject can be [illegible] as laid down.(5) Where a witness [illegible] nce to which he testifies, and took n[illegible] ho must be considered as no better than that of an accomplice.(6) A per[illegible] who offers a bribe to a public officer is an accomplice in the offence of taking an illegal gratification.(7) Persons merely present when money is given to a bribe-taker are not accomplices, but the case is different if they have co-operated in the payment of the bribe, or taken some part in the negotiations for its payment In the latter case they cannot be regarded as independent witnesses and their evidence is tainted.(8) Where certain persons accompanied another who was entrusted with and carried the money intended to be given as a bribe to the head constable, in the knowledge that it was to be so paid and in order to witness and assist in such payment, they were held to be accomplices.(9) While it is usually unsafe to convict a public servant of receiving bribes on the uncorroborated evidence of persons who say they have given them, the question as to the amount of corroboration depends on the circumstances of each case (10)

The mere presence of a person on the occasion of the giving of a bribe and his omission to promptly inform the authorities do not constitute him an accomplice, unless it can be shown that he somehow co-operated in the payment of the bribe, or was instrumental in the negotiations for the payment.(11) There

(1) Wharton, Law-Lexicon, 5th Ed The co-operation in the crime must be real and not merely apparent Wharton, Cr Ev § 440 See 24 C. W. N, 119.

(2) Foster's Crown Cases, 341: thus in English law it includes both principals in the first and second degrees and accessories before and after the fact. But in India it was held that an accessory after the fact (under the law prior to the Penal Code) stood on a very different footing from an accomplice. R. v Chutterdharee Sing, 5 W. R, Cr, 59 (1866): see also Mayne's Penal Code, note to s. 117, and ss 130, 136, 167, 212, 216.

(3) Per Sir S Subramania Aiyar, Offg C J Ramasami Gounden v. R, 27 M, 271 (1903), s c, 14 Mad. L. J., 226

(4) R. v Chutterdharee Sing, 5 W. R., Cr. 59 (1866); Best, Ev, § 171; R v Hargrave, 5 C. & P., 170; R. v. Jarvis, 2 Moo & R, 40. R. v Boyes, 1 B & S, 311, 322, see first supplementary illustration to ill (b), s 114

(5) R v. Malhar, 26 B, 193 (1901); R v Hanmant, s c, 3 Bom L R, 694; R v Hanmant, 6 Bom L R, 443, 450 (1904)

(6) R. v Chando Chandaliner, 24 W R, Cr., 55 (1875); see Ishan Chandra v R, post

(7) R. v. Chagan Dayaram, 14 B., 331 (1890); R v. Magan Lal, 14 B., 115 (1889); R. v Malhar, 26 B, 193 (1901). see also R. v Obhoy Churn, 3 W R, Cr. 19 (1865); R v Samiappa 15 M., 63 (1891)

(8) Khadam Ali v. Emperor, 15 P W R, Cr, 1919; s c., 20 Cr L. J., [illegible]

(9) Rajoni Kant v. Asan Mullick, 2 C. W. N., 672 (1895).

(10) R v. Malhar, 26 B, 193 (1901)

(11) R v. Deodhur Singh 27 C., 144 (1899), and in Akhoy Kumar v Jatra Chunder, 27 C., 925 (1900), it was held that a person lending money in ordinary course of business to pay an amount extorted was not an accomplice is nothing in the law to justify the broad proposition that the evidence of witnesses, who admit that they were cognizant of a crime, that they made no attempt to prevent it, and that they did not disclose its commission, should only be relied on to the same extent as that of accomplices (1) A person who has helped the accused to conceal the corpse of a person murdered or has omitted to give information of the murder is not an accomplice, although he may be guilty of an offence either under s. 201 or s. 202 of the Indian Penal Code (2) " An accomplice witness is one who is either being jointly tried for the same offence and makes admissions which may be taken as evidence against a co-prisoner and which make the confessing accused pro hac vice a sort of witness, or one who has received a conditional pardon on the understanding that he is to tell all he knows, and who may at any time be relegated to the dock if he fails in his undertaking "(3) A witness is none the less an accomplice, because at the time of his giving evidence he has already been convicted on his own confession(4) Though a great degree of disfavour may attach to a person for the part he has acted as an informer, yet his case is not treated as that of an accomplice.(5)

nd initiating a criminal offence r justified by any exception in distinguishes the spy from the accomplice But the act of a detective in supplying marked money for the detection of a crime cannot be treated as that of an accomplice.(6) Where an of an offence to say that as to justify udges speak of the danger of acting upon the uncorroborated evidence of accomplices, they refer to the evidence of accomplices who are admitted as evidence for the Crown in the hope or expectation of a pardon."(8) And in a case in the Calcutta

This section is the only absolute rule of law as regards the evidence of accomplices. But there is a rule of guidance which the Court should also regard; and it is to be found in illustration (b) to section 114. The latter section enacts

(1) R. v. Smither, 26 M, I, 12 (1902)

(2) Ramasami Gounden v. R, 27 M., 271 (1903), per Sir S. Subramania Aiyyar, Offg. C. J, and Sir Bhashyam Aiyangar, J.

(3) Per Glover, J, in R v. Ramsodoy Chuckerbutty, 20 W. R., Cr, 19 (1873); as to giving evidence under pardon, see remarks of Peacock, C J, in R. v Elahi Bux, at p 468; see R. v. Boyes, 311, 322, supra; R. v. O'Hara, 17 C, 642 (1890).

(4) R. v. Ramsodoy Chuckerbutty, supra.

(5) Taylor, Ev., § 971; Wharton, Cr. Ev, § 440; Stewart Rapalje, op. cit, § 228; R. v. Despard, 28 How St. Tr, 489; R. v. Mullins, 3 Cox. C. C, 526; referred to and followed in R. v. Javecharam, 19 B, 363 (1894); in which the distinction between a spy and an accomplice is pointed out See also R v. Mona Puna, 16 B, 661; R. v Shankar, Cr. R, 91 (Bom), 21 Dec, 1888, cited in 19 B, supra, at p. 368.

(6) R. v. Javecharam, 19 B, 363 (1894).

(7) Ishan Chandra v R, 21 C, 328 (1893); R. v. Chando Chandalinee, 24 W. R, Cr, 55 (1875).

(8) Per Peacock, C. J, in R v. Elahi Bux, B. L. R., Sup V, 459 (1886), at p 469

(9) R. v. Chaturbhuj Sahu (1910), 38 C., 96 and for English rule to same effect, see Archbold's Criminal Pleading, 25th Ed, 441, and R. v. Bickley (1909), 2 Cr. App Rep, 53; R. v. Dowling (1848), 3 Cox, C. C., 526.

COMMENTARY.

Accomplices. An accomplice is one concerned with another or others in the commission of a crime.(1) The term "accomplices" may include all participes criminis.(2) An accomplice is a person who is a guilty associate in crime or who sustains such a relation to the criminal act that he can be jointly indicted with the defendant (principal).(3) But it is not every participation in a crime which makes a party an accomplice in it, so as to require his testimony to be confirmed: much depends on the nature of the offence and the extent of the complicity of the witness in it.(4) It is generally unsafe to convict a person on the evidence of accomplices unless corroborated in material particulars. But in considering whether this general maxim does or does not apply to a particular case, it is to be remembered that all persons coming technically within the category of accomplices cannot be treated as on precisely the same footing; the nature of the offence and the circumstances under which the accomplices make their statements must always be considered. No general rule on the subject can be laid down.(5) Where a witness admits that he was cognisant of the crime as to which he testifies, and took no means to prevent or disclose it, his evidence must be considered as no better than that of an accomplice (6) A person who offers a bribe to a public officer is an accomplice in the offence of taking an illegal gratification.(7) Persons merely present when money is given to a bribe-taker are not accomplices, but the case is different if they have co-operated in the payment of the bribe, or taken some part in the negotiations for its payment. In the latter case they cannot be regarded as independent witnesses and their evidence is tainted.(8) Where certain persons accompanied another who was entrusted with and carried the money intended to be given as a bribe to the head constable, in the knowledge that it was to be so paid and in order to witness and assist in such payment, they were held to be accomplices.(9) While it is usually unsafe to convict a public servant of receiving bribes on the uncorroborated evidence of persons who say they have given them, the question as to the amount of corroboration depends on the circumstances of each case (10)

The mere presence of a person on the occasion of the giving of a bribe and his omission to promptly inform the authorities do not constitute him an accomplice, unless it can be shown that he somehow co-operated in the payment of the bribe, or was instrumental in the negotiations for the payment.(11) There

---

(1) Wharton, Law-Lexicon, 5th Ed The co-operation in the crime must be real and not merely apparent Wharton, Cr Ev, § 440 See 24 C W N, 119

(2) Foster's Crown Cases, 341. thus in English law it includes both principals in the first and second degrees and accessories before and after the fact But in India it was held that an accessory after the fact (under the law prior to the Penal Code) stood on a very different footing from an accomplice R v Chutterdharee Sing, 5 W R, Cr, 59 (1866) see also Mayne's Penal Code, note to s 117, and ss 130, 136, 167, 212, 216

(3) Per Sir S Subramania Aiyar, Offg. C J, Ramasami Gounden v R, 27 M, 271 (1903), s c, 14 Mad. L. J, 226.

(4) R v. Chutterdharee Sing, 5 W R., Cr, 59 (1866); Best, Ev, § 171; R v. Hargrave, 5 C & P., 170; R. v Jarvis, 2 Moo & R., 40. R v Boyes, 1 B & S, 311, 322. see first supplementary illustration to ill (b), s 114.

(5) R. v Malhar, 26 B, 193 (1901); s c, 3 Bom L R, 694, R v Hanmant, 6 Bom L. R, 443, 450 (1904)

(6) R v Chando Chandalinee, 24 W. R, Cr, 55 (1875); see Ishan Chandra v. R, post

(7) R. v Chagan Dayaram, 14 B, 331 (1890), R v Magan Lal, 14 B., 115 (1889); R v Malhar, 26 B, 193 (1901), see also R v Obhoy Churn, 3 W. R., Cr., 19 (1865); R v Samiappa, 15 M., 63 (1891)

(8) Khadam Ali v Emperor, 15 P W. R, Cr, 1919; s c., 20 Cr L J, 258

(9) Rajoni Kant v. Asan Mullick, 2 C. W N, 672 (1895)

(10) R. v Malhar, 26 B, 193 (1901)

(11) R. v Deodhur Singh, 27 C., 144 (1899), and in Akhoy Kumar v Jagat Chunder, 27 C., 925 (1900), it was held that a person lending money in ordinary course of business to pay an amount extorted was not an accomplice is nothing in the law to justify the broad proposition that the evidence of witnesses, who admit that they were cognizant of a crime, that they made no attempt to prevent it, and that they did not disclose its commission, should only be relied on to the same extent as that of accomplices.(1) A person who has helped the accused to conceal the corpse of a person murdered or has omitted to give information of the murder is not an accomplice, although he may be guilty of an offence either under s 201 or s. 202 of the Indian Penal Code.(2) "An accomplice witness is one who is either being jointly tried for the same offence and makes admissions which may be taken as evidence against a co-prisoner and which make the confessing accused pro hac vice a sort of witness, or one who has received a conditional pardon on the understanding that he is to tell all he knows, and who may at any time be relegated to the dock if he fails in his undertaking"(3) A witness is none the less an accomplice, because at the time of his giving evidence he has already been convicted on his own confession(4) Though a great degree of disfavour may attach to a person for the part he has acted as an informer, yet his case is not treated as that of an accomplice.(5) The action of a spy and informer in suggesting and initiating a criminal offence is itself an offence, the act not being excused or justified by any exception in the Indian Penal Code, or by the doctrine which distinguishes the spy from the accomplice. But the act of a detective in supplying marked money for the detection of a crime cannot be treated as that of an accomplice.(6) Where an informer was upon his own statement cognisant of the commission of an offence and omitted to disclose it for six days, the Court was not prepared to say that he was an accomplice; but held that his testimony was not such as to justify a conviction, except where it was corroborated.(7) "When the Judges speak of the danger of acting upon the uncorroborated evidence of accomplices, they refer to the evidence of accomplices who are admitted as evidence for the Crown in the hope or expectation of a pardon."(8) And in a case in the Calcutta

This section is the only absolute rule of law as regards the evidence of accomplices. But there is a rule of guidance which the Court should also regard; and it is to be found in illustration (b) to section 114. The latter section enacts

---

(1) R v. Smither, 26 M, 1, 12 (1902).

(2) Ramasami Gounden v R, 27 M, 271 (1903), per Sir S Subramania Aiyyar, Offg C. J, and Sir Bhashyam Aiyangar, J.

(3) Per Glover, J, in R v Ramsodoy Chuckerbutty, 20 W. R, Cr, 19 (1873); as to giving evidence under pardon, see remarks of Peacock, C. J, in R v. Elahi Bux, at p. 468; see R v Boyes, 311, 322, supra; R. v. O'Hara, 17 C., 642 (1890).

(4) R. v Ramsodoy Chuckerbutty, supra

(5) Taylor, Ev, § 971, Wharton, Cr Ev, § 440; Stewart Rapalje, op cit, § 228; R. v. Despard, 28 How St Tr, 489; R. v. Mullins, 3 Cox, C C., 526; referred to and followed in R. v Javecharam, 19 B., 363 (1894); in which the distinction between a spy and an accomplice is pointed out See also R. v. Mona Puna, 16 B, 661, R v. Shankar, Cr R, 91 (Bom.), 21 Dec., 1888, cited in 19 B, supra, at p 368

(6) R. v. Javecharam, 19 B, 363 (1894).

(7) Ishan Chandra v R, 21 C, 328 (1893); R. v. Chando Chandalinee, 24 W. R, Cr, 55 (1875)

(8) Per Peacock, C J, in R. v. Elahi Bux, B L. R., Sup. V., 459 (1866), at p 469.

(9) R. v Chaturbhuj Sahu (1910). 38 C, 96 and for English rule to same effect, see Archbold's Criminal Pleading, 25th Ed, 441, and R. v. Bickley (1909), 2 Cr. App Rep., 53; R. v. Dowling (1848), 3 Cox, C. C., 526.

a rule of presumption, and read with section 4 it indicates that this is not a presumption incapable of rebuttal. The right to raise this presumption is sanctioned by the Act; and it would be an error of law to disregard it. What effect is to be given to it must be determined by the circumstances of each case. The evidence of the accomplice requires to be accepted with great caution because among other things he is likely to swear falsely in order to shift the guilt from himself. The corroboration of such evidence when required should be such corroboration in material particulars as would induce a prudent man to believe, on consideration of all the circumstances, that the evidence is true so far as it affects each person implicated.(1)

Rule in the section and in section 114, illustration (b).

The rule in this section and in section 114, illustration (b), are part of one subject, and neither section is to be ignored in the exercise of judicial discretion(2), and they coincide with the ru[illegible] England(3) and laid down in India prior to the passi[illegible] result" of these sections "appears to [illegible] as a maxim or rule of evidence resting [illegible] is unworthy of credit against an accu[illegible] implicates an acc[illegible] respect to that [illegible] case has to deal [illegible] applies to exclude that testimony or not; in other words, to consider whether the requisite corroboration is furnished by other evidence or facts proved in the case, though at the same time the Court may rightly in exceptional cases, notwithstandin[illegible] give credit to the accomp[illegible] eason for doing so upon [illegible] ation"(5)
The rule that an accomplice must be corroborated in a material particular is a mere rule of general and usual practice, the application of which is for the discretion of the Judge by whom the case is tried. Thus the rule has no application in the case of an accomplice who is merely a youthful tool in the hands of one who stood to him in loco parentis (6). In a case in the Madras High Court it was said that this section is the substantive enactment declaring the law on this point, while section 114 only assists the Court in drawing inferences of fact, and that therefore the Court may be warranted in refusing to accept the presumption in section 114, illustration (b), and may consider the evidence of an accomplice in the light of all the circumstances and value it accordingly, though always bearing in mind that it is tainted (7). And this case has been reviewed in another in which it was held that this section read with section 114, illustration (b), lays down the rule that a conviction on the uncorroborated evidence of an accomplice is not illegal where the presumption of untrustworthiness is rebutted by special circumstances.(8) It was said in this case that nothing

(1) R v. Shrinivas Krishna; and R. v. Naor Bhaskar, 7 Bom L R, 969.

(2) R v Chagan Dayaram, 14 B, 331, 344 (1890); R v. Mohiuddin Sahib, 25 M, 145, 147 (1901), [the section must be read with illust (b) to s 114].

(3) R v. Ramasami Padayachi, 1 M., 394 (1878); R v Ram Saran, 8 A, 306 (1886), R v Magan Lal, 14 B, 115 (1889).

(4) See the Full Bench case of R. v. Elahi Bux (B L R, Sup Vol, F. B., 459, May, 1866, s. c, 5 W. R., Cr, 80), in which the law which is the subject of these sections was fully discussed

(5) Per Phear, J, in R v. Sadhu Mundul 21 W R., Cr. 69, 70 (1874). See remarks in Abdul Karim v R, 1 All. L. J, 110 (1904), where the Court was unable to regard a witness as an accomplice of such an exceptional kind as would justify the Court in dispensing with confirmatory evidence. Corroboration is required unless the Court can unhesitatingly believe it. See 52 I C, 49.

(6) Ramasami Gounden v. R, 27 M., 271 (1903), per Sir S. Subramania Ayyar, Offg. C J.

(7) R. v Nilakanta (1911), 35 M., 247; and R. v. Tate (1908), 2 K. B. 680, Meunier (In re) (1894), 2 Q B, 415

(8) Muthukumaraswami Pillai v R, 35 M, 397 (1912). See 52 I C, 49.

in section 114 overrides this section or forbids the Court to act on such uncorroborated evidence when believing it to be true(1), and that while section 114 raises certain presumptions the use of 'may' instead of 'shall' indicates that the Court is not compelled to raise them but need only consider whether they should be raised (2)

In England there is now an increasing tendency to insist that the evidence of an accomplice must be corroborated. In Archbold's "Criminal Pleading" it is said that "it is now fully recognized to be an established practice, virtually equivalent to a rule of Law, to require corroboration of the evidence of an accomplice by independent evidence on some material particular going to the offence itself and implicating the accused."(3)

This section in unmistakeable terms lays it down that a conviction is not illegal merely because it proceeds upon the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice, and to hold that corroboration is necessary is to refuse to give effect to this provision.(4) And so a jury may, if they please, act upon the evidence of an accomplice, even in a capital case, without any confirmation of his statement (5) And there may be cases of an exceptional character in which the accomplice's evidence alone convinces a Judge of the facts required to be proved, and section 133 would support him, if he acted on that conviction without the corroboration usually insisted on (6) "Although, as a general rule, it would be most unsafe to convict an accused person on the uncorroborated evidence of an accomplice, such evidence must, like that of any other witness, be considered and weighed by the judge, who, in doing so, should not overlook the position in which the accomplice at the time of giving his evidence may stand, and the motives which he may have for stating what is false. If the Judge, after making due allowance for these considerations and the probabilities of the story, comes to the conclusion that the evidence of the accomplice, although uncorroborated, is true, and the evidence, if believed, establishes the guilt of the prisoner, it is his duty to convict "(7) Before acting on the pre- [illegible] the Court or jury is required by the section [illegible] ake into consideration certain facts with [illegible] of the story told.(8) It is not wise or feasible to construct a fixed rule of law for all cases, though constant attempts have been and are still made to turn what was in its origin and is under the Act a cautionary practice into a rule of law.(9)

Accomplic[e] unworthy of credit.

On the other hand, accomplices are not like ordinary witnesses in respect of credibility, but their evidence is tainted and should be carefully scrutinized before being accepted(10) and therefore, the presumption that an accomplice is unworthy of credit unless corroborated in material particulars, has become a rule of practice of almost universal application.(11) "Neither section 114,

---

(1) Ib, per Benson C J .

(2) Ib, per Wallis, J.

(3) Archbold's Criminal Pleading etc. 25th Ed, 441; and Taylor on Evidence (10th edition), 967

(4) R v Ramasami Padayachi, 1 M 394 (1878). R v Gobardhan, 9 A, 528 553 (1887); R v Koa, 19 W R, Cr, 48 (1873); R v Ram Saran, 8 A, 306 (1885). R v Magan Lall, 1 B, 115 (1889); R v. Chagan Dayaram, 14 B, 331 (1890)

(5) R. v Godai Raout, 5 W R, Cr., 11 (1866), R v. Ramasami Padayachi, supra; R v. O'Hara, 17 C, 642, 665 (1890). R. v Mahima Chundra, 16 B. L R, App, 108, 111 (1871). R. v Nidheeram, 18 W. R, Cr, 45 (1872).

(6) Per Scott, J, in R v. Magon Lall, 14 B, 115, 119 (1889); R. v. Ramasami Padayachi, supra.

(7) R. v. Gobardhan, 9 A, 528, 554, per Edge, C. J

(8) R. v Ramasami Padayachi, supra; as to the character of an accomplice, see sequel to Illust (b), s 114; and remarks of Peacock, C. J., in R. v. Elahi Bux, 468

(9) See Wigmore Ev, § 2050

(10) Rajoni Kanta v Asan Mullick, 2 C W. N, 672 (1895).

(11) R. v. Magan Lal, supra; Best. Ev., § 171; it is not a rule of law but of practice only; R v Amir Khan, 9 B. L R., illustration (b), nor this section are to be ignored in the exercise of judicial discretion. The illustration (b) is, however, the rule, and when it is departed from the Court should show, or it should appear that the circumstances justify the exceptional treatment of the case. It is not enough for a Court to state the rule pro formâ and merely as a reason to evade it; the Courts must act up to it So long established a rule of practice as that which makes it prudent, as a general rule, to require corroboration of accomplices, cannot without great danger to society be ignored simply because section 133 declares that a conviction is not illegal merely because it proceeds upon the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice."(1) The general result therefore is that in almost all cases the presumption mentioned in section 114, illustration (b), should be raised and corroboration in material particulars required. The bare existence of a principle is acknowledged in order to meet the requirements of very exceptional cases, but from the very fact of the exceptional character of these cases this principle is in practice constantly disapproved of and frequently violated (2) Recent cases leave the law where it was, viz, that the evidence of an accomplice, if believed, is in law suff [illegible] generally insist on corroboration of [illegible] rule of law or practice that the self-ir[illegible] accomplice is unworthy of belief unless corroborated. The credibility of a witness who says that he and another joined in committing an offence stands per se, so far as his self-accusation is concerned, on the same footing as that of a witness who says that he alone committed an offence, though in the latter instance there would be a narrow basis for cross-examination to test his own self-accusation. If a witness is an accomplice, he is an accomplice and must own to being an accomplice if he tells the truth. It is therefore merely arguing in a circle to say that the self-incriminating statement of an accomplice requires corroboration because he is an accomplice. What must first be decided is whether the witness in question is in truth an accomplice or is merely posing as an accomplice. When it is once established that he is an accomplice, then the next practical question arises who are the other accomplices, and it is at [illegible] has to be weighed, that there [illegible] upon the evidence [illegible] articulars, both as to the circumstances of the offence and the identity of the persons whom he implicates "(4)

Charge to Jury.

The evidence of accomplices should not be left to the jury without such directions and observations from the Judge, as the circumstances of the case may require, pointing out to them the danger of trusting to such evidence when 36, 57 (1871); R. v. Stubbs, 25 L. J, M. C, 16; but it is a practice which deserves all the reverence of the law: R. v. Farlar, 8 C. & P., 107, per Lord Abinger. In the matter of Jogendra Nath v. Sanga Garo, 2 C. W. N., 55 (1897); Kamala Prasad v. Sita Prasad, 28 C., 339, 343 (1901).

(1) Per Jardine, J., in R v. Chagan Dayaram, 14 B., 331, 344 (1890); see also R v Imam, 3 Bom H C. R., 57, 59 C C. (1867); R. v Mohan, 22 W. R., Cr, 38 (1874); [whether evidence of approver alone, uncorroborated, was sufficient to justify the Court on calling upon the prisoner for his defence]; R. v. Luchmee Pershad, 19 W. R, Cr., 43 (1873).

(2) See Remarks in Roscoe, Cr., Ev., 13th Ed, 109, 110;

(3) Jamaldi v. Emp, 51 C, 160 (1923); Manna Lal v [illegible] s. c, 25 Cr. L. J, 1000; Maung Lay [illegible] Emp., 25 Cr. L J, 49 (1923), [illegible] v. Emp, Ibid, 381; Darya v Emp, Ibid., 520, Khushi v. Emp, Ibid, 979; Kauromal v Emp., Ibid., 1057; Mahant Narain v [illegible] Emp, 3 L., 144 (1922); Lala v Emp, 23 Cr L. J, 158 (1921), Kisan v Emp., Ibid, 391 (1921); Fatta v. Emp, Ibid, 513 476 (1920); Narain v. Emp, Ibid., 597 (1922); (1921); Ahmad v. Emp, Ibid, 673 (1920); Tota Gobinda v. Emp, Ibid, 734 (1922); Madan Guru v. Emp, 4 P. L. T., 381; s c, 24 Cr. L. J., 1347 723; Hazara v. Emp, 25 Cr L. J. (1924)

(4) R v. Hanmant, 6 Bom L. R., 443, 450 (1904), per Aston, J.

it is not corroborated by other evidence (1) The omission to do so is an error in law(2), in the summing up by the Judge, and is, on appeal(3), a ground for setting aside the conviction when the Appellate Court thinks that the prisoner has been prejudiced by such omission, and that there has been a failure of justice.(4) Where a Judge charged the jury that they were not to convict upon the evidence of G, if satisfied that he was an accomplice and uncorroborated but coupled the direction with a strong expression of opinion that G was not an accomplice, held that this constituted a misdirection in fact, though not in form, calculated seriously to prejudice the prisoner's case.(5) Where the only evidence [illegible] statements which we [illegible] ence of an accomplic [illegible] tent inconsistent with the story of the other accomplices, the High Court set aside the conviction.(7) I[illegible] roborated testim[illegible] to the jury that [illegible] the accomplice and gave credit to his evidence is a perfectly legal direction; and that a direction to the jury that the evidence of an accomplice is not sufficient to find the accused guilty will be a misdirection.(8) Although it is not usual for the High Court to interfere in revision with the decision of the Lower Court, when it is based on a consideration of the evidence, yet where the Lower Courts have not considered the evidence from the point of view that the witnesses were accomplices and where hearsay evidence has been improperly admitted in important points, the Court will go into the facts of the case.(9) And it has been held by the Calcutta High Court that an Appellate Court is bound to find whether witnesses alleged to be accomplices were accomplices and to weigh their evidence accordingly.(10)

---

(1) R v Elahi Bux, B L R, Sup Vol, 459 (1866); R. v Baikanthanath, 3 B. L. R., F. B, 2 note (1868); R v. Karoo, 6 W R, Cr, 44 (1866), R. v. Mohima Chandra, 6 B L R, App, 108 (1871), R v Nawab Jan, 8 W. R, Cr, 19 (1867); R v Ganu, 6 Bom. H C. C. C, 57 (1869), R v. Sadhu Mundul, 11 W R, Cr, 69 (1874), R v O'Hara, 17 C, 642, 665 (1890), R v Ram Saran, 8 F, 306 (1886); R. v Arumugam, 12 M, 196 (1888); see cases cited ante, passim. R. v Magan Lall, 14 B, 115, 119 (1889); R. v Elahi Bux, supra, 479; R v Gangappa Kardeppa, 38 B, 156 (1914)

(2) R. v. Elahi Bux, supra; R. v. Arumugam, supra; R. v. Nawab Jan, supra; R v. Khotab Sheikh, 6 W. R, Cr, 17 (1866); see cases cited ante, passim. See per contra, R v Chagan Dayaram, 14 B, 331, 335 (1890); R v Ganu, 6 Bom H. C. R, C C, 57 (1868); R v. Stubbs, 25 L. J, M C., 16; s c, Dear, C. C, 55; Phillips, Ev, 95. See also s 297, Cr. Pr. Code (charge to jury).

(3) Cf. s 418, Cr. Pr. Code; but see R v. Chagan Dayaram, supra, 336, and ss. 435—439, Cr. Pr. Code (revisional powers); as to proceedings under the Letters Patent, see R v. O'Hara, 17 C., 642 (1890), R v Nowroji Dadabhai, 9 Bom. H C, 358 (1872); R. v. Hurribole Chunder, 1 C, 207 (1876); R. v. Pitambar Jina, 2 B, 61 (1876); R. v. Shib Chunder, 10 C, 1079 (1884); R v Pestanjee Dinsha, 10 Bom H. C, 75, 89 (1875)

(4) R. v Elahi Bux, supra; cf. also Cr Pr Code, s 537; and see R v Tate, C. C A (1908), 2 K B, 680 and R v. Beauchamp (1909), 25 Times L R, 330

(5) R v. O'Hara, 17 C, 642 (1890).

(6) It was held in the case cited that a statement by a witness that he heard A say in the absence of the accused, that he had paid a sum of money to the accused as a bribe was hearsay and not admissible

(7) Rajoni Kant v. Ason Mullick, 2 C. W N, 672 (1895). In R. v. Lakshmayya Pandaram, 22 M., 491 (1899), that accomplice's statement was only not corroborated, but was distinctly contradicted by the evidence in the case.

(8) Ramasami Gounden v. R, 14 Mad L J, 226 (1903); s c., 27 M, 271, per Bhashyam Aiyangar, J; see Muthukumaraswami Pillai v. R, 35 M., 397 (1912) (it was said by Benson, C J., that the question whether evidence amounts to corroboration is for the jury, and is for the Judge if he sits without one).

(9) Ramasami Gounden v. R, 14 Mad L. J, 226 (1903); s c, 27 M, 271, per Boddam, J.

(10) Amanat Sardar v Nagendra Biswas (1910), 38 C, 307.

illustration (b), nor this section are to be ignored in the exercise of judicial discretion. The illustration (b) is, however, the rule, and when it is departed from the Court [illegible] uld appear that the circumstances justify, the [illegible] It is not enough for a Court to state the rule [illegible] to evade it; the Courts must act up to it. So [illegible] as that which makes it prudent, as a general rule, to require corroboration of accomplices, cannot without great danger to society be ignored simply because section 133 declares that a conviction is not illegal merely because it proceeds upon the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice."(1) The general result therefore is that in almost all cases the presumption mentioned in section 114, illustration (b), should be raised and corroboration in material particulars required. The bare existence of a principle is acknowledged in order to meet the requirements of very exceptional cases, but from the very fact of the exceptional character of these cases this principle is in practice constantly disapproved of and frequently violated (2) Recent cases leave the law where it was, viz., that the evidence of an accomplice, if believed, is in law sufficient, but that in practice the Courts will generally insist on corroboration of it in material particulars.(3) "There is no rule of law or practice that the self-incriminating portion of the evidence of an accomplice is unworthy of belief unless corroborated. The credibility of a witness who says that he and another joined in committing an offence stands per se, so far as his self-accusation is concerned, on the same footing as that of a witness who says that he alone committed an offence, though in the latter instance there would be a narrow basis for cross-examination to test his own self-accusation. If a witness is an accomplice, he is an accomplice and must own to being an accomplice if he tells the truth. It is therefore merely arguing in a circle to say that the self-incriminating statement of an accomplice requires corroboration because he is an accomplice. What must first be decided is whether the witness in question is in truth an accomplice or is merely posing as an accomplice. When it is once established that he is an accomplice, then the next practical question arises who are the other accomplices, and it is at that stage, when his evidence implicating others has to be weighed, that there comes into application the maxim, that it is unsafe to convict upon the evidence of an accomplice, unless he is corroborated in material particulars, both as to the circumstances of the offence and the identity of the persons whom he implicates."(4)

Charge to Jury.

The evidence of accomplices should not be left to the jury without such directions and observations from the Judge, as the circumstances of the case may require, pointing out to them the danger of trusting to such evidence when

---

36, 57 (1871), R. v Stubbs, 25 L. J., M. C., 16; but it is a practice which deserves all the reverence of the law: R. v. Farlar, 8 C & P., 107, per Lord Abinger. In the matter of Jogendra Nath v. Sanga Garo, 2 C. W. N., 55 (1897); Kamala Prasad v. Sita Prasad, 28 C, 339, 343 (1901)

(1) Per Jardine, J, in R v Chagan Dayaram, 14 B, 331, 344 (1890); see also R v. Imam, 3 Bom. H C. R., 57, 59 C. C (1867); R. v Mohan, 22 W. R., Cr, 38 (1874), [whether evidence of approver alone, uncorroborated, was sufficient to justify the Court on calling upon the prisoner for his defence]; R. v. Luchmee Pershad, 19 W. R., Cr., 43 (1873).

(2) See Remarks in Roscoe, Cr., Ev., 13th Ed, 109, 110;

(3) Jamaldi v Emp, 51 C, 160 (1923), s c, 25 Cr L. J, 1000, Manna Lal v. Emp, 25 Cr L. J., 49 (1923), Maung Lay v. Emp, Ibid, 381; Darya v. Emp, Ibid, 520; Khushi v Emp., Ibid, 979; Kauromal v. Emp, Ibid, 1057; Mahant Narain v Emp., 3 L, 144 (1922); Lala v Emp, 23 Cr. L J., 158 (1921); Kisan v Emp, Ibid, Ibid, 391 (1921); Fatta v Emp, Ibid, 513 476 (1920); Narain v Emp, Ibid, 597 (1922); (1921); Ahmad v. Emp, Ibid, 673 (1920); Tota Gobinda v. Emp, Ibid, 734 (1922); Madan Guru v. Emp, 4 P. L. T., 381; s c, 24 Cr L. J, 1347 723, Hazara v Emp, 25 Cr L. J, (1924).

(4) R. v. Hanmant, 6 Bom L. R., 443, 450 (1904), per Aston, J.

it is not corroborated by other evidence (1) The omission to do so is an error in law(2), in the summing up by the Judge, and is, on appeal(3), a ground for setting aside the conviction when the Appellate Court thinks that the prisoner has been prejudiced by such omission, and that there has been a failure of justice.(4) Where a Judge charged the jury that they were not to convict upon the evidence of G, if satisfied that he was an accomplice and uncorroborated but coupled the direction with a strong expression of opinion that G was not an accomplice, held that this constituted a misdirection in fact, though not in form, calculated seriously to prejudice the prisoner's case.(5) Where the only evidence of the payment of a bill to the accused, apart from hearsay statements which were not admissible(6), consisted of the uncorroborated evidence of an accomplice, which was further in itself improbable and to some extent inconsistent with the story of the other accomplices, the High Court set aside the conviction (7) It has been held that the conviction of an accused on the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice is perfectly legal, and that a direction to the jury that it would be their duty to convict the accused if they believed the accomplice and gave credit to his evidence is a perfectly legal direction; [illegible] important points, the Court will go into the facts of the case (9) And it has been held by the Calcutta High Court that an Appellate Court is bound to find whether witnesses alleged to be accomplices were accomplices and to weigh their evidence accordingly.(10)

---

(1) R v Elahi Bux, B L R, Sup Vol, 459 (1866); R. v Baikanthanath, 3 B L R., F B, 2 note (1868), R v. Karoo, 6 W R, Cr, 44 (1866), R v Mohima Chandra, 6 B L R, App, 108 (1871), R v Nawab Jan, 8 W R, Cr, 19 (1867), R. v Ganu, 6 Bom H C C. C, 57 (1869); R. v Sadhu Mundul, 11 W R, Cr, 69 (1874), R v O'Hara, 17 C, 642, 665 (1890), R v Ram Saran, 8 F, 306 (1886), R v Arumugam, 12 M, 196 (1888), see cases cited ante, passim R v. Magan Lall, 14 B, 115, 119 (1889); R v Elahi Bux, supra, 479; R v. Gangappa Kardeppa, 38 B, 156 (1914)

(2) R. v. Elahi Bux, supra; R. v. Arumugam, supra, R v. Nawab Jan, supra; R v Khotab Sheikh, 6 W. R., Cr, 17 (1866); see cases cited ante, passim. See per contra, R. v Chagan Dayaram, 14 B, 331, 335 (1890); R v Ganu, 6 Bom H. C R, C C, 57 (1868); R. v Stubbs, 25 L J, M. C, 16; s c, Dear, C C, 55; Phillips, Ev, 95 See also s 297, Cr. Pr. Code (charge to jury).

(3) Cf. s. 418, Cr Pr. Code; but see R v. Chagan Dayaram, supra, 336, and ss 435—439, Cr Pr. Code (revisional powers); as to proceedings under the Letters Patent, see R v. O'Hara, 17 C, 642 (1890); R. v Nauroji Dadabhai, 9 Bom. H C, 358 (1872); R. v Hurribole Chunder, 1 C, 207 (1876); R. v. Pitambar Jina, 2 B, 61 (1876); R v. Shib Chunder, 10 C, 1079 (1884); R v Pestanjee Dinsha, 10 Bom H C, 75, 89 (1875)

(4) R. v. Elahi Bux, supra, cf. also Cr Pr Code, s 537; and see R v Tate, C. C. A (1908), 2 K. B, 680 and R v. Beauchamp (1909), 25 Times L R, 330.

(5) R v. O'Hara, 17 C., 642 (1890)

(6) It was held in the case cited that a statement by a witness that he heard A say in the absence of the accused, that he had paid a sum of money to the accused as a bribe was hearsay and not admissible.

(7) Rajoni Kant v. Asan Mullick, 2 C. W N, 672 (1895). In R. v. Lakshmayya Pandaram, 22 M, 491 (1899), that accomplice's statement was only not corroborated, but was distinctly contradicted by the evidence in the case

(8) Ramasami Gounden v. R, 14 Mad. L J, 226 (1903); s c, 27 M, 271, per Bhashyam Aiyangar, J; see Muthukumaraswami Pillai v. R., 35 M, 397 (1912) (it was said by Benson, C. J., that the question whether evidence amounts to corroboration is for the jury, and is for the Judge if he sits without one).

(9) Ramasami Gounden v R, 14 Mad. L J, 226 (1903); s. c, 27 M, 271, per Boddam, J.

(10) Amanat Sardar v. Nagendra Biswas (1910), 38 C, 307.

The corroboration must be on a point material to the issue; the testimony of the approver ought to be corroborated in some material circumstance, such circumstance connecting and identifying the prisoner with the offence.(1) "There is a great difference between confirmation of an accomplice as to the circumstances of the felony and those which apply to the individuals charged. The former only show that the accomplice was present at the commission of the offence, but the others show that the prisoner was connected with it. This distinction ought always to be attended to. The confirmation which I always advise juries to require, is a confirmation of the accomplice in some fact which goes to fix the guilt on the particular person charged."(2) The "corroboration ought to consist of some circumstance that affects the identity of the person accused. A man who has been guilty of a crime himself will always be able to relate the facts of the case, and if the confirmation be only on the truth of that history, without identifying the persons, that is no corroboration at all."(3) It is an established rule of practice that as a general rule the accomplice must be corroborated by independent evidence as to the identity of every person whom he impeaches.(4) The accomplice must in most cases be corroborated as to all of the persons affected by his evidence. If he is corroborated in his evidence as to one prisoner, there will still be need of corroboration of his testimony with respect to the other prisoners.(5) But "it is sufficient, if the evidence is confirmatory of some of the leading circumstances of the story of the approver as [illegible] that [illegible] bo- [illegible] hat [illegible] ich [illegible] ust ground for b[illegible]ving that he also speaks truth in other parts as to which there may be no confirmation."(6) When corroboration is required it is not necessary that an accomplice should be corroborated in every material particular, because if such evidence could be found, it would be unnecessary to call the accomplice; but he must be confirmed in such and so many material points as to satisfy the Court or jury of the truth of his story.(7) "Not only as to persons spoken of by an accomplice, must there be corroborative evidence, but, which is more important still, as to the corpus delicti there must be some primâ facie evidence pointing the same way, to make the evidence of an accomplice satisfactory."(8)

(1) R. v. Nawab Jan, 8 W. R., Cr., 19, 20, 28, 25, 26 (1867); followed in R. v. Bepin Biswas, 10 C., 970, 973 (1884); R. v. Elahi Bux, B. L. R., Sup. Vol., F. B., 459 (May 1866), s. c., 5 W. R., Cr., 80, R. v. Baikuntha Nath, 3 B. L. R., F. B., 2 note (1868), R. v. Chutterdharee Sing, 5 W. R., 59 (1866); R. v. Mohesh Biswas, 10 B. L. R., 455 note (1873); R. v. Imdad Khan, 8 A., 120, 135 (1885); R. v. Sadhu Mundul 12 W. R., Cr., 69 (1874); R. v. Dwarka, 5 W. R., Cr., 18 (1866) R. v. Imam, 3 Bom. H. C., 57 C. C. (1867) R. v. O'Hara, 17 C., 642 (1890) R. v. Sagal Samba, 21 C., 642, 657 (1893) Ashraf Ali v. Emperor, 42 C. 25 (1915) In R. v. Mohiuddin Sahib, 25 M., 143 (1901), the evidence of the approver was held to be sufficiently corroborated. Stewart Rapalje, op. cit., § 227; Wharton, Cr. Ev., §§ 441—442.

(2) R. v. Wilkes, 7 C. & P., 272, per Alderson, B., cited in R. v. Elahi Bux, 466, supra; R. v. Mohiuddin Sahib, 25 M. 143, 147 (1901)

(3) R. v. Farler, 8 C. & P., 106, cited in R. v. Elahi Bux, 465, supra; Roscoe, Cr. Ev., 13th Ed., 110; and see R. v. Stubbs, 25 L. J. M. C., 16 per Cresswell, J.:—"You may take it for granted that the accomplice was at the committal of the offence, and may be corroborated as to the facts, but that has no tendency to show that the parties accused were there." See also R. v. Ram Saran, 9 A., 306 310 (1885).

(4) R. v. Krishnabhat, 10 B., 319 (1886); R. v. Budhu Nanku, 1 B., 475 (1876); R. v. Malapa bin, 11 Bom. H. C. R., 196 (1874); R. v. Ram Saran, 8 A., 306 (1885), and cases cited, ante

(5) Abdul Karim v. R., 1 All. L. J. 110 (1904).

(6) R. v. Kala Chand, 11 W. R., Cr., 21 (1869), per Norman, J.

(7) R. v. Gallagher, 15 Cox, C. C., 291; R. v. Barnard, 1 C. & P., 88; R. v. Boyes, 1 B. & S., 311, 320

(8) R. v. Chatur Purshotam, 1 B., 476, note.

The corroboration when required must be independent of the accomplice or of a co-confessing prisoner.(1) The evidence of one accomplice does not corroborate the evidence of another (2) The evidence of two or more accomplices requires confirmation equally with the testimony of one (3) There may be circumstances, such as where previous concert by the informers is highly improbable, in which the agreement in their stories, together with corroboration which is afforded by the circumstance that their stories cannot have been arranged between them beforehand, must be taken into account.(4) It has been held that previous statements made by the accomplice himself, though consistent with the evidence given by him at the trial, are insufficient corroboration, for his statement whether made at the trial or before the trial, and in whatever shape it comes before the Court, is still only the statement of an accomplice, and does not at all improve in value by repetition (5) But in a case in the Madras High Court it was held that such previous statements legally amount to corroboration, though the weight attached to them must vary (6) Nor can the confession of one of the prisoners be used to corroborate the evidence of an accomplice against the others because such a confession cannot be put on a higher footing than the evidence of an accomplice, and is moreover not given on oath or subject to the test of cross-examination, and is guaranteed by nothing except the peril into which it brings the speaker and which it is generally fashioned to lessen. Tainted evidence is not made better by being corroborated by other tainted evidence.(7) Where several persons are indicted and the evidence of the accomplice is confirmed as to some only and not as to others, the Court ought as a general rule (and in trial by jury the latter ought to be advised) to acquit those against whom there is no corroboration (8) The retracted confession of an accused may be sufficient corroboration of the approver's story as against himself but not against a co-accused.(9)

The extent of corroboration will depend much upon the nature of the crime and the degree of moral guilt attached to its commission : and if the offence be one of a purely legal character or if it imply no great moral delinquency, the parties concerned, though in the eye of the law criminal, will not be considered

---

(1) Abdul Karim v. R, 1 All L. J, 110 (1904) See R v Bahar Ali Gazi, 42 C, 789 (1915)

(2) R v Malappa bin, 11 Bom H C. R, 196 198 (1874), but see second illustration appended to illust (b), s 114, remarks thereon in R v Sadhu Mundul, 21 W R, 69, 71 (1854), and remarks of Peacock, C J, in R v Elahi Bux, 468 supra, and see R v Chagan Dayaram, 14 B., 331, 339, 340 (1890), R. v Chutterdharee Sing, 5 W R, 60 (1866)

(3) R v Dwarka, 5 W. R, Cr, (1866); R. v Noakes, 5 C & P, 326; R. v Ram Saran, 8 A, 306 (1885), R v. Elahi Bux, supra, 468, but see preceding note.

(4) R. v Ningappa, 2 Bom L. R, 610 (1900)

(5) R v Malapa bin Kapana, 11 Bom H C, 196 (1874), R v Bepin Biswas, 10 C, 971 (1884), and see note to s 157, post. This view was rejected by the majority of the Court in R v. Nilakanta (1911), 35 M, 247

(6) Muthukumarasami Pillai v R, 35 M, 397 (1912); (they might for instance be important if it was alleged that the witness had been recently influenced,—per Benson, C J ; and see R v Akbar Badoo, 34 B, 599 (1910), previous statements admissible to corroborate statements at trial

(7) R. v Malapa bin, 11 Bom H. C. R, 196 (1874); R v Bepin Biswas, 10 C, 970 (1884), R v Baijoo Chowdhry, 25 W. R, Cr, 43 (1876); R v Krishnabhat, 10 B, 319 (1886); R v. Jaffer Ali, 19 W. R, Cr, 57 (1873); R v. Budhu Nanku, 1 B, 475 (1876); R v. Udhan Bind, 19 W. R, Cr, 68 (1873), R v. Mohan Lall, 4 A., 46 (1881), R v. Sadhu Mundul, 21 W R, Cr, 69 (1874), R v. Ram Saran, 8 A, 306 (1885)

(8) R. v Wells, M. & M, 326; R. v. Morris, 7 C. & P, 270; and see R v. Stubbs, supra; remarks of Jervis, C. J. Roscoe, Cr. Ev, 12th Ed, 115, 116; R. v Ram Saran, 8 A, 306, 312 (1885); R. v Imam, 3 Bom. H C, 57 (1867); R. v Elahi Bux, 467, supra, following R v. Stubbs, supra.

(9) Pallia v. Emperor, 20 Cr. L. J., 183; s c, 49 I. C., 604 such accomplices as to render necessary any confirmation of their evidence(1) The application of the rule is for the discretion of the Judge by whom the case is tried: and in the application of the rule much depends on the nature of the offence, and the extent of the complicity of the witness in it (2) Ordinarily speaking the evidence of an accomplice should be corroborated in material particulars. At the same time the amount of criminality is a matter for consideration; when a person is only an accomplice by implication or in a secondary sense, his evidence does not require the same amount of corroboration as that of the person who is an actual participator with the principal offender. In dealing with the question what amount of corroboration is required in the case of testimony given by an accomplice, the Courts must exercise careful discrimination and look at the surrounding circumstances in order to arrive at a conclusion whether the facts deposed to by the person alleged to be an accomplice, are borne out by these circumstances, or whether the circumstances are of such a nature, that the evidence purporting to be given by the alleged accomplice should be supported in essential and material particulars by evidence aliunde as to the facts deposed to by that accomplice.(3)

Number of Witnesses

134. No particular number of witnesses shall in any case be required for the proof of any fact.

Principle.—This section deals with the question of the quantity of legitimate evidence required for judicial decision. Cases now and then, though seldom, occur, in which injustice is done by giving credence to the story of a single witness On the other hand, however, as the requiring a plurality of witnesses, clearly imposes an obstacle to the administration of justice, specially where the act to be proved is of a casual nature; above all, where, being in violation of law, as much clandestinity as possible would be observed,—it ought not to be required without strong and just reason.(4) s 133 (Accomplice.) ss. 68–71 (Attesting witness)

s. 3 ("Proof") s. 3 ("Fact")

Wharton, Ev., § 414, & Cr. Ev., § 386 et seq. Best, Ev., 596—622; Taylor, Ev, §§ 952—966; Indian Penal Code, Ch XI (False Evidence); Ch VI, ib (Offences against the State analogous to "treason") Starkie, Ev, 827; Cr Pr. Code, Ch XXXVI (Maintenance), Stewart Rapalje's Law of Witnesses, § 225

COMMENTARY.

Quantity of evidence.

Section 28 of the repealed Act II of 1855, which was more directly and in terms in accord with the present English law on the subject than the present section, was as follows:—"Except in cases of treason the direct evidence of one witness, who is entitled to full credit, shall be sufficient for proof of any fact in any such Court or before any such person. But this provision shall ...orative evidence ...of a single ...is that in ...r jury) is any case the testimony of a single witness (if believed by the Cou... ...r jury) is sufficient for the proof of any fact. Thus a conviction upon the statement of a complainant alone is lawful.(5) The evidence of one witness if believed

(1) R. v Boyes, 1 B. & S, 311, 320, 322; Taylor, Ev, § 968, and cases there cited see first supplementary illustration to illust (b), s 114

(2) R v Boyes, supra.

(3) Kamala Prasad v Sital Prasad, 28 C, 339 (1901), s c, 5 C W N, 517.

(4) Best, Ev, §§ 597, 598; as to the merits and demerits of the "unus nullus" rule, see ib, § 598, and generally §§ 596—622, 65—70 passim; see Kulum Mundul v Bhowani Prosad, 22 W. R, Cr, 12 (1874); Taylor, Ev, §§ 952—966; Starkie, Ev., 827; see also remarks of Sir Lawrence Peel in R. v. Hedger, post; Wharton, Ev, § 414.

(5) Kulum Mundul v. Bhowani Prosad, 22 W. R, Cr, at p 32 (1874).

is sufficient according to the law of this country to establish any fact to which the witness speaks directly (1) A Magistrate is fully justified in believing one witness in preference to three others, if he sees reason to do so, and it is not legally necessary that he should detail his reasons (2) The Act contains no provision corresponding to the English rule requiring corroboration in breach of promise of marriage(3) and affiliation cases(4), or in claims on the estates of deceased persons(5), or in prosecution for perjury (6) In regard to the giving of false evidence it was held by the Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court (following the English rule) under section 28 of Act II of 1855, that a person cannot be convicted of giving false evidence upon the uncorroborated evidence that the Courts will, in coming to such a determination, follow as a general rule, but with such modifications as the law may here require(9), the practice in England, where it is not thought safe in such cases to accept the testimony of a single witness without some corroboration.(10) "The rule" (necessity of more than oath against oath on an indictment for perjury) "cannot be defended

(1) Raja Prosonno v. Romonee Dassee, 10 W R, 236 (1868)

(2) Gobind Suain v. Narain Raoot, 24 W R, Cr 18 (1875); "ponderantur teste non numerantur," see Best, Ev, s 596

(3) 32 and 33 Vic, 68, s 2; Wiedemann v Walpole, 2 Q B, 534

(4) 8 & 9 Vic, c 10, s 6, 35 & 36 Vic, c 95, s 4, Taylor, Ev, § 964, Cole v Manning, 2 Q B D, 611, Lawrence v Ingmire, 20 L. T Rep N S, 391, cf Cr Pr Code, Ch XXXVI (of the maintenance of wives and children) the evidence of the mother must be corroborated in some material particulars

(5) Finch v. Finch, 23 Ch D, 267, Livesy v Smith, 15 Ch D, 655 In re Garnett, 31 Ch D, 1, Hill v Wilson, L R, 8 Ch, 888, In re Hodgson, 31 Ch D, 183, Vavasseur v Vavasseur, 27 Times L R, 250, Steph Dig, Art 121 A, Taylor Ev, § 965, Williams on Executors, 10th Ed, 1409, 1410, the rule has been acted upon in India Webb v Smallwood, Cal High Ct Suit No 810 of 1896, heard 4 & 7 Feb 1898

(6) R v Elliott (1908), C C C, Sess Pa, p 837, Taylor, Ev §§ 959—963 two witnesses are also required in English law in certain treasons, ib, §§ 952—958, corroboration is also required in certain cases under the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885 s 4, and the Prevention of Cruelty to Children's Act, 1889 s 8 See Stewart Rapalje's op cit, § 225, Wharton, Cr Ev, § 386 et seq

(7) R v Lalchand Kourah B L R Sup Vol, F B, 417 (Feb 1866) s c, 5 W R, Cr, 23 See also R v Bakhoree Chowbey, 5 W R, Cr 98 (1866), R v Ross, 6 Mad H C 342 (1871), [kind or amount of confirmatory proof required]

(8) The Law of England, as to the necessity of calling at least two witnesses to support an assignment of perjury, is not law in India; per Duthoit, J, in R v. Ghulet, 7 A, 44, 50 (1884), but in England though corroboration is required, it is not precisely accurate to say that the corroborative circumstances must be tantamount to another witness Taylor, Ev, § 959

(9) Thus the law in India, as to contradictory statements is not the same as in England, Taylor, Ev, § 962, Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 432, 433, It has been held by two Full Benches of the Calcutta High Court, that where no evidence for the prosecution is offered corroborative of either statement, and the giving intentionally of false evidence is charged on two contradictory depositions made, the one before the committing Magistrates and the other before the Sessions Judge, a finding in the alternative is sufficient to maintain a conviction R v Zamiran, B L R, F B, 521 (1866), s c, 6 W R, Cr, 65, R v Mahomed Hoomayoon, 13 B L R, F B 324 (1874), s c, 21 W R, Cr, 72 Habibullah v R, 10 C, 937 (1884), Sathu Sheikh v R, 10 C, 405 (1884), followed by the Madras High Court in R v Palany Chetty, 4 Mad H. C R, 51 (1868), R v Ross, 6 Mad H C. R, 342 (1871) and Allahabad High Court in R v Ghulet 7 A 44 (1884), [overruling R v Niaz Ali, 5 A, 17 (1882)], R. v Matabadal 15 A 392 (1893); and see R v Khem 22 A, 115 (1899), Bombay High Court see R v Ramji Sajabarao, 10 B, 124 (1885), R v Bharma, 11 B, 702 (1886), R v Mugapa bin, 18 B, 377 (1893) See also Field's Ev, 6th Ed, 432—434

(10) v Field, Ev., 6th Ed., 434, Whitley Stokes 92 R v. Bal Gangadhar, 6 Bom L R, 324, 1904 [perjury], s c, 28 B, 479

as a rule founded in all cases on reason, for it is easy to conceive cases, where the credit due to one person is so far beyond that which is due to another, as to leave no ground for reasonable doubt in acting on the testimony of a single witness, though directly in conflict with that of another. But though the rule be unwise as an inflexible rule of law, the principle, on which it rests, is of great value in the difficult task of weighing evidence."(1) Where direct testimony is opposed by conflicting evidence, or by ordinary experience, or by the probability supplied by the circumstances of the case, the consideration of the number of witnesses becomes most material.(2) And where the witnesses and the parties are at issue on a vital point (such as the defendant's signature to an agreement of which specific performance is sought) the safe principle is to consider what story fits in with the admitted circumstances and the resulting probabilities (3)

(1) Per Sir Lawrence Peel C. J, in his charge to the jury in R v Hedger (1852); see remarks in Best, Ev, §§ 605, 606

(2) Starkie, Ev, 828, cited and adopted in R v. Hedger, supra, at page 114: see also Field Ev, 6th Ed, 430

(3) Davis v. Maung Shue Go (1911), 38 I. A, 155.

CHAPTER X.

Of the Examination of Witnesses.

As the last Chapter dealt with the competency and compellability of witnesses, the present deals with the examination in Court of such witnesses as are rendered by the provisions of the last Chapter competent and compellable to give evidence, This Chapter consists of a reduction to express propositions of rules as to the examination of witnesses which are well established and understood in English law, the only provision which requires special notice being that contained in section 165, giving to the Judge power to put questions or to order the production of documents.(1) The sections of this Chapter assume that the witness is already before the Court. Process to compel attendance of witnesses or production of documents is provided by the Procedure Code A short note is, however, here given with reference to this process and other kindred matters relating to witnesses.

Attendance of witness and production of documents

The duty of citizens to appear and testify to such facts within their know- [illegible] ch has [illegible] The [illegible] liction of the Common Law Court, and Statutes have extended the power to other officers, such as arbitrators. Every Court having power definitely to hear and determine any suit, has, by the Common Law, inherent power to call for all adequate proofs of the facts in controversy and to that end to summon and compel the attendance of witnesses before it (3) By an early English Statute witnesses were entitled to their "reasonable costs and charges "(4) The wilful neglect to attend or to testify after proper and reasonable service of the subpœna(5) and, in civil cases after payment or tender of the witness's fee(6) or waiver of payment(7), is a contempt of Court (8) When it is necessary not only to secure the oral testimony of the witness, but also the production of documents in his possession, the subpœna contains in addition to the ordinary [illegible]

---

(1) Previous to examination the witnesses should be affirmed or sworn see the Indian Oaths Act

(2) Amey v Long, East, 484, Burr Jones, § 797 the process by which attendance is enforced is the subpœna ad testificandum commonly called a subpœna which commands the witness to appear at the trial and give his testimony Phil & Arnold Ev ii, 424 et seq, Taylor, Ev § 1232 et seq

(3) Greenl, Ev, § 309

(4) 5 Eliz Ch 9

(5) See Scholes v Hilton, 10 M & M 15, Hill v Delt, 7 DeG M & G, 397

(6) Brocas v Lloyd 23 Beav, 129; Newton v Harland, 1 M & G, 956, Betley v McLeod, 3 Bing N C, 405

(7) Goff v Mills, 2 Dowl & L 23

(8) Phil & Arn Ev ii 432

(9) 2 Phil & Arn, Ev, 425, 3 Bl Comm, 382, Amey v Long, 9 East, 483 In the High Court following the English practice a subpœna duces tecum is only issued when the person in possession of the documents is not a party to the suit When the writings are in possession of the adverse party or his attorney notice to produce is given See 2 Phil & Arn, Ev, 425.

obey like other subpœnas. He has no more right to determine whether the documents shall be produced than whether he shall appear as a witness. It is his duty to attend and to bring with him the documents according to the exigency of the writ [illegible] whether the documents are admissible, or w[illegible]d exhibited (1) A witness clearly cannot [illegible] by the subpœna unless they are under his control or possession. But a person having the actual custody of the document may be compelled to produce it though it be owned by others (2) For public convenience sake, when documents are in the custody or control of public officers they are provable by certified copies. When the documents are produced in obedience to the subpœna, the person calling the witness is under no obligation to have the witness sworn.(3) From a very early period the common law recognised the privileges of parties and witnesses in judicial proceedings to go the place of trial, to remain so long as necessary, and to return home free from arrest on civil process ; this being an immunity considered to be a necessity in the administration of justice.(4)

All the matters abovementioned are in this country provided for by the Civil and Criminal Procedure Codes and the Penal Code, viz, procedure for summoning and compelling the attendance of witnesses(5) ; the production of documents and other things(6) ; the expenses of witnesses(7) ; the freedom of complainants and witnesses in criminal cases from police restraint(8) ; recognizance for the attendance of complainants and witnesses in criminal proceedings(9) ; exemption from attendance in person by reason of non-residence within

---

(1) S 162, post, 2 Phil & Arn, Ev, 425, Burr Jones, Ev, § 801, and cases there cited, Doe v Kelly, 4 Dowl., 273; R v Russell, 7 Dowl, 693; R. v. Dixon, 3 Burr, 1687, Amey v Long, supra The subpœna or notice should describe the papers to be produced with certainty and clearness, Civ Pr Code, s 163.

(2) Amey v Long, 1 Camp, 17; Corsen v Dubois, 1 Holt, 239, R v Daye (1908) 2 K B, 333

(3) Perry v Gibson 1 A & E, 48; Summers v Mosley, 2 Crompt & M., 477.

(4) Civ Pr Code, s 135, Woodroffe and Amir Ali, 2nd Ed, p 490, Burr Jones, Ev, §§ 805, 806, Bacon Abr tit Privileges, 4, 17, 55, Meekins v Smith, 1 H. Black 636, the privilege extends to cases where the attendance is voluntary· Walpole v Alexander, 3 Doug, 45, Arding v. Flower 8 T R, 534, Spence v Stuart, 3 East, 89, Ex-parte Byne, 1 Ves & B, 316 A person who violates the privilege is guilty of contempt, Cole v Hawkins, Andrews, 275, Strange, 1094; Childerson v Barrett, 11 East, 439 The immunity extends until the witness can return home; Strong v Dickenson, 1 M & W, 488; Selby v Hills, 8 Bing, 166; Pitt v. Coombes, 5 B & Ad, 1078; Lightfoot v. Cameron, 2 W Black, 1113, Rickets v. Gurney, 7 Price, 669; Sidgier v. Birch, 9 Ves Jr, 69

(5) Civ Pr Code, O XVI, Woodroffe and Amir Ali, 2nd Ed pp 825-836, ss. 31, 32, p 204, O V., 2nd Ed, pp 637-660. Cr. Pr. Code, ss 68—74 (summons), 75—86 (warrants of arrest), 87—89 (proclamation and attachment), 90—93 (other rules regarding processes); 328 (summons on juror or assessor); 485 (imprisonment or committal of person refusing to answer or produce document); 208 (production of further evidence in cases triable by Court of Session or High Court), 216 (summons to witnesses for defence when accused is committed); 219 (power to summon supplementary witnesses); 23 (recall of witness): 244 (issue of process in summons cases); 254, 256, 257 (warrant cases); 540 (power to summon material witness or examine person present) Penal Code, ss 174, 175 As to the attendance of witness before Coroners, see Act IV of 1871; and the Bengal and Bombay Councils Acts III (B C) of 1866, XIII (Bom C) of 1866

(6) Civ. Pr. Code, O. XVI, Woodroffe and Amir Ali, 2nd Ed pp 825-836 See as to discovery, admission, inspection, production, impounding and return of documents, Civil Pr. Code, O XI, 2nd Ed, pp. 777-800; Criminal Pr Code, ss 94, 95 (summons to produce document or other thing); 96—99 (search-warrants), 485 (consequences of refusal to produce). See s 162, post

(7) Civ. Pr Code, O XVI, rr. 2—4, op cit, Woodroffe's 2nd Ed, pp 826-829, Criminal Pr Code, ss 244 257.

(8) Cr Pr. Code, s 171

(9) Cr Pr. Code, ss 217, 170

certain limits(1); or of the witness being a purdanashin lady or person of rank(2); the exemption of witnesses from arrest under civil process.(3) Non-attendance [illegible]

ing (5)

There is a conflict of decisions as to whether witnesses are absolutely privileged as to anything they may say as witnesses having reference to the enquiry on which they are called as witnesses.(6) The ground of absolute protection is said to be this, "that it concerns the public and the administration of justice that witnesses giving their evidence on oath in a Court of Justice should not have before their eyes the fear of being ha[illegible] the only penalty they should incur, if the[illegible] indictment for perjury.(7) And that if [illegible] shall not be harassed by the fear of suits for damages, it must be conceded that it is equally undesirable that they should be liable to be prosecuted.(8) The Madras and Bombay High Courts adopt this view, but the trend of the decisions in the Calcutta and Allahabad High Courts is against it In the case cited a Full Bench of the Madras High Court held that the law of defamation is not exhaustively laid down in section 499 of the Indian Penal Code, and that the English doctrine of absolute privilege, though not expressly recognized in that section, is applicable in India.(9) But in another later case, the Calcutta [illegible]

(1) Civ. Pr Code, O. XVI, r 19, 2nd Ed, p 834.

(2) Ib, ss 131—133, Woodroffe and Amir Ali, 2nd Ed, pp 486-490 There is no similar exemption from attendance before the Criminal Courts, but a purdanashin lady may claim to be examined sitting in a palanquin, Rookia Vanu v Roberts, 1 B L R, S N, 5 (1868), Misrut Banoo v. Mahomed Sayem, 18 W. R, 23 (1872), or on commission, In re Huroo Soondary, 4 C, 20 (1878); In re Dintarini Debi, 15 C, 775 (1888), or to have special arrangements made for an examination in private, In re Basant Bibi, 12 A, 69 (1889), [a witness may be examined at some place other than the Court-house, Hem Coomaree v R, 24 C, 551 (1897) A purdanashin complainant must personally attend in Court, such arrangements being made as are necessary to secure her privacy In re Farid-un-nissa 5 A, 92 (1882), see Abhayeshwari Debi v Kishori Mohan Banerjee, 42 C, 19, (1915)

(3) Civ Pr Code, s 135, op cit, 2nd Ed, p 490, see Taylor, Ev, §§ 1330—1341, there is no protection given against criminal process

(4) Under the provision of s 26, Act XIX of 1853, which is in force in the Bengal Presidency, or of s 10 of Act X of 1855, which is in force in the Madras and Bombay Presidencies, see Roy Dhunput v Prem Bibee, 24 W R 72 (1875).

(5) Bishonath Rukhit v. Ram Dhone, 11 W R, 42 (1869), Gunesh Dutt v. Mugneeram Chowdhry, 11 B L R, 328 (1872); Bhikumber Singh v Becharam Sircar, 15 C, 264 (1888), Chidambara v Thirumani, 10 M, 87 (1886), Manjaya v Sesha Shetti, 11 M 477 (1888); Dawan Singh v Mahip Singh, 10 A, 425 (1888), R v Babaji, 17 B, 127 (1892), R v. Balkrishna, 17 B, 57 (1893); Templeton v Laurie, 25 B, 230 (1900)

(6) Seaman v Netherclift, L R, 2 C P. D, 53; Bhikumber Singh v Becharam Sircar, ante

(7) Ganesh Dutt v Mugneeram Chowdhry, supra

(8) R v Balkrishna, 17 B, 573, 579 (1893)

(9) Venkata Reddy (In re) F B, 36 M 216 (1911), see Alraja Naidu (In re), 30 M, 222 (1907), Pachaipermul Chettiar v Dasi Thangam, 31 M, 400 (1908); Adapala v Rabala, M W N, 155 (1910), Nathji Muleshwar v Lalbhai Ravidat, 14 B, 97 (1890), Nagarji (In re), 19 B, 310 (1895)

(10) Kari Singh v R, 40 C, 433 (1912), see Golap Jan v Bholanath, 38 C, 880 (1911), Angada Ram v Nemai Chand, 23 C, 867 (1896), Kali Nath Gupta v Gobinda Chandra, 5 C W N, 293 (1900), Haidar Ali v Abru Mia, 32 C, 756 (1905), R v Ganga Prasad, 29 A, 685 (1907), Isri Prasad v Umrao Singh, 22 A, 234 (1900)

bad faith by a witness is punishable. A defamatory statement on oath or other-party making it.(3) In England it has been recently held that the report of the Official Receiver dealing with a company in liquidation, is absolutely privileged(4) and that "the real doctrine of absolute privilege is that in the public interest it is not desirable to enquire whether the words or acts of certain persons are malicious or not. The privilege is to be exempt from all inquiry as to malice."(5)

Assuming that the witnesses are in attendance before the Court, certain other provisions are laid down for their examination and the general conduct of the suit or trial. In civil proceedings the witnesses must be examined orally and in open Court.(6) This general rule is qualified by the provisions which relate (a) to evidence given on commission (7); (b) evidence given by direction of the Court on affidavit(8); (c) examination before trial of witnesses about to leave the jurisdiction.(9) Evidence recorded in a previous proceeding between the same parties is made admissible in a subsequent proceeding by the consent of both parties.(10)

In criminal proceedings, except as otherwise expressly provided, evidence must be taken in the presence of the accused, or when his personal attendence is dispensed with(11) in presence of his pleader.(12) This general rule is qualified by the provisions relating (a) to the examination of witnesses on commission(13); (b) the case of an absconding accused(14); (c) the direction by an Appellate Court that additional evidence be taken by the Lower Court, and that such evidence be taken without the accused person or his pleader being present.(15) The order of production and examination of witnesses is regulated in the case of trials before High Courts and Sessions Courts by sections 286, 287, 342, 289, 290, 292.(16) As to the procedure in summons(17),

(1) Satish Chandra Chakravarti v. Ram Doyal De, 48 C., 388 A complainant does not enjoy the protection given on principles of public policy to an ordinary witness. Dinshaw Edalji v. Jehangir Cowasji, 47 B, 15.

(2) Raman Nayar v. Subramanyar Ayyar, 17 M, 87 (1893).

(3) Pachaiperumal Chettiar v. Dasi Thangam, (1908), 31 M, 400

(4) Burr v Smith, C. A. (1909), 2 K B, 306, 25, Times L. R., 542.

(5) Bottomly v Broughman (1908), 1 K B, 587; following Munster v. Lamb, 11 Q. B D., 588

(6) Civ Pr. Code, O. XVIII, r. 4, Woodroffe and Amir Ali, 2nd Ed, p. 843.

(7) Ib, O. XXVI, rr. 1—8, op. cit. 2nd Ed, pp. 1088—1092 see s. 33, ante.

(8) Ib., O. XVIII, r. 16, op cit., 2nd Ed, p 848, 849 see s 1, ante.

(9) Ib, O. XIX, 2nd Ed. op cit, pp. 850, 851, and see Edwards v. Muller, 5 B. L R, 252 (1870).

(10) Jainab Bibi v Hyderally Saheb, 43 M, 609

(11) See Cr Pr Code, ss 116, 205, and in the matter of Rahim Bibi, 6 A, 59 (1883) (purdanashin). In a warrant-case, the accused being a purdanashin, the Magistrate can dispense with her attendance, if he issues a summons in the first instance. Basumoti Adhikarini v Budram Kalita, 21 C, 588 (1894).

(12) Cr. Pr. Code, s 353, See R v. Kanye Sheikh, W. R, 1864, Cr, 38, R v Sheikh Kyamut, ib, 1; R. v Affasuddeen, Ib, 13; R. v. Mohun Banfor, 22 W R, Cr, 38 (1874); R. v. Rajkrishna, 1 B L. R., O Cr. 37 (1868), Ali Meah v. Magistrate of Chittagong, 25 W. R, Cr, 14 (1876), Subba v. R., 9 M., 83 (1885); R. v Nand Ram, 9 A, 609 (1887)

(13) Cr. Pr. Code, ss 503—507; v. s 33, ante

(14) Ib, s 512, v. s 33, ante, R v. Rustam, 38 A, 29 (1916) (proof of absconding).

(15) Ib, s 428, see also s 510, ib.

(16) See Cr. Pr. Code, Chap XXIII passim, as to commitment for trial, v. ss. 206—220, 496, 498

(17) Ib, Chap. XX, s 451 A.

and warrant(1), cases, the right of accused to be defended by pleader(2): the procedure on revisions(3), and on appeal(4); and when Magistrate cannot pass sentence sufficiently severe(5); the conviction or commitment on evidence partly recorded by one Magistrate and partly by another(6); see the sections and Chapters of the Code noted below.

In civil proceedings it is in the discretion of a Court of first instance, after the plaintiff's case is closed, to allow him to call further witnesses, and there is no right of special appeal upon that point.(7) The Judge has a discretionary power of recalling witnesses at any stage of the trial. He will seldom, however, except under special circumstances, permit a plaintiff after his case is closed, to recall a witness to prove a material fact. A witness after cross-examination may also be recalled to be further cross-examined; and a question omitted in examination-in-chief may with permission (which is usually given) be put to the witness in re-examination either by the Judge or Counsel (8) Cross-examination ordinarily gives notice to the other side of the line of defence. So where the defendant's Counsel cross-examined as to certain misrepresentations made towards the defendant and deceptions practised on him: this was held to be considered as notice to the plaintiff's Counsel of the line of defence, and, therefore, if he had letters of the defendant tending to show that he knew the real state of the facts, the plaintiff's Counsel ought to have given them in evidence before the plaintiff's case was closed, and he will not be allowed to put them in as evidence in reply.(9)

Whenever a prisoner is put upon his trial, he is entitled to have the witnesses examined de novo if they have previously given evidence on the trial of another prisoner, and it is not sufficient to require the witnesses to identify the prisoner and to read over to them their former examination, and require them to attest it.(10) It has been held that though to omit to do this is illegal yet if it has not occasioned a failure of justice, a new trial need not be ordered (11)

It is not generally competent to the Court to refuse to examine any of the witnesses produced by the parties The Judge is bound to receive all the evidence tendered, unless the object of summoning a large number of witnesses

---

(1) Ib, Chap XXI

(2) Ib., s 340 The Code makes no express provision for advocates addressing the Court in Magistrate's cases or in the course of proceedings preliminary to commitment but such cases will be covered by this section, Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 436, 437

(3) Ib, ss 439, 440 As to the right of prisoner's Counsel to begin in cases under s 434, see R v Appa Subhana, 8 B, 200 (1884)

(4) Ib, s 423.

(5) Ib, s 349

(6) Ib, s 350, there is no similar provision as to cases tried by the Court of Session, the whole trial must take place before the same Judge, cf, Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 437, R v Charoo, W R, 1864, Cr 32, R v Gopi Noshyo, 21 W R, Cr 47 (1874), R v Raghoonath, 23 W R, Cr, 59 (1865). See generally as to the Criminal Procedure, Woodroffe's "Criminal Procedure in India"

(7) Rakhal Dass v. Protap Chunder, 12 W R, 455 (1870), as to recall of witnesses in criminal cases, see Cr. Pr Code, ss 231, 256, 350

(8) Taylor, Ev, § 1477, and cases there cited See s 138, post The practice should not be encouraged of allowing either party after stating his case, to amend and add to his proof until by repeated experiments he conforms to the view of the Court, Burr Jones Ev, s 809, see as to evidence in reply and fresh evidence after close of case, R v Hilditch, 5 C & P, 299 Giles v Powell 2 C & P 259, Walls v Aitcheson, 2 C & P, 268

(9) Wharton v Lewis, 1 C & P, 529; see Bank of Bombay v Nandlal Thackersey Das, P C, 37 B, 122 (1913)

(10) R v Kanye Sheikh, W. R, 1864, Cr, 38, R v Sheikh Kyamut, ib, Cr 1, R v Affazuddeen, ib, Cr 13, R v Mohun Banfor, 22 W R Cr, 38 (1874); R v Rajkrishna, 1 B L R., O Cr, 37 (1868), Attorney-General, N S. Wales v. Bertrand, L R, 1 P C, 520, R v Bishonath 12 W R Cr, 3 (1869), Ali Meah v The Magistrate of Chittagong, 25 W R, Cr, 14 (1876).

(11) Subba v. R., 9 M., 83 (1885); R v. Nand Ram, 9 A, 609 (1887)

clearly appears to be to impede the adjudication of the case or otherwise to obstruct the ends of justice. Thus it was held not right for the lower Court to select five out of twenty witnesses tendered for examination (1) It appears from the case first cited that a Civil Court has power to refuse to examine any excessive number of witnesses, if satisfied that the object of the persons calling them is clearly to impede the adjudication of the case. The Code of Civil Procedure, however, contains no provision [illegible] to that contained in section 216 of the Criminal Procedure Code, [illegible] exclude from the list of witnesses to be [illegible] persons whose evidence is not really relevant.(2) The fact of a witness not having been named in the plaintiff's list of witnesses is no ground for refusing to examine him when produced.(3) In the undermentioned case, the plaintiffs in the Court of first instance produced both documentary and oral evidence in support of their claim. The Court, being satisfied with the documentary evidence produced by the plaintiff, declined to record the evidence of the witnesses tendered by them. The defendants appealed, and the lower Appellate Court reversed the decree of the Court of first instance, but in its turn declined to allow the plaintiffs-repondents to produce fresh evidence before it. On appeal by the plaintiffs to the High Court it was held that, though there was no section of the Code of Civil Procedure strictly applicable to the circumstances of the case, the Court was warranted ex debito justitiæ in setting aside all proceedings of both Courts below and in directing the Court of first instance to re-try the case, admitting all admissible evidence which had previously been tendered to the Court of first instance, and which that Court had refused to record.(4)

Where a day has been fixed for hearing the witnesses, the Court is not competent to decide the case without waiting for that day, in the absence of the witnesses, on the ground that no amount of witnesses would be believed.(5) A [illegible] against his own case, when he knows [illegible] he had no opportunity

---

(1) Ramdhan Mandal v. Rajballab Paramanik, 6 B L R, App, 10 (1870), and to the same effect, see Watson & Co, v Nukee Mundul, 6 W R (Act X), 83 (1866), Jeswant Singjee v Jei Singjee, 3 M I A 245, R v Ishan Dutt, 6 B L R. App, 88 (1871), R v Bhoobun Isher, 2 W R, Cr, 36 (1865), R v. Abdool Setar, 3 W R, Cr, 6 (1865), Ranee Oojulla v Gholam Mostafa, 6 W R, Civ. R, 60 (1866), Nilkanth Surmah v Soosela Debia, 6 W R, 324 [objection taken in special appeal]; Looloo Singh v Rajender Laha, 8 W R, 364 (1867) [a party is entitled to have all his witnesses examined, whatever opinion the Court may form by anticipation as to the probable value of the evidence when it shall be given]. Mt Shunemokee v Ishanchander, Marsh Rep, 266 (1863) [The Court cannot put a party to elect which of several witnesses he will call, where all are material and their evidence bears upon different points in the case Conviction quashed, the witnesses not having been summoned]; R v. Kalee Thakoor, 5 W R, Cr, 65 (1866), Ram Shahai v Shankar Bahadur, 6 B L R, App, 65 (1871) Lal Mohan Saha v Tazimaddin, 49 I C, 756 (refusal to examine witnesses and receive document)

(2) Field, Ev, 4th Ed, 659, when the Magistrate does not proceed under this section the accused is entitled to have the witnesses named in the list examined before the Court of Session R v Prosunno Coomar, 23 W R, 56 (1875)

(3) Rakhal Dass v. Protab Chunder, 12 W R, 455 (1870); as to criminal cases see s 291, Cr. Pr. Code

(4) Durga Dihal v Anoraji, 17 A., 23 (1894)

(5) Ranee Oojulla v Golam Mostafa, 6 W. R, 60 (1866). In re Mohima Chundra, 6 B L R, App, 78 (1871) [It is the Magistrate's duty to summon witnesses for the accused who can speak to the facts of the case, and he ought not to determine beforehand what credit he will give to their evidence], R v. Sreenath Mookapadhia, 7 W R, Cr., 45 (1867) [a Magistrate cannot decide the case of a prosecutor without examining his witnesses]: see Sreenath Mundle v Sreeram Rajput, 24 W R, Cr, 62 (1875)

(6) Radha Jeebun v. Grees Chunder, 8 W R, 461 (1867).

The examination of a material witness of the plaintiff in the absence of the defendant, his vakil having been removed, and no other vakil then acting for

By the procedure of the Courts in India the Courts are bound to proceed according to the facts alleged in the plaint and not to refuse to try issues of fact upon the merits on the ground of the legal effect of the facts alleged in the plaint.(2)

The Court may in its discretion direct the exclusion of witnesses from the Court-room while the testimony of other witnesses is being given. When it appears essential for the elucidation of truth, the witnesses should be examined out of the hearing of each other, and an order for all the witnesses on both sides to withdraw, except the one under examination, should generally be made upon the motion of either party at any period of the trial (3) If a witness [illegible] lraw, it is a contempt for imprisonment. But the ind (4) His disobedience lessen the value of his evidence (5) In India, even in the most true cases, there is generally more or less concert between the witnesses on the same side (6) Formerly, when the evidence of witnesses on opposite sides was directly conflicting, the Court would often direct that such witnesses should be confronted; but in England this practice, though useful, has now fallen into disuse (7)

In the undermentioned case(8) the plaintiff's Counsel called and examined a witness on behalf of the plaintiff, but he was not cross-examined by Counsel for the defendants The latter for the defence proposed to recall him, as a matter of course, as a witness-in-chief But the Judge refused to allow him to be recalled without leave of the Court, which, he observed, should have been asked for when the first examination was concluded.

Order of production and examination. The order, where there exist any provisions on the point, is regulated by the Procedure Codes, and in the absence of any such provision by the discretion of the Court.(9) This is a subject which lies chiefly in the discretion of the Judge before whom the cause is tried, it being from its nature susceptible of but few positive and stringent rules (10) In the regular order of procedure

(1) Rajah Bammarauze v Gangasamy Mudaly, 6 Moo I A, 262 (1855)
(2) Nawab Sidhee v Ojoodhyaram Khan, 10 Moo I A, 540 (1866)
(3) Taylor, Ev, §§ 1400—1402, and cases there cited; Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 31, It is usual not to exclude attorneys, vakils or mukhtars of the parties, nor the parties themselves since their presence is usually necessary to a proper management of their case. It is the practice of the High Court (and of the American Courts, Burr. Jones, § 807) not to exclude an agent of the party when, upon the statement of Counsel, the presence of such agent from his familiarity with the facts is necessary for the proper management of the action of defence The Supreme Court followed Exchequer practice; Kissenmohun Singh v Collypersaud Dutt Clarke's Rules and Orders, 1831, 1832, p 32 (1830), United Company v. Rajah Buddinauth, ib.
(4) Taylor, Ev., § 1401
(5) Ib, Field, Ev. 6th Ed 31, Although in practice the demand is seldom made the reason of the rule would seem to require the exclusion of witnesses during the opening argument of Counsel if requested, R v Murphy, 8 C & P, 297.
(6) Field, Ev, 6th Ed., 19.
(7) Taylor, Ev., § 1478. In the case of Annesley v Lord Anglesea, no less than four witnesses were for this purpose put in the box
(8) Mackintosh v Nobinmoney Dossee, 2 Ind Jur., N. S., 160, 161 (1867).
(9) S 135, post.
(10) Greenl, Ev, § 431.

clearly appears to be to impede the adjudication of the case or otherwise to obstruct the ends of justice. Thus it was held not right for the lower Court to select five out of twenty witnesses tendered for examination.(1) It appears from the case first cited that a Civil Court has power to refuse to examine any excessive number of witnesses, if satisfi[illegible] them is clearly to impede the adjudicati[illegible] cedure, however, contains no provision [illegible] 216 of the Criminal Procedure Code, [illegible] exclude from the list of witnesses to be [illegible] persons whose evidence is not really relevant.(2) The fact of a [illegible] having been named in the plaintiff's list of witnesses is no ground for refusing to examine him when produced.(3) In the undermentioned case, the plaintiffs in the Court of first instance produced both documentary and oral evidence in support of their claim. The Court, being satisfied with the documentary evidence produced by the plaintiff, declined to record the evidence of the wit[illegible] and the lower Appellate [illegible] but in its turn declined [illegible] evidence before it. On appeal by the plaintiffs to the High Court it was held that, though there was no section of the Code of Civil Procedure strictly applicable to the circumstances of the case, the Court was warranted ex debito justitiæ in setting aside all proceedings of both Courts below and in directing the Court of first instance to re-try the case, admitting all admissible evidence which had previously been tendered to the Court of first instance, and which that Court had refused to record.(4)

Where a day has been fixed for hearing the witnesses, the Court is not competent to decide the case without waiting for that day, in the absence of the [illegible] would be believed (5) A [illegible] own case, when he knows [illegible]hat he had no opportunity [illegible]

---

(1) Ramdhan Mandal v. Rajballab Paramanik, 6 B L R, App, 10 (1870), and to the same effect, see Watson & Co, v Nukee Mundul, 6 W. R. (Act X), 83 (1866), Jeswant Singjee v Jei Singjee, 3 M I A, 245; R v Ishan Dutt, 6 B. L. R App, 88 (1871), R v Bhoobun Isher, 2 W R, Cr, 36 (1865); R. v Abdool Setar, 3 W R, Cr, 6 (1865); Ranee Oojulla v Gholam Mostafa, 6 W R, Civ. R, 60 (1866), Nilkanth Surmah v. Soosela Debia, 6 W R, 324 [objection taken in special appeal], Looloo Singh v. Rajender Laha, 8 W R, 364 (1867) [a party is entitled to have all his witnesses examined, whatever opinion the Court may form by anticipation as to the probable value of the evidence when it shall be given]. Mt Shunemokee v Ishanchander, Marsh Rep, 266 (1863) [The Court cannot put a party to elect which of several witnesses he will call, where all are material and their evidence bears upon different points in the case Conviction quashed, the witnesses not having been summoned]; R. v Kalee Thakoor, 5 W R, Cr., 65 (1866); Ram Shahai v Shankar Bahadur, 6 B L R, App 65 (1871) Lal Mohan Saha v. Tazimaddin, 49 I C, 756 (refusal to examine witnesses and receive document)

(2) Field, Ev, 4th Ed., 659; when the Magistrate does not proceed under this section the accused is entitled to have the witnesses named in the list examined before the Court of Session R v Prosurno Coomar, 23 W. R, 56 (1875)

(3) Rakhal Dass v Protab Chunder, 12 W R, 455 (1870); as to criminal cases see s 291, Cr Pr. Code

(4) Durga Dihal v Anoraji, 17 A, 29 (1894).

(5) Ranee Oojulla v Golam Mostafa, 6 W. R, 60 (1866) In re Mohima Chundra, 6 B L R, App, 78 (1871) [It is the Magistrate's duty to summon witnesses for the accused who can speak to the facts of the case, and he ought not to determine beforehand what credit he will give to their evidence]; R. v Sreenath Mookapadhia, 7 W. R, Cr, 45 (1867) [a Magistrate cannot decide the case of a prosecutor without examining his witnesses]; see Sreenath Mundle v Sreeram Rajput, 24 W. R, Cr, 62 (1875)

(6) Radha Jeebun v. Grees Chunder, 8 W R, 461 (1867).

The examination of a material witness of the plaintiff in the absence of the defendant, his vakil having been removed, and no other vakil then acting for him, is such an irregularity as, if objected to at the proper time, would be fatal to the reception of such evidence But where no objection was urged during the trial or until an appeal was interposed, the Judicial Committee held that the

By the procedure of the Courts in India the Courts are bound to proceed according to the facts alleged in the plaint and not to refuse to try issues of fact upon the merits on the ground of the legal effect of the facts alleged in the plaint.(2)

The Court may in its discretion direct the exclusion of witnesses from the Court-room while the testimony of other witnesses is being given When it ses should be examined witnesses on both sides uld generally be made upon the motion of either party at any period of the trial.(3) If a witness withdraw, it is a contempt for and imprisonment But the ground (4) His disobedience nally lessen the value of his evidence (5) In India, even in the most true cases, there is generally more or less concert between the witnesses on the same side (6) Formerly, when the evidence of witnesses on opposite sides was directly conflicting, the Court would often direct that such witnesses should be confronted, but in England this practice, though useful, has now fallen into disuse (7)

In the undermentioned case(8) the plaintiff's Counsel called and examined a witness on behalf of the plaintiff, but he was not cross-examined by Counsel for the defendants The latter for the defence proposed to recall him, as a matter of course, as a witness-in-chief But the Judge refused to allow him to be recalled without leave of the Court, which, he observed, should have been asked for when the first examination was concluded Order of production and examination.

The order, where there exist any provisions on the point, is regulated by the Procedure Codes, and in the absence of any such provision by the discretion of the Court (9) This is a subject which lies chiefly in the discretion of the Judge before whom the cause is tried, it being from its nature susceptible of but few positive and stringent rules (10) In the regular order of procedure

(1) Rajah Bammarauze v Gangasamy Mudaly, 6 Moo I A, 262 (1855)

(2) Nawab Sidhee v Ojoodhyaram Khan, 10 Moo I A, 540 (1866)

(3) Taylor, Ev, §§ 1400—1402, and cases there cited, Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 31, It is usual not to exclude attorneys, vakils or mukhtars of the parties, nor the parties themselves since their presence is usually necessary to a proper management of their case It is the practice of the High Court (and of the American Courts, Burr. Jones, § 807) not to exclude an agent of the party when, upon the statement of Counsel, the presence of such agent from his familiarity with the facts is necessary for the proper management of the action of defence The Supreme Court followed Exchequer practice, Kissenmohun Singh v Collypersaud Dutt Clarke's Rules and Orders, 1831, 1832, p 32 (1830), United Company v. Rajah Buddinauth, ib.

(4) Taylor, Ev, § 1401

(5) Ib, Field, Ev 6th Ed 31, Although in practice the demand is seldom made the reason of the rule would seem to require the exclusion of witnesses during the opening argument of Counsel if requested, R v Murphy, 8 C & P, 297.

(6) Field, Ev, 6th Ed., 19.

(7) Taylor, Ev., § 1478. In the case of Annesley v Lord Anglesea, no less than four witnesses were for this purpose put in the box

(8) Mackintosh v Nobinmoney Dossee, 2 Ind Jur, N S, 160, 161 (1867)

(9) S 135, post

(10) Greenl., Ev, § 431.

the party having the affirmative ought to introduce all the evidence necessary to support the substance of the issue; then the party denying the affirmative allegations should produce his proof; and finally the proof, if any, in rebuttal is received.(1)

The order of examinations is laid down by section 138 of this Act. The rule with regard to the production of evidence in Civil cases as laid down by the Civil Procedure Code is as follows:—

The plaintiff has the right to begin, unless where the defendant admits the facts alleged by the plaintiff, and contends that either in point of law or on some additional facts alleged by the defendant, the plaintiff is not entitled to any part of the relief which he seeks [illegible] the right to begin.(2) On the day fixed for [illegible] which the hearing is adjourned, [illegible] his case and produce his evidence in support of the issues which [illegible] to prove. The other party shall then state his case and produce his evidence (if any) and may then address the Court generally on the whole case. The party beginning may then reply generally on the whole case. Where there are several issues, the burden of proving some of which lies on the other party, the party beginning may, at his option, either produce his evidence on those issues or reserve it by way of answer to the evidence produced by the other party; and in the latter case, the party beginning may produce evidence on those issues after the other party has produced all his evidence, and the other party may then reply specially on the evidence so produced by the party beginning; but the party beginning will then be entitled to reply generally on the whole case.(3)

[illegible] arying character, the Criminal Procedure [illegible] that reproduced above. Chapter XVII, [illegible] procedure in the case of enquiries into cases triable by the Court of Sessions or High Court; and Chapters XX—XXIII deal with the procedure on the trial of summons-cases, warrant-cases, summary trials, and trials before the High Court and Court of Session, respectively; Chapters XXXI, XXXII treat of the procedure on appeal, reference and revision.

Examination of witnesses. The rules for examination are contained in sections 136—166, and are in general conformity with the English and American law upon the subject. The rules require but little explanation. Such elucidation as has been considered necessary is given in the Notes appended to these sections, to which the reader is referred.

Order of production and examination of witnesses. 135. The order in which witnesses are produced and examined shall be regulated by the law and practice for the time being relating to Civil and Criminal procedure, respectively, and in the absence of any such law, by the discretion of the Court.

Taylor, Ev., §§ 1394, 1478; Burr. Jones, Ev., § 797 et seq Greenleaf, Ev., § 431; Civ. Pr Code, O XVII, rr. 1—3, Woodroffe and Ameer Ali, 2nd Ed., pp. 837—839; Cr Pr

(1) v ante, pp 676, et seq The trial Judge is to determine what is evidence in rebuttal, and it lies within his discretion to receive or exclude such testimony Marshall v. Davis, 78 N Y. 414, 420 (Amer.), as to the nature of evidence in reply, see R v Hilditch, 5 C & P, 299; as to calling fresh evidence after close of case, see Giles v. Powell, 2 C. & P, 259; Walls v. Aitcheson, 2 C. & P., 268, and as to rebutting evidence after close of case to impeach credit of witness, see Khadijah Khanum v. Abdool Kureem, 17 C., 344 (1889).

(2) Civ. Pr. Code, O. XVIII, r. 1, op. cit, 2nd Ed, p 842.

(3) Civ. Pr. Code, O XVIII, rr. 1—3, op cit., 2nd Ed, p. 842. See Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 434—435.

Code, Chs. XVIII, XX—XXIII, XXXI, XXXII, and cases and authorities cited in Introduction.

COMMENTARY.

Order of production and examination of witnesses.

See the sections and chapters of the Civil and Criminal Procedure Codes [illegible] h the attendance of witnesses [illegible] production and examination [illegible] ie undermentioned case(3) at the close of the examination-in-chief of the plaintiff's attorney, Counsel for the defendant asked that the cross-examination of the witness be deferred until after the examination-in-chief of the plaintiff by his Counsel, submitting that the word "examined" in this section included cross-examination, and referring to section 138, and submitting that the plaintiff should have been first called and given his account of the transaction The Court however, stated that it was slow to interfere with the discretion of Counsel as to the order in which witnesses should be examined, and stated that it thought that in that case the ordinary practice should regulate the order of examination, and that the witness should be cross-examined at the conclusion of the examination-in-chief, which was done.

Judge to decide as to admissibility of evidence.

136. When either party proposes to give evidence of any fact, the Judge may ask the party proposing to give the evidence in what manner the alleged fact, if proved, would be relevant; and the Judge shall admit the evidence if he thinks that the fact, if proved, would be relevant, and not otherwise.

If the fact proposed to be proved is one of which evidence is admissible only upon proof of some other fact, such last-mentioned fact must be proved before evidence is given of the fact first mentioned, unless the party undertakes to give proof of such fact and the Court is satisfied with such undertaking.

If the relevancy of one alleged fact depends upon another alleged fact being first proved, the Judge may, in his discretion, either permit evidence of the first fact to be given before the second fact is proved, or require evidence to be given of the second fact before evidence is given of the first fact.

Illustrations

(a) It is proposed to prove a statement about a relevant fact by a person alleged to be dead, which statement is relevant under section 32

The fact that the person is dead must be proved by the person proposing to prove the statement, before evidence is given of the statement

(b) It is proposed to prove, by a copy, the contents of a document said to be lost

The fact that the original is lost must be proved by the person proposing to produce the copy, before the copy is produced

(c) A is accused of receiving stolen property knowing it to have been stolen

It is proposed to prove that he denied the possession of the property

The relevancy of the denial depends on the identity of the property The Court may in its discretion, either require the property to be identified before the

(1) Ante, pp. 686—693
(2) Ante, pp 694—695
(3) Kedar Nath v Bhupendra Nath 5 C W N, xv (1900)

denial of the possession is proved, or permit the denial of the possession to be proved before the property is identified.

(d) It is proposed to prove a fact (A) which is said to have been the cause or effect of a fact in issue There are several intermediate facts (B, C and D), which must be shown to exist before the fact (A) can be regarded as the cause or effect of the fact in issue The Court may either permit A to be proved before B, C or D is proved, or may require proof of B, C and D before permitting proof of A.

s. 3 ("Evidence.") s. 3 ("Fact")
s. 3 ("Proved.") s. 3 ("Relevant.")
s. 3 ("Court") s 104 (Burden of proving fact to be proved to make evidence admissible)
s. 162 (Admissibility of documents)

Greenleaf, Ev., § 51 (a); Burr. Jones, Ev., §§ 812, 381; Norton, Ev., 319

Principle.—The necessity of confining the proof to those facts, which being relevant, can alone be given in evidence under the provisions of this Act. The ground of the last clause is general convenience, v. post.

COMMENTARY.

Judge to decide as to admissibility

In order that the proof may be confined to relevant facts and may not stray beyond the proper limits of the issue at trial, the Judge is empowered to ask in what manner the evidence tendered is relevant. The Judge must then decide as to its admissibility. In cases tried by jury it is the duty of the Judge to decide all questions of admissibility, and in his discretion to prevent the production of inadmissible evidence, whether it is or is not objected to by the parties.(1) A Civil Court also should, irrespective of objections made by the parties, compel observance of the provisions of this Act.(2) In the case of documents the Court must decide the validity of any objection there may be to their production or admissibility.(3) An erroneous omission to object to that which is not evidence does not make it admissible.(4) The Court must, at the time when the evidence is tendered, decide whether or not it is legally admissible. Questions as to the admissibility of evidence, oral or documentary should be decided as they arise and should not be reserved until judgment in the case is given.(5)

With the second clause read section 104, ante, which enacts that the burden of proving any fact necessary to be proved in order to enable any person to give evidence of any other fact is on the person who wishes to give such evidence. In other words, no person shall be allowed to give evidence before he has shown that he is in a legal position to do so. It often (to take an example) happens that an agent to carry a message and bring back an answer, or to do some other act, is put into the box before his agency or authority is proved Thereupon [illegible] at the evidence is not receivable [illegible] An undertaking is usually then [illegible] forthcoming at a later period, whereupon the case proceeds. If the proof of agency should break down, the whole of the alleged agent's evidence is expunged from the Judge's notes. It would often be highly inconvenient to interrupt the witness in his story, and call another witness in the middle of his examination, to prove agency. It is to meet such a state of things that this clause is provided.(6)

(1) Cr Pr. Code, s. 298, v ante, p. 128
(2) v. ante, p. 128
(3) S 162, post.
(4) Miller v Madho Das, 23 I. A, 106; s c, 19 A, 76 (1890); Sri Rajah Prakasarayanim Garu v Venkata Ram, 38 M., 160 (1915) See s. 5
(5) Jadu Rai v Bhubataran Nundy, 17 C, 173 (1889); Gorachand Sircar v Ram Narain Chowdhry, 9 W. R, 587 (1868); Rana Karan v Mangul Sen, 1 All L. J., 224 n (1904), and documents which are not admissible should be returned when they are presented, id, v. ante, p. 127.
(6) Norton, Ev, 319.

cannot be expected to show ability to establish the entire claim or defence in advance, and a reasonable latitude must be allowed as to the order in which the details of evidence shall be brought forward. When evidence is offered which proves or tends to prove any relevant fact, it is to be presumed that this will be followed by such other proof as is necessary to establish the proper connection. Hence it is of no consequence in what order the evidence is introduced, so far as its ultimate legitimacy is concerned, provided in its relation to the other evidence in the case, it is at the end pertinent to the issue (1) It has often been declared that the relevancy of testimony need not always appear at the time when it is offered, since it is the usual course to receive at any proper and convenient stage of the trial, in the discretion of the Judge, any evidence which the Counsel shows will be rendered material by other evidence which he undertakes to produce. If it is not subsequently thus connected with the issue, it is to be laid out of the case.(2) But before Counsel can claim the indulgence of the Court in this manner to introduce evidence, otherwise presumably incompetent, he should state what he expects to prove, or in some other way satisfy the Court that the evidence will be made competent. If Counsel fail to make the testimony relevant by other evidence, it should be withdrawn from the consideration of the Court. Having, however, regard to the influence of the improper testimony upon the minds of the jury, it is clear that the Court should exercise great caution, in criminal cases, in admitting testimony of doubtful competency, upon the promise of Counsel to show its materiality by subsequent proof (3) The section accordingly gives the Court a wide discretion in this matter It should be added that it is extremely desirable that, where possible, proofs should be offered in a connected sequence, whether it be chronological or logical, for the greater convenience of the Court and facility of apprehension

A Judge who has suggested that further evidence need not be given should not then decide against the party on the point on which such suggestion was made when the party has acted on such suggestion, without warning him and giving him an opportunity of calling witnesses whom he had been ready to adduce and whom he had refrained from calling at the suggestion of the Judge (4)

137. The examination of a witness by the party who calls him shall be called his examination-in-chief. Examination-in-chief.

The examination of a witness by the adverse party shall be called his cross-examination Cross-examination

The examination of a witness, subsequent to the cross-examination by the party who called him, shall be called his re-examination. Re-examination

138. Witnesses shall be first examined-in-chief, then (if the adverse party so desires) cross-examined, then (if the party calling him so desires) re-examined. Order of examination

The examination and cross-examination must relate to relevant facts, but the cross-examination need not be confined to the facts to which the witness testified on his examination-in-chief.

(1) Burr Jones, Ev., § 812
(2) Greenleaf, Ev., § 51 (a)
(3) Burr Jones, Ev., § 813
(4) Hasaji v. Dhondiram, 6 Bom L R 636 (1904)

Direction of re-examination.

The re-examination shall be directed to the explanation of matter referred to in cross-examination; and if new matter is, by permission of the Court, introduced in re-examination, the adverse party may further cross-examine upon that matter.

COMMENTARY.

The examinations and their order.

The whole subject of the vivâ voce examination of witnesses in open Court(1) is confined of necessity to a very great extent to the sound judicial discretion of the Judge presiding at the trial; and but few positive and unbending rules have been laid down with regard to it. The control of the Court here referred to is that which it possesses over the manner and extent of an examination of a witness. The admissibility of testimony is another question. The time and manner, however, of examining a witness is in the discretion of the Judge before whom the trial is held. This discretion extends to determine the length of time and the extent to which the witness may be examined. So the Judge may interfere and protect the witness against irrelevant inquiries and overrule a question repeated after being several times substantially answered, and allow the witness to finish a proper answer to a proper question before permitting another to interrogate extent of a pose after on the poi
do so may render their subsequent cross-examination ineffective. It is not the province of the Court to examine the witnesses, unless the pleaders on either side have omitted to put some material question or questions; and the Court should, as a general rule, leave the witnesses to the pleaders to be dealt with as laid down in section 138 of this Act.(3) Advocates have ample discretion in the conduct of cases of which they are in charge, and the Court cannot fetter this discretion by insisting that their case should be put to this witness or that.(4) The necessity for the Court's interposition was, of course, formerly greater than at the present time, though even now cases occur to which the following remarks of Sir Barnes Peacock are applicable. The Chief Justice, after referring to the observations of the Privy Council upon the misfortune of Hindu litigants in that their cases often fall in the earlier stages of litigation into the hands of incompetent advisers, who by falsehood, suppression or abandonment of part of a case create impediments to its success, said "And I may add that it is another great misfortune of litigants in the Mofussil in this country that the witnesses who are called to prove the facts of the case are not properly examined, through the incompetency of those who have the management of ... for that incompetency by the ... hose powers for obtaining th ... y the law of procedure"(5) Though where a witness is called by the parties and is questioned

(1) It is not enough to produce documents saying that in them the witness' evidence may be found: Lal Singh v. Emp, 5 L, 396 (1924).

(2) Stewart Rapalje's Law of Witnesses, §§ 229, 234, 1 Greenleaf, Ev, § 431; Taylor, Ev., § 1399, Bastin v. Carew, Ryan & Moody, 127, as to the Judge's questions, see s 165, post.

(3) Noor Bux v. R., 6 C., 279 (1880); s c., 7 C. L. R, 385 "It is obvious that these privileges of the Court should be so exercised as not to prejudice the rights of the parties or to unduly interfere with the presentation of the cause of action or defence."—Burr. Jones, Ev., § 814

(4) Mahomed Mian v. Emperor, 20 Cr L. J., 566, s c. 52 I. C., 54

(5) Ram Gutty v. Mumtaj Beebee, 10 W. R., 280 (1868).

by the Court, no cross-examination upon the answer given in reply is allowed without the leave of the Court(1); yet if the witness be called by the Court he may be cross-examined in the same manner as if he had been produced by the adverse party (2)

The order of examination is as follows:—When a witness has been sworn or affirmed he is first examined by the party calling him to testify; this is called the direct examination or examination-in-chief. When the direct examination is finished, the adverse party is at liberty to cross-examine; after which the party calling the witness may re-examine him. This usually closes the examination of the witness, though in many cases the adverse party is permitted to re-cross-examine at the close of the re-examination; but this is no more than a further cross-examination, permitted either because new matter is brought out in the re-examination, or because the Judge in his discretion sees proper, under the circumstances, to allow it. The party beginning then calls his next witness, who is examined in like manner. When all the witnesses of the party beginning have been thus examined, his case is closed. His opponent then opens his case and calls his witnesses, who are examined in the same way, first by himself, then by his opponent and then re-examined if necessary by himself. The close of his case is ordinarily followed by his summing up of the evidence and then by the speech in reply of the party who began Sometimes, however, the latter at the close of his opponent's evidence claims to adduce further evidence in reply to that which has been given on the other side. As to this rebutting evidence v. post. Section 292 of the Criminal Procedure Code as to right of reply is to be read in conjunction with section 289 of that Code (3) The object of the examination-in-chief is to lay before the Court and jury the whole of the information of the witness that is relevant and material, that of the cross-examination is to search and sift, to correct and supply omissions, that of the re-examination, to explain, to rectify, and put in order.(4)

The privilege to examine witnesses has also been extended to jurors and assessors.(5) A witness may not foist into his answer in any examination statements not in answer to questions put to him. This is called "volunteering evidence," and the pleader of the opposite party should be on his guard to check its introduction by objection.(6) The trial Judge should upon motion strike out answers that are not responsive to the questions asked, that is, those answers that state facts not called for by the questions, or those which express an opinion as to the matter in question, unless the question calls for an opinion as in the case of experts. But where only a part of the answer is not responsive to the question, only that part will be stricken out which is objectionable for not being responsive (7)

As to objections by the Court to the admissibility of particular questions v. ante, pp 127, 128, and as to objections by parties, pp. 130-134, ante As respects the form of objections, they should be specific rather than general, that is,

(1) S. 165, post, R v Sakaram Mukundji, 11 Bom H C R, 166 (1874)

(2) Tarini Charan v Saroda Sundari, 3 B L R, A C, 145, 158 (1869), R v Grish Chunder, 5 C, 614 (1879); Gopal Lall v Manick Lall, 24 C, 288 (1897)

(3) R v Sreenath Mahapatra, 43 C, 426 (1916)

(4) Stewart Rapalje's op cit, § 230, Wills, Ev, 2nd Ed, 314, 320, 327

(5) S 166, post

(6) Norton, Ev, 321.

(7) Burr Jones, Ev, § 814, Stewart Rapalje's Law of Witnesses, § 243, and cases there cited In America it has been held that the refusal of the trial Judge to strike out an irresponsive answer is reversible error, unless it is shown that such evidence is not prejudicial to the party appealing ib See Taylor, Ev, § 1475

(8) Stewart Rapalje's op cit, § 244

without objection of wholly irrelevant evidence and relevant evidence presented in an improper form. Only in the latter case will want of objection cure the defect. For an erroneous omissior vant at all will not render it relevant.(1)

the manner in which relevant evidence was a party from objecting to such evidence o that consent will make evidence otherwise relevant but recorded without jurisdiction admissible.(3) The failure to object to one improper question to which an unsatisfactory answer reiteration of the same qu

as well as to a question. When several questions pertaining to the same point are asked in immediate succession, and an objection to the first one, which is merely preliminary to the others, is improperly overruled, the objection will not be limited to the first question, but will be deemed to cover the others which sprang naturally from it.(4)

When evidence is rejected at the trial, the party proposing it should formally tender it to the Judge and request him to make a note of that fact.(5) The moment a witness commences giving evidence which is inadmissible he should be stopped by the Court.(6)

The witness must be competent. If there be any doubt upon this point the modern practice is to interrogate the witness before swearing or affirming him or to elicit the facts upon the examination-in-chief, when, if his incompetency appears, he will be rejected.(7)

As to evidence in rebuttal, see the Civil Procedure Code, O. XVIII, rr. 2 & 3,(8) and ante p. 667. In addition to the case there mentioned, the plaintiff is also generally entitled to give evidence in reply, even though all the issues are upon himself, when the case made against him is one of which he has had no notice on the pleading(9): and in any case where a defendant does not lay a foundation for his own plaintiff's witnesses as are going to be contra evidence in reply.(10)

As the demeanour of the witness while under examination is a most important test of his credibility, the Courts are empowered by the Codes to record their remarks relative thereto (11)

Leading Counsel may interpose and take the examination out of a junior's hands (12)

Examination-in-Chief.

This is the first examination after the witness has been sworn or affirmed (13) It is the province of the party by whom the witness is called to examine him in

(1) Miller v. Madho Das, 23 I. A., 106, 116 (1896), s c, 19 A, 76, ante, p 131

(2) Sri Rajah Prakasaravynim Garu v. Venkata Ram, 38 M., 160 (1915) following Miller v Madho Das (supra).

(3) Sreenath Roy v. Goluk Chunder Sein, 15 W R, 348 (1871), Ramaya v. Devappa, 30 B, 109 (1906).

(4) Stewart Rapalje's op cit, § 244; see generally Taylor, Ev, §§ 1881—1882B.

(5) Taylor, Ev, § 1882A

(6) R. v Pitambar Sirdar, 7 W R, Cr., 25 (1867); v. ante, p. 886 note (3), and cases there cited

(7) v. ante, p. 886. The preliminary examination as to competency is technically called examination on the voire dire; see Taylor, Ev, § 1393, Wigmore, Ev, § 486; see s. 118, ante, Stewart Rapalje's op. cit., 232; Warner's Law of Evidence, 58—61. For case of child see Nafar Sheikh v R, 41 C., 406 (1915); 18 C L J, 582; R v. Dhani Ram, 38 A, 49 (1916) and ante, p. 886.

(8) O. xviii, rr. 2, 3, Woodroffe & Ali's 2nd Ed, pp 838, 839

(9) Doe v. Gosley, 2 M. & Rob, 243

(10) Bigsby v. Dickinson, 4 Ch. D, 24; cf Briggs v. Aynsworth, 2 M & R., 168 see Wills, Ev., 2nd Ed, 313.

(11) Civ. Pr. Code, s 188; Criminal Procedure Code, s 363. See Mouladad Khan v. Abdul Sattar, 39 A, 426 (1917); Bombay Cotton Co. v. Motilal Shivlal, 42 I A, 110

(12) Doe v. Roe, 2 Camp, 280.

(13) S. 138; as to oaths and affirmations, v. Oaths Act chief for the purpose of eliciting from the witness all the material facts within his knowledge which tend to prove such a party's case.

Few general rules can be laid down as to this topic, inasmuch as the propriety of the questions put by a party to his own witness in proof of his case must in the nature of things depend to a very great extent upon the particular circumstances to be proved. The object of the examination is to elicit the truth, to get at the facts, or such of them as bear upon the issue in favour of the party calling the witness The issue must be kept in mind by the questioner, and only material and relevant facts, not those which are collateral and impertinent, may be inquired about. But it is not necessary that every question put to a witness shall be so broad and comprehensive that the answer shall be evidence of some issues in the case If all the answers to a series of questions upon the same general subject, taken together, are competent, each is competent and a question tending to elicit such an answer should be allowed. Each question should call for a fact and not a conclusion of law and should not embrace the whole merits of the case. It is no objection to a question that it assumes facts which are undisputed, but a question based upon the supposition of facts not proved is improper.(1) So also a compound question, one part being admissible, and the remainder inadmissible, may be rightly excluded as a whole. But Counsel are often allowed to ask apparently irrelevant and consequently inadmissible questions, upon their promise to follow them up at the proper time by proof of other facts, which, if true, would make the question put legitimately operative.(2) The party examining a witness-in-chief is bound at his peril to ask all material questions in the first instance, and if he fail to do this, it cannot be done in reply. No new question can be put in reply unconnected with the subject of the cross-examination and which does not tend to explain it. If a question as to any material fact has been omitted upon the examination-in-chief, the usual course is to suggest the question to the Court, which will exercise its discretion in putting it to the witness (3)

On the examination-in-chief a witness as a general rule can only give evidence of facts(4) within his own knowledge and recollection In some cases hearsay and opinions are relevant. But in all cases the facts must be relevant(5), and in all cases the answer must be upon a point of fact as opposed to a point of law. Ordinarily a witness cannot be asked as to a conclusion of law. Sometimes this has been so far pressed as to involve the assumption that a witness cannot be asked as to conclusions of fact The error of such a contention consists in this that there are few statements of fact which are not conclusions of fact (6) The conclusions of a witness as to the motives of other persons are inadmissible, motives being eminently inferences from conduct (7) Yet, when a party is examined as to his own conduct, he may be asked as to his own

(1) See notes to s 138, post

(2) Stewart Rapalje's op cit, § 238 (as to the order of proof, v s 136, pp 935—937. "In direct examination although mediocrity is more easily attainable, it may be a question whether the highest degree of excellence is not even still more rare" (i e, than in cross-examination) "For it requires mental powers of no inferior order so to interrogate each witness whether learned or unlearned, intelligent or dull, matter-of-fact or imaginative, single-minded or designing, as to bring his story before the tribunal in the most natural comprehensible and effective form" Best, Ev § 663

(3) Stewart Rapalje's op cit, § 233

(4) v s 3 ante, pp 106-108

(5) S 138, for meaning of "relevant" v s 3, ante, p 107, as to belief and opinion, see Taylor, Ev, § 1414, et seq, v ante pp 420-448

(6) Wharton, Ev, §§ 507, 509, Wharton, Cr Ev, § 7, see p 410, ante Conclusions of law are for the Court to draw, not witnesses So a witness will not be permitted to testify as to whether a party is responsible to the law, whether certain facts constitute in law an agency and the like, ib, Stewart Rapalje's op cit, § 238, witnesses are not permitted to state their views on matters of moral or legal obligation or on the manner in which other persons would probably have been influenced had the parties acted in one way rather than another, Taylor Ev, § 1419

(7) Wharton Ev, § 508

intention or motive, his testimony to such intention or motive being based not on inference but on consciousness. But the right of a party to testify to his intent in drawing a contract or other document is limited by the rule that a party cannot be admitted to prove his intent so as to vary the terms of a document by which he is bound.(1)

As to opinion evidence and the distinction between "matter of fact" and "matter of opinion," see ante, pp. 421—423, and as to hearsay, p 491, ante.

In the case of documents the witness may testify to their existence and identity, but not, unless secondary evidence be admissible, to their contents(2); and he may explain but may not in general contradict or vary their terms(3) A witness may give the substance of conversations or writings, but he will not be permitted to say what is the impression left on him by a conversation unless he swears to such impressions as recollections and not inferences And it is enough if a witness swears to event and objects according to the best of his recollection and belief.(4) Further, in order to save time, a witness will be permitted to state the result of numerous or voluminous documents, subject to cross-examination as to particulars.(5) So he may state whether a party's books showed his insolvency or the reverse(6); or in what manner bills have been invariably drawn(7); but he will n[illegible] derived from unproduced documents, for [illegible] struction which belong to the tribunal(8), [illegible] selves should be given if required (9)

The witness will, while under examination, be permitted to refresh his memory by reference to documents (10) Leading questions may not ordinarily be put in examination-in-chief.(11) In cases where the witness proves to be hostile, he may be cross-examined by the party calling him.(12) Questions tending to corroborate evidence of a relevant fact are admissible(13), and former statements of a witness may be proved to corroborate later testimony as to the same fact.(14) Whenever any statement relevant under sections 32, 33, ante, is proved, all matters may be proved to corroborate it, or to confirm the credit of the person by whom it was made, which might have been proved if that person had been called as a witness.(15) Where the prosecution declined to call in the Court of Session a witness for the Crown who had been examined in the Magistrate's Court and such witness was therefore placed in the witness-box by Counsel for the defence, it was held that Counsel for the

(1) Wharton, Ev, §§ 508, 482; further, ordinarily extrinsic evidence of intent is inadmissible in the case of the interpretation of documents, Beti Maharani v. Collector of Etawah, 17 A, 188, 209 (1894); v. ante, Introd to Ch. VI, except in certain cases of ambiguity, v pp. 654-672, ante, Wharton, Ev, § 955 As to proof of intention and motive, v. ante, s. 14, and cases there cited, and Stewart Rapalje's op cit, 391, 392 A common instance of the admissibility of evidence of mental condition exists when a party is asked whether in entering into a contract on which the action is based, he relied upon the representations of the other party.

(2) v ante, ss 91, 59, 65, and notes to those sections, Phipson, Ev 5th Ed, 463 as to the interposition of questions for the purpose of ascertaining whether the matter spoken to was contained in a document see s. 144, post

(3) v ante, introd to Ch VI and ss. 92. 99.

(4) Taylor, Ev., 1415; Wharton, Ev, §§ 514, 515 If a witness called to prove the handwriting of a paper says that he believes it to be of the handwriting of the defendant from its contents and from other circumstances, he may be asked what those circumstances are: R v Murphy, 8 C & P, 297.

(5) S 65, cl. (g), ante, p 507, Roe v. Brenton, 3 M. & R., 212, Roberts v. Doron, Pea, N. P. C., 83

(6) Mayor v. Sefton, 2 Stark, R., 274

(7) Spencer v. Billing, 3 Camp, 310

(8) Topham v. McGregor, 1 C. & K., 320

(9) Johnson v. Kershaw, 1 D G & S., 260; see Taylor Ev, § 462; Stark, Ev. 645; Steph Dig, Art. 71 (h).

(10) Ss 159—161, post.

(11) Ss. 141, 142, post

(12) S. 154, post

(13) S. 156, post

(14) S. 157, post.

(15) S. 158, post.

defence was not entitled to commence his examination of the witness by questioning him as to what he had deposed in the Magistrate's Court. Questions as to his previous deposition were under the circumstances only admissible by way of cross-examination with the permission of the Court, if the witness proved himself a hostile witness.(1)

Cross-examination

After the party calling a witness has concluded the examination-in-chief, the [illegible] An [illegible] tabl [illegible] and efficacious means of discovering the truth. Though certain rules have been laid down for the guidance of advocates in this respect(3), the faculty of interrogating witnesses with effect is mainly the result either of natural acuteness or of long forensic practice.(4) It will, however, prove useful to recall here Mr. Norton's observation (Law of Evidence, p. 320) that cross-examination is [illegible] t; that unless there is some [illegible] be broken down it is rarely [illegible] nation. Sometimes consequently a cross-examination is little more than affectation in order that the examiner may not seem to let the witness go without question, as if he were totally [illegible] edit or show the [illegible] mination is two- [illegible] and to establish [illegible] With this view the witness may be asked not only as to facts in issue or directly relevant thereto, but all questions (a) tending to test his means of knowledge, opportunities of observation, reasons for recollection and belief, and powers of memory, perception and judgment; or (b) tending to expose the errors, omissions, contradictions and improbabilities in his testimony, or (c) tending to impeach his [illegible]

offence."(8)

The cross-examination must as much as the examination-in-chief relate to relevant facts (9) Therefore hearsay is always inadmissible as substantive

(1) R v Zawar Hussen, 20 A, 155 (1897)

(2) Mote Singh v Emp., 24 Cr L J, 595 (1923).

(3) See Best, Ev, §§ 649—663 (in the last paragraph citing D P Brown's "Golden Rules," pp 614, 615), § 21, "Examination of witnesses, Hints for conducting a trial," Des Moines Iowa 1877, Harris' Hints on Advocacy, Quintilian, Inst Orat, Bentham's Judicial Evidence, Hints to witnesses in Courts of Justice, by a barrister (Baron Field), London 1815, Stark, Ev, 194, Taylor, Ev, § 1428, Alison's Practice of the Criminal Law of Scotland, 546, 547 Evans on cross-examination in his Appendix to Pothier's "Obligations" No 16, Vol II, pp 233, 234, Field, Ev, 630, 631, tests of credibility and concert, demeanour and other indications of truth or falsehood (ability, memory, descriptive powers), 6th Ed, 447, 448, 17—22, 24—29, 29—31, 32—45, Stewart Rapalje's op cit, § 245, et seq, Whately's "Rhetoric" and "Historic Doubts" Campbell's Rhetoric, Glassford's Principles of Evidence Edinburgh, 1820, see Observations of Norman, J, in Suad Ali v Kashinath Dass, 6 W R, 181 R v Ramchandra Govind, 19 B, 759 (1895)

(4) Best, Ev, §§ 650, 663.

(5) See s 146, post

(6) See s 155 (2) and (3), which deal with the impeachment of the credit of the witness by calling other persons to testify to the facts therein mentioned if he denies the same on cross-examination The impeachment of credit in the text refers to impeachment by cross-examination of the witness himself and not by means of independent testimony As to the partiality of the witness see s 153 Exception (2).

(7) See s 155 Exception (1)

(8) Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 472

(9) S 138, see Observations in Wills, Ev, 225, 226, ib, 2nd Ed, 321 evidence, whether the evidence be elicited in examination-in-chief or cross-examination.(1) In so far, however, as the credibility of a witness is always in issue(2), 'relevancy' is a term of a wider scope in cross-examination than in examination-in-chief embracing all those questions to credit which are the subject-matter of sections 146—153, post. Moreover, the cross-examination need not be confined to the facts to whi [illegible] tion-in-chief.(3) This is permitted by [illegible] questions may be asked in cross-examina[illegible] has discretion to permit the prosecution to test by cross-examination the veracity of its own witnesses with reference to new matter so elicited by the defence (4) This is in accordance with the English practice by which the cross-examination is not limited to the matters upon which the witness has already been examined-in-chief, but extends to the whole cas[illegible] witness to prove a single, even the simplest, [illegible] is at liberty to cross-examine him [illegible] questions, to establish, if he can, his entire defence.(5) In America, however, on the other hand, the rule which prevails in most of the States is quite different and the cross-examination can only relate to facts and circumstances connected with the matter stated in the direct examination of the witness. If a party wishes to examine a witness as to other matters, he must do so by making the witness his own.(6)

A witness may be cross-examined as to all facts relevant to the issue and his answers thereon may be contradicted. He may also be cross-examined on all matters which affect his credit, but his answers thereon cannot, except in two cases, be contradicted.(7) A witness cannot, however, be cross-examined as to any collateral independent fact irrelevant to the matter in issue, for the purpose of contradicting him, if his answers be one way, by another witness, in order to discredit the whole of his testimony.(8) So where, as in the case last cited, defendant's Counsel cross-examined a witness as to the nature of a contract made by him with Mr. S. (such contract not being the matter in suit nor Mr S. a party thereto) intending if the witness gave an affirmative answer to his question to draw from thence a conclusion that he had made the same kind of contract with the defendant (which was suggested to be the fact), or if witness answered in the negative to call Mr. S., and then to prove the contrary and thereby destroy the witness's credit, it was held the question could not be put

Whether the right to cross-examine survives if the cross-examiner afterwards calls his opponent's witness to prove his own case, seems in England doubtful. But the better opinion is that it does not, and that the witness cannot be asked leading questions on his second examination, while he may afterwards be cross-examined by the party who originally called him.(9) This last opinion appears to have been adopted by this Act. The party who calls a witness—apparently at any stage of the case—examines him in chief. Such examination would naturally be directed to the support of his own case, upon which the adverse party would then have a right to cross-examine. If the

(1) Ante, p. 482.
(2) Best, Ev., § 263
(3) S 138, the same rule prevailed prior to this Act, R v Ishan Dutt, 6 B L R, App, 88 (1871), s c, 15 W R, Cr 341.
(4) Amrita Lal Hazra v R, 42 C., 957 (1915)
(5) Mayor v Murray, 19 L. J., Ch, 281, Taylor, Ev, § 1432, Steph. Dig., Art 127. The rule prevails though the proof is of a merely formal character: Morgan v Brydges, 2 Stark, 314
(6) Burr. Jones, Ev, § 1803
(7) S. 153, post.
(8) Spencely v. De Willott, 7 East., 108: in other words, no such question can be put for the mere purpose of impeaching the witness's credit by contradicting him. Taylor Ev, § 1435
(9) Taylor, Ev., § 1433.

adverse party again called the same witness, he could clearly only examine him in chief (1)

Leading questions may be put in cross-examination.(2) As to evidence regarding matters in writing(3), cross-examination as to previous statements evidence on his own behalf to meet the evidence which such cross-examination may have brought forward He is also entitled himself to examine the witnesses who can give evidence in support of his case, in order that he may bring out the necessary information as fully as he thinks possible, and in the form which he considers most favourable to himself. It follows that evidence given when the party never had the opportunity either to cross-examine, as the case may be, or to rebut by fresh evidence, is not legally admissible as evidence for or against him, unless he consents that it should be so used.(6) When a case decided ex parte in the absence of the defendant, who had thus no opportunity of cross-examining the plaintiff's witnesses, was re-admitted to the file and to a had applied for leave to postpone cross-examination till the next day, on the ground that he had been unprepared for the evidence given and was not in a position tc witnesses

the postp reasonable and that the accused had been prejudiced by its refusal, and a new trial was ordered ( his evidence will witness has been party has a right, if the examination-in-chief is waived or if the Counsel changes his mind and asks no questions, to cross-examine him (10) Where a witness called by one of the parties is a competent witness, the opposite party has a right to cross-examine him, though the party calling him has declined to ask a single question.(11)

Examination of a witness by mistake does not give the other side a right to cross-examine So where the plaintiff's Counsel called "Captain S" and Captain Hugh S answered and was sworn, and the plaintiff's Counsel, after asking him a few questions, ascertained that it was Captain Francis S whom they meant to examine, this was held not to give the other side a right to cross-examine Captain Hugh S, as he was only examined by mistake (12) A witness called merely to produce a document under a subpœna duces tecum, need not be

(1) Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 447
(2) S 143
(3) S 144
(4) S 145
(5) Ss 146—153
(6) Gorachand Sircar v Ram Narain 9 W R, 587, 588 (1868), per Phear, J, and see Radha Jeebun v Taramonee Dossee, 12 Moo I A, 380 (1869)
(7) Ram Baks v Kisori Mohan 3 B L R, A C, 273 (1869)
(8) Sadasiv Singh v R 41 C 299 (1914)
(9) Taylor, Ev, § 1469 Phipson, Ev 5th Ed, 471 and cases there cited
(10) R v Brooke, 2 Stark R, 472, Phillips v Gomes, 1 Esp, 357, L T, March 15 (1890), per Stephen, J, as to liability to cross-examination where an affidavit has been filed and withdrawn see Re Quartz Hill Co, Ex-parte Young, 21 Ch D, 64
(11) R v Ishan Dutt, 15 W R Cr 34 (1871)
(12) Clifford v Hunter, 3 C & P, 16 and see Rush v Smith 16 M & R, 94, Wood v Mackinnon, 2 M & R, 273; Reed v James, 1 Stark, 132

sworn if the document either requires no proof, or is to be proved by other means; and if not sworn he cannot be cross-examined.(1) Witnesses to character may be cross-examined.(2) As a rule, the proper and convenient time for th ses for the prosecution is at the but it is in the discretion of the and cross-examine the witnesses for the prosecution at any period of defence, when the Court thinks that such a step has been held by the edure Code cannot be tive on a Magistrate, the accused to cross-examine the prosecution witnesses and to call witnesses in his own defence; and that when the accused did not cross-examine the prosecution witnesses immediately, but applied for leave to examine them, after the close of the case for the prosecution, and to call witnesses, the Magistrate was justified in refusing the application and committing the case.(4) Though a Magistrate is bound to examine all witnesses produced by the accused before commitment(5), he is not obliged to postpone it till he has examined those whom accused is prepared to produce after process for their appearance (6) As to cross-examination by co-accused and co-defendants, v. post, p. 952.

A witness ought to be allowed on cross-examination to qualify or correct any statement which he has made in his examination-in-chief.(7) A witness is not always compellable to answer tion(8); and though he may be contr
the issue he cannot [except in the ca so contradicted on matters relevant n credit may be impeached either by pendent testimony to prove the facts mentioned in section 155, post.(11) Cross-examination is notice to the opposite party of the line of defence adopted and will therefore in some cases prevent evidence being given in reply.(12) The decisions on the question whether or not a party is entitled to see a document which has been shown to one of his witnesses while under cross-examination by ole, however, the practice see putting a paper into the har to its general nature or identity, his adversary will have no right to see the document; but that if the paper be used for the purpose of refreshing the memory of the witness, or if any

(1) S. 139, post. It has been held in England, that a witness whose examination has been stopped by the Judge before any material question has been put is not liable to cross-examination, Creevy v. Carr, 7 C & P, 64

(2) S 140, post

(3) Khurrukdharee Singh v. Proshadee Mundul, 22 W R, Cr., 44 (1874); see Cr. Pr Code, ss. 356, 257. In re Thakoor Dyal, 17 W. R, Cr., 51 (1872); R. v. Ram Kishan, 25 W R, Cr, 48 (1876); Talluri Venkayya v R, 4 M., 130 (1881); R. v. Baldeo Sahai, 2 A., 253 (1879); Faiz Ali v. Koromdi, 7 C., 28 (1881), 8 C. L. R, 325

(4) Phanindra Nath Mitter v. R. (1908), 36 C., 48; following in re Clive Durant, 1898, Ratanlal's Unrep. Cr. Ca, p 975; dissenting from R. v. Ahmad (1898); 20 A, 264; and R v. Muhammad Hadi (1903), 26 A, 177; and distinguishing R. v Sagal Samba, 1893, 21 C., 643

(5) Jabbar Shaik v Tamiz Shaik, 39 C, 931 (1912).

(6) R. v Surath, 42 C, 608 (1915)

(7) R v. Tulsi Dosadh, 18 W. R, 57 (1872).

(8) Ss. 147, 148, post

(9) See s 153, post, and see also s 155, cl (2).

(10) See s 146, post.

(11) In this Act the term "impeaching credit" is confined to the latter of these modes The English and American writers often use the term in a wider sense. It is obvious that a witness's character may often be successfully impeached by cross-examination without recourse to independent testimony under the provisions of s 155

(12) Wharton v. Lewis, 1 C. & P, 529; v. ante, pp. 890—891.

questions be put respecting its contents, or as to the handwriting in which it is written, a sight of it may then be demanded by the opposite Counsel.(1)

Length of cross-examination.

Cross-examination may be, and in this country, not unfrequently is inordinately long (2) Where the Court is satisfied that the cross-examination of any witness on commission is being unnecessarily prolonged, it will order such cross-examination to be concluded within a certain time.(3)

As to this Professor Wigmore remarks :—

Intimidating cross-examination.

"An intimidating manner in putting questions may so coerce or disconcert the witness that his answers do not represent his actual knowledge on the subject. So also questions which in form or subject cause shame or anger in the witness may unfairly lead him to such demeanour and utterance that the impression produced by his statements does not do justice to his real testimonial value. These are two of the notorious abuses of cross-examination, and always have been, both in the early period when it was still chiefly used by Judges ... ago ... ction ... Ch.

"The remedy for such an abuse is in the hands of the Judges. The dis-...

... tender quiddities of the law that favour guilty persons,—such as the rules for confessions and the privilege against self-crimination. For the probably guilty ... for the ... here is ... udges, ...), and ... ng the ... whole probably less to-day than they formerly were; but they are in many places still not uncommon. They are too frequent when they occur at all. The just denunciations of high-minded Judges have sometimes stigmatized these practices as they deserve(4); and there can be no doubt that the law sanctions the power and establishes the duty of the trial Judge to use a proper discretion to prevent and rebuke them "(5)

Mr. W. D. Evans, in his Notes on the French Jurist Pothier, says :—

"The abuses to which this procedure is liable are the subject of very frequent complaint, but it would be absolutely impossible, by any but general rules, to apply a preventive to these abuses without destroying the liberty upon which the benefits above adverted to essentially depend; and all that can be

(1) Taylor, Ev, § 1452, and cases there cited, where the document is used to refresh memory, see s 161, post. The right should be exercised before or at the moment the witness uses the document In re Jhubboo Mahton, 8 C, 739, 744 (1882)

(2) See as to such cross-examination, Golden River Mining Co. v Buxton Mining Co, 97 Fed Rep, 414 (Amer), cited in 4 C W N, cxxi

(3) Suraj Prasad v Standard Life Insurance Co, 30 C., 625 (1903).

(4) Mr Baron Alderson once remarked to a Counsel of this 'Mr ——, you seem to think that the art of cross-examination is to examine crossly' (Sergeant Ballantine's Experiences, 105)

(5) Wigmore, Ev, § 781, referring also to "Cross-examination—A Socratic Dialogue" by E Manson (8 Law Quart Rev, 160), and Smolett's letter of rebuke to a Counsel who had wantonly abused him. (Foss' Mementos of Westminster Hall, I, 235) effected by the interposition of the Court is a discouragement of any virulence towards the witnesses which is not justified by the nature of the cause, and a sedulous attention to remove from the minds of the jury the impressions which are rather to be imputed to the vehemence of the advocate than to the prevarication of the witness. Whatever can elicit the actual dispositions of the witness with respect to the event,—whatever can detect the operation of a concerted plan of testimony, or bring into light the incidental facts and circumstances that the witness may be supposed to have suppressed,—in short, whatever may be expected fairly to promote the real manifestation of the merits of the cause, is not only justifiable but meritorious. But I conceive that a client has no right to expect from his Counsel an endeavour to assist his cause, or what is a more frequent object, to gratify his passions, by unmerited abuse, by embarrassing or intimidating witnesses of whose veracity he has no real suspicion, or by conveying an impression of discredit which he does not actually feel; and that where such expectations are intimated, there is an imperious duty upon the advocate, who, while the protector of private right, is also the minister of public justice, which requires them to be repelled. Considering the subject merely as a matter of direction, the adoption of an unfair conduct in cross-examination has often an effect repugnant to the interest which it professes to promote ....But, however unfavourable an injudicious asperity of cross-examination [illegible] is congenial to the [illegible] st [illegible] rs [illegible] of professional success."(1)

On the same point Bentham remarks:—

"[illegible] ression of which witnesses [illegible] ate objects) a practice is [illegible] too general to be likely to [illegible] s a particular propensity [illegible] oon that side of the cause [illegible] because the more clearly [illegible] assistance as it is in the [illegible] t....Brow-beating is that sort of offence which never can be committed by any advocate who has not the Judge for his accomplice....Rule 1. Every expression of reproach, as if for established mendacity: every such manifestation, however expressed—by language, gesture, countenance, tone of voice (especially at the outset of the examination)—ought to be abstained from by the examining advocate. If the tendency of such style of address were to promote the extraction of material truth, at the same time that the action of it could not be supplied to equal effect by any other plan of examination,—the vexation thus produced (how sharp soever) not being of any considerable duration, the liberty might be allowed, with preponderant advantage for the furtherance of justice. But, on a close investigation, no advantage, but rather a disadvantage, even in respect of furtherance of justice, seems to be the natural result of an assumption of this kind. ....By reproachful and terrifying demeanour on the part of a person invested with, and acting under, an authority thus formidable, it seems full as natural that an honest witness should be confounded, and thus deprived of recollection and due utterance, and even (through confusion of mind) betrayed into self-contradiction and involuntary falsehood, as that a dishonest witness should be detected and exposed. The quiet mode above described is not in any degree

(1) W. D. Evans in his Notes to Pothier ii, 229 (1806), as regards, however, the last observation the date of it is to be observed, and it has not the same truth at the present day.

susceptible of this sort of abuse: the outrageous mode seems more likely to terminate in the abuse than in the use....Rule 2. Such unwarranted manifestations if not abstained from by the advocate, ought to be checked, with marks of disapprobation, by the Judge. In the presence of the Judge, any misbehaviour, which, being witnessed at the time by the Judge, is regarded by him without censure, becomes in effect the act, the misbehaviour, of the Judge. On him more particularly should the reproach of it lie; because for the connivance (which is in effect the authorization) of it, he cannot ever possess any of those excuses, which may ever and anon present themselves on the part of the advocate. The demand for the honest vigilance and occasional interference of the Judge will appear the stronger when due consideration is had of the strength of the temptation, to which on this occasion, the probity of the advocate is exposed. Sinister interests in considerable variety concur in instigating him to this improper practice ....Rule 3. When on the false supposition of a disposition to mendacity, an honest witness has been treated accordingly by the cross-examining advocate (the Judge having suffered the examination to be conducted in that manner for the sake of truth)—at the close of which lled, ards ising

and
the

provocation, I remember now and then to have observed the witness turn upon the advocate in the way of retaliation. On an occasion of this sort, I have also now and then observed the Judge to interpose, for the purpose of applying a check to the petulance of the witness. For one occasion in which, under the spur of the injury, the injured witness has presented himself to my conception as overstepping the limits of a just defence,—ten, twenty or twice twenty, have occurred, in which the witness has been suffering, without resistance and without remedy, as well as without just cause, under the torture inflicted on him by the oppression and insolence of an adverse advocate. Scarcely ever, I think had I the satisfaction of observing the Judge interpose to afford his protection to the witness, either at the commencement of the persecution, for the purpose of staying or alleviating the injury, or at the conclusion, for the purpose of affording satisfaction for it,—such inadequate satisfaction as the nature of the case admits of."(1)

Lord Langdale, M R, said in Johnstone v. Tod(2): "Witnesses, and particularly illiterate witnesses, must always be liable to give imperfect or erroneous evidence, even when orally examined in open Court. The novelty of the situation, the agitation and hurry which accompanies it, the cajolery or intimidation to which the witness may be subjected, the want of questions calculated to excite those recollections which might clear up every difficulty, and the confusion occasioned by cross-examination, as it is too often conducted, may give rise to important errors and omissions"

Lowrie, J, in Elliott v. Boyles(3) said "It is entirely natural that in the public trial of causes the earnestness of Counsel should often become unduly intense, and it is not possible to prevent this without such an attribution and exercise of power as would be entirely inconsistent with the freedom of thought that is necessary to all thorough investigation. The remedy for it is to be found in inner rather than in outer discipline. Those who are zealously seeking the truth cannot always be watchful to measure their demeanour and expressions in accordance with the feelings or even with the rights of others This zeal, even

(1) Jeremy Bentham, Rationale of Judicial Evidence, B II, c IX, B III, c 5

(2) 5 Beav., 601 (1843).

(3) 31 Pa, 66 (Amer), (1857), cited in Wigmore, p 876.

when inordinate, must be excused, because it is necessary in the search of truth; and generally it is not possible to con until its fault has been proved by the disc direction; and possibly its very excess may
When the presiding Judge is respected and prudent, a hint kindly given is generally all that is needed to restrain such ardour, when it does not arise in any degree from habitual want of respect for the rights of others and for the order of public business. Witnesses often suffer very unjustly from this undue earnestness of Counsel, and they are entitled to the watchful protection of the Court. In the Court they stand as strangers, surrounded with unfamiliar circumstances giving rise to an embarrassment known only to themselves; and in mere generosity and common humanity they are entitled to be treated, by those accustomed to suc manifest that the and jury, and all unfair treatment of them, and the cause that adopts such treatment is very apt to suffer by it. It is only where weakness sits in judgment that it can benefit any cause. Add to this that a mind rudely assailed naturally shuts itself against its assailant, and reluctantly communicates the truths that it possesses."

Insulting and other observations on the evidence.

"There is another matter connected with cross-examination, in which there is no room or doubt as to the duty of Counsel and as to the duty incumbent upon Judges to enforce that duty stringently. The legitimate object of cross-examination is to bring to light relevant matters of act which would otherwise pass unnoticed. It is not unfrequently converted into an occasion for the display of wit and for obliquely insulting witnesses. It is not uncommon to put a question in a form which is in itself an insult, or to prepare a question or receive an answer with an insulting observation. This naturally provokes retorts, and cross-examination so conducted ceases to fulfil its legitimate purpose, and becomes a trial of wit and presence of mind which may amuse the audience, but is inconsistent with the dignity of a Court of Justice and unfavourable to the object of ascertaining the truth. When such a scene takes place the Judge is the person principally to blame. He has a right on all occasions to exercise
... of preventing examinations
Ings' Trial(2)
(1820) Mr. Adolphus cross-examining an alleged accomplice: "I think you told us some things then (Monday, at another trial for the same plot) that did not come to your recollection to-day? A. "That may be. I will not pretend to say, that the next time I come up here I can communicate as I have done to-day." Q. "Certainly not; there are people that proverbially ought to have a good memory?" A. "Yes, certainly." Q "You make your evidence a little longer or shorter, according as the occasion suits?" A. "Yes, I mention the circumstances as they come to my recollection." . . . Mr Gurney: "That is observation, and not question" Mr. Adolphus: "I am asking him a question." L. C. J. Dallas: "You should not now observe on the evidence." Mr. Adolphus: "This about the digging entrenchment you did not state on Monday?" A. "No, I forgot that." Q. "The next time there will be a new story?" Mr. Gurney: "I must interpose, my lord" L. C. J. Dallas: "All these observations are certainly incorrect." Mr. Adolphus: "He has said it himself; 'when next I come into the box, I shall recollect other things,' and upon that I put the question, whether he would tell another story the next time he comes" L. C. J. Dallas: "Ask him the question if you wish it." Mr. Adolphus: "Shall you tell us a new story the next time?" A.

(1) Stephen's History of the Criminal Law of England, vol. 1, pp 435, 436. See as to offensive questions, s. 152, post.
(2) 33 How. St C., 957, 999 (1820)

"No. If anything new occurs to my mind when I come to stand here, I will state it."

In Hardy's Trial(1), Mr. Erskine, cross-examining a witness to the proceedings of an alleged seditious meeting: "Then you were never at any of [illegible] all it so, I will take [illegible] choose for yourself, [illegible] be no name given to a witness on his examination. He states what he went for, and in making observations on the evidence, you may give it any appellation you please." After a repetition of the practice, Mr. Gibbs: "I am sorry to interrupt you, but your questions ought not to be accompanied with those sorts of comments: they are the proper subjects of observation when the defence is made. The business of a cross-examination is to use all sorts of arts to prove a witness as closely you can; but it is not the object of a cross-examination to introduce that kind of periphrasis as you have just done" Mr. Erskine "But, on a cross-examination, Counsel are not called upon to be so exact as in an original examination; you are permitted to lead a witness;" L. C. J Eyre: I think, it is so clear that the questions that are put are not to be loaded with all the observations that arise upon all the previous parts of the case; they tend so to distract the attention of everybody, they load us in point of time so much, and that that is not the time for observation upon the character and situation of a witness is so apparent that as a rule of evidence it ought never to be departed from."

"It is an established rule, as regards cross-examination that a Counsel has no right, even in order to detect or catch a witness in a falsity, falsely to assume or pretend that the witness had previously sworn or stated differently to the fact, or that a matter had previously been proved when it had not Indeed, if such attempts were tolerated, the English Bar would soon be debased below the most inferior of society."(2)

Question which mislead or assume facts not proved.

A question which assumes a fact that may be in controversy is leading, when put on direct examination because it affords the willing witness a suggestion of a fact which he might otherwise not have stated to the same effect. Similarly, such a question may become improper on cross-examination, because it may by implication put into the mouth of an unwilling witness a statement which he never intended to make, and thus incorrectly attribute to him testimony which is not his (3)

In the Parnell Commission's Proceeding(4), the "Times" having charged the Irish Land League with complicity in crime and outrage, a constable testifying to outrages was cross-examined by the opponents as to his partisan employment by the "Times" in procuring its evidence: Mr Lockwood "How long have you been engaged in getting up the case for the 'Times?'" Sir H. James: "What I object to is that Mr Lockwood, without having any foundation for it, should ask the witness 'How long have you been engaged in getting up the case for the Times'" Mr. Lockwood "I will not argue with my learned friend as to the exact form of the question, but I submit that it is perfectly proper and regular. If the man has not been engaged in getting up the case for the 'Times' he can say so" Sir H. James "I submit that my learned friend has no right to put this question without foundation. Counsel has no right to say 'When did you murder A B?' unless there is some foundation for the question. In this same way he has no right to ask 'How long have you been engaged in getting up this case?' for it assumes the fact" President Hannen: "I do not consider that Mr Lockwood was entitled to put the question in that form and to assume that the witness has been employed by the Times"

(1) 24 How St. Tr, 754 (1794)

(2) Joseph Chitty, Practice of the Law, 2nd Ed, iii, 901

(3) Wigmore, Ev, § 780

(4) 19th Day, Times Rep, pt 5, p 221

when inordinate, must be excused, because it is necessary in the search of truth; and generally it is not possible to condemn it as misguided or excessive until its fault has been proved by the discovery of the truth in the opposite direction; and possibly its very excess may have contributed to the discovery. When the presiding Judge is respected and prudent, a hint kindly given is generally all that is needed to restrain such ardour, when it does not arise in any degree from habitual want of respect for the rights of others and for the order of public business. Witnesses often suffer very unjustly from this undue earnestness of Counsel, and they are entitled to the watchful protection of the Court. In the Court they stand as strangers, surrounded with unfamiliar circumstances giving rise to an embarrassment known only to themselves; and in mere generosity and common humanity they are entitled to be treated, by those accustomed to such [illegible] becomes manifest that the[illegible]rt and jury, and all [illegible]d unfair treatment of them, and the cause that adopts such treatment is very apt to suffer by it. It is only where weakness sits in judgment that it can benefit any cause. Add to this that a mind rudely assailed naturally shuts itself against its assailant, and reluctantly communicates the truths that it possesses."

Insulting and other observations on the evidence.

"There is another matter connected with cross-examination, in which there is no room or doubt as to the duty of Counsel and as to the duty incumbent upon Judges to enforce that duty stringently. The legitimate object of cross-examination is to bring to light relevant matters of act which would otherwise pass unnoticed. It is not unfrequently converted into an occasion for the display of wit, and for obliquely insulting witnesses. It is not uncommon to put a question in a form which is in itself an insult, or to prepare a question or receive an answer with an insulting observation. This naturally provokes retorts, and cross-examination so conducted ceases to fulfil its legitimate purpose, and becomes a trial of wit and presence of mind which may amuse the audience, but is inconsistent with the dignity of a Court of Justice and unfavourable to the object of ascertaining the truth. When such a scene takes place the Judge is the person principally to blame. He has a right on all occasions to exercise the power of reproving observations which are not questions at all, of preventing questions from being put in an improper form, and of stopping examinations which are not necessary for any legitimate purpose."(1) In Ings' Trial(2) (1820) Mr. Adolphus cross-examining an alleged accomplice: "I think you told us some things then (Monday, at another trial for the same plot) that did not come to your recollection to-day?" A. "That may be. I will not pretend to say, that the next time I come up here I can communicate as I have done to-day." Q. "Certainly not; there are people that proverbially ought to have a good memory?" A. "Yes, certainly." Q. "You make your evidence a little longer or shorter, according as the occasion suits?" A. "Yes, I mention the circumstances as they come to my recollection." Mr. Gurney: "That is observation, and not question." Mr. Adolphus: "I am asking him a question." L. C. J. Dallas: "You should not now observe on the evidence." Mr. Adolphus: "This about the digging entrenchment you did not state on Monday?" A. "No, I forgot that." Q. "The next time there will be a new story?" Mr. Gurney: "I must interpose, my lord." L. C. J. Dallas: "All these observations are certainly incorrect." Mr. Adolphus: "He has said it himself; 'when next I come into the box, I shall recollect other things,' and upon that I put the question, whether he would tell another story the next time he comes." L. C. J. Dallas: "Ask him the question if you wish it." Mr. Adolphus: "Shall you tell us a new story the next time?" A.

(1) Stephen's History of the Criminal Law of England, vol. 1, pp. 435, 436. See as to offensive questions, s. 152, post.

(2) 33 How. St. C., 957, 999 (1820).

"No. If anything new occurs to my mind when I come to stand here, I will state it."

In Hardy's Trial(1), Mr. Erskine, cross-examining a witness to the proceedings of an alleged seditious meeting: "Then you were never at any of those meetings but in the character of a spy?"—"As you call it so, I will take it so." "If you were not there as a spy, take any title you choose for yourself, and I will give you that." L. C. J. Eyre: "There should be no name given to a witness on his examination. He states what he went for, and in making observations on the evidence, you may give it any appellation you please." After a repetition of the practice, Mr. Gibbs: "I am sorry to interrupt you, but your questions ought not to be accompanied with those sorts of comments: they are the proper subjects of observation when the defence is made. The business of a cross-examination is to use all sorts of arts to prove a witness as closely you can; but it is not the object of a cross-examination to introduce that kind of periphrasis as you have just done." Mr. Erskine: "But, on a cross-examination, Counsel are not called upon to be so exact as in an original examination; you are permitted to lead a witness;" L. C. J. Eyre: I think, it is so clear that the questions that are put are not to be loaded with all the observations that arise upon all the previous parts of the case; they tend so to distract the attention of everybody, they load us in point of time so much; and that that is not the time for observation upon the character and situation of a witness is so apparent that as a rule of evidence it ought never to be departed from."

"It is an established rule, as regards cross-examination that a Counsel has no right, even in order to detect or catch a witness in a falsity, falsely to assume or pretend that the witness had previously sworn or stated differently to the fact, or that a matter had previously been proved when it had not. Indeed, if such attempts were tolerated, the English Bar would soon be debased below the most inferior of society."(2) Questions which mislead or assume facts not proved

A question which assumes a fact that may be in controversy is leading, when put on direct examination because it affords the willing witness a suggestion of a fact which he might otherwise not have stated to the same effect. Similarly, such a question may become improper on cross-examination, because it may by implication put into the mouth of an unwilling witness a statement which he never intended to make, and thus incorrectly attribute to him testimony which is not his.(3)

In the Parnell Commission's Proceeding(4), the "Times" having charged the Irish Land League with complicity in crime and outrage, a constable testifying to outrages was cross-examined by the opponents as to his partisan employment by the "Times" in procuring its evidence. Mr Lockwood: 'How long have you been engaged in getting up the case for the 'Times?'" Sir H. James: "What I object to is that Mr. Lockwood, without having any foundation for it, should ask the witness 'How long have you been engaged in getting up the case for the Times'" Mr. Lockwood: "I will not argue with my learned friend as to the exact form of the question, but I submit that it is perfectly proper and regular. If the man has not been engaged in getting up the case for the 'Times' he can say so" Sir H James: "I submit that my learned friend has no right to put this question without foundation. Counsel has no right to say 'When did you murder A. B.?' unless there is some foundation for the question. In this same way he has no right to ask 'How long have you been engaged in getting up this case?' for it assumes the fact" President Hannen: "I do not consider that Mr. Lockwood was entitled to put the question in that form and to assume that the witness has been employed by the Times"

(1) 24 How St. Tr, 754 (1794)

(2) Joseph Chitty, Practice of the Law, 2nd Ed., iii, 901.

(3) Wigmore, Ev., § 780

(4) 19th Day, Times Rep., pt. 5, p. 221.

Co-defendants, Co-accused

The Evidence Act gives a right to cross-examine witnesses called by the adverse party.(1) One accused person therefore may cross-examine a witness called by another co-accused for his defence when the case of the second accused is adverse to that of the first.(2) The section does not make special provision for the case of cross-examination by co-accused or co-defendants. It is, however, well settled that the evidence of one party cannot be received as evidence against another party unless the latter has had an opportunity of testing it by cross-examination.(3) It has been further held that all evidence taken, whether in examination-in-chief or cross-examination, is common and open to all the parties.(4) It follows that if all evidence is common and that which is given by one party may be used for or against another party, the latter must have the right to cross-examine. The right therefore of a defendant (and à fortiori an accused) to cross-examine a co-defendant or co-accused is, according to the English cases, unconditional and not dependant upon the fact that the cases of the accused and co-accused are adverse, or that there is an issue between the defendant and his co-defendant.(5) If a defendant may cross-examine a co-defendant's witnesses, à fortiori he may cross-examine his co-defendant if he gives evidence (6)

Re-examination

The party who called the witness may, if he like, and if it be necessary, re-examine him. The re-examination must be confined to the explanation of matters arising in cross-examination. "The proper office of re-examination (which is often inartistically used as a sort of summary of all the things adverse to the cross-examining Counsel which may have been said by a witness during cross- ... may be proper for that purpose, ... ning of the expressions used by th ... themselves doubtful; and also of the motive or provocation which induced the witness to use those expressions; but, a re-examination may not go further and introduce matter new in itself and not suited to the purpose of explaining either the expressions or the motives of the witness."(7) So if the witness has admitted having made a former inconsistent statement, he may in re-examination explain his motives for so doing.(8) Even if inadmissible matters are introduced, the right to re-examine upon them remains.(9) But, as observed, new facts or matters which are not properly explanatory cannot be introduced in re-examination. So where a certain conversation had been admitted in cross-examination, distinct matters occurring in the same conversation were not allowed to be proved in re-examinations which, although connected with the subject-matter of the suit were not connected with the assertions to which the cross-examination related.(10) If facts are called out on cross-examination which tend to impeach ... mination make ex- ... ness ... may

(1) Ram Chand v Hanif Shaikh, 21 C, 401 (1893), for the rule prior to the Act, see R. v Surroop Chunder, 12 W. R, Cr, 75 (1889), cited in the last case See R v Burditt, 6 Cox, 458, Lord v. Colvin, 3 Drew, 222, 225.

(2) Ram Chand v. Hanif Sheikh, 21 C, 401 (1893).

(3) Allen v Allen, L R. P D. (1894), 248, 254

(4) Lord v Colvin, 3 Drewery, 222

(5) Lord v Colvin, 3 Drewery, 222, followed in Allen v. Allen, supra; the only other alternative which is, however, hardly practicable, is to declare the evidence given not to be common to all the parties; see R. v. Surroop Chunder, 2 W. R, Cr, 75, supra

(6) Allen v Allen, supra, 254

(7) Taylor, Ev, § 1474; Greenleaf, Ev, 467.

(8) R. v. Woods, 1 Cr & D, 430. The Queen's case, 2 B. & B, 297.

(9) Blewett v Trepenning, 3 A & E, 554.

(10) Prince v Samo, 7 A. & E, 627; Burr. Jones, Ev, 876.

(11) Burr Jones, Ev, § 875. So where a witness had stated that he came from jail it was held proper for the party however, be introduced by permission of the Court, in which case the adverse party may further cross-examine upon the matter (1)

139. A person summoned to produce a document does not become a witness by the mere fact that he produces it, and cannot be cross-examined unless and until he is called as a witness. Cross-examination of person called to produce a document.

COMMENTARY.

Any person may be summoned to produce a document without being summoned to give evidence; and any person summoned merely to produce a document shall be deemed to have complied with the summons if he cause such document to be produced instead of attending personally to produce the same.(2) This section is in accordance with the English practice by which if the witness be called under a subpœna duces tecum merely for the purpose of producing a document, which either requires no proof or is to be identified by another witness, he need not be sworn, and, if unsworn, he cannot be cross-examined.(3) Cross-examination of person called to produce a document.

When a person called only to produce a document is sworn as a witness by a mistake, and a question is put to him, which he does not answer, the opposite party is not entitled to cross-examine him (4) In the case undermentioned(5), a witness was summoned to produce a document in Court in connection with a certain suit. He attended the Court, but did not produce the [illegible] his possession. But this statement [illegible] 75, under section 174 of the former [illegible] Held, that the fine was illegally levied. The jurisdiction of the Court to punish under section 174 of that Code existed only in the case of a witness, who not having attended on summons has been arrested and brought before the Court Under the corresponding provisions of the present Code of Civil Procedure (O. XIV, rr. 17, 18), the rules apply to any one who having attended in compliance with a summons departs without lawful excuse or refuses to produce a document (6)

The case of a witness who having a document will not produce it, is provided for by section 175 of the Indian Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860) and section 480 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act V of 1898) Where a witness denies on oath that he has the possession or means of producing a particular document, he can, if he has been guilty of falsehood, be prosecuted for giving false evidence in a judicial proceeding.

140. Witnesses to character may be cross-examined and re-examined. Witnesses to character

COMMENTARY.

According to English practice it is not usual to cross-examine, except under special circumstances, witnesses called merely to speak to the character of a prisoner; but there is no rule which forbids the cross-examination of such witnesses.(7) Witnesses to character calling him to ask on what charge he had been committed State v Ezell, 41 Tex, 35 (Amer)

---

(1) S 138 see Taylor, Ev § 1477

(2) Civ Pr Code, O XVI, r 6 Woodroffe and Amir Ali, 2nd Ed, p 829, Cr Pr Code, s 94

(3) Steph Dig, Art 126; Summers v Mosely, 2 Cr & M, 477, Perry v Gibson, 1 A & F, 84, Rush v Smith, 1 C M & R, 94, Taylor, Ev, § 1429 That the other side cannot insist upon the person called being sworn see Davis v Dale, M & M, 514, R v Murlis, id, 515, Evans v Mosely, 2 Dowl, P C, 364

(4) Rush v Smith, 1 C M & R 94

(5) In re Premchand Dowlatram 10 B 63 (1887)

(6) P 804—807

(7) Taylor, Ev, § 1429

Leading questions.

141. Any question suggesting the answer which the person putting it wishes or expects to receive is called a leading question.

When they must not be asked.

142. Leading questions must not, if objected to by the adverse party, be asked in an examination-in-chief or in re-examination, except with the permission of the Court.

The Court shall permit leading questions as to matters which are introductory or undisputed, or which have, in its opinion, been already sufficiently proved.

When they may be asked

143. Leading questions may be asked in cross-examination

Principle—Leading questions in examination or re-examination are generally improper, as the witness is presumed to be biassed in favour of the party examining him and might thus be prompted. In cross-examination as the reason generally ceases so does the rule. See notes post.

Taylor, Ev., §§ 1404, 1405; Greenleaf, Ev., § 434; Burr. Jones, 815; Best, Ev., §§ 641, 642, 643; Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed., 464, et seq; Norton, Ev., 325; Starkie, Ev., 167; Alison's Practice of the Criminal Law, 546; Wigmore, Ev., § 769, et seq

COMMENTARY.

Leading questions

"A question," says Bentham, "is a leading one, when it indicates to the witness the real or supposed fact which the examiner expects and desires to have confirmed by the answer. Is not your name so and so? Do you reside in such a place? Are you not in the service of such and such a person? Have you not lived so many years with him? It is clear that under this form every sort of information may be conveyed to the witness in disguise. It may be used to prepare him to give the desired answers to the questions about to be put to him; the examiner—while he pretends ignorance and is asking for information, is in reality giving instead of receiving it."(1) It has often been declared that a ques [illegible] ...aterial fact and admits of [illegible] true that a question [illegible] ing, there may be such questions which in no way suggest the answer desired and to which there is no real objection. On the other hand, leading questions are by no means limited to those which may be answered by 'Yes' or 'No'. A question proposed to a witness in the form whether or not, that is, in the alternative, is not necessarily leading. But it may be so, when proposed in that form, if it is so framed as to suggest to the witness the answer desired.(3) It would answer no practical purpose to cite the numerous decisions which determine whether particular questions are leading or not, as each case as it arises must be determi[illegible] ...icular circumstances and to [illegible] a question is leading which [illegible] ...ake, or which puts into his mouth words which he is to echo back. "Leading" is a relative not an absolute term. There is no such thing as "leading" in the abstract—for the identical form of question which would be leading of the grossest kind in one case or

(1) Bentham's Rationale of Judicial Evidence. Thus also a witness called to prove that A stole a watch from B's shop, must not be asked, "Did you see A enter B's shop and take a watch? The proper inquiry is, What he saw A do at the time and place in question; Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed., 464 "A question shall not be so propounded to a witness as to indicate the answer desired." per McLean, J., in U. S v. Dickinson, 2 McLean, 331 (Amer)

(2) See Taylor, Ev, § 1401, Greenleaf, Ev., § 434.

(3) Burr. Jones, Ev, § 815; Best, Ev., § 641.

state of facts, might be not only unobjectionable, but the very fittest mode of interrogation in another.(1) If a question merely suggests a subject which suggests an answer or a specific thing it is not leading. A question is proper which merely directs the attention of the witness to the subject respecting which he is questioned.(2) It follows from the broad and flexible character of the controlling principle that its application is to be left to the discretion of the trial Court.(3) Evidence improperly obtained by leading questions without first declaring the witness hostile should not be considered (4)

In examination-in-chief and re-examination.

Leading questions are here generally improper because a witness is presumed to be biassed in favour of the party calling him, who, knowing exactly what the former can prove, might prompt him to give only favourable answers. Such evidence would obviously be open to suspicion as being rather the pre-arranged version of the party than the spontaneous narrative of the witness.(5) The section says "if not objected to by the adverse party" In practice, leading questions are often allowed to pass without objection, sometimes by express and sometimes by tacit, consent. This latter occurs where the questions relate to matters which, though strictly speaking in issue, the examiner is aware are not meant to be contested by the other side; or where the opposing Counsel does not think it worth his while to object. On the other hand, however, very unfounded objections are constantly taken on this ground.(6) If the objection is not taken at the time, the answer will have been taken down in the the objection is advisedly not taken) it is only through want of practical skill that the omission occurs. At the same time it is to be observed that if evidence is elicited by a series of leading questions unobjected to, the effect of evidence so obtained is very much weakened. It is advisable, therefore (except where permissible) not to put such questions, whether it be likely that objection be taken to them or not.(7) The proper way to exclude evidence obtained by leadi an in may answ

case where the Judge caused part of the interrogatory and part of the answer to be suppressed, and the remainder, which appeared not affected by the context to be read in evidence, was held to be correct.

As, however, the rule is merely intended to prevent the examination from being conducted unfairly(10), the rule is subject to three specific exceptions mentioned in this section and in section 154 These exceptions are :—

(1) Best, Ev., § 641

(2) Ib., Nicholls v Dowling, 1 Stark R., 81. "It is necessary to some extent to lead the mind of the witness to the subject of the enquiry." per Lord Ellenborough

(3) Wigmore Ev., § 770

(4) Jagdeo v. Emp., 24 Cr L J, 69 (1922)

(5) Phipson Ev 5th Ed., 464, citing Best, Ev., 641

(6) Best, Ev § 641 v post

(7) Norton Ev., 325 It is often useful, in place of pressing the objection or when the objection is overruled, to ask that the question appears upon the notes when the value of the answer will become apparent to the Appellate Court before which the case may again come for trial

(8) Tukeya Rai v Tupsee Koer 15 W R., Cr., 23, 24 (1871), see observations in R v Bishonath, 12 W R., Cr., 3 (1869), a witness when under examination-in-chief before the Court of Session should not have his attention directed to his deposition before the Magistrate. R v Ram Chunder, 13 W R., Cr 18 (1870)

(9) Small v Naire, 13 Q B 840 (1849)

(10) See R v Abdullah, 7 A 385 397 (1885) "The objection to leading questions is not that they are absolutely illegal, but only that they are unfair" per Petheram C J

(1) Introductory and undisputed or sufficiently established matter—The rule must be enforced in a reasonable sense, and must therefore not be applied to that part of the examination which is introductory to that which is material If indeed it were not allowed to appraoch the points at issue by leading questions, examinations would be most inconveniently protracted. To abridge the proceedings and bring the witness as soon as possible to the material point on which he is to speak, the examiner may lead him on to that point and may recapitulate to him the acknowledged facts of the case which have been already established (1)

(2) Adverse witness.—A witness who proves to be adverse to the party calling him may in the discretion of the Court be led, or rather, cross-examined (2)

(3) Leading questions may be asked with the permission of the Court (3)—The Court has a wide discretion with reference to this, which is not controllable by the Court of Appeal(4) ; and the Judge will always relax the rule whenever he considers it necessary in the interests of justice, and it is always relaxed in the following cases :—

(a) Identification.—For this purpose a witness may be directed to look at a particular person and say whether he is the man. Indeed, wherever from the nature of the case the mind of the witness cannot be directed to the subject of enquiry without a particular specification of it, questions may be put in a leading form.(5) Much, however, depends upon the circumstances of each particular case ; and it is often advisable not to lead even where permissible. Thus in a criminal trial, where the question turns on identity although it would be perfectly regular to point to the accused, and ask a witness if that is the person to whom his evidence relates, yet if the witness can unassisted single out the accused, his testimony will have more weight.(6)

(b) Contradiction.—Where one witness is called to contradict another as to the expressions used by the latter, but which he denies having used, he may be asked directly : " Did the other witness use such and such expressions ? " The authorities are, however, stated to be not quite agreed as to the reason of this exception ; and some contend that the memory of the second witness ought first to be exhausted by his being asked what the other said on the occasion in question.(7) So a leading question may be put when it is necessary to contradict a witness on the other side as to the contents of a paper which has been destroyed.(8) The case last cited was an action on a policy of insurance of goods on board of a ship. The defence was that the goods were not lost, and that the plaintiff himself had written a letter to his son stating that he had disposed of all his goods at a profit of 30 per cent. The son was called and cross-examined as to the contents of the letter. He swore it was lost, but it contained no intimation of the kind supposed, and only said that plaintiff might have disposed of his goods at a great profit as he had been offered 8s. for a pair of cotton stockings he then wore. To contradict his testimony several witnesses were produced to whom the letter had been read when received in London. One of these, having stated all that he recollected of it, was asked " if it contained anything about the plaintiff having been offered 8s. for a pair of cotton stockings " This being objected to as a leading question, Lord Ellenborough ruled, that after [illegible] witness's memory as to the contents of the letter, he might be [illegible] passage recited to him which has been sworn [illegible] t would be impossible ever to come to a direct contradiction.

(1) Taylor, Ev., § 1904, s 142

(2) S. 154, post, Best, Ev , § 642 See Amrita Lal Hazra v. R., 42 C., 957 (1915)

(3) S 142

(4) Taylor, Ev , § 1405.

(5) Ib.

(6) Best, Ev , § 643; Field, Ev , 6th Ed., 451.

(7) Best, Ev , § 642.

(8) Curteen v. Touse, 1 Camp , 42

(c) Defective memory.—The rule will be relaxed where the inability of a witness to answer questions put in the regular way obviously arises from defective memory.(1) It is common practice, when a witness cannot recollect a circumstance, to refresh his recollection by a leading question, after the Court is satisfied that his memory has been exhausted by question framed in the ordinary manner.(2) So where a witness stated that he could not remember the names of the members of a firm so as to repeat them without suggestion, but thought that he might recognise them if read to him, this was allowed to be done.(3) A question is not objectionable which merely directs the attention of the witness to a particular topic without suggesting the [illegible] it [illegible] " [illegible] be- asked, " Was anything said about the Gazette ? "(4) Upon a similar principle the Court will sometimes allow a pointed or leading question to be put to a witness of tender years whose attention cannot otherwise be called to the matter under investigation (5)

(d) Complicated matters —The rule will also be relaxed where the inability of a witness to answer questions put in the regular way arises from the complicated nature of the matter as to which he is interrogated.(6)

The above instances are mentioned as those in which the rule is generally and commonly relaxed, but it will be remembered that the Court has a wide discretion to allow leading questions, not only in these but in any other cases in which justice or convenience requires that they should be put As already observed, very unfounded objections are constantly taken on this ground In the case undermentioned, in which it was held that primâ facie evidence of a partnership having been given, the declaration of one partner is evidence against another partner , a witness, called to prove that A and B were partners, was asked whether A had interfered in the business of B, and it was held not to be a leading question, Lord Ellenborough observing as follows —" I wish [illegible] which are made to questions as leading ones "(7)

As soon as the witness has been conducted to the material portion of his examination, as soon as the time and place of the scene of action have been fixed, " it is generally the easiest course to desire the witness to give his own account of the matter, making him omit, as he goes along, an account of what he had heard from others, which he always supposes to be quite as material as that which he himself has seen. If a vulgar, ignorant witness be not allowed to tell his story in his own way, he becomes embarrassed and confused, and mixes up distinct branches of his testimony. He always takes it for granted that the Court and the Jury know as much of the matter as he does himself, because it has been the common topic of conversation in his own neighbourhood , and, therefore his attention cannot easily be drawn so as to answer particular questions, without putting them in the most direct form. It is difficult, therefore, to extract the important parts of his evidence piecemeal ; but if his attention be first drawn to the transaction by asking him when and where it happened, and he be told to describe it from the beginning, he will generally proceed in his own way to detail all the facts in the order of time (8)" So also Mr

(1) Best, Ev , § 642
(2) Norton, Ev , 325
(3) Acerra v Petroni, 1 Stark 100 Taylor Ev , § 1405
(4) Nicholls v Dowling, 1 Stark 81, Best Ev , § 641
(5) Taylor Ev , § 1405
(6) Best, Ev § 642
(7) Nicholls v Dowling, 1 Stark R, 81
(8) Stark , Ev , 167

Alison says(1)—" It is often a convenien' . . . . . .
whether such a thing was said or done, recollection, and brings him to that state c that he should dilate. But this is not always fair; and when any subject is approached on which his evidence is expected to be really important, the proper course is to ask him what was done, or what was said, or to tell his own story. In this way, also, if the witness is at all intelligent a more consistent and intelligible statement will generally be got than by putting separate questions, for the witnesses generally think over the subjects on which they are to be examined in criminal cases so often, or they have narrated them so frequently to others, that they go on much more fluently and distinctly, when allowed to follow the current of their own ideas, than when they are at every moment interrupted or diverted by the examining Counsel."

Cross-examination.

It has always been an admitted rule that leading questions may in general be asked in cross-examination. But there are some circumstances in which leading questions ought not to be put even in cross-examination. For though leading questions may (perhaps in England and certainly under the terms of this section) in strictness be put in cross-examination, whether the witness be favourable to the cross-examiner or not, yet where a vehement desire is betrayed to serve the interrogator, it is certainly improper and greatly lessens the value of the evidence to put the very words into the mouth of the witness which he is expected to echo back.(2) It is also to be remembered that questions which assume facts to have been proved, which have not been proved, or that particular answers have been given, which have not been given, will not, as being an attempt to mislead the witness, be at any time, or in any examination, permitted.(3)

Evidence as to matters in writing

144. Any witness may be asked, whilst under examination, whether any contract, grant or other disposition of property as to which he is giving evidence was not contained in a document, and if he says that it was, or if he is about to make any statement as to the contents of any document, which in the opinion of the Court, ought to be produced, the adverse party may object to such evidence being given until such document is produced, or until facts have been proved which entitle the party who called the witness to give secondary evidence of it.

Explanation.—A witness may give oral evidence of statements made by other persons about the contents of documents if such statements are in themselves relevant facts.

Illustration

The question is, whether A assaulted B.

C deposes that he heard A say to D—' B wrote a letter accusing me of theft, and I will be revenged on him.' This statement is relevant, as showing A's motive for the assault, and evidence may be given of it, though no other evidence is given about the letter.

Principle.—See Note, post.

s. 3 ("Document.") ss. 91, 92 (Exclusion of oral evidence in case of documents.)
s. 3 ("Court.")

(1) Practice of the Criminal Law, Scotland, 546.
(2) Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed., 473; Taylor, Ev., § 1431.
(3) Taylor Ev., §§ 1404, 1431. See notes to s. 138, ante; Wigmore, Ev., § 771.

COMMENTARY.

Matters in writing.

This section merely points out the manner in which the provisions of sections 91 and 92, ante, as to the exclusion of oral by documentary evidence may be enforced by the parties to the suit.(1) If the adverse party do not object it is the duty of the Judge in criminal trials(2), to prevent [and he may also in civil cases(3), prevent] the production of inadmissible evidence notwithstanding the absence of objection.(4)

Cross-examination as to previous statements in writing

145. A witness may be cross-examined as to previous statements made by him in writing or reduced into writing, and relevant to matters in question(5), without such writing being shown to him, or being proved; but if it is intended to contradict him by the writing, his attention must, before the writing can be proved, be called to those parts of it which are to be used for the purpose of contradicting him.

Principle.—The furnishing of a test by which the memory and integrity of a witness can be tried. See Note, post.

s. 155, Cl. (3) (Previous verbal statements.)
Taylor, Ev., §§ 1446-1451; Wharton, Ev., §§ 531, 68

COMMENTARY.

Previous statements in writing

This rule is in the nature of an exception to the general principle forbidding all use of the contents of a written instrument until the instrument itself [illegible] The section re-enacts the provisions of Act II of 1855(6), and is [illegible] Act of 1854(7), [illegible] that the cross- [illegible] iting to show it [illegible] ule which it has been remarked(9) excluded one of the best tests by which the memory and integrity of a witness can be tried, it being clear that if the object of the cross-examination was to test the witness's memory this would be entirely frustrated by reading out the document to him before asking him any question about it.

The section says—"may be cross-examined." A witness when under examination-in-chief before the Court of Session should not have his attention directed to his deposition before the Magistrate.(10) The section does not [illegible] before the cross-examination, but that if it [illegible] be [illegible] ing him. That is, not that he is to be allowed to study his former statement and frame his answers accordingly, but that, if his answers have differed from his

(1) Cunningham, Ev., note to s. 144, see The Queen's Case, B. & B., 292.

(2) Cr. Pr. Code, s. 298.

(3) v. ante, pp. 130-131.

(4) Field, Ev., 6th Ed., 453.

(5) See for examples Oriental Government, etc., Co., Ltd. v. Narasimha Chari, 25 M., 183, 210 (1901); Suresh Chandra v. Emp., 24 Cr. L. J., 757 (1923).

(6) See R. v. Ram Chunder, 13 W. R., Cr., 18 (1870); Tukhreya Rai v. Tupsee Koer, 15 W. R., Cr., 23 (1871).

(7) 17 & 18 Vic., Cap. 125, which, however, contained the following proviso, viz.: "Provided always that it shall be competent for the Judge, at any time during the trial, to require the production of the writing for his inspection and he may thereupon make such use of it for the purposes of the trial as he shall think fit." This proviso, is however, substantially contained in s. 165, post. Field, Ev., 6th Ed., 453.

(8) 2 B. & B., 286.

(9) Taylor, Ev., § 1447.

(10) R. v. Ram Chunder, 13 W. R., Cr., 18 (1870).

previous statements reduced to writing, and the contradiction is intended to be used as evidence in the case, the witness must be allowed an opportunity of explaining or reconciling his statements, if he can do so; and if this opportunity is not given to him, the contradictory writing cannot be placed on the record as evidence.(1) It was held by the Privy Council that the opportunity of tendering an explanation is still more essential when a witness's character and reputation are at stake, and that the Court is precluded, both by this section and by general principles, from treating his oral testimony as rebutted by statements by him contained in documents in evidence unless such statements were put to him in cross-examination.(2) The previous statements must be really those of the witness. So where A was employed by B to write up B's account-books, B furnishing him with the necessary information either orally or from loose memoranda, it was held that the entries so made could not be given in evidence to contradict A, as previous statements made by him in writing, the statements being really made not by A but by B, under whose instructions A had written them.(3)

The section applies to both criminal and civil cases; and its provisions are therefore applicable at trials before the Court of Session to depositions taken before the committing Magistrate.(4) In the undermentioned case(5) one of the witnesses for the prosecution was asked if he had made a certain statement before the Magistrate; but Wilson, J., held it was unnecessary to ask this question, as the depositions showed what the witness had said before the Magistrate, and added that the attention of the jury might be called to out, was held by the Calcutta and Bombay High Courts under the Code of to give to the prosecutor no right of reply. The Judge himself should compare the statements of the witnesses recorded by the Magistrate with the evidence of the same witnesses at the Sessions, with a view to put questions in cross-examination, the answers to which may perhaps clear up discrepancies or possibly elicit facts favourable to the prisoners.(9) A Judge is bound to put to the witnesses whom he proposes to contradict by their statements made before the committing Magistrate, the whole or such portion of their depositions as he intends to rely upon in his decision, so as to afford them an opportunity of explaining their meaning or denying that they had made any such statements, and so forth.(10) "The depositions taken by the committing Magistrate are always, sent up and are with the Sessions Judge during the trial. The accused can, if he wishes, have a copy of these depositions.(11) He or his counsel or pleader can therefore inform himself of what the witnesses said before the Magistrate, and is in a position to question any witness who varies in the Court of Session from his former statement. The Sessions Judge ought, if asked, to allow the original deposition to be used for this purpose. Where the Sessions Judge himself noticed the discrepancy, and it was material, there can be little doubt

(1) Tukheya Rai v. Tupsee Koer, 15 W. R., Cr., 23, 24 (1871); Krishnamachariar v. Krishnamachariar, 38 M., 166 (1915).

(2) Bal Gangadhar Tilak v. Shrinivas Pandit, P. C., 39 B., 441 (1915); 19 C. W. N., 729; 42 I. A., 135; Valubai v. Govind Kashinath, 24 B., 218 (1900).

(3) Munchershaw Bezonji v. The New Dhurumsey S. W. Co., 4 B. 576 (1880).

(4) Field, Ev., 6th Ed., 455, 456.

(5) R. v. Hari Charan, 6 C. L. R., 390 (1880).

(6) Field, Ev., 6th Ed., 456

(7) R. v. Ziamar Rahman, 31 C. 142; F. B. 6 C. W. N., cccli (1902).

(8) Ante, p. 675.

(9) R. v. Bindabun Bouree, 5 W. R. Cr., 54 (1866). The section of Cr. Pr. Code, relating to right of reply has been recently amended.

(10) R. v. Dan Sahai, 7 A., 862 (1885)

(11) See Cr. Pr. Code, s. 548

that in using the original deposition for the same purpose himself, he would be acting wholly within the scope of his duty as indicated by the provisions of the Evidence Act and of the Code of Criminal Procedure."(1) Although previous statements made by witnesses may be used under this section for the purpose of contradicting statements made by them subsequently at the trial of an accused person, they cannot, if they have been made in the absence of the accused, be treated as independent evidence of his guilt or innocence; nor will section 288 of the Criminal Procedure Code avail anything for this purpose.(2)

In England the settled practice in Criminal Courts is now as follows: A witness may be cross-examined as to what he said before the Magistrate, the Counsel cross-examining may show the witness the deposition and ask him [illegible]

sible to state that the deposition does contradict him unless it is so put in.(3)

A police-diary cannot be used as containing entries which can of themselves be taken as evidence of any date, fact or statement; but it can be used to assist the Court by suggesting means of elucidating material points (4) Only the police-officer who kept such a diary can be confronted with it.(5) "If a police-diary is used by the officer who made it to refresh his memory, or if the Court uses it for the purpose of contradicting such police-officer, the provisions of section 161 or 145 of this Act, as the case may be, shall apply.(6)

If the special diary is used by the Court to contradict the police-officer who made it, the accused person or his agent has a right to see that portion of the diary which has been referred to for this purpose. That is to say, the particular entry which has been referred to, and so much of the diary as is necessary to the full understanding of the particular entry so made, but no more (7)

The Act is silent upon the case where the document has been lost or destroyed, and upon the question whether in these or in any other cases a copy can be used instead of the originals. It has, however, been stated that in such a case the witness might be cross-examined as to the contents of the paper, notwithstanding its non-production, and that, if it were material to the issue he might be afterwards contradicted by secondary evidence In such a case the cross-examining party may interpose evidence out of his turn to prove the events, such as loss, etc, relating to the document and to furnish secondary evidence thereof.(8)

The section only relates to previous statements made in, or reduced into, writing. If however, the previous statement has been verbal and not reduced to writing, it may also be proved to impeach the witness's credit, if such former statement be inconsistent with any part of the witness's evidence which is liable to be contradicted.(9) The Act makes no express provision to the effect that the witness's attention must first be drawn to the previous verbal statement and the witness asked whether he made such a statement before his credit can be impeached by independent evidence, but there can be little doubt that

(1) Field Ev, 6th Ed, 456 See observations in R v Arjun Megha, 10 Bom H C R, 281, 282. (1874).

(2) Alimuddin v R, 23 C, 361 (1895)

(3) R. v Riley, 1866, 4 F & F, 964, R. v Wright, 1866, 4 F & F, 967, Taylor, Ev, §§ 1449—1450

(4) Dal Singh v Emperor, 44 I A, 137 (1917), approving R. v Mannu, F B, 19 A, 390 (1897)

(5) Ib.

(6) Cr Pr Code, s 172, and see Dadan Gazi v R (1906), 33 Cal, 1023 See as to the amended section of the Cr Pr Code, Woodroffe's "Criminal Procedure in British India"

(7) See ib, R v Mannu, 19 A, 390 (1897) See also as to police-diaries, R v Jadab Das, 4 C W N, 129 (1899)

(8) Taylor, Ev, § 1447

(9) S 155 cl (3), post.

here also circumstances of such previous statement, sufficient to designate the particular occasion, ought to be mentioned to the witness and he ought to be asked whether or not he made such a statement.(1)

Inspection of document shown to witness.

"The decisions upon the question, whether or not a party is entitled to see a document which has been shown to one of his witnesses while under cross-examination by his opponent, are somewhat conflicting. On the whole, however, the practice seems to be, that if the cross-examining Counsel, after putting a paper into the hands of a witness, merely asks him some question as to its general nature or identity, his adversary will have no right to see the document; but that if the paper be used for the purpose of refreshing the memory of the witness, or if any questions be put respecting its contents, or as to the handwriting in which it is written, a sight of it may then be demanded by the opposite Counsel. But such opposing Counsel has no right to read such a document through, or to comment upon its contents, till so used or put in by the cross-examining Counsel."(2)

Questions lawful in cross-examination.

146. When a witness is cross-examined he may, in addition to the questions hereinbefore referred to, be asked any questions which tend—

(1) to test his veracity;

(2) to discover who he is and what is his position in life; or

(3) to shake his credit, by injuring his character, although the answer to such questions might tend directly or indirectly to criminate him or might expose or tend directly or indirectly to expose him to a penalty or forfeiture.(3)

When witness to be compelled to answer

147. If any such question relates to a matter relevant to the suit or proceeding(4), the provisions of section 132 shall apply thereto.(5)

Court to decide when questions shall be asked and when witness compelled to answer.

148. If any such question relates to a matter not relevant to the suit or proceeding, except in so far as it affects the credit of the witness by injuring his character, the Court shall decide whether or not the witness shall be compelled(6) to answer it, and may, if it thinks fit, warn the witness that he is not obliged to answer it. In exercising its discretion the Court shall have regard to the following considerations: (7)

(1) such questions are proper if they are of such a nature that the truth of the imputation conveyed by

(1) Field, Ev, 6th Ed., 458; see Taylor, Ev. § 1451, and Carpenter v. Wall, 3 P & D., 457, where Patterson, J., said, "I like the broad rule that when you mean to give evidence of a witness's declaration, for any purpose, you shall ask him whether he ever used such expression."

(2) Taylor, Ev, § 1482; Jarat Kumari Dasi v Bissessur Dutt (1911), 39 C, 245, Peck v Peck (1870), 31 L. T. R, 670.

(3) See R. v. Gopal Dass, 3 M, 271, 278 (1881).

(4) This means the same as relevant to a "matter in issue" in s 132, ante.

(5) v. Ib.

(6) See as to meaning Moher Sheikh v. R., 21 C, 392, 400 (1893).

(7) See R. v. Gopal Dass, supra at p. 278.

them would seriously affect the opinion of the Court as to the credibility of the witness on the matter to which he testifies:

(2) such questions are improper if the imputation which they convey relates to matters so remote in time or of such a character that the truth of the imputation would not affect, or would affect in a slight degree, the opinion of the Court as to the credibility of the witness on the matter to which he testifies:

(3) such questions are improper if there is a great disproportion between the importance of the imputation made against the witness's character and the importance of his evidence:

(4) the Court may, if it sees fit, draw, from the witness's refusal to answer, the inference that the answer if given would be unfavourable.

Principle.—The credibility of the witness is always in issue, it being necessary to ascertain the value and weight to be attached to the media through which the proof is presented to the Court. But at the same time it is necessary to protect the witness against improper cross-examination.

ss 137, 138 (Cross-examination) — s 3 ("Court") s 132 (Incriminating questions) — s 165, PROV. 2 (This section is binding upon Judge)

O R. 36, 38, Taylor, Ev, §§ 1426, 1427, 1445, 1459—1462, Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed., 474—479, Markby, Ev, 106, 107, Norton, Ev, 328; Field, Ev., 6th Ed., 460, 461; Taylor, Ev., §§ 1460—1467

COMMENTARY.

Sections 132, 146—148 together embrace the whole range of questions which can properly be addressed to a witness.(1) The words in section 146 "in addition to, &c.," refer to the second paragraph of section 138, ante. In addition then to the questions which may be asked in cross-examination under the provisions of section 138, a witness may be further asked the questions mentioned in section 146, which latter section extends the power of cross-examination far beyond the limits of section 138, which in terms confines the cross-examination to relevant facts, including, of course, facts in issue. The Questions in cross-examination.

y may be contradicted
The questions which e to matters which are

(1) R. v. Gopal Dass, 3 M, 271, 278, (1881).

(2) Markby, Ev., 106. None but relevant questions can be asked but relevancy is of a two-fold character; it may be directly relevant in its bearing on the very merits of the point in issue, or it may be relevant collaterally to the issue, as in the case of facts relating to the character of a witness, which are always relevant. Norton, Ev., 328.

here also circumstances of such previous statement, sufficient to designate the particular occasion, ought to be mentioned to the witness and he ought to be asked whether or not he made such a statement.(1)

Inspection of document shown to witness.

"The decisions upon the question, whether or not a party is entitled to see a document which has been shown to one of his witnesses while under cross-examination by his opponent, are somewhat conflicting. On the whole, however, the practice seems to be, that if the cross-examining Counsel, after putting a paper into the hands of a witness, merely asks him some question as to its general nature or identity, his adversary will have no right to see the document; but that if the paper be used for the purpose of refreshing the memory of the witness, or if any questions be put respecting its contents, or as to the handwriting in which it is written, a sight of it may then be demanded by the opposite Counsel. But such opposing Counsel has no right to read such a document through, or to comment upon its contents, till so used or put in by the cross-examining Counsel."(2)

Questions lawful in cross-examination.

146. When a witness is cross-examined he may, in addition to the questions hereinbefore referred to, be asked any questions which tend—

(1) to test his veracity;

(2) to discover who he is and what is his position in life; or

(3) to shake his credit, by injuring his character, although the answer to such questions might tend directly or indirectly to criminate him or might expose or tend directly or indirectly to expose him to a penalty or forfeiture.(3)

When witness to be compelled to answer

147. If any such question relates to a matter relevant to the suit or proceeding(4), the provisions of section 132 shall apply thereto.(5)

Court to decide when questions shall be asked and when witness compelled to answer.

148. If any such question relates to a matter not relevant to the suit or proceeding, except in so far as it affects the credit of the witness by injuring his character, the Court shall decide whether or not the witness shall be compelled(6) to answer it, and may, if it thinks fit, warn the witness that he is not obliged to answer it. In exercising its discretion the Court shall have regard to the following considerations: (7)

(1) such questions are proper if they are of such a nature that the truth of the imputation conveyed by

(1) Field, Ev, 6th Ed., 458; see Taylor, Ev § 1451, and Carpenter v. Wall, 3 P & D, 457, where Patterson, J., said, "I like the broad rule that when you mean to give evidence of a witness's declaration, for any purpose, you shall ask him whether he ever used such expression"

(2) Taylor, Ev., § 1482, Jarat Kumari Dass v Bissessur Dutt (1911), 39 C, 245, Peck v Peek (1870), 31 L. T. R., 670.

(3) See R. v Gopal Dass, 3 M., 271, 278 (1881).

(4) This means the same as relevant to a "matter in issue" in s 132, ante

(5) v. Ib.

(6) See as to meaning Moher Sheikh v. R., 21 C, 392, 400 (1893).

(7) See R. v. Gopal Dass, supra at p. 278.

them would seriously affect the opinion of the Court as to the credibility of the witness on the matter to which he testifies:

(2) such questions are improper if the imputation which they convey relates to matters so remote in time or of such a character that the truth of the imputation would not affect, or would affect in a slight degree, the opinion of the Court as to the credibility of the witness on the matter to which he testifies:

(3) such questions are improper if there is a great disproportion between the importance of the imputation made against the witness's character and the importance of his evidence:

(4) the Court may, if it sees fit, draw, from the witness's refusal to answer, the inference that the answer if given would be unfavourable.

Principle.—The credibility of the witness is always in issue, it being necessary to ascertain the value and weight to be attached to the media through which the proof is presented to the Court. But at the same time it is necessary to protect the witness against improper cross-examination.

ss 137, 138 (Cross-examination.) s 3 ("Court.")
s. 132 (Incriminating questions.) s 165, Prov. 2 (This section is binding upon Judge.)

O R 36, 38, Taylor, Ev, §§ 1426, 1427, 1445, 1459—1462; Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed., 474—479, Markby, Ev., 106, 107, Norton, Ev, 328, Field, Ev., 6th Ed., 460, 461, Taylor, Ev., §§ 1460—1467

COMMENTARY.

Sections 132, 146—148 together embrace the whole range of questions which can properly be addressed to a witness (1) The words in section 146 "in addition to, &c," refer to the second paragraph of section 138, ante. In addition then to the questions which may be asked in cross-examination under the provisions of section 138, a witness may be further asked the questions mentioned in section 146, which latter section extends the power of cross-examination far beyond the limits of section 138, which in terms confines the cross-examination to relevant facts, including, of course, facts in issue. The [illegible] Questions in cross-examination.

may be put under the provisions of section 146 may relate to matters which are either directly relevant to the suit, or relevant only as affecting the credibility of the witness. As a general rule, all questions as to facts relevant in the first mentioned sense must be answered whether or not the answer will criminate the witness(1) and evidence will be admissible to contradict his answers. If, on the other hand, the facts to which the questions relate are relevant only as tending to impeach the witness's credit, it lies in the discretion of the Court to compel the witness to answer or not, dealing with the matter not under the rule contained in section 132 but under the provisions of sections 148—152.(2) Evidence in such a case will not be admissible to contradict the answer when given, unless in the case provided for by the exceptions to section 153, post.

(1) R. v. Gopal Doss, 3 M, 271, 278, (1881).

(2) Markby, Ev, 106. None but relevant questions can be asked · but relevancy is of a two-fold character; it may be directly relevant in its bearing on the very merits of the point in issue, or it may be relevant collaterally to the issue, as in the case of facts relating to the character of a witness, which are always relevant. Norton, Ev., 328.

Indecent and scandalous questions may be put either to shake the credit of a witness, or as relating to facts in issue, or to determine whether or not a fact in issue existed. If they are put merely to shake the credit of a witness, the Court has complete dominion over them and may forbid such questions, even though they may have some bearing on the question before the Court. But if they relate to facts in issue or to matters necessary to be known in order to determine whether or not the facts in issue existed, the Court has no jurisdiction to forbid such questions though they may be indecent or scandalous.(3)

No question respecting any fact irrelevant to the issue can be put to a witness for the mere purpose of contradicting him, it being only with regard to relevant matters that a witness can be contradicted by proof of previous statements inconsistent with any part of his evidence.(4) The provisions of sections 148—150, 153, are restricted to questions relating to facts which are relevant only in so far as they affect the credit of the witness by injuring his character, whereas so[illegible] of the additional questions enumerated in section 146 do not necessarily suggest any imputation on the witness's character. Nevertheless, it is believed to have been the intention of the Act, as also the practice, to consider all the questions covered by section 146 to be governed by the provisions of sections 148—150 and 153.(5)

Section 148, together with sections 149—152, was designed to protect the witness against improper cross-examination (v. post).(6) Sections 148, 149, are as binding [illegible] the parties.(7) Under the first-mentioned section, [illegible] a discretion (fo[illegible] pelling an answer; and section 153, post, enacts that where such [illegible] been answered, the usual rule as to the inadmissibility of evidence to contradict answers to irrelevant questions shall apply save and except in two cases; but that if the witness answers falsely he may afterwards be charged with giving false evidence.

Under the first and second clauses of section 148, the fact asked must be such as if true would really and seriously affect the credibility of the witness on the matter to which he testifies. The abuse of examination against which these clauses are directed is illustrated by the incident in the Tichborne case, where a witness, an elderly man who was called to disprove the identity of the claimant

(1) Ss. 132, 147

(2) R v Pramatha Nath Bose (1910), 37 C, 878

(3) Mahomed Mian v Emp, 20, Cr. L J, 566; s c 52 I C., 54

(4) v ante, notes upon "cross-examination" in s 138, and post, s. 153, cl (3).

(5) Markby, Ev, 107.

(6) In Field, Ev, 643 (Ib, 6th Ed, 460, 461) it is said with reference to s. 148, "if the witness, either of his own accord or being compelled by the Court answers a question which is irrelevant or which is relevant only in so far as it affects his credit, and if such question criminate him or expose him to a penalty or forfeiture is he entitled to the protection afforded by s. 132, ante. It would appear that he is not But it is submitted that the protection should be extended to such a case." See notes to s 132, ante.

(7) S 165, post, Prov. (2).

with the real Roger Tichborne, was most improperly asked in cross-examination whether in early life he had not had an intrigue with a married woman. Questions respecting alleged improprieties of conduct, which furnish no real ground for assuming that a witness who could be guilty of them would not be a man of veracity, should be checked.(1) "If a woman", says Sir J F Stephen in his General View of the Criminal Law of England, "prosecuted a man for picking her pocket, it would be monstrous to enquire whether she had not had an illegitimate child ten years before, though circumstances might exist which might render such an enquiry necessary" For instance, she might owe a grudge to the person against whom the charge was brought on account of circumstances connected with such a transaction, and have invented the charge for that reason.(2) A Magistrate, it was held, should have disallowed upon the principle embodied in this section, a question as to previous conviction thirty years old put time

"Wl

recent, they are more important as bearing upon the moral principles of the witness than when they are of remote date, because a man may reform and become in later years incapable of conduct to which in earlier life he was prone. The interest of justice can seldom require that the errors of a man's life long since repented of, and forgiven by the community, should be recalled to remembrance at the pleasure of any future litigant "(4)

Third Clause declares it to be improper to make serious accusations against a witness who is called to prove some comparatively unimportant fact in the case. With reference to the fourth Clause, read Illustration (h), section 114, ante, and also the other matter which may be considered in connection with the same Illustration. It has been sometimes stated that if witness declines to answer, no inference of the truth of the fact can be drawn from this. But this due to the witness (5)

Where ... was held by a majority of two out of ... cross-examination, with a view of test ... previously been brought against him in respect of a similar claim, upon which he had given evidence, and the verdict of the jury was notwithstanding against him, and this, without producing the record of the proceedings in the previous case (6)

... be given ... have been ... e in such ... particular ... ed to the testimony of witness who is cross-examined in a subsequent trial, is inadmissible.(7)

---

(1) Taylor, Ev, § 1460

(2) See Staines v. Stewart, 2 S. & T., 330, 332, want of chastity is not always a ground for discrediting a witness, per Sir C Cresswell.

(3) R v Ghulam Mustafa, 26 A, 371 (1904), at p 374.

(4) Taylor, Ev, § 1460

(5) Taylor, Ev, § 1467.

(6) Henman v Lester, 31 L. J. C. P., 366

(7) In re Pasumarty Jaggappa, 4 C W. N, 684, following Seaman v Netherclift, L. R., 2 C. P. D, 53, and distinguishing Henman v Lester, supra.

No weight ought to be attached to the evidence of a witness, who himself deposes to his own turpitude.(1)

Question not to be asked without reasonable grounds.

149. No such question as is referred to in section 148 ought to be asked unless the person asking it has reasonable grounds for thinking that the imputation which it conveys, is well founded.

Illustrations

(a) A barrister is instructed by an attorney or vakil that an important witness is a dàkàit. This is a reasonable ground for asking the witness whether he is a dàkàit

(b) A pleader is informed by a person in Court that an important witness is a dàkàit; the informant, on being questioned by the pleader, gives satisfactory reasons for his statement This is reasonable ground for asking the witness whether he is a dakàit.

(c) A witness, of whom nothing whatever is known, is asked at random whether he is a dakàit. There are here no reasonable grounds for the question.

(d) A witness, of whom nothing whatever is known, being questioned as to his mode of life and means of living, gives unsatisfactory answers. This may be a reasonable ground for asking him if he is a dàkàit.

Procedure of Court in cases of question being asked without reasonable grounds

150. If the Court is of opinion that any such question was asked without reasonable ground, it may, if it was asked by any barrister, pleader, vakil or attorney, report the circumstances of the case to the High Court or other authority to which such barrister, pleader, vakil or attorney is subject in the exercise of his profession.

Indecent and scandalous questions

151. The Court may forbid any questions or inquiries which it regards as indecent or scandalous, although such questions or inquiries may have some bearing on the questions before the Court, unless they relate to facts in issue, or to matters necessary to be known in order to determine whether or not the facts in issue existed.

Questions intended to insult or annoy.

152. The Court shall forbid any question which appears to it to be intended to insult or annoy, or which, though proper in itself, appears to the Court needlessly offensive in form.

Principle.—See Notes, post.

s. 148 (Questions affecting credit) s. 3 ("Fact in issue")
s. 3 ("Court") s 165 (Questions by Judge.)

Markby, Ev., 107; Steph. Dig, pp 159, 160; Taylor, Ev., § 949; Powell, Ev, 9th Ed, 227, and see authorities cited in last section, and in section 138, ante

COMMENTARY.

Questions in cross-examination.

Sections 149—152 together with section 148, ante, were intended to protect a witness against improper cross-examination—a protection which is often very much required. It has, however, been said that the protection afforded by section 148 is not very effectual, because an innocent man will be eager to answer the question, and one who is guilty will by a claim for protection nearly confess his guilt, and that the threats contained in sections 149, 150, do not carry the matter much further.(1) These latter sections were substituted while the bill was in committee for certain other sections in the original draft to which much objection was taken and the discussion with reference to which will be found in the Proceedings in Council (2) Speaking of the substituted sections including sections 146—152, Sir J F. Stephen said :—" The object of these sections is to lay down in the most distinct manner the duty of Counsel of all grades in examining witnesses with a view to shaking their credit by damaging their character I trust that this explicit statement of the principles, according to which such questions ou- [illegible] t to prevent the growth, in [illegible] occasions been a grave [illegible] substance is concerned, speak for themselves, and that they will be admitted to be sound by all honourable advocates and by the public." Section 165, post [illegible]

(1) Kali Chandra v. Shib Chandra, 6 B L. R, 501, 507 (1870); s c, 15 W. R, P. C., 12.

[illegible]

ought to prove effectual. For in cases where it will be, for the reasons mentioned, of little use for the witness to decline to answer, the Judge may at once interpose and stop the question (3) With reference to section 151, it may be observed that " indecency of evidence is no objection to its being received where it is necessary to the decision of a civil or a criminal right."(4) The Court cannot forbid indecent or scandalous questions if they relate to facts in issue(5), or to matters necessary to be known in order to determine whether or not the facts in issue existed. If they have, however, merely some bearing on the question before the Court, the latter has a discretion and may forbid them. Where a question is intended to insult or annoy, or though proper in itself, [illegible] for [illegible] not [illegible] but [illegible] to

s. 138, ante

153. When a witness has been asked, and has answered, any question which is relevant to the inquiry only in so far as it tends to shake his credit by injuring his character, no evidence shall be given to contradict him; but, if he answers falsely, he may afterwards be charged with giving false evidence.

Exclusion of evidence to contradict answers to questions testing veracity.

Exception 1.—If a witness is asked whether he has been previously convicted of any crime and denies it, evidence may be given of his previous conviction.(8)

---

(1) Markby, Ev., 107.

(2) See Proceedings of the Legislative Council, Supplement to the Gazette of India, 30th March 1872, pp. 233, 238. With reference to ss. 149, 150, it may be observed that an advocate cannot be proceeded against either civilly or criminally, for words uttered in his office as advocate Sullivan v. Norton, 10 M., 38 (1886) As to the extent of the privilege of speech accorded to advocate, see R v Kasheenath Dinkur, 8 Bom. H. C. R, Cr 142—146 (1871).

(3) Markby, Ev, 107.

(4) DaCosta v. Jones, Cowp., 734; per Lord Mansfield, Steph Dig, pp. 159, 160; Taylor, Ev., § 949; Powell, Ev, 9th Ed, 227.

(5) See Rozario v Ingles, 18 B, 468. 470 (1893). Mahomed Mian v Emp, 20 Cr L. J., 566: 52 I C, 54

(6) Weston and others v. Peary Mohan Das, 40 C, 898 (1913)

(7) Nikunja Behari Sen v. Harendra Chandra, 41 C., 514 (1914).

(8) See 28 & 29 Vic, Cap. 18, § 1; Taylor, Ev, § 1437.

Exception 2.—If a witness is asked any question tending to impeach his impartiality, and answers it by denying the facts suggested, he may be contradicted.(1)

Illustrations.

(a) A claim against an underwriter is resisted on the ground of fraud

The claimant is asked whether, in a former transaction, he had not made a fraudulent claim. He denies it.

Evidence is offered to show that he did make such a claim.

The evidence is inadmissible.

(b) A witness is asked whether he was not dismissed from a situation for dishonesty He denies it.

Evidence is offered to show that he was dismissed for dishonesty.

The evidence is not admissible.

(c) A affirms that on a certain day he saw B at Lahore

A is asked whether he himself was not on that day at Calcutta. He denies it Evidence is offered to show that A was on that day at Calcutta.

The evidence is admissible, not as contradicting A on a fact which affects his credit, but as contradicting the alleged fact that B was seen on the day in question in Lahore.(2)

In each of these cases the witness might, if his denial was false, be charged with giving false evidence.

(d) A is asked whether his family has not had a blood feud with the family of B against whom he gives evidence He denies it. He may be contradicted on the ground that the question tends to impeach his impartiality.

Principle.—The reason of this rule, which restricts the right to give evidence in contradiction, is that it is an object of primary importance to confine the att[illegible] Without some r[illegible] of a long tr[illegible] f and the trial itself inordinately lengthened.(3) The exceptions refer to two matters which are easily susceptible of proof and are so important as to strike at the very proof of the witness's trustworthiness, while no great expenditure of time need be involved in ascertaining how the facts stand.(4) s 146 (Questions to credit)

Taylor, Ev., §§ 1436, 1437, 1439, 1440—1442, 1444, 1490; Stewart Rapalje's Law of Witnesses, §§ 208—210; Markby, Ev., 108; Roscoe, N. P. Ev., 182; Steph Dig. Art. 130; Roscoe, Cr. Ev., 13th Ed, 88—90; Norton, Ev., 332.

COMMENTARY.

Exclusion of evidence to contradict. Where a fact which is relevant as having a direct bearing on the issue is denied by a witness, it may of course be proved aliunde, and his answer may thus be contradicted by independent evidence.(5) So the statement of a witness

---

(1) See Att.-Genl v. Hitchcock, 1 Ex., 93; Taylor, Ev., § 1442.

(2) See R. v. Sakharam Mukundji, 11 Bom H C. R, 166, 169 (1874).

(3) Kasi Ghulam v. Aga Khan, 6 Bom. H. C. R, 93, 96 (1869); Taylor, Ev., § 1439.

(4) Cunningham, Ev., § 153.

(5) See Illustration (c) and Taylor, Ev, § 1438, where the rule is stated to be that—"if the questions relate to relevant facts, the answers may be contradicted, if to irrelevant, they cannot, and enquiries respecting the previous conduct of a witness will almost invariably be regarded as irrelevant, if not connected with the cause or the parties." In Field, Ev., 6th Ed, 464 it is said, "The Act does not lay down this rule in so many words; but its provisions as to relevancy and other matters necessarily involve this rule" The express provisions of s 5 are, for the defence that a witness for the prosecution was at a particular place at a particular time, and consequently could not then have been at another place, where the latter states he was and saw the accused person, is properly admissible in evidence, even though the witness for the prosecution may not himself have been cross-examined on the point (1) But where the fact inquired after is only collaterally relevant to the issue, as is the case with the character of the witness, Counsel must be content with the answer which the witness chooses to give him If he denies the imputation, the answer is conclusive for the purposes of the suit(2), the matter cannot be carried further at the trial except in the two cases provided by this section, which, however, does not appear to be very accurately expressed, as there is at least one other common case where the witness may be contradicted (see section 155, post) The only redress which a party has, is to charge the witness with giving false evidence, and to try him for it To this general rule there are, however, as already observed, two exceptions contained in the above section and taken from English law.

test being whether the fact is one which the party proposing to contradict would have been allowed himself to prove in evidence.(3) "The object of section 153 is to prevent trials being spun out to an unreasonable length If every answer given by a witness upon the additional facts mentioned in section 146 could be made the subject of fresh inquiry, a trial might never end These matters are after all not of the first importance beyond what is comprised in the exceptions "(4)

Under the terms of the first Exception above referred to when a witness denies that he has been previously convicted his previous conviction may always be put in to refute him (5) Section 511 of the Criminal Procedure Code declares the manner in which the previous conviction may be proved in an enquiry, trial or other proceeding under that Code. In the absence of any especial provision the only medium of proof is the record of conviction.(6)

Whether the evidence referred to in the second Exception can be given has however, renders unnecessary this recourse to an implied rule, see s 155, post

(1) R v Sakraham Mukhundji, 11 Bom H C. R, 166 (1874).

(2) See Illustrations (a) and (b)

(3) Kazi Ghulam v Aga Khan, 6 Bom. H. C. R, O. C J., 93 (1869), citing Att.-Gen v Hitchcock, 1 Ex, 91, 99.

(4) Markby, Ev, 108

(5) A similar rule prevails in England, see Taylor, Ev, § 1437; Att-Gen. v. Hitchcock, supra.

(6) R v Watson, 2 Stark, 149; see ss. 76, 77, ante.

(7) 1 Ex, 93; see Taylor, Ev, §§ 1440—1442.

(8) See s. 155, cl (2), post; Att-Genl v. Hitchcock, supra.

(9) Norton, Ev, 332; Taylor, Ev, § 1440; Stewart Rapalje's op. cit., 346, 347; e g that the witness is the kept mistress of the party calling her (Thomas v. David, 7 C. & P, 350), or that the witness has suborned false witnesses against the opposite party (Queen's Case, 2 B. & B, 11; Att-Gen v. Hitchcock, supra) or has had quarrels with or expressed hostility towards him (R. v. Shaw, 16 Cox, 503); see Roscoe, N. P. Ev., 182; Steph Dig, Art. 130, Roscoe, Cr Ev, 13th Ed, 88—90; Taylor, Ev., § 1490, et seq Moreover if a plaintiff's witness denies a material fact and states that persons connected with the plaintiff have offered him money to assert it, the plaintiff may call those persons, not only to prove the fact but to disprove the attempt at subornation Melhuish v. Collier, 15 B. B, 878.

The distinction made between cases coming within the section and those within the second Exception is exemplified in the undermentioned case(1) There a person named Yewin was indicted for stealing wheat. The principal witness against him was a boy of the name of Thomas, his apprentice. The Judge allowed the prisoner's Counsel to ask Thomas in cross-examination whether he had not been charged with robbing his master, and whether he had not afterwards said he would be revenged on him and would soon fix him in Monmouth gaol? He denied both. The prisoner's Counsel then proposed to prove that he had been charged with robbing his master and had spoken the words imputed to him. The Court ruled that his answer must be taken as to the former; but that as the words were material to the guilt or innocence of the prisoner, evidence might be adduced that they were spoken by the witness.

Care must be taken to distinguish between that contradiction of answers [illegible] erally disallowed, and contradiction of answers [illegible] In the latter case such answers may always [illegible] e been given by the party's own witness, for the object is to show the true facts, not merely to discredit the witness "If a witness state facts in a cause which make against the party who called him, yet the party may call other witnesses to prove that these facts were otherwise; for such facts are evidence in the cause and the other witness is not called directly to discredit the first, but the impeachment of his credit is incidental and consequential only."(2) The rule is thus expressed in the American cases:—

Although a party may not discredit his own witness by testimony as to his general character, he may give evidence to contradict any particular and material fact to which the witness has testified. He may show that the witness [illegible] version he gives of them, i.e., [illegible] r defence (not for the purpose [illegible] he fact really is. If he calls [illegible] tablishing it by him (or if he disproves it), the fact may nevertheless be proved by another witness, or the first one's account shown to be incorrect. A party may always correct his own witness, even though by directly contradicting him. If such evidence were to be excluded, the consequences would be most injurious to the administration of justice as well in criminal as in civil cases.(3)

Question by party to his own witness.

154. The Court may in its discretion, permit the person who calls a witness to put any questions to him which might be put in cross-examination by the adverse party.

Principle.—A party may therefore, with the permission of the Court, put leading questions to the witness under the provisions of section 143 or cross-examine him as to the matter mentioned in sections 145, 146. The rule which excludes leading questions being chiefly founded on the assumption that a witness must be taken to have a bias in favour of the party by whom he is called whenever circumstances show that this is not the case and he is either hostile to that party or unwilling to give evidence, the Judge may in his discretion allow the rule to be relaxed.(4) Further by offering a witness, a party is held to recommend him as worthy of credence, and so it is not in general open to him to test his credit, or impeach his truthfulness. But there exist cases in which the rule should be relaxed at the discretion of the Court, as for instance, where

(1) R. v. Yewin, 2 Camp, 638*n*.

(2) B N. P., 397.

(3) Stewart Rapalje's Law of Witnesses, 355, 356; see also Alexander v. Gibson, 2 Campb, 556; Friedlander v. London Assurance Co, 4 B. & Ad, 193; Bradly v. Ricardo, 8 Bing, 57; Phipson, Ev. 5th Ed, 469; Best, Ev. § 645, Taylor, Ev. § 939, n. 4.

(4) Best, Ev, § 642; Wharton, Ev. § 499

there is a surprise, the witness unexpectedly turning hostile, in which and in other cases the right of examination ex adverso is given (1) And when the defence has elicited new matter from a witness for the prosecution in cross-examination, the Court may, under this section, permit the prosecution to test the witness's veracity on this point by cross-examining him in turn (2) A witness, whether of the one or the other party, ought not to receive more credit than he really deserves, and the power of cross-examination is therefore sometimes necessary for the purpose of placing the witness fairly and completely before the Court (3) But evidence improperly obtained by leading questions without first declaring the witness hostile should not be considered (4)

s 3 ("Court")
s. 143 (Leading questions)
ss 145—163 (Questions in cross-examination)

Taylor, Ev, §§ 1404, 1426, Starkie, Ev, 167, 168, Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed, 468, Ph & Arn., Ev., 462, 524—540, Wharton, Ev., §§ 500, 549, et seq; Stewart Rapalje's Law of Witnesses, §§ 242, 211—216, Burr Jones, Ev, 857—862, Best, Ev, §§ 642, 645, pp 626, 627, 629

COMMENTARY.

Right of party to cross examine and impeach his own witness.

This section under which " [illegible] " [illegible] h leave of the Court cross-examine and pu [illegible] him is one of great practical importance [illegible] witness who has been called in the expectation that he will speak to the existence of a particular state of facts, pretends non-remembrance of those facts or deposes to an entirely different set of circumstances; in which case the question arises whether the witness has by his conduct entitled the party to cross-examine him. This question has in such cases generally been argued with reference to the English cases explaining the meaning of the term "adverse," used in the twenty-second section of the Common Law Procedure Act of 1854, as meaning either "hostile" or "unfavourable" respectively. A witness is considered adverse when in the opinion of the Judge he bears a hostile animus to the party calling him, and not merely it is said(5) when his testimony contradicts his proof, though it is to be observed that that fact may under the circumstances be evidence of hostility. It has been also held(6) that even where a witness stands in a situation which naturally makes him adverse(7) to the party desiring his testimony, the party calling the witness is not as of right entitled to cross-examine him, the matter being solely in the discretion of the Court to permit the person calling the witness to put any questions to him which might be put in cross-examination by the adverse party. A witness who is unfavourable is not necessarily hostile. A hostile witness is one who from the manner in which he gives his evidence shows that he is not desirous of telling the truth (8) It is, however, to be marked in the first place, that the English Statute dealt with the question of the admissibility of evidence to contradict the party's own witness, a matter which is dealt with by the next section of this Act; and that the question whether a party can cross-examine

(1) Ib, p 600

(2) Amrita Lal Hazra v R, 42 C., 957 (1915).

(3) Ph. & Arn, Ev, 540, 528

(4) Jagdeo v. Emp, 24 Cr. L. J., 69 (1922).

(5) Surendra Krishna Mandal v Ranee Dassee, 33 C. L. J, 34 (1921)

(6) Luchiram Motilal Boid v. Radha Charan Poddar, 49 C, 93 (1922).

(7) So the head note; but should not the proposition be "which might naturally make him adverse" for if he is in fact adverse then cross-examination should be allowed. Probably what is meant is that though the witness's position is such that he might be adverse, it must be shown that he is in fact so, or that there are grounds for so supposing

(8) Luchiram Motilal Boid v. Radha Charan Poddar, 49 C., 93 (1922); ref. to Surendra Krishna Mandal v. Ranee Dassee, 47 C., 1043, 1057. The section was recently applied in Moti Ram v Emp, 24 Cr L. J., 904 (1923).

The distinction made between cases coming within the section and those within the second Exception is exemplified in the undermentioned case (1) There a person named Yewin was indicted for stealing wheat. The principal witness against him was a boy of the name of Thomas, his apprentice The Judge allowed the prisoner's Counsel to ask Thomas in cross-examination whether he had not been charged with robbing his master, and whether he had not afterwards said he would be revenged on him and would soon fix him in Monmouth gaol ? He denied both. The prisoner's Counsel then proposed to prove that he had been charged with robbing his master and had spoken the words imputed to him. The Court ruled that his answer must be taken as to the former ; but that as the words were material to the guilt or innocence of the prisoner, evidence might be adduced that they were spoken by the witness.

Care must be taken to distinguish between that contradiction of answers [illegible] erally disallowed, and contradiction of answers [illegible] In the latter case such answers may always [illegible] e been given by the party's own witness, for the object is to show the true facts, not merely to discredit the witness. "If a witness state facts in a cause which make against the party who called him, yet the party may call other witnesses to prove that these facts were otherwise; for such facts are evidence in the cause and the other witness is not called directly to discredit the first, but the impeachment of his credit is incidental and consequential only."(2) The rule is thus expressed in the American cases:—

Although a party may not discredit his own witness by testimony as to his general character, he may give evidence to contradict any particular and material fact to which the witness has testified. He may show that the witness is mistaken or that the facts are different from the version he gives of them, i.e., fo [illegible] or defence (not for the purpose of [illegible] the fact really is. If he calls a [illegible] establishing it by him (or if he disproves it), the fact may nevertheless be proved by another witness, or the first one's account shown to be incorrect. A party may always correct his own witness, even though by directly contradicting him. If such evidence were to be excluded, the consequences would be most injurious to the administration of justice as well in criminal as in civil cases.(3)

Question by party to his own witness.

154. The Court may in its discretion, permit the person who calls a witness to put any questions to him which might be put in cross-examination by the adverse party.

Principle.—A party may therefore, with the permission of the Court, put leading questions to the witness under the provisions of section 143 or cross-examine him as to the matter mentioned in sections 145, 146 The rule which excludes leading questions being chiefly founded on the assumption that a witness must be taken to have a bias in favour of the party by whom he is called whenever circumstances show that this is not the case and he is either hostile to that party or unwilling to give evidence, the Judge may in his discretion allow the rule to be relaxed.(4) Further by offering a witness, a party is held to recommend him as worthy of credence, and so it is not in general open to him to test his credit, or impeach his truthfulness. But there exist cases in which the rule should be relaxed at the discretion of the Court, as for instance, where

(1) R. v Yewin, 2 Camp, 638*n*.

(2) B N P., 397.

(3) Stewart Rapalje's Law of Witnesses, 355, 356; see also Alexander v. Gibson, 2 Campb, 556; Friedlander v. London Assurance Co., 4 B. & Ad., 193; Bradly v. Ricardo, 8 Bing, 57; Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed, 469; Best, Ev., § 645, Taylor, Ev., § 939, n. 4

(4) Best, Ev, § 642; Wharton, Ev., § 499.

there is a surprise, the witness unexpectedly turning hostile, in which and in other cases the right of examination ex adverso is given (1) And when the defence has elicited new matter from a witness for the prosecution in cross-examination, the Court may, under this section, permit the prosecution to test the witness's veracity on this point by cross-examining him in turn (2) A witness, whether of the one or the other party, ought not to receive more credit than he really deserves, and the power of cross-examination is therefore sometimes necessary for the purpose of placing the witness fairly and completely before the Court (3) But evidence improperly obtained by leading questions without first declaring the witness hostile should not be considered (4)

s. 3 ("Court") ss 145—163 (Questions in cross examination)
s 143 (Leading questions.)

Taylor, Ev, §§ 1404, 1426, Starkie, Ev, 167, 168, Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 468, Ph & Arn., Ev., 462, 524—540, Wharton, Ev, §§ 500, 549, et seq. Stewart Rapalje's Law of Witnesses, §§ 242, 211—216, Burr Jones, Ev, 857—862; Best, Ev, §§ 642, 645, pp. 626, 627, 629

COMMENTARY.

Right of party to cross examine and impeach his own witness

[illegible] cular state of facts, pretends non-remembrance of those facts or deposes to an entirely different set of circumstances; in which case the question arises whether the witness has by his conduct entitled the party to cross-examine him This question has in such cases generally been argued with reference to the English cases explaining the meaning of the term "adverse," used in the twenty-second section of the Common Law Procedure Act of 1854, as meaning either "hostile" or "unfavourable" respectively A witness is considered adverse when in the opinion of the Judge he bears a hostile animus to the party calling him, and not merely it is said(5) when his testimony contradicts his proof, though it is to be observed that that fact may under the circumstances be evidence of hostility. It has been also held(6) that even where a witness stands in a situation which naturally makes him adverse(7) to the party desiring his testimony, the party calling the witness is not as of right entitled to cross-examine him, the matter being solely in the discretion of the Court to permit the person calling the witness to put any questions to him which might be put in cross-examination by the adverse party. A witness who is unfavourable is not necessarily hostile. A hostile witness is one who from the manner in which he gives his evidence shows that he is not desirous of telling the truth (8) It is, however, to be marked in the first place, that the English Statute dealt with the question of the admissibility of evidence to contradict the party's own witness, a matter which is dealt with by the next section of this Act; and that the question whether a party can cross-examine

(1) Ib, p 600.
(2) Amrita Lal Hazra v R, 42 C, 957 (1915).
(3) Ph & Arn, Ev, 540, 528
(4) Jagdeo v. Emp, 24 Cr. L J, 69 (1922).
(5) Surendra Krishna Mandal v. Ranee Dassee, 33 C. L J., 34 (1921)
(6) Luchiram Motilal Boid v. Radha Charan Poddar, 49 C., 93 (1922)
(7) So the head note; but should not the proposition be "which might naturally make him adverse" for if he is in fact adverse then cross-examination should be allowed Probably what is meant is that though the witness's position is such that he might be adverse, it must be shown that he is in fact so, or that there are grounds for so supposing.
(8) Luchiram Motilal Boid v. Radha Charan Poddar, 49 C., 93 (1922); ref. to Surendra Krishna Mandal v. Ranee Dassee, 47 C, 1043, 1057. The section was recently applied in Moti Ram v. Emp, 24 Cr. L J, 904 (1923).

his own witness as to (for example) whether he had not upon another occasion given a different account of the transaction from that which he then deposed to, is not the same as the question whether, if the witness denies having done so, the party calling him is at liberty to call other witnesses to prove it.(1) Nextly, the Statute ment of this Act makes no m
" unfavourable," or of an tion of the Court, which to the particular circumstances of each case.(2) It is much to be desired that the matter should, if possible, be set at rest by judicial decision more especially since, as will hereafter be observed, the English cases lack unanimity. Some of the cases here cited deal with the right to discredit the party's own witness by calling other testimony, but such as are authorities for this right are à fortiori also authorities for the right to cross-examine one's own witness, though, as already observed, the converse may not be the case. The question of the right of a party to impeach and contradict his own witness is properly the subject-matter of the next section, but being closely allied to that of the present section it is here alone treated to avoid unnecessary repetition

Cross-examination. Prior to the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854, it had been held, with regard to cross-examination, that the party who calls a witness may cross examine him if on the trial he shows any unfair bias(3); or be unwilling(4), or by his conduct in the box shows himself decidedly adverse(5); or in the interest of the opposite party(6); or if the witness be the party's opponent in the case.(7)

And it was also held that a party's own witness who, having given one account of the matter to his attorney, when called on the trial, gives a different

(1) See Greenough v Eccles, 5 C B., N S, 796, arguendo

(2) See Bastin v Carew, R & M, 177 (1824), when Abbott, Ld, C J, said upon allowing cross-examination of an adverse witness —" I mean to decide this and no further That in each particular case there must be some discretion in the presiding Judge as to the mode in which the examination shall be conducted in order best, to answer the purposes of justice," cited in Price v Manning, I R, 42 Ch. D., 372 (1887)

(3) R v Chapman, 8 C & P., 558, 559 (1838), see also R v. Murphy, 8 C. & P, 308 (1837).

(4) R v. Ball, 8 C. & P, 745 (1839). [The situation in which a witness stands towards either party does not give the party calling the witness a right to cross-examine him, unless the witness's evidence be of such a nature as to make it appear that the witness is an unwilling one]; Parkin v Moon, 7 C & P., 408, 409 (1836)

(5) Clarke v. Saffery, R. & M., 126 (1824); Bastin v. Carew, ib, 127 (1824).

(6) Ph & Arn, Ev, 462.

(7) Clarke v. Saffery, R. & M., 126 (1824) that is when the witness stands in a situation which naturally makes him adverse to the party who desires his testimony, as for example, a defendant called as the plaintiff's witness. Radha Jeebun v. Taramonee Dossi, 12 Moo I. A., 380, 393 (1869) It is, however, now settled law in England that a party when called by his opponent cannot as of right be treated as hostile, the matter being solely in the discretion of the Court Price v Manning, 42 Ch D, 372 (1887), "Since which decision also it would seem that the older cases (see Bowman v Bowman, 2 M. & R, 501; Jackson v. Thomason, 1 B. & S. 745, Coles v. Coles, L R, 1 P. & M, 71) holding that a necessary witness, i.e, one whom a party is compelled to call, and who may therefore be considered rather the witness of the Court than of the party as an attesting witness to a will, can be discredited (as of right) by his own side, are no longer law;" Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 469 The same rule applies in India, see Subbaji v. Shidapa, 26 B 392 395 (1901) Where, however, the accused applied for an adjournment to enable them to cross examine the prosecution witnesses, which was refused, and subsequently had the witnesses summoned for the defence, it was held that the mere fact that the accused had been compelled to treat the witnesses for the prosecution as their own witnesses did not change their character and that they were entitled to cross-examine them. Seoprakash Singh v Rawlins, 28 C., 594 (1904) gives a totally different version Then when asked by the counsel of the party calling him whether he has not previously made a statement different from his present evidence, objection is commonly taken by the other side on the ground that the witness has not yet appeared adverse. A similar objection was taken in the case undermentioned(2), upon which counsel, seeking to cross-examine, replied that it might not at present appear that the witness was adverse, but that he desired to prove that it was so, and it could only appear how it was, by the question which he proposed to ask, which in effect was whether the witness did not give a totally different account of the matter to the attorney, to prove which he called him Lord Campbell, C. J., then said:—" The defendant's Counsel stating that, I will allow the question to be put; but it must be done to dis- [illegible] to get rid of part of his testimony. [illegible] it will show that he is not trust- [illegible] to call the attesting witnesses to a will or codicil may cross-examine them, as these are technically not the witnesses of either party but of the Court.(4)

[illegible]

Impeachment.

Passing from the question of the cross-examination of the party's own witness(5) to the question of his impeachment, it was settled law in England(6) prior to the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854, that a party could not impeach his witness's credit by general evidence of his bad character(7), but he might contradict him by other evidence on points directly relevant to the issue. It was, however, an unsettled point whether the witness could be discredited

(1) Melhuish v Collier, 19 L J, Q B, 493, s c, 15 Q B., 878 (see this case cited on another point at p 969 ante, note 7) where Erle, J, observed :—" There are treacherous witnesses who will hold out that they can prove facts on one side in a cause, and then, for a bribe, or from some other motive, make statements in support of the opposite interest In such cases the law undoubtedly ought to permit the party calling the witness to question him as to the former statements, and ascertain, if possible, what induces him to change it." And for similar cases subsequent to the Act of 1854, see Dear v. Knight, 1 F & F, 433 (1859); where the prior statement was made to the party, Faulkner v. Brine, 1 F. & F, 254 (1858); where it was made to the party's attorney, Pound v. Wilson, 4 F. & F, 301 (1865), where the prior statement was made in the bankruptcy Court; and R. v. Little, 15 Cox, 319 (1883), where the prior statement was made to the mother of the prosecutrix In two cases in the Calcutta High Court, Barlow v. Chuni Lal, Small Cause Court Transfer Suit No 15 of 1899, 3rd Jan, 1901; McLeod v. Sirdarmull, Suit No 833 of 1900, 13th Aug, 1901, the Court allowed cross-examination, it appearing that the witness had made a statement to the attorney of the party calling him

(2) Faulkner v Brine, 1 F. & F, 254 (1858)

(3) See also to the same effect, Amstell v Alexander, 16 L. T. N S, 830 (1867); [A witness, called on behalf of the plaintiff, gave evidence quite different from the proof in brief of plaintiff's counsel and from the heads of evidence as taken down in writing by the plaintiff's attorney and alleged to have been read over by him to the witness The witness was considered sufficiently adverse to be examined as to his previous statements to the plaintiff's attorney, and the Judge allowed the witness to be asked whether he did not say the several things stated in the paper containing the heads of his evidence as taken down by plaintiff's attorney]. See as to this case, post

(4) Jones v Jones (1908); Times L R, v. 24 p 839

(5) As to which see further Taylor, Ev, § 1404; Starkie, Ev., 167, 168; Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 468; Ph & Arn, Ev, 462; Wharton, Ev, § 500, Stewart Rapalje's op cit, §§ 242, 216; Best, Ev, § 642.

(6) See Greenough v. Eccles, 5 C. B, N. S, 802, per Williams, J.; and see generally Taylor, Ev, § 1426; Ph. & Arn, 524, 540; Stewart Rapalje's op. cit. §§ 211—216; Wharton, Ev., § 549 et seq; Burr. Jones, Ev., §§ 857—862; Best, Ev., § 645.

(7) This is not the law in India under ss. 154 155, and post

by proof that he had made inconsistent statements. The Act mentioned settled the controversy on this last question by declaring that in case the witness should, in the opinion of the Judge, prove adverse, the party might, by leave of the Judge, prove that he had made at other times a statement inconsistent with his present testimony.(1)

The question was then debated as to what was the meaning of the word adverse in the Statute. Was it meant that the witness himself shall prove hostile to the party calling him, or that the testimony he gives shall be adverse? Upon this question there appear to have been conflicting decisions. In some cases(2) it has been held that a witness is adverse when, in the opinion of the Judge he bears a hostile(3) feeling to the party calling him (as indicated by his attitude and demeanour and mode of answer) and not merely when his testimony contradicts his proof; but the contrary view has been taken in several other cases.(4) It can therefore be hardly said in this state of the authorities (especially in India where the words of sections 154, 155, are alone to be considered) that it is a settled rule that it is only when a witness manifestly shows a hostile personal feeling by his conduct and demeanour that the Court ought to allow his cross-examination and impeachment. The testimony of a witness, if adverse is only the more dangerous if he shows no hostile disposition(5); and if he be astute as well as treacherous, he will take care to conceal his true sentiments from the Court. In the language of Lord Denman "it is impossible to conceive a more frightful iniquity than the triumph of falsehood and treachery in a witness who pledges himself to depose to the truth when brought into Court and in the mean time is persuaded to swear, when he appears, to a completely inconsistent story."(6) It is, however, easier in the matter of this and the [illegible] rule than following [illegible] ration to declare [illegible] ations be possibl[illegible] laced that any [illegible] r the no fetter [illegible] English law(7) that provisions of section 154; and (b) it has relaxed the rule of English law(?) that a party shall not in any case be allowed to impeach his witness's credit by general evidence of his bad character.(8) For under the provisions of section

(1) See Taylor, Ev., § 1426; the section of the statute is, however, very confused. See the judgment in Greenough v Eccles, 5 C B, N. S, 802, supra.

(2) Greenough v. Eccles, 5 C B, N. S, 786 (1859), per Williams and Willes, JJ, Cockburn, C. J., not wholly concurring in the judgment, Reed v. King, 30 L. T., 290 (1858), see Taylor, Ev., p. 938 n. (11)

(3) In Coles v. Coles, L. R., 1 P. & D., 71 (1866) Wilde, J. O, adopting counsel's definition, said "An adverse witness is one who does not give the evidence which the party calling him wished him to give. A hostile witness is one who from the manner in which he gives his evidence shows that he is not desirous of telling the truth to the Court." But as has been observed (Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 469) this definition, however, might in many cases apply to a favourable witness The terms appear to be treated as synonymous in Surendra Krishna Mondal v Ranee Dassee, 33 C L. J., 34 (1921).

(4) R. v. Little, 15 Cox, 319 (1883); where the objection was expressly taken that there was nothing in the demeanour of the witness to show that she was hostile; yet the evidence was admitted per Day, J., in consultation with Cave, J. Amstell v. Alexander, 16 L. T, N. S, 830 (1867), [" In Greenough v. Eccles, 5 C. B, N. S., 786, it is laid down that to enable a party thus to contradict his own witness, the witness must appear not only unfavourable, but actually hostile There must be some exhibition of animus which this witness does not seem to exhibit He is, however, in my opinion, adverse," per Bramwell, B]; Pound v. Wilson, 4 F & F, 301 (1865); Erle, J. [In this case there were merely different statements and the witness was held adverse] Dear v. Knight, 1 F. & F., 433 (1859) [a similar case].

(5) Greenough v. Eccles, 5 C. B., N. S., 786 arguendo.

(6) Wright v. Beckett, 1. M. & P., 414.

(7) Greenough v Eccles, 5 C. B., N S., 802.

(8) The meaning of this rule is that a party, after producing a witness, cannot

54, the party calling a witness may, with the consent of the Court, impeach is credit by cross-examination by putting all the questions mentioned in ection 146 and may, under the provisions of section 155, impeach his credit y the independent testimony of persons who testify that they from their nowledge of the witness believe him to be unworthy of credit. It is, of course, lear that the mere fact that a witness tells two different stories does not necessarily and in all cases show him to be hostile. So it has been held that the ere fact that at a Sessions trial a witness tells a different story from that told y him before the Magistrate does not necessarily make him hostile. The proer inference which may be drawn in such a case from contradictions going to he whole texture of the story being that the witness is neither hostile to this ide nor that, but that the witness is one who ought not to be believed unless upported by other satisfactory evidence (1) But it is also submitted to be lear that where these conflicting statements involve great discrepancies and ontradictions and are the outcome of fraud, dishonesty and treachery on the art of the witness, the party calling him should be permitted to cross-examine im under this section as to the fact and cause of the discrepancies and contra-ctions, and if necessary to impeach his credit under section 155 by substanating the facts contained in the questions put to him by independent testiony. "If a party, not acting himself a dishonest part, is deceived by his itness—or if a witness professing himself a friend, turns out an enemy, and fter promising proof of one kind gives evidence directly contrary—is the party be restrained from laying the true state of the case before the Court? The ommon sense of mankind might be expected to answer this proposition in he negative, and to decide that the true state of the case should be made nown."(2) There is no distinction in principle between an attesting witness hom a party is obliged to call and any other witness whom he may cite of is own choice.(3) When further a witness is treated as hostile and crossxamined by the party calling him, this must be done to discredit the witness ltogether and not merely to get rid of part of his testimony.(4)

The rules considered are applicable to both criminal(5) and civil cases. nd in England it seems to have been held that the opinion of the Judge as whether a witness is adverse is final and not the subject of appeal(6), but this st rule may be held not to have application in this country. A prior contrary atement is at variance.(7)

See further as to the impeachment of the witness the notes to the following ction.

155. The credit of a witness may be impeached in the ollowing ways by the adverse party, or, with the consent of the ourt, by the party who calls him:— Impeaching credit of witness.

(1) by the evidence of persons who testify that they, from their knowledge of the witness, believe him to be unworthy of credit; ove him to be of such a general bad aracter as would render him unworthy credit, Ph. & Arn, 526, 527.

---

(1) Kalachand Sircar v R., 13 C, 53 1883), R v. Sagal Samba, 2 C, 642, 654 1893).

(2) Ph & Arn, Ev., § 555; see ib, 28, 540

(3) Surendra Krishna Mondal v. Ranee Dassee, 33 C. L J, 34 (1921); S C., 24 C. W. N, 860

(4) ib, Satyendra v. Emp., 24 Cr. L. J, 93 (1923).

(5) R. v. Murphy, 8 C. & P, 297 308; R. v. Little, 15 Cox, 319.

(6) Rice v Howard, 15 Q B D., 681.

(7) Ph. & Arn, 528; Wright v Beckett, 1 Moo & R, 414

by proof that he had made inconsistent statements. The Act mentioned settled the controversy on this last question by declaring that in case the witness should, in the opinion of the Judge, prove adverse, the party might, by leave of the Judge, prove that he had made at other times a statement inconsistent with his present testimony.(1)

The question was then debated as to what was the meaning of the word adverse in the Statute. ... hostile to the party calling him, ... this question there appe... it has been held that a witness is adve... he bears a hostile(3) feeling to the party c... and demeanour and mode of answer) ar... tradicts his proof; but the contrary view has been taken in several other cases.(4) It can therefore be hardly said in this state of the authorities (especially in India where the words(of sections 154, 155, are alone to be considered) that it is a settled rule that it is only when a witness manifestly shows a hostile personal feeling by his conduct and demeanour that the Court ought to allow his cross-examination and impeachment. The testimony of a witness, if adverse is only the more dangerous if he shows no hostile disposition(5); and if he be astute as well as treacherous, he will take care to conceal his true sentiments from the Court. In the language of Lord Denman "it is impossible to conceive a more frightful iniquity than the triumph of falsehood and treachery in a witness who pledges himself to depose to the truth when brought into Court and in the mean time is persuaded to swear, when he appears, to a completely inconsistent story."(6) It is, however, easier in the matter of this and the following section to show objection against the existence of any rigid rule than to declare one which shall be of general application, should such a declaration be possible or advisable. The Legislature has, however, given two indications that any rule upon this point should be of a liberal character. (a) It has placed no fetter on the discretion ... under the provisions of section 154; a ... hat ... by a party shall not in any case be allowed to impeach ... general evidence of his bad character.(8) For under the provisions of section

(1) See Taylor, Ev, § 1426, the section of the statute is, however, very confused See the judgment in Greenough v. Eccles, 5 C B., N. S, 802, supra.

(2) Greenough v Eccles, 5 C. B, N S., 786 (1859), per Williams and Willes, JJ., Cockburn, C J, not wholly concurring in the judgment; Reed v. King, 30 L. T., 290 (1858), see Taylor, Ev., p 938 n (11)

(3) In Coles v. Coles, L. R., 1 P. & D, 71 (1866) Wilde, J. O, adopting counsel's definition, said: "An adverse witness is one who does not give the evidence which the party calling him wished him to give. A hostile witness is one who from the manner in which he gives his evidence shows that he is not desirous of telling the truth to the Court." But as has been observed (Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed, 469) this definition, however, might in many cases apply to a favourable witness The terms appear to be treated as synonymous in Surendra Krishna Mondal v Ranee Dassee, 33 C. L J., 34 (1921).

(4) R. v Little, 15 Cox, 319 (1883); where the objection was expressly taken that there was nothing in the demeanour of the witness to show that she was hostile; yet the evidence was admitted per Day, J, in consultation with Cave, J., Amstell v. Alexander, 16 L. T., N S, 830 (1867); ["In Greenough v. Eccles, 5 C. B, N S., 786, it is laid down that to enable a party thus to contradict his own witness, the witness must appear not only unfavourable, but actually hostile. There must be some exhibition of animus which this witness does not seem to exhibit He is, however, in my opinion, adverse," per Bramwell, B]; Pound v Wilson, 4 F & F., 301 (1865), Erle, J. [In this case there were merely different statements and the witness was held adverse] Dear v. Knight, 1 F. & F., 433 (1859) [a similar case].

(5) Greenough v. Eccles, 5 C. B., N. S., 786 arguendo

(6) Wright v. Beckett, I. M. & P., 414.

(7) Greenough v. Eccles, 5 C. B., N. S., 802.

(8) The meaning of this rule is that a party, after producing a witness, cannot points.(1) The credit of a witness is of course indirectly impeached by evidence [illegible] (c) by eliciting in cross-examination, [illegible] rtiality or previous conviction of the [illegible] or made previous inconsistent statements, or the immoral character of the witness if she be the prosecutrix in a trial for rape(3), (d) by independent proof that the witness bears such a reputation as to be unworthy of credit (4)

This classification, though corresponding with that generally given in the English text-books, is not that adopted by the Act, which deals with the above-mentioned matters under the classes of (a) cross-examination(5); (b) contradiction(6); (c) impeachment of credit.(7)

(a) Cross-examination may or may not have the effect of impeaching the credit of the witness, a result which depends upon the nature of the questions put to the witness and the answers which he gives to them. (b) A distinction also appears to be drawn between contradicting a witness and impeaching his credit.(8) Where the facts stated by the witness are relevant to the issue, evidence may always be given to contradict them under the provisions of the fifth section, ante (9) If the fact be one which is not relevant to the suit or proceeding, except in so far as it affects the credit of the witness, no evidence is admissible in contradiction except in two specified cases(10) (c) Lastly the impeachment of the credit of a witness is considered and set apart from both cross-examination and contradiction, apparently because under the Act a witness's credit may be impeached upon a point upon which there has been no cross-examination and therefore no room for contradiction.

This question of classification is, however, of no great practical importance, as the provisions of this section are in substantial accordance with those of English law on the point, though it is useful to bear it in mind, in order to avoid the confusion which is not unlikely to result from the novel view of the matter presented by this Act. The two main points upon which this section differs from English law are that under the first Clause a party may discredit his own witness by proof of such a reputation as renders him unworthy of belief, which may not be done in England; and that apparently it is not necessary under the third Clause to lay a foundation by interrogation of the witness for

(1) Under s 5, ante, see Taylor, Ev, § 1470, Field, Ev., 6th Ed, 467.

(2) S 153

(3) S 155, clauses (2), (3), (4)

(4) S 155, clause (1).

(5) Ss 138, 140, 145—152, 154

(6) Ss 5, 153

(7) S 155

(8) See Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 467

(9) See Cunningham, Ev, 372 "The Bombay High Court in R. v. Sakharam Mukundji, 11 Bom. H C R, 169 (1874), appear to consider that the provisions of the Indian Evidence Act for the contradiction of witnesses is less extensive than that of the English law. If, however, s 5 be read with these sections, it will, I think, be seen that they are identical." And see Field, Ev, 651, where it is said, "the Evidence Act assumes that where the facts are relevant evidence may be given to contradict" The express provisions of s 5, however, render unnecessary this recourse to an implied rule It is also to be observed that the question whether contradicting evidence upon relevant points may be given is in part a question of procedure, see Field, Ev., 651, 652, and the Explanation to s 5, ante, (ib, 6th Ed, 467, 468).

(10) S 153, v ib, Exceptions (1) and (2) This section does not appear to be accurately expressed, for there is at least one other common case where the witness may be contradicted If the witness be asked in cross-examination whether he made a previous inconsistent statement, and denies having done so, independent evidence may be given to contradict that statement under s 154, cl. (3). In Field, Ev., 6th Ed., 467, the following explanation is given: "In these two exceptional cases [those mentioned in s. 152], the evidence is allowed to contradict answers to questions actually put. The evidence allowed by s. 155 to impeach the witness's credit may apparently be given, although the witness has not been questioned upon the point, unless some other portion of the Act prohibit it—see e.g., s. 145."

(2) by proof that the witness has been bribed, or has accepted the offer of a bribe, or has received any other corrupt inducement to give his evidence;

(3) by proof of former statements inconsistent with any part of his evidence which is liable to be contradicted;

(4) when a man is prosecuted for rape or an attempt to ravish, it may be shown that the prosecutrix was of generally immoral character.

Explanation.—A witness declaring another witness to be unworthy of credit may not, upon his examination-in-chief, give reasons for his belief, but he may be asked his reasons in cross-examination, and the answers which he gives cannot be contradicted, though, if they are false, he may afterwards be charged with giving false evidence.

Illustrations.

(a) A sues B for the price of goods sold and delivered to B, C says that he delivered the goods to B

Evidence is offered to show that, on a previous occasion, he said that he had not delivered the goods to B.

The evidence is admissible.

(b) A is indicted for the murder of B.

C says that B, when dying, declared that A had given B the wound of which he died.

Evidence is offered to show that, on a previous occasion, C said that the wound was not given by A or in his presence.

The evidence is admissible.

Principle.—The witness being the medium through which the Court is to arrive at the truth or falsity of the claim or charge in litigation, it is always necessary to ascertain the trustworthiness of this medium. This is the common function of cross-examination, which is, however, not in all cases adequate. It is necessary, therefore, that the parties should be empowered to give independent testimony as to the character of the witness with a view to showing that he is unworthy of belief by the Court, which may be done in the four ways specified in this section.

s. 3 ("Court.") s 3 ("Evidence.")

s 137 (Examination-in-chief and cross-examination.)

Steph Dg, Arts 131, 133, 134, Taylor, Ev., §§ 1445, 363, 1470—1473, 1476, Ph. & Arn, 503—540, Wharton, Ev., §§ 549—571; Burr. Jones, Ev, §§ 864, 865, 866, 867, 868, 870, 871, 868; Stewart Rapalje's Law of Witnesses, §§ 196—210; Markby, Ev., 109; Norton, Ev., 334

COMMENTARY.

Impeaching credit of witness

The credit of a witness may be impeached in the following ways: (a) by cross-examination(2), that is, by eliciting from the witness himself facts disparaging to him; (b) by calling witnesses to disprove his testimony on material

(1) The word in brackets was substituted for "had" by s 11 of the Amending Act XVIII of 1872.

(2) See ss 138, 140, 145, 146, 147—154.

points.(1) The credit of a witness is of course indirectly impeached by evidence (c) by eliciting in cross-examination, rtiality or previous conviction of the or made previous inconsistent statements, or the immoral character of the witness if she be the prosecutrix in a trial for rape(3), (d) by independent proof that the witness bears such a reputation as to be unworthy of credit.(4)

This classification, though corresponding with that generally given in the English text-books, is not that adopted by the Act, which deals with the above-mentioned matters under the classes of (a) cross-examination(5); (b) contradiction(6), (c) impeachment of credit.(7)

(a) Cross-examination may or may not have the effect of impeaching the credit of the witness; a result which depends upon the nature of the questions put to the witness and the answers which he gives to them. (b) A distinction also app credit (8) dence m section, ing, except in so far as it affects the credit of the witness, no evidence is admissible in contradiction except in two specified cases(10) (c) Lastly the impeachment of the credit of a witness is considered and set apart from both cross-examination and contradiction, apparently because under the Act a witness's credit may be impeached upon a point upon which there has been no cross-examination and therefore no room for contradiction.

This question of classification is, however, of no great practical importance, as the provisions of this section are in substantial accordance with those of English law on the point, though it is useful to bear it in mind, in order to avoid the confusion which is not unlikely to result from the novel view of the matter presented by this Act. The two main points upon which this section differs from English law are that under the first Clause a party may discredit his own witness by proof of such a reputation as renders him unworthy of belief, which may not be done in England; and that apparently it is not necessary under the third Clause to lay a foundation by interrogation of the witness for

---

(1) Under s 5, ante, see Taylor, Ev, § 1470, Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 467

(2) S 153

(3) S. 155, clauses (2), (3), (4)

(4) S 155, clause (1)

(5) Ss 138, 140, 145—152, 154

(6) Ss 5, 153

(7) S 155

(8) See Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 467

(9) See Cunningham, Ev, 372. "The Bombay High Court in R v Sakharam Mukundji, 11 Bom. H. C. R, 169 (1874), appear to consider that the provisions of the Indian Evidence Act for the contradiction of witnesses is less extensive than that of the English law If, however, s 5 be read with these sections, it will, I think, be seen that they are identical" And see Field, Ev., 651, where it is said, "the Evidence Act assumes that where the facts are relevant evidence may be given to contradict" The express provisions of s 5, however, render unnecessary this recourse to an implied rule It is also to be observed that the question whether contradicting evidence upon relevant points may be given is in part a question of procedure, see Field, Ev., 651, 652, and the Explanation to s. 5, ante. (ib., 6th Ed, 467, 468).

(10) S 153, v. ib, Exceptions (1) and (2) This section does not appear to be accurately expressed, for there is at least one other common case where the witness may be contradicted If the witness be asked in cross-examination whether he made a previous inconsistent statement, and denies having done so, independent evidence may be given to contradict that statement under s. 154, cl. (3). In Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 467, the following explanation is given: "In these two exceptional cases [those mentioned in s. 152], the evidence is allowed to contradict answers to questions actually put. The evidence allowed by s 155 to impeach the witness's credit may apparently be given, although the witness has not been questioned upon the point, unless some other portion of the Act prohibit it—see e.g., s 145."

(2) by proof that the witness has been bribed, or has accepted the offer of a bribe, or has received any other corrupt inducement to give his evidence;

(3) by proof of former statements inconsistent with any part of his evidence which is liable to be contradicted;

(4) when a man is prosecuted for rape or an attempt to ravish, it may be shown that the prosecutrix was of generally immoral character.

Explanation.—A witness declaring another witness to be unworthy of credit may not, upon his examination-in-chief, give reasons for his belief, but he may be asked his reasons in cross-examination, and the answers which he gives cannot be contradicted, though, if they are false, he may afterwards be charged with giving false evidence.

Illustrations

(a) A sues B for the price of goods sold and delivered to B. C says that he delivered the goods to B.

Evidence is offered to show that, on a previous occasion, he said that he had not delivered the goods to B.

The evidence is admissible

(b) A is indicted for the murder of B

C says that B, when dying, declared that A had given B the wound of which he died.

Evidence is offered to show that, on a previous occasion, C said that the wound was not given by A or in his presence.

The evidence is admissible.

Principle.—The witness being the medium through which the Court is to arrive at the truth or falsity of the claim or charge in litigation, it is always necessary to ascertain the trustworthiness of this medium. This is the common function of cross-examination, which is, however, not in all cases adequate. It is necessary, therefore, that the parties should be empowered to give independent testimony as to the character of the witness with a view to showing that he is unworthy of belief by the Court, which may be done in the four ways specified in this section.

s 3 ("Court") s. 3 ("Evidence.")

s 137 (Examination-in-chief and cross-examination)

Steph D.g, Arts 131, 133, 134; Taylor, Ev., §§ 1445, 363, 1470—1473, 1476; Ph & Arn, 503—540, Wharton, Ev., §§ 549—571; Burr. Jones, Ev., §§ 864, 865, 866, 849, 854, 870, 871, 868, Stewart Rapalje's Law of Witnesses, §§ 190—216, Markby, Ev., 109, Norton, Ev., 334

COMMENTARY.

Impeaching credit of witness.

The credit of a witness may be impeached in the following ways: (a) by cross-examination(2), that is, by eliciting from the witness himself facts disparaging to him; (b) by calling witnesses to disprove his testimony on material

(1) The word in brackets was substituted for "had" by s 11 of the Amending Act XVIII of 1872.

(2) See ss. 138, 140, 145, 146, 147—154.

points.(1) The credit of a witness is of course indirectly impeached by evidence

(c) by eliciting in cross-examination, rtiality or previous conviction of the or made previous inconsistent statements, or the immoral character of the witness if she be the prosecutrix in a trial for rape(3), (d) by independent proof that the witness bears such a reputation as to be unworthy of credit (4)

This classification, though corresponding with that generally given in the English text-books, is not that adopted by the Act, which deals with the above-mentioned matters under the classes of (a) cross-examination(5); (b) contradiction(6); (c) impeachment of credit.(7)

(a) Cross-examination may or may not have the effect of impeaching the credit of the witness; a result which depends upon the nature of the questions put to the witness and the answers which he gives to them. (b) A distinction also appears to be drawn between contradicting a witness and impeaching his credit (8) Where the facts stated by the witness are relevant to the issue, evi-

e
t

tion and contradiction, apparently because under the Act a witness's credit may be impeached upon a point upon which there has been no cross-examination and therefore no room for contradiction

This question of classification is, however, of no great practical importance, as the provisions of this section are in substantial accordance with those of English law on the point, though it is useful to bear it in mind, in order to avoid the confusion which is not unlikely to result from the novel view of the matter presented by this Act. The two main points upon which this section differs from English law are that under the first Clause a party may discredit his own witness by proof of such a reputation as renders him unworthy of belief, which may not be done in England; and that apparently it is not necessary under the third Clause to lay a foundation by interrogation of the witness for

(1) Under s 5, ante, see Taylor, Ev, § 1470, Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 467.
(2) S 153
(3) S 155, clauses (2), (3), (4)
(4) S 155, clause (1)
(5) Ss 138, 140, 145—152, 154
(6) Ss 5, 153
(7) S 155
(8) See Field, Ev., 6th Ed, 467
(9) See Cunningham, Ev., 372 "The Bombay High Court in R v Sakharam Mukundji, 11 Bom. H C. R, 169 (1874), appear to consider that the provisions of the Indian Evidence Act for the contradiction of witnesses is less extensive than that of the English law. If, however, s 5 be read with these sections, it will, I think, be seen that they are identical." And see Field, Ev, 651, where it is said, "the Evidence Act assumes that where the facts are relevant evidence may be given to contradict." The express provisions of s 5, however, render unnecessary this recourse to an implied rule It is also to be observed that the question whether contradicting evidence upon relevant points may be given is in part a question of procedure, see Field, Ev, 651, 652, and the Explanation to s 5, ante, (ib., 6th Ed, 467, 468).
(10) S 153, v. ib, Exceptions (1) and (2). This section does not appear to be accurately expressed, for there is at least one other common case where the witness may be contradicted If the witness be asked in cross-examination whether he made a previous inconsistent statement, and denies having done so, independent evidence may be given to contradict that statement under s 154, cl (3). In Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 467, the following explanation is given: "In these two exceptional cases [those mentioned in s. 152], the evidence is allowed to contradict answers to questions actually put The evidence allowed by s 155 to impeach the witness's credit may apparently be given, although the witness has not been questioned upon the point, unless some other portion of the Act prohibit it—see e.g., s. 145" subsequent evidence in proof of the previous inconsistent statements.(1) In England, further, a party may give proof of such statement by his own witness only where the witness is, in the opinion of the Judge, "adverse." And though doubtless the English practice will be in a large number of cases followed in this respect, yet it will be remembered that the Act has left the discretion of the Court wholly unfettered, either to allow or disallow such impeachment as the justice and the particular circumstances of each case may require "The importance of the section l[illegible] restricts the evidence which may be given (oth[illegible] section 153) to impeach a [illegible]

The rules with regard to the impeachment of witnesses apply to both criminal and civil cases, and by the terms of the section, the same impeaching evidence may be given in the case both of the adversary's and the party's own witness. As to the cases in which a party may discredit his own witness, see the Notes to the preceding section. It is to be here observed that though this section renders former statements relevant only to contradict or negative the statements made previously, yet section 287 of the Criminal Procedure Code goes further in making previous statements before the Committing Magistrate "evidence in the Case" that is substantive evidence of the facts therein deposed to.(3)

Clause (1). Independent evidence may be given that an adversary's (or with the leave of the Court a party's own) [illegible] of fulness(4), or perhaps for m[illegible] to credit. According to the th[illegible] ng general reputation only and not express the mere opinion [illegible] witness. It is not sufficient that the impeaching witness should profess merely to state what he has heard "others" say; for those others may be but few. He must be able to state what is generally said of the person by those among [illegible] with whom he is chiefly conversant; for it is this [illegible] the English [illegible] ation, yet in [illegible] is to ask the witness whether he knows [illegible] what that reputation [illegible] eve the person whose [illegible] this section is in veracity is impeached, upo[illegible] cannot accordance with English la[illegible] or dis-in direct examination give [illegible] know-[illegible] may be asked as to his [illegible] and [illegible] any, towards him and the like; and [illegible] contradicted.(7) Where a witness's

(1) v ante, s. 145

(2) Markby, Ev., 109.

(3) Emp v. Marati Shinde, 46 B., 97, 23 Bom., L R., 820 (1922), following Queen-Empress v. Dorasmi Ayyar, 24 M., 414 (1901); Emp. v. Dwarka Kurmi, 28, [illegible], 683 (1906); referring to Queen Em[illegible]ss v. Jadab Das, 27, C., 295 (1899).

(4) Taylor, Ev., §§ 1470—1473

Impeaching credit of witness.

(5) Taylor. Ev., § 1471, where the view [illegible] pressed that the enquiry need not be [illegible]ted to reputation for veracity, but [illegible] involve the witness's entire moral [illegible]r; the opposite party being at [illegible]o enquire whether in spite of [illegible]acter in other respects the im-[illegible] witness has not preserved his reputation for truth The weight of American authority confines the enquiry to the reputation of the witness for truth and veracity. Burr Jones, Ev., § 864

(6) Taylor, Ev., § 1470 In practice the question is generally shortened thus, "from your knowledge of the witness would you believe him on his oath," R. v. Brown, 1 C. C. R., 70. See the question of the propriety of this question discussed in Burr. Jones, Ev., § 865

(7) Steph. Dig., Art 133; Taylor, Ev., § 1473; Norton, Ev., 334 There are peculiar reasons for allowing a searching cross-examination of the impeaching witness; see Burr. Jones, Ev., § 864.

(1) Th[illegible] for "had[illegible] of veracity has been attacked, his credit may be re-established either by the cross examination of the impeaching witness (v. ante), or by independent general evidence that the impeached witness is worthy of credit(1); and the party whose witness has been attacked may re-criminate, that is, the impeaching witness may in his turn be attacked either in cross-examination or by independent general evidence with a view to show that he is unworthy of credit, but no further re-crimination than this is probably allowable.(2) Where the general reputation of the witness for truth and veracity is proven to be bad, the Court may properly disregard his evidence except in so far as he is corroborated by other credible testimony (3)

This clause runs "has accepted the offer of a bribe," but was originally Clause (2 framed "has had the offer of a bribe." upon the ruling in the case of the was held that the fact that the witn if denied, be proved, itness that he has been offered a bribe cannot , was no disparagement to a man that a bribe be a disparagement to the person who makes the offer.(5)

The witness may be impeached by proof of former statements inconsistent Clause (3 with any part of his evidence which is liable to be contradicted See Illustrations (a) and (b). In the undermentioned case(6), Wilson, J., said. "I am inclined to think that in the third clause of section 155 of the Evidence Act, the words 'which is liable to be contradicted' mean 'which is relevant to the issue.' Any statements, verbal as well as written, may be used for this purpose, but where through another witness.

It is always relevant to put to a witness any question which, if answered in the affirmative, would qualify or contradict some previous part of his testiand material, the witness may, on cross-examination, be asked whether he has not on some particular occasion expressed a different opinion upon the same subject, and if he deny the fact, it may be proved by other evidence. But the previous opinion as to the merits of the cause of a witness who has simply

(1) Taylor, Ev, § 1473, 2 Ph & Arn, Ev, 504

(2) Ib, and see Wharton, Ev, §§ 568, 569.

(3) Burr Jones, Ev, § 866, and cases there cited

(4) Ex R 91.

(5) See, however, criticism in Cunningham, Ev., 372, 373, where it is said: "The alteration like several of the amendments introduced by Act XVIII of 1872, appears to have been made without adequate regard to the considerations which led the original framers of the Act to word it as they did."

(6) Khadijah Khanum v. Abdool Kureem, 17 C, 344, 346 (1889), reported to the author to have been followed by Sale, J, in Ramjeebun Serowgy v V. L Rees, Suit No 636 of 1893, Calcutta High Court, May 7th, 1895. Quære, however, whether these words do not refer to any part of the witness's evidence "which relates to a fact in issue or relevant, or which falls within the exceptions to s. 153;" Cunningham, Ev., 373

(7) In England the circumstances of the supposed statement must be put to the witness; Taylor, Ev., § 1445; see Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 468, 469; Wharton, Ev., § 555, post.

(8) Taylor, Ev, § 1445

testified to a fact cannot be regarded as relevant to the issue and cannot therefore be given in evidence.(1)

When it is intended to throw discredit upon the evidence of any witness nothing is more common in practice (especially in criminal cases) than for the Counsel for the defence to prove, if it can [illegible] viously made statements inconsistent w [illegible] this fact is satisfactorily established, the [illegible] of such witness with suspicion, and the fact is established by the evidence of any one to whom such statements were made, or in whose presence or hearing they were made.(2) As to statements reduced to writing by a police-officer under section 162 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, see note (3)

Where the impeaching declarations were oral, it is of course necessary to call the persons who heard them.(4) A statement by J to H was reported at the thana by the latter and there recorded : held that though the evidence of J could be contradicted by the evidence of H proving the statement made to him by J, it could not under this clause be contradicted by what the police recorded as the first information.(5) Generally, whenever on a former occasion it was the duty of the witness to state the whole truth, it is admissible to show that the witness in his evidence omitted facts sworn to by him at the trial and that he now states facts which he then did not state.(6) To make the impeaching statement admissible, it must be in some point a contradictory opposite of the statement made by the witness on trial. If the two statements are reconcilable, one cannot be received to contradict the other (7) Impeaching evidence is admissible, even though the witness when cross-examined as to the contra- [illegible] not (8) dicting expressions shou [illegible] such According to the Engl [illegible] icient statement can be given [illegible] s and to designate the particular occasion, should be mentioned to the witness and he must be asked whether or not he had made such statement. In other words, it is necessary, before giving evidence for the purpose of contradicting a witness [illegible] the interrogation of the witness [illegible] This is not made neces- [illegible] oth usual and advisable and just to the witness to first interrogate him, whenever that be possible, in order that he may be able to deny, admit, or explain his statement.(11) The Act has made this necessary in the case of written statements(12), (v. ante). Except [illegible] may be rele- [illegible] not admissible [illegible] impeach the credit of the witness and for the purpose of neutralising or raising doubt or suspicion as to those parts of the witness's testimony with which the contrary

(1) Ib.; and see Wharton, Ev., § 551.

(2) R. v. Uttamchand, 11 Bom H C R, 120, 121, 122 (1874), per Nanabhai Haridas, J.

(3) See cases cited in Woodroffe's "Criminal Procedure in India."

(4) Wharton, Ev, § 553

(5) R. v. Dina Bandhu, 8 C. W N, 218 (1903) at p. 221

(6) Wharton, Ev, § 554.

(7) Wharton, Ev. § 558.

(8) Crowley v. Page, 7 C. & P., 791.

(9) 28 & 29 Vic, c 18, s 1; Taylor, Ev, § 1445.

(10) Cunningham, Ev., 372; Field, Ev., 6th Ed, 468, 469

(11) Wharton, Ev., § 555; Burr Jones, Ev, § 849. This was laid down to be the proper course in R. v. Madho, 15 A., 25 (1892), and v. ante, last note to s 145 When witnesses under examination make statements which are contrary to statements previously made by them, the Court ought to draw their attention to the contradiction. Sham Lall v. Anuntee Lall, 24 W. R., 312 (1874).

(12) S. 145.

(13) See Burr. Jones, Ev., § 854

statement is at variance (1) So two persons made statements to the effect that C and another had robbed them and caused hurt while doing so. One statement was made to their employer and the other to the Head Constable. C was subsequently charged, and these two persons were called as witnesses for the prosecution, but they then denied that C was one of the men who had assaulted them. It was held that the former statements referred to, and which implicated the accused, could be used only under this clause for discrediting their evidence and not as substantive evidence against the accused (2) It is not necessary in order to introduce such contradictory evidence that it should contradict statements made by the witness in his examination-in-chief. Ordinarily the process is to ask the witness on cross-examination whether on a former occasion he did not make a statement conflicting with that made by him on his examination-in-chief But the conflict may take place as to matters originating in the cross-examination ; and then, if such matters are material, contradiction by this process is equally permissible (3) A statement to contradict the evidence of a witness may be contained in a series of documents, not one of which taken by itself would amount to a contradiction of his evidence.(4) As to the use of previous statements under section 288 of the Criminal Procedure Code, see note (5)

The Act as originally drafted contained the following additional section relating to the subject of character .—" In trials for rape or attempts to commit rape, the fact that the woman on whom the alleged offence was committed is a common prostitute or that her conduct was generally unchaste is relevant ". Clause (4 separate section, and it he case now mentioned, the witness as to show

directly that the act in question has not been committed In trials for rape or attempts to commit that crime, not only is evidence of general bad character admissible under the first Clause " to show that the prosecutrix ought not to be believed upon her oath," but so also is proof that she is a reputed prostitute for it goes far towards raising an inference that she yielded willingly. In such cases, general evidence of this kind will on this ground be received though the woman be not called as a witness, and though, if called, she be not asked, in cross-examination, any questions tending to impeach her character for chastity. Counsel for the defence cannot, however, prove specific immoral acts with the prisoner unless he has first given the prosecutrix an opportunity of denying or explaining them Moreover, the prosecutrix if cross-examiend as to particular acts of immorality with other men, may decline to answer such questions, while if she answers them in the negative, witnesses cannot be called to contradict her.(6)

The Act does not in terms provide for either of these, but as already Re-establishing credit. Re-crimination.

witness's character for truth calling him may sustain his er of the impeaching witness Whether a collateral attack admits sustaining testimony, that is, whether such a course is open where the

(1) v. ante, p 974, and R. v Jagardeo Panid (1906), A W N , 64 (examination of police to prove former statement).

(2) R v Cherath Choyi, 26 M., 191 (1902)

(3) Wharton, Ev , § 552

(4) Jackson v Thomason, 1 B S, 745.

(5) Woodroffe's " Criminal Procedure in India "

(6) Taylor, Ev , § 363 But to show consent she may be cross-examined as to other immoral acts with the prisoner, and if she denies them they may be independently proved. R. v. Riley, 18 R B. D., 481; Taylor, Ev , § 1441.

(7) ante, p 978, and Wharton, Ev., §§ 568, 569; and as to the order of introduction of evidence which is at discretion the Court, v. ib, § 571.

testified to a fact cannot be regarded as relevant to the issue and cannot therefore be given in evidence.(1)

When it is intended to throw discredit upon the evidence of any witness nothing is more common in practice (especially in criminal cases) than for the Counsel for the defence to prove, if it can be proved, that that witness has previously made statements inconsistent with his evidence at the trial. When this fact is satisfactorily established, the Court cannot but regard the evidence of such witness with suspicion, and the fact is established by the evidence of any one to whom such statements were made, or in whose presence or hearing they were made.(2) As to statements reduced to writing by a police-officer under section 162 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, see note.(3)

Where the impeaching declarations were oral, it is of course necessary to call the persons who heard them.(4) A statement by J to H was reported at the thana by the latter and there recorded: held that though the evidence of J could be contradicted by the evidence of H proving the statement made to him by J, it could not under this clause be contradicted by what the police recorded as the first information.(5) Generally, whenever on a former occasion it was the duty of the witness to state the whole truth, it is admissible to show that the witness in his evidence omitted facts sworn to by him at the trial and that he now states facts which he then did not state.(6) To make the impeaching statement admissible, it must be in some point a contradictory opposite of the statement made by the witness on trial. If the two statements are reconcilable, one cannot be received to contradict the other.(7) Impeaching evidence is admissible, even though the witness when cross-examined as to the contra- ... or not (8) dicting expressions shou ... such According to the Engl ... icient statement can be given ... s and to designate the partic ... words, he must be asked whether or not he had made such statement. In other words, it is necessary, before giving evidence for the purpose of contradicting a witness to lay a foundation for the evidence to be given by the interrogation of the witness himself and by obtaining his denial or non-admission. This is not made necessary by the terms of the present section.(10) But it is both usual and advisable and just to the witness to first interrogate him, whenever that be possible, in order that he may be able to deny, admit, or explain his statement.(11) The Act has made this necessary in the case of written statements(12), (v. ante). Except where the witness is a party in which case his previous statement may be relevant as an admission, the previous contradictory statement is not admissible as proof of the facts therein asserted: it can only be admitted to impeach the credit of the witness and for the purpose of neutralising or raising doubt or suspicion as to those parts of the witness's testimony with which the contrary

(1) Ib.; and see Wharton, Ev, § 551

(2) R. v Uttamchand, 11 Bom. H C. R., 120, 121, 122 (1874), per Nanabhai Haridas, J.

(3) See cases cited in Woodroffe's "Criminal Procedure in India"

(4) Wharton, Ev., § 553

(5) R. v Dina Bandhu, 8 C. W. N, 218 (1903) at p. 221.

(6) Wharton, Ev., § 554.

(7) Wharton, Ev. § 558

(8) Crowley v. Page, 7 C. & P, 791

(9) 28 & 29 Vic, c. 18, s 1; Taylor, Ev, § 1445.

(10) Cunningham, Ev, 372: Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 468, 469

(11) Wharton, Ev., § 555, Burr Jones Ev., § 849. This was laid down to be the proper course in R v. Matho, 15 A. 25 (1892), and v. ante, last note to s. 145 When witnesses under examination make statements which are contrary to statements previously made by them, the Court ought to draw their attention to the contradiction Sham Lall v. Annuee Lall, 24 W. R. 312 (1874).

(12) S 145

(13) See Burr. Jones, Ev., § 854

statement is at variance (1) So two persons made statements to the effect that C and another had robbed them and caused hurt while doing so. One statement was made to their employer and the other to the Head Constable C was subsequently charged, and these two persons were called as witnesses for the prosecution, but they then denied that C was one of the men who had assaulted them. It was held that the former statements referred to, and which implicated the accused, could be used only under this clause for discrediting their evidence and not as substantive evidence against the accused (2) It is not necessary in order to introduce such contradictory evidence that it should contradict statements made by the witness in his examination-in-chief. Ordinarily the process is to ask the witness on cross-examination whether on a former occasion he did not make a statement conflicting with that made by him on his examination-in-chief But the conflict may take place as to matters originating in the cross-examination; and then, if such matters are material, contradiction by this process is equally permissible (3) A statement to contradict the evidence of a witness may be contained in a series of documents, not one of which taken by itself would amount to a contradiction of his evidence.(4) As to the use of previous statements under section 288 of the Criminal Procedure Code, see note (5)

The Act as originally drafted contained the following additional section relating to the subject of character :—"In trials for rape or attempts to commit rape, the fact that the woman on whom the alleged offence was committed is a common prostitute or that her conduct was generally unchaste is relevant". It was, however, thought unnecessary to retain this as a separate section, and it was accordingly incorporated with the present one In the case now mentioned, evidence is receivable not so much to shake the credit of the witness as to show directly that the act in question has not been committed In trials for rape or attempts to commit that crime, not only is evidence of general bad character admissible under the first Clause "to show that the prosecutrix ought not to be believed upon her oath," but so also is proof that she is a reputed prostitute for it goes far towards raising an inference that she yielded willingly. In such cases, general evidence of this kind will on this ground be received though the wo[illegible] Clause (4)

cross-[illegible]

Couns[illegible]

prisoner unless he has first given the prosecutrix an opportunity of denying or explaining them Moreover, the prosecutrix if cross-examiend as to particular acts of immorality with other men, may decline to answer such questions, while if she answers them in the negative, witnesses cannot be called to contradict her.(6)

The Act does not in terms provide for either of these, but as already [illegible]

---

(1) v ante, p 974, and R v Jagardeo Panid (1906), A W N., 64 (examination of police to prove former statement).

(2) R v Cherath Choyi, 26 M, 191 (1902)

(3) Wharton, Ev, § 552.

(4) Jackson v Thomason, 1 B S, 745

(5) Woodroffe's "Criminal Procedure in India."

(6) Taylor, Ev, § 363. But to show consent she may be cross-examined [illegible] other immoral acts with the prisoner [illegible] if she denies them they may be i[illegible] ly proved R. v Riley, 18 R. E [illegible] Taylor, Ev., § 1441.

(7) ante, p 978, and [illegible] 568, 569; and as to the [illegible] tion of evidence which [illegible] the Court, v. ib., § [illegible]

witness is attacked upon the other grounds mentioned in this section or sections 153, 146, is a matter [illegible] cases here referred to.(1) It [illegible] is so far impeached by putting [illegible] is admissible of his good reput[illegible] such testimony can be receive[illegible] of the witness or upon the el[illegible] cross-examination.(3) On the other hand, [illegible] disparaging to the witness in opposing case is that the witness testified under corrupt motives, this being involved in the attack on his credibility, it is but proper that such evidence should be rebutted.(4) The arguments for the admission of rebutting testimony to good character in all cases is that since the object of the attack is to impeach the witness, the mode of such attack is immaterial, and that [illegible] exist for sustaining the witness, as w[illegible] to his bad reputation; on the other [illegible] evidence in all cases may lead to confusion and the multiplicity of collateral issues.(5) It is of course clear that in any case, and as a general rule, a party cannot fortify the credit of his witness by proving good character for truth until the credibility of the witness has been assailed.(6)

Questions tending to corroborate evidence of relevant fact admissible

156. When a witness whom it is intended to corroborate gives evidence of any relevant fact, he may be questioned as to any other circumstances which he observed at or near to the time or place at which such relevant fact occurred, if the Court is of opinion that such circumstances, if proved, would corroborate the testimony of the witness as to the relevant fact which he testifies.

Illustration

A, an accomplice, gives an account of a robbery in which he took part. He describes various incidents unconnected with the robbery, which occurred on his way to and from the place where it was committed.

Independent evidence of these facts may be given in order to corroborate his evidence as to the robbery itself.

Principle.—See Note, post.

s. 3 ("Fact") s. 3 ("Court") s. 3 ("Relevant")

Markby, Ev., 109, 110 Cunningham, Ev., 156

COMMENTARY.

Corroboration of witness

This section provides for the admission of evidence given for the purpose not of proving a directly relevant fact but of testing the witness's truthfulness. There is often no better way of doing this than by ascertaining the accuracy

(1) See the subject discussed in Burr. Jones, Ev., § 870

(2) State v. Roe, 12 Vt., 111 (Amer.); Paine v. Tilden, 20 Vt., 554, Wharton, Ev., § 569; Burr. Jones, Ev., § 870.

(3) Wharton, Ev. p. 557, note (1) and cases there cited; Burr. Jones, § 870. It is said to be the better view that the evidence is not admissible though there are cases to the contrary; Burr. Jones, Ev., §§ 871, 870. In Taylor Ev., § 1476, however, the rule is stated to be that "where evidence of contradictory statements or of other improper conduct on his part has been either elicited from a witness on cross-examination or obtained from other witnesses with the view of impeaching his veracity—his general character for truth being thus in some sort put in issue, general evidence that he is a man of strict integrity and scrupulous regard for truth will be admitted

(4) Wharton, Ev., § 570

(5) Burr. Jones, Ev., §§ 871, 870

(6) Ib., §§ 868, 870.

of his evidence as to surrounding circumstances, though they are not so immediately connected with the facts of the case as to be in themselves relevant. While on the one hand, important corroboration may be given in the case of a truthful witness, a valuable field for cross-examination and exposure is afforded in the case of a false witness In [illegible] boration, it is necessary to elicit [illegible] instance from the witness himself, [illegible]
This section, in effect, declares evidence of certain facts to be admissible ; and if it had not been inserted, the Judge would have had to determine the relevancy of these facts by reference to the 7th and 11th section ; and he might perhaps have been influenced by the practice in England which has been against the admission of such evidence (2) It is not incumbent on a party to give corroborative evidence of statements not challenged by the other party.(3) In the case noted it was held that where witnesses for the prosecution were proved to be untruthful in the greater part of their evidence, it would be dangerous to convict on the residue unless it was corroborated.(4)

157. In order to corroborate the testimony of a witness, any former statement made by such witness relating to the same fact, at or about the time when the fact took place, or before any authority legally competent to investigate the fact, may be proved.

Former statements of witness may be proved to corroborate later testimony as to same fact.

Principle—The force of any corroboration (which assumes that there is something to corroborate)(5) by means of previous consistent statements depends upon the truth of the proposition that he who is consistent deserves to be believed The corroborative value, however, of such previous statements is of a very varying character, dependent upon the circumstances of each case, and a person may equally persistently adhere to falsehood once uttered, if there be a motive for it.(6) s 3 ("Fact") s 3 ("Proved.")

Gilbert, Ev, 135, 136; Wharton, Ev, § 570; Taylor, Ev., § 1476; Starkie, Ev., 253; Best, Ev, p 600, ib, 11th Ed, pp 580, etc; Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 480, 481; Markby, Ev., 100, 110, Field, Ev., 6th Ed. 470.

COMMENTARY.

Former statements provable for corroboration.

A deposition admitted under s. 288 of the Criminal Procedure Code is "testimony" within the meaning of this section.(7) This section is not in accordance with English practice, according to which evidence of prior statements is not generally admissible to corroborate a witness.(8) It is argued that by offering a witness, a party is held to recommend him as worthy of credence, and warranting his veracity, corroboration is not permitted(9); that former statements are no proof that entirely different

(1) Cunningham, Ev, s 156
(2) Markby, Ev, 109, 110.
(3) Moulvie Mahomed Ikramull Huq v. Wilkie (1907), 11 C. W. N., 946
(4) Hari Krishna v. R, 42 C, 784 (1915); see R. v Babar Ali Gazi, 42 C., 789 (1915) corroboration of confession of co-accused.
(5) Nagina v Emp, 19 All. L. J, 947 (1921)
(6) R. v Malapa bin, 11 Bom. H C. R, 196, 198 (1874)
(7) Velliah Kone v. Emp, 24 Cr. L. J., 417 (1922); diss. from Emp v. Akbar, 34 B, 599, followed in Man Chand v Emp., 25 Cr L J, 1201 See Addendum to s. 8; s. c, 5 L, 324 (1924)
(8) Wharton, Ev., § 570; Taylor, Ev, § 1476; Starkie, Ev., 253; Best, Ev., p 600 In certain cases previous similar statements are admissible, see Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed., 483
(9) Best, Ev, 11th Ed, pp 580, etc.

statements may not have been made at other times and are therefore no evidence of constancy; that if the sworn statements are of doubtful credibility those made without the sanction of an oath, or its equivalent, cannot corroborate them(1), that a witness having given a contrary account, although not upon oath, necessarily impeaches either his veracity or his memory: but his having asserted the same thing does not in general carry his credibility further than nor so far as his oath (2) The section, however, proceeds upon the principle that consistency is a ground for belief in the witness's veracity.(3) So Chief Baron Gilbert was of opinion that the party who called a witness against whom contradictory statements had been proved(4) might show that he had affirmed the same thing before on other occasions and that he was therefore "consistent with himself."(5)

The section thus declares certain statements to be relevant which, but for it, might have been open to th [illegible] the only condition being that this previous state [illegible] time of the occurrence or (b) [illegible] to some extent, a safeguard against fictitious statements designedly made to support subsequent evidence; but it is obvious that the corroborative value of such previous statements depends entirely on the circumstances of each case, and that they may easily be altogether valueless. The mere fact of a man having on a previous occasion made the same assertion generally, though not always(7), adds but little to the chances of its truthfulness, and such evidence should be distinguished from that which is really corroborative.(8) One may persistently adhere to falsehood once uttered, if there is a motive for it; and should the value of such a corroboration ever come to be rated higher than it is now, nothing would be easier than (to take an example) for designing and unscrupulous persons to procure the conviction of any innocent men who might be obnoxious to them, by first committing offences and afterwards making statements to different people and at different times and places, implicating those innocent men.(9) "The statement, which may be proved under the section in order to corroborate, may be a statement made either on oath or otherwise, and either in ordinary conversation or before some person who had authority to question the person who made it. It may also be verbal or in writing. If not made before any person legally competent to investigate the fact, it would seem that it must have been made at or about the time when the fact took place.(10) In India perhaps more particularly than in other countries the statements made by those who have knowledge of the circumstances connected with the commission of an offence, immediately after the occurrence and before they can be tampered with by the police or others, are important to the ascertainment of truth."(11) Where a person making a dying declaration chances to live, his

(1) Wharton, Ev, § 570

(2) Starkie, Ev., 253.

(3) R. v Malapa bin, 11 Bom H. C. R., 196, 198 (1874); R. v. Bepin Biswas, 10 C., 970, 973 (1884) It had long been the practice in India to admit this evidence: see Act II of 1855, s. 31, the provisions of which have been simplified and reproduced in the above section. See R. v Bishonath Pal, 12 W. R, Cr., 3 (1869); R. v. Bissen Nath, 7 W. R. Cr., 31 (1867): Muthukumaraswami Pillai v. R., 35 M. 397 (1912). Mussamat Naina Koer v. Gobardhan Singh, (1919) Pat., 352 (admissibility of entries).

(4) This is not necessary under the section.

(5) Gilbert, Ev, 135, 136.

(6) Markby, Ev, 110; in Gilbert, Ev., 135, 136, these statements are treated as exceptions to the hearsay rule

(7) An instance of the value of such evidence in this country is pointed out in the quotation from Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 470 cited post.

(8) Cunningham, Ev, s 157

(9) R v. Malapa bin, 11 Bom H C. R., 196, 198 (1874).

(10) See Oriental Government, etc., Co., Ld v. Narasimha Chari, 25 M., 213 (1901).

(11) Field, Ev, 6th Ed., 470; and see Markby, Ev, 100. "There is no doubt that this kind of evidence is extremely useful in criminal cases where there is a suggestion that a witness is telling a made-up story" statement cannot be admitted in evidence as a dying declaration under s. 32, but it may be relied on under this section to corroborate the complainant when examined in the case (1) It has been held by the Calcutta High Court that section 162 of the Criminal Procedure Code prohibits the use of the record of the statement of a witness taken under section 161 as evidence, but does not override the general provisions of this Act as to proof of such statement by oral evidence, and such statement is admissible under this section in corroboration of the evidence of the witness given at the trial.(2) And a Full Bench of the Madras High Court has later agreed with this ruling(3), and in another case the Bombay High Court has followed it, though with hesitation.(4) But the amended Code excludes both the written record and viva voce statement.(5)

The evidence is only admissible in corroboration. In the undermentioned case(6), in which the prisoner had been tried and convicted of an offence the depositions of witnesses given in a previous trial of other persons charged with him. The witnesses, orn and said, " I gave

The irregularity and injustice of this mode of proceeding were commented upon, and it was pointed out that the depositions containing the statements of a witness as to the commission of the offence in the earlier trial would have been admissible to corroborate his testimony given in the trial of the prisoner. The evidence of the witness whose testimony it was proposed to corroborate should have been first taken, and after such witness had finished his evidence, and not before, the former deposition might have been put in, not to add to his testimony, but simply to corroborate it by showing that the statements made by him, while the facts were still fresh in his memory, correspond with those made by him in the Court of Session in the present case. In the case cited, at the time when each deposition was put in, the evidence of the witness not having been given in the Court of Session, there was nothing in the record which made it admissible. There was in fact nothing which was corroborated by it In the undermentioned case(7) a witness was asked with a view to corroborating another person intended to be called as a witness whether or not the latter person had made any statement to him with respect to one of the matters in suit. It was allow evidence to be given under this section out of the regular order upon an undertaking by Counsel to call the witness sought to be corroborated, though such a course will be found in most cases to be inconvenient. If necessary, a witness will be allowed to be recalled to give evidence under this section after the person sought to be corroborated has given his evidence.(8) And in the undermentioned case, where an advocate was charged with having advised bribery, and the charge was founded on conversations with another Counsel it was held that evidence of persons to whom the latter had in the absence of the accused repeated the conversation was admissible under this section, but did not help the determination of the real issue (the truth of the charge).(9)

(1) R v Rama Sattu, 4 Bom L. R, 434 (1902)

(2) Fanindra Nath Banerjee v R. (1908), 36 C, 281.

(3) Muthukumarasami Pillai v R, 35 M., 397 (1912) per Curiam

(4) R v Hanmaraddi, 39 B, 58 (1915) per Shah J "I incline to this view. But this point is difficult and the cases opposed" See Rustam v R, 7 A L. J, 468 (1907), R. v Balaji, 9 Bom L R 366 (1907).

(5) See Woodroffe's "Criminal Procedure in India" s 162.

(6) R. v Bishonath, 12 W. R., Cr., 3 (1869).

(7) Nistarini Dossee v. Nundo Lall, 5 C. W. N, xvi (1900).

(8) Ib.

(9) In the matter of Bomanjee Cowasjee P. C. (1906) 34 C., 129; 34 I. A., 55

Such statements must also be regularly proved by the person who received them or by some one who heard them given.(1) When it is desired to corroborate a witness by a previous deposition, or by a first information report recorded under s. 154, Criminal Procedure Code, these documents must be produced, for they are documents required by law to be reduced to writing and secondary evidence of their contents cannot be given (2) The case of a statement by way of complaint against the commission of a crime has been already dealt with by the eighth section, Illustrations (j) and (k), ante. As independent evidence of a fact, statements are, by that section, relevant as conduct, if they accompany and explain facts other than statements.(3) By a Full Bench of the Madras High Court it was held that previous statements of an accomplice may sometimes legally amount to corroboration of evidence given by him at the trial and that an Inspector of the Criminal Investigation Department is "an authority legally competent to investigate" within the meaning of this section.(4) And in a case in the Bombay High Court where a witness had varied his story in different statements, it was held that under this section previous statements are only admissible to corroborate statements made at the trial.(5)

What matters may be provable in connection with proved statements relevant under section 32 or 33.

158. Whenever any statement, relevant under section 32 or 33, is proved, all matters may be proved either in order to contradict or to corroborate it, or in order to impeach or confirm the credit of the person by whom it was made, which might have been proved if that person had been called as a witness and had denied upon cross-examination the truth of the matter suggested

Principle.—See note post.

s 3 ("Relevant").
ss. 23, 33 (Statements by persons who cannot be called as witnesses)
s. 135 (Evidence to contradict.)
s. 3 ("Proved.")
s. 157 (Corroboration)
s 155 (Impeaching credit)

Steph. Dig, Art. 135; Burr. Jones, Ev., § 849; Norton, Ev, 335, 336; Cunningham, Ev., § 158.

COMMENTARY.

Corroboration or contradiction of statements under section 32 or 33.

This section refers to certain statements made by persons, who from some unavoidable cause cannot be produced, and of which under sections 32 or 33 evidence may, in the circumstances there described, be given. The present section has the effect of exposing any such statement, when admitted, as far as may be, to all the scrutiny, and giving it the advantage of all the corroboration, which it would have had on the cross-examination of the person making it. The statements admissible under section 32 or 33 are exceptional cases, and the evidence is only admitted from the impossibility, improbability or great inconvenience of producing the authors of the statements. It is only just, therefore, that all the same safeguards for veracity should be provided as if the authors of the statements were themselves before the Court and subjected to oath and cross-examination.(6) So with regard to the impeachment of witnesses, the general rule applies where the witness whose testimony is attacked is

(1) R. v. Bissen Nath, 7 W. R., Cr., 31 (1867).

(2) Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 470; see s. 91, ante, for an instance of the use of a deposition in corroboration, see R. v. Ishri Singh, 8 A., 672 (1886).

(3) v. ante, s. 8.

(4) Muthu Kumaraswami Pillai v R., F. B. 35 M 397 (1912).

(5) R. v. Akbar Badoo (1910), 34 B. 599.

(6) Norton, Ev., 335, 336; Cunningham, Ev., s. 158.

deceased or absent. Thus where the testimony given on a former trial by a witness, since deceased, was read to the jury, it was held competent to show that such witness had stated since the trial that such statement was untrue.(1)

Refreshing memory.

159. A witness may, while under examination, refresh his memory by referring to any writing made by himself at the time of the transaction concerning which he is questioned, or so soon afterwards that the Court considers it likely that the transaction was at that time fresh in his memory.

The witness may also refer to any such writing made by any other person, and read by the witness within the time aforesaid, if when he read it he knew it to be correct.

When witness may use copy of document to refresh memory.

Whenever a witness may refresh his memory by reference to any document, he may, with the permission of the Court, refer to a copy of such document: Provided the Court be satisfied that there is sufficient reason for the non-production of the original.

An expert may refresh his memory by reference to professional treatises.

Testimony to facts stated in document mentioned in section 159.

160. A witness may also testify to facts mentioned in any such document as is mentioned in section 159, although he has no specific recollection of the facts themselves, if he is sure that the facts were correctly recorded in the document.

Illustration

A book-keeper may testify to facts recorded by him in books regularly kept in the course of business, if he knows that the books were correctly kept, although he has forgotten the particular transactions entered.

Right of adverse party as to writing used to refresh memory.

161. Any writing referred to under the provisions of the two last preceding sections must be produced and shown to the adverse party if he requires it; such party may, if he pleases, cross-examine the witness thereupon.

Principle.—Though there are some objections to such a course(2), it is yet clear that an important aid to exactness would be neglected, if, human memory and inaccuracy being what they are, a witness were not at liberty to justify his recollection of facts by reference to written memoranda concerning them.(3) It is desirable to secure the full benefit of the witness's recollection as to the whole of the facts(4), and that a witness should not suffer from a

(1) Craft v Com., 81 Ky., 250 (Amer.) cited with other American cases in Burr Jones Ev., § 849, where the passage reads "incompetent," but this appears to be a mistake. For another instance of the application of this section, see the case of Fool Kissory v Nobin Chunder, 23 C., 441. See Mussumat Naina Koer v Gobardhan Singh (1919), Pat. 352.

(2) See Goodeve, Ev., 207, citing Bentham. See also his Judicial Evidence, Ch. II, "Notes whether consultable"

(3) Cunningham Ev., 377; for the grounds of admission where the document cannot be said strictly to refresh the memory, see Notes, post.

(4) In re Jhubboo Mahton, 8 C., 739, 744, 745 (1882), per Field, J.

mistake and may explain an inconsistency.(1) Indeed a witness is under an obligation to refresh his memory if he can and is invited by the Court to do so, it being his duty to lay the whole truth before the Court to the best of his ability.(2) It is further to be observed that the committing of a statement to writing calls forth unavoidably a greater degree of attention than the exhibition of it viva voce in the way of ordinary conversation. If this be done honestly at the time of the occurrence which forms the subject of the statement or so soon afterwards that the incidents must have been fresh in the writer's memory, the writing is a most reliable means of preserving the truth, more reliable indeed than simple memory itself.(3) The law, however, here prescribes certain conditions with a view to securing that the memoranda so employed shall be trustworthy. These conditions are laid down by the sections above-mentioned.(4) The witness may be cross-examined as to the paper in his hands, since in no other way can the accuracy and recollection of the witness be ascertained; and it is only by the production and inspection of the document and by such cross-examination that it can be ascertained whether the memorandum does assist the memory or not.(5) The right of production, inspection and cross-examination is necessary to check the use of improper documents and to compare the witness's oral testimony with his written statement.(6)

s. 3 ("Court.") s. 3 ("Document")

Steph Dig, Art, 136; Taylor, Ev., §§ 1406—1413; 2 Ph & Am., 480—487; Greenleaf, Ev., §§ 437—439; Wharton, Ev., §§ 516—526; Stewart Rapalje's Law of Witnesses, §§ 279—285; Burr. Jones, Ev., §§ 877—886; Powell, Ev., 9th Ed, §§ 169—172; Dickson's Ev. n § 1779; Wood's Practice, Ev., §§ 129—136; Goodeve, Ev., §§ 207, 209; Wigmore, Ev., §§ 758—764

COMMENTARY.

Refreshing memory

A witness will be allowed to have his memory, respecting anything upon which he is questioned, refreshed by means of written memoranda. It is not necessary that the document referred to should be one which is admissible in evidence. So in an action for money lent, an insufficiently stamped promissory note purporting to be signed by the defendant and expressed to be given for money lent was put into the defendant's hands by the plaintiffs' Counsel, for the purpose of refreshing his memory and obtaining from him an admission of the loan: held that the plaintiffs were entitled to use the note for that purpose notwithstanding the provisions of the Stamp Act, that an instrument not duly stamped "shall not be given in evidence or be available for any purpose whatever."(7) It has been said (8) that there are three classes of cases in which this may be allowed :—(a) Where the writing serves only to revive or assist the memory of the witness and to bring to his mind a recollection of the facts. This is the case referred to in section 159. Here the writing is in the stricter sense used to refresh the memory, that is, the witness has a present memory of the facts after the inspection of the writing. In this case the document is resorted to to revive a faded memory and the witness swears from the actual Section 159.

(1) Halliday v Holgate, 17 L. T., O. S., 18.

(2) Harkhu v. Emp, 19 All. L. J, 76 (1921), s. c., 23 Cr. L. J., 143 (1920); but see In re Kali Churn, 12 C. L. R, 233.

(3) Field Ev. 6th Ed, 472, 473, citing Bentham, Jud Ev.

(4) Cunningham, Ev., 377.

(5) Wharton, Ev, 525; Burr. Jones, Ev, § 879

(6) In re Ihubboo Mahton, 8 C., 739, 745 (1882), per Field, J.

(7) Birchalul v Bullough, 1 Q B (1896), 325.

(8) 2 Ph. & Arn, §§ 480, 491; 1 Bow ed in Greenleaf, Ev., § 437; Burr Jones, Ev, §§ 878, 884; Stewart Rapalje's et cit., 461, 462; Starkie, Ev., 177, 178; Taylor, Ev., § 1412; Powell, Ev., 9th Ed. 169 and other writers. These sections substantially follow the English rules in these matters recollection of the facts which the document evokes.(1) Memory is in other writing before, tioned in it, yet to be correct,

see section 160, Illustration.(2) In this case the witness has no present memory of the fact itself, but if the witness be correct in that which he does positively which nevertheless enables him to swear to a particular fact from the conviction of his mind on seeing a writing which he knows to be genuine. In this case the testimony of the witness is admissible to prove a fact, although he has neither any recollection of the fact itself, nor mediate knowledge of the fact by means of a memorial of the truth of which he has a present recollection. This happens when the memorandum is such as to enable the witness to state with certainty that it would not have been made had not the fact in question been true. Here the truth of the evidence does not wholly depend on the contents of the document itself or on any recollection of the witness of the document itself, or of the circumstances under which it was made, but upon a conviction, arising from the knowledge of his own habits and conduct, sufficiently strong to make the existence of the document wholly irreconcilable with the non-existence of the fact, and so to convince him of the affirmative.(4) Thus, in proving the execution of an instrument (one of the most ordinary and cogent cases within this class) where a witness, called to prove the execution of a deed, sees his signature to the attestation, and says he is thereby sure that he saw the party execute the deed, that is a sufficient proof of the execution of the deed, although the witness should add that he has no recollection of the fact of the execution of the deed.(5) The admission of such evidence is, however, not confined to attestations of the execution of written instruments.(6)

These last two classes, which may logically be considered together, are the subject-matter of section 160 (7) In the two latter classes of cases, it is of Sectio able to depose have no pre-ion 159 deals
In the cases

(1) Goodeve, Ev., 209, 213, Burr Jones, Ev , § 884

(2) And cases cited in Taylor, Ev., § 1412.

(3) Starkie, Ev., 177, 178.

(4) Starkie, Ev , 178

(5) Per Bayley, J , in Maugham v Hubbard, 8 B & C , 14; and see Bringloe v Goodson, 5 Bing , N. C , 738; see Taylor, Ev , § 1412

(6) Maugham v Hubbard, supra.

(7) Field, Ev., 6th Ed 472, 473; The want of recollection of the facts mentioned in the two latter classes, though it does not affect the admissibility of the evidence, must yet be considered in deciding upon the amount of value to be assigned to it; ib, 657 658.

(8) 2 Ph. & Arn. Ev , 481, Starkie, 179, Maugham v Hubbard, 8 B & C , 14; R v St Martins Leicester, 2 A & E , 210

(9) Goodeve, Ev., 209 In the first of the three classes memory is restored, and in the second history is verified, ib , 213

(10) So s 160 speaks of "testify to facts" instead of "refresh his memory" as in s 159. But the witness can only testify in the manner mentioned in the text; see Markby, Ev., 111, 112.

mistake and may explain an inconsistency.(1) Indeed a witness is under an obligation to refresh his memory if he can and is invited by the Court to do so, it being his duty to lay the whole truth before the Court to the best of his ability.(2) It is further to be observed that the committing of a statement to writing calls forth unavoidably a greater degree of attention than the exhibition of it viva voce in the way of ordinary conversation If this be done honestly at the time of the occurrence which forms the subject of the statement or so soon afterwards that the incidents must have been fresh in the writer's memory, the writing is a most reliable means of preserving the truth, more reliable indeed than simple memory itself.(3) The law, however, here prescribes certain conditions with a view to securing that the memoranda so employed shall be trustworthy. These conditions are laid down by the sections abovementioned.(4) The witness may be cross-examined as to the paper in his hands, since in no other way can the accuracy and recollection of the witness be ascertained; and it is only by the production and inspection of the document and by such cross-examination that it can be ascertained whether the memorandum does assist the memory or not.(5) The right of production, inspection and cross-examination is necessary to check the use of improper documents and to compare the witness's oral testimony with his written statement (6)

s. 3 ("Court") s 3 ("Document")

Steph Dig., Art, 136; Taylor, Ev., §§ 1406—1413; 2 Ph. & Arn, 480—487; Greenleaf, Ev., §§ 437—439; Wharton, Ev., §§ 516—526; Stewart Rapalje's Law of Witnesses §§ 279—285; Burr. Jones, Ev., §§ 877—886; Powell, Ev., 9th Ed, §§ 169—172; Dickson's Ev., ii § 1779; Wood's Practice, Ev., §§ 129—136; Goodeve, Ev., §§ 207, 209; Wigmore, Ev., §§ 758—764.

COMMENTARY.

Refreshing memory

A witness will be allowed to have his memory, respecting anything upon which he is questioned, refreshed by means of written memoranda. It is not necessary that the document referred to should be one which is admissible in evidence. So in an action for money lent, an insufficiently stamped promissory note purporting to be signed by the defendant and expressed to be given for money lent was put into the defendant's hands by the plaintiffs' Counsel, for the purpose of refreshing his memory and obtaining from him an admission of the loan: held that the plaintiffs were entitled to use the note for that purpose notwithstanding the provisions of the Stamp Act, that an instrument not duly stamped "shall not be given in evidence or be available for any purpose whatever."(7) It has been said (8) that there are three classes of cases in which this may be allowed:—(a) Where the writing serves only to revive or assist the memory of the witness and to bring to his mind a recollection of the facts. This is the case referred to in section 159. Here the writing is in the stricter sense used to refresh the memory, that is, the witness has a present memory of the facts after the inspection of the writing. In this case the document is resorted to to revive a faded memory and the witness swears from the actual Section 159.

(1) Halliday v. Holgate, 17 L T, O. S, 18

(2) Harkhu v. Emp, 19 All. L J., 76 (1921); s c, 23 Cr L J, 143 (1920); but see In re Kali Churn, 12 C. L. R., 233.

(3) Field Ev. 6th Ed., 472, 473, citing Bentham, Jud Ev.

(4) Cunningham, Ev., 377.

(5) Wharton, Ev., 525; Burr. Jones, Ev., § 879.

(6) In re Ihubboo Mahton, 8 C., 739, 745 (1882), per Field, J.

(7) Birchalul v Bullough, 1 Q B (1896), 325

(8) 2 Ph & Arn, §§ 480, 491; followed in Greenleaf, Ev., § 437; Burr Jones Ev., §§ 878, 884; Stewart Rapalje's op cit, 461, 462; Starkie, Ev., 177, 178; Taylor, Ev., § 1412; Powell, Ev, 9th Ed. 169 and other writers These sections substantially follow the English rules in these matters

A medical man in giving evidence may refresh his memory by referring to a report which he has made of his post-mortem examination, but the report itself cannot be treated as evidence and no facts can be taken therefrom.(1) In Scotch law, in the case of medical, or other scientific, reports or certificates which are lodged, in process before the trial and libelled on as productions in the indictment, the witness is allowed to read the report as his deposition to the jury, confirming it at its close by a declaration on his oath that it is a true report (2) " In India the r ciple. Where a dead body is se of a post-mortem examination, a " legal evidence who refreshes

In order to be useful for the purpose of refreshment a document need not be admissible itself as independent evidence. So though Jumma-wasil-baki papers are not admissible as independent evidence of the amount of rent mentioned therein; yet it is right that a person who has prepared such papers on receiving payment of the rents should refresh his memory from such papers when giving evidence as to the amount of rent payable.(4) Nor does a writing used to refresh the memory thereby become evidence of itself. Consequently it is not necessary that it should even be admissible, and a document which cannot be read for want of a stamp may be referred to by the witness in giving his evidence.(5) The question sometimes arises whether memoranda used for refreshment are themselves to be admitted in evidence. When the witness after reference, finds his memory so refreshed that he can testify recollection independently of the memorandum, there is no reason or necessity for the introduction of the paper or writing itself; and it is not admissible. But another rule prevails when the witness cannot testify to the existing knowledge of the fact independently of the memorandum, but can testify that, at or about statement of the witness affirming the truth of the memorandum."(6) A witness may refresh his memory from a writing made by another person and inspected and signed by him at the close of the day on which it was made, when it brings to his mind neither any recollection of the facts mentioned that the speech should be proved verbatim, and it was held that such notes were admissible if the witness was sure that they were substantially accurate.(8)

(1) Roghuni Singh v. R, 9 C, 455, 460, 461 (1882), s c., 11 C. L. R., 569; see 2 W R, Cr., Let., 14; 6 W. R., Cr. Let., 3; R. v Jadab Das, 4 C. W. N., 129 (1899)

(2) Dickson's Law of Evidence in Scotland, Vol ii, § 1779; Alison's Criminal Law, 540—542, cited in Taylor, Ev., § 1413, p 1019, note (1), where the reasons are given for the rule.

(3) Field, Ev., 661, ib, 6th Ed 475, 476;

(4) Akhil Chundra v. Niyu, 10 C, 248 (1883), and see as to collection papers, Mahomed Mahmood v. Safar Ali, 11 C., 407, 409 (1885); so though neither statements under s. 161, Cr. Pr. Code (v. ante, p. 948) nor police-diaries (v. supra) are evidence in the case, they may still be used for the purpose of refreshing memory And see Tarucknath Mullick v. Jeamat Nosya, 5 C., 353 (1879). See Wharton, Ev., § 519.

(5) Taylor, Ev., § 1411; Wharton, Ev., § 520; as to want of stamp, see Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 468 and ante

(6) Burr Jones, Ev, § 886.

(7) Abdul Salim v. Emp., 49, C. 573 (1922).

(8) Mylapore Krishnasami v. R. (1909), 32 M, 384, (Sankaran Nair, J., dissenting fact not because he remembers it, but because of his confidence in the correctness of the writing.(1) As to the use of a copy in the cases dealt with in section 160, v. post. The meaning of the expression "if he is sure" is that the witness must satisfy the Court with reference to ordinary probabilities of his right to be sure that the record relied upon by him is correct.(2)

"Any writing."

The section says the witness may refer to any writing. It is immaterial therefore what the document is, whether it be a book of account, letter, bill of particulars of articles furnished, including such items as dates, weights and prices, way-bills, notes made by the witness, or any other document whatsoever which is effectual to assist the memory of the witness.(3) As to the significance of the words "while under examination," v. post, note to section 161. If the witness has become blind, the paper may be read over to him for the purpose of exciting his recollections.(4) And it has been held in America that where a paper is signed with the mark of a witness, who cannot read or write, it may be read over to him to the same purpose.(5)

A statement reduced to writing by a police-officer under section 162 of the Criminal Procedure Code cannot be used as evidence. But though it is not otherwise left in doubt, but cannot be used as containing entries which can of themselves be accepted as evidence of any date, fact or statement recorded in it.(7) Only the Police-officer who kept such diary can be confronted with it.(8) The statement of a person recorded under section 161 of the Criminal Procedure Code is inadmissible under that section, though it may be used by the Police-officer who recorded it to refresh his memory.(9) Under the amended Criminal Procedure Code a statement made to the Police cannot be used for any purpose except as provided in s. 162 of that Code.(10)

The dying statement of a deceased person, if not taken in the presence of the accused and as a formal deposition, must before it is admitted in evidence, be proved to have been made by the deceased. The statment may be proved in the ordinary way by the person who heard it, and the writing may be used for the purpose of refreshing the witness's memory.(11) The oral statement itself is admissible under section 32 (cl. 1) and not merely the record of it (12)

(1) Davis v. Field, 56, Vt, 426 (Amer). It has also been said that the witness is allowed to testify to the matter so recorded, because he knows he could not have made the entry unless the fact had been true· Costello v. Crowell, 133 Mass, 352 (Amer). See Abdul Salim v. King Emp, 35 C. L. J. 279 (1922); s. c. 49 C., 573.

(2) Yesuvadiyan v Subba Naiker, 52 I C, 704. The statement of law given in the first two paragraphs was approved in Abdul Salim v. Emp., 23 Cr. L. J. 657 (1921).

(3) See cases in Taylor, Ev, §§ 1406—1410; Burr. Jones, Ev., §§ 878, 880, 881 E g, a horoscope, Harbahadur Lal v Chandraj Bahadur, 21 O. C., 298; s c, 48 I. A, 100.

(4) Taylor, Ev., § 1410

(5) Commonwealth v Fox, 7 Gray (Mass), 558 (Amer.), cited Stewart Hapalje's op. cit, § 285; it should not be read before the jury, but the witness should withdraw with one of the Counsel for each side and have it read to him by them without comment; ib., and see Burr Jones, Ev, § 883.

(6) R. v. Sitaram Vithal, 11 B, 657 (1887); following R. v. Uttamchand Kapurchand, 11 Bom. H. C R., 120 (1874). And see to same effect R. v Ismal valad Fataru, 11 B, 659 (1887); Roghuni Singh v R., 9 C, 455, 455 (1882).

(7) Dal Singh v R, 44 I A, 137 (1917) approving, R. v. Mannu, F. B. 19 A, 390 (1897).

(8) Ib

(9) R. v. Steuart, 31 C., 1050 (1904) at p 1052.

(10) See Woodroffe's "Criminal Procedure in India."

(11) R. v. Samiruddin, 8 C., 211 (1882); s. c., 10 C. L. R., 11.

(12) Gowridas Namasudra v R., A C (1909), 36 C., 665.

With regard to the use of a copy of the document, the section lays at rest a doubtful question of English law (1) The Act treats the copy as primarily inadmissible, though it provides for its reception under the leave of the Court in a case in which the non-production of the original is sufficiently accounted existence and its

was made by the

in such a manner

as to enable the witness to swear to its accuracy.(3) The words "such document" in section 160 might be thought to include "a copy of such document" to which reference is made in the last paragraph of section 159. But whatever may be held to be the rule in the second(4) of the three classes of cases above mentioned(5), a copy is clearly inadmissible in the third class (6) Where the witness neither recollects the fact, nor remembers to have recognised the written statement as true, and the writing was not made by him, his testimony so far as it is founded upon the written paper, is but hearsay, and a witness can no more be permitted to give evidence of his inference from what a third person has written than from what a third person has said (7) But the Court will not compel a witness to refresh his memory when the result of his doing so would enable cross-examining Counsel to see a document which is otherwise privileged.(8)

The rule of exclusion on the ground of a document being a copy (and the Use of copy.

ugh in form a copy, nature of an original hich was one of a ence into the ledger day by day under his checking, the ledger was admitted without production of the waste-book. And though a mere extract from the original is sufficient, example, such a case as where it failed to set out should the witness swear to its substantial correctness.(10) In the undermentioned case(11) arbitration proceedings had been held some years prior to suit, and at their close a draft minute of the proceedings was prepared by the arbitrators and then fair copied by their clerk. A witness who was present at the arbitration, who had compared the draft and fair copy minutes made by the clerk, and had found the latter to be correct, was allowed under s. 159 to refresh his memory as to what occurred at the arbitration by reference to the fair copy minutes made by the arbitration clerk.

Experts may refresh their memory by reference to professional treatises(12), tables, calculations, lists of prices and the like.(13) So an actuary may refer to

(1) Taylor, Ev, § 1408.

(2) Ib, Burton v. Plummer, 2 A & E, 341 It has been held in America in some cases that the "best evidence" rule has here no application: Burr. Jones, § 881

(3) Taylor, Ev, § 1408

(4) v ante, pp 988—989. "The English rule is that if the copy be an imperfect extract, or be not proved to be a correct copy or if the witness have no independent recollection of the facts narrated therein, the original must be used;" Taylor, Ev., § 1409

(5) v ante, pp 988—989

(6) v ante, pp 988—989 See as to this question Markby, Ev, 112 (copy not allowed under s. 150) Cunningham, Ev., 378 (the same); Norton, Ev, 339 (s. 159 read with s 160 would admit the copy); Field, Ev., 6th Ed, 475 (Act is silent as to use of copy under s. 160).

(7) Greenleaf, Ev., § 436

(8) Nemi Chand v Wallace, 4 C. L. J, 268

(9) Burton v. Plummer, 2 A & E, 344; and see Horne v. Mackenzie, 6 C. & F., 628, 630, 645; Phipson, Ev., 3rd Ed, 446; ib, 5th Ed, 467

(10) The O'Connell Case, Armstrong and Trevor, 235

(11) Nistarini Dassi v Nundo Lali, 5 C. W. N. xvi (1900).

(12) S 159. In this instance, there is of course no condition attached as to the persons by whom or the time when the document must have been made

(13) Taylor, Ev, §§ 1422, 1406.

Any Criminal Court may send for the police-diaries of a case under inquiry or trial, and may use such diaries, not as evidence in the case but to aid it in such inquiry or trial. As to their use for refreshing, see note.(1) It has been held that a witness, who has the means of aiding his memory by a recourse to memoranda or pap at such papers, to enable him t a date, or to give more exact numbers, quantities, and the like.(2)

"Made by himself or by any other person."

The writing may have been either "made by himself or by any other person, provided the witness examined it and knew it to be correct when the facts were fresh in his mind.(3) It is not necessary that the writing should have been made by the witness; for it is the recollection and not the memorandum which is evidence. Thus a seaman has been allowed to refer to a logbook which though not written by himself, had from time to time, and while the occurrences were recent, been examined by him.(4) So it has been said that a witness at Sessions might be shown his former deposition before the committing Magistrate in order to refresh his memory a couple of months after, if such first deposition were taken immediately after the occurrence.(5)

But it is clear that a witness should not be allowed to use any document to refresh his memory which was made by another person, unless he knows it to be correct.

Time when the writing must have been made

Section 159 substantially follows ... when the writing must have been made, this r refresh the memory of a witness only recognised, at the time of the fact in question, or at furthest so recently after-wards as to render it probable that the memory of the witness had not then become defective.(6) Its own peculiar circumstances and the discretion of the trial Judge must govern each case raising this question, which in part also depends on the mental character and capacity of the witness. It is clear that the memorandum must not be used to convey original information to the witness. It is, however, impossible to lay down any precise rule as to how nearly contemporaneous with the fact or facts recorded, the memorandum must be (7) It has, however, been said(8), that usually "If the witness swears positively that the notes, though made ex post facto, were taken down at a time when he had a distinct recollection of the facts there narrated, he will be allowed to use them, though drawn up a considerable time after the transaction had occurred." But if there are any circumstances casting suspicion upon the memoranda, the Court should hold otherwise, as when the subsequent memorandum is prepared by the witness at the instance of an interested party or his attorney(9), or if the memorandum has been revised or corrected by such party or attorney.(10) and holding that the actual words were the facts to be proved) V. R. v. Rankin 7 St T, N S., 190; and Subramania Siva (in re) (1909), 32 M., 12.

---

(1) See Woodroffe's "Criminal Procedure in India," s 162.

(2) Chapin v Lapham, 23 Pick, 467 (Amer). State v. Staton, 114 N. C., 813 (Amer.), cited in Burr Jones, Ev, § 877.

(3) Taylor, Ev, § 1410; Wharton, Ev., § 522, Burr, Jones, Ev., § 880, and numerous cases there cited.

(4) Burrough v. Martin, 2 Camp, 112.

(5) Field, Ev., 6th Ed., 473, citing R. v. Williams, 6 Cox, 343. As to the use of depositions for refreshment, see Vaughan v. Martin, 1 Esp. 440; Wood v Cooper, 1 C & K., 645; Wharton, Ev., § 524

(6) Ph & Arn., Ev, § 484 For a criticism of this rule see Wigmore Ev. § 761.

(7) Recently an expression of wi latitude, see Greenleaf, Ev, § 43

(8) Taylor, Ev, § 1407, and see Bu Jones, Ev., § 882

(9) Steinkeller v. Newton, 9 C. & P. 313.

(10) Anon, cited by Lord Kenyon in Doe v Perkins, 3 T. R., 752, 75

It is to be observed that it is only when a document is used for purposes ·ferred to in sections 159, 160, that the adverse party has a right to see and ·oss-examine upon it, and therefore, "if a paper be put into the hands of a itness, merely to prove handwriting, and not to refresh his memory, or if eing given to the witness for the purpose of refreshing his memory, the quesons founded upon it utterly fail, the opposite party is not entitled to see it, xcept sufficiently to enable him to recognise it, if it be subsequently offered ı evidence, or to re-examine upon it, and may not comment upon its contents. ıdeed, if under these circumstances he read it or comment on it, he may be ·quired by his adversary to put it in (1)

There are other modes of refreshing the memory of witnesses than the use f memoranda in writing While a party cannot, as a rule, cross-examine his wn witness, if a witness have given an ambiguous or indefinite answer, or if is memory is at fault, the Court, in the exercise of a proper discretion, may llow verbal enquiry as to statements, or circumstances, which may tend to nable the witness to recollect more clearly the fact sought to be proved.(2)" Other modes of refreshing memory.

162. A witness summoned to produce a document shall, f it is in his possession or power, bring it to Court notwithtanding any objection which there may be to its production or o its admissibility. The validity of any such objection shall be lecided on by the Court. Production of documents.

The Court, if it sees fit, may inspect the document, unless t refers to matters of State, or take other evidence to enable t to determine on its admissibility.

If for such a purpose it is necessary to cause any document :o be translated, the Court may, if it thinks fit, direct the translator :o keep the contents secret, unless the document is to be given n evidence: and, if the interpreter disobeys such direction, he shall be held to have committed an offence under section 166 of the Indian Penal Code. Translation of documents

Principle.—The summons to produce a document is, like the summons to appear as a witness, of compulsory obligation, and must be obeyed by the witness, who has no more right to determine whether the documents shall be produced than whether he shall appear as a witness. It is his duty, therefore,

s. 3 ("Document.")
ss. 121—131 (Privilege)
s. 3 ("Court")
s 123 (Documents referring to matters of State)

Taylor, Ev., § 1240; 2 Ph. & Arn, Ev, 425; Roscoe, Nisi Prius, Ev., 154—156; Field Ev., 6th Ed., 476, 477, 409, 410.

(1) Taylor, Ev, § 1413, and cases there cited
(2) Burr. Jones, Ev, § 886, and v ante, s 143 "Defective Memory"
(3) Burr Jones, Ev, § 801, citing Amey v. Long, 9 East, 483; Doe v. Kelly, 4 Dowl, 273; R. v. Russell, 7 Dowl, 693; R v. Dixon, 3 Burr. (1687).

"the Carlisle Tables" when called upon to give evidence respecting the value of an annuity on joint lives; an architect may refresh his memory with any price-list of generally acknowledged correctness; a medical man may strengthen his recollection by referring to books which he considers to be works of authority; and so forth.(1)

This section awards to the adverse party a right to the production and inspection of, and cross-examination upon, all that is made use of for the purpose of refreshment. The grounds upon which the right is given have been adverted to in the note dealing with the principle upon which these sections are founded.(2) According to English law, the memory may be refreshed previously to the trial, without the production of the document there, however much its absence might be matter of observation(3): though if produced, the other side have a right to see it and cross-examine upon it. This Act, however, by the use of the words "while under examination" in section 159, apparently contemplates the use of the document in Court, whether or not it has also been previously referred to; and section 161 enacts that the document referred to while under examination "must be produced and shown to the adverse party." It would seem therefore that in every case where a document is used to refresh the memory it must be produced at the trial.(4) The adverse party is apparently entitled under the section to cross-examine not only on the particular part referred to, but on the document generally.(5) As to cross-examination on matters other than those referred to, v. post.

Experts. Section 51.

The section says the document must be shown to the adverse party if he requires it: or if the object of the question be attained, it may be unnecessary for the Counsel for the other side to ask to look at the document.(6) The opposite party has a right to look at any particular writing before or at the moment when the witness uses it to refresh his memory in order to answer a particular question; but if he then neglects to exercise his right, he cannot continue to retain the right throughout the whole of the subsequent examination of the witness.(7) And it does not follow that because a party is entitled to see a writing which contains the statement of a witness taken down by the police, that he is therefore entitled to see other writings which contain the statements of persons other than that witness, and which have no connection with the witness's statement except that they were taken in the course of the same enquiry by the police.(8) It is not necessary for the adverse party to put in the document as part of his evidence, merely because he has looked at it or has cross-examined the witness respecting entries which have been previously referred to.(9) It has however been held in England that if he goes further and cross-examines as to other parts of the memorandum, he thereby makes it his own evidence(10); a matter as to which the section is silent.

---

(1) Ib; v. ante, p. 421.

(2) v ante, pp. 991—992.

(3) Kensington v. Inglis, 8 East., 273; Burton v Plummer, 2 A. & E, 341; 2 Ph & Arn., Ev, 841; it is however usual and reasonable to produce the document; Taylor, Ev. § 1413.

(4) See observation in Goodeve, Ev, 212, on s 46, Act II of 1855, which ran:—"A witness shall be allowed before any such Court or person aforesaid to refresh his memory." With regard to police-diaries, v ante and Lachmi v. Emp., 23 Cr L J, 591 (1922) and now Woodroffe's 'Criminal Procedure in India."

(5) See Goodeve, Ev, 212; and Taylor, Ev, § 1413, cited post, but In re Jhubboo Mahton, 8 C., 739, 745 (1882); Field, J., said:—"The opposite party may look at the writing to see what kind of writing it is, in order to check the use of improper documents; but I doubt whether he is entitled, except for this particular purpose, to question the witness as to other and independent matters contained in the same series of writing. The Court may limit the right of inspection to such portions of the paper as are relevant. Wharton, Ev, § 525

(6) See for example In re Jhubboo Mahton, 8 C., 739, 743 (1882).

(7) In re Jhubboo Mahton, 8 C., 739 744 (1882).

(8) Ib.

(9) Taylor, Ev., § 1413

(10) Ib.

It is to be observed that it is only when a document is used for purposes referred to in sections 159, 160, that the adverse party has a right to see and cross-examine upon it, and therefore, "if a paper be put into the hands of a witness, merely to prove handwriting, and not to refresh his memory, or if being given to the witness for the purpose of refreshing his memory, the questions founded upon it utterly fail, the opposite party is not entitled to see it, except sufficiently to enable him to recognise it, if it be subsequently offered in evidence, or to re-examine upon it, and may not comment upon its contents. Indeed, if under these circumstances he read it or comment on it, he may be required by his adversary to put it in.(1)

Other modes of refreshing memory.

There are other modes of refreshing the memory of witnesses than the use of memoranda in writing. While a party cannot, as a rule, cross-examine his own witness, if a witness have given an ambiguous or indefinite answer, or if his memory is at fault, the Court, in the exercise of a proper discretion, may allow verbal enquiry as to statements, or circumstances, which may tend to enable the witness to recollect more clearly the fact sought to be proved (2)

Production of documents.

162. A witness summoned to produce a document shall, if it is in his possession or power, bring it to Court notwithstanding any objection which there may be to its production or to its admissibility. The validity of any such objection shall be decided on by the Court.

The Court, if it sees fit, may inspect the document, unless it refers to matters of State, or take other evidence to enable it to determine on its admissibility.

Translation of documents

If for such a purpose it is necessary to cause any document to be translated, the Court may, if it thinks fit, direct the translator to keep the contents secret, unless the document is to be given in evidence: and, if the interpreter disobeys such direction, he shall be held to have committed an offence under section 166 of the Indian Penal Code.

Principle.—The summons to produce a document is, like the summons to appear as a witness, of compulsory obligation, and must be obeyed by the witness, who has no more right to determine whether the documents shall be produced than whether he shall appear as a witness. It is his duty, therefore,

s 3 ("Document")
ss. 121—131 (Privilege)
s 3 ("Court")
s 123 (Documents referring to matters of State)

Taylor, Ev., § 1240, 2 Ph. & Arn, Ev, 425, Roscoe, Nisi Prius, Ev, 154—156; Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 476, 477, 409, 410

---

(1) Taylor, Ev § 1413 and cases there cited

(2) Burr Jones, Ev, § 886, and v ante, s 143 "Defective Memory"

(3) Burr. Jones, Ev., § 801, citing Amey v Long, 9 East, 483; Doe v. Kelly, 4 Dowl, 273; R. v. Russell, 7 Dowl, 693; R v Dixon, 3 Burr. (1687).

COMMENTARY.

Production of documents.

The rule of English law is similar. For when a witness is served with subpœna duces tecum, he is bound to attend with the documents demanded therein, and he must leave the question of their actual production to the Judge who will decide upon the validity of any excuse that may be offered for withholding them.(1) When so brought into Court, the production of the documents in evidence will be excused where it has been declared to be privileged from disclosure under this Act, as where it is the third party's title-deed(2), or a confidential communication professionally made between a legal adviser and his client(3) or the like. When the production is excused, secondary evidence is admissible(4), and if the document be brought into Court by a witness who says that he is instructed by the owner to object to the production of it, this is enough to justify secondary proof without subpœnaing the owner himself to make the objection in person.(5) It is obvious that a witness cannot be compelled to produce a document by a summons, unless such document is under his control or possession. So a mere clerk in a bank is under no obligation to produce its books when they are under the control of the cashier(6); and it was so held as to the ... he was only the employee of the directors(7) ... possession of a clerk there, ... to bring them into Court ... But one having the actual custody of documents may be compelled to produce them although they are owned by others.(9) The validity of any objection made by the person producing the document will be decided by the Court. And the Court has jurisdiction to punish disobedience to a subpœna by attachment even when the disobedience is not wilful.(10)

The provision that the Court may, if it sees fit, inspect the document (unless it refers to matters of State) appears not to be in accordance with the rule as laid down in some English cases. For it has held that when the witness declines to produce a document on the ground of professional confidence, the Judge should not inspect it to see whether it was one which he ought to withhold; and it seems that the mere assertion on oath by the solicitor that it is a title-deed or other privileged document is conclusive.(11)

---

(1) Amey v Long, 9 East, 473, Roscoe N P, Ev, 154—156, Taylor, Ev, § 1240; 2 Ph. & Arn, 425 An attachment will lie for contempt in case of disobedience even though it may be very questionable whether the person summoned would be bound to submit the document to examination in the event of his bringing it into Court R. v. Greenaway, 7 Q. B, 126; R. v. Carey, ib; as to the penalty for non-production, see Penal Code, s. 175 As to care in summoning Government Officials for production of documents, see Laxman Rao v. Vithoba, 45 I C., 898

(2) S 130, ante.

(3) Ss. 126—127, ante, and see generally ss 121—131, ante.

(4) Doe v. Ross, 7 M. & W. 102; Marston v. Downes, 1 A. & E, 31; see ante, pp 511—515, where this question is discussed

(5) Phelps v Prew, 3 E. & B, 430; it seems to be sufficient if one only of several interested parties object: Newton v Chaplain, 19 L. J, C. P., 374; see also Kearsley v. Phillips, 10 Q B D, 45[illegible]. Roscoe, N. P, Ev, 156

(6) Bank of Utica v Hillard, 5 Cow 154, (Amer.); United States Exp Co v Henderson, 69 Iowa, 40 (Amer) cited [illegible] Burr. Jones, Ev. § 802.

(7) Crowther v. Appleby, L. R., 9 C. P. 27

(8) Thornhill v. Thornhill, 2 J & W. 347; Austin v. Evans, 2 M & Gr, 4[illegible]

(9) Amey v. Long, 1 Camp, 17, [illegible] 9 East, 473; Corsen v. Dubois, 1 [illegible] 239

(10) R. v. Daye (1908), 2 K B, 33[illegible] (Divn. Ct.).

(11) Roscoe, N P. Ev, 156, citing [illegible] v. James, 2 M. & Rob., 47; Volant v Soyer, 13 C. B, 231. "There have been, however, been cases in which the Judge has [illegible] inspected documents in order to decide upon their admissibility. If it be objected on the one side that it is impossible [illegible] a judge who discharges the functions of Judge and Jury, to avoid receiving some impression from the document if he [illegible]

The Court may also, in order to decide on the validity of the objection, take other evidence to enable it to determine on its admissibility "All questions as to the admissibility of evidence are for the Judge. It frequently happens that this depends on a disputed fact, in which case all the evidence adduced both to prove and disprove that fact must be received by the Judge,—and however complicated the facts or conflicting the evidence—must be adjudicated on by him alone "(1) Thus the Judge must equally (for example) decide whether a confession should be excluded by reason of some previous threat or promise, and whether a document is protected from disclosure as being a confidential communication or the like (2)

O. XI, r 14(3) of the Civil Procedure Code empowers the Court during the pendency of the suit to order the production by any party thereto of such of the documents in his possession or power relating to any matter in question in such suit as the Court thinks right Under the similar rule in England it has been held that the right to the production and inspection of documents does not apply to documents which are not in the sole possession or power of the party to the suit who is called upon to produce them, but are only in his possession or power jointly with some other person, who is not before the court.(4) The provision that the translator may be ordered to keep the contents of a document secret refers to cases where a document is claimed to be privileged from production in evidence, but its translation is necessary in order that the Court may ascertain whether the claim of privilege is well founded or not. Section 166 of the Penal Code deals with the case of a public servant disobeying a direction of the law with intent to cause injury to any person. Of course secrecy is unnecessary, if the document is to be given in evidence In connection with this subject it may be noted that when documents are put in for the purpose of formal proof, it is in the discretion of the Court in criminal proceedings to interpret as much thereof as appears necessary (5)

Documents referring to matters of State stand upon a peculiar footing. Section 123 makes the giving of evidence derived from unpublished official records relating to affairs of State entirely dependent upon the discretion of the head of the department concerned.(6) It may be therefore perhaps said to be unnecessary fo character(7), privileged doc

obligatory production in evidence. The person in custody of what he considers a privileged State document must bring it with him to Court, that the latter may decide whether it is a document of that character or not. The position of look at it, it may be urged on the other side that the rule of inspection provides a safeguard against futile or dishonest objections and effects a great saving of the time of the Court" Field, Ev, 6th Ed 476—477

(1) Taylor, Ev., § 23A

(2) Ib

(3) Woodroffe and Ameer Ali, Civil Procedure, 2nd Ed, p 793

(4) Kearsley v Philips, 10 Q B D., 465 followed, in Murray v. Walter, Cr & Ph, 114 See the latter and kindred cases discussed with reference to the procedure to be adopted in this country in Haji Jakaria v. Haji Kasim, 1 B, 496 (1876), where it was held that one partner of a firm represents the other partners for the purposes of production of documents. See also Taylor v. Rundell, Cr. & Ch, 104; 1 Philips 222, 226; Kettlewell v Barstow, L R, 7 Ch App, 686 [the fact that persons not parties to the suit are interested in the document is no ground for resisting production]; London and Yorkshire Bank, Ld v. Cooper, 15 Q B. D, 473 [custody of liquidator]

(5) Cr Pr. Code, s 361, see also R. v. Amiruddin, 7 B L. R., 36, 71 (1871).

(6) Being in this in accordance with Beatson v. Skene, 5 H. N, 838; see Nagaraja Pillai v. Secretary of State, 39 M, 304 (1916).

(7) Cunningham, Ev. 380, In Hennessy v. Wright, 1 Q. B D, 509, 515, Field, J., said that he should consider himself entitled privately to examine the document to see whether the fear of injury to the public service was the real motive for the objection the words "unless it refers to matters of State" in the second paragraph of the section, appears to show that the Court, although it may not inspect a document relating to matters of State, may yet take other evidence to enable it to determine on its admissibility.(1) Apparently, upon the objection and statements of the person appearing with the document, the Court will determine whether it is or is not a State document. If the Court decides that it is a State document, then it is for the head of the department alone to determine whether evidence shall be given of it or not.(2)

It has been said that in the case of State proceedings the Court cannot inspect them for the purpose of seeing if they are privileged and must take their character upon the word of the public officer, who has them in his custody.(3) But by this it is conceived, is meant that the officer states those facts touching the document which in his opinion show that it is one coming within the purview of section 123, and the Court then (though bound by the officer's statement and forbidden to inspect the document) determines whether those facts do or do not give the document the character claimed for it. Otherwise it does not appear that there is any function assigned to the Court in the matter, or that there is any reason why such a document is required to be produced in Court, unless it be that the officer may publicly and in the presence of the Judge claim privilege from production. The oath of secrecy which is taken by income-tax officers does not apply to cases in which they are summoned to give evidence in a Court of Justice.(4) Rule 16 of the rules made by the Local Government under s. 38 of the Income-tax Act (II of 1886) does not apply to the production of income-tax papers in a Court of Law in a suit between two partners.(5) In a later case in the Privy Council it was said that a presiding Judge should endorse with his own hand on every document proved or admitted in evidence a statement that it was so proved against or admitted by the party against whom it was used, as enjoined by the Civil Procedure Codes of 1877 and 1882 and practically re-enacted by the present Civil Procedure Code (O. XIII, r. 4) and that for the future, the Privy Council in hearing Indian Appeals would refuse to read or to permit to be read any such document not so endorsed.(6)

In the undermentioned case(7), the Magistrate of a district refused to produce a written report made to him by a Magistrate in charge of a division of a district as to the result of an enquiry made by the latter under the provisions of section 135 of the Criminal Procedure Code, into the cause of a sudden and unnatural death. When the case came before the High Court, the District Magistrate appeared, through Counsel, with the report, ready to produce it if the High Court held it not to be privileged, or to show it to the Judges if they desired to see it before making their order, but submitted, amongst other

(1) See Field, Ev., 6th Ed., 409—410; where also other tentative interpretations of this section so far as it concerns State documents are to be found, which appear to the author to be hardly supportable.

(2) Cunningham, Ev., 380; but there is no necessity, as has been held in England (Kain v. Farrer, 37 L. T., N. S., 469; doubted in Hennessy v. Wright, 21 Q. B. D., 509, 523), for him to give his reasons for the non-production of the document (assuming that it is found to be in fact a document of State), and to come and say that he objects to the production on grounds of public policy. Ib., see s. 123, ante.

(3) Mayne's Criminal Law, 86.

(4) Ib., citing Lee v. Birrell, 3 Camp., 337, and stating that Scotland, C. J., in R. v. Yakata Khan, 2 Mad. Sess. ... 1863, compelled the production of income-tax schedules, though the objection was taken by the officer who appeared, and see Venkatachella Chettiar v. Sampathu Chettiar, 32 M., 62. Ref. to in Collector of Jaunpur v. Jamna Prasad, 44 A., 360.

(5) Jadobram Dey v. Bulloram Dey, ... C., 281 (1899). Ref. to in Collector of Jaunpur v. Jamna Prasad, 44 A., 360.

(6) Sadik Husain Khan v. Hashim Ali Khan, P. C. 39 A., 627 (1916). O. XIV r. 4, only provides that certain particulars shall be endorsed and that the Judge shall sign or initial such endorsement. See Woodroffe and Ameer Ali's "Civil Procedure Code" second edition, p. ...

(7) In re Troylokhonath Biswas, ... C. 742 (1878).

grounds, that the report was a communication privileged under section 124 of this Act It was held that this report was not a judicial proceeding and that the District Magistrate was justified in refusing to produce it.

Giving as evidence document called for and produced on notice

163. When a party calls for a document which he has given the other party notice to produce, and such document is produced and inspected by the party calling for its production, he is bound to give it as evidence if the party producing it requires him to do so.

Principle.—See note, post.

s 3 ("Documents") ss 65, 66 (Notice to produce)

Taylor, Ev, § 1718, Wharton, Ev., § 156

COMMENTARY.

Documents produced after notice

The production of papers upon notice does not make them evidence in the cause, unless the party calling for them inspects them, so as to become acquainted with their contents; in which case he is obliged to use them as his evidence, at least if they be in any way material to the issue.(1) Where a ame, upon unne-give ffairs

king

When A calls upon B to produce a document and B produces it, this primâ facie avoids the necessity of proving such document on A's part where it is relied on by B as part of his title.(4)

nent to produce papers in his possessi for their production is not until his c:

who requires them; till which time the other party may, in strictness, refuse to produce them, and no cross-examination as to their contents is then allowable. Still, it is considered rigorous to insist upon this rule, and as a due adherence to it would be productive of inconvenience, the Judges are very unwilling to enforce it (5) And according to the English practice, a party who has given his opponent notice to produce certain documents is allowed to call for them at any stage of the hearing.

Using as evidence documents production of which was refused on notice.

164. When a party refuses to produce a document which he has had notice to produce, he cannot afterwards use the

---

(1) Taylor, Ev, § 1817 and cases there cited If the party giving the notice declines to use the papers when produced, this, though matter of observation, will not make them evidence for the adverse party; Sayer v Kitchen, 1 Esp, 210 for if notice to produce invested the instrument called for with the attribute of evidence, testimony incapable of proof might be brought into a case by such notice: Wharton, Ev., § 156; though it is otherwise, as the section says, if the papers are inspected by the party calling for them, see Norton, Ev, 252 A person is not obliged to put in evidence the papers called for by him; Wharton, Ev, § 156.

(2) Mahomed v. Abdul, 5 Bom. L. R., 380 (1903)

(3) Taylor, Ev., § 1817; in Wharton v. Routledge, 5 Esp, 235; Lord Ellenborough said: "You cannot ask for a book of the opposite party and be determined on the inspection of it whether you will use it or not. If you call for it you make it evidence for the other side, if they think fit to use it"

(4) Wharton, Ev, § 156

(5) Taylor, Ev, § 1817.

document as evidence without the consent of the other party or the order of the Court.

Illustration.

A sues B on an agreement and gives B notice to produce it. At the trial A calls for the document and B refuses to produce it. A gives secondary evidence of its contents.

B seeks to produce the document itself to contradict the secondary evidence given by A or in order to show that the agreement is not stamped. He cannot do so.

Principle.—See Note, post.

s. 3 ("Document.") ss. 56, 66 (Notice to produce) s 89 (Presumption as to documents not produced)

Taylor, Ev., § 1818; Wharton, Ev, § 157.

COMMENTARY.

Documents not produced after notice.

A party is not permitted after declining to produce a paper, to put it in evidence after it has been proved by his opponent by parol. Should he be allowed to do so, he would be able to hold back the paper, until he saw whether its parol rendering would be favourable or unfavourable to him, and thus to obtain an unjust advantage over his opponent. The same rule is applied when the party calling for the paper has proved a copy, in which case the holder of the paper cannot produce it and object to the reading of it without proof by an attesting witness. Nor can he after refusing to produce put the paper into the hands of his opponent's witness for cross-examination or produce and prove it as part of his own case.(1) He is in effect bound by any legal and satisfactory evidence produced on the other side.(2)

It has been declared as the rule that the mere non-production of documents on notice has no other legal effect than to allow secondary evidence, but the weight of authority sustains the view that there may also be a presumption that the evidence withheld would have operated unfavourably to the party refusing to produce it.(3) There is a presumption further that a document called for and not produced after notice was attested, stamped and executed in the manner required by law (4)

Judge's power to put question or order production.

165. The Judge may, in order to discover or to obtain proper proof of relevant facts, ask any question he pleases, in any form, at any time, of any witness, or of the parties, about any fact relevant or irrelevant; and may order the production of any document or thing: and neither the parties nor the agents shall be entitled to make any objection to any such question or order, nor, without the leave of the Court, to cross-examine any witness upon any answer given in reply to any such question:

Provided that the Judgment must be based upon facts declared by this Act to be relevant and duly proved:

(1) Wharton, Ev, § 157, Taylor, Ev, § 1818, Burr Jones, Ev, §§ 117, 223

(2) Norton, Ev, 252, where it is also stated that the document cannot be used to refresh the memory of a witness; citing Till v Ainsworth, Bristo, 1847; Wilde, C. J., MSS. As to the prevalence of a similar rule when a party determines upon keeping back a chattel, see Lewis v. Hartley, 7 C. & P., 405; or refusing to give inspection, see Civ. Pr Code, O. XI, r. 15, Woodroffe & Amir Ali, 2nd Ed 794

(3) Burr. Jones, Ev, 17.

(4) S 89, ante

Provided also that this section shall not authorize any Judge to compel any witness to answer any question, or to produce any document which such witness would be entitled to refuse to answer or produce under sections 121 to 131, both inclusive, if the question were asked or the document were called for by the adverse party; nor shall the Judge ask any question which it would be improper for any other person to ask under section 148 or 149; nor shall he dispense with primary evidence of any document, except in the cases hereinbefore excepted.

Principle.—"This section is intended to arm the Judge with the most extensive power possible for the purpose of getting at the truth. The effect of this section is that in order to get to the bottom of the matter before it, the Court will be able to look at and enquire into every fact whatever"(1); and thus possibly acquire valuable indicative evidence (v. post) which may lead to other evidence strictly relevant and admissible. The Court is not, however, permitted to found its judgment on any but relevant statements, because such a permission would lead to reliance on second hand reports, would waste time and open a wide door for fraud (2). And the discretion given is exercisable subject to correction by the Court of appeal (3). See further Notes, post.

s. 3 ("Relevant")	s. 3 ("Fact")
s. 60, Prov. 2 (Production of chattel)	s. 3 ("Court")
ss. 133, 145—154 (Cross-examination)	s. 3 ("Proved")
s. 3 ("Document")	ss. 121—131 (Privilege)
ss. 148, 149 (Questions to credit)	ss. 61—65 (Primary evidence.)

Steph, Introd., 161—163, 73, Best, Ev., §§ 86, 93, Wharton, Ev., § 281; Taylor, Ev., §§ 1477, 23—27, Roscoe, Cr. Ev., 13th Ed., 115, Norton, Ev., 323, 342, 65, Markby, Ev., 114, 115

COMMENTARY.

Question by the Judge.

The Judge may question the witness either in the manner and with the object followed by the parties, or he may avail himself of the more extended power of interrogation which is given to him under the terms of this section. It has been a matter of juristic "dispute whether a Judge can, on his own motion, put to the witness questions independently of Counsel, so as to bring out points Counsel designedly or undesignedly overlook. On one side, it has been urged, in conformity with the scholastic view, that the Judge is confined to the proof adduced by the parties. On the other side, it is insisted that it is absurd for a Judge with a witness before him not to do what he can to elicit the truth. So far as concerns the abstract principle, writers on the English Common Law repeatedly affirm the scholastic view that the Judge must form his ates, do not facts they

So far as

in latitude

(1) Steph Introd., 162; and see Best, Ev., §§ 86, 93.

(2) Steph Introd., 162, 163.

(3) Surendra Krishna Mandal v. Rance Dassee, 33 C. L. J., 34 (1921).

(4) Wharton, Ev. § 281. See Taylor, Ev., § 1477; Roscoe, Cr. Ev., 13th Ed., 115; R v. Remnant, R. & R. 136; Coulson v. Disborough, 2 Q. B. D. (1894), 316. "The Court always may, and often does, examine a witness at the close of his examination. The Court is not bound by the same rules as to leading questions, etc. The Court may put what questions it pleases and in what form it pleases; and most usefully so where the examination has not been scientifically or skilfully conducted" Norton, Ev., 323. As to the allowed him with respect to the rules of forensic proof. He may ask any questions in any form and at any stage of the cause, and to a certain extent even allow parties or their advocates to do so. This, however, does not mean that he can receive illegal evidence at pleasure; for, if such be left to the jury, a new trial may be granted, even though the evidence were extracted by questions put from the Bench, but it is a power necessary to prevent justice being defeated by technicality, to secure indicative evidence, and in criminal cases to assist in fixing the amount of punishment. And it should be exercised with due discretion."(1) It is this latter object (the securing of indicative evidence) which is the main ground for the enactment of this section. "It may be objected, (and indeed, Bentham's Treatise on Judicial Evidence is founded on the notion) that by exclusionary rules like the above [i.e., rules of evidence] much valuable evidence is wholly sacrificed. Were such even the fact, the evil [illegible] by the reasons already assigned for impos- [illegible] proved. [illegible] hat the evidence in question need seldom be lost to justice; for however dangerous and unsatisfactory it would be as the basis of final adjudication, it is often highly valuable as indicative evidence(2); that is, evidence not in itself receivable but which is 'indicative' of better. Take the case of derivative evidence; a witness offers to relate something told him by A; this would be stopped by the Court; but he has indicated a genuine source of testimony, A, who may be called or sent for. So a confession of guilt which has been made under promise of favour or threat of punishment is inadmissible by law; yet any facts discovered in consequence of that confession,—such, for instance, as the finding of stolen property—are good legal evidence. Again, no one would think of treating an anonymous letter as legal evidence against a party not suspected of being its author, yet the suggestions contained in such letters have occasionally led to disclosures of importance. In tracing the perpetrators of crimes also, conjectural evidence i[illegible] and leads to proofs [illegible] stration of the most satisfactory l[illegible] nquests, It is chiefly, however, on [illegible] charged with offences, inquiries by Justices of the Peace before whom persons are charged with offences, and the like—that the use of 'indicative evidence' is most apparent, though even these tribunals cannot act on it.(3)

This therefore "is a most important section. Its provisions, though they may be in some respect not in accordance with English ideas, are wholly suited to the state of things which exists in India out of the Presidency-towns"(4). In his Introduction to the Evidence Act(5), Sir J. F. Stephen remarks:— "Where a man has to inquire into facts of which he received in the first instance very confused accounts, it may, and often will, be extremely important for recall and examination of witnesses by the Court; see O. XVIII, r. 17, Woodroffe & Amir Ali, 2nd Ed, 849, Civ. Pr. Code; s. 540, Cr Pr. Code.

(1) Best, Ev, § 86

(2) In one place Bentham also calls it "Evidence of Evidence," 3 Jud. Ev, 554.

(3) Best, Ev., § 93

(4) Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 479, 480 In Norton, Ev, 342, it is said of this section that it "merely embodies the existing law as to the power of the Judge to put questions". Sir William Markby also in his edition of the Act (p. 115) is of opinion that on the construction of the section given in the text (v post) every Magistrate in India possesses already all the powers of seeking after evidence which this section gives him. See Woodroffe and Amir Ali's Civ Pr. Code O XVI r. 14, 2nd Ed, 832. [Court may of its own accord summon as witnesses strangers to suit and see O. X. r. 4, p. 748, ib, Woodroffe and Amir Ali, 2nd Ed 775 ib, by which the Court may direct any party to a suit to appear in person for examination, and O. XVIII, r 17, p 822, ib, 2nd Ed 849 by which the Court may recall and examine a witness] and Cr. Pr Code, s. 540 [power to summon witness and examine]. As to the examination of accused persons, see Gya Singh v Mahomed Soliman, 5 C. W. N., 864 (1901).

(5) Pp. 161, 162.

him to trace the most cursory and apparently futile report, and facts, relevant in the highest degree to facts in issue, may often be discovered in this manner. A policeman or a lawyer engaged in getting up a case, criminal or civil, would neglect his duty altogether, if he shut his ears to everything which was not relevant within the meaning of the Evidence Act A Judge or Magistrate in India frequently has to perform duties which in England would be performed by police-officers or attorneys. He has to sift out the truth for himself as well as he can, and with little assistance of a professional kind. Section 165 is intended to arm the Judge with the most extensive power possible for the purpose of getting at the truth The effect of this section is that, in order to get to the bottom of the matter before it, the Court will be able to look at and inquire into every fact whatever."

And in the Select Committee the framer of the Act observed as follows :—"That part of the law of evidence which relates to the manner in which witnesses are to be examined assumes the existence of a well-educated Bar, co-operating with the Judge and relieving him practically of every other duty than that of deciding questions which may arise between them. I need hardly say that this state of things does not exist in India, and that it would be a great mistake to legislate as if it did. In a great number of cases—probably the vast numerical majority—the Judge has to conduct the whole trial himself. In all cases he has to represent the interests of the public much more distinctly than he does in England In many cases he has to get at the truth, or as near to it as he can by the aid of collateral inquiries, which may incidentally tend to something relevant; and it is most unlikely that he should ever wish to push an inquiry needlessly, or to go into matters not really connected with it. We have accordingly thought it right to arm Judges with a general power to ask any questions, upon any facts, of any witnesses, at any stage of the proceedings, irrespectively of the rules of evidence binding on the parties and their agents, and we have inserted in the Bill a distinct declaration that it is the duty of the Judge, especially in criminal cases, not merely to listen to the evi-mainly in the light of private questions between the prosecutor and the prisoner, at all suited to India, if indeed they are the result of anything better than carelessness and apathy in England."

Under this section, which applies to both criminal and civil proceedings, the Judge may ask any question in any form: as for instance a leading question(2); and he has equal liberty with regard to the substance of his question, which may be about any fact, relevant or irrelevant. But it is to be noted that the section only empowers the Judge to ask irregular questions "in order to discover or obtain proper proof of relevant facts," that is, in order to discover or obtain regularly admissible evidence.(3) He may not introduce into the case any irregular evidence he pleases. This is indicated by the first Proviso, which requires that the judgment be based upon facts declared by the Act to be relevant and duly proved So in a trial for murder, where the weapon had not been found, a witness might state in answer to the Judge that he had heard that the accused had secreted it in a certain ditch. This statement, being hearsay, would be inadmissible as evidence in the case itself, but the Judge by means of it might be able to direct an inquiry which would lead to the

(1) The bill was subsequently somewhat modified in this respect

(2) Norton, Ev, 323.

(3) See R. v. Lakshman, 10 B. 185 (1885) weapon being found.(1) [illegible] fact suggested, he can [illegible] under this section.(2) [illegible] viously laid down as to relevancy. The section merely authorises questions the object of which is to ascertain whether the case is or is not [or may be] proved in accordance with those rules.(3)

It has, however, been held that it is not the province of the Court to examine the witnesses, unless the pleaders on either side have omitted to put some material question or questions; and the Court should, as a general rule, leave the witnesses to the pleaders to be dealt with as laid down in section 138 of this Act. In the case, now cited, at a trial before a Sessions Court(4), the Judge, on the examination-in-chief of the witnesses for the prosecution being finished, questioned the witnesses at considerable length upon the points to which he must have known that the cross-examination should certainly and properly be directed: a course which it was observed must have rendered the greater part of the cross-examination ineffective.

Order for production.

The Judge is also empowered to order the production of any document or thing, but this is subject to the condition in the second proviso that the Judge is not hereby authorized to compel the production of any document which the witness would be entitled to refuse to produce under sections 121—131, ante, if the document were called for by the adverse party. As to the production of chattels, see also the second proviso of section 60, ante.

Cross-Examination.

The parties have no power of cross-examination without the leave of the Court upon any answer given by the witness in reply to any question of the Judge put under this section, and it makes no difference whether the cross-examination be directed to the witness's statement of fact or to circumstances touching his credibility. The principle that parties cannot, without the leave of Court cross-examine a witness, whom the parties, having already examined or declined to examine, the Court itself has examined, applies equally whether it is intended to direct the cross-examination to the witness's statements of fact, or to circumstances touching his credibility; for any question meant to impair his credit tends (or is designed) to get rid of the effect of each and every answer just as much as one that may bring out an inconsistency or contradiction.(5)

Witness called by Court.

But the case dealt with by the section must be distinguished from that where the witness is called by the Court. When a party to the suit or a witness is summoned by the Court such witness is liable to be cross-examined by the parties. The provisions of this section only forbid the cross-examination without the leave of the Court of any witness upon any answer given in reply to a question asked by the Judge. They apply rather to particular questions

(1) Markby, s. 114, 115, where it is pointed out that the construction of this section is not free from difficulty. That the true construction is that given in the text appears to the authors to be indicated by the words of the first proviso. "But then," as Sir William Markby says, "it is not easy to see why the last clause of the second Proviso was inserted. This clause would be quite intelligible if the section were intended as a general relaxation of the rules of evidence, but why should not a Judge who was merely hunting up evidence look at a copy in order to see whether it was worthwhile to endeavour to procure the original. It may further be observed that if that clause on the other hand refers to the evidence to be accepted in the case itself, it appears to be mere surplusage, as the first proviso has already declared that the facts must be "duly proved," i e, where the fact is contained in a document primary evidence of that document must as a general rule be given.

(2) Steph Introd., 73.

(3) Cunningham, Ev. 381.

(4) Noor Bux v. R., 6 C., 279 (1880); s. c., 7 C. L. R., 385, and see Surendra Krishna Mandal v. Ranee Dassee, 33 C. L. J., 34 (1921).

(5) R. v Sakharam Mukundji, 11 Bom. H. C. R., 166 (1874).

put to a witness, already before the Court, than to the whole examination of a witness called by the Court.(1) His examination is not to be confined to such questions as the Court sees fit to put to him, but his knowledge as to the facts he states may be tested, as in the case of any other witness, by questions put by the parties.(2) There is nothing in this section which debars or disqualifies a party to a proceeding from cross-examining any witness called by the Court. All that the section says is that a party to a proceeding shall not be allowed to cross-examine a witness upon an answer given by him to a question put by the Court without the permission of such Court.(3) Where a witness had been summoned, but was not called, by the defence, and was thereupon called by the Court, it was held that the witness was not a witness for the defence and that the accused should have been given opportunity to cross-examine him.(4)

Provi (1).

The proviso declares that the judgment must be based upon facts declared by this Act to be relevant (v. ante, ss. 5—55), and duly proved (v. ante, ss 56—100). This proviso as already observed (ante p. 1004) indicates the construction which should be placed on the first portion the section The answer to an irrelevant question may lead to the discovery of important relevant matter, which may be the basis of a decree, though an answer to an irrelevant question could not be so. The Judge will not be permitted to found his judgment upon the class of statements to which he may resort as indicative evidence, for the reason that it would tempt Judges to be satisfied with second-hand reports, would open a wide door to fraud, and would waste an incalculable amount of time."(5) It may also be added that it would modify, if not entirely do away with, the admitted and declared rules of evidence to a very considerable extent.(6) And it is of course intolerable that the Court should decide [illegible].(7) In a trial held by a [illegible] the jury in dealing with the [illegible] and to confine his attention solely to such evidence.(8) It is improper for a Court to receive any information of any kind in reference to a case, whether it be relevant or not, other than such as comes before it in the way which the law recognises in the form of legal evidence (9)

---

(1) Field Ev 6th Ed 481, citing Tarini Charan v Saroda Sundari, 3 B L R, A C, 145, 158 (1869), R v Grish Chunder, 5 C, 614 (1879), and see Gopal Lal v Manick Lal, 24 C, 288 (1897), in which both the abovementioned cases were followed In England it has been held that at the trial of an action the Judge has power to call and examine a witness who has not been called by either of the parties, and when he does so, neither party has a right to cross-examine the witness without the Judge's leave which should be given to either of the parties against whom the evidence should prove adverse. Coulson v. Disborough, 2 Q B. D (1894), 316 It has been also held that where after the examination of witnesses to facts on behalf of a prisoner, the Judge (there being no Counsel for the prosecution) calls back and examines a witness for the prosecution, the prisoner's Counsel has a right to cross-examine him again if he thinks it material; R v Watson, 6 C & P., 653

(2) Tarini Charan v Saroda Sundari, 3 B L R, A C, 145, 158 (1869), for the English rule see Coulson v Disborough, 2 Q B D (1894), 316, supra

(3) Gopal Lal v Manick Lal, 24 C, 288 (1897)

(4) Mohendra Nath v R, 29 C, 387 (1902)

(5) Steph Introd 162 163

(6) If inadmissible evidence has been received (whether with or without objection) it is the duty of the Judge to reject it when giving judgment and if he has not done so, it will be rejected on appeal, as it is the duty of Courts to arrive at their decisions upon legal evidence only, Jacker v I C Co, 5 Times L R 13

(7) Sm Mohun v Saral Chand 2 C W N 27

(8) R v Jadab Das 4 C W N, 129 (1899)

(9) Mahalal v Sankla, 6 Bom L R., 789 (1904)

The functions of a Judge with regard to evidence have been declared(1) to be of a three-fold nature :—(a) to exclude everything that is not legitimately evidence(2), and then when judgment is to be given,(b) to ascertain clearly what the evidence is which he has before him, and (c) to estimate correctly the probative force of that evidence.(3)

However, even if the evidence on the record is in itself insufficient, the Judge may properly decide the case upon the evidence such as it is, if the defendant has waived his objection to its insufficiency and consented to its being taken as sufficient.(4)

Proviso (2)

This proviso subjects the Judge, in the exercise of the powers hereby given to the provisions contained in sections 121—131, 148 and 149, ante. Thus a Judge can no more compel a witness to disclose a confidential professional communication(5), or question him to his credit without reasonable grounds(6), or compel a third party to produce his title-deeds(7) than the parties or their agents can do. Of course it is the duty of the Judge to otherwise properly question and not to coerce the witness in any manner. So where in cross-examination before the Court of Session, a witness stated that, when she was before the committing Magistrate that officer addressing her, said "Recollect, or I will send you into custody," it was held that if the statements were correct, the conduct of that officer was not only most improper, but absolutely illegal and that a repetition of it would involve very serious consequences (8)

Under this section, a Judge has the power of asking irrelevant questions to a witness, if he does so in order to obtain proof of relevant facts; but, if he asks questions with a view to criminal proceedings being taken against the witness the witness is not bound to answer them, and cannot be punished for not answering them under section 179 of the Penal Code.(9)

As to the meaning of the last caluse of the section, prohibiting the Judge from dispensing with primary evidence of documents except in the cases hereinbefore excepted, see ante, p. 1004, note(4).

---

(1) Norton, Ev, 65, see Taylor, Ev, §§ 23—27 As to the duty of a Sessions Judge in criminal cases, see Cr. Pr. Code, s 298

(2) As is laid down in criminal trials by s 298 of the Cr Pr Code. As to the existence of a similar duty in civil cases, v ante, notes to s 5 and cases there cited; as to want of objection to admissibility, see the case of Miller v. Madho Das, 23 I A, 106, s. c, 19 A., 76; where it was held that an erroneous omission to object to irrelevant evidence does not make it admissible and see Sri Rajah Prakasarayanim Guru v. Venkata Rao, 38 M, 150 (1916) consent or want of objection to manner in which relevant evidence is brought on the record precludes objection on appeal. "Under the old law, and almost as it were from the necessity of the thing, it was indicated on more than one occasion [see Circular No. 31 (Civil side), 13th October 1863] that the Courts had an active duty to perform in respect of the admission and rejection of evidence, and this wholly irrespective of objections emanating, or rather failing to emanate, from the parties or their pleaders" Field, Ev., 6th Ed., 482; where it is also observed that when the manner in which cases are prepared for trial in the majority of Courts of original jurisdiction in the Mofussil is considered, and when it is reflected that many of the practitioners in the lower Courts have little idea of what is or what is not relevant, it will be apparent that if the Courts be themselves passive, the utility of the Code of evidence will seriously be impaired

(3) v. ante Introduction to Part II and cases there cited.

(4) Sheetul Pershad v. Junmejoy Mullick, 12 W. R, 244, 245 (1869).

(5) v. ante, ss. 126—129

(6) v. ante, s 149.

(7) v. ante, s. 130.

(8) R. v. Ishri Singh, 8 A., 672, 675, 677 (1886).

(9) R. v. Hari Lakshman, 10 B., 195 (1885).

166. In cases tried by jury or with assessors, the jury or assessors may put any questions to the witnesses, through or by leave of the Judge, which the Judge himself might put and which he considers proper.

Power of jury or assessors to put questions

COMMENTARY.

Questions by jury or assessor.

Further, whenever the Court thinks that the jury or assessors should view the place in which the offence charged is alleged to have been committed, or any other place in which any other transaction material to the trial is alleged to have occurred, the Court will make an order to that effect.(1) If a juror or assessor is personally acquainted with any relevant fact, it is his duty to inform the Judge that such is the case, whereupon he may be sworn, examined, cross-examined and re-examined in the same way as any other witness (2) But unless Assessors become witnesses, the Judge has no power to question them before they have delivered their opinions (3)

(1) Cr. Pr. Code, s 293, see Taylor, Ev, §§ 554—558; Wharton, Ev., §§ 345—347; as to view of the locality by a Magistrate, see in the matter of petition of Lalji, 19 A, 302 (1897)
(2) Ib, 294; v ante, s 118
(3) Nazimuddin v R, 40 C, 163 (1913)

CHAPTER XI.

ON IMPROPER ADMISSION OR REJECTION OF EVIDENCE.

IN his Introduction with reference to the se sections are for purposes to which they belong trained in English Courts, they distinctions. The reason is th was formerly section 57 of Act II c little importance whether evidence of a particular fact is admitted or not. The extreme intricacy and minuteness of the law of England on the subject is principally due to the fact that under the earlier practice the improper admission or rejection of a single question and answer would give a right to a new trial in a civil case, and would upon a criminal trial be sufficient ground for the quashing of a conviction before the Court for Crown Cases Reserved.(2) The improper admission or rejection of evidence in India has no effect at all, unless the Court thinks that the evidence improperly dealt with either turned or ought to have turned the scale. A Judge, moreover, if he doubts as to the relevancy of a fact suggested can, if he thinks it will lead to anything relevant, ask about it himself under section 165."(3)

Errors committed by the Court, either in matters of law or in admitting or rejecting evidence, and occasionally in matters of practice, are corrected by application to a superior tribunal. Formerly in England where evidence had been improperly admitted or rejected, a new trial was granted unless it was clear that the result would not have been affected; but this rule is reversed by the present rules of the Supreme Court, which prescribe that a new trial shall not be granted on the ground of the improper admission or rejection of evidence, unless in the opinion of the Court to which the application is made some substantial wrong or miscarriage has been thereby occasioned in the trial of the action.(4) case of trials by a Judge and Jury or b been rejected by the Judge, the injur vided he formally tendered such evidence to the Judge at the trial and requested the latter to make a note of the

(1) At p 73.

(2) This Court is now supplemented (and in practice replaced) by the Court of Criminal Appeal)

(3) Sir William Markby (Ev., p. 117) observes "I think these words must have been written under some misconception As the law stands, an error in the reception or rejection of evidence may have the gravest consequences." The language is perhaps misleading, but doubtless Sir J. F. Stephen meant that it was practically a matter of little moment whether an error was made in the reception or rejection of some particular item of evidence which does not really affect the decision on the merits, but which item might under the earlier practice of the English Courts have been ground for a new trial or the quashing of a conviction. In other words, the section by curing the ill-result of slight and really immaterial errors makes their commission of no great importance and the raising of technical objections by reason of such commission ineffectual

(4) Best, Ev., § 82, v. post; and see also ib, as to the misconduct of a jury so as to defeat justice See Phipson, Ev., 6th Ed, 688 point.(1) So, also, if inadmissible evidence has been received, provided it was formally objected to at the trial. But the grounds of objection must be distinctly stated and no others can afterwards be raised.(2) These cases are however subject to O. 39, R. 6, by the terms of which new trials cannot under any circumstances be granted for the improper admission or rejection of evidence, unless the Court, to which the application is made, is of opinion that some substantial wrong or miscarriage has been thereby occasioned in the trial.(3) transferred to the Judges of the High Court by the Supreme Court of Judicature Act of 1873 (36 and 37 Vict., c. 66, s. 47), according to which their decision was final, except in the case of an error of law apparent on the record as to which no question had been reserved. Sections 3 and 5 of the Crown Cases Act were ground [illegible] or (either with the leave of the Court o[illegible] of the trial Judge that it is a fit case) [illegible]stion of fact alone or a mixed question of law and fact or on any other ground; and he may appeal against his sentence (with the leave of the Court of Criminal Appeal) unless it is one fixed by law.(4)

In India there is no trial by Jury in civil cases, the Judge being in all cases judge both of law and of fact, and discharging the functions of both Judge and

(1) Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 653; citing Campbell v. Loader, 34 L. J, Ex, 50.

(2) Ib, citing Williams v Wilcox, 8 A. & E., 314; Ferrand v. Milligan, 7 Q. B, 730, Bain v Whitehaven Ry Co. 3 H L C, I, McDougal v. Knight, 14 App Cas, 194, moreover, even if the specific objections prevail, yet should the evidence be admissible for any other purpose, a new trial will not be granted; Irish Society v. Derry, 12 C & F, 641; Milne v Leisler, 7 H & N, 786 See also as to objections, Burr Jones, Ev, §§ 896—899.

(3) See Annual Practice, 1906; Notes and cases cited under Order XXXIX, Rules 1—8, Taylor, Ev, §§ 1881—1882 B.; Best, Ev, § 82, Chitty's Archbold, 730; Roscoe, N P. Ev, 273, 274; Steph Dig, Art 143. It is open to a defeated party, (1) to appeal in all cases, (2) to move for a new trial or to set aside the verdict, finding or judgment; Powell, Ev, 9th Ed, 703, 704; See also as to the granting of a new trial, Hughes v Hughes 15 M. & W, 701, 704 [will not be granted if, with the evidence rejected, a verdict for the party offering it would clearly be against the weight of evidence or if without the evidence received, there be enough to warrant the verdict]; Doe v Tyler, 6 Bing, 561; [see Wright v. Tatham, 7 A & E, 330], Crease v Barrett, 1 C. M & R, 919, Moore v Tuckwell, 1 C. B, 607, Solomon v Bitton, 8 Q B D, 176, the last case observed upon in Metropolitan Ry Co v Wright, L R, 11 App. Cas, 152, and Webster v. Friedberg, 17 Q B. D, 736, Phillips v. Martin, L R 15 App. Cas, 193, R v Grant, 5 B & Ad, 1081 [it is only where the evidence in question is deemed by the Court to have been admissible for the purpose for which it was tendered at the trial that its rejection forms a sufficient ground for a new trial]. Lord Eldon said in Walker v. Frobisher 6 Ves, 72, that "a Judge must not take it upon himself to say whether evidence improperly admitted had or had not an effect upon his mind."

(4) Steph Dig, Art. 143, as to the practice in the Crown Cases reserved under 11 and 12 Vic, c 78, and prior to that Statute, see R v Navroji Dadabhai, 9 Bom H C R, 374—390, 392—398 (1872), and R v Gibson L R, 18 Q B D, 537, s c, 16 Cox, Cr Ca, 181, R v Crooks, 87 L T, 188; R. v Clark, L R, 1 C C R, 54, R v Moore, 8 T L R 287, Roscoe, Cr Ev, 12th Ed, 207, R v Brown, 224 Q B D., 357 For appeal on points of law from Courts of Summary Jurisdiction see 20 and 21 Vict c 40 and 42 and 45, Vict, c 49

Jury. All criminal trials, however, before a Court of Session are either by jury or with the aid of assessors.(1) Criminal cases in the Court of Sessions are tried by jury in those districts in which the Local Government has under the provisions of section 269 of the Code of Criminal Procedure directed that the trial of all offences, or of any particular class of offences, shall be by jury.(2)

Section 167 applies to both criminal as well as civil proceedings(3), and is but one of the many applications of that principle which is at the root of modern legislation respecting judicial procedure, namely, that if legal technicalities cannot be wholly excluded, they shall at least be prevented from materially impeding the course of judicial proceedings, and the attainment of that substantial justice which should be their only aim.(4) Another application of the same principle is that contained in section 99 of the Code of Civil Procedure which enacts that no decree shall be reversed or substantially varied, nor shall [illegible] provisions are contained in section 537 [illegible] the disregard of an express provision of law as to the mode of trial is not a mere irregularity such as can be remedied by this section.(5)

No new trial for improper admission or rejection of evidence.

167. The improper admission or rejection of evidence(6) shall not be ground of itself for a new trial or reversal of any decision in any case, if it shall appear to the Court before which such objection is raised that, independently of the evidence objected to and admitted, there was sufficient(7) evidence to justify the decision, or that if the rejected evidence had been received, it ought not to have varied the decision.

Principle—See Introduction, ante.

s. 3 ("Evidence") s 3 ("Court")

Steph Dig, Art. 143; Taylor, Ev, §§ 1881—1882 B; Best, Ev, § 82, Chitty's Archbold, 730; Roscoe, N.-P. Ev., 273, 274; Powell, Ev, 9th Ed, 703 704; Markby, Ev., 116, 117; Roscoe, Cr. Ev, 13th Ed, 199-204; Steph Introd, 73; O'Kinealy's Civ Pr. Code, loc cit. Henderson's Cr Pr Code, loc. cit Field, Ev., 6th Ed., 483-490; Annual Practice, 1906, Notes and cases therein given and cited under XXXIX, Rules 1—8

COMMENTARY.

Improper admission or rejection of evidence.

The principle of [illegible] upon which the Courts in England no[illegible] of the provisions of section 57 [illegible] in which it is based, as also the provisions of the English law [illegible] accordance,

(1) Cr Pr. Code, s 268.
(2) See ib., s. 269
(3) v post, p 1011
(4) See Goshain Tota v Rickmunee Bullub, 13 Moo I. A, 77, 83; s c, 12 W. R, P C, 32 [The Judicial Committee will not determine an appeal against a decree upon the mere fact that some evidence has been improperly admitted by the Court below. It is the rule of this tribunal to do substantial justice between the parties and to see if there is sufficient evidence on the whole record to justify the conclusion to which the Court below arrived]; and as to substantial justice, see also Baboo Bodhnarain v. Omrao Singh, 13 Moo I A, 519; s c., 15 W.R., P C, 1 (1870); Dal Singh v R, 44 I A, 137 (1917); Vaithinatha Pillai v. R, P C, 16 M, 501 (1913); Clifford v. R, P C, 19 C L. J, 107 (1914).
(5) Subrahmania Ayyar v. R, 25 M, 61 (1901).
(6) Opinion of an assessor is not: R. v. Tirumal, 24 M, 541 (1901).
(7) See ib. at p 91
(8) Applied recently in Kuruba v Killi, 25 Cr L J, 1275 (1924) have been already referred to in the Introduction to this Chapter, to which reference should well as civil cases, whether the principle enacted by it h l subsequent to the passing of this Act. In so far, however, as every case must depend upon its own peculiar facts, and can therefore generally afford no precedent to be followed in another, it would serve no practical purpose to analyse in detail the cases decided under this section, or section 57, Act II of 1855, but reference may be made to the undermentioned cases(2), as illustrations of the manner in which these sections have been applied. In one of these cases(3) in which evidence has been improperly admitted and objection taken thereto, the Privy Council observed as follows :—" It seems to their Lordships that giving full weight to all these objections, there is still sufficient and more than sufficient proof in the unsuspected evidence given in the cause to support the decrees against which the appeal is brought Their Lordships, of course, do not give to a decree founded upon evidence which has been so impeached, the same weight which they would give to the finding of an Indian Court upon evidence against which no such objection can be alleged. But they are not in the position of a Court of Law in this country—before which, on a motion for a new trial, it is shown that evidence improper to be admitted has been admitted before the jury. The Court in that case are not Judges of fact and are unable to say what weight the jury may have given to the evidence that ought not to have been admitted. But it is the duty of their Lordships, who are Judges of tl

whi

sup

the

has been in the admission of evidence. The improper reception of evidence is always to be deprecated, if only from its tendency to provoke an appeal "(4)

(1) R v. Hurribole Chunder, 1 C, 207 (1876), R v Navroji Dadabhai, 9 Bom. H C. R, 374 (1872); R v Pitamber Jina, 2 B, 61, 65 (1877), R v. Nand Ram, this section are identical with those of s 57 of Act II of 1855, but the latter Act contained no express words making it applicable to all Courts whatever, [see section (1), ante], and it might have been doubted whether all its provisions were intended to be enforced in all proceedings, criminal as well as civil R v Navroji Dadabhai, 9 Bom H C R, 374 (1872), it was, however, held to be applicable in criminal case in R v Ramswami Mudaliar, 6 Bom H C R, Cr Ca, 47 (1869) As to the duty of the High Court in reserved or certified cases see Emp. v Panchu Das, 47 C., 671 (F B), s c, 24 C W. N, 501.

(2) R. v Nujam Ali, 6 W. R, Cr, 41 (1866), Goshain Tola v. Ruckminee Bullub, 13 Moo I. A, 77, s c, 12 W. R, P. C, 32 (1869), Maharajah Jagadendra v Bhabatarini Dasi, 5 B L. R, App 54 (1870), s c, 14 W R, 19, Mohur Singh v Ghuriba, 6 B L R, 495, 498, 499; s c, 15 W. R. P C, 8 (1870), Mahomed Bux v Abdool Kureem, 20 W. R, 458 (1870), Wooma Kant v Gunga Narain, 20 W R, 384 (1873), R v Amrita Gobinda, 10 Bom H C R, 497, 502 (1873), R. v Purbhudas, 11 Bom. H C R, 90, 97 (1874), R v Jhubboo Mahton, 8 C, 739 (1882); s c, 12 C L. R, 233, R. v. Pundharinath, 6 B, 3 (1881), R v Nand Ram, 9 A, 609, 610 (1887), R v Mara, 10 A, 207, 223 (1888), and see also R v Hurribole Chunder, 1 C, 207 (1876), R v Navroji Dadabhai, 9 Bom. H. C R., 374 (1872), R v Pitambar Jina, 2 B, 61, 65 (1877), R v Ramswami Mudaliar, 5 Bom H C R Cr Ca, 47 (1869); cited in preceding note, and Womesh Chunder v Chundy Churn, 7 C, 293 (1881), R v O'Hara, 17 C, 642 (1890), Wafadar Khan v R, 21 C, 955 (1894); R v. Ramchandra Govind, 19 B, 749, 761 (1895), cited post, R v Aloomiya Husan, 28 B., 129, 152 (1902), R v Rama Sattu, 4 Bom L R, 434 (1902), Kuruba v Kalli, 25 Cr L J, 1275 (1924)

(3) Mohur Singh v Ghuriba, 6 B L R., 495, 498, 499, s c, 15 W R, P C, 8 (1870)

(4) See also Raja Bommarauze v Gangasamy Mudaly, 6 Moo I A, 232 (1855); Lala Banshidar v. Government of Bengal, 9 B L R, 371, 14 Moo I A, 86; 16 W R, P C, 11, Goshain Tota v Ruckminee Bullub, 13 Moo I A., 77, s c, held more than once by the Calcutta High Court, that it is not competent to an Appellate Court sitting in regular appeal to reject the copy of a document, to the admission of which by the lower Court no objection was made by any of the parties, although the original was not produced or its non-production not accounted for."(1)

If the Appellate Court is of opinion that the rejected evidence, if received, ought to have varied the decision, it does not follow that such Court should in every case proceed at once to reverse the decision of the lower Court. It is competent for the superior Court, and in most cases it would be proper, to proceed in the manner provided for by O. XLI, r. 27, of the Civil Procedure Code relating to the production of additional evidence in the Appellate Court.(2) The Privy Council have held that an Appellate Court should not allow additional evidence which impeaches testimony without calling the impeached witness and giving him an opportunity to contradict it.(3) An Appellate Court should only require additional evidence if after examining the evidence on record it perceives some defect in it.(4) Where the prosecution negligently fails to produce evidence, additional evidence cannot be considered necessary within the meaning of the Criminal Procedure Code, section 428, and there should be an acquittal.(5)

Criminal Cases

The wrongful reception or rejection of evidence is an error of law, and as such may be made the ground of second appeal.(6) But it has been said(7) that there is great difficulty in applying the provisions of this section to the generality of c[illegible] [illegible] appeal. For on second app[illegible] evidence; it h[illegible]
thus confined [illegible]
Court below, the High Court has, generally speaking, no right to decide whether the remaining evidence in the case, other than what has been improperly admitted, is sufficient to warrant the finding of the Court below. It seems that the High Court cannot decide that question, without examining in detail that other evidence, and determining as a question of fact, whether it is sufficient of itself to warrant the lower Court's finding. The only cases which the High Court may with propriety dispose of under such circumstances without a remand, are those where, independently of the evidence improperly admitted, the lower Court has apparently arrived at its conclusion upon other grounds. Where this appears pretty clearly from the judgment, a remand, is unnecessary because then the error committed by the lower Court has not affected the decision upon the merits (Civil Procedure Code, section 99).(8) Where on remand there is evidence to be considered, the decision of the Court of second appeal is final, even if on further consideration it appears unsatisfactory.(9)

---

(1) Field, Ev., 6th Ed., 485, 486, v. ante, s. 5, and cases there cited.

(2) Woodroffe's Civil Procedure Code, 2nd Ed., and see Field, Ev., 6th Ed., 485, 486. Daji Babaji v. Sakharam Krishna, 38 B., 665 (1914).

(3) Jagrani Koer v. Kuar Durga Prasad, 41 I. A., 76 (1913), cf. Jagrani Kunwar v. Durga Prasad, P. C., 36 A., 93 (1914).

(4) Garden Reach Spinning Co. v. Secretary of State, 42 C., 675 (1915); Krishnama Chariar v. Narasimha Chariar, 31 M., 114 (1908).

(5) Jeremiah v. Vas, 36 M., 457 (1911).

(6) Mohim Chandra Roy v. Kalitara Debia (1907), 11 C. W. N., 1023; and see Trailokhya Mohini Dasi v. Kali Prosanna Ghose (1907), 11 C. W. N., 380, (disregarding evidence without giving sufficient reason).

(7) Per Garth, C. J., in Womesh Chunder v. Chundy Churn, 7 C., 293, 295, 296 (1881) [doubting Watson v. Gopee Soonduree, 24 W. R., 1892] referred to in Palakdhari Roy v. Manners, 23 C., 179, 185 (1895); Mauladad Khan v. Abdul Satter, 39 A., 426 (1916).

(8) Woodroffe's "Civil Procedure Code." 2nd Ed.

(9) East India Railway Co. v. Changai Khan, 42 C. 888 (1915).

The Court may, upon the hearing of a second appeal remand the case for reconsideration and a fresh decision by the lower Court.(1)

The rule of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council is never to disturb the concurrent decisions of the Courts below upon a mere question of facts unless it very clearly appears that there has been some miscarriage of justice or that the conclusion drawn by the Courts below is plainly erroneous.(2) Where evidence, such as hearsay, is improperly admitted, the question for the Judicial Committee is whether, rejecting that evidence, enough remains to support the finding (3)

This rule, however, does not apply to concurrent findings on the question of an ancient custom, for this is a mixed question of fact and law(4) or to a case of no evidence, for this is a question of law.(5)

By the constitution of the High Courts in India, the Judges for the purpose of the trial of an action, sit as a jury as well as Judges, and the same weight is to be given to a decisior of a jury in England, in The Privy Council, ther upon a question of the
from the probabilities attached to certain circumstances in the case that the Court below was wrong in the conclusion drawn from such evidence.(6) And in the undermentioned case(7) the Council observed as follows :—" This Board never heard of an appeal being instituted on the ground that witnesses had been discredited ; the Court below were aware of the character of those witnesses, and besides the knowledge of their character, had the advantage of seeing their demeanour and behaviour, of which we, on written evidence, have no power of judging. We feel it our duty, therefore, to decide this case on the general principle that no appeal will lie from the judgment of a Court below on the ground that the Court discredited the witnesses produced to them by either party."

As already well as civil cas

nsion may exercise any of the the power of ordering a new trial (ib., section 439). With reference to appeals in criminal cases, see the Criminal Procedure Code, sections 404, 418, 430, 407, 408, 410—414, 417, 427, 419, 431, and as to reference and revision, Chapter XXXII of the same Code Section 437 contains the important provision, based on the same principle which underlies section 167 of this Act, that no finding, sentence or order is reversible or alterable unless the error omission, irregularity, want of sanction or misdirection has occasioned a failure of justice.(8)

---

(1) Nawab Khan v Rughonath Doss, 20 W R, 474 (1873), Rajkishore Nag v Mudhoosoodun Roy, 20 W R, 385 (1873), see further as to second appeals, cases cited in Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 488—490, and Civil Procedure Code, notes to ss 100—103, pp 397—422

(2) Goshain Tota v Ruckminee Bullub, 13 Moo I A, 77 (1869), where also the rule of the P C as to the improper admission of evidence is laid down See Ravi Veeraraghavulu v Bomma Devara Venkata, 41 I A 258 (1914)

(3) Mohur Singh v Ghuriba, 6 B L R, P C, 495 (1870)

(4) Palaniappa Chetty v Sreenath Deasikamony Pandara Sannadhi, P C, 40 M 709 (1917)

(5) Harendra Lal Chowdhuri v Haridasi Debi, P C 41 C, 972 (1914), 41 I A 110 see Paul v Robson, P C, 42 C 46 (1915)

(6) Musadee Mahommed v Mahommed Khan, 6 Moo I A, 27 (1854)

(7) Santacana v Ardecol, Knapp 269

(8) As to trials by Jury, see Woodroffe's ' Criminal Procedure in India."

Improper advice given by the Judge to the jury upon a question of fact, or the omission of the Judge to give that advice which a Judge, in the exercise of a sound judicial discretion, ought to give the jury upon questions of fact amounts to such an error in law in summing up as to justify the High Court, on appeal or revision, in setting aside a verdict of guilty. The power of setting aside convictions and ordering new trials for any error or defect in the summing up will be exercised by the High Court only when the Court is satisfied that the accused person has been prejudiced by the error or defect, or that a failure of justice has been occasioned thereby.(1)

The nature and extent of the powers of the High Court under section 26 of the Letters Patent has proved to has been held that section 167 of th jury in the High Court(2); and that admissibility of evidence reserved
101 of the High Court Criminal Procedure Act (X of 1875) has power to review the whole case and determine whether the admission of the rejected evidence would have affected the result of the trial, and a conviction should not be reversed unless the admission of the rejected evidence ought to have varied the result of the trial, and that the same rule applies where evidence has been improperly admitted.(3) Where, however, there was a misjoinder of charges, making the whole trial initially bad, and the objection to the conviction was not limited to improper reception of evidence it was held by the Privy Council that the course pursued, which was illegal could not be amended by the High Court arranging afterwards what might or might not have been properly submitted to the jury. Upon the assumption that the trial was illegally conducted, it could not be suggested that there was enough left upon the indictment upon which the conviction might have been supported if the accused had been properly tried: the mischief had been done. The effect of the misjoinder of charges, which was not curable under section 537, could not be averted by dissecting the verdict afterwards and appropriating the finding of guilty only to such parts of the charge as ought to have been submitted to the jury. To do so would be to leave to the Court the functions of the jury, and the accused would never have really been tried at all upon the charge arranged afterwards by the Court.(4)

Though there is a prerogative right in the Crown to entertain an appeal in criminal cases, there is no absolute right of appeal to the Privy Council inherent in the person convicted, and the Council will only entertain such an appeal upon the certificate of the High Court or in very exceptional cases(5)

---

(1) In re Elahee Buksh, 5 W. R. Cr., 80 (1866)

(2) R. v. Navroji Dadabhai, 9 Bom. H C. R, 358 (1872), R v Hurribole Chunder, 1 C., 207 (1876); R. v Pitamber Jina, 2 B, 61, 65 (1877).

(3) R v Pitamber Jina, 2 B, 61, 65 (1877); following R v. Navroji, 9 Bom H. C. R., 35 (1872); R. v. Hurribole Chunder, 1 C., 207 (1876); s. c, 25 W. R, Cr 36. [Apart from s. 167 of the Evidence Act, the Court has power in a case under cl. 26 of the Letters Patent to review the whole case on the merits, and affirm or quash the conviction]. R. v. O'Hara, 17 C, 642 (1890) In these cases it was argued for the Crown that for the Full Court to go into the merits of the case would be practically the same as sitting as Judge and Jury, but it was held that the Court had power to deal with the case on the merits as it appeared from the notes of the trial Judge, and in the last case quashed, and in the others upheld, the conviction. In the later case of R. v. McGuire, 4 C W. N, 433 (1900) it was held that this section applied to cases heard by the High Court when exercising its powers under clause 26 of the Letters Patent See also Subramana Ayyar v. R, 25 M, 61, 77 (1901), Hrishikesh Mandal v. Abadhaut Mandal, 44 C., 703 (1917).

(4) Subramania Ayyar v R., 25 M, 61, 96, 97 (1901); followed in Asgar Ali Biswas v. R., 40 C. 846 (1913)

(5) In re Joykissen Mookerjee, 1 W R, P. C, 13; s. c, 9 Moo I A., 168, R v. Eduljee Byramjee, 3 Moo. I. A., 468 (1846); and see Phillip Esnouf v. Attor-

"Her [illegible]
ings, [illegible]
some [illegible] grave [illegible]
prerogative right will not be exercised merely because the Privy Council would have taken a different view of the evidence, but that an error in procedure may be of a character as grave as to warrant interference, even where the accused person appears to be guilty.(2)

---

ney-General for Jersey, L R, 8 App Cas, 304; R. v. Bertrand, L R, 1 P. C, 520 See Woodroffe's "Criminal Procedure in India" for later cases

(1) Ex parte Carew, 1897, App Cas 719, 721; Re Dillett, 12 App Cas, 459 467 (1887), cited arguendo in Bal Gangadhar v R, 22 B, 528 (1897) in which leave to appeal was refused In the case of Subrahmania Ayyar v R, 4 C. W N, ccxii (1900), 25 M, 61 (1901), leave to appeal was granted and the conviction set aside Act X of 1897 repeals so much of the Indian Evidence Act as relates to Act I of 1868 Vaithinatha Pillai v. R., P C. 36 M, 501 (1913), Johnson v R., A C, 817 (1904)

(2) Dal Singh v R., 44 I A, 137 107 (1914). See on this question of appeal to the Privy Council, Woodroffe's "Criminal Procedure in India"

SCHEDULE.

Enactments Repealed.

[See section 2.]

Number and year.	Title.	Extent of repeal.
Stat. 26 Geo III, cap. 57.	For the further regulation of the trial of persons accused of certain offences committed in the East Indies; for repealing so much of an Act, made in the twenty-fourth year of the reign of his present Majesty (intituled 'an Act for the better regulation and management of the affairs of the East India Company, and of the British possession in India, and for establishing a Court of Judicature for the more speedy and effectual trial of persons accused of offences committed in the East Indies,') as requires the servants of the East India Company to deliver inventories of their estates and effects; for rendering the laws more effectual against persons unlawfully resorting to the East Indies; and for the more easy proof, in certain cases, of deeds and writings executed in Great Britain or India.	Section 38 so far as it relates to Courts of Justice in the East Indies
Stat. 14 and 15 Vict., cap. 99.	To amend the Law of Evidence .	Section 11 and so much of section 19 as relates to British India
Act XV of 1852 . .	To amend the Law of Evidence .	So much as has not been heretofore repealed.
Act XIX of 1853 . .	To amend the Law of Evidence in the Civil Courts of the East India Company in the Bengal Presidency.	Section 19
Act II of 1855 . .	For the further improvement of the Law of Evidence	So much as has not been heretofore repealed.
Act XXV of 1861 . .	For simplifying the procedure of the Courts of Criminal Judicature not established by Royal Charter.	Section 237.
Act I of 1868 (1) . .	The General Clauses Act, 1868 .	Sections 7 and 8.

(1) Act X of 1897 repeals so much of the Indian Evidence Act as relates to Act I of 1868.

APPENDICES.

SCHEDULE.

ENACTMENTS REPEALED.

[See section 2.]

Number and year.	Title.	Extent of repeal
Stat. 26 Geo. III, cap. 57.	For the further regulation of the trial of persons accused of certain offences committed in the East Indies; for repealing so much of an Act, made in the twenty-fourth year of the reign of his present Majesty (intituled 'an Act for the better regulation and management of the affairs of the East India Company, and of the British possession in India, and for establishing a Court of Judicature for the more speedy and effectual trial of persons accused of offences committed in the East Indies,') as requires the servants of the East India Company to deliver inventories of their estates and effects; for rendering the laws more effectual against persons unlawfully resorting to the East Indies, and for the more easy proof, in certain cases, of deeds and writings executed in Great Britain or India.	Section 38 so far as it relates to Courts of Justice in the East Indies
Stat 14 and 15 Vict., cap. 99.	To amend the Law of Evidence	Section 11 and so much of section 19 as relates to British India
Act XV of 1852	To amend the Law of Evidence	So much as has not been heretofore repealed.
Act XIX of 1853	To amend the Law of Evidence in the Civil Courts of the East India Company in the Bengal Presidency.	Section 19
Act II of 1855	For the further improvement of the Law of Evidence	So much as has not been heretofore repealed.
Act XXV of 1861	For simplifying the procedure of the Courts of Criminal Judicature not established by Royal Charter.	Section 237
Act I of 1868 (1)	The General Clauses Act, 1868	Sections 7 and 8.

(1) Act X of 1897 repeals so much of the Indian Evidence Act as relates to Act I of 1868.

APPENDICES.

APPENDIX A.

IA.—PLACES TO WHICH THE ACT HAS BEEN SPECIFICALLY APPLIED.

Names of places.	Notification or other authority	Where published.
1. Civil and Military Station of Bangalore.	No. 318-D, dated the 16th Jnuary, 1917.	British Enactments in force in Native States, 3rd Ed., Supplement to Vol. I, p. 4.
2. Administered Areas in the Hyderabad State, namely, the Cantonments of Secunderabad and Aurangabad, the Hyderabad Residency Bazars, and the lands in the Hyderabad State occupied by His Exalted Highness the Nizam's Guaranteed State Railway system, by the South East main line of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway, by the broad gauge North West line of the Madras and Southern Maratha Railway, and by the Secunderabad-Gadwal section of the Secunderabad-Gadag Railway.	No. 582-I.B., dated the 22nd March, 1913, as amended by No. 399-D, dated the 18th January, 1917.	British Enactments in force in Native States, 3rd Ed., vol. I, p. 227
3 Administered Areas in Central India, namely, the Cantonments of Mhow, Nimach, Nowgong, Sehore, Agar and Guna, the Indore Residency Bazars, the Gwalior Residency Area, the Sutna Agency and the Civil Lines of Nowgong	No. 2365-I.B, dated the 14th November, 1912.	British Enactments in force in Native States, 3rd Ed., vol I, p 110
4 Manipur [For purposes of cases in which British subjects are parties (except in cases in which no British subject other than a native of the Naga Hills, Chin Hills, or Lushai Hills districts is concerned) and in cases arising within the limits of the British Reserve]	No 535-I.B, dated the 12th March, 1909	British Enactments in force in Native States, 3rd Ed., vol IV, p 11
5 Jammu and Kashmir (Territories in which the Governor-General in Council has jurisdiction)	No 260-I B, dated the 10th February, 1913.	British Enactments in force in Native States, 3rd Ed., vol I, p 372.
6. Abu District .	No 2221 I B, dated the 1st October, 1917	British Enactments in force in Native States, 3rd Ed., Supplement to vol. I, p 49

1A —PLACES TO WHICH THE ACT HAS BEEN SPECIFICALLY APPLIED—(contd)

Names of places	Notification or other authority.	Where published
7. Baroda Cantonment (Baroda State)	No. 162 I.B., dated the 28th January, 1913.	British Enactments in force in Native States, 3rd Ed., vol. i, p 79
8. Territories included in the Political Agency of Kathiawar	No. 8944, dated the 17th December, 1912	British Enactments in force in Native States, 3rd Ed, vol iv, p 178
9 Deesa Cantonment .	No. 5287, dated the 30th July, 1906.	British Enactments in force in Native States, 3rd Ed., vol. iv, p. 335
10 Civil Station of Kolhapur .	No 4803-I, dated the 9th November, 1887.	British Enactments in force in Native States, 3rd Ed., vol iv, p 389
11. Berar	No 3510 I.B, dated the 3rd November, 1913.	British Enactments in force in Berar, p. 4.
12 Lands occupied by the Rajputana-Malwa Railway in the Nabha and Patiala States	No. 517 I.B, dated the 17th March, 1913.	British Enactments in force in Native States, 3rd Ed., vol. v, p. 18
13 Lands occupied by the Jodhpur-Bikaner Railway in the Patiala State.	Ditto	Ditto
14 Lands occupied by the Kalka-Simla Railway in the Patiala, Baghat and Keonthal States	Ditto	Ditto
15. Lands occupied by the Ludhiana-Dhuri-Jakhal Railway in the Malerkotla, Patiala, Nabha and Jind States	Ditto.	Ditto.
16 Lands occupied by the Rajpura-Bhatinda Railway in the Patiala and Naba States	Ditto.	Ditto.
17. Lands occupied by the Southern Punjab Railway in the Patiala, and Jind States.	Ditto.	Ditto.
18. Lands occupied by the Jullundur-Doab Railway in the Kapurthala State.	No. 1439D, dated the 31st March, 1916	British Enactments in force in Native States, 3rd Ed, Supplement to vol. v, p. 3
19 Lands occupied by the Phagwara-Rahon Railway in the Kapurthala State	Ditto.	Ditto
20 Lands occupied by the Jind-Panipat Railway in the Jind State.	No 833 I.B, dated the 16th May, 1916.	British Enactments in force in Native States, 3rd Ed., Supplement to vol. v, p. 4
21. Lands occupied by the Bombay Baroda and Central India Railway in the Bajana, Lakhtar, Wadhwan, Wadhwan District Thana and Patri States	No. 781 I B., dated the 9th April 1913.	British Enactments in force in Native States, 3rd Ed., vol. v, p. 58
22 Lands occupied by the Bhavnagar Railway in the Bhoilka Thana, Songadh Thana, Palitana and Jasdan States	Ditto.	Ditto.
23. Lands occupied by the Dhrangadhra Railway in the Dhrangadhra and Wadhwan States.	Ditto.	Ditto.

IA.—PLACES TO WHICH THE ACT HAS BEEN SPECIFICALLY APPLIED—(contd.)

Names of places.	Notification or other authority.	Where published.
24. Lands occupied by the Gondal-Porbandar Railway in the Vithalgarh, Gondal and Nawanagar States.	No. 781 I.B., dated the 9th April, 1913	British Enactments in force in Native States, 3rd Ed., vol. v, p. 58.
25 Lands occupied by the Jamnagar Railway in the Dhrol, Jalia, Nawanagar, Pal and Rajkot States	Ditto	Ditto.
26. Lands occupied by the Jetalsar Rajkot Railway in the Gadhka, Gondal, Kotda-Sangani, Kotharia, Lodhika, Rajkot, Shahpur, Virpur, Jetpur and Junagarh States	Ditto	Ditto
27 Lands occupied by the Junagarh Railway in the Bantva, Manavadar, Sardargarh and Jetpur-Bilkha States	Ditto.	Ditto.
28 Lands occupied by the Khijadia-Amreli-Chalala Railway in the Jetpur Luni State.	Ditto.	Ditto
29 Lands occupied by the Morvi Railway in the Dhrol, Gavridad, Kotharia, Morvi, Rajkot, Wankaner, Dhrangadhra, Lakhtar, Muli, Sayla and Wadhwan States	Ditto	Ditto.
30. Lands occupied by the Godhra-Ratlam-Nagda Railway in the Jhabua, Indore, Sailana, Ratlam and Gwalior States	No 262 I B, dated the 10th February, 1913	British Enactments in force in Native States, 3rd Ed, vol. v, p 88
31. Lands occupied by the Nagda-Ujjain Railway in the Gwalior State.	Ditto.	Ditto
32. Lands occupied by the Nagda-Muttra Railway in the Gwalior Dewas (Senior), Dewas (Junior), Indore, Jhalawar, Kotah, Bundi, Tonk, Jaipur, Karauli and Bharatpur States.	Ditto.	Ditto
33. Lands occupied by the Rajputana-Malwa Railway in the Alwar, Jaipur, Jodhpur, Kishengarh, Sirohi, Bharatpur, Mewar, Tonk, Gwalior, Indore, Sailana, Jaora, Ratlam, and Dhar States.	Ditto	Ditto
34. Lands occupied by the Bhopal-Itarsi Railway in the Bhopal State	Ditto.	Ditto
35. Lands occupied by the Bhopal-Ujjain Railway in the Bhopal, Gwalior, Indore, Dewas (Senior), and Dewas (Junior) States.	Ditto.	Ditto.
36. Lands occupied by the Baran-Kotah Railway in the Kotah State.	Ditto.	Ditto.

1A.—PLACES TO WHICH THE ACT HAS BEEN SPECIFICALLY APPLIED—(contd.)

Names of places.	Notification or other authority.	Where published.
37. Lands occupied by the Bina-Guna-Baran Railway in the Kotah, Tonk and Gwalior States	No. 262 I.B., dated the 10th February, 1913.	British Enactments in force in Native States, 3rd Ed., vol. v, p. 88.
38. Lands occupied by the Great Indian Peninsula Railway in the Bhopal, Kurwai, Gwalior, Kamadhana, Orchha, Datia, Dholpur, Samthar, Alipura, Garrauli, Pahra and Taraon States.	Ditto.	Ditto
39. Lands occupied by the Bhavnagar Railway in the Wadhwan, Limbdi, Chuda, Bhala Baroda and Bhavnagar States.	No. 783 I.B., dated the 9th April, 1913.	British Enactments in force in Native States, 3rd Ed., vol. v, p 63.
40. Lands occupied by the Junagarh Railway in the Gondal and Junagarh States.	Ditto.	Ditto.
41. Lands occupied by the Khijadia-Amreli-Chalala Railway in the Baroda State.	Ditto.	Ditto.
42. Lands occupied by the Gondal-Porbander Railway in the Bhavnagar, Baroda, Lathi Bantva, Jetpur, Kotda Pitha, Junagarh and Gondal States.	Ditto.	Ditto.

1B.—PLACES TO WHICH THE ACT HAS BEEN GENERALLY APPLIED IN COMMON WITH OTHER ENACTMENTS IN FORCE IN NEIGHBOURING BRITISH DISTRICTS OR PLACES UNDER BRITISH JURISDICTION.

1. British Baluchistan . .	British Baluchistan Laws Regulation, 1913 (II of 1913), s. 3	Baluchistan Code, p. 214.
2. Baluchistan Agency Territories.	No. 1603 I.B., dated the 28th July, 1911.	British Enactments in force in Native States, 3rd Ed., vol i, p. 7.
3 Chittagong Hill-Tracts . .	Chittagong Hill-Tracts Regulation, 1900 (I of 1900).	Bengal Code, vol. i, p. 795.
4. Districts of Hazaribagh, Lohardaga, Manbhum, Pargana Dhalbhum and the Kolhan in the District of Singhbhum. (The Lohardaga or Ranchi District included at the time the Palamau District)	No. 1394, dated 21st October, 1881	Gazette of India, 1881, Part I, p. 504.
5. Sonthal Parganas . .	Sonthal Parganas Settlement Regulation 1872, (III of 1872), as amended by the Sonthal Parganas Justice and Laws Regulation, 1899, (III 1899), section 3	Bihar and Orissa Code, vol. i, p 792.
6. Angul District . . .	Angul Laws Regulation, 1913 (III of 1913), s 3	Bihar and Orissa Code, vol. i, p. 834.

1B.—PLACES TO WHICH THE ACT HAS BEEN GENERALLY APPLIED IN COMMON WITH OTHER ENACTMENTS IN FORCE IN NEIGHBOURING BRITISH DISTRICTS OR PLACES UNDER BRITISH JURISDICTION.—(contd.)

Names of places.	Notification or other authority.	Where published
7. The Tributary Mahals of Orissa.	No 1375 I.B, dated the 21st March, 1900	British Enactments in force in Native States, 3rd Ed., Vol IV, p 31
8. Upper Burma (except the Shan States).	Burma Laws Act, 1898 (XIII of 1898) Sch I.	Burma Code, p 138
9. Arakan Hill District .	Arakan Hill District Laws Regulation, 1916 (I of 1916), s 2	Supplement to Burma Code
10 Kachin Hill Tracts (as regards hill tribes)	Kachin Hill Districts Regulation, 1895, (I of 1895), s 3	Burma Code, p. 265
11. Chin Hills (as regards hill tribes)	Chin Hills Regulation, 1896 (V of 1896) s 3	Burma Code, p. 295.
12. The Tarai of Agra . .	No 1553, dated the 22nd September, 1876	Gazette of India, 1876, Part I, p. 505
13. Ganjam and Vizagapatam .	No. 303, dated the 17th July, 1899	Gazette of India, 1899, Part I, p 730
14. Pargana of Manpur .	No 3267, dated the 1st April, 1899.	Gazette of India, 1899, Part II, p. 419
15. The Political States of Seraikela and Kharsawan in Chota Nagpur.	No 205 I B, dated the 28th January, 1910	British Enactments in force in Native States, 3rd Ed, vol iv, p 35
16. Parganas of Todgarh, Diwair, Saroth, Chang and Kot-Karana.	No 38J, dated the 8th March, 1872	Ditto, vol i, p 572
17. Cantonment of Deoli . .	No 99 J, dated the 18th June, 1875	Ditto, vol. i, p 593
18. Feudatory States of Sirguja, Jashpur, Udaipur, Korea and Changbhakar	No 1069 I B, dated the 3rd April, 1919	Ditto, Sup to vol iv p 101.
19. Ramandrug (in respect of persons not being subject of the Raja of Sandur)	No 1018-I, dated the 5th March, 1891	Ditto, vol iv, p 425
20. Parts of the Namwan Assigned Tract formerly administered by China	No 788 E B, dated the 2nd June, 1899	Ditto, vol iv, p 409.
21. Kasumpti, (Simla) (Keonthal State)	No 1516 I dated the 15th May, 1885	Ditto, vol. iv, p 443
22. Lands occupied by the Rajputana Malwa Railway in the Indore State	No 754 I B, dated the 28th March, 1912	British Enactments in force in Native States, 3rd Ed, vol v, p 7
23. Lands occupied by the Indian Midland Railway in the Panna State	Ditto	Ditto
24. Lands occupied by the Bengal-Nagpur Railway in the Rewa, Khairagarh, Nandgaon, Sakti, Raigarh, Gangpur, Bamra, Kharsawan, Seraikella, Mayurbhanj, Patna and Kalahandi States.	Ditto	Ditto.
25. Lands occupied by the Bengal Dooars Railway in the Cooch Behar State.	Ditto	Ditto.
26 Lands occupied by the Eastern Bengal Railway in the Cooch Behar State	Ditto.	Ditto.

IB.—PLACES TO WHICH THE ACT HAS . . . MON WITH OTHER ENACTMENTS . DISTRICTS OR PLACES UNDER

Names of places.	Notification or other authority.	Where published.
27. Lands occupied by the Bengal and North-Western Railway in the Benares State.	No. 1947 I B., dated the 16th September, 1912.	British Enactments in force in Native States, 3rd Ed., vol. v, p. 11
28. Lands occupied by the Rajputana Malwa Railway in the Bharatpur State.	Ditto	Ditto
29 Lands occupied by the Agra-Delhi Chord Railway in the Bharatpur State.	Ditto	Ditto.
30. Lands occupied by the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway in the Benares and Rampur States	Ditto.	Ditto.
31. Lands occupied by the Rohilkhand and Kumaon Railway in the Rampur State.	Ditto.	Ditto
32 Lands occupied by the Rajputana Malwa Railway in the Nabha, Pataudi, Dujana, Jind, Patiala, and Faridkot States.	No 515 I B, dated the 17th March, 1913.	British Enactments in force in Native States 3rd Ed., Vol. v, p. 13
33 Lands occupied by the Delhi-Ambala-Kalka Railway in the Patiala and Kalsia States.	Ditto	Ditto
34 Lands occupied by the North-Western Railway in the Patiala, Nabha, Kapurthala, Faridkot and Jammu States	Ditto	Ditto
35 Lands occupied by the Southern Punjab Railway in the Bahawalpur and Bikaner States	Ditto	Ditto
36. Lands occupied by the Barsi Light Railway in the Hyderabad and Miraj (Senior) States.	No 778 I B, dated the 9th April, 1913	British Enactments in force in Native States 3rd. Ed, vol. V, p. 35
37 Lands occupied by the Ahmedabad-Parantij Railway in the Baroda, Bavisi Thana and Idar States.	Ditto.	Ditto.
38 Lands occupied by the Bombay Baroda and Central India Railway in the Baroda and Pandu Mewas States	Ditto.	Ditto.
39 Lands occupied by the Godhra-Ratlam-Nagda Railway in the Baria State.	Ditto.	Ditto.
40 Lands occupied by the Mehsana Railway in the Baroda, Katosan, and Ilpura States	Ditto.	Ditto.
41 Lands occupied by the Billimora-Kalamba Railway in the Baroda and Bansda States.	Ditto.	Ditto.

1B.—PLACES TO WHICH THE ACT HAS BEEN GENERALLY APPLIED IN COMMON WITH OTHER ENACTMENTS IN FORCE IN NEIGHBOURING BRITISH DISTRICTS OR PLACES UNDER BRITISH JURISDICTION.—(contd)

Names of places	Notification or other authority.	Where published.
42. Lands occupied by the Petlad Cambay Railway in the Baroda and Cambay States.	Ditto	Ditto.
43. Lands occupied by the Rajpipla Railway in the Rajpipla State.	Ditto	Ditto
44 Lands occupied by the Tapti Valley Railway in the Sachin and Baroda States.	No 778 I B, dated the 9th April, 1913	British Enactments in force in Native States, 3rd Ed., vol. v, p 35
45. Lands occupied by the Great Indian Peninsula Railway in the Kurandvad (Junior) and Hyderabad States.	Ditto	Ditto.
46. Lands occupied by the Godhra-Lunavada Railway in the Lunavada State	Ditto	Ditto.
47 Lands occupied by the Champaner-Shivrajpur Light Railway in the Baria and Chhota Udepur States	Ditto	Ditto.
48 Lands occupied by the Madras and Southern Maratha Railway in the Hyderabad, Ramdurg, Sangli, Akalkot, Jamkhandi, Miraj (Junior), Savanur, Kurandvad (Junior), Kurandvad (Senior), Kolhapur, Miraj (Senior), Aundh and Phaltan States	Ditto	Ditto
49 Lands occupied by the North Western Railway in the Khairpur State	Ditto	Ditto
50 Lands occupied by the Shoranur Cochin Railway in the Travancore and Cochin States	No 5090 I B, dated the 27th December, 1906	British Enactments in force in Native States, 3rd Ed, vol. v, p 119
51 Lands occupied by the Travancore Branch of the South Indian Railway in the Travancore State	No 1474 I B, dated the 20th April, 1906	Ditto, vol v, p 120
52 Lands occupied by the Tinnevelly Quilon Railway in the Travancore State	No 316D dated the 16th January, 1917.	Ditto, Supplement to vol v, p 8
53 Lands occupied by the Palanpur-Deesa Railway in the Palanpur State	No 779 I B, dated the 9th April, 1913	British Enactments in force in Native States 3rd Ed, vol v, p. 39
54. Lands occupied by the Rajputana Malwa Railway in the Palanpur, and Baroda States	Ditto	Ditto
55 Lands occupied by the Kolhapur Railway in the Kolhapur and Miraj (Senior) States.	Ditto	Ditto.
56. Lands occupied by the Sangli Railway in the Sangli and Miraj (Senior) States	Ditto	Ditto.

1B.—PLACES TO W
WITH OTHE DISTRICTS (

Names of places.	Notification or other authority.	Where published.
57. Lands in the Mysore State occupied by — (1) The Bangalore Branch of the Madras Railway. (2) The Mysore State Railway from and inclusive of the Bangalore railway station to the Hubli end of the Thungabhadro Bridge at Harihar. (3) The Mysore State railway from and inclusive of the Yeswanthpur Junction railway station to the frontier of the State.	No. 507 I, dated the 6th February, 1896.	British Enactments in force in Native States, 3rd Ed., vol. v, p. 121

2.—PLACES BEYOND THE LIMITS OF INDIA TO WHICH THE ACT HAS BEEN MADE APPLICABLE BY HIS MAJESTY IN COUNCIL FOR PURPOSES OF CASES IN WHICH HIS MAJESTY HAS JURISDICTION (1)

1. Zanzibar	Zanzibar Order in Council, dated the 7th July, 1897, Art. 11(b) and Schedule I.	Statutory Rules and Orders, revised to 31st December, 1903, vol. v, p. 87.
2. Persian Coast and Islands .	Persian Coast and Islands Order in Council, dated 7th May, 1907.	Gazette of India, 1907, Part I, p. 469.
3. Somaliland Protectorate .	Somaliland Order in Council, dated the 7th October, 1899, Art. 7 and Schedule	Statutory Rules and Orders, revised to 31st December, 1903, vol. v, p. 173.
4. East Africa Protectorate .	The East Africa Orders in Council, dated the 7th July, 1897, Art. 11(b) and Schedule.	Statutory Rules and Orders, 1897, p. 131
5. Bahrein	The Bahrein Order in Council, 1913.	Gazette of India, 1915, Part I, p. 231.
6. Maskat and Oman . .	The Maskat Order in Council, 1915.	Gazette of India, 1917, Part I, p. 899

3.—A LIST OF SOME NATIVE STATES IN INDIA WHICH HAVE ADOPTED THE ACT AS THEIR LAW.(2)

1. Puddukottai (Madras Presidency).	Puddukottai Regulation II of 1882.	See note in Native States Lists, Southern India (Madras and Mysore), Ed. 1888, p. 20
2 Sandur (Madras Presidency).	Introduced by the Raja.	Ditto.

(1) This list only contains such information as has been collected up to date and does not profess to be exhaustive.

(2) In addition to the Native States that have adopted the Act it may be mentioned that in the Kathiawar Agency, rules based on the Indian Evidence Act (I of 1872) have been brought into force by Notification No. 1, dated the 5th January, 1874. See Kathiawar Agency Gazette, 1874, Supplement, p. 23.

3.—A LIST OF SOME NATIVE STATES IN INDIA WHICH HAVE ADOPTED THE ACT AS THEIR LAW.—contd

Names of places.	Notification or other authority.	Where published.
3. Mysore	Schedule attached to the Instrument, dated 1st March, 1881, transferring the Government to the Maharaja.	British Enactments, Native States, Southern India (Madras and Mysore), Ed. 1899, p. 57.
4 Akalkot (Bombay Presidency) (1)	Notification No. 3413, dated the 19th July, 1880	Bombay Government Gazette 1880, Part I, p 658.
5. Janjira (Bombay Presidency).	Notification by the Nawab of Janjira
6 Jath (Bombay Presidency)	Notification by the Chief of Jath, dated the 5th May, 1888.
7. Kolhapur State (Bombay Presidency)	Notification by the Council of Administration on behalf of the Minor Raja, dated the 25th February, 1888	Not known.
8. Miraj (Junior): (Bombay Presidency)	Notification by the Joint Administrators on behalf of the Minor Chief, dated the 10th August, 1888
9. Ramdrug (Bombay Presidency)	Ditto, ditto, dated the 17th December, 1888
10. Sachin (Bombay Presidency)	No 2983, dated the 7th May, 1887 (on behalf of the Government of the Nawab of Sachin)	Bombay Government Gazette, 1887, Part I, p 377
11. Savantwadi (Bombay Presidency)	Notification No 540, dated the 10th March, 1888, by the Political Superintendent of the State (on behalf of the Government of the Chief)	Not known
12. Savanur	Notification dated the 21st May, 1897, by the Administrator of the State (on behalf of the Minor Nawab of Savanur)	Published in the Savanur State on 25th July, 1897
13 Jamkhandi (Southern Mahratta Country)	Notification dated 1st February, 1901, by the Political Agent.	Not known.

(1) The Act was introduced by the Governor of Bombay in council when the State was under British management

APPENDIX B

FIFTH REPORT OF HER MAJESTY'S COMMISSIONERS APPOINTED TO PREPARE A BODY OF SUBSTANTIVE LAW FOR INDIA.

REPORT.

TO THE QUEEN'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY.

WE, Your Majesty's Commissioners appointed to prepare a body of Substantive Law for India, now humbly submit to your Majesty rules of law which we have prepared on the subject of evidence.

India does not at present possess an uniform law upon this subject Within the Presidency-towns the English law of Evidence is in force, modified by certain Acts of the Indian Legislature, of which Act II of 1855 is the most important

This Act contains many valuable provisions. It extends the range of judicial notice and facilitates the proof of documents, of foreign systems of law and of matters of public history. It removes incompetency to testify by reason of interest or relationship; renders parties to suits liable to be called as witnesses, and makes husband and wife competent witnesses for or against each other in civil proceedings; renders dying declarations admis

l makes entries lives of persons that mistakes trial or to the thereby The n to have been designed, not as a complete body of rules, but as supplementary to, and corrective of, the English law, and also of the customary law of evidence prevailing in those parts of British India where the English law is not administered.

This customary law has not assumed any definite form; the Mahomedan law, since the enactment of the new Code of Criminal Procedure, has ceased to have any validity in the Country Courts, even in criminal matters; and those Courts have in fact no fixed rules of evidence except those contained in Act II of 1855. They are not required to follow the English law as such, although they are not debarred from following it where they regard it as the most equitable.

In laying down uniform rules for the guidance of the Indian judges in general, as well in the Courts just mentioned as in those in which the English law of evidence has hitherto prevailed, we do not think that it would be advisable to adopt a system so artificial as that which has grown up in this country.

... by our social and legal ...
ted to the ...
within India. In the jury whatever al In order to hy of credit, were
... and ...
ly excluded. On

In a country like India, where the task of judicial investigation is attended with peculiar difficulties, and where it is the duty of the judge in all civil, and in some criminal cases, to decide without a jury, there is greater danger of miscarriage from the mind of the Court being uninformed than from it being unduly influenced by the information laid before it It seems, therefore, better to afford every facility for the admission of truth although with some risk that falsehood or error may be mixed with it, than to narrow, with a view to the supported by the evidence of accomplices alone accredited to the Court.

The exclusion even of relevant evidence may be desirable, when the evidence is such that people are naturally inclined to attach undue importance to it, when it is such as cannot be admitted without the danger of encouraging forgery, or when it is such as cannot be received, or at least cannot be extorted, without injury to interest which are even more important than the judicial investigation of truth in one sense of that word, and that the widest or popular sense, but the statements by a witness of what he has heard another person say may be, in fact (as in cases of slander), the very matter in issue, or in other cases may be part of the circumstances which it is essential to ascertain On the other hand, "hearsay" may be defined to be that which a witness does not say as of his own knowledge, but says that another has said or signified to him This is probably a more strict and accurate definition of the word "hearsay" as used in the English law, but it does not include all that is known in that law as hearsay

After much considering this subject, we have thought that it would promote a more accurate apprehension of our meaning, and be of more practical utility in the Indian Court, if we were to exclude the word altogether We have, therefore, without attempting any definition of the word "hearsay", endeavoured to lay down rules for the exclusion of that xcluded, and for the admis-

We have accordingly gone question of admissibility or

! have endeavoured to state

the rule applicable to each class.

Most of the rules for the admissibility of this kind of evidence are recognised by the English law, others are in accordance with the Indian Act, II of 1855, above referred to, or are intended to relax the English rules still further than was done by that enactment.

We have, for instance, made admissible in evidence, that which has been spoken, ... person who has since ... procured; and we ... We have also made ... unities, or property ... der the English law are only admitted because they have been made against interest will, by the effect of our rules, be excluded, unless they have been made in the ordinary course of business. The test of pecuniary interest is exceedingly difficult of application, and appears to us to be of little value as a test of truth.

We have admitted statements as to matters of reputation and of pedigree made by persons since dead or incapacitated, or whose presence cannot be procured; adding in the ... statement shall have had special ... which requires ... en, as we think ... of the statement ... le meetings.

The indulgence afforded to witnesses by the existing law in permitting them to refer to contemporaneous memoranda appears to us to be carried too far when copies of such memoranda are allowed to be used for the purpose; and our rules do not permit the use of copies.

Another clause of exclusion applies to documentary evidence. Unless some degree of caution were observed with regard to the authentication of writings, great facilities would be afforded for the fabrication of documents. We have, therefore, laid down rules for the evidence to be rec... of documents and retaining the distinction between primary ... of the latter where the former ... with the laws lately passed by ... d to the improvement of In...

The third case in which we have excluded testimony is, where its admission would be dangerous to the public service or inconsistent with decency or morality, with the confidence of married life, or with the freedom of intercourse between a client and his legal adviser ... be asked merely ... Act XIX of 1853 ... vision which must ... to India. Judges ... when they are not ... to the doctrines of ... used as evidence ... by the laws of all other countries as conclusive ... against strangers, we have affixed the same ... that the judgment of a Court of com... l be admissible as evidence between the same parties upon the same matter d... in another cause, but that it shall not be conclusive. As regards strangers, w... l that it shall be ... merely as evidence that such a judgment was pro... n the parties.

We have thou... e Court will ... th more a... draw their inference fr... ce given, th... by rules of ... are, in our opinion, i... ing laid do... universally s... per-haps be made a... far the sub... falls under ... nature Law, and some ... of the Dr... certainly ... Proce-dure. Those s... , have not ... either of ... We have therefo... (with s...), as it ap... of evidence oug... to be g... different ... much of it as i... d in th... shoul... comprised in the ... now su... that ... thus be render... uld l...

(1) By the In... 1914 and Acts V ...

Ss 17, 18, 47, 51 ...

tered documents ...

We recommend the repeal of so much of Acts II of 1855 and XIX of 1853 as remains unrepealed, except section 26 of the latter enactment, which does not form part of the law of evidence

---

ABSTRACT of the Proceedings of the Council of the Governor-General of India assembled for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations under the Provisions of the Act of Parliament, 24 & 25 Vic., cap 67.

The Council met at Simla on Wednesday, the 28th October 1868

PRESENT·

His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor General of India, presiding.

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, G C S I., K C B.

The Hon'ble G. N. Taylor.
The Hon'ble H S Maine.
The Hon'ble John Strachey.
The Hon'ble Sir Richard Temple, K C S I
The Hon'ble Colonel H W. Norman, C B.
The Hon'ble F R Cockerell.

The Hon'ble Sir George Couper, Bart., C B

EVIDENCE BILL

The Hon'ble Mr. Maine moved for leave to introduce a Bill to define and amend the suspend the rules for the conduct of business and on their suspension to introduce the Bill with a view to its publication in the Gazette There was no use in now dilating to any length on the technical subjects comprised in the Bill

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Mr. Maine then asked the President to suspend the Rules for the Conduct of Business

The President declared the Rules suspended

The Hon'ble Mr. Maine then introduced the Bill

.. . .
....
... .

WHITLEY STOKES,
Asst Secy to the Govt of India,
Home Department (Legislative)

SIMLA,
The 28th October, 1868

ABSTRACT of the Proceedings of the Council of the Governor General of India, assembled for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations under the Provisions of the Act of Parliament, 24 & 25 Vic., cap 67

The Council met at Government House on Friday, the 4th December 1868

PRESENT

His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor General of India, presiding

The Hon'ble G Noble Taylor.
The Hon'ble H Summer Maine
The Hon'ble John Strachey
The Hon'ble Colonel H W Norman, C B
The Hon'ble F R Cockerell
[illegible] Singh

The Hon'ble M J. Shaw Stewart.

The Hon'ble Mr Shaw Stewart took the oath of allegiance, and the oath that he would faithfully discharge the duties of his office.

EVIDENCE BILL.

The Hon'ble Mr. Maine moved that the Bill to define and amend the Law of Evidence be referred to a Select Committee with instructions to report in two months He said that the

and to that detail the Select Committee would doubtless give the most careful attention, not country

for India Mr Maine

tain Ac ... most importance went o ... rts of British India where ... they added:—
... of the new Code of matter of fa ... a case modified by ... dence was argued ... reject were pressed evidence ac ... He

Mr Maine could not help regarding this state of things as eminently unsatisfactory ... law of evidence
... parts of the English law ... with which evidence ... considerable
... dence which
... ing evidence
... administra
... n a greater
... e the Court
... ression that
... in his al
... before them
... ideration of ... Another
... r of depend
... law of ev
... been gained
... d appear to
... a liberal and
... ing expres

version of the English law of evidence enacted with ... and precision.
and superseding the use of text-books by compactness and precision.

Another objection which Mr. Maine entertained to the present state of the law ... The doctrine that the appear to be ... really of some practical moment ... ted ex proprio and of its ... ence constituted a sort of ... uld be ascertained somewhat as physical truths could be ascertained by the processes in use among men of science There were certain continental systems of evidence which did make a pretension to include a pro-mp-

, in nce, as follows —

"The English practice has been moulded in a great degree by our social and legal institutions and on forms of procedure, and much of it is admitted to be unsuited to the various states of society and the different forms of property which are to be met with in India"

Mr Maine had said that he would not comment on the details of the measure, but there paragraph of their Third Report, on the Law of Negotiable Instruments, was to the following effect — our best course to frame our rules irrespectively of the stamp law"

Now from the Commissioners' point of view, which was the purely juridical point of view, there was no doubt that simplicity would be attained by the course proposed But revenue. Under these circumstances, the point had been considered by the Executive Government, and Mr Maine had to state, that, having regard to the fact that the stamp duties on commercial instruments were easily levied, and did not press hardly on the people, the Government was not prepared to give up that portion of the public receipts country.

EVIDENCE BILL.

evidence was in force, modified by ce
I of 1855 was the most important, the prevailed in those parts of British Ind customary law," they added:—

"... the enactment of the new Code of ground No doubt much evidence was received Courts would not regard as strictly admissible. But Mr. Maine would of Council who had more experience in the Mofussil than he had, his honourable friends Sir George C ... those Courts did not, as a matter of fa ... English law of evidence as modified by ... informed that when a case was argued ... the English rules of Evidence were pressed ... rules, and admit or reject evidence acc

Mr Maine could not help regarding this state of things as eminently unsatisfactory. He entirely agreed with the Commissioners that there were parts of the English law of evidence ... of the laxity with which evidence to a considerable ng evidence which rejecting evidence c ous administra

s even a greater leave the Court impression that ss in lax a ally before them consideration of tances. Another under of depen glish law of ev had been guard would appear t was a liberal excluding exper

present state of the law it The doctrine that the propria and of its constituted a secret be ascertained

as physical truths could be ascertained by the processes in use among men of science There were certain continental systems of evidence which did make a pretension to include a process of the kind And perhaps some such theory did pervade the rules of the English law

tuous in Mr Maine to praise the Commissioners' proposals, but he ventured to say that, in his humble opinion, they had wisely availed themselves of the results of English experience, but had wisely modified these results upon two considerations, which, they stated as follows :—

"The English practice has been moulded in a great degree by our social and legal institutions and on forms of procedure, and much of it is admitted to be unsuited to the various states of society and the different forms of property which are to be met with in India"

Mr Maine had said that he would not comment on the details of the measure, but there

ng effect —

Now from the Commissioners' point of view, which was the purely juridical point of

The motion was put and agreed to

....

The following Select Committee was named :—

On the Bill to define and amend the Law of Evidence—The Hon'ble Mr. Cockerell, the Hon'ble Sir George Couper, and the Hon'ble Messrs Gordon Forbes, Shaw Stewart and the Mover.

The Council adjourned till the 11th December 1868.

WHITLEY STOKES,
Asst Secy to the Govt. of India,
Home Department (Legislative)

CALCUTTA,
The 4th December 1868.

ABSTRACT of the Proceedings of the Council of the Governor-General of India, assembled for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations under the Provisions of the Act of Parliament, 24 & 25 Vic., cap 67.

The Council met at Simla on Tuesday, the 6th September 1870

PRESENT:

His Excellency the Viceroy and the Governor-General of India, K P, G C S I, presiding.

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, G C.B. , G C.S.I.

The Hon'ble John Strachey.
The Hon'ble Sir Richard Temple, K.C.S.I.
The Hon'ble J. Fitzjames Stephen, Q C.
The Hon'ble B H Ellis.
Major-Genl. the Hon'ble H W. Norman, C.B.
The Hon'ble F. R Cockerell.

His Highness the Hon'ble Surumade Rajahai Hindustan Raj Rajendra Sri Maharaja Dhiraj Siva-Ram Singh Bahadur of Jeypur, G.C S.I.

EVIDENCE BILL.

... to the Select ...

... several of the members ... to the Council, and ... een taken to it by ... ect was one which ... practical import- ... rocedure of every ... ourse, require the most ... to him (Mr Stephen) that the ... at was likely to be ... urts of the Mofussil ... ... of Judges, ...

... truth ... parties. He (Mr ... introduced into the ...

At the same time it ... The law was in a state of great ... vidence did, and ... subject caused great ... bserve that in Moore ... ases decided in about ... octavo pages in small ... dred decisions noted ...

upon the subject. This was the state of things for which the Committee would have, if possible, to provide a remedy It was one which in justice to exceedingly hard-worked officials ought not to be permitted to continue

The motion was put and agreed to

. . . .

The Council then adjourned to the 20th September 1870.

WHITLEY STOKES,
Secy. to the Council of the Govr.-Genl. for making Laws and Regulations

SIMLA,
The 6th September, 1870.

ABSTRACT of the Proceedings of the Council of the Governor-General of India, assembled for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations under the Provisions of the Act of Parliament, 24 & 25 Vic, cap. 67

The Council met at Government House on Friday, the 18th November, 1870.

PRESENT:

His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-General of India, K.P., G.C.S.I., presiding.

. . . .

EVIDENCE AND CORONERS' BILLS.

The Hon'ble Mr. Stephen also moved that the Hon'ble Mr. Chapman be added to the Select Committee on the Bills to define and amend the Law of Evidence, and to consolidate the laws relating to Coroners.

The motion was put and agreed to

. . . .

The Council adjourned to Friday, the 25th November, 1870.

WHITLEY STOKES,
Secy. to the Govt. of India.

CALCUTTA,
The 18th November, 1870.

ABSTRACT of the Proceedings of the Council of the Governor-General of India, assembled for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations under the Provisions of the Act of Parliament, 24 & 25 Vic., cap 67.

The Council met at Government House on Friday, the 2nd December 1870

PRESENT:

His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-General of India, K.P., G.C.S.I., presiding.

The Hon'ble Francis Steuart Chapman.
The Hon'ble J. R. Bullen Smith.
The Hon'ble F. R. Cockerell.
The Hon'ble J. F. D Inglis.
The Hon'ble D. Cowie.

. . . .

EVIDENCE AND INSOLVENCY BILLS.

The Hon'ble Mr. Stephen moved that the Hon'ble Mr. Inglis be added to the Select Committees on the following Bills :—

To define and amend the Law of Evidence

To amend the Law of Insolvency.

The motion was put and agreed to

. . . .

The Council adjourned to Friday, the 9th December, 1870.

WHITLEY STOKES,
Secy to the Govt of India

CALCUTTA,
The 2nd December 1870.

ABSTRACT of the Proceedings of the Council of the Governor-General of India, assembled for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations under the Provisions of the Act of Parliament, 24 & 25 Vic., cap 67.

The Council met at Government House on Friday, the 9th December, 1870

PRESENT :

His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-General of India, K P., G C S.I , presiding

[illegible]

The Hon'ble Francis Steuart Chapman.
The Hon'ble J. R Bullen Smith
The Hon'ble F. R Cockerell.
The Hon'ble J. F. D Inglis
The Hon'ble D Cowie

The Hon'ble W. Robinson, C S I

. . . .

SUNDRY BILLS.

The Hon'ble Mr. Stephen moved that the Hon'ble Mr Robinson be added to the Select Committees on the following Bills :—

To define and amend the Law of Evidence.

To amend the Law of Insolvency

For the Limitation of suits.

The motion was put and agreed to

. . . .

The Council adjourned to Friday, the 16th December, 1870

WHITLEY STOKES.
Secy to the Govt. of India

CALCUTTA,
The 9th December, 1870.

DRAFT REPORT OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE.

(The Gazette of India, July 1, 1871, Part V, p. 273.)

THE following Draft Report of a Select Committee together with the Bill as settled by them, was presented to the Council of the Governor-General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 31st March, 1871 :—

We, the members of the Select Committee to which the Evidence Bill has been referred, have the honour to report that we have considered the Bill and the papers noted in the margin.

From Officiating Under Secretary, Home Department, No 423, dated 23rd October 1868, and enclosures

From Assistant Secretary, Foreign Department, No 333, dated 12th December 1868, and enclosures

Remarks by the Hon'ble the Chief Justice, Bombay (no date)

Remarks by Hon'ble Justice Phear, dated 8th December 1868

From Secretary to Chief Commissioner, British Burmah, No 525—1, dated 1st December 1868

From Assistant Secretary to Government of Bengal, Legislative Department, No 37, dated 9th January 1869, and enclosure

From Deputy Judge Advocate General of the Army, dated 26th January 1869, and enclosures

From Officiating Under-Secretary, Home Department. No 258, dated 17th February 1869, forwarding memorial from Mukhtars, and Revenue Agents, Howrah, dated 4th February 1869

From Secretary to Indian Law Commissioners, dated 6th February 1869.

From Chief Secretary to Government, Fort St George, No 120, dated 18th March 1869, and enclosures.

From Secretary to Government of Bombay, No 2971, dated 7th September 1869 and enclosures

From Secretary to Government of Bombay, No 3188, dated 24th September 1869, and enclosures

Fifth Report of Her Majesty's Indian Law Commissioners on the Bill

From Officiating Inspector General of Police, Punjab, No. 2657, dated 28th September 1870

From Secretary to Government of India, Home Department, No. 1892, dated 18th October 1870 forwarding letter from Chief Commissioner, British Burmah, No 61, dated 15th August 1870, and enclosures

After a very careful consideration of the draft prepared by the Indian Law Commissioners, we have arrived at the conclusion that it is not suited to the wants of this country

England, which can scarcely be expected from them Our draft, however, though arranged on a different principle from theirs, embodies most of its provisions In general, it has been our object to reproduce the English Law of Evidence with certain modifications, most of which have circumstance that the Law of Evidence was formed by degrees out of various elements, and in particular out of the English system of pleading and the habitual practice of the Courts of Common Law For instance, the rule both ading every-h can be acquired and understood only by those who habitually take part in it This knowledge, moreover, must be qualified by a study of text-books which are seldom in a most uninstructive manner.

of relief

All rights and liabilities are dependent upon and arise out of facts, and facts fall into two classes, those which can, and those which cannot, be perceived by the senses. Of facts, a particular man. He has, in each case, a present recollection of a past direct perception Moreover, it is equally necessary to ascertain facts of each class in judicial proceedings, and they must in most cases be ascertained in precisely the same way.

. Facts may be related to rights and liabilities in one of two different ways:

and with a certain intention or knowledge, there arises of necessity the inference that A murdered B, and is liable to the punishment provided by the law for murder.

Facts thus related to a proceeding may be called facts in issue unless, indeed, their existence is undisputed.

2 Facts, which are not themselves in issue in the sense above explained, may affect the probability of the existence of facts in issue, and these may be called collateral facts.

It appears to us that these two classes comprise all the facts with which it can in any event be necessary for Courts of Justice to concern themselves, so that this classification exhausts all facts considered in their relation to the proceeding in which they are to be proved.

This introduces the question of proof. It is obvious that, whether an alleged fact is a fact in issue, or a collateral fact, the Court can draw no inference from its existence till it believes it to exist; and it is also obvious that the belief of the Court in the existence of a given fact ought to proceed upon grounds altogether independent of the relation of the fact to the object and nature of the proceeding in which its existence is to be determined The question is whether A wrote a letter. The letter may have contained the terms of a contract. It may have been a libel. It may have constituted the motive for the commission of a crime by B. It may supply proof of an alibi in favour of A. It may be an admission or a confession of crime, but whatever may be the relation of the fact to the proceeding the Court cannot act upon it unless it believes that A did write the letter, and that belief must obviously be produced, in each of the cases mentioned, by the same or similar means If, for instance, that Court required the production of the original when the writing of the letter is a crime, there can be no reason why it should be satisfied with a copy when the writing of the letter is a motive for a crime In short, the way in which a fact should be proved depends on the nature of the fact, and not on the relation of the fact to the proceedings.

The instrument by which the Court is convinced of a fact is evidence It is often classified as being either direct or circumstantial. We have not adopted this classification.

If the distinction is that direct evidence establishes a fact in issue whereas circumstantial evidence establishes a collateral fact, evidence is classified, not with reference to its essential qualities but with reference to the use to which it is put; as if paper were to be defined not by reference to its component elements, but as being used for writing or for printing. We have shown that the mode in which a fact must be proved depends on its nature and not on the use to be made of it. Evidence, therefore, should be defined, not with reference to the nature of the fact which it is to prove. but with reference to its own nature.

Sometimes the distinction is stated thus: Direct evidence is a statement of what a man has actually seen or heard. Circumstantial evidence is something from which facts in issue are to be inferred ... the word evidence, in the two phrases has two different mean-a fact which is to serve as ...ct, if this view is taken

This would be a most word "evidence," which means either

(1) words spoken or things produced in order to convince the Court of the existence of facts; or

(2) facts of which the Court is so convinced which suggest some inference as to other facts.

We use the word 'evidence' in the first of these senses only, and so used it may be reduced to three heads—(1) oral evidence: (2) documentary evidence; (3) material evidence.

Finally, the evidence by which facts are to be proved must be brought to the notice of the Court and submitted to its judgment and the Court must form its judgment respecting them.

These general considerations appear to us to supply the groundwork for a systematic and complete distribution of the subject as follows.—

I.—Preliminary.

II.—The relevancy of facts to the issue.

III.—The proof of facts according to their nature by oral, documentary or material evidence

IV—The production of evidence

V.—Procedure.

We have accordingly distributed the subject under these heads, in the manner which we now proceed to describe somewhat more fully.

I.—PRELIMINARY.

Under this head we have defined "facts," "facts in issue," "collateral facts," "a document," "evidence," "proof" and "proved," "necessary inference" and "presume." We have also laid down in general terms the duty of the Court.

Of our definitions of "fact," "facts in issue," "collateral facts" and "evidence," we need say no more than that they are re framed in accordance with the principles already stated. We may, however, shortly illustrate the effect of the definition of evidence

It will make perfectly clear several matters over which the ambiguity of the word as used in English law has thrown much confusion The subject of circumstantial evidence will be distributed into its elements, and will be dealt with thus: The question is whether A property in Court, and by the direct oral evidence of some one who had seen it in the prisoners' possession and the letter, by the production of the letter itself, or secondary evidence of it if the case allows of secondary evidence means words spoken or things (documents or not) shown to the Court. ... in each case

... whereas "conclusive evidence" would not.

The definitions of "proof," "proved" and "moral certainty" require some comment. The definition of "proof" is subordinate to that of "proved" which is, that a fact is said to be proved in two cases, that is to say, when the Court after hearing the evidence respecting it—

(1) believes in its existence: or

(2) thinks its existence so probable that a reasonable man ought, under the circumstances of the particular case, to act upon the supposition that it exists.

This degree of probability we describe as "moral certainty," and we provide that no [illegible] probable It is easier to illustrate this principle than to state, without a prolonged abstract [illegible] the general grounds on [illegible]

[illegible]

by drawing inferences—

(1) from the evidence given to the facts alleged to exist;

(2) from facts proved to facts not proved;

(3) from the absence of evidence which might have been given;

(4) from the admissions and conduct of the parties, and generally from the circumstances of the case.

[illegible] inferences are to be drawn, as that [illegible] but we [illegible] witness [illegible] the truth is, that [illegible] great duty of the Judge in every case whatever, and we have thought it desirable to [illegible] this out in the plainest and broadest way.

We have added two qualifications only to this general rule: (1) that, when the law [illegible] and shall not allow its truth [illegible] fact, it shall infer [illegible] necessary inference [illegible] the Bill.

II.—THE RELEVANCY OF FACTS.

[illegible] belongs to this subject [illegible] lies at the root [illegible] question, it is impos- [illegible] think, to be found in [illegible] the wide exclusive [illegible] say is no evidence [illegible] exceptions are to [illegible] a comparison and [illegible] of positive rule [illegible] which a rational man could wish to have before him in investigating any question of fact.

These rules declare to be relevant—

(1) all facts in issue:

(2) all collateral facts, which

(a) form part of the same transaction;

(b) are the immediate occasion, cause or effect of fact in issue:

(c) show motive, preparation, or conduct affected by a fact in issue,

(d) are necessary to be known in order to introduce or explain relevant facts,

(e) are done or said by a conspirator in furtherance of a common design,

(f) are either inconsistent with any fact in issue; or inconsistent with it, except upon a supposition which should be proved by the other side, or render its existence or non-existence morally certain, according to the definition of moral certainty given above,

(g) affect the amount of damages in cases where damages are claimed,

(h) show the origin or existence of a disputed right or custom,

(i) show the existence of a relevant state of mind and body;

(j) show the existence of a series of which a relevant fact forms a part; or

(k) show (in certain cases) the existence of a given course of business

The remainder of the chapter throws into a positive shape what in English law forms the exceptions to the rule, excluding the various matters described as hearsay. They relate to—the conduct of the parties on previous occasions, the statement of the parties on previous occasions;

previous judgments;

statements of third persons;

opinions of third persons

1. In reference to the conduct of the parties on previous occasions, we embody in three sections the existing law of England as to evidence of character, with some modifications We include, under the word "character," both reputation and disposition, and we permit evidence to be given of previous convictions against a prisoner for the purpose of prejudicing him We do not see why he should not be prejudiced by such evidence, if it is true.

2. Under the head of the statement of the parties on other occasions, we deal with the question of admissions, as to which we have not materially altered the existing law.

We have not thought it necessary to transfer from their present position in the Code of Criminal Procedure the rules as to confessions made to the Police This appears to us to be a special matter relating rather to the discipline of the Police than to the principles of evidence

3. Previous judgments appear to follow naturally upon previous statements. Under this head we deal with the question of res judicata interest of the party making them, on the ground that they ought to affect the weight rather than the admissibility of what is, at best, to use Bentham's expression, "make shift evidence"

We also provide for the admissibility of statements in public or official books (and in certain cases) of evidence given in previous judicial proceedings.

5. The cases in which the opinions of third persons are relevant are dealt with in sections forty-four to fifty.

They declare to be relevant, the opinions of experts, opinions as to handwriting, opinions as to usages, and opinions as to relationship and the grounds of such opinions

This completes that part of the Bill which relates to the relevancy of facts. In the

III.—PROOF.

The second Chapter having decided what facts are relevant, we proceed to show how a relevant fact is to be proved.

...notoriety that the Court ... In either of these cases ... ates to judicial notice, ... in part from the Com-missioners' Draft Bill, and in part from the law of England.

...

it as a legal way

...ndary

...to the question of proof by the various ... material With regard ... whether it is primary or ... aterial, be direct. That ... be proved by some one ... he heard it, and so with the other senses. We also provide that, if the fact to be proved is the opinion of a living and producible person, or the grounds on which such opinion is held, it must be proved by the person who holds that opinion on those grounds

We have, however, provided that if the fact to be proved is the opinion of an expert who cannot be called (which is the case in the majority of cases in this country), and if such opinion has been expressed in any published treatise, it may be proved by the production of the treatise.

This provision taken in connection with the provisions on relevancy contained in Chapter II, will, we hope, set the whole doctrine of hearsay in a perfectly plain light, for their joint effect is this—

(1) the sayings and doings of third persons are, as a rule, irrelevant, so that no proof of them can be admitted:

(2) in some excepted cases they are relevant.

(3) every act done or word spoken, which is relevant on any ground, must (if proved by oral evidence) be proved by some one who saw it with his own eyes or heard it with his own ears.

With regard to the chapters which relate to the proof of facts by documentary evidence, and in cases in which secondary evidence may be admitted, we have followed, with few alterations, the existing law. We may observe that Chapter VII contains most of the few presumptions which we have thought it right to introduce into the Bill. They are presumptions which in almost every instance will be true—as to the genuineness of certified copies, gazettes, books purporting to be published at particular places, copies of depositions, &c.

We have inserted a few provisions in Chapter VIII as to material evidence. They [illegible]

On the subject of the exclusion of oral evidence of a contract, &c, reduced to writing we have (in Chapter IX) simply followed the law of England and the Commissioners' draft.

IV.—THE PRODUCTION OF PROOF.

From the question of the proof of facts, we pass to the question of the manner in which the proof is to be produced, and this we treat under the following heads —

The burden of proof (Chapter X).

Witness (Chapter XI).

The administration of oaths (Chapter XII)

Examination of witnesses (Chapter XIII).

[illegible]

Judges. We have, however, admitted one or two such presumptions to a place in the Code, as, in the absence of an express rule, the Judges might feel embarrassed These are—the presumption of death from seven years' disappearance, and the presumption of partnership from the fact of acting as partners

[illegible]

of se [illegible] made [illegible]
an ir [illegible]
B m [illegible]

We follow the English law as to legitimacy being a necessary inference from marriage and cohabitation, and we adopt one or two of the rules of the English law as to estoppel

In the chapter as to the examination of witnesses we have been careful to interfere as little as possible with the existing practice of [illegible] under the Code of Civil Procedure, is of nece[illegible] stances; but we have put into propositions t[illegible] and cross-examination of witnesses.

We have also considered it necessary, having regard to the peculiar circumstances of [illegible] representatives of the public interest.

In connection with this subject, we may refer to some provisions which we have inserted in order to prevent the abuse [illegible] existence of that power to [illegible] to be liable to great abuses [illegible] by English experience, but in [illegible] tions in particular, are the gr[illegible] sary here than in England.

the use of the power of exposure as a means of gratifying malice. We have accordingly provided as follows:

Such questions ...

If they relate to matters not relevant to the ... credit of the witness, we ... refusal to do so would, ir ... express admission that the

In orde ... advocate w ... upon him t ... Court, and ... ings. The ...

In the same spirit, we have empowered the Court, in general terms, to forbid indecent and scandalous inquiries, unless they relate to facts in issue as defined above, or to matters absolutely necessary to be known in order to determine whether the facts in issue existed, and also to forbid questions intended to insult or annoy.

We prefer this general power to the sections drawn by the Commissioners, which for- ... r that ... she is ... sband ... ngs a ... rrant ... ms ... was ... ears ... le to ... r to forbid indecent and scandalous inquiries in general terms, than to lay down a positive rule which in possible cases might produce hardship

Finally, we deal (Chapter XV) with the question of the improper admission or rejection of evidence.

We pr ... shall decide for itself to ... that if evidence is ... ference ... Appellate C ... idence objected to ... High Court eithe ...

Finally, we recommend that the Draft Bill, together with this report, should be circulated for the opinion of the Local Governments.

J. F. STEPHEN.
J. STRACHEY.
F. S. CHAPMAN.
F. R. COCKERELL.
J. F. D. INGLIS.
W. ROBINSON.

The 31st March, 1871.

ABSTRACT of the Proceedings of the Council of the Governor-General of India, assembled for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations under the Provisions of the Act of Parliament, 24 & 25 Vic., cap. 67.

The Council met at Government House on Friday, the 31st March, 1871.

PRESENT:

His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-General of India, K.P., G.M.S.I., presiding.

His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal.

His Excellency [illegible]

The Hon'ble John Strachey.
The Hon'ble Sir Richard Temple.
The Hon'ble J. Fitzjames Stephe[illegible]
The Hon'ble B. H. Ellis.
Maj.-Genl. The Hon'ble H. W. [illegible]

. . . .

INDIAN EVIDENCE BILL.

The Hon'ble Mr. Stephen presented the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to define and amend the Law of Evidence. He said:—

"I feel that I owe an apology to your Lordship and the Council, for requesting their attention to a second speech upon a purely legal subject after the one which I delivered a [illegible]

"This is the object which has been kept in view in framing the Bill which the Committee append to their report, and which I am now to describe in a general way to your Lordship and the Council. [illegible]

[illegible] reasons were [illegible] nplete, and [illegible] officers in [illegible] glish hand- [illegible] and sustained attention which is necessary in order to master any important and intricate matter. It is by this standard that the Committee in general, and I, in particular, as the member in charge of the Bill, desire that it may be tried

"With this reference to the Bill and the report of the Committee, I proceed to discuss the general question connected with the subject, and to mention a few of the leading features of the measure.

"I suppose that I may assume as generally admitted the necessity which exists for

[illegible]

for an elaborate legal system, well under[illegible] may be said for unaided mother-wit and [illegible] in which a vast body of half-understood l[illegible] certain authority, maintains a dead-alive [illegible] means easy to praise.

"Legislation thus being necessary, in what direction is legislation to proceed? A [illegible]

[illegible]

of one rule to this effect 'All rules of evidence are hereby abolished.'" I believe that the opinion thus vigorously expressed is really held by a large number of persons who would [illegible] the expression the [illegible] nicalities invented [illegible] s, and of no real [illegible] is in any degree [illegible] iries into matters [illegible] is practically im[illegible]

"It is worthwhile to illustrate this point a little, because the necessity for rules of evidence [illegible] to be found in the fact that in all ages and [illegible] amongst primitive people. In rude times, and amongst [illegible] matters of fact was regarded as so hopeless [illegible] s for any sort of rational procedure were pro[illegible] When people began to obtain glimpses [illegible] s almost supernatural [illegible] officers or attorneys' [illegible] ling to the apocryphal [illegible] e used to call 'this [illegible] instance of this. At a later period, arbitrary rules of evidence began to be formed Such a fact must be proved by two eye-witnesses; such another by four; such another by seven. To say nothing of European systems, in which such rules were in force, the Hedaya is full of them. These rules were never introduced in their full force into England, but the system which was [illegible] very mixed and exceedingly singular [illegible] to be mem[illegible] leading, which [illegible] rties d[illegible] [illegible] perience of the [illegible] e English law [illegible] ation, and the [illegible] of Evidence Most of the other rules have indeed been cut away [illegible] rules which still remain may fairly be taken to be the net result of English judicial experience in modern times. In the most general terms these rules are:—

(1) that evidence must be confined to the issue;

(2) that hearsay is no evidence;

(3) that the best evidence must be given;

(4) rules as to confessions and admissions;

(5) rules as to documentary evidence.

"I have two general remarks to make upon them. The first is that they are sound in substance and eminently useful in practice, and that, when properly understood, they are calculated to afford invaluable assistance to all who have to take part in the administration of justice

"The second is that I believe that no body of rules upon any important subject were ever expressed so loosely, in such an intricate manner, or at such intolerable length

"It is necessary to prove the first of these propositions, in order to justify the recommendations of the Committee that the substance of the rules in question should be introduced in the form of express law into this country It is necessary to prove the second proposition in order to justify the attempt made in the Bill to reduce the rules to order and system. First, then, as to the proposition that the rules in question are substantially sound and do far more good than harm even in their recent confused condition. The proof of this is, I think, to be found, in a comparison between the proceedings of English Courts

een the proceedings are not, understood that the knowledge
he daily practice in y by habit, almost evidence, although therefore, and not clumsy, intricate,
f evidence are connected together came after the eminently sagacious practice which they were intended to perhaps be per-
the Criminal Law
several celebrated the effect of the would take the
in the conclusion say.

false-the male pulars to s all very whose evil d an glish n the French Court, it lasted for, I think, about three weeks, and branched out into all sorts of subjects. One witness, in particular, was discovered to have seduced a girl seven years before, and letters from her to him were read to throw light on his character. He naturally wished to give his own account of the transactions, but was stopped on the ground that a line must be drawn somewhere, and that the Court chose to draw it between the point at which an irrelevant slur had been thrown on his character and the point at which, had he been permitted to do so, he might have given an equally irrelevant explanation.

"It is not, however, merely for the purpose of confining judicial proceedings within reason [illegible] pre-eminent importance [illegible]

[illegible]

"It may be that some persons would like this policy, but I suppose it is one which I need not discuss.

"[illegible] merely as they conduce to the import- [illegible] ng and supporting [illegible] Judge with solid [illegible] ggerated and mis- [illegible] found that they [illegible] rpose. There are [illegible] nd on which they [illegible]

[illegible] ference [illegible] made [illegible] Is this [illegible] Judge, [illegible] portion [illegible] ay give [illegible] vidence [illegible] al with [illegible] half of [illegible] ch they [illegible] vulgar [illegible] nature.

error which in so many instances leads people to deprecate art in com[illegible] as if art in all cases did not pre suppose [illegible] not make a man walk, nor will [illegible] he best rules of evidence will [illegible] nd training in logic; but it no [illegible] h, than that shoes or glasses [illegible] eal use of rules of evidence in [illegible] negative tests, warranted by very long and varied experience, as to two great points, the relevancy of facts to the question to be decided by the Court and the sort of evidence by which particular facts ought to be proved. They may in the broadest and most popular form be stated thus:—

"If you want to arrive at the truth as to any matter of fact of serious importance observe the following maxims:—

"First, if your belief in the principal fact which you wish to ascertain is to be, after all, an inference from other facts, let these facts at all events be closely connected with the principal fact in some one of certain specific modes. Secondly, never believe in any fact whatever, whether it is the fact which you principally wish to determine, or whether it is a fact from which you propose to infer the existence of the principal fact, until you have before you the best evidence that is to be had; that is to say, if the fact is a thing done, have before you some one who saw it done with his own eyes; if it was a thing said, have before you some one who heard it said with his own ears; if it was a written paper, have the paper before you and read it for yourself. This exception—qualifications and explanations apart—is the true essence of the rules of evidence, and I think that no one will deny either that these rules are in themselves eminently wise, or that they are by no means so obvious and self evident that the mere unassisted natural sagacity of judicial officers of every grade can be trusted to grasp their full meaning and to apply them to the practical questions which arise in the administration of justice, with no assistance from any express law. I do not wis to in am cre

ance. I ought to add that the good which they are calculated to effect can be obtained only by erecting them into laws and rigorously enforcing them. When this is done, I feel confident that experience will be continually adding to the proof of their value.

"So far, I have tried to prove the proposition that the English rules of evidence are of real solid value, and that they are not a mere collection of arbitrary subtleties which

[illegible]

as hearsay every fact of which evidence was by law excluded; in short, they treated

[illegible]

all sorts of seven years le naturally round that e point at ch, had he able li for the is a se to the ... of abolishing rules of evidence. No doubt, it is competent to the Legislature to provide that no rules of evidence shall have the force of law; but unless they expressly forbid all Courts and Judges to act to the manner in which they shall c ministration of justice by lawyers and returning to the system of mere personal discretion

"It may be that some persons would like this policy, but I suppose it is one which I need not discuss.

"So far, I have considered ant practical objects of keeping the Judges. I must now say a f tests of truth. I fully admit th conceived; but I think that, wh have a real, though it may be to him, he believes? In every judicial proceeding whatever, these two questions true, and, if it is true what then?—ought to be constantly present to the mind of the Judge,

... do not throw the smallest portion
... he may give

... son with nature.
not pre suppose in walk, nor will of evidence will not supply the place of natural sagacity or of a taste for and training in logic; but it no more follows that rules of evidence are useless as guides to truth, than that shoes or glasses are useless as assistances to the feet and to the eyes. The real use of rules of evidence in ascertaining the truth consists in the fact that they supply negative tests, ... the question very long and v ... ight to be to be decided b proved They

"If you want to arrive at the truth as to any matter of fact of serious importance observe the following maxims:—

"First, if your belief in the principal fact which you wish to ascertain is to be, after all, an inference from other facts, let these facts at all events be closely connected with the principal fact in some one of certain specific modes. Secondly, never believe in any fact whatever, whether it is the fact which you principally wish to determine, or whether it is a fact from which you propose to infer the ... of the principal fact, until you have before ... he fact is a thing done, have ... was a thing said, have before ... written paper, have the paper ... ations and explanations

apart—as the true essence of the rules of evidence, and I think that no one will deny either that these rules are in themselves eminently wise, or that they are by no means so obvious to these rules If they are firmly grasped by Courts of Justice, and rigidly insisted upon in all practical matters which come before the Courts, they will gradually work their way amongst the people at large, and furnish them with tests by which to distinguish between credulity and rational belief upon a great variety of matters which will be of vast importance. I ought to add that the good which they are calculated to effect can be obtained only by erecting them into laws and rigorously enforcing them When this is done, I feel confident that experience will be continually adding to the proof of their value by the aid of long practice, he learns the intention of the different rules, of which they heap together innumerable and often incoherent illustrations I am far from wishing to impute of the l culty v absence

"The word 'evidence' is also exceedingly ambiguous. It may mean that which a language in such a peculiar manner as to call ancient deeds 'written hearsay'. To talk of hearing a document is like talking of seeing a sound.

"I now turn to the ambiguity of the word 'evidence' to which I have already referred.

As inst
is,

... I might answer I

... hut
... rd
... ty
... might be
... at the expense
... ainty might do

... Bill of the ... sense
... purpose
"I Commit in which we defin myself with a reference to the report. It seemed to us that the remainder of the subject would fall under the following general heads:—

(1) the relevancy of fact to the issues to be proved;

(2) the proof of facts according to their nature by oral, documentary, or material evidence;

(3) the production of evidence in Court;

(4) the duties of the Court, and the effect of mistaken admission or rejection of evidence.

"... and to arrange in their natural ... Judges under the general head ... ion to each other, and of each

"The main feature of the Bill consists in the distinction drawn by it between the relevancy of facts ... facts. The neglect of this distinction by ... evidence' to which ... ty of understanding ... my meaning ... ch could be directly ... Now, whether ... ty of circumstances ... sim of murder; or ... committed murder; ... harged him with it ... ht be put, the fact that A spoke those words is clearly relevant. But if the question ... whether Z actually did commit murder, the fact that A thought so or said so, generally speaking, is not relevant. Supposing, however, that the fact is relevant on some one of the grounds just mentioned, or on any other ground, whatever be the ground on which the words are relevant to the matter under inquiry, it is obvious that the words themselves ought to be satisfactorily proved, and the rule of English law—and we think it is a wise rule—is that they must be proved by the assertion of some witness that he heard them said with his own ears. English text-writers throw together with these two classes of rules under the head of 'Hearsay.' They lay down the general rule that hearsay is no evidence, meaning by it that certain classes of facts called hearsay are to be treated as irrelevant to the determination of particular questions, and it is necessary to look through a long list of exceptions to that rule in order to see whether, in a particular case, a statement may or may not be proved. If you find that it can be proved, the question is, how can it be proved? And you propose to prove it by a witness who says that B told him that he heard A say so. Again you are told, 'hearsay is no evidence; but this time the expression means not that the fact is irrelevant, but that the testimony by which it is proposed to prove the fact is improper. One extreme inconvenience of this is that the most important part of the English Law of Evidence is thrown into the most intricate and inconvenient of all possible forms, that of a very wide negative, of most uncertain meaning, qualified by a long string of exceedingly intricate exceptions.

"No one who has not gone through the process of learning the law by mere rule of [illegible] but you nowhere tell me what is evidence, except, indeed, in large compilations, which point out what has to be proved upon particular issues, and which it is as impossible to read or remember, as it is to read or remember any other mere works of reference.'

"I hope that we have been able to avoid this, and that the second chapter of the Bill will be found to state specifically, and in a positive form, what sorts of facts are relevant as being sufficiently connected with the facts in issue to afford grounds for an inference as to [illegible] of a very technical speech. The passage to which I refer is a short summary by Mr. Froude of the grounds on which he believes that Mary, Queen of Scots, murdered her husband.

"As Mr. Froude was not a lawyer, he certainly wrote what I am about to read without reference to rules of evidence. I think the fact that he did, in fact, unconsciously observe [illegible] that they are no more than the result [illegible] ategorical shape. I need hardly say [illegible] without any notion of adopting Mr. [illegible] I am concerned merely with their relevance.

"'She (Mary) was known to have been weary of her husband, and anxious to get rid of him.'

"(By our draft, facts which show motive are relevant.)

"'The difficulty and the means of disposing of him had been discussed in her presence and she had herself suggested to Sir James Balfour to kill him.'

"(Facts which show preparation for a fact in issue are relevant.)

"'She brought him to the house where he was destroyed, she was with him two hours before his death';

"(Facts so connected with the facts in issue as to form part of the same transaction are relevant.)

"'And afterwards threw every difficulty in the way of any examination into the circumstances of his end.'

"(Subsequent conduct influenced by any fact in issue is relevant.)

"'The Earl of Bothwell was publicly accused of the murder.'

"(Facts necessary to be known in order to introduce relevant facts are relevant.)

[illegible] appearing.'

"(Subsequent conduct influenced by any fact in issue is relevant.)

"'A few weeks later, she married Bothwell, though he had a wife already, and when her subjects rose in arms against her and took her prisoner, she refused to allow herself to be divorced from him.'

"(Subsequent conduct. Motive.)

"A large part of the evidence consisted of certain letters which the Queen was said to have written. Mr. Froude, in passages which I need not read, alleges facts which go to show that she tried to prevent the production, and to secure the destruction, of these letters An illustration as to subsequent conduct meets the case of a person who destroys or conceals evidence

"Finally, Mr. Froude observes: 'In her own correspondence, though she denies the crime, there is nowhere the clear ring of innocence which makes its weight felt even when the evidence is weak which supports the words'

"The letters would be evidence under the section relating to admissions and Mr Froude's remark is in nature of a criticism on them by a prosecuting counsel

"In English text-books, so far as my experience goes, these rules and others of the same sort are nowhere presented in a compact substantive form. They come in for the most part, as exceptions to the rule that evidence must be confined to the points in issue. In fact, they can be learned only by the practice of the Courts, though they are as natural and lax as any rules need be, if they are properly stated.

"From the rules which state what facts may be proved, we pass to those which prescribe the manner in which a relevant fact must be proved. Passing over technical matters—such as the law relating to judicial notice, questions relating to public documents, and the like—these rules may be said to be three in number, though, of course, numerous introductory rules are required to adopt for practice (sic.) They are these—

"1 If a fact is proved by oral evidence, it must be direct; that is to say, things seen must be deposed to by some one who says he saw them with his own eyes, things heard by some one who says he heard them with his own ears.

"2. Original documents must be produced or accounted for before any other evidence can be given of their contents.

"3. When a contract has been reduced to writing, it must not be varied by oral evidence

[illegible] to certain exceptions and require certain prac- [illegible] of the [illegible] be late [illegible] to the part taken by the Judge in the examination of witnesses, the second to [illegible] the improper admission or rejection of evidence upon the proceedings in case of appeal.

"That part of the law of evidence which relates to the manner in which witnesses are [illegible] of a well educated Bar co-operating with the Judge [illegible] iding questions which [illegible] does not exist in India, [illegible] eat number of cases— [illegible] he whole trial himself [illegible] ore distinctly than he [illegible] does in England. In many cases he has to get at the truth, or as near to it as he can, by [illegible] as relevant, and it [illegible] matters [illegible] the prosecutor and [illegible] ything better than carelessness and apathy in England.

"With respect to the question of appeals, we have drawn a series of provisions the [illegible] from destroying the value of [illegible] arious cases in which, as ap- [illegible] or omission of evidence can [illegible] discovers the occurrence of [illegible] ourt, but shall either strike out what is redundant, or supply what is defective as the case may be, and give judgment accordingly.

[illegible] at great length, but not, I think, [illegible] I have only to add that I [illegible] Calcutta, and that I hope [illegible] its upon the measure of the country

The Hon'ble Mr Robinson said that after the ...
the Council, which had been given by that any useful remarks should be mad the science of the law was as limited a

He merely endorsed all that the Hon'ble Mr. Strachey had said of the probable benefit which would be conferred by the Bill on the administrators of the law.

The Hon'ble Mr. Inglis wished to say, briefly, that he thought the Evidence Bill introduced by the Hon'ble Mr. Stephen would be of the very greatest benefit to the ...

In the majority of the Mofussil Courts there was nothing deserving the name of a Bar, and if a Judge were to rely on the Counsel employed by the parties to bring out all the points at issue in a case, or for the examination of the witnesses, he would be guilty of a very serious neglect of his duty. He had in the majority of cases to act as Counsel for both parties as well as to be judge between them. He thought that the authoritative acknowledgment of this fact, by the provisions of the proposed Bill, which empowered a Judge to ask any questions upon any facts, relevant or irrelevant, at any period of the trial, would be most useful

At the present time, we had no law of Evidence for India. Some Judges admitted all kinds of evidence; others tried to regulate their proceedings by so much of the English law as they had been able to pick up by a study of some of the many voluminous treatises published on the subject. The result was a general diversity of practice, and the want of some fixed principles which should guide all the Courts had been long felt.

... gave a complete ... and capable of ...

... of the proceedings and at ...

Code of Evidence, His Honour believed that no man was more competent to ...
... at the end of the Bill were inserted ... ate the proceed ... But he would ... there should be ...

The Hon'ble Mr. Stephen felt very much gratified at the terms in which Hon'ble ... bers had been pleased to speak of the merit of this Bill. He could hardly suppose that His Honour was serious in the suggestions he had made at the conclusion of his speech.

....

The Council adjourned to Thursday, the 6th April, 1871.

WHITLEY STOKES,
Secy. to the Govt. of India.

CALCUTTA,
The 31st March, 1871.

... of the Governor-General of India, assembled for ... of the Act of Parliament,

December, 1871.

PRESENT:

His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-General of India, K.P., G.M.S.I., presiding.

The Hon'ble John Strachey
The Hon'ble J Fitzjames Stephen, Q.C.
The Hon'ble B. H. Ellis.
The Hon'ble F. R. Cockerell.
The Hon'ble J. F. D Inglis.
The Hon'ble W. Robinson, C.S.I.
The Hon'ble F S. Chapman.
The Hon'ble R. Stewart.
The Hon'ble J R. Bullen Smith.

....
....
....

SUNDRY BILLS.

The Hon'ble Mr. Stephen also moved that the Hon'ble Messrs. Chapman, Stewart and Bullen Smith, be added to the Select Committees on the following Bills :—

....
....

To define and amend the Law of Evidence

....
....

Mr. Stephen proposed to take the opportunity afforded by this motion not to [illegible]

....
....

The next Bill, to which he had to refer, was the Evidence Bill. He need not say anything [illegible]

....
....
....

The Council adjourned to Friday, the 15th December, 1871.

H. S. CUNNINGHAM,
Offg. Secy. to the Council of the Govr.-Genl. for making Laws and Regulations.

CALCUTTA,
The 8th December, 1871.

SECOND REPORT OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE.

(The Gazette of India, February 17th, 1872, Part V., p. 94.)

The following Report of a Select Committee together with the Bill as settled by them was presented to the Council of the Governor-General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 30th January 1872 :—

Second Report of the Select Committee.

Petition from certain Barristers and Advocates of Bombay, dated 8th August 1871.

From Officiating Secretary to Chief Commissioner of Coorg, No. 3 [illegible], dated 4th October 1871, and enclosures.

From certain pleaders of the High Court, Bombay, dated 4th October 1871.

From Officiating Secretary to Chief Commissioner of Coorg, No. 4 [illegible] dated 9th October 1871, and enclosures.

From Chief Secretary to Government, Fort Saint George, No 166, dated 21st November 1871, and enclosures.

From F. J. Fergusson, Esq., Barrister, High Court, Calcutta, dated 8th December 1871, forwarding memorial from Barristers and Advocates, High Court, Calcutta.

From Secretary to Chief Commissioner Central Provinces, No. [illegible], dated 6th December 1871, and enclosures.

From Officiating Secretary to Government of Bengal, No 6326J, dated 13th December 1871, and enclosures Memorial from certain members of the Madras B[illegible], dated 16th December 1871.

We, the undersigned, the Members of the Select Committee of the Council of the Governor-General of India for the purpose of making La[illegible] and Regulations, to which the Indian Evidence Bill w[illegible] referred, have the honour to report that we have consider[illegible] the Bill and the papers noted in the margin

1. We have made some alterations in the arrang[illegible] ment of the Bill.

2. We have omitted the definitions of "proof" a[illegible] "moral certainty" and the sections relating to inference to be drawn by the Court as being suitable rather for [illegible] treatise than an Act.

3. We have omitted the provisions relating to maters [illegible] evidence, and have given a new and simpler definit[illegible] of the difference between primary and secondary evidence

[illegible] of several [illegible]

6. We have re-drawn Chapter VI, as to the exclusion of oral by documentary evidence, so as to make the sections more distinct and complete. We believe that they now represent the English law on the subject, freed from certain refinements which would not be suitable for this country.

7. Exception was taken to the Bill in several quarters on the ground that it did n[illegible] sufficiently dispose of the matter of presumptions We have re-considered this subject with attention, and have provided for it as follows :—

Some presumptions have the effect of laying the burden of proof on particular persons in particular cases These we have dealt with in sections 103 to 111 of the new Bill

A conclusive presumption is a direction by the law that the existence of one fact shall in all cases, be inferred from proof of another. This we have provided for in sections 112 and 113.

We have substituted the term 'conclusive proof' in these instances for that of 'necessary inference,' which was employed for the same purpose in the first draft of the Bill

[illegible] by which the Court ought to be [illegible] arded in English law as [illegible] ound to follow as to the [illegible] inferences to be drawn from facts. Practically, however, [illegible] any exceptions are made [illegible] presumption of fact is hardly true [illegible] r this country and likely to [illegible] accordingly, by section 114 [illegible] of fact with which the Court [illegible]

We have provided in the Chapter on the Burden of Proof that a Notification in the Gazette that a territory has been ceded to a Native State shall be conclusive proof of a valid cession at the date mentioned in the notification. The object of this section is to set at rest questions which, as we are informed, have arisen on this subject.

The subject of presumptions as to documents is a very special matter, and appears to us to belong to the subject of documentary evidence, under which head we have placed it in Chapter V.

Lastly, many subjects are treated by English writers under the head of presumptions [illegible] substantial law, e.g., the [illegible] be substantive criminal [illegible] evidence, because they [illegible] is.

8. The Chapter on Oaths has been omitted, as they form the subject of a separate Bill now under discussion.

9 We also recommend the omission of sections 141 to 145 of the old draft, as to questions to credit asked by barristers or pleaders, and the substitution of provisions showing the principles by which the asking of such questions, should be regulated, and empowering the Court, if any such question is improperly asked, to report the circumstance to the authority to which the person asking it is subject.

10 We have amended the wording of section 166 as the Judge's power to ask ques- [illegible] him to found his [illegible] section was [illegible] tter. Section [illegible]

11. We have omitted the chapter as to the duties of Judges, and Juries, which will, we think, be more properly placed in the Code of Criminal Procedure. We have also omitted the provisions as to appeal in the first draft, and have substituted for them section 57 of Act II of 1855, which provides for the cases in which the improper admission or rejection of evidence shall be ground for a new trial or reversal of a decision

12. Subject to these amendments we recommend that the Bill be passed, but we also recommend that the amended Bill be published in the Gazette, and that this report be not taken into consideration for a month from the date of its publication.

J. F. STEPHEN.
J. STRACHEY.
J. F. D. INGLIS.
W. ROBINSON,
F. S. CHAPMAN.
R. STEWART.
J. R BULLEN SMITH.
F. R. COCKERELL.

The 30th January, 1872

ABSTRACT of the Proceedings of the Council of the Governor-General of India, assembled for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations under the Provisions of the Act of Parliament, 24 & 25 Vic., cap. 67.

The Council met at Government House on Tuesday, the 30th January, 1872.

PRESENT:

The Hon'ble John Strachey, Senior Member of the Council of the Governor General of India, presiding.

His Honour the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal.

[illegible] | The Hon'ble W. Robinson, C.S.I.
The Hon'ble F. S. Chapman.
The Hon'ble R. Stewart.
The Hon'ble J R Bullen Smith.

The Hon'ble F. R. Cockerell.

....
....
....

INDIAN EVIDENCE BILL.

[illegible]

were certain sections of the Bill relating to the cross-examination of witnesses by barristers and advocates. The provisions in the Bill on this subject had been considerably altered, but he would not at present enter into any of the questions which were dealt with in the

The Council adjourned to Tuesday, the 13th February, 1872.

H. S. CUNNINGHAM,
Offg Secy. to the Council of the Govr.-Genl for making Laws and Regulations

CALCUTTA,
The 30th January, 1872.

The Council met at Government House on Tuesday, the 12th March, 1872

PRESENT:

His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-General of India, K.T., presiding
His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal.
His Excellency the Commander-in Chief, G.C.B., G.C.S.I.

The Hon'ble John Strachey.
The Hon'ble J. Fitzjames Stephen, Q.C.
The Hon'ble B. H. Ellis
Maj.-Genl. the Hon. H. W. Norman, C.B.
The Hon'ble J. F. D. Inglis.
The Hon'ble W. Robinson, C.S.I.
The Hon'ble F. S. Chapman
The Hon'ble R. Stewart.
The Hon'ble J. R. Bullen Smith
The Hon'ble F. R. Cockerell

INDIAN EVIDENCE BILL.

The Hon'ble Mr. Stephen also moved that the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to define and amend the Law of Evidence be taken into consideration. He said: "My ... to the Council, I ex- ... the Bill which they ... I need not revert to ... course, I think, will be to inform the Council of what has taken place in relation to ... since I last addressed them on the subject.

" ... of its various details, the Bill was pub- ... carefully ...

"Upon this point, I would specially refer to the valuable papers already referred to, which have been received from Madras. It is impossible, in reading them, not to see that their authors do not like the Bill. They find every fault they can with it, sometimes coming to very minute criticism. I do not in the least complain of this. I only wish the Bill had been criticised more fully in the same spirit, and I readily admit that the critics in question have pointed out many defects which have been, I think, removed and I am entitled to say that such other defects as may still be latent in it have escaped the detection of at least two highly competent and by no means favourable critics, who have given the matter careful consideration. Upon some of these criticisms, I will make a few remarks as I go on. I refer to them now for the sake of showing the importance of the opinions which I am about to read.

"The letter of the Madras Government says.—

'It is both advisable and possible so to codify the Law of Evidence as to present within the limits of a single enactment a treatise upon that law practically sufficient for ordinary purposes' and it then adds:—

'The Draft Bill in its scheme and general arrangement appears to furnish an adequate outline of such a Code;'

but it is observed that the Bill 'in its present state is far from complete'

"Mr. Norton expresses the same opinion at greater length, and each of these authorities agrees in the statement that the Bill is only a skeleton, which will have to be completed by a greater number of judicial decisions

"Mr. Norton criticises the Bill, section by section, and in order to show how fully he has done so, he observes—

[illegible]

"He could hardly, I think, have submitted it to a more searching test. Further on he observes—

'The process by which this Bill has been, in the main, built up, appears to me to have been by following Mr Pitt Taylor's work on Evidence, and arbitrarily selecting certain sections or portions of sections.'

"He then criticises the Bill in detail, and concludes by saying—

[illegible] cerned in the practice of the law in the Mofussil [illegible]

[illegible]

"1—Its provisions as to the effect of judgments are 'meagre.'

"2—It does not deal fully enough with the subject of presumptions.

"He also suggests slight additions to, or enlargements upon, four sections of very subordinate importance, which I will not trouble the Council by referring to.

"The letter from the Madras Government which describes the Bill as 'far from complete,' specifies no omission whatever, except in reference to the subject of presumptions more of which, it affirms, should be included 'in a Code aiming at completeness.'

"The charge of incompleteness, then, comes to this, that the Bill does not deal fully enough with the two subjects of judgments and presumptions I will refer to those points [illegible] say a few words on the positive [illegible] Code, and does deal with every [illegible] ters on Evidence or by English [illegible] emark, that it consists of bits of [illegible] amount of truth in this charge about as much truth, and truth of the same kind, as there would be in saying that the speech which I am now making is composed of words arbitrarily chosen out of the dictionary. I could hardly mention any English law-book in common use, which is, or even pretends to be, much more than a large index, made up of extracts from cases strung together with little regard to any other than a very superficial functionary arrangement of the subject matter.

like an attempt to define with precision the fundamental terms of the subject, and specially the words 'fact' and 'evidence.' As to the notion that bits of Taylor have been 'arbitrarily' put together in the Bill, I will only say that, at a proper time and place, I would undertake to assign the reason why every section stands where it does. Upon the

"As to the specific instances of incompleteness which are alleged against the Bill, two only are of any importance, and upon each of them I will say a few words.

manner as to make it com

"The second section of the Code of Civil Procedure enacts that:—

'The Civil Courts shall not take cognizance of any suit brought on a cause of action which shall have been heard and determined by a Court of competent jurisdiction in a former suit between the same parties, or between parties under whom they claim.'

shall not be tried again after be of a previous judgment.

[illegible]

"The only questions connected with judgments, which do appear to me to form part of the Law of Evidence properly so called, are dealt with in sections 40—44 of the Bill These sections provide for the cases in which the fact that a Court has decided as to a given matter of fact relevant to the issue may be proved for the purpose of showing that that fact exists. This, no doubt, is a branch of the Law of Evidence, and the provisions referred to dispose of it fully

"As to the subject of presumptions, my answer to the critics of the Bill is partly to the same effect, though their criticisms were perhaps better founded I must admit that the Bill as introduced dealt less fully with the subject than was thought desirable on further consideration, and some additions to it have accordingly been introduced, though the general principle on which the matter was dealt with is maintained The subject of presumptions [illegible] particular proved fact These presumptions were almost infinite in number and were arranged in a variety of ways There were rebuttable presumptions, and presumptions which were irrebuttable Præsumptiones juris et de jure, Præsumptiones juris, and Præsumptiones facti There were also an infinite variety of rules for weighing evidence; so much in the way of presumption and so much evidence was full proof, a little less was half full, and so on. Scraps of this theory have found their way into English law, where they produce a [illegible] of which he was ig[illegible] of two falsehoods [illegible] dispenses with the [illegible] with which it is acc[illegible]

"I will not weary the Council by going into all the details of the subject, though I could with perfect ease, if it would not take too long, answer specifically the remarks of the Madras Government on this matter That Government says—

'Sections 102—104 contain three instances of presumptions, selected from a chapter of the Law of Evidence which in Taylor's fills 111 sections It is difficult to see why any should be inserted when so few are chosen'

"In general terms, the answer is this, large parts of Mr Taylor's chapter relate to [illegible] the inference of legitimacy from marriage is a good instance Lastly—There are several [illegible] matter beyond all possibility of doubt It is in the following words :—

'114. The Court may presume the existence of any fact which it thinks likely to have happened, regard being had to the common course of natural events, human conduct and public and private business in their relation to the facts of the particular case'

Illustrations.

The Court may presume—

(a) that a man who is in possession of stolen goods soon after the theft is either the thief or has received the goods knowing them to be stolen, unless he can account for his possession:

(b) that an accomplice is unworthy of credit, unless he is corroborated in material particulars;

(c) that a bill of exchange, accepted or endorsed, was accepted or endorsed for good consideration;

(d) that a thing or state of things which has been shown to be in existence within a period shorter than that within which such things or states of things usually cease to exist, is still in existence;

(e) that judicial and official acts have been regularly performed;

(f) that the common course of business has been followed in particular cases;

(g) that evidence which could be, and is not, produced, would, if produced, be unfavourable to the person who withholds it;

(h) that if a man refuses to answer a question which he is not compelled to answer by law, the answer if given, would be unfavourable to him;

(i) that when a document creating an obligation is in the hands of the obligor, the obligation has been discharged.

But the Courts shall also have regard to such facts as the following, in considering whether such maxims do or do not apply to the particular case before them —

As to illustration (a)—A shop-keeper has in his till a marked rupee soon after it was stolen, and cannot account for its possession specifically, but is continually receiving rupees in the course of his business.

... carelessness of it and himself,

As to illustration (c)—A, the drawer of a bill of exchange, was a man of business. B, the acceptor, was a young and ignorant person, completely under A's influence,

As to illustration (d) —It is proved that a river ran in a certain course five years ago, but it is known that there have been floods since that time which might change its course;

... rmed under ...

... n to have been

As to illustration (g)—A man refuses to produce a document which would bear on a contract of small importance on which he is sued, but which might also injure the feelings and reputation of his family:

As to illustration (h)—A man refuses to answer a question which he is not compelled by law to answer but the answer to it might cause loss to him in matters unconnected with the matter in relation to which it is asked.

As to illustration (i)—A bond is in possession of the obligor but the circumstances of the case are such that he may have stolen it."

... be called a pre... nes Peacock's, ... umption. Be... ase of endless ... that a convic... an accomplice; on ... Judge is bound by ... they can if they ... direction to that ... cted, although he ... ll events, it seems ... the subject. Of ... most cases, to his ... is practically ... rroborated, or

"As I have already observed, I do not wish to trouble the Council with technicalities but I hope this explanation will show that this part of the Bill, at all events, is not incomplete.

"I may observe that many topics closely connected with the subject of evidence are incapable of being satisfactorily dealt with by express law. It would be easy to dilate upon the theory on which the whole subject rests, and the manner in which an Act of this kind should be used in practice. I think, however, that it would not be proper to do so on the present occasion. I have therefore put into writing what I have to say on these subjects and I propose to publish what I have written, by way of a commentary upon, or introduc- [illegible] whatever ought to be investigated

"I now turn to a criticism made on the Bill by His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, who appears to be somewhat dissatisfied with the manner in which the Bill deals with the question of relevancy, which, as he says, is a question of degree.

[illegible]

impediment to the administration of justice, or otherwise than an all-but-indispensable assistance to it, but if they are to exist at all, they must argue as well on evidence as on other subjects I must, however, observe that every precaution has been taken to prevent useless and trifling arguments In the first place, if the Judge wishes to know about any fact, the relevancy of which is under debate, he can cut the matter short by asking about it himself under section 165 In the second place, the mere admission or rejection of improper [illegible]

[illegible] duced less practical, but more immediately and obviously practical, I would make the fol- [illegible] of a party to the proceed ... fact in ...

matter in question, or rebut or support any inference suggested thereby, or establish the identity of any person or thing connected with it, or fix the time of any event the time of which is important, that it is not inconsistent with any relevant fact or facts in issue, and that, neither by itself, nor in connection with other facts, does it make any such fact highly probable—if all these negatives can be affirmed, I think we may say, without much risk of error, that the one fact has nothing to do with the other, and may be regarded as irrelevant

"I now come to a matter which has excited a good deal of discussion, though it relates to a subordinate and not very important part of the Bill—that which concerns the examination of witnesses by counsel. The Bill as originally drawn provided, in substance, that no person s[illegible] character as to matters irrelevant to th[illegible] dered the q[illegible]
the giving [illegible] various rules about defamation laid down in the Penal Code. To ask such questions without instructions was to be a contempt of Court in the person asking them, but was not to be defamation

"[illegible] particular produced memorials o by most of the Local Govern he objections made to the pr the first place, that the diffi ally insuperable, in the next eady subject to forms of dis lace—and perhaps this was the [illegible] is carried that it is of [illegible] inquiry. The [illegible] sections prop[illegible] them which [illegible]

follows:—

'146 When a witness is cross-examined he may in addition to the questions hereinbefore referred to, be asked any questions which tend

(1) to test his veracity;

(2) to discover who he is and what is his position in life, or

(3) to shake his credit by injuring his character although the answer to such questions might tend directly or indirectly to criminate him or might expose or tend directly or indirectly to expose him to a penalty or forfeiture

147. If any such question relates to a matter relevant to the suit or proceeding, the provisions of section 132 shall apply thereto.

148 If any such question relates to a matter not relevant to the suit or proceeding, except in so far as it affects the credit of the witness by injuring his character, the Court shall decide whether or not the witness shall be compelled to answer it and may if it thinks fit warn the witness that he is not obliged to answer it. In exercising its discretion, the Court shall have regard to the following considerations:—

(1) Such questions are proper if they are of such a nature that the truth of the imputation conveyed by them would seriously affect the opinion of the Court as to the credibility of the witness on matter to which he testifies.

(2) Such questions are improper if the imputation which they convey relates to matters so remote in time or of such a character that the truth of the imputation would not affect, or would affect in a slight degree, the opinion of the Court as to the credibility of the witness on the matter to which he testifies.

(3) Such questions are improper if there is a great disproportion between the importance of the imputation made against the witness's character and the importance of his evidence.

(4) The Court may, if it sees fit, draw, from the witness's refusal to answer, the inference that the answer if given, would be unfavourable.

149 No such question as referred to in section 148 ought to be asked, unless the person asking it has reasonable grounds for thinking that [illegible] which it conveys is well founded.

Illustrations

(a) A Barrister is instructed by an attorney or vakil that an important witness is a dacoit. This is a reasonable ground for asking the witness whether he is a dacoit.

(b) A pleader is informed by a person in Court that an important witness is a dacoit. The informant, on being questioned by the pleader, gives satisfactory reasons for his statement. This is a reasonable ground for asking the witness whether he is a dacoit.

(c) A witness, of whom nothing whatever is known, is asked at random whether he is a dacoit. There are here no reasonable grounds for the question.

(d) A witness of whom nothing whatever is known, being questioned as to his mode of life and means of living gives unsatisfactory answers. This may be a reasonable ground for asking him if he is a dacoit.

150. If the Court is of opinion that any such question was asked without reasonable grounds, it may if it was asked by any barrister, pleader, vakil, or attorney, report the circumstances of the case to the High Court or other authority to which such barrister, pleader, vakil, or attorney is subject in the exercise of his profession.

151. The Court may forbid any questions or inquiries which it regards as indecent or scandalous although such questions or enquiries may have some bearing on the question before the court, unless they relate to facts in issue, or to matters necessary to be known in order to determine whether or not the facts in issue existed.

152. The Court shall forbid any question which appears to it to be intended to insult or annoy or which, although proper in itself, appears to the Court needlessly offensive in form.'

"The object of these sections is to lay down, in the most distinct manner, the duty of their memorials which were directed against the consequences which they apprehended from the section which have been given up. They contain, however, other matter which I feel compelled to notice. I need not refer to all the memorials. The one sent in by the Calcutta Bar was for the most part proper, though it contained passages which I think might as well have been omitted. The memorial of the Bombay Barristers contains similar passages, expressed more fully and less temperately, and I shall accordingly confine myself to noticing such o[f] their remarks as appear to me to deserve notice.

"I may observe, in the first place, in general, that I have read in the newspapers and in these memorials much that can only mean that I individually was actuated in drawing this Bill by hostility to the Bar, indeed, the Bombay memorial says, in so many words, that remarks made by one member (meaning, I suppose, me) in Council 'appear to contemplate the extinction of the profession of a Barrister-at-law in India.' In support of this surprising statement, they quote, as being 'open to no other construction,' the following words from the report of the Select Committee:—

> "The English system, under which the Bench and the Bar act together and play their respective parts independently, and the professional organization on which it rests, does not as yet exist in this country, and will not for a very long course of time be introduced."

"Before I made the remarks which this suggests, let me ask your Lordship and the Council whether a charge that I, of all people, wish for the extinction of the profession of it was directed, I am charged with wishing to extinguish my own profession.

of a party to the proceeding ...

matter in question, or rebut or support a identity of any person or thing connected

... ant

"I now come to a matter which has excited a good deal of discussion, though it relates to a subordinate and not very important part of the Bill—that which concerns the examination of witnesses by counsel. The Bill as originally drawn provided, in substance, that no person s... as to matters irrelevant to th... dered the q... the giving ... various rules about defamation laid down in the Penal Code. To ask such questions without instructions was to be a contempt of Court in the person asking them, but was not to be defamation ...

"This proposal ca... and memorials from the Bars of the thre... ments to whom the Bill ... posal, were, I thought, ... culty of obtaining the ... place, that the Native Bar throughout the country were already subject to ... cipline which were practically sufficient; and, in the third place—and perhaps this was the most importa... of justice is carried on under so... that it is of... inquiry. The... sections prop... them which I... follows:—

'146 When a witness is cross-examined he may in addition to the question hereinbefore referred to, be asked any questions which tend

(1) to test his veracity;

(2) to discover who he is and what is his position in life, or

(3) to shake his credit by injuring his character although the answer to such questions might tend directly or indirectly to criminate him or might expose or tend directly or indirectly to expose him to a penalty or forfeiture

147 If any such question relates to a matter relevant to the suit or proceeding, the provisions of section 132 shall apply thereto.

148 ... relevant to the suit or proceeding, except in so far ... whether or not the ... at he is not obliged ... considerations:—

(1) Such questions are proper if they are of such a nature that the truth of the imputation conveyed by them would seriously affect the opinion of the Court as to the credibility of the witness on matter to which he testifies.

(2) Such questions are improper if the imputation which they convey relates to matters so remote in time or of such a character that the truth of the imputation would not affect, or would affect in a slight degree, the opinion of the Court as to the credibility of the witness on the matter to which he testifies

(3) Such questions are improper if there is a great disproportion between the importance of the imputation made against the witness's character and the importance of his evidence.

(4) The Court may, if it sees fit, draw, from the witness's refusal to answer, the inference that the answer if given, would be unfavourable.

149 No such question as referred to in section 148 ought to be asked, unless the person asking it has reasonable grounds for thinking that the imputation which it conveys is well founded.

Illustrations

(a) A Barrister is instructed by an attorney or vakil that an important witness is a dacoit. This is a reasonable ground for asking the witness whether he is a dacoit.

(b) A pleader is informed by a person in Court that an important witness is a dacoit The informant, on being questioned by the pleader, gives satisfactory reasons for his statement This is a reasonable ground for asking the witness whether he is a dacoit

(c) A witness, of whom nothing whatever is known, is asked at random whether he is a dacoit There are here no reasonable grounds for the question

(d) A witness of whom nothing whatever is known, being questioned as to his mode of life and means of living, gives unsatisfactory answers. This may be a reasonable ground for asking him if he is a dacoit

150. If the Court is of opinion that any such question was asked without reasonable grounds, it may if it was asked by any barrister, pleader, vakil, or attorney, report the circumstances of the case to the High Court or other authority to which such barrister, pleader, vakil, or attorney is subject in the exercise of his profession

151. The Court may forbid any questions or inquiries which it regards as indecent or scandalous although such questions or enquiries may have some bearing on the question before the court, unless they relate to facts in issue, or to matters necessary to be known in order to determine whether or not the facts in issue existed

152 The Court shall forbid any question which appears to it to be intended to insult or annoy or which, although proper in itself, appears to the Court needlessly offensive in form.'

[illegible]

from the section which have been given up They contain, however, other matter which I feel compelled to notice I need not refer to all the memorials. The one sent in by the Calcutta Bar was for the most part proper, though it contained passages which I think might as well have been omitted The memorial of the Bombay Barristers contains similar passages, expressed more fully and less temperately, and I shall accordingly confine myself to noticing such o their remarks as appear to me to deserve notice.

"I may observe, in the first place, in general, that I have read in the newspapers and in these memorials much that can only mean that I individually was actuated in drawing this Bill by hostility to the Bar, indeed, the Bombay memorial says, in so many words, that remarks made by one member (meaning, I suppose, me) in Council 'appear to contemplate the extinction of the profession of a Barrister-at-law in India' In support of this surprising statement, they quote, as being 'open to no other construction,' the following words from the report of the Select Committee :—

"The English system, under which the Bench and the Bar act together and play their respective parts independently, and the professional organization on which it rests, does not as yet exist in this country, and will not for a very long course of time be introduced."

"Before I made the remarks which this suggests, let me ask your Lordship and the [illegible]

it was directed, I am charged with wishing to extinguish my own profession

"The real meaning of the expressions in the report (for which I am fully responsible) was, I think, so plain, that I cannot understand how the memorialists can have ascribed to them a sense which I think they could never suggest to any fair mind. The report said —

'The English system, under which the Bench and the Bar act together and play their respective parts independently, and the professional organization on which it rests, do not as yet exist in this country and will not for a very long course of time be introduced.'

"'Yes,' say the memorialists, 'it does exist, to wit, in the Presidency towns.' This is as much as if t[illegible]
India is wretch[illegible] as large as Eur[illegible]
English Courts [illegible] at towns which [illegible]

[illegible]

short and clear [illegible]
the knowledge [illegible]

[illegible]

in his proceedings, and puts a powerful check upon him. He practises in [illegible] before Judges whom he feels and knows to be his professional superiors, and to whom he is accustomed to defer. No one of these remarks applies to a Barrister from a Presidency practising in the Mofussil. The results of this state of things must be matter of opinion. It is impossible to discuss the subject in detail. The Bombay and Calcutta memorialists consider it eminently satisfactory; let us hope they are right. My opinion, of course, is formed upon grounds which it is not very easy to assign, and, as it can be of little importance, I shall not express it. In any case this Bill can do no harm.

"Passing, however, from the case of English Barristers to the case of pleaders and [illegible] every one who has ex[illegible] other [illegible] ask [illegible] was [illegible] what [illegible] Court [illegible] e produced before [illegible] It is absolutely [illegible] y others, but that [illegible] n order to do this [illegible] t themselves rele[illegible] is in order to arm [illegible] so much objected

"I have now referred to the main points in the Bill which have been attacked, and as I fully explain the principles on which it was founded more than a year ago, I have only to move that it may be taken into consideration."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Mr. Stephen then moved the following amendments:—

That, in section 8, instead of the second paragraph, the following be substituted :—

"The conduct of any party, or of any agent to any party, to any suit or proceeding in reference to such suit or proceeding, or in reference to any fact in issue therein or relevant thereto, and the conduct of any person an offence against whom is the subject of any proceeding, is relevant, if such conduct influences or is influenced by any fact in issue or relevant fact, and whether it was previous or subsequent thereto."

That, in section 9, line 3, after the word "which," insert the words "support or."

That, in the explanation to section 57, instead of the words "the Parliament of the United Kingdom of Great Britain, of England, of Scotland, and of Ireland," the following be substituted :—

(1) The Parliament of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland;

(2) The Parliament of Great Britain,

(3) The Parliament of England

(4) The Parliament of Scotland; and

(5) The Parliament of Ireland."

That the words "or in any other case in which the Court thinks fit to dispense with it" be added to the proviso in section 66.

That the following new section be inserted after section 157 :—

And that the numbers of the subsequent sections be altered accordingly

The motion was put and agreed to attached.

It was,

he Council forward.

nent: his

His Excellency the President thought that this was a question of great importance, and that notice should have been given of the intention to move the amendment

His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor said that, as His Excellency the President was of opinion that the notice of the amendment should have been given, His Honour did not think that his amendment was of sufficient importance to delay the passing of the Bill.

The Hon'ble Mr. Cockerell felt very much inclined to support His Honour the Lieutenant-committee, but had been overruled.

to the nder the

The Hon'ble Mr. Stephen said that, looking to the great pressure of business before the Council, he would much rather consent to the amendment being brought on at once than that there should be an adjournment.

His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor would express a strong opinion that his amendment was not of sufficient importance to call for an adjournment

e nature

but he Hon'ble

t should

His Honour the Lieutenant Governor then moved the omission of section 150 He had already stated, in regard to the amendment nearly all that he had to say, namely, that the section was really a dead branch, without any effect or practical meaning whatever It would not be necessary for him, therefore, to detain the Council with many words on the subject. It seemed to him had been struck out of the charge of the Bill had expla

to no special penalties, but only to those rules which guided and governed to the superior Court any matter affecting emed to His Honour that this able a teacher to report a boy over him. The section was of being a fictitious shadow of a

His Honour therefore purposed to omit it

The Hon'ble Mr. Cockerell entirely agreed with what had fallen from His Honour the

The Hon'ble Mr. Ch
the Lieutenant-Govern
some vitality in it.
be liable to be reporte
he thought this knowl abuse the liberty of the Bar.

The Hon'ble Mr. Robinson joined entirely in the view taken by his hon'ble friend Mr. Chapman. He thought that the provision of section 150 would act as a very wholesome check upon vakils who practised in up-countr and it was desirable that the High C men practising in the Lower Courts, before them. Mr. Robinson though was a very good one, and he would therefore vote against the amendment.

Major-General the Hon'ble H. W. Norman thought, on the whole, that the section should be retained; it might be the means of doing some good and he thought it could not do any harm.

The amendment was then put and negatived

The Hon'ble Mr. Stephen then moved that the Bill as amended be passed He would not trouble the Council with any further remarks.

His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor said he would not like to let this motion pass without saying a few words dence, that he upon trust;
be very well p
and thorough sifting in a most thorough and systematic manner

[illegible]

constructed in such a manner as, by many meshes, to bring into its scope almost every possible fact, he might say that he looked upon the passing of this Bill as hopefully as he would look upon the passing of any law of evidence; that he hoped for the best, and should look to the great wideness of its provisions as a means of enabling the Courts to make the best of the law For himself, in that view, he accepted it and thanked the Hon'ble Member for it

[illegible]

The Council had to thank Mr Stephen for a very great deal of admirable work; and Mr. Strachey was sure that his name would long be remembered in India through this work in particular, which was now about to be completed.

The motion was put and agreed to.

....

The Council adjourned to Tuesday, the 19th March 1872.

H. S. CUNNINGHAM,

Offg Secy to the Council of the Govr -Genl. for making Laws and Regulations.

CALCUTTA,
The 12th March, 1872

ABSTRACT of the Proceedings of the Council of the Governor-General of India, assembled for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations under the provisions of the Act of Parliament, 24 & 25 Vic, cap 67.

The Council met at Simla on Thursday, the 15th August, 1872

PRESENT:

The Hon'ble Sir John Strachey, K C.S.I., presiding.
His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab.
His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, G C.B., G.C.S I.

The Hon'ble Sir Richard Temple, K.C.S.I.
Maj-Genl. The Hon'ble H. W. Norman, C.B
The Hon'ble Arthur Hobhouse, Q.C.
The Hon'ble E. C. Bayley, C.S.I.
The Hon'ble R. E. Egerton.

....
....
....
....

EVIDENCE ACT AMENDMENT BILL.

Acts of which it was intended to re-enact large portions, and the omission of some of those portions from This related tc
XV of 1852. of the High C suits depending before them, administered oaths to witnesses. By an accident the section had not been re-enacted. Mr. Hobhouse had no such knowledge of the Indian Statute book as would enable him to say of his own authority that such a power to administer oaths did not somewhere exist. But the Secretary had assured him that he could not find any he trusted, be referred to a Select Committee.

The Hon'ble Mr. Hobhouse then applied to the President to suspend the Rules for the Conduct of Business

The President declared the rules suspended.

The Hon'ble Mr. Hobhouse then introduced the Bill, and moved that it be referred to Select Committee with instructions to report in a week.

The motion was put and agreed to.

....
....

The following Select Committee was named: On the Bill to amend the Indian Evidence Act, 1872—The Hon'ble Sir John Strachey, the Hon'ble Messrs Bayley and Egerton, and the Mover.

The Council then adjourned till the 29th August, 1872.

WHITLEY STOKES,
Secretary to the Government of India.

SIMLA,
The 15th August, 1872.

ABSTRACT of the Proceedings of the Council of the Governor-General of India, assembled for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations under the provisions of the Act of Parliament, 24 & 25 Vic., cap. 67.

The Council met at Simla on Thursday, the 29th August, 1872.

PRESENT:

His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-General of India, G.M.S.I., presiding.
His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab.
His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, G.C.B., G.C.S.I.

The Hon'ble Sir Richard Temple, K.C.S.I.
Maj.-Gen. The Hon. H. W. Norman, C.B.
The Hon'ble Arthur Hobhouse, Q.C.
The Hon'ble E. C. Bayley, C.S.I.
The Hon'ble R. E. Egerton.

....
....

INDIAN EVIDENCE ACT AMENDMENT BILL

The Hon'ble Mr Hobhouse also presented the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to amend the Indian Evidence Act, 1872 He said that in considering the Bill the Committee had proceeded on the principle that under the circumstances it was no part of their duty to alter any part of the Act on the score of principle, but only to effect such alterations as they believed the draftsman would have made, if his attention had been called to them The principal reason for passing the present Bill into law before the 1st September was this.—

Act I of 1872 repealed in toto a prior Act XV of 1852, and one of the sections of that Act was as follows —

"XIIA—Her Majesty's Courts within the British territories under the Government of the East India

"Now, that was a positive enactment, in the clearest possible terms, purporting to confer upon certain tribunals and officers power to administer oaths Primâ facie, if that power were removed from the Statute-book, and nothing put in its place, it would cease to exist The question then was, whether the power could be derived from any other quarter. For the purpose of determining this question, it had been necessary to read five of evidence.

persons

With regard to the other amendments, he would not remark upon them in detail. They would all speak for themselves, and were intended to cover obvious defects and slips either thought proper that the better plan would be, not to have any further delay at present, but to keep a careful record of all suggestions sent in and to use them when the time was ripe.

He also applied to His Excellency the President to suspend the Rules for the Conduct of Business.

The President said that, in his opinion, Mr. Hobhouse had shown sufficient cause for suspending the Rules in the present case. His Excellency accordingly declared the Rules suspended.

The Hon'ble Mr. Hobhouse then moved that the report be taken into consideration.

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Mr. Hobhouse then moved that the Bill be passed.

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Council then adjourned till the 5th September, 1872

WHITLEY STOKES,
Secretary to the Government of India.

SIMLA,
The 29th August, 1872

APPENDIX C.

(See Section 13, p. 182, ante.)

Judgment and Decree of the Subordinate Judge of Benares referred to by the Privy Council in Bhito Kunwar v Kesho Pershad Misser, 24 I A., 10; s c, 1 C W. N, 265 (1897)

No 184

Judgment of Baboo Mirtunjoy Mukerji, Subordinate Judge of Benares, dated 10th December, 1887

SUIT No. 30 OF 1887

Kesho Parshad .. .. . . Plaintiff

versus

Sheodial Tewari alias Bacha Tewari and Raja Ajit Singh . Defendants.

[illegible]

of Ramkishen Misser Bhawani Parshad died a bachelor

Kesho Parshad, the plaintiff to this suit, claims to be the son of Bhondu Misser, who is alleged to have been a brother of Baijnath Misser.

[illegible]

The plaintiff claims to recover possession of it on the death of the widow of Ramkishen as his heir under the Hindu law, setting aside a deed-of-sale executed by Sheodial Tewari in respect of five villages forming part of the estate of Ramkishen, in favour of the other defendant

The following is the substance of the defence made by the defendants in their written statement :—

The plaintiff is not the son of the brother of the father of Ramkishen

He cannot also be his heir, as Ramkishen was adopted by Bhawani Tewari as his son.

The suit is barred by limitation, as Sheodial Tewari has been in adverse possession of the estate for more than twelve years next preceding the date of this suit

Ramkishen Misser had been in possession of the estate as a trustee under the agreement of 1850, and the plaintiff therefore can have no right to claim it as his heir

ISSUES

1. What, if any, relation the plaintiff bore to Ramkishen Misser ?

2. Since when, and of which right, have the defendants been in possession of the property in dispute, and what was the nature of their possession?

3 When, if ever, had Mussammat Mitho Kuar been in possession of it, and what was the nature of her possession ?

4. Of what right had Ramkishen Misser been in possession ?

5. Did Bhawani Parshad Tewari revoke the Will he had made during his lifetime, and was it acted upon after his death ?

6. Does limitation bar this suit ?

7. Has the plaintiff a better right to the property in dispute than the defendants ?

8. What sort of decree, if any, ought to be granted to the plaintiff ?

JUDGMENT.

On the sixth issue the Court holds that the suit of the plaintiff is not barred by limitation as it has been brou[illegible] Kuar, widow of Ramkissen Misser, the t[illegible] tation Act. It is [illegible] the property in dis[illegible] wherein her name [illegible] her name was expunged.

[illegible] ce of the plaintiff himself, of [illegible], his sister, and of Thakurs [illegible] u Misser, brother of Baijnath [illegible]

On the 2nd issue the Court [illegible] of the session of the estate of Bhawani [illegible] of the 4th January 1850, as proprietor [illegible] it as litigation, 1876, that Bacha Tewari and [illegible] a for it was their own [illegible] tion of the estate [illegible]
by its decision [illegible]
January 1885 [illegible]
in possession of [illegible] of Mitho Kuar was expunged from the revenue records.

On the 3rd issue I find that Mitho Kuar had been in possession of Ramkishen's share of the estate as its proprietress till 1879, up to which time she was recorded its patidar

[illegible] Misser had been in possession of it [illegible] 850. It was contended on [illegible] Parshad.

[illegible] properties in [illegible]
[illegible] Kuar, widow of Ramkishen
[illegible] competent to mortgage them
[illegible] Bhawani Parshad was re[illegible] tance, in appeal from whose [illegible] that point On the other [illegible] that the will was revoked
This decision was [illegible] which an outsider tried to have it declared that the [illegible] under the will This decision
[illegible] ha Tewari, although the plaintiff
[illegible] ion of Ramkishen and Bacha [illegible] n 1850 was made The will of [illegible] eed, dated the 4th September [illegible] the teeth of this express ad
[illegible] s conclusive evidence that [illegible] shows that Arudh Lehan
[illegible] of evidence in any shape
[illegible] ntor, or made any attempt [illegible] greement seem to the Court
[illegible] kes no provision whereby [illegible] btaining possession of any [illegible] upon, they could have no right to the possession of the estate under it, and the fact that they got possession of it under the agreement constitutes almost conclusive evidence that it was never acted upon.

On the 5th issue the Court finds for the reasons given in its decision on the 4th issue that the will of Bhawani Parshad was revoked by him during his lifetime, and that, granting for the sake of argument that it was not so revoked, it was never acted upon, and that Ramkishen and Bacha Tewari have been in proprietary possession of the estate under the agreement of 1850, adversely to the trusts, if any, created by the will.

On the 7th issue the Court holds that the plaintiff, as son of the uncle of Ramkishen, is entitled to the property in dispute in preference to the defendants, there being no evidence to show that he was adopted by Bhawani Parshad Tewari.

On the 8th issue the Court holds that the plaintiff, as heir of Ramkishen Misser, is entitled to the reliefs sought

ORDER.

The suit is decreed with costs.

Dated 10th December, 1887. (Sd.) MIRTUNJOY MUKERJI, Subordinate Judge.